As regards Holland, the biggest event strategically, according to DNB, is the advance from the south into thec enter defense system—the so-called "Fortress of Holland" around Rotterdam.

Such Dutch detachments as realize that the French and English are unable to reach them on time are weakening in their defense, DNB asserted, while those which are isolated continue to fight bitterly.

Quick motorized German units which established contact with units landed from the air about Rotterdam have been followed by German infantry forces, widening the breach between Belgium and Holland and cutting off their communications.

French claims of armored car superiority were flatly denied here. It was stated that the French were repulsed with heavy losses.

DNB boasted that the enemy air forces have been so badly demolished that along the entire front from the Palatinate Forest via Luxemburg and Belgium to Holland, no indications are discernible of an enemy air initiative.

Text of German Communique.

The communique follows:

"In Holland we succeeded in expanding our piercing of the Grebbe line southeastward of Amersfoort and gained area in the direction of Utrecht.

"Additional forces are coming from the south into Holland fortifications, where our troops, after the destruction of one enemy detachment near Dortrecht, pierced through as far as Rotterdam.

"Farther south our troops advanced via Breda toward the Schelde Estuary. Rosendaal was taken.

"In Belgium, the Turnhout Canal southeast of the town of the same name was crossed yesterday and farther south 'Grosse Gette' was reached.

Claim City of Liege.

"North of Namur, our armored forces met retreating enemy armored units on the fortified Dyle (river) positions. The enemy armored units were strongly shattered by preceding attacks from the air and ground.

"The city of Liege is in German hands. In the region south of the line from Liege to Namur our troops left the Ardennes (mountains) behind and vanguards reached the Meuse (river) between Namur and Givet.

"In southern Belgium also movements were proceeding swiftly on schedule.

"The French-Luxemburg and French-Belgium border up to the point Mezieres-Charleville has been reached nearly everywhere and crossed in many places. Under the protection of continuously attacking German fighting planes, Stukas (dive bombers) and destroyer-plane units, and under their crushing effects, we succeeded in crossing the Meuse, also on French soil.

Report English Prisoners Taken.

"South of Saarbrucken, Otto Schulz, lieutenant of one infantry regiment, distinguished himself by special bravery.

"Expanding yesterday's attacks we broke into enemy positions in the region of Merzig and south of Pirmassens and captured English and French prisoners.

"Besides strongly supporting the army, the Air Force attacked different enemy airports. At the airport at Hamstede alone, twenty-six airplanes were destroyed on the ground. The total losses of our opponent on May 13 amounted to approximately 150 airplanes of which fifty-seven were bagged in air fights and thirty-seven were shot down by anti-aircraft artillery. Twenty-seven of our own planes are missing."

Claiming the mastery of two-thirds of the Netherlands after four days of lightning warfare, the German Army drove forward on a 300-mile front between the North Sea and the Moselle to meet massed Allied forces in a battle expected here to prove one of the most decisive in history.

Authorized spokesmen declared that the German motorized and mechanized units, co-operating with the air force, had made such amazing progress in the past twenty-four hours that the Polish campaign now looks only like a "weak prelude."

Say Allies Lost Heads.

They asserted that the Allied General Staff had lost its head completely.

These spokesmen said that they could not at present reveal the names of places captured.

It was said that the "greatest joy" prevailed among the German General Staff.

Nazi military leaders, claiming a steady advance along the entire front, declared that the fighting in Holland and Belgium thus far, fierce as it has been, is but a prelude to a gigantic struggle which may dwarf the world war's first battle of the Marne.

Head-on Collision Due.

This conflict is expected to take place somewhere in southern Belgium, where the Allies are reported massing their combined armies for a stand.

German commentators pinned their confidence in the outcome of the impending head-on collision on the fighting qualities of the Nazi soldiers and the asserted superiority of the German Air Force to which they gave credit for the victories already won in the Low Countries.

Air strength was said to have been enhanced by the destruction of more than 1,000 enemy airplanes in the first three days of the "real" war, the German radio declared. Nazi air losses were described as comparatively small.

Informed spokesmen said the encirclement of south Holland was virtually complete and that Nazi forces had reached a strategic—but unnamed—point to intercept Allied troops rushing to the aid of the Dutch.

Thus far, German military men said, even the most modern fortifications in Belgium and Holland have proved no real obstacle. This, they said, was proved by the capture yesterday of the Citadel of Liege and the penetration of Belgium's Albert Canal defenses at several points in the vicinity of Hasselt and Maastricht.

German troops were reported to be widening these breaches steadily despite fierce resistance, but acknowledged that some of the outer forts ringing the city of Liege were still holding out.

The defensive strength of the so-called "Holland Fortification System" (the Grebbe Line) has likewise been nullified, the Germans said, by a flanking movement which has cut the country in two.

Claim Contact at Rotterdam.

This movement was executed by swift moving armored forces which were said to have swept westward from a point south of the border city of Arnhem and established contact with Nazi parachute troops landed at Rotterdam in the first day of fighting.

[The Dutch conceded that the Germans had penetrated to Dordrecht, about twilve miles south of Rotterdam, and had passed the nearby Moerdijk bridge, important western link between north and south Holland. It is not known whether the bridge is still intact.]

DNB, the official German news agency, said that the Nazi air force had played a major part in this maneuver by supplying the parachute troops at Rotterdam with munitions which made it possible for them to hold their positions until contact could be established with mechanized ground units.

General Reported Captured.

The news agency asserted that about 18,000 Dutch soldiers, including a general and his entire staff, had been captured in recent fighting.

German official spokesmen shed no light on the nature of the "secret weapon" which was earlier reported to have enabled a small number of men to capture the powerful Belgian fortress of Eben Emael, near Liege. Some observers speculated, however, that the "secret weapon" might have been merely a reference to the use of parachute troops—a theory that was strengthened when DNB identified as members of a parachutist regiment eight officers decorated for the Eben Emael exploit.

Continued action on the western front was reported in the sector southeast of Zweibrucken, opposite the French province of Lorraine, where the High Command said the Germans had advanced.

BATTLE WITH ADVANCING NAZI FORCES AND LAUNCH SEDAN COUNTER-ATTACK

MAY 15 1940

Paris, Determined To Keep Area Out Of Enemy Hands, Accepts Challenge And Plunges Forces Into Gigantic Fight

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 14 — The armies of Germany and France struggled again tonight in a gigantic, no-quarter fight on the historic field of Sedan after Adolf Hitler's columns had smashed into France through the historic Meuse River Valley, history's tried and trampled path of invasion.

The thunderous collision, which may prove the decisive turning point of the war, came in full force following a five-day German offensive across Luxembourg and Belgium and into the French town of Sedan.

French Forces Counter-Attack

The French high command announced that its forces had counter-attacked, determined to keep the vital Meuse Valley out of the hands of the Germans fighting to force a passage at Sedan across the Meuse river itself.

The German offensive appeared to have turned into a campaign to deliver a knockout blow to the French army on the Sedan battlefield, where the Prussians destroyed the French fighting force and ended the War of 1870.

Nazis Fight To Push Past Sedan

The high command's communique said the Germans were making a "momentous effort with furious obstinacy and at the expense of heavy casualties" to press on through Sedan after entering the town, which is on the east bank of the Meuse.

The French, still holding the west bank, accepted the challenge and plunged into the battle at this bottleneck of the valley. (Here seven words were censored.)

Military quarters described Sedan as the northern "hinge" of the French front where the Maginot Line covering France's border with Germany and Luxembourg joins the new line of fortifications protecting the Belgian frontier.

Try To Drive Into Plains Of Champagne

The German strategy appeared to be to try to crack that hinge and drive into the Plains of Champagne.

Tonight, twenty-four hours after the Germans had reached the Meuse, the tide was swinging back and forth in what French military observers called the first stages of "the greatest battle in history."

On the flanks of this front, tonight's French communique said, German attacks were repulsed both to the northwest in Belgium and to the southeast in the Moselle Valley.

Sedan, where Napoleon III gave up his sword to the King of Prussia and the Second Empire fell in the War of 1870, was emptied by the French.

60 Miles From Own Border

The Germans, hurtling sixty miles from their own border, through Luxembourg and Belgium, engaged the French (here five words were censored) with both sides flinging tanks, planes, guns and men into furious fighting.

On the whole front, French dispatches estimated, the Germans are employing between 6,000 and 7,000 planes.

Front Extends 100 Miles

The main front extends for one hundred miles, along the Meuse from the Belgian citadel of Liege through Namur and Dinant, Belgium, to the French fortresses around Sedan, part of France's northern defenses known as "the Little Maginot Line."

Two German armored divisions, followed by masses of infantry on foot and artillery hauled by tractors, reached the Meuse Valley in a gigantic move southwest through the Ardennes mountains and forests of Belgium.

Liege, Namur, Dinant and Sedan were reached by the Germans, French military commentators acknowledged.

The French, after delaying the German advance with light cavalry units, took their stand on the Meuse.

French military dispatches acknowledged German entry into Sedan, most of which lies on the east bank of the river.

The great battle for which it is famed, ending the War of 1870, was fought between 240,000 Prussians and 130,000 disorganized and completely outmaneuvered French.

Sedan also was held by the Germans four years during the World War. It was taken back by the American Rainbow division and the French just before the Armistice.

Today, flame-throwing tanks, supported by planes which dived to bomb and machine-gun, were rumored to have led the German attack on the French around Sedan.

These rumors said the German tanks hurl lethal fire seventy yards, compared with the fifteen-yard range World War apparatus, which was about as dangerous to the handlers as to the intended victims.

Fight To Halt Crossing

German armored cars appeared at crossing points all along the Meuse from Liege to Sedan, and the French fought everywhere to prevent the Reichswehr from passing to the west bank.

While both French and British fighter planes engaged the German airforce overhead, there was crossfire from pillboxes hidden in the wooded slopes dominating the valley.

Barrages erected in the mountain passes hampered the German advance, but both sides had artillery.

The battle lines, which for the first five days of the German offensive were blurred, began to assume clear shape.

Attack In Southeast

On the southeastern flank of the Meuse valley assault, the Germans attacked heavily along the Luxembourg border from the French fortress town of Longwy, near where the French, Luxembourg and Belgian borders come together, to the Moselle valley on the east.

The Maginot Line from here on east and south was reported holding firm.

On the northern flank, from the Belgian forts of Liege to Maastricht on the Belgian-Dutch border the Germans have driven into Belgium, but were reported to have been held in check yesterday after a battle of 2,000 tanks.

A French mechanized division in the St. Trond sector, just west of Maastricht, was reported to have destroyed "a great number of German tanks."

Air-Raid Alarms

Air-raid alarms sounded in French cities from Le Havre to Lyon and Lille and Saint-Etienne. Brussels dispatches said a train of 650 German prisoners, arriving at Tournal, was machine-gunned by German planes which killed twenty of their own soldiers.

Allied bombers heavily damaged German communications between the Rhine and the Dutch-Belgian border and fighters strafed German columns crossing the Rhine.

Parachutists from German planes were reported landing in Brussels, but the inhabitants pounced on most of them, lynching one. There was guerrilla fighting in the blackened streets of Brussels last night.

Paris began to assemble Germans for internment in a stadium outside the city; men today; women and children tomorrow.

Big Guns Thunder Away On Front Near Switzerland

Basel, Switzerland, May 14 (AP)—Big guns of the German West Wall and the French Maginot Line along the Rhine, north of Basel, thundered late today for the first time in weeks.

Military observers here believed the duel was started by the French in an effort to smash Nazi rail communications incorporated in the West Wall from Karlsrune to Freiburg.

Flame-Throwing Tanks

PARIS, May 14 (AP).—Flame-throwing tanks, supported by planes which dived to bomb and machine-gun, were rumored today to have led the German attack around Sedan. These rumors said the German tanks hurled lethal fire seventy yards, as compared with the fifteen-yard range of World War apparatus, which was about as dangerous to the handlers as to the intended victims.

Rainbow Division Took Sedan in 1918

By Associated Press.

Ancient Sedan, 146 miles northeast of Paris, was the scene of the decisive fight of the Franco-Prussian war in 1870, in which the French troops of Napoleon III were crushed. It brought about the fall of the Second Empire.

And then, in the world war, the Germans, advancing toward Paris, entered Sedan on August 25, 1914, and held it for four years. It fell into the hands of the Allies on November 6, 1918, after a joint attack by the American Rainbow Division and the French.

Strategically, the capture of the city by the Germans would not mean the breaking of a French line along the Meuse River because the town is on the right, or east, bank.

The old city probably gave its name to the sedan automobile.

Sedan chairs, easy riding conveyances which carried the gentry on peasant shoulders in the eighteenth century, were first made in Sedan, legend has it.

The town has a population of around 18,000. Major industries are cotton mills, coal and iron mines.

Massing a short distance away, they set fire to the "coffin" and threw their clubs on it to make a bonfire.

Before they disbanded, a Fascist official in Black Shirt uniform congratulated them on a "magnificent demonstration" and told them their cry was "a war cry."

He said that France and Britain must understand that Italy would never remain a prisoner in the Mediterranean.

5,000 Parade in Milan.

In Milan, approximately 5,000 students paraded for more than an hour, cheering Mussolini and Hitler and shouting:

"Down with England!

"Down with France!"

The Milanese demonstrators attempted to reach the French and British consulates, but were turned back by strong infantry detachments.

Members of the British embassy staff in Rome looked on from upper floor windows while the demonstrators, held back by a cordon of steel-helmeted troops, shouted and sang patriotic songs for ten minutes.

Italians Burn Allied Flags In Front of British Embassy

Uniformed Fascist Official Congratulates Students and Speaks of War Cry—French Note Reported Sent.

ROME, May 14 (A. P.).—Shouting students burned a British and a French flag on a simulated coffin in front of the British embassy today in a new outburst of anti-Allied demonstrations. Earlier, they had demonstrated at the French embassy and then marched across town to Porta Pia, the famous gate in Roman Wall adjacent to the British embassy.

Several thousand students were halted by a barrier of armed troops at the British embassy, as they had been before at the French embassy.

Despite these manifestations of anti-British feeling, the consulate took no steps to urge British subjects to leave Italy, but Britons who asked advice were told it might be wise to go.

Renewed demonstrations were also reported in Naples, Syracuse and other cities.

The official Stefani news agency reported: "The strongest and deepest indignation over the piracy of the western Powers, to the harm of Italy, continues throughout Italy."

Mussolini was twice called to the balcony to acknowledge cheers of the demonstrators.

Armed troops stood guard before a huge throng in front of the French Embassy after about 5,000 others had massed under Premier Mussolini's balcony and clamored in vain for a speech.

A column of several thousand schoolboys, ranging in age from 12 years up, marched to the French Embassy through congested downtown streets.

They carried a coffin wrapped in the French flag with an umbrella on top, a caricature of France labelled "Poor Chamberlain's Fisherwoman" and another of England with the title, "Her Boy Friend."

Besides Italian flags, the students had one big swastika banner and another with the legend, "Down With the French Republic."

Most of the boys carried clubs, but apparently only for appearance. There was no effort to wield them. Interspersed in the crowd were several hundred schoolgirls, striving to keep up under the burden of their schoolbags and books.

Cheers and shouts for a speech brought Mussolini to the balcony. Smilingly he acknowledged the demonstrators' greeting, but he maintained the silence which, he said last week, "only facts" could break.

The students gathered at 8 A. M. for another day of demonstrations against Great Britain and France. They marched through the streets in a body until they assembled in the vast Piazza Venezia under Il Duce's window.

Troops guarded the British and French embassies for the second day, but the students were turned aside by a few policemen in the streets long before they reached either building.

One column of 200 students, carrying a big Italian flag, headed for the British Consulate in the Piazzi di Espana shouting, "What is England Doing?" It was deflected into a side street by a lone policeman.

At the same time the British were expected to protest to the Italian authorities over the slapping of a Briton, identified as Viscount Royston, at a fashionable night club last night by an Italian distributing anti-British leaflets. The incident was said to have occurred when Lord Royston, a personal friend of Bruno Mussolini, refused to read a leaflet which the Italian laid on his table.

Paper was pasted over signs marking Brussels street. This, however, appeared to be the work of irresponsible persons, since the organized demonstrations have been directed chiefly at England, some at France.

More responsible acts appeared to be the distribution of anti-British folders among bus passengers and a handbill campaign.

The patrons of one popular English tea room said that they were prevented from taking their customary tea yesterday afternoon by anti-British groups which effectively routed traffic away from the entrance.

Everywhere stories were circulated of street incidents and molestations of English people and their Italian sympathizers.

Most of these reports could not be checked, but various persons reported seeing gangs of young Italians making the rounds of the city on the lookout for persons attempting to tear down anti-British posters.

Reports of organized student and Young Fascist demonstrations came from virtually every city.

Just as large numbers of Scandinavians left Italy at the time of Germany's invasion of Denmark and Norway, many Dutch citizens are reported to be leaving Italy now, some after consulting the Netherlands legation. A number were bound for France.

Various explanations were offered by diplomats to explain these outbursts coming at this time. Some thought it might be an effort to divert British and French attention to the Mediterranean while Germany smashed into Holland and Belgium. Another suggestion was that it might be a clever effort to whip up Italian feeling by shifting stress from the pro-German to the anti-British angle.

The pro-German feeling desired by some leaders has been slow to catch on among the people.

That the Government wanted the demonstrations at this time was likely, since it was the widespread publication of Luca Pietromarchi's report to Mussolini on the Allied Contraband Control and its effect on Italian shipping which touched them off.

It was announced today that Italy is to obtain considerable quantities of Spanish raw materials in exchange for Italian-finished products under a trade agreement signed at Madrid on May 8.

Italy will receive not only raw materials, presumably minerals, for her industries, but also will get foodstuffs. Trade is to be regulated by reciprocal import quotas, with payment through a clearing system.

Late to day a mixed Italo-Hungarian trade commission settled some trade problems between Hungary and Italy. Their nature was not disclosed.

French Send Note.

ROME, May 14 (A. P.).—The French Government was reported today to have sent a formal note to Italy. Its contents was not disclosed.

Belief was expressed that the note dealt with Italian complaints against the Franco-British contraband control which inspired the current anti-Allied demonstrations in Italy.

France Protests Agitation

PARIS, May 14 (AP).—The French government, striving to keep Italy from entering the war on Germany's side, delivered objections to Rome today against the anti-Allied campaign in the Fascist press.

The Foreign Ministry announced that Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet, in an interview with Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, "gave an oral reply to the arguments of the Italian press." No formal French note of protest, however, was presented.

A semi-official note on the Allied naval blockade, ostensible cause of the Italian demonstrations and press attacks, said:

"Our sole preoccupation has been to prevent contraband from reaching an enemy destination, and we have never thought of using the blockade to interfere with Italian economic life."

RIOTING GROWS IN ITALY; ENTRY INTO WAR SEEN

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK

Rome, May 14 (AP).—New anti-Allied demonstrations, capped by the burning of British and French flags on a mock coffin in front of the British Embassy, heightened apprehension tonight that Italy soon might go to war.

Other signs of war fever were lacking, but some diplomatic observers expressed anxiety because of student parades in Rome and scores of other cities encouraged by Fascist leaders.

In the midst of the agitation against the Allies, Italy's number two liner, the Conte di Savoia, sailed from Naples for Genoa en route to New York, and Italy appropriated nearly 2,000,000,000 lire ($100,000,000) for the extraordinary expenses of five ministries to meet the "international situation."

Some observers said they believed the sailing of the Conte di Savoia was a sign that Italy would stay out of the war at least two weeks.

MAY 15 1940

Washington, D. C., May 14.—American nationals in Italy have been warned to evacuate that country immediately, Washington learned tonight.

Secretary of State Hull at his press conference indicated that such warnings were being delivered by Ambassador Phillips.

Latest State Department records list 19,560 American citizens as residents of Italy on Jan. 1, 1940.

Meanwhile the State Department notified the twenty South American republics that the United States would willingly join in a declaration of protest against the German invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxemburg.

BEAVERBROOK PICKED TO RULE AIR FACTORIES

MAY 15 1940

By EDWIN STOUT.

London, May 14 (AP).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill injected new blood into his Cabinet tonight as British sources, acknowledging the Allied situation in Holland to be "extremely serious," foresaw a possible German submarine and air assault on Great Britain from Lowland bases.

Chief among the Cabinet additions was that of vigorous, 61-year-old Lord Beaverbrook, famed Canadian-born newspaper publisher, to the newly created post of Minister for Aircraft Production. Long an advocate of "planes, planes and more planes," his energies will be directed toward bolstering a fighting arm in which Britain admits a deficiency.

Despite gloomy news from the Netherlands, British fighting pilots were reported to have inflicted four losses for every one suffered at the hands of the Germans in the Low Countries.

Besides Beaverbrook, publisher of the London Express and the Standard, other Cabinet appointments included:

Dr. Hugh Dalton, Laborite, Minister of Economic Warfare.

Lord Hankey, former Minister Without Portfolio, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Robert S. Hudson, Minister of Agriculture.

REICH RADIOS BELGIUM: GIVE UP LIKE DUTCH

MAY 15 1940

Berlin, May 15 (Wednesday) (AP).—Having forced surrender of all but isolated units of the Netherlands' 400,000-man army in five days, Germany sought today to extend the scope of this newest conquest by urging Belgium to follow the Dutch example.

Hour after hour, starting early in the morning, all German radio stations broke in on their programs with appeals to the Belgian soldiers to lay down their arms.

In Flemish and in French, the soldiers were told that Germany does not wish to harm the Belgian people, that the German invasion of Belgium was brought about because Great Britain and France were getting ready to attack Germany through Belgium.

Amsterdam All Set For German Entry

London, May 15 (Wednesday) (AP).—Reuters, British news agency, early today intercepted a radio message in which it said the German Consul General in Amsterdam informed the Berlin Foreign Office that German troops would encounter no dificulties in occupying Amsterdam.

The message was sent on the wave length of the Hilversum, the Netherlands' station. It said:

"As soon as information is received here that German troops are about to enter the city, a representative of the commander of the Amsterdam garrison and a representative of the Lord Mayor of Amsterdam, will meet the German forces on the outskirts of the city.

"They will wait for them in a motor car, hoisting a white flag and the service flag of the German Reich."

Belgian Defense Is Holding Firm, Premier Asserts

[By the Associated Press]

Brussels, May 14—Premier Hubert Pierlot told the nation tonight that Belgium's defenders had made "certain modification of defense positions according to order," but that there had been no German "break through" despite smashing assaults in many sectors.

"The situation is normal," the Premier assured his people in a broadcast.

In the fortified area of Liege, he declared Belgian guns were inflicting tremendous losses on wave upon wave of attacking Germans. (The German high command claims Liege is in Nazi hands.)

Report Resistance

Before he spoke, the Belgian high command reported Belgian troops were "resisting energetically the pressure of the enemy forces," but that during last night advance elements were compelled to retire.

"No parachutist has dropped in Brussels yesterday or today," Pierlot asserted.

The Government announced earlier that it would remain in the Belgian capital, objective of a German army driving westward. A series of air raid alarms sounded during the day but no bombs were heard.

Civilian Losses Cited

"In a large number of bombings in Belgium there have been a number of civilian losses which should be heard by the civilized world," the Premier said. "The hour will come when the enemy must pay for this."

He said that towns bombed since the invasion started included Antwerp, Namur, Louvain, Alost and Tirlemont and that trains filled wih refugees were "mercilessly machine-gunned."

Declaring the Germans were waging war on a more savage scale than during their 1914 invasion, the Premier exhorted Belgians to "guard intact your morale."

John Cudahy, United States Ambassador, said he planned to remain in Brussels indefinitely with his entire staff. Other important embassies also are remaining here, as are officials of the National City Bank of New York.

16-To-35 Classes Called

The Belgian radio called for all males between 16 and 35 to report to the army. During the World War, men of these ages were used by the Germans as soldiers and laborers.

Peasants trudged down the roads from the war area with their carts, livestock and what meager furnishings they could take along, just as they did twenty-six years ago.

In one area they formed an eight-mile long line, moving slowly through clouds of stifling dust. Whole families pedaled bicycles, some of their riders carrying babies papoose style.

How they would be fed and sheltered in the immediate future remained a question.

British Claim Four Airplanes for Each One They Lost.

LONDON, May 14 (A. P.).—Belgium's forts at Liege continue to inflict heavy losses upon the enemy, the Belgian Premier, Hubert Pierlot, said today in a radio broadcast heard in London. (Germany has reported the capture of Liege.)

Declaring there have been a great many victims among the Belgian population, the Prime Minister asserted that trains containing civilians and the "lamentable cortege of refugees" had been attacked by German planes at several points and machine-gunned "without pity."

He denied reports that German parachute troops had descended over Brussels either Monday or Tuesday.

British Planes Active.

British fighting pilots were officially announced tonight to have "inflicted on the enemy at least four times the losses they have suffered themselves today."

A communique said that "throughout yesterday and last night our bomber aircraft continued to attack the enemy's road and rail approaches to the Dutch and Belgian battlefields," inflicting considerable damage.

"Vigorous attacks were made on enemy columns along roads in Brabant [in Belgium] which were successfully blocked.

"Further north of the Dutch battlefield, important railway bridges were attacked and fire was seen to break out following a direct hit from 4,000 feet. From these operations all our aircraft returned safely."

The statement said British fighters "unhesitatingly attacked formations far larger than their own. In the day's work, our fighter pilots have inflicted on the enemy at least four times the losses they have suffered themselves."

Cabinet Stays in Brussels.

BRUSSELS, May 14 (A. P.).—Belgium's Cabinet, with air raid sirens screaming through the city and anti-aircraft batteries in action, said today that it would remain in the capital, the goal of a German Army driving westward from the Liege area.

Although three air raid alarms sounded this morning, no bombs were heard in the center of the city.

The Belgian High Command acknowledged that its advance forces were compelled to retire in the night, although saying that they resisted enemy attacks energetically.

SWISS PROTEST NAZI BOMBING

Call Upon Berlin to Pay for Damage to Railroad.

Organize Boy Scouts and Women to Spot Foes in Sky.

BASLE, Switzerland, May 14 (A. P.).—The Swiss Government today ordered its Minister at Berlin to protest to Germany over the bombing of a Swiss railroad near Delemont on May 10 and to demand payment of damages. A communique said that an examination of shattered bits of some twenty-seven bombs dropped on Swiss territory showed beyond doubt that they were German.

Meanwhile, the Swiss Government at the request of the German Minister to Switzerland, agreed today to look after German diplomatic interests in the Netherlands.

The Swiss Federal Council issued a statement criticizing Swiss newspaper apprehension about the continued presence of German nationals in the republic. The newspapers had said that, although all Frenchmen of active service age were recalled at the beginning of the war, nearly 100,000 Germans remained in the country.

The council statement asserted that the dangers of sabotage and in the army itself who are organized to guard against armed men dropped from the skies and the subversive work of Fifth Columnists.

Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, even aged women, have their instructions to watch for parachute troops. They also know what to do if air raid warnings scream.

For example, there is the case of a sixteen-year-old youth and his sixty-five-year-old uncle. The boy's father, brother and two other uncles were in the army, like all Swiss between the ages of 20 and 60 years. But the boy was too young, and the uncle was too old for the army.

Both boy and uncle, however, kept a nearby radio tuned to Swiss stations and were ready at a second's notice to carry out their job of cycling through the countryside to watch for parachute soldiers.

Elaborate precautions have been taken to prevent Fifth Column attacks against utilities and communications. Persons living in buildings opposite Swiss radio stations have been ordered to keep off balconies on that side of the house and to draw their shutters night and day.

Business Houses Quit Basle.

Even the bank for International Settlements, which had headquarters here since September, has moved its records and business office to the little village of Chateau d'Oex, in the Alps. That village is near Gstad, about seventy-five miles beyond the valley and the series of lakes stretching from Basle on the German frontier to Geneva on the French frontier.

Other large banking and business firms have moved from Basle and Zurich to the interior during the past three days.

In the face of German concentrations north of her Rhine frontier, and equally powerful French forces massed on her Jura frontier, Switzerland has mobilized an army of more than half a million men.

the reported numbers of Germans in Switzerland were both "exaggerated" and tended to excite the population.

Seek 'Chute Defense Method.

Defense preparations were being rushed, and the Swiss were paying particular attention to methods of coping with parachute troops.

Britain's Staff Burns Papers in Berne Legation

French Also Destroy Records in Swiss Capital, Under Threat of Nazi Invasion

By The Associated Press

BERNE, Switzerland, May 14 (AP).—The British Legation staff burned its papers in Switzerland's capital tonight. The French were understood to have done the same in their private backyard. However, the British Legation is so situated that crowds of passersby could gather on the sidewalks and see the conflagration. Police dispersed the crowd.

As British Legation employees tended the diplomatic bonfire, soldiers and militarized police established control on the Thunstrasse, one of Berne's main streets, and examined the credentials and contents of all cars entering the Swiss capital.

The guard was established to prevent any infiltration of "fifth column troops." A special search was made for arms.

Nazi Put Bridge Across Rhine

BASEL, May 15 (Wednesday) (AP).—German engineering detachments early today threw a pontoon bridge across the Rhine River at the entrance to Lake Constance, where the German town of Konstanz lies surrounded by Swiss territory on the southern bank.

It was the third time in three days that the Germans had "practiced" with pontoon bridges on this stretch of river, and the fact lent point to Swiss speculation whether Germany might combine her drive across the low countries with an attempted push through Switberland into France's backdoor or whether the Nazis merely wanted the Allies to think they would.

While awaiting the answer the Swiss completed precautionary measures, preparing almost as fully for war as though they already were in the conflict.

The government ordered its minister at Berlin to protest over the bombing of a Swiss railroad on May 10 and to demand damages. A Swiss statement said the bomb fragments showed they were German.

However, the government denied and criticized Swiss press expressions of fear that large numbers of Germans had been sent into the country since the outbreak of war.

Swiss fighting planes patrolled the Rhine area yesterday, but observers thought that Switzerland, with less than 500 planes would not attempt to contest mastery of the air against any major foe, but would destroy her airfields instead, to prevent their use by an enemy.

Many observers expressed belief that the German threat was more than a bluff, and that the Nazis planned to strike through this district in an effort to reach the Rhone Valley and then to persuade Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy that the time had come for a "death blow" to the Allies.

DUTCH SEIZE 26 NAZI SHIPS

Vessels Taken Over in East and West Indian Ports.

LONDON, May 14 (A. P.).—A British naval spokesman said today that nineteen German merchant ships were seized by the Dutch authorities in the Dutch East Indies and seven in the Dutch West Indies.

This same spokesman said that five other German ships were mined and sunk by the Norwegians or scuttled or set afire by their crews between May 6 and May 11.

He placed the total tonnage lost to the enemy between those dates at 171,049.

He said that each of the thirty-one ships the Germans lost during this period was of less than 10,000 tons.

Britain Gains New Ships.

The Nord Norge, a Norwegian ship of 1,991 tons, used as a troop transport by the Germans, was reported sunk by a mine off Norway.

Only one British ship of about 6,000 tons was sunk by the enemy in the week ended May 5, he said; while there were no Allied or neutral losses in the same period.

The spokesman also said that Great Britain obtained Norway's 4,800,000 tons of merchant shipping in addition to gains from the Dutch and Belgian merchant fleets and a number of Danish prizes.

U-boats Inactive.

It was unofficially indicated, however, that the necessity of importing butter and lumber from areas further afield than Scandinavia might make the actual gain doubtful.

The small British losses of the last four weeks were attributed by informed spokesmen to the effectiveness of Allied submarine measures.

Regarding the apparent inactivity of Nazi U-boats, one spokesman said that during the world war the German submarine school trained 20,000 pupils and it was necessary to withdraw thirty-six submarines from war duty for instruction.

The same spokesman said that the Danish shipyards now in German hands were capable of producing twenty U-boats at a time.

SECRET BRITISH PLANE IN ACTION

Defiant Reported in Air in Surprising Numbers.

SAID TO EXCEL HURRICANE

New Fighting Craft Has Power Gun-turret in Her Tail.

LONDON, May 14 (A. P.).—Great Britain's new secret fighter plane with a sting in its tail and a greater fire power than the famous British Hurricane is being used in the fierce air battles for supremacy over the Nazis over the Netherlands and Belgium.

British communiques mentioned for the first time yesterday the new two-seater Defiant in telling of action over the Low Countries.

In addition to an unknown number of machine guns firing from forward positions, the Defiant is equipped with a power-operated gun turret aft.

In Large-scale Production.

This new fighter, whose details are secret, was known to have been in large-scale production last winter, and is believed to have appeared in surprising numbers in air battles over the Lowlands where the Royal Air Force reported bringing down at least 135 German warplanes since Friday morning.

The British reported early last February that they had the new fighter in production as an answer to a new type of German fast, long-range bomber which was expected to make its appearance this spring.

The power-driven turret is designed to swing easily at high speeds, whereas ordinary turrets are difficult to operate because of the wind pressure. The turret permits a broadside attack on a formation of enemy planes.

New Bomber in Use, Too.

Until the war spread to Holland and Belgium, the British Spitfires, Hurricanes, Wellingtons and Blenheims bore the brunt of the war in the air.

A Bristol-Beaufort, described as the fastest twin-hinged bomber in the world, took part in the attack on the German-occupied Waalhaven airdrome near Rotterdam. The Beaufort is said to be capable of "200 miles an hour plus."

This new bomber carries a crew of four—pilot, navigator, gunner and radio operator—and has a power-operated gun-turret amidships, with four guns mounted forward.

Specially designed for rapid manufacture, the Beaufort is known as the "Jack of All Trades" of the R. A. F. It can be used as an ordinary long-range bomber, a tropedo bomber or a general reconnaisance plane.

Nazi Weapon Twice Explained.

Germany's new secret weapon is a death-dealing wave or ray which can exterminate any living creature within a radius of 1,000 feet and is disseminated by a machine small enough to be carried on a soldier's back, according to a Rome broadcast intercepted here by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

From Berlin, however, the Associated Press reported today that in the absence of any official statement it was now believed that the "secret weapon" spoken of referred merely to the use of parachute troops against a fortress.

The C. B. S. said that the ray was described in an English-language news broadcast from Station 2RO-8, Rome, which quoted the Munich radio to the effect that the substance was obtained from the splitting of atoms.

GERMANS SHIFT TROOPS TO OR FROM NORWAY

Numerous Transports Are Sighted Moving Both North And South In Kattegat

London Reports New Allied Forces Are Landed North Of Narvik

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, May 14—The sighting of numerous German transports moving both north and south in the Kattegat led to reports tonight that the Germans are reinforcing their Low Country drive with their forces from Norway.

Seven large transports escorted by warships were seen moving south. But observers were unable to tell whether they were loaded with troops, leaving the possibility they were strengthening their Norwegian force instead.

Norwegian refugees reported two German transports attempted to land troops at Elsfjord, south of Mo, but that one was sunk by the Allies. The other landed a force of about 400 men, apparently intended to reinforce troops at Narvik.

War On Guerrilla Band

Oslo, Norway, May 14 (AP)—German troops launched operations today to wipe out an international group of 400 volunteers from the Finnish-Russian war engaged in guerrilla warfare.

The group, operating in the Elverum district under the leadership of a Swedish officer, was reported to be pillaging farms, seizing food supplies and "killing anybody within rifle distance."

New Allied Forces Land North of Narvik

London, May 14 (AP) — The War Office announced tonight new Allied forces had landed successfully at Bjerkvik, seven miles north of Narvik, Norway, with only "a few minor casualties."

"Bjerkvik is in the rear of the German positions in the Gratangen area, where our forces made a successful attack at the same time," said a communique.

"An enemy detachment which had landed at Hemnes was bombarded by a British warship. Casualties were inflicted on the enemy."

British submarines off Norway have "successfully attacked" nine German transports and supply ships since the beginning of May, an official source said today, and the submarine operations are continuing.

Washington Okays Protest To Hitler

(Other U. S. and The War News on Page 3)

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 14—The United States expressed today its willingness to join with the other American republics in a joint declaration of protest to Germany over the invasion of Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

The State Department told the Uruguayan Government, which originated a move for a joint declaration, and the Panamanian Government, which communicated the Uruguayan suggestion to the other republics, that the United States would be glad to join with Uruguay and the other nations in such a declaration.

A State Department note added that this Government was in full agreement with the draft of a text for the joint declaration of protest as written by Uruguay.

Releases Cablegram Text

The State Department released the text of a cablegram received from the Government of Uruguay through the Panamanian Foreign Minister.

The message said:

"The Government of Uruguay has learned with keen emotion of the attack on sovereignty and violation of neutrality suffered by Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. The Government of the republic believes that respect for the rights of neutrality is an international principle which should be formally maintained whatever the circumstances may be in which the belligerents find themselves.

Would Invoke Resolutions

"I (the Uruguayan Foreign Minister) take the liberty of invoking Articles 4 and 5 of the ninth resolution approved at Panama to the end that the other American Governments be consulted concerning the possibility of a joint declaration on this subject.

"I respectfully request Your Excellency (the Foreign Minister of Panama) that on transmitting the contents of this dispatch to the other Governments of America you be good enough to inform them that they, like the Government of Your Excellency, will receive a draft next which this chancellery will send."

The articles referred to by the Uruguayan Foreign Minister were taken from a "Declaration on the Maintenance of International Activities in Accordance with Christian Morality" which was signed by the twenty-one American nations at their neutrality conference at Panama last fall.

These articles state that the American republics "consider the violation of the neutrality or the invasion of weaker nations as an unjustifiable measure in the conduct and success of war."

Danish Crew Would Avoid Internment in Canada

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14 (A. P.).—Fearful that they would be interned in Vancouver, B. C., twenty-four members of the crew of the Danish freighter Arria asked company officials to be paid off here and returned home.

The seamen said they would report to United States immigration authorities today for help in returning to their families in Denmark.

HULL FORESEES ALLIED VICTORY

Says in Speech Law and Morality Will Triumph.

AVOIDS NAMING COUNTRIES

Declares America Has No Choice but to Build Armaments.

WASHINGTON, May 14 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull was reliably represented today as convinced that the Allies eventually would defeat Germany.

This was based upon a speech last night before the American Society of International Law in which Mr. Hull urged his listeners "to hold fast to the conviction that law and morality will triumph over the forces of lawlessness and chaos which have again risen to challenge the very concept of order under law—just as they have, in the past, triumphed over similar challenges."

As for himself, he said, "I am certain of that triumph."

Throughout the address, characterized by associates as the strongest he has made since the outbreak of the European war, Mr. Hull did not name any European nation. Nevertheless, officials manifested no reluctance in supplying the names which fitted some of his statements.

Had Germany in Mind.

They said he had Germany in mind when he declared:

"Powerful nations have built up vast armaments for the avowed purpose of attaining their national aims by force; and their action has compelled other nations—even those most sincerely devoted to the cause of peace under a rule of law, including our own—to increase to immense proportions their own armaments.

"Peaceful nations have been deprived of their independence by the use of armed force or threat of force, combined with the exercise of fraud and treachery."

Secretary Hull said the United States had no choice but to rearm, and he called for a united public opinion behind the nation's effort to exert its moral influence in a warring world.

Roosevelt Drafts Defense Plea

To Ask More Millions for Armament in Message Tomorrow or Thursday.

WASHINGTON, May 14 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt, hastening expansion of the nation's defense preparations, will send to Congress either tomorrow or Thursday a message requesting more millions for armaments.

This was reported today by chairmen of the Senate and House Naval and Military committees after they had conferred with the President on the recommendations to be included in his message.

Asked whether any change was contemplated in a pending bill authorizing an 11 per cent expansion of the navy, approved today by the Senate Naval Committee, Chairman Walsh replied in the negative.

In the conference with Mr. Roosevelt in addition to Senator Walsh were Representative Vinson of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Committee, and Representative May of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Committee. Senator Sheppard of Texas, chairman of the Senate Military Committee, who had been invited, was unable to be present.

Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson, coordinator of ship construction, told the House Naval Committee that about $250,000,000 of the $300,000,000 extra he recommended would be needed to expedite construction of hulls and machinery and that about $45,000,000 more would be needed for ordnance and armor.

Admiral Robinson declared that the navy also wants to put navy and private shipyards on a three-shift basis. He conceded, in response to questions by Chairman Vinson that it would be about nine months before the yards would be in "full swing" at the projected faster pace.

Sees Big Time Saving.

Admiral Robinson testified at the opening of an extraordinary inquiry by the committee to determine ways and means of stepping up the building program. He said from three to seven months would be saved in the construction of each ship by the speed-up program.

While Mr. Roosevelt continued a series of conferences on speeding up defense preparations, Stephen Early, presidential secretary, told reporters that the amount of new appropriations to be requested would not be revealed until the President sends his message to Congress.

He indicated that the request would be limited to appropriations and would not call for authorization for new defense projects to be met by additional appropriations later on.

'Won't Pass the Buck.'

Recalling that he had told newspaper men yesterday not to "go out on a limb" over the possibility that the Chief Executive would renew a proposal for a special defense tax, Mr. Early declared today that it would be safe to assume that "the President will leave, without any attempt to pass the buck, the question of financing the national defense to the Congress."

"In other words," he continued, "it is optional with the Congress. They have, apparently, two choices. One is to put down a national defense tax. It is getting late in the session and there is increasing sentiment to adjourn the Congress as soon as possible in June. The leaders have so announced to you.

Debt Almost at Limit.

The limit fixed by law on the national debt is $45,000,000,000. On May 11, the Treasury reported today, the actual debt was $42,746,119,533. Further expenditures in excess of income before the end of the fiscal year, June 30, are expected to push the debt millions nearer the limit beyond which the Government may not borrow.

Mr. Early said he assumed that Mr. Roosevelt simply would outline the defense problem and tell the legislators it was up to them to decide how to go about solving it.

Asked whether the choice between taxes or raising the debt limit would have to be made this session, the presidential secretary said he would be unable to determine until he knew the amount of appropriations to be sought and their effect on the Treasury.

To a reporter who asked whether it might be assumed the debt limit would be raised, if that alternative were selected, only by the amount sufficient to accommodate the defense fund, Mr. Early remarked that that was getting away ahead of conditions.

DISCOUNTS ALIEN DANGER IN MEXICO

Ambassador Daniels Doubts If "Fifth-Column" Move Would Succeed

Says Communists Have Party, But Nazis Have Been Able To Do Little

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 14—Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico, told reporters today that he had informed President Roosevelt that he did not believe any attempt to set up a "fifth column" in Mexico would succeed.

Nazis Not Strong, Claim

Daniels, who lunched with the Chief Executive, said the Mexican Government was taking precautions and had requested him to furnish any information the United States Government might have on such activities in Mexico.

"Of course," the Ambassador asserted, "there are Communists in Mexico, a Communist party in fact. And it is the belief that a group of Nazi agents are trying to work into Mexico, but they haven't been able to do much and are not very strong."

The Ambassador said he expected to leave for Mexico City about June 10, but might delay his departure somewhat to accompany Mr. Roosevelt to North Carolina on the first leg of a Presidential swing around the country.

He will go to Raleigh, N. C., for a diamond jubilee anniversary of his newspaper, the News and Observer, which will be 75 years old Saturday, he said. That is also the Ambassador's birthday and he is two years older than the paper.

Says New Deal Perverts Good Neighbor Policy

Worcester, Mass., May 14 (AP)—William R. Castle, Under Secretary of State in the Hoover Administration, accused the New Deal tonight of "perverting" the "good-neighbor" policy which, he said, had always been the basis of American foreign policy.

"At a period of history when rapid communications have made us all neighbors, the New Deal has restricted this policy to the Western Hemisphere," he said in an address prepared for the Foreign Policy Asociation.

"In addition, it has made it a one-sided policy, we being responsible for the giving, the others for the taking. The only healthy relationship between nations is one of mutual respect and this perversion of the good neighbor policy is destructive of respect on both sides."

Disgrace, He Says

He termed Mexico's "wholesale confiscation of American property under the guise of expropriation" a "disgrace" and charged the State Department with ineptitude in dealing with it.

"The point of all this," Castle continued, "is that if property can be confiscated in Mexico, it can be confiscated elsewhere. This has already happened in Bolivia, and the disease may spread rapidly.

"If I owned stock in South American copper mines or indeed had made investments anywhere on the continent, I think I should try to draw out as quickly as possible.

Will Take Money

"There is too much of the guardian attitude in our treatment of the Latin-American nations. They are glad to have our money, but they don't want our advice on how to conduct themselves. They feel they have grown up and secretly resent being spoon-fed. We have got to treat them as our equals in sovereignty. But if we do this, we must expect from them treatment as far as we give them."

Castle also said that "the methods adopted by the Administration in continually baiting Japan" and "the official condemnations of Hitler and Stalin and Mussolini must stop" unless the United States planned to enter the war.

Invasion Sends Fortunes In Diamonds to London

Lapidaries Also Transferred in Mass Removal

LONDON, May 14 (AP).—Fabulous fortunes in diamonds flooded into London tonight by the suitcaseful from the great cutting centers of Amsterdam and Antwerp. The German invasion of the Low Countries thus makes London the center of every branch of the world diamond trade.

Heretofore London has been the main sales place for rough diamonds, but now the finished stones and even the skilled lapidaries are being conecentrated here.

A member of a leading diamond firm said removal of the stones and the exeptr workers was carried out successfully under a pre-arranged program so complete that it throttled even the source of industrial diamonds for Germany.

INDIA WATCHES WAR

Anti-British Campaign Halts Over Dislike of Nazis.

SIMLA, May 14 (A. P.).—India watched the news of the western front with such keen interest today that even British Cabinet changes directly affecting this country received secondary attention.

Indian political leaders generally accepted without comment Prime Minister Churchill's appointment of L. S. Amery to succeed the Marquess of Zetland as Secretary for India. Indians understood that Mr. Amery had a reputation for firmness and expected him to indorse the views of the present Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow.

An undeclared political truce is being observed by Indian Nationalist leaders, who a few weeks ago were threatening civil disobedience and other measures to force Britain's hand on the independence issue.

Rajendra Prasad, president of the 1939 All-India Congress, declared today that "England is better any day than the totalitarian States."

GERMANS SEIZED IN WEST INDIES

Suspected Hollanders Also Detained by Dutch.

WILLEMSTAD, Dutch West Indies, May 14 (A. P.).—Several Netherlanders have been rounded up with Germans and placed under arrest, presumably on suspicion of pro-German activities, it was disclosed today.

Some of the detained Hollanders were prominent folk in these island possessions of Holland. (Officials in the Dutch East Indies already have taken similar precautions.)

Some of the German leaders were kept in jail at Curacao and others were sent to a concentration camp on Bonaire, an island about thirty miles east of Curacao.

British warships patrolling the islands have landed troops and war material at Curacao.

BERLIN WONDERS ABOUT EX-KAISER

Rumors Say Hitler Has Sent Bodyguard to Doorn.

BERLIN, May 14 (A. P.).—The former Kaiser Wilhelm II came suddenly to the attention of Berlin today as the German armies drove through Holland, where at Doorn, the dethroned Emperor had been in exile since the world war.

Adolf Hitler has made no statement of his attitude toward the Kaiser. The view of the Foreign Office appeared to be that the former Monarch must express some wish regarding his future before any pronouncement is made here. There were reports, however, that members of Hitler's personal bodyguard, the so-called "Leibstandarte," were on their way to Wilhelm's refuge at Doorn.

"So far as grandpa himself is concerned, all he desires is to be left in peace on his little Dutch estate."

The former Kaiser is 81.

Of the situation at Narvik the Norwegian High Command said merely: "Fighting continues."

The Laborite London Daily Herald reported that the Government is planning to bring all munitions factories under State ownership or control, and to eliminate private profits.

Mr. Bevin said that if the Government did not allow the vested interests to stand in the way, "I will ask my people to work like hell to save the lives of our lads."

BELGIAN REFUGEES POUR INTO FRANCE

Special Trains Run---Some Come From Luxemburg.

PARIS, May 14 (A. P.).—A stream of refugees expected to total more than 200,000 poured into France today from Belgium and Luxemburg.

The Belgian Government notified the French that about 200,000 women, children and aged men were fleeing to this country. The authorities in Luxemburg said that some were coming from that tiny Duchy.

The exodus was the greatest in Europe since the flight from Catalonia before Generalissimo Franco's drive in the closing days of the Spanish civil war brought 500,000 Spaniards into France in February, 1939.

YUGOSLAVIA SEEKS GREEK ASSURANCE

Metaxas Reported Skeptical of Danger to Neighbor of Italian Invasion

BUCHAREST RUSHES FORTS

Rumanian Leaves Canceled—Russia Is Vigilant on Southern Border

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, May 14 (AP)—Yugoslavia was reported reliably tonight to have sounded out Greece on what assistance the Greeks might give this country in the event of an Italian attack.

Yugoslav Minister Aleksandar Vukcevitch told Premier John Metaxas of Greece of his country's concern over the possibility of an Italian invasion, informed diplomats said.

Meanwhile, the Yugoslav Army maintained big border garrisons on the alert and worked busily on deep zone fortifications.

Premier Metaxas was understood to have made no definite commitments and to have minimized the danger of a conflict. It was said in diplomatic quarters that the meeting of the Premier and the Minister reflected the contrast of Yugoslavia's alarm and Greece's optimism.

Belief that Greece may have received strong assurances from Italy was expressed in diplomatic quarters.

The importance of Greek cooperation to Yugoslavia was stressed in military quarters, which pointed out that the Allied army in the Near East could help Yugoslavia most easily by landing at Salonika, Greece, and marching up the Vardar River valley as in the last war.

Mexican Looks For U. S. to Get Into War Soon

Official Says His Country's Stand Would Be One of 'Benevolent Neutrality'

MEXICO CITY, May 14 (AP).—A high official of the Foreign Ministry said today that the Mexican government was convinced that the United States would enter the European war on the side of the Allies in the near future, and that Mexico should begin preparing for that eventuality.

If and when America enters the conflict, this official said, Mexico—despite a fundamental desire for peace—will observe a "benevolent neutrality" and will collaborate with the United States as fully as possible, without involving herself.

He said he believed the other nations of the Western Hemisphere would adopt a similar attitude.

Recent developments in Europe, the spokesman added, had advanced by many months the date of possible American entry into the war.

President Roosevelt's frequent appeals to Germany and Italy, and his recent warning to the Americas that they no longer enjoy "magic immunity," have sown seeds whose harvest will be military aid to Great Britain and France, the official asserted.

He said that, without exception, Mexican officialdom and the bulk of the Mexican people believed that the United States not only should but would assist the Allies.

The positive aid that Mexico might lend the United States, the official said, would include vigilance against Nazi spies or saboteurs, and action to prevent establishment of submarine bases for attacks on American shipping.

An influential body of Mexican Senators and Deputies, however, is at work organizing a "committee for neutrality" to prevent Mexico from becoming involved in the conflict.

Envoy Views Next Thirty Days Of Battle As Critical Period

They May Weigh Scales For Freedom Or Dictatorship, Lord Lothian Declares

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 14—The next thirty days of war in Europe, Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, declared tonight, "may determine whether there is to be any effective barrier left to the domination of all Europe, Asia and Africa by the dictatorships."

They may determine, he said, "whether Hitler's method of conquest by violence and fraud receives its first serious check and mankind, though the struggle will be far from over, begins to breathe more freely again."

Addressing the English-Speaking Union, the marquess continued: "I have no doubt that in the end freedom will prevail. The only question is the amount of suffering we bring upon ourselves before we learn our lesson."

The ambassador, pointing out that we said the war would be a three-year war," contended that "in the first year, because, like all democracies we had delayed our preparations too long, our principal task was to avoid defeat, so that we might have time to mobilize our immense resources for the second year and after."

He cited as an instance of mobilization of power the training scheme for pilots in Canada, by which it is hoped, he said, to "turn out no less than 50,000 polits a year, though many of the student pilots will come from other parts of the British Commonwealth."

Hitler, he asserted, "evidently means to tyr and gain a decision this year, before these new resources are ready and to induce the other military dictatorships to come in this year also on his side in order to weigh the balance against us."

". . . Despite all the murk and gloom, I am not depressed or afraid," he concluded.

Rosendahl Recalled As Adviser Upon New Lighter-Than-Air Ships

Washington, May 14 (AP)—The Navy Department said that Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, former commander of the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., was being returned to Washington to act as an adviser to the Secretary of the Navy on lighter-than-air ships.

Commander Rosendahl, who has been executive officer on the cruiser Milwaukee since August, 1938, is expected to come here May 27 to coordinate the reports of two boards which have investigated the feasibility of a new program of airship construction.

Both boards filed reports favorable to lighter-than-air craft, the department said, and the navy, for some time, has had authorization to spend $3,000,000 on airship construction. Doubts have been expressed in many quarters as to the advisability of further construction, in view of past airship disasters, and Commander Rosendahl, as the nation's foremost authority in that field, is expected to explore the subject thoroughly.

A former skipper of the airship Akron and a survivor of the lost Shenandoah, Rosendahl was commander of the Lakehurst station immediately before being returned to sea duty.

The Texts of the Day's War Communiques

MAY 15 1940

German

BERLIN, May 14 (AP)—The text of a High Command announcement tonight follows:

Under tremendous pressure of attacks of German diving bombers and the approaching attack of armored units on the city, Rotterdam has capitulated and thereby preserved itself from destruction.

In North Belgium German armored units have reached Ligny, historic battleground of 1815, in pursuit of the retreating enemy.

A supplementary High Command communiqué said:

After the capitulation of Rotterdam in view of the imminent threat to the Netherland capital, the Netherland commander has given up hopeless resistance and given his troops the order to cease fighting. In Zeeland the fighting continues.

The earlier High Command communiqué follows:

In the Netherlands we succeeded in expanding our piercing of the Grebbe Line southeastward of Amersfoort and gained area in the direction of Utrecht.

Additional forces are coming from the south into Netherland fortifications, where our troops, after the destruction of one enemy detachment near Dortrecht, pierced through as far as Rotterdam.

In Belgium the Turnhout Canal, southeast of the town of the same name, was crossed yesterday, and farther south "Grosse Gette" was reached.

North of Namur our armored forces met retreating enemy armored units on the fortified Dyle [River] positions. The enemy armored units were strongly shattered by preceding attacks from the air and ground.

The city of Liége is in German hands. In the region south of the line from Liége to Namur our troops left the Ardennes [Mountains] behind and vanguards reached the Meuse [River] between Namur and Givet.

In Southern Belgium also movements were proceeding swiftly on schedule.

The French-Luxembourg and French-Belgian border up to the point Mezieres-Charleville has been reached nearly everywhere and crossed in many places. Under the protection of continuously attacking German fighting planes, Stukas [dive bombers] and destroyer-plane units, and under their crushing effects, we succeeded in crossing the Meuse also on French soil.

Expanding yesterday's attacks, we broke into enemy positions in the region of Merzig and south of Pirmasens and captured British and French prisoners.

Besides strongly supporting the army, the air force attacked different enemy airports. At the airport at Hamstede alone twenty-six airplanes were destroyed on the ground. The total losses of our opponent on May 13 amounted to approximately 150 airplanes, of which fifty-seven were bagged in air fights and thirty-seven were shot down by anti-aircraft artillery. Twenty-seven of our own planes are missing.

French

The French High Command's morning communiqué follows:

The German attack developed increased volume.

Nothing important to report from Central Belgium.

The enemy reached the Meuse [River] from Liége to Namur and Sedan. The latter towns were evacuated and particularly desperate fighting is taking place in the immediate region as well as the region north of Dinant.

The battle continues from the southern outskirts of Longwy to the Moselle [River].

Enemy attacks were repulsed in the region of Wissembourg.

Everywhere our troops and allied troops are fighting gallantly against the enemy, who is putting forth his most intense effort, chiefly by means of his tanks and aviation.

By the end of May 13 sixteen enemy planes were brought down. These must be added to the number given in the evening communiqué of May 13.

In the course of the night our aviation carried out numerous reconnaissances.

The night French communiqué said:

In Belgium, north of the Meuse, we pursued normally our movements and organization.

The enemy attacked two points on our present front. He was repulsed with heavy losses in tanks.

On the Meuse, south of Namur, the Germans attempted to cross the river at several points. We launched counter-attacks and the fighting continues, more especially in the region of Sedan, where the enemy is making a momentous effort with furious obstinacy and at the expense of heavy casualties.

West of the Moselle, German troops delivered some local attacks. These have been repulsed with losses.

Our aviation has powerfully and efficiently intervened in the battle. Moreover, numerous aerial reconnaissances have been made during the night of May 13 and the morning of May 14. Bombing expeditions have been successfully carried out on strategical points and on military convoys. During the aerial encounters fifteen enemy airplanes have been brought down in our territory.

In Norway, in the region of Narvik, operations have been successfully carried out, of which a report is made in the British communiqué.

Netherlands

AMSTERDAM, May 14 (AP)—A High Command communique today said:

In the northern provinces the enemy has established himself. An attempt to force the Ysselmeer [Yssel Lake] dyke has failed up to now.

The northern part of Rotterdam is firmly in our hands.

The field army retreated last night and now holds our well-known new Dutch waterline. The position of Den Helder [North Sea naval base] is intact. The situation in Brabant is uncertain. The Province of Zeeland is firmly in our hands.

Our air defense remains, notwithstanding heavy losses, very active.

The struggle is heavy. However, it is worth our while. Our independent national existence, which we won centuries ago under the leadership of the Oranges, is at stake. Long live Her Majesty the Queen! Long live our native country!

Another High Command communiqué issued today follows:

German planes on the morning of May 13 attacked ships of the Royal Navy in Netherland waters along the coast of the Province of North Holland. Of four planes that came over Den Helder, three were shot down. Later in the morning two other enemy planes were downed.

In the evening of May 13, after preparatory artillery fire lasting one hour, the Germans made an attack on Afsluitdijk [the Zuider Zee Dam], but it was repulsed.

Belgian

BRUSSELS, May 14 (AP)—Tonight's communiqué of the Belgian High Command follows:

During the night of May 13-14 Belgian forces took up in good order and without suffering any losses new defense positions in accordance with the plan of operations. They were supported by Allied armies.

At Namur our troops are offering strong resistance to violent attacks of mechanized troops supported by aerial bombardment.

Our aircraft have today carried out several reconnaissance flights in front of our positions.

Another High Command communiqué today said:

There have been numerous local engagements at different points of our positions. Our troops are resisting energetically the pressure of the enemy's forces.

During the night advance elements of our troops were compelled to retire.

GREAT BRITAIN

London, May 14 (AP).—An Air Ministry communique said tonight:

"Throughout yesterday and last night our bomber aircraft continued to attack the enemy's road and rail approaches to the Dutch and Belgian battlefields.

"Vigorous attacks were made on enemy columns along roads in Brabant (in Belgium), which were successfully blocked.

"In the day's work, our fighter pilots have inflicted on the enemy at least four times the losses they have suffered themselves."

"Fighters constantly patrol over the Dutch battlefields and the approaches to them. In almost every engagement they unhesitatingly attacked formations far larger than our own. In one encounter three Hurricanes attacked 30 German bombers and fighter escorts near Vouziers, in the northeast of France.

"The object of our air operations is first, to harass the enemy columns and second, to protect the advance of Allied troops.

"THE STRUGGLE IS DIFFICULT, BUT THE FIGHT IS WORTHWHILE. IT IS A FIGHT FOR OUR INDEPENDENCE AND EXISTENCE FOR THE FREEDOM WHICH WAS WON CENTURIES AGO BY OUR PRINCE OF ORANGE."

BERLIN, MAY 14-(AP)-GERMANY'S THUNDEROUS WAR MACHINE CRUSHED THE NETHERLANDS TONIGHT AND BEAT A BLOODY PATH ALONG WORLD WAR BATTLE-FIELDS THROUGH BELGIUM TO THE RAMPARTS OF FRANCE.

CAPITULATION OF HOLLAND (ORDERED AND ACKNOWLEDGED BY THE DUTCH COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE SOUTHWESTERN PROVINCE OF ZEELAND), AFTER FIVE DAYS OF BLITZKRIEG, WAS HAILED BY THE GERMANS AS "A UNIQUE MILITARY ACHIEVEMENT."

GERMAN AUTHORITIES SAID RESISTANCE CONTINUED IN ZEELAND, BLAMING SKEPTICISM OF THE LOCAL DUTCH COMMANDER, BUT SAID "NEGOTIATIONS ARE BEING CONDUCTED" TO END HOSTILITIES THERE TOO.

LIGNY IS EIGHT MILES NORTH OF CHARLEROI, FAMOUS WORLD WAR BATTLEFIELD WHERE THE ALLIES FOUGHT IN RETREAT TO THE MARNE, AND THE SCENE OF NAPOLEON'S DEFEAT OF BLUCHER'S PRUSSIANS IN 1815, TWO DAYS BEFORE WATERLOO.

THE TOWN IS ABOUT 15 MILES WEST OF NAMUR, ON THE MEUSE.

MAY 15 1940

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND ANNOUNCED THAT SURRENDER OF ROTTERDAM, ONCE-GREAT NETHERLANDS SEAPORT, HAD PRESERVED IT FROM DESTRUCTION BY DIVE BOMBERS AND ARMORED FORCES.

ROTTERDAM IS WITHIN THE QUADRANGLE OF THE "HOLLAND FORTRESS" WHICH THE NETHERLANDS HAD COUNTED UPON DEFENDING AT ALL COSTS.

THE GERMANS ALSO ANNOUNCED SINKING BY AIRCRAFT OF TWO ENEMY CRUISERS AND A DESTROYER OFF THE DUTCH COAST AND THE FIRING OF TWO OTHER SHIPS AND DAMAGE OF YET ANOTHER.

"IN NORTH BELGIUM," THE GERMAN COMMAND ANNOUNCED, "ARMORED UNITS HAVE REACHED LIGNY, HISTORIC BATTLE GROUND OF 1815, IN PURSUIT OF THE RETREATING ENEMY."

EARLIER THE GERMANS SAID THE RETIRING BELGIANS, FRENCH AND ENGLISH HAD BEEN THROWN BACK AT THE RIVER GETTE IN THE DIRECTION OF LOEWEN AND WAVRE.

THE FRENCH AQPARENTLY ATTEMPTED TO HALT THE ONRUSHING GERMANS IN THE CHARLEVILLE-SEDAN SECTOR BY OPENING UP A FULL-FLEDGED BUT UNSUCCESSFUL AIR ATTACK, SAID DNB, GERMAN OFFICIAL NEWS AGENCY. IT SAID THE FRENCH THUS LOST 69 PLANES.

BOTH SEDAN AND LIGNY ARE RICH IN MEMORY FOR GERMANS. IT WAS AT SEDAN ON SEPT., 1870, THAT GERMANY DECISIVELY BEAT THE FRENCH ARMIES OF NAPOLEON III. AT LIGNY, ON JUNE 16, 1815, NAPOLEN BONAPARTE BEAT THE GERMANS UNDER BLUECHER, BUT FAILED TO FOLLOW UP HIS ADVANTAGE AND WATERLOO RESULTED.

GERMAN MILITARY EXPERTS SAID WHAT INTERESTED THEM WAS WHETHER THE ALLIES WOULD CHOOSE TO DEFEND THAT LINE OR RETIRE FARTHER

WEST, BEYOND BRUSSELS.

DECLARING OCCUPATION OF ROSENDAAL, 15 MILES SOUTH OF THE HOLLANDSCH DIEP BRIDGE BY WHICH THE GERMANS REACHED ROTTERDAM, HAD CUT RAIL COMMUNICATIONS TO ANTVERP, A GERMAN SPOKESMAN SAID THAT ALL AVENUES FOR SWIFT DEVELOPMENT OF THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE NOW WERE IN GERMAN HANDS.

FROM THERE IT RUNS NORTHWARD PAST THE STRONG BELGIAN FORT OF NAMUR AND THROUGH HOLLAND TO THE IJSSELMEER (ZUIDER ZEE).

(A FRENCH WAR MINISTRY SPOKESMAN ACKNOWLEDGED IN PARIS THAT THE GERMANS PROBABLY HAD OCCUPIED SEDAN, IN A FRENCH MILITARIZED ZONE 10 MILES FROM THE BELGIAN FRONTIER. THE FRENCH HAD ABANDONED THE CITY.)

THE GERMANS DECLARED THEY HAD PUNCTURED HOLLAND'S DEFENSE QUADRANGLE OF AMSTERDAM, UTRECHT, ROTTERDAM AND THE HAGUE AT SEVERAL PLACES, BESIDES SENDING A MOTORIZED BLITZ COLUMN TO THE ROTTERDAM AIRPORT, HELD SINCE THE FIRST DAY BY NAZI PARACHUTE TROOPS. THEY SAID THEY WERE ADVANCING TOWARD UTRECHT.

THEY REPORTED GAINS ALSO FROM A POINT 30 MILES EAST OF SAARBRUCKEN, BETWEEN GERMANY'S SIEGFRIED LINE AND FRANCE'S MAGINOT LINE, CLEAR TO THE SEDAN SALIENT, ALTHOUGH MUCH SLOWER ON THE SECTION FACING THE MAGINOT LINE.

LONDON, MAY 14-(AP)-BRITISH SOURCES ASSERTED TONIGHT THAT FIGURES PROVED GERMANY NO LONGER COULD CLAIM MASTERY OF THE AIR, DESPITE SUPERIOR NUMBERS.

IT SAS ESTIMATED THAT GERMANY HAS LOST BETWEEN 300 AND 400 PLANES IN THE LOW COUNTRIES TO BRITAIN'S 35.

(BY CONTRAST, GERMANY CLAIMS TO HAVE DESTROYED A TOTAL OF NEARLY 1,000 ALLIED PLANES IN THE 9-DAY-OLD WAR IN THE WEST. THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND HAS REPORTED ITS LOSSES AS MUCH SMALLER, USUALLY ABOUT 30 OR 35 PLANES A DAY.)

THE BRITISH SOURCE POINTED OUT THAT GERMANY HAS BEEN BUILDING UP A SPECTACULARLY LARGE AIR FORCE OVER A PERIOD OF MANY YEARS, USING IT CHIEFLY AS A THREAT IN PRE-WAR DAYS, WITH THE RESULT THAT "MANY OF HER PLANES, WHILE NOT OBSOLETE, ARE OBSOLESCENT."

"ON THE CONTRARY," THE SOURCE HERE SAID, "BRITAIN'S AIR PROGRAM IS ONLY FIVE YEARS OLD AND, WHILE OUR PLANES ARE FEWER THAN GERMANY'S, THE ARE THE NEWEST TYPE."

BRITAIN'S HEAVILY-ARMED FAST NEW FIGHTER DEFIANT HAS BEEN GIVING A GOOD ACCOUNT OF ITSELF IN PRELIMINARY SHOWINGS, IT WAS SAID, BUT IT IS STILL TOO EARLY TO DRAW TOO MANY CONCLUSIONS.

THE JACK-OF-ALL-TRADE PLANE BEAUFORT, ALSO HEAVILY ARMED, SIMILARLY IS SAID TO BE OPERATING ADVANTAGEOUSLY.

THE BRITISH SAY THEIR PLANES ARE PROVING MORE MANEOUVERABLE AND MECHANICALLY BETTER THAN THE GERMAN AIRCRAFT. THE MORALE OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE WAS DESCRIBED AS "SUPERB," AS ILLUSTRATED BY FREQUENT INSTANCES WHERE BRITISH PLANES HAVE ATTACKED LARGER GROUPS OF GERMAN AIRCRAFT.

THE SOURCE SAID ANOTHER FACTOR IN THE SHOWING OF THE BRITISH PLANES IS THAT THEY ARE USING A HIGH-OCTANE FUEL, WHEREAS THE GERMANS ARE REPORTED USING A LOWER GRADE 87 OCTANE.

IT WAS ALSO SAID THAT AN EXAMINATION OF A GERMAN BOMBER BAGGED IN A RAID ON THE BRITISH COAST DISCLOSED ITS ENGINE OIL HAD BEEN USED MORE THAN 100 HOURS. BRITISH USE OIL A MAXIMUM OF 50 HOURS.

"GERMANY MAY BE ABLE TO PRODUCE PLANES AT A RATE OF 1,500 OR SO A MONTH," THE SOURCE SAID, "BUT SHE CANNOT PRODUCE CREWS AT THE RATE OF 1,500 OR SO EVERY WEEK -- AND THAT'S WHAT SHE HAS PROBABLY LOST SINCE THE LOW COUNTRY FIGHTING BEGAN."

(THE SOURCE DID NOT EXPLAIN THE DISPARITY BETWEEN THE PREVIOUS ESTIMATE OF "BETWEEN 300 AND 400" GERMAN PLANES LOST IN THE FIRST FOUR DAYS OF THE WESTERN CONFLICT AND THE "1,500 OR SO EVERY WEEK" MENTIONED LATER.)

SOMEWHERE ON THE WESTERN FRONT WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, MAY 14-(AP)-GRIM LINES OF REFUGEES ARE TRICKLING FROM THE FRENCH-BELGIAN FRONTIER ZONE TOWARD THE INTERIOR OF FRANCE ALONG ROADS BOMBED AND STRAFED BY GERMAN WARPLANES.

THE CRESCENDO OF HEAVY ARTILLERY SWEEPS MORE AND MORE CIVILIANS ONTO THE ROADS HOURLY.

VERY OLD AND THE VERY YOUNG ARE IN AUTOMOBILES REQUISITIONED BY CIVILIAN DEFENSE AUTHORITIES. OTHERS TRAVEL IN THEIR OWN CARS OR PLOD ALONG AFOOT.

THIS NEW TREK TO SAFETY FROM THE SAME AREA DEVASTATED IN 1914 BEGAN IN THE EARLY HOURS OF SUNDAY MORNING.

AS I TALKED TO SOME OF THEM, AIR RAID SIRENS WARNED THAT GERMAN PLANES WERE ON THEIR WAY FOR THE TWELFTH TIME IN 18 HOURS. NO BOMBS HAVE FALLEN YET ON THE TOWN ITSELF ALTHOUGH PEOPLE HAVE BEEN KILLED AND WOUNDED IN THE SURROUNDING DISTRICT. ONE RAIDER WAS BROUGHT DOWN BY ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS WHICH ARE BARKING CONSTANTLY.

UNDATED MILITARY SITUATION

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GERMANY'S ARMIES ROLLED WEST TODAY ON A LINE WHICH STRETCHED ALMOST DUE SOUTH FOR ABOUT 300 MILES FROM THE NORTHERN COAST OF HOLLAND TO THE NO MAN'S LAND BETWEEN THE SIEGFRIED AND MAGINOT FORTIFICATIONS.

ADMITTEDLY, THE GERMANS STILL WERE MAKING PROGRESS AGAINST THE COMBINED FORCES OF THE FRENCH, BRITISH, BELGIAN AND NETHERLANDS ARMIES.

EXACTLY HOW FAR AND HOW FAST THEY HAD TRAVELLED OR HOW VITAL WERE THEIR GAINS WAS VEILED BY THE CONFLICTING VERSIONS OF THE WAR'S PROGRESS ISSUED BY THE HIGH COMMANDS.

IT WAS ACKNOWLEDGED THAT THE GERMANS HAD PIERCED THE ALBERT CANAL, BELGIUM'S MAIN DEFENSE GUARDING THE ROUTE FROM LIEGE, NEAR THE GERMAN FRONTIER, TO THE NORTH SEA COAST AT ANTWERP.

BUT THE DUTCH SAID THEIR FORCES STILL WERE HOLDING BEHIND THEIR FLOOD DEFENSE SYSTEM.

HERE IS A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE FRONT, STARTING IN THE NORTH:

HOLLAND -- THE GERMANS HAVE COMPLETED THE OCCUPATION OF GRONINGEN PROVINCE, ON THE DUTCH COAST, AND SAY THEY HAVE OCCUPIED THE EASTERN SHORE OF THE ZUIDER ZEE (IJSSELMEER) IN FRIESLAND PROVINCE. THE DUTCH SAY THEY HAVE WITHDRAWN TO THEIR DEFENSE POSITIONS WITH FEW LOSSES AND THE GERMANS HAVE REACHED SOME POINTS OF THE IJSSELMEER.

THE GERMANS HAVE CROSSED THE IJSSEL RIVER AND ENGAGED THE DUTCH ARMY AT SOME POINTS WHERE, ITS LEADERS SAY, IT IS SECURED BY THE DUTCH INUNDATION SYSTEM.

HOLLAND'S FORCES ALSO HAVE MADE STRATEGIC WITHDRAWALS BEFORE GERMAN MECHANIZED TROOPS REACHING THE LAANGSTRAAT. HOWEVER, THE GERMANS HAVE NOT CROSSED HOLLAND'S "GREAT RIVERS."

BELGIUM -- THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND DECLARED THE CITADEL OF THE LIEGE FORTRESS HAS BEEN OCCUPIED. IN PARIS, HOWEVER, A FRENCH WAR

OFFICE SPOKESMAN SAID THE ONLY FORT IN THE LIEGE SECTOR TAKEN BY THE GERMANS WAS EBEN EMAEL, WHICH SURRENDERED SATURDAY.

THE FRENCH SPOKESMAN SAID THE PROGRESS OF GERMAN COLUMNS TOWARD TONGRES AND HASSELT FROM MAASTRICHT HAD BEEN IMPEDED BY ALLIED AIR OPERATIONS AND THAT FRENCH ARMORED CARS HAD STOPPED ONE NAZI COLUMN HEADING TOWARD TONGRES.

BELGIAN LEADERS ADMITTED GENERAL GERMAN ATTACKS BUT GAVE NO NEW REPORT ON THE NAZI PROGRESS SINCE LAST NIGHT WHEN, THEY SAID, BELGIAN FORCES WERE HOLDING ALL THEIR POSITIONS.

LUXEMBOURG -- THE FRENCH SPOKESMAN ADMITTED THAT FRENCH FORCES HAD RETIRED TO THE FRENCH-LUXEMBOURG FRONTIER AND THE LINE OF BATTLE FOR THE GRAND DUCHY NOW IS IN LUXEMBOURG AT SOME POINTS AND IN FRANCE AT OTHERS.

FRANCE -- THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND REPORTED NAZI POSITIONS "WERE MOVED FORWARD AND SEVERAL HUNDRED PRISONERS TAKEN" SOUTH AND SOUTHEAST OF ZWEIBRUCKEN, ON THE FRONT BETWEEN THE SIEGFRIED AND MAGINOT LINES.

THE FRENCH WAR OFFICE SPOKESMAN SAID A FULL GERMAN DIVISION WAS THROWN AGAINST A FRENCH POSITION EAST OF THE MOSELLE YESTERDAY, BUT HAD BEEN STOPPED. OTHER GERMAN ATTACKS ON THE FRENCH FRONT, HE SAID, "PROVED TO BE LOCALIZED OPERATIONS.

STRIKE BLOW AT FRENCH NEAR SEDAN; BRITISH BOMBING TANKS IN BELGIUM

B. E. F. Engages Enemy Near Louvain to Halt Brussels Drive —Paris Admits Situation North of Sedan Is Serious — Counter-attack Ousts Invaders to South of City.

PARIS, May 15 (A. P.).—German forces which had forced a passage across the Meuse River were reported at tonight's French War Ministry conference to have pushed forward and pierced some Allied positions along a line north of Sedan.

German tanks broke through Allied positions on the west bank of the Meuse and were followed by infantry.

The Allied forces withdrew to new positions.

"The war of movement has begun,' said a War Ministry spokesman. "The situation is serious, but not critical."

which is ten miles inside France.

Earlier the French had counter-attacked to check the German advance across the river south of Sedan, and had reduced a ten-mile German salient to four miles.

Tonight the Germans were reported to have made at least three crossings north of their main passage of the Meuse near Sedan.

Text of French Communique.

Tonight's French communique said:

"Violent enemy attacks with tanks on Belgian, British and French troops at several points from Antwerp to northwest of Namur. All were repulsed.

"On the Meuse between Mezieres and Namur, the enemy succeeded in crossing the river at several points and fighting continues.

"In the region of Sedan, where the enemy had made some progress, counter-attacks are underway with tanks and bombing planes.

"Farthest east, artillery action.

"Our aviation continued reconnaissances. Pursuit

[The British Air Ministry announced tonight that 150 Allied planes attacking German communications lines in the Lowlands had broken up "large tank and troop concentrations" and blocked roads. The announcement declared that several pontoon bridges at crossings over the Meuse in the Sedan sector were reported destroyed. A dispatch from the British expeditionary force in France stated that a battle was raging in Belgium for Brussels as well as in France near Sedan and that the B. E. F. had clashed with the Germans in severe fighting near Louvain. Correspondents with the British expeditionary force in Belgium telegraphed London that the Allied air arm was fighting the Germans to a standstill in a mighty encounter; and the Air Ministry communique told of "repeated low-flying attacks on enemy troops."] planes intervened especially to protect bombing missions. During engagements, eleven enemy planes were brought down."

Below Sedan, the French command reported that about half the German forces which crossed the river yesterday had been flung back.

The French also reported a successful counter-attack on the northwest flank in Belgium and said that their defenses to the southeast in France were holding solidly.

Nazis Had Advanced Ten Miles.

The German thrust originally penetrated ten miles south of the river — or nearly twenty miles into France — a spokesman said.

The Meuse River runs generally north and south in this area and the French have been holding the west bank against the Germans on the east.

German efforts in the Sedan region, this commentator said, appeared to be the biggest of the entire Meuse front extending southward from Namur, Belgium.

In the Belgian Ardennes Mountains, between Namur and Dinant, the Germans established bridgeheads on the west bank of the Meuse which immediately drew strong counter-attacks from the French forces on the same side of the river.

Military Experts' Opinion.

[In the opinion of military experts, Nazi shock forces, surging across the Meuse river line between Namur in Belgium and Sedan in France, are endeavoring to outflank the whole Belgian-British-French position in Flanders at a single stroke. Even before the Allied battle line there can be clearly mapped, it is gravely threatened from the south and east, as well as within the Belgian defensive triangle pivoting on Brussels.

A French admission that terrific Nazi pressure is being brought to bear on the Namur-Sedan sector of the Meuse front gives a clearer glimpse of German strategy than the Berlin claim of having reached the Dyle River line in the Brussels area. The lower jaw of the German vise, already west of the Meuse between Namur and Givet and at Sedan, is gaping in a far-flung attempt to roll-up the Allied battle line in all Belgium.

Franco-British and Belgian forces within the Belgian defensive triangle are threatened by encirclement and attack from the rear. Desperate Allied attempts to halt and throw back the German thrust south of Sedan, as well as simultaneous Nazi spearhead attacks westward from Namur, indicate the gravity of the situation.

German claims indicate that in the Brussels salient, the main Belgian line of resistance—the Albert Canal line between Liege and Antwerp—has already been broken through or encircled. Just what spot on the Dyle River the Nazis have reached is not stated, however.

The river is within gunshot of Brussels, which it encircles to the south, east and north. It may be on the river front that the main British army has mobilized. If Brussels is to be defended, the battle must be fought out there. Moreover, there are signs that the Allied stand before Brussels must be made within hours, unless German penetration of the Meuse front already has forced a complete revision of Allied battle plans and a possible retreat from Belgium.

The French say they have thrown back the Nazi smash southward of Sedan. This is of vital importance to the Allies, because the hope of holding a line diagonally across Belgium to the North Sea in southwestern Holland depends on French ability to stem the German tide on the Sedan-Namur sector of the Meuse front.]

A German tank attack in the level region northwest of Namur, near Gembloux, was hurled back by French counter-attacks. The Germans were reported to have suffered "enormous losses," particularly in tanks and their crews and a 4-to-1 ratio in planes.

Pushed Back Into River.

Part of the German force which crossed the Meuse south of Sedan was hurled back into the river.

The German troops were described as the "best" shock detachments. Additional re-enforcements were arriving from Neufchateau, Belgium, and also coming in behind German lines from Marche, Belgium.

French and British aerial forces, meanwhile, were laying down "tons and tons" of bombs on the German rear lines, troop concentrations, highways, boats and bridges.

German planes were reported bombing the French rear guard.

East of the Moselle River, in the Maginot Line sector, several "very strong" local German attacks ran into defense fire from French advance posts and wilted.

Air raid alarms were sounded today in the regions around Rouen, Havre and Bordeau, but no attacks were reported.

Still Try for Knockout.

While the Dutch military campaign had apparently ended with the General Staff's order to the Dutch to lay down their arms, it was understood the Netherlands fleet was still co-operating with the Allies.

The French High Command reported increased German pressure earlier today along a fifty-five-mile stretch of the vast, curving Meuse River front from Namur to the junction of the Meuse and Chiers Rivers, just south of Sedan.

In a continuing battle in this area, the French reported, the Nazi army renewed its try for a knockout blow against British, Belgian and French forces, which have still apparently not brought their own offensive strategy fully into force.

The High Command said in its communique that a French counter-attack hurled back an assault by German tanks in the region of Gembloux, ten miles northwest of Namur, while French and British planes, "acting in complete co-operation, continued to intervene very vigorously."

Most Modern Weapons Used.

Both sides were using the most modern arms, including big fleets of armored cars and tanks, thousands of planes and the newest types of guns.

One German attack was reported to have been pointed by flame-throwing tanks which shoot fire seventy yards. In the world war, flame apparatus with a fifteen-yard range was nearly as dangerous to the handlers as to the intended victims.

Sedan, strategic French city fought over by the Germans and the French throughout history, was the principal southern anchor of the front which curved to the northeast and then northwest into the coastal plains of Belgium.

Southeastward from Sedan the line extended through Longwy, France, near the Luxemburg border, there joining the comparatively inactive front between France and Germany.

'Not Alarming to Paris."

"Serious, but not alarming," was the way French military commentators described the trend of the battle.

Despite the fact that Sedan and the Belgian cities of Liege, Namur and Dinant were held all or in part by the Germans, there was the utmost confidence here that the French General Staff had foreseen this line of attack and would bare its strategy at the opportune moment.

[The Germans claim to have captured Liege; the Belgians report the fortifications holding out against continuous, desperate German attacks.]

It was apparent in Paris that effective resistance by the Dutch had been written off by the French before the news of Dutch capitulation was announced in Paris.

Last night newspapers indicated a belief that the Germans would overwhelm the Netherlands.

Nazi Challenge Accepted.

Military observers declared today that the battle of the Meuse was rapidly developing, as they had predicted, into "the greatest battle in history."

In the sixth day of the German invasion through the Low Countries the French were fighting against an apparent German effort to break through at Sedan, where the Prussians whipped the French in 1870 and ended the Franco-Prussian war.

The French High Command reported that the Germans were making "a momentous effort with furious obstinacy and at the expense of heavy casualties" to press on from Sedan, which is on the east bank of the Meuse.

More Savage Than 1914.

Sedan was described as the "hinge" of the front where the main Maginot Line protecting the French border with Germany and Luxemburg joins the new line of fortifications along the Belgian frontier.

Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium in a broadcast to the nation said that the Belgians had made "certain modification of defense positions according to order" and insisted that there had been no German "break through." The Liege fortifications, he said, were taking a terrific toll of Germans attacking time and again.

M. Pierlot declared "the situation is normal" and called on Belgians to "guard intact your morale" against a German invasion "more savage" than that of 1914.

Poilus Abandon Prepared Positions And Decide To Fight Battle Of Meuse In Field After Foes Cross River In Three Places

[By the Associated Press]

London, Thursday, May 16—A heavy burst of anti-aircraft gunfire was heard south of a British coast port early today as searchlights swept the sky.

No bombs were dropped and no air-raid warning was sounded during the firing, which lasted but a short time.

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 15—Charging German tanks tore gaps in the Allied positions on the Meuse today after crossing the river at three points along the fifty-mile front from Namur, Belgium, to Sedan, in northern France.

The Germans shifted their assaults to this sector after meeting strong French counter-attacks in the Sedan region just to the south, and were reported to have "penetrated to the interior of the French dispositions."

Begin "War Of Movement"

"In the face of the serious new situation, the French command has abandoned the war of position and begun a war of movement," a War Ministry spokesman said.

"The high command has regrouped and launched counter-attacks, which are now under way," he said.

The change from stationary to mobile warfare meant that the French had decided to abandon their prepared fortifications and fight the battle of the Meuse in the field to meet the Reichswehr threat.

Defended By Concrete Pillboxes

The sector in which the Germans broke through was defended by a line of concrete pill-boxes built along the Belgian border as a northwesterly extension of the Maginot Line.

German tanks rumbling through the valley and planes roaring overhead advanced deep into this field of fortifications, defying French machine-gun fire.

Information received from French general headquarters at 6 P. M. said:

"A general melee of French and German infantry, tanks and aviation is taking place. . . . The situation appears confused. . . ."

Infantry Follows Tanks Through

Reichswehr infantry tried to follow the tanks through the French lines north of Sedan, but the French troops held their ground at first.

Once the tanks got through the French lines, however, they spread out in all directions, threatening the French positions from the rear.

Then some French units had to retreat.

Both in the Sedan sector and along the Meuse to the north, the German assaults continued despite French counter-attacks with tanks and planes.

At the same time, the French suddenly announced suspension of main passenger trains on a number of important lines to the southeastern part of France and the Italian border.

The War Ministry said the Germans succeeded in forcing a crossing of the Meuse at several points between Namur, in Belgium, and Mezieres, five miles within France, and "pierced some Allied positions."

The French took up new positions after they had announced their counter-attack had driven back across the river about half the 300,000 Germans who yesterday forced a crossing south of Sedan and punched a ten-mile salient into French territory.

Nazis Using Favorite Tactics

The Germans were using their favorite tactics, sending waves of bombing planes ahead to clear the ground of defenders, then their tank and armored units to force the river crossings, and finally their masses of rapidly advancing infantry.

Four general air-raid alarms were sounded in northern France during the day.

To the north of Namur, the French said Allied forces had repulsed numerous "violent" tank charges. To the east, along the Maginot Line, only artillery fire was reported.

300,000 Men On Each Side

The major struggle of the long Meuse front in France and in Belgium, involving perhaps twenty divisions, or 300,000 men, on each side, appeared to be concentrated about Sedan, a town which saw the collapse of the Napoleonic armies at the end of the War of 1870 and lay in the Imperial German grip for four years of the World War.

The French high command reported successful counter-attacks on the northwest flank of the front in Belgium and said the German assaults on the Maginot Line in the Moselle Valley of France, southeastern flank of the front, were dwindling against firm defenses.

Holland Out Of War

The Netherlands virtually were marked out of the war. Dutch capitulation in all except the coastal province of Zeeland came after less than five days of terrifying Blitzkrieg. This war of movements, as wars go, was declared by Dutch Foreign Minister Van Kleffens today to have cost the Dutch army 100,000 men, or one-fourth of the entire Netherlands armed force.

Queen Wilhelmina's Government pledged the entire resources of its Empire to the Allies.

From the powder smoke of the Meuse there came indications that the German command had tried to draw the Allies into a trap, but failed to achieve this end.

Allies Drawn To North

Last Friday, the Reichswehr's invasion of the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Belgium drew mobile French and British forces north to meet the challenge in the Lowlands.

The Germans then struck like lightning southwest across the Ardennes mountains and forests of Belgium to hit the Allied bases on the Meuse. Monday they drove into Sedan, ten miles below the French border, on the east bank of the river.

The French summoned strength to resist more river crossings yesterday and counter-attacked the several bridgeheads established by the Germans on the west bank of the Meuse, from Sedan north.

Germany's main thrust was then aimed through Sedan toward Rauvourt, forming a ten-mile deep pocket on the west side of the river, held by the French.

Germans Driven Back

Violent French counter-attacks, however, were reported today to have crumbled one side of the pocket and reduced it to about four miles.

Unofficial advices said thousands of German troops were thrown bodily into the river with their arms and that many were taken prisoner.

From Neufchateau and Marche, German reinforcements poured tonight into the battle, over highways which the Belgians, surprised by the speed of the German advance, did not have time to destroy.

French Bomb Advance Units

North of the main theater of operations, the French were reported bombing and harassing German advance units which crossed the Meuse at points between Sedan and Namur, in Belgium.

On the northwest flank of the battle, French dispatches said, a fleet of German tanks attacking around Gembloux were thrown back. Gembloux is above the Meuse between Liege and Brussels, about equi-distant from each.

The French said the German losses on the whole front were enormous, and that German planes were destroyed in a ratio of four to one for the Allies.

Dropping low over long columns of German soldiers, tanks, guns and trucks, the Allied bombers yesterday struck in waves, destroying bridges, blocking roads with wrecked war machinery, scattering marching troops and breaking up concentrations behind the lines.

The bombers were accompanied by pursuit planes which drove off attacking German aviation.

The effectiveness of the Allied air counter-attack was so great that even the reported loss of thirty-five French and British planes was declared "not excessive."

The planes often dropped to as low as a hundred feet, the British said, then released "sticks" of bombs which fell on the long, narrow military columns.

147 Nazi Planes Brought Down

Since the German offensive started in Belgium, more than 147 German planes have been brought down, the British said in a communique on today's battles. The air force brought down 124 of them, while anti-aircraft guns accounted for twenty-three, the communique said.

On the land front the British told of "hard fighting" today in which their troops "successfully held serious German attacks."

Fleet Of 150 Bombers Paved Way For French Counter-Attack On Germans, British Say

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 15—The biggest fleet of Allied bombers massed for an attack in this war, 150 explosive-laden planes, raked German lines converging on the Meuse at Sedan with such effect, the Air Ministry announced today, that the first German advance in that sector was halted.

The result, said the Ministry, was that the French were enabled to launch yesterday's counter-attack which drove the Germans back south of Sedan just as they were getting ready for a supreme thrust into France. (The Germans attacked again today north of Sedan.)

their left flank on Zeeland, unsurrendered Netherlands province along the sea, and Antwerp in Belgium, with their lines covering Brussels, the Belgian capital.

Liege Forts Still Holding Out

A Belgian communique said the Liege forts still were holding out, although apparently surrounded by invaders since Saturday.

The Belgians said their troops had encountered only "light enemy forces" and that demolition of bridges and roads still was going on "successfully" and preventing enemy movements.

Recounting the activities of the Air Force, the Air Ministry's announcement said light bombers swung into action first, destroying bridges,

Combined Attack On Nazis

"Later in the day as the situation deteriorated, forces of British and French bombers launched a combined attack on crossings of the Meuse and the main lines of advancing reinforcements," it continued.

"The attack was opened by a large wave of French bombers with fighter escorts, and was followed up by still heavier British formations.

"Over 150 Allied aircraft took part in the operation in which four bridges were destroyed, large troop concentrations broken up and roads blocked.

"Heavily In Allied Favor"

"The effect of this operation was to halt the German advance in the Sedan sector and enable the French to launch a vigorous counter-attack.

"Throughout the day extensive bombing operations also were carried out on other parts of the battle front."

Reports of Allied fighter pilots showed German formations often were broken up by dashing attacks, the communique said. In one instance six Hurricanes attacked fifty-four Messerschmitt 110's and a number of bombers, but the result of this fight was not disclosed.

"The balance of aircraft losses remains heavily in the Allied favor," the communique added.

British reconnaissance pilots reported seeing many wrecked enemy aircraft on beaches and in fields around The Hague.

Declared "At England's Door"

On the home front anxiety was sharpened by Berlin radio broadcasts that the Reich army was "standing at England's door" with fighters less than an hour away by air determined to strike at the insular security Britain has enjoyed since William the Conqueror's men slew Harold at Hastings in 1066.

British officials rushed their air defense program, issuing a new call for volunteers to train as pilots and air crews.

The Admiralty announced tonight the British destroyer Valentine had been beached after being damaged by a German air attack off the coast of Holland.

Other German claims of British losses at sea were brushed aside earlier as "entirely groundless."

"No british warship," said the Admiralty, "has been sunk, set on fire or seriously damaged since the German invasion of the Low Countries with the exception of the submarine Seal."

Yesterday German announcements asserted two British cruisers and one destroyer had been sunk off the Dutch coast, a cruiser and a 15,000-ton steamship set on fire by bombs and an 8,000-ton ship seriously damaged by air bombs.

Swiss Status Precarious

Neutral military experts, meanwhile, saw Switzerland's status growing more perilous by the hour and regarded it as virtually certain that a German swing around the French right flank would be undertaken the moment the battle of the Meuse reaches the peak of its intensity.

This fear was based, in part at least, on the German radio announcement that the conquest of most of the Netherlands had "freed essential forces to be shifted elsewhere at a moment's notice."

Tonight the British Broadcasting Corporation began a series of talks on air-raid precautions to keep the population alert.

Control Bases Being Closed

The spread of the war, first to Norway and then to the Low Countries, has removed the need for contraband control bases in the British Isles, and the three stations at Kirkwall in the Orkneys, and The Downs and Weymouth on the south coast of England, are being closed, an Economic Warfare official said.

These bases no longer are necessary because neutral ships are not going to belligerent ports, he explained, adding, however, that a skeleton staff is being maintained at Kirkwall to examine ships bound for Sweden. The remaining control bases are in the Mediterranean.

Churchill Ministry Completed

Twenty-seven minor appointments announced at No. 10 Downing Street completed the new Government of Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

They included:

W. S. Morrison, former Minister of Food, who was named Postmaster General.

Sir Walter Womersley, who became Minister of Pensions.

Viscount Cranbourne, who was appointed Paymaster General.

The new post of Secretary for Petroleum was given Geoffrey Lloyd, former Minister of Mines.

It was announced that Lord Caldecote, appointed yesterday to be Minister for Dominions, would be the Government leader in the House of Lords.

Dutch Dead Put at 100,000

MAY 15 1940

Holland Reports Quarter of Army Slain—Casualty Ratio Exceeds World War's.

PARIS, May 15 (A. P.).—The Dutch Foreign Minister, Eelco N. Van Kleffens, estimated today that the Dutch Army had suffered 100,000 men killed—or one-fourth of its total strength of 400,000.

[Van Kleffens, a civilian, may have overestimated the death rate. If his figures are accurate, losses were many times greater than battle rates in the world war, when 25 per cent casualties, wounded as well as dead, were considered very high for large forces and the ratio of dead to wounded was one to four.]

Van Kleffens, however, said that the Dutch fleet was almost intact and had joined the Allied naval forces.

He said that resistance was continuing in the coastal province of Zeeland and that troops that had escaped into Belgium would enter the Allied armies.

Holland's First Review.

His disclosure of the army's staggering losses was part of his Government's first review of the campaign which forced virtual capitulaiton of the Netherlands in five days.

He said that prolongation of operations in Holland was decided against, with "millions of souls menaced with extermination," but that "every one knows the tenacity of the Dutch—I am convinced we will gain final victory."

Although most of the Netherlands now has fallen to the Germans, he said, the Dutch Empire still stands and all its resources will be placed at the disposal of the Allies. He said that Hollanders were volunteering their services throughout the world.

Standing beside Van Kleffens as he spoke were Lieut.-Col. A. G. H. Dyxhoorn, Minister of Defense, and Charles J. I. M. Welter, Minister of Colonies.

Germans Enter The Hague.

LONDON, May 15 (A. P.).—A Dutch radio announcer, heard in London today, said that the German motorized troops were pouring to The Hague, but that otherwise the city was rapidly resuming its normal appearance.

He asserted that the city, seat of the Netherlands Government until Queen Wilhelmina and the Cabinet fled to England, was going quietly about the task of cleaning up and restoring public works and services.

Telephone communication still was disrupted, he said, but bus service to Amsterdam will be resumed tomorrow.

A broadcast was also heard here today carrying an order to all burgomasters from the Dutch Commander-in-Chief, Gen. Henri Gerard Winkleman, to communicate immediately with the military authorities in order to insure enforcement of the cease firing order in the areas outside Zeeland. In Zeeland Dutch resistance to the German invasion was continuing.

Reuters news agency (British) intercepted yet another radio message today, in which the German Consul-General of Amsterdam informed the Berlin Foreign Office that German troops would encounter no difficulties in occupying Amsterdam.

The message follows, as translated from the German:

"The commander of the garrison of Amsterdam and the Lord Mayor of Amsterdam informed me last night that the German troops will not encounter any difficulties when entering Amsterdam.

"Everything has been prepared so that the entry of the German troops can proceed without a hitch and the population will remain calm.

"As soon as information is received here that German troops are about to enter the city, a representative of the Commander of the Amsterdam garrison and a representative of the Lord Mayor of Amsterdam, as well as the German Consul-General or his representative, will meet the German forces on the outskirts of the city. They will wait for them in a motor car, hoisting a white flag and the service flag of the German Reich."

Not a Surrender.

News of Holland's virtual capitulation was first received here last night in a broadcast by Gen. Winkelman, who said he "had no other choice" but to order his men to lay down their arms.

The Dutch Legation in London later issued a statement saying that a state of war still existed between Germany and he Netherlands and that the fighting was continuing in Zeeland Province.

It was made plain that the cease firing order did not affect the Dutch naval units and was in no sense to be interpreted as a surrender on the part of the Netherlands Government.

Even with German motorized troops reported pouring into The Hague, an authoritative Dutch source here said that Netherlands troops in southern Holland who were able to reach Belgium were being made the nucleus of a new army to continue the fight against the Germans. There was no estimate of the number.

This same informant said that most of Holland's navy already had arrived at British ports.

Way Open to Nazis.

AMSTERDAM, May 15 (A. P.).—The Netherlands opened the way today for unopposed German occupation of all but one of her eleven provinces.

Under orders from Gen. Winkelman, the Dutch laid down their arms last night everywhere but in Zeeland, the low-lying island province in the southwest, which has, in the port of Vlissingen (Flushing), one of the main points of sea traffic with England.

Observers in Berlin were said to expect that Dutch resistance in Zeeland and by scattered units elsewhere would be overcome in a day or two at most.

No Match for Invaders.

The Dutch Army was unequal to the task of fighting off Germany's high-geared, up-to-the-minute war machine. Her air force was not strong enough to give the troops effective aid. Her defenses were pierced and outflanked by the lightning-fast German columns. Rotterdam and Utrecht, two of her four largest cities, were in imminent danger of complete destruction.

In view of all those circumstances and in the hope of saving "at least a small part of our beautiful country," and preventing further bloodshed, Gen. Winkelman ordered his forces to cease firing, and commanded the troops and people to co-operate in the preservation of order "until the arrival of the German regular troops."

In a broadcast explaining his decision, Gen. Winkelman told the people:

"It could not be otherwise. . . . Our soldiers did their best. They held on bravely and fought against an overwhelming enemy. But they were not equal to modern weapons.

"Not only the soldiers but even the civil population has suffered enormously. Rotterdam was bombed and destroyed. . . . Utrecht had the same fate. Thus we were compelled to lay down our arms. . . .

"Our towns have been bombarded, our women and children have been bombed, and the German Air Force took a toll of thousands of victims. Military and non-military objectives were bombed. . . .

"I, the Commander-in-Chief, gave the order to cease firing in order to spare further bloodshed and complete destruction of the country. At least a small part of our beautiful country will be saved. . . . You can understand how hard it was for me to decide as I did."

Colonial Empire Remains.

From London Queen Wilhemina sent a proclamation that "the Netherlands will one day, with the help of God, rewin its whole European territory."

Today all but a small segment of those 12,700 square miles of territory was in the hands of the invaders, who had merely been delayed briefly in their advance by the flood-water defenses with which the Netherlands had hoped to guard the rough rectangle enclosing the cities of Amsterdam, Rotterdam, The Hague and Utrecht.

The German armored column that smashed through the southern defenses was already in Rotterdam, and the seaport was being subjected to aerial bombardment that set large sections afire.

Utrecht, Amsterdam and The Hague were the targets of other marching columns.

With the Netherlands homeland now under German domination, Queen Wilhelmina and her Government in London will continue to rule over Holland's overseas possessions—about 790,000 square miles inhabited by more than 70,000,000 persons on two side of the earth.

Britain Hears Air Raid Threat

MAY 16 1940

LONDON, May 15 (A. P.).—German threats of an attack on England from newly acquired bases in the Netherlands followed quickly today upon the announcement that the Dutch Commander-in-Chief had ordered his troops to cease fighting to save the country from total ruin.

The threats, broadcast by the Berlin radio and picked up here, heightened the anxiety caused by the latest developments in the Lowlands and spurred recruiting of a new Home Front army to fight any invasion by Nazi parachute troops.

The Nazi announcer boasted that German planes are already within easy reach of the important English port of Harwich, which is less than 125 miles from the Dutch mainland, and added: "More than that, they have bases for direct attack against the whole of England. . . . In this age of modern warfare the insularity of the British Isles has ended."

Empire of 70,000,000 People.

Queen Wilhelmina and members of her Cabinet are now in London, from which they are directing the affairs of the Dutch Empire—an empire which includes about 790,000 square miles of territory in the East and West Indies with a population of more than 70,000,000 people.

The Legation announcement said that Gen. Winkelman's order to his troops to cease resistance was issued late yesterday afternoon after the Germans had re-taken Rotterdam.

"Consequently," it said, "the heart of the country was laid open to the enemy and the main forces of the army behind the Dutch waterline were threatened by immediate enemy troops on their rear."

Dutch Pay for Neutrality.

British commentators said that Holland's policy of strict neutrality prior to the German invasion had contributed to the country's quick fall by precluding talks between the Allied and the Dutch High Commands.

It was generally conceded that the Germans, in addition to gaining bases for a possible attack on England, had obtained substantial stores of foodstuffs and other materials in Holland.

British spokesmen said, however, that these advantages obtained by the Germans were more than offset by the assets which the Dutch have added to the Allied resources in the way of gold holdings, colonial wealth and their merchant fleet.

A General Headquarters communique issued early today said that operations of the British expeditionary force in Flanders were "proceeding according to plan."

King George and Queen Elizabeth returned to Buckingham Palace last night from Dorsetshire, where they had inspected regiments of the Southern Command of which they are honorary colonels. The two princesses remained in the country.

At Buckingham Palace yesterday Queen Wilhelmina received her Ministers and a group of prominent Dutch citizens residing in London, and today her Cabinet called on her. It was understood that she would remain at that palace as the guest of the British sovereigns until she can move to another palace which will be offered her as headquarters during her stay in England.

Nazis Don't Set a Date.

BERLIN, May 15 (A. P.).—Asked how soon a great air offensive would start against England, Nazi spokesmen answered today:

"Whenever we are completely ready—at exactly the right moment—when it is most uncomfortable for England."

Newspapers stressed the fact that the Dutch surrender has given the Germans airports within short range of England.

"These figures speak for themselves," commented the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, citing these air mileages: 125 miles from the Hook of Holland to the English port of Harwich and 156 miles from Vlissingen to Harwich.

This was only one of numerous, if unofficial, indications that the next major German blow may be delivered against England rather than France, which has already felt the weight of the German columns along the Meuse.

Other evidence of this trend came from the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, which said: "The enemy now is getting the war which it provoked. All illusions of a distant and blockade war, of protection behind powerful fortification works, have been brushed away."

Others took occasion to point out that, with the Dutch coastline in German possession, the air force and submarine fleet would be able practically to paralyze shipping to and from Britain's east coast, as well as to inflict heavy losses on the British Navy whenever and wherever its warships appear in these waters.

London Paper Warns U. S. May Face Invasion

LONDON, May 15 (A. P.).—The London Daily Express, one of the newspapers owned by Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's newly appointed Minister of Aircraft Production, said in an editorial today:

"If, as a result of the German victory in the Low Countries . . . Great Britain ceases to control the Atlantic, the possibility of invasion of America is at hand.

"Americans, therefore, have a period in which to make preparations. They should do so on a scale bigger than anything that ever has been known."

British Dig In At Louvain to Save Brussels

B. E. F. Reports Series of Attacks Repulsed, 124 Enemy Planes Downed Roads Are Choked By 70,000 Refugees

R. A. F. Boasts Edge on Nazis in Air Combat; Liege Forts Still Resist

By The Associated Press

LONDON, May 16 (Thursday).—A British communique announced early today that the British Expeditionary Force had successfully withstood a series of German attacks. Since the German offensive started, the B. E. F. air arm has destroyed at least 124 German planes, the communique said also.

"The B. E. F., after hard fighting, have today successfully held serious German attacks.

"Since the German offensive started, the air component with the B. E. F. have destroyed at least 124 enemy planes. Our anti-aircraft and artillery have shot down at least twenty-three in rear areas and many others have been shot down by forward troops. At least seven have been shot down by a territorial formation."

Liege Forts Hold Out

The British in Belgium were reportedly resting their left flank on Zeeland, unsurrendered Netherlands province along the sea, and Antwerp, Belgium, with their lines covering Brussels, the Belgian capital.

"Light enemy forces made contact with our troops. This resulted in several engagements during which our troops frequently checked the invaders' attempts to advance.

"All demolitions were successfully carried out. They seriously impeded the movements of the enemy.

"Our anti-aircraft defense effectively replied to enemy aircraft action. Several German planes were brought down.

"The Liege forts continue to resist."

Nazis Report Piercing Line

MAY 15 1940

BERLIN, May 15 (A. P.)—The German High Command declared today that the Nazi forces had pierced the northwestern extension of France's Maginot Line in the Sedan sector.

"By the crossing of the Meuse in the Sedan sector," its communique said, "the northwestern extension of France's fortification system—the Maginot Line—has been pierced in closest collaboration with the air force.

The High Command also said that the Nazi forces had hurled back a French tank attack on the rapidly developing Belgian battle front, and reiterated the news of the capitulation of the Netherlands Army.

Its communique put the Allied air losses at 200 planes yesterday alone—raising to about 1,400 the total alleged by the Nazis to have been destroyed in the six days of the campaign—and said that "enemy efforts to hamper German fighting activity" through air attack were repulsed.

It acknowledged only that "thirty-five of our own planes are missing."

"Armed reconnaissance before the Netherlands coast yielded great successes," it added. "As previously reported in a special announcement, two cruisers and one destroyer were sunk by bomb hits, an additional cruiser was struck by a bomb, one merchant ship of 29,000 tons and four transports were destroyed."

[The British Admiralty contradicted the German claims, asserting that "no British warship has been sunk, set on fire or seriously damaged since the German invasion of the Low Countries, with the exception of the submarine Seal," announced lost several days ago, and the 1,100-ton destroyer Valentine, with slight casualties among her crew of 200, beached last night after an air attack.]

Liege and Namur are both on the Meuse, Namur about thirty-five miles to the west of Liege. The Allies have acknowledged the loss of only one fort, Eben Emael, in the Liege militarized zone.

Having forced the capitulation of all but isolated units of the Dutch Army of 400,000 men in five days of blitzkreig, Germany attempted meanwhile to extend the scope of this newest conquest by urging Belgium to follow the Dutch example.

Radio Appeals to Belgians.

Hour after hour, starting early in the morning, all German radio stations broke in upon their programs with appeals to the Belgian soldiers to lay down their arms.

In Flemish and in French the soldiers were told that Germany does not wish to harm the Belgian people, that the German invasion of Belgium was brought about because Great Britain and France were getting ready to attack Germany through Belgium.

"Belgians," said the broadcast, "if you want to preserve the lives of your men, if you cherish the security of your country, if you want to safeguard the economic life of your country, follow the example of the Dutch nation, which now has been saved.

"Stop your resistance. Follow the example of the Dutch and stack your arms. Germany does not want war with the Belgian nation . . . Belgians, lay down your arms."

Carried to England's Door.

The success of the Nazi forces in their lightning campaign in the Netherlands was hailed by the morning papers throughout the country. One authoritative commentator described the achievement of the Nazi military machine, in bringing down a "well-armed nation" of over 8,000,000 people in a little more than 100 hours, as "unique in history."

Another emphasized the "tremendously stimulating" effect of the victory on the morale of the German Army.

But in military circles the strategic value of the Dutch capitulation, as it affects the progress of the campaign against the Allies, was singled out as the most vital factor.

Military observers brought out the importance of Holland's capitulation on the furtherance of the German drive into Belgium and France on a roughly L-shaped front. These experts, taking for granted that resistance by the Dutch garrisons in Zeeland would last for only a day or two longer, claimed that the "mopping up" of other scattered forces which might not have received the Dutch Commander-in-Chief's order to cease firing will require only a limited part of the German army of occupation.

In the opinion of the military observers, only the Dutch coastline will have to be guarded closely against any eventuality (meaning a possible English attempt to land troops there). Therefore, they explained, strong detachments can now be set in motion to lend support to the drive into Belgium.

Another Britain-threatening press comment today was that of the Boersenzeitung, which said: "Germany's decisive battle has entered an extremely favorable phase, primarily for the air force. The distance from the west of Holland to the south of England varies from 125 to 175 miles. This gain alone shows the far-reaching importance of the German advance in the west. are only one step short of being official Government spokesmen, lent added weight to all of these comments.

GERMANS HINT BOMB ATTACKS ON BRUSSELS

Threaten To Raid Belgian Capital Unless Troop Activity There Ends

Berlin Declares City Is Being "Misused" For Military Purposes

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, May 15—The German army, acclaimed by Adolf Hitler for its swift conquest of the Netherlands, tonight threatened to bomb Brussels, the Belgian capital, and slashed through French defenses north of Sedan.

With his Nazi forces hammering forward in a resurrection of the famed von Schlieffen plan for a drive into France around the Allied left flank—a plan which failed in 1914 but which Germans are confident will succeed in 1940—Hitler in an order of the day said "the future will demonstrate the military importance" of the five-day Dutch conquest.

Must Halt War Activity

In a threat similar to that which brought capitulation of the Dutch, the German high command declared that if Belgian authorities wish to save Brussels from Nazi air fury, they must cease all military activity in the Belgian capital, already menaced by German troops who approached the Louvain gateway, sixteen miles to the east.

"The Belgian Government declared on May 10 through its Foreign Minister in Brussels and likewise through mediation of its diplomatic intermediary, the United States Embassy in Berlin, that Brussels is an open city, that no troops were in Brussels, nor would they move through the city," a high-command communique said.

Troops Reported There

"This statement of the Belgian Government does not correspond to the facts. German air reconnaissance during the last few days has established beyond doubt that all kinds of military columns are moving through Brussels as well as military transports through this railway junction.

"The German high command can no longer recognize Brussels as an undefended city. In case the Belgian Government really is in earnest to save the city of Brussels the horrors of war, all military transports and marching through the town must cease immediately and the building of defenses must be suspended immediately.

"Should from now on military objectives be discovered in Brussels, they will be attacked by the German air force. Responsibility for all consequences arising from this for the city of Brussels will have to be borne by those who, contrary to the declaration by the Belgian Government, misuse their city for military purposes."

Hitler's orders of the day did not mention England, but German newspapers, which are well-nigh official here, did not hesitate to imply that an air storm might break over Britain soon.

They published maps showing that Germany, through the collapse of Holland, already had air bases 100 to 200 miles from important British objectives—including London.

Authorized sources declared an offensive against England would be launched "whenever we are ready . . . when it is most uncomfortable for England."

Although the German armies encountered stiffening Allied resistance in the air as well as on the ground, the Germans asserted they still held easy control of the air and were inflicting losses on the enemy at a ratio of six or seven to one.

Ever Closer To England

Observers recognized that every mile of the Belgian coast taken by the Nazis put the German air force that much nearer to England. With the new, closer range, they said, German bombers could be sent across the North Sea fully protected by pursuit planes against defending British air fighters.

The high command announced tonight that the Netherlands capitulation had been signed at 11 A. M. by the German commander in chief and the commander in chief of the Dutch army and navy, Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman.

France also is under the shadow of German invasion.

It has been divulged that the Nazis are repeating the fam von Schlieffen plan of 1914—which means a drive into France around the Allies' left flank.

Sure Plan Will Succeed

Hitler and his general staff seemed confident tonight that the plan, which failed in 1914, would succeed in 1940 with Germany's army and air force infinitely stronger.

Three main Nazi efforts to drive through western Belgium were made clear from the progress shown in the high command's reports.

Most menacing to the Allied defense, evidently, was the German army which penetrated French soil at Sedan, across the Meuse river.

Another was hitting southwestward in a path east of Antwerp and in the direction of Paris parallel to the North Sea coast.

The third already has created a shallow salient north of Namur, Belgian town sixty miles north of Sedan on an elbow of the Meuse.

"By the crossing of the Meuse in the Sedan sector," the high-command communique asserted, "the northwestern extension of France's fortification system—the Maginot Line—has been pierced in closest collaboration with the air force."

The German war machine, as it launched its new attack against the main Belgian fortifications from Antwerp southeast to the French border beyond Sedan, had ridden over the Netherlands and the first row of Belgium's fortifications.

New Line Punctured

Latest ~~available official~~ reports disclosed that the new Allied line along the Meuse was holding but had been punctured between Namur and Givet, on the French border, and possibly northwest of Namur also.

The German advance line now extends from the Scheldt estuary in southern Holland to Sedan, then turns eastward to unite with forces holding the main Siegfried Line facing France.

Close In Toward Main Line

The day's reports indicated that the Germans, however, had closed in toward the Allied main line fortifications. According to DNB, eighty British prisoners were taken near Merzig, thirty miles northwest of Saarbrücken, in a German attack on the Saar front.

Drives to the north and south of Namur indicated a movement to envelop this fort, repeating the tactic which caused its collapse in 1914 during the German march toward Paris.

Although it had become evident as the Nazi campaign unfolded, Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' Der Angriff announced for the first time that the Germans were following the course prescribed by General Count Alfred von Schlieffen.

Strategists of World War experience pointed out that, except for lack of preparedness, the Germans could have broken through the French lines and captured Paris in September or October of 1914.

Allied Warships Leave Egypt as Tension Rises

Italians Prepare for War, Believe Decision Near; Americans Ready to Move

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May 15 (AP).—The Allied battle fleet put to sea tonight for "scheduled maneuvers" which coincided with new reports of tension in the Mediterranean.

Widespread fears that Italy soon might enter the war against the Allies prompted thousands of Italians to start liquidation of their properties in Egypt. Weeping Italian women sold household effects while their husbands converted business holdings into cash.

The big guns of the Allied fleet boomed re-echoing salvos in a stiff workout during the maneuvers off Alexandria, and were reported in top fighting trim for any eventuality.

Italian circles here believed Germany's smashing victories in Holland and Belgium would cause Premier Benito Mussolini to make his decision shortly, and they feared it would be for war. Italian official sources admitted the situation was "delicate."

Americans here prepared to move to bomb-proof shelters in the event that Alexandria is attacked, and authorities ordered partial blackout of the country to continue indefinitely.

Newspapers announced that the Egyptian government was prepared to remove civilians from possible war zones. Women, children and the aged would be transported from Alexandria and Port Said to various towns in lower Egypt. An unspecified number of retired army and navy reserve officers were called up.

Wilhelmina Appoints Chief Of Zeeland Army

London, May 15 (AP)—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands has appointed Rear Admiral Van Der Stad as commander of all Dutch military and naval forces in the province of Zeeland, the Netherlands Legation announced tonight.

The Queen herself announced the appointment to the Dutch forces by radio.

"I know that my people in the Netherlands as well as in the overseas territories are looking toward you with hope and admiration for the way in which you are carrying out your duties," she said.

"I know that I can have confidence in you. I am constantly with you in thought."

Zeeland is the province of low islands south of Rotterdam and north of Antwerp, Belgium, not yet surrendered to the Germans.

In an earlier broadcast to Great Britain the Queen declared that her nation's spirit would remain intact "because our conscience is clear." She said "we have to admit that no happiness can be expected in this world if those who are solely responsible for the present situation are not definitely checked in their course of unscrupulous destruction and utter disregard of law and the most elementary principles of morality."

"After an heroic struggle," the Queen said, "my nation that has attempted everything to maintain peace is being overpowered by sheer superiority of force."

But morally, she added, Holland can never be conquered.

"Notwithstanding the great distress my people are suffering at the present moment and the oppression under which they will live until the country is free again, I am convinced that they will never give up their faith in the cause of freedom and justice."

Wilhelmina Receives Cabinet

LONDON, May 15 (AP).—The Dutch Cabinet called on Queen Wilhelmina this morning.

The Day's War Communiques

The official communiques issued today by the warring Powers are presented below:

PARIS

A communique from the French High Command said:

"In central Belgium in the (Tuesday) evening an enemy tank attack took place in the region of Gembloux. We counter-attacked and hurled back the enemy.

"On the Meuse, from Namur to the junction of Chiers, the enemy even have increased their pressure. The battle is continuing.

"Our aviation and the Royal Air Force, acting in complete co-operation, continued to intervene very vigorously.

LONDON

The British Air Ministry communique follows:

"In a great battle which developed at Sedan and the crossings of the Meuse yesterday, Royal Air Force bombers, escorted by fighters, went into action in co-operation with French forces.

"Repeated low-flying attacks on enemy troops and tank concentrations were made.

"These were highly successful and valuable assistance was given to the French Army.

"Two permanent bridges and two pontoon bridges were destroyed, and at least fifteen enemy aircraft brought down by our fighters and anti-aircraft fire.

"In the fury of these engagements detailed reports from aircraft crews cannot be expected.

"Heavy losses must have been sustained in attacking vital objectives which were strongly defended by anti-aircraft fire and enemy fighters.

"However, our losses, which were not considered excessive in view of the results obtained, were thirty-five aircraft.

"Several crews from these aircraft have already returned to the airdrome."

A British Admiralty communique said:

"Germany continues to pursue her technic of making large and entirely groundless claims of British losses at sea.

"Germany has claimed that yesterday off the Dutch coast two cruisers and one destroyer were sunk and one cruiser and one 15,000-ton steamer were set on fire by bombs and an 8,000-ton steamer severely damaged by bombs.

"Since the German invasion of the Low Countries Germany has claimed that four cruisers and two destroyers have been sunk and two cruisers heavily damaged in Dutch waters.

"Claims to have sunk and seriously damaged other naval units of his Majesty's fleet in Norwegian waters have also been made.

"In fact, no British warship has been sunk or set on fire or seriously damaged since the German invasion of the Low Countries with the exception of H. M. submarine Seal. This loss was announced by the Admiralty May 12th in accordance with the declared policy of announcing all losses.

"Claims of loss or serious damage by air attack to transports and merchant ships are equally untrue. No mishap has befallen any British transport or supply ship during the Netherlands campaign.

"The German claim to have set fire to a 25,000-ton ship may have its origin in published reports that fires in Rotterdam spread to the Dutch liner Statendam, 28,291 tons, which was lying alongside the quay. Nothing is known of any damage to an 8,000-ton ship."

BERLIN

The German High Command said in its communique:

"The 'Fortification of Holland' was capitulated because of the hopeless fight against superior attacks by German troops on land and from the air. In Belgium our divisions, sharply pursuing the retreating enemy, reached a position on the Dyle River.

"A crossing of the Meuse was forced on a broad front between Namur and Givet. French counter-attacks with tanks on the western embankment were repulsed.

'German fighting planes and destroyer plane units participated in this fight, destroying a great number of armored cars.

"By the crossing of the Meuse in the Sedan sector, the northwestern extension of France's fortification system—the Maginot Line—has been pierced in closest collaboration with the Air Force. Here, too, French counter-attacks were frustrated with heavy losses for the enemy.

"During attacks on the Saar front, the first lieutenant of one infantry regiment, Hans Schoene, and his company distinguished themselves by extraordinary bravery in storming a commanding position in the rocky hills south of Pirmasens.

"The main weight of German air operations yesterday lay in attacking the rear connections of the enemy, his transport roads and assembly stations.

"Enemy efforts to hamper German fighting activity through operations of strong flying forces were repulsed with heavy losses for the opponent without much interference of our command in the air.

"Over seventy British and French fighting and pursuit planes were shot down at one point alone. Total losses of the opponent on May 14 amounted to over 200 planes, of which about 170 were shot down in air fights, seventeen by anti-aircraft and the rest destroyed on the ground.

"Thirty-five of our own planes are missing. Armed reconnaissance before the Netherlands coast yielded great successes. As previously reported in a special announcement, two cruisers and one destroyer were sunk by bomb hits, an additional cruiser was struck by a bomb, one merchant ship of 29,000 tons and four transports were destroyed.

"The defense fight around Narvik continues."

BERNE

The Swiss Federal Council and Swiss Army issued the following joint communique:

"General mobilization has been completed in the shortest possible time. All the troops occupy the positions which have been assigned to them.

"Also in the interior of the country large forces assure the security of the country.

"The protection of the neutrality and independence of Switzerland has been assured by the placing of our armed forces in their posts."

Deal, on Coast, Reports Vibrations Like a Quake

LONDON, May 15 (AP).—Gunfire believed to be from battles raging in Belgium and France shook houses at Deal on the southeast coast of England tonight. Deal is sixty miles across the North Sea from the juncture of Belgium and France at the coast.

Vibrations which lasted a full minute rattled doors and windows in Deal. Similar distant rumblings were heard earlier in the day.

The vibrations were described as so violent that they resembled an earthquake. Each was heard approaching like a mighty wind, first a murmur in the distance and then intensifying in a violent crescendo.

The distant explosions, felt at various other points along the coast, revived memories of the World War, when the sound of big guns in Flanders, some eighty miles across the North Sea, were heard in England.

Personal Plea By Roosevelt Sent to Rome

President Acts on Word From Phillips That Italy Appears Ready to Strike

Decision Reached At Midnight Parley

French Cut Border Trains; Day Peaceful in Rome; Greeks Guard Frontier

From the Herald Tribune Bureau

WASHINGTON, May 15.—President Roosevelt today addressed a new appeal to Premier Benito Mussolini, asking him to avoid extending the European conflict by taking Italy into the war, it was learned tonight from reliable sources.

The President's move was decided upon last night after word had been received from Ambassador William Phillips in Rome that the situation had become critical.

Ambassador Phillips, who ten days ago advised the State Department that there was still a margin of safety, yesterday cabled that final preparations for a military move by Italy were under way. It was understood such measures as concentration of Italian troops in the region north of Milan where they could strike at either France, Switzerland or Yugoslavia were under way. Furthermore, Italian harbor defenses were being strengthened and submarine nets put into position.

Midnight Conference Held

President Roosevelt decided, therefore, to waste no time. After the Pan-American Scientific Congress concert by Arturo Toscanini last night, ranking State Department officials were called into consultation and a message was drafted.

Among those participating in the midnight conferences which spanned Executive Avenue, separating the White House and the State Department, were Cordell Hull, Secretary of State; A. A. Berle jr., Assistant Secretary, and J. Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the Division of European Affairs.

The President worked over his message to the Italian dictator in his White House study with the aid of these top ranking advisers and other experts, it was understood, until 2 o'clock this morning. The message thereupon was sent to Ambassador Phillips, to reach him in time for the opening of the Foreign Office in Rome this morning.

Appeal Believed Personal

State Department officials would not reveal the contents of the message, nor would they officially admit that any such message had been sent. However, it was believed that the President's message was a personal appeal asking that Mussolini keep Italy out of the conflict.

The President's latest gesture of friendship for Italy is one of a series, which has included frequent consultation with the Italian Ambassador, Prince Ascanio Colonna, and the recent Treasury ruling relaxing countervailing duties on Italian textiles.

As far as could be learned this evening from official sources, President Roosevelt has not yet received any indication from Ambassador Phillips as to Premier Mussolini's possible reply to his peace plea.

However, it was recalled by officials that the Italian government had always been extremely courteous in dealing with Mr. Roosevelt's messages, in sharp contrast to the treatment accorded them by Mussolini's axis partner, Chancellor Adolf Hitler. It was recalled also that President Roosevelt had always indicated a hope that he might be able to weaken the ties between Rome and Berlin, despite the Italian adventures in Ethiopia, Spain and Albania.

During the war crisis last fall, President Roosevelt sent a message to King Victor Emmanuel, which was also delivered by Ambassador Phillips. At that time, he expressed his hope that the Italian monarch would use his influence and that of his country in the cause of peace. Furthermore, while exerting this extra-moral pressure on Italy to keep it out of the war, Mr. Roosevelt was viewed as helping the cause of the Allies and aiding in the attempt to keep the Balkans and possibly Spain from being added to the countries engulfed by the conflict.

GERMANS SEEM READY TO MOVE ACROSS RHINE

Strong French Force On Opposite Border Awaiting Developments

Fully Mobilized Little Republic Perfects Its Winkelried Line

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, May 15—German artillery rolled into place behind motorized divisions on the German side of the Rhine from Basel to Schaffhausen today, and by sundown foreign military observers reported the Germans seemed ready to move—if they plan an attack on Switzerland.

The French also were ready with a strong force kept at the Swiss frontier by the presence of the German concentrations, despite the reported Allied need of all possible motorized units to battle the German offensive through Belgium.

Women, Boys, Old Men Armed

The mobilized Swiss army toiled day and night perfecting fortifications of the Winkelried Line, while thousands of women, boys and aged men volunteered for "home guard" duty and received rifles and forty cartridges each.

Movement of residents from the northern region around the German frontier increased, and trains leading to the Alpine resorts were jammed.

League Moves Its Archives

The League of Nations began moving its archives to a secret "place of safety," believed to be in France. League employes were paid today instead of at the end of the month, but officials said that "League business continues until further notice."

The internal battle to wipe out any possibility of a fifth column action in Switzerland continued. In some cities all foreigners were ordered to present their credentials for inspection.

In the large cities, including Basel, Zurich, Bern and Geneva, militarized police and troops inspected credentials of all automobiles passing the city gates.

Most Of Men In Uniform.

In Geneva, where some 2,000 rifles, pistols and other firearms were collected from foreigners by police under a new Federal law, soldiers even walked through streetcars checking passengers' cards of identity.

The high command today ordered the Left wing Socialist newspapers, Le Travail and Le Droit, to emphasize Switzerland's neutrality in the face of the powerful German force massed on the northern frontier.

Swiss Refuse To "Cooperate"

Allied sources called the Swiss policy "superneutrality." It was reported that the Swiss had constantly refused all suggestions that they "cooperate" with one of their large neighbors by at least drawing up advance coordinated defense plans in the event the other invaded her territory.

Mobilization Completed

The Federal council and high command this morning issued the following joint communique:

"General mobilization has been completed in the shortest possible time. All the troops occupy the positions which have been assigned to them.

(This means that the forts on the Italian frontier, which until the recent intensification of the crisis had only a skeleton guard, are fully manned.)

Preparations In Interior

"Also in the interior of the country large forces assure the security of the country.

"The protection of the neutrality and independence of Switzerland have been assured by the placing of our armed forces in their posts."

Swiss Protect Italian Border

MAY 15 1940

Mobilization Complete as Nazi Bridging of Rhine Gives Rise to New Alarm.

BERNE, Switzerland, May 15 (A. P.).—Switzerland's mobilization is complete and "all the troops occupy the positions which have been assigned to them," the Federal Council and the Swiss High Command announced in a joint communique today.

This means that the forts on the Italian frontier, which had had until the recent intensification of the crisis only a skeleton guard, are fully manned.

The forces mobilized include not only the army but anti-aircraft defense units. These units have been turned into "home defense corps" in which are enrolled all women and all men too old or otherwise unfit for military service, but who can fire a rifle.

BASLE, May 15 (A. P.).—Swiss soldiers guarding the northern frontiers of their country kept their fingers literally on their machine-gun triggers today as German troops "practiced" spanning the Rhine with pontoon bridges.

For the third time in as many days, Nazi engineers threw a bridge across the Rhine today near the entrance to Lake Constance, where Germany holds a narrow strip of land on the south bank, hemmed in by Swiss territory.

These maneuvers, coupled with many signs of German troop concentrations north of the Swiss border, strengthened fear here that Germany might supplement her drive through Belgium and the Netherlands by attempting to strike at France through Switzerland.

Fear Shared by Allies.

These fears apparently were shared by the British and French legations at Berne, which were reported to have burned their official papers last night.

Crowds collected outside the British Legation to watch as members of the Diplomatic Staff heaped documents on a bonfire. The French were understood to have followed the same procedure.

Aliens Surrender Arms.

In Zurich, Basle, Berne, Lausanne, Geneva and other cities the police enforced a Federal law requiring all foreigners to surrender arms in their possession.

By midnight last night the police in Geneva alone had collected 730 rifles and pistols from about 300 foreigners.

Militarized police, wearing steel helmets and carrying rifles, stood with soldiers on the outskirts of Berne checking the papers of all persons in incoming automobiles.

In Geneva and Zurich the police rounded up foreigners whose papers were found out of order.

Every Bridge Mined.

Every bridge within 100 miles of the frontier was mined, and well-armed troops guarded all radio stations, as well as telegraph and telephone centers.

Throughout all these preparations the Swiss paid particular care to avoid any action which might be construed as unneutral.

No orders have yet been issued for the removal of civilian populations from towns along the German border, but officials said that if such a step were taken the same procedure would have to be taken in the regions fronting France.

Informed spokesmen estimated that Germany has about twenty or twenty-five divisions in the sector north of the border, and that France had approximately an equal number on her side of the three-way frontier.

Belgian and Nazi Envoys Completing Repatriation

Germans Back by Way of Swiss Border, Others Reverse Route

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, May 15 (AP).—The German Minister to Belgium, his entire staff and all German Consular officials formerly stationed in that country, with their families, entered Switzerland from France today and crossed the border immediately into Germany.

The Belgian Minister to Berlin and about seventy-five Belgian diplomats were expected to enter Switzerland tonight en route to Belgium. The Belgians, it was said, refused to leave Germany until their consul and vice-consul at Cologne could be located, but the latter were reported to have joined their colleagues today at Bregentz, near the Swiss border.

Swiss quarters believed the Netherlands' surrender might have obviated necessity for an exchange of Dutch and German diplomats through Switzerland. Dutch officials have been waiting on the German side of the Swiss border for several days, although German diplomats have not left their posts in the Netherlands.

Van Zeeland Going Home To Join Belgian Defense

'Can't Stand It Any Longer,' He Says at White House

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP).—Paul Van Zeeland, former Belgian Prime Minister, made President Roosevelt good-by today before hurrying home to join his country's fighting forces. He will leave for Belgium on Friday by airplane, or on Saturday by boat, he said, and will enlist upon his arrival.

"I can't stand it any longer," he told reporters at the White House.

Mr. Van Zeeland, heading a co-ordinating committee of an intergovernmental refugee organization, has been in this country for several months.

B. E. F. Artillery Flies to Stem German Advance on Louvain

Forces Heavily Engaged Throughout the Day With Big Guns Pouring Shells at Oncoming Nazi Troops.

By DREW MIDDLETON.

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN BELGIUM, May 15 (A. P.) (Passed by Field Censor).—The smash German offensive aiming at Brussels and the heart of Belgium through the Louvain gate clashed today with the British Expeditionary Force, which was heavily engaged throughout the long, hot day. The British, holding positions in and around Louvain, threw thousands of tons of high explosives and metal into hundreds of German tanks and armored cars, screening the advancing green-gray columns on the roads of Belgium.

Operations opened last night when a French town well in the rear was bombed heavily and scores of civilians killed or wounded.

Louvain, a deserted city except for the troops and refugees streaming through, contains the famous University Library, rebuilt after the last war by the pennies of millions of American school children.

When I visited Louvain yesterday, it already had felt the blows of the Nazi air force. Two bombs fell within seventy-five years of the magnificent library and blew up two homes. The railroad station a half mile away had been strafed and bombed.

Civilians Have Departed.

Most of Louvain's civilian population have moved away in carts and cars, on bicycles or on foot, and left it silent and dead.

If the city is heavily shelled, the library, a landmark for miles around on the flat plain of Flanders, well may be demolished. When I saw it yesterday it was standing in all its grandeur, defiant above the stricken city, on its walls the names of American universities and schools whose students contributed to its rebuilding and filled it with books.

The full power of the German armies swept southwest today toward the tiny triangle of Belgium where the Allies were massed to make their last stand in the Low Countries after the collapse of Dutch resistance.

The biggest battle of the war, and perhaps its most decisive, appeared imminent. The Nazi armies, screened by armored cars and light divisions and accompanied by thousands of parachute troops, sped toward the British and French battle positions.

As Serious as In 1914.

The situation probably was as grave as that of 1914, for the Germans in five days had forced the Dutch to their knees, overrun large sections of Belgium and opened the way to the vital channel ports from which their strategy may dictate the long-awaited blow to England.

The situation seemed lightened by only one factor—the rise to power of the Allied air arm which has been fighting the Germans to a standstill.

It was admittedly too early to gauge the results of yesterday's air battle, but Royal Air Force pilots and gunners felt today that both their fighters and bombers came off best in bringing down almost a dozen German bombers and spreading high explosives on German troop concentrations, bridges, depots and railheads far into the Third Reich's hitherto inviolate territory.

Tommies followed orders calmly, going about their tasks as if the whine of German shells and the thunder of Nazi bombers did not exist.

But their faces were traced with lines of anxiety.

The German army—unchecked after eight months of war—might still be in Berlin instead of a few short miles away. Privates idled, smoking cigarettes in the sunshine by the side of powerful tanks and field guns. Others ate off tables pulled from bombed and deserted houses, where inhabitants long since had fled.

Even Troops Under Cover.

In fields churned by four days of movement of men and machines, soldiers slept with helmets over their faces.

Streets of a nearby town were empty of civilians. The hobnailed boots of sentries struck hollowly.

Even the troops were under cover. The snouts of anti-tank guns appeared at every corner, but to the casual eye the town appeared to be held by only a handful of men.

Near one of the anti-tank guns were two bombed houses. In one the family's breakfast still lay on the table—half eaten slices of bread, half filled cups of coffee.

On a wall, at a crazy angle, hung a picture of a young man in the world war uniform of the Belgian Army with the inscription "mort pour la patrie."

Farther on, past the British lines, lay some of the Belgian dead. (Part censored). Here a caisson had been blown up. In the sun, now growing higher and hotter, lay the shattered bodies, sprawled grotesquely as though embracing the soil they had rushed to defend against the invader.

'It Ain't Very Pretty.'

"It ain't very pretty," said a British artilleryman wryly.

We turned away and walked back past laughing boys who were playing cards, past silent sentries looking forward to where—screened by its own and the British mechanized cavalry—the German Army was gathering for the first real blow against the British forces.

On every road there were Belgian refugees—the old and very young, the lame, the blind, the weak.

Old bicycles, oxcarts and donkey wagons were their conveyances. One woman was pushing a baby carriage containing a fat, smiling baby and a pile of household goods. Another wore absurd bright red slippers with fluffy pompoms as she trudged through the heat and dust.

A British officer estimated that he had seen at least 70,000 in two days of travel. They never looked back, he said, and I noticed the same thing. They just tramped on.

A huge, florid man sat beside a bicycle, crying. He had to leave his magnificent Belgian police dog behind, he said. When we came that way again he was gone and the dog lay on the doorstep looking up the deserted street for his vanished master.

NOTED LIBRARY OF LOUVAIN IN NAZI GUN RANGE

British Force Clashes With German Offensive Near University City

With the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, May 15 (Passed by Field Censor)—The smashing German offensive aiming at Brussels and the heart of Belgium through the Louvain "gate" clashed today with the British Expeditionary Force, which was heavily engaged throughout the long, hot day.

tons of high explosives and metal into hundreds of German tanks and armored cars, screening the advancing green-gray columns on the roads of Belgium.

Louvain Deserted City

Louvain, a deserted city except for the troops and refugees streaming through, contains the famous University Library, rebuilt after the last war by the pennies of millions of American school children.

If the city is heavily shelled the library, a landmark for miles around on the flat plain of Flanders, well may be demolished. When I saw it yesterday it was standing in all its grandeur, defiant above the stricken city, on its walls the names of the American universities and schools whose students contributed to its rebuilding and filled it with books.

Original Library Burned In '14

On the facade for passing soldiers to decipher was the Latin inscription expressing Belgium's thanks to the American people for the library's reconstruction.

Among the schools whose names are inscribed on the walls are the universities of Rochester, Creighton, Illinois, Cincinnati; Mills College, of California, and public schools of New York and Philadelphia.

The building, regarded as one of the nation's most beautiful, was built originally in the year 1317 and burned by the German invaders on the night of August 25-26, 1914, along with its priceless collection of old books.

Watches Artillery Duel

From the hilltop headquarters of a Scots regiment famed in story I watched a hot artillery duel between German and British guns.

Stretched before the observation post in panorama was a heavily wooded valley in a pattern of dark-green woods and light-green fields.

Shells Strike Around Church

As I watched through glasses, shells began to land around the church spire. There would be a crash, a thick white cloud of smoke and then a sort of fog hanging over the town. Each time a shell landed I expected to see the church tower topple, but it withstood fifteen minutes of this kind of bombardment. A Scot near me swore softly each time a shell landed.

From positions to our left and right, British guns replied. Their range was too far for us to see the effect but a reconnaissance plane took to the air to find out.

After it had gone the hilltop seemed almost peaceful, the silence broken only by the boom of the guns. When we left the Scots still were peering into the woods ahead awaiting the appearance of the first green-gray figures.

The German bombings were answered by increased activity of the Royal Air Force, which by Wednesday afternoon claimed its pilots had shot down fifteen more German planes, with slight losses of their own; had bombed enemy key positions, spotted German artillery and tanks and had protected convoys of men, munitions and material rolling to the front.

Some 800 Americans, including about 150 Jewish medical students at Lausanne University, now are in Switzerland. About 400, including the students, plan to remain.

The consulate said that "some kind of arrangements" would be made to repatriate Americans who gather in the Bordeaux area, although they could not say how soon the plans would be laid.

ROME, May 15 (A. P.).—The police dispersed nearly 10,000 persons, mostly students, who gathered in various parts of Rome today with the intention of launching a third day of anti-Allied demonstrations at the Piazza Venezia.

Foreign observers interpreted the action as placing an official damper on the manifestations which diplomats thought might push Italy into the war.

New posters, however, were plastered upon buildings near the French embassy, quoting an old editorial article in Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, which recalled that Germany supported Italy during the Ethiopian war while France and Great Britain opposed her.

Stones Thrown at Fiume.

[Crowds of Italians shouting "Down with Yugoslavia!" stoned Yugoslav homes and business offices today at Fiume, Italy, across the border from Susak, according to dispatches from the Yugoslav city. The demonstrations began last night and continued throughout this morning without interference from the police. Throngs which also yelled "Hurrah for war!" hurled stones across the Yugoslav-Italian frontier into Susak, smashing many windows.]

Several hundred students who tried to march on the Yugoslav legation for a demonstration today were dispersed by police in nearby streets after they had threatened to mob a restaurant proprietor who told them, "Quit clowning and go back to school."

Italian troops had been posted at the legation earlier in the day, the first occasion that any show of military protection had been made at the legation since the demonstrations began.

Meanwhile a new law was introduced in the Fascist Chamber which would increase from six to twelve miles the belt of territorial waters around the Italian coast. It was said that this change corresponded with the width of British and French territorial waters.

Troops continued to guard the British and French embassies, the focal points of former demonstrations. Mention of the demonstrations was lacking from the morning newspapers.

Served a Purpose.

Apparently, however, the displays have served the purpose of driving to cover any Italians who might have anti-German or pro-Allied leanings.

Meanwhile today Ettore Muti, secretary of the Fascist party, ordered the provincial secretaries to appoint before May 20 substitutes who could take over their duties in case they were called to arms.

Americans who, alarmed by events, attempted tardily to buy passage home on the United States liner Washington found all available space—including the lounges—reserved, mostly by compatriots fleeing from Holland and Belgium. The Washington is scheduled to sail from Genoa on Saturday.

Italy's national budget, swollen by emergency expenses, will total 50,000,000,000 lire ($2,500,000,000) for the fiscal year of 1940-41, with a deficit of 20,000,000,000 lire ($1,000,000,000), Senator Frederico Ricci told the Senate today.

Senator Ricci said that this expenditure would represent 35 per cent of the national income, compared with 27 per cent in Germany and 24 per cent in England.

Senator Giuseppe Bevione, commenting on Senator Ricci's speech, said: "The plutocracies are deceiving themselves that the Duce's determination to break the bars of our Mediterranean imprisonment can be frustrated by the condition of our finance."

Giovanni Host Venturi, Minister of Communications, disclosed in the Senate that Italy has already tested mobilization of transportation facilities, and said that Italians could be assured of their full efficiency.

The announcement followed a further report on the "intolerable conditions" created by the Allies' contraband control.

Allied Fleet Ready.

ALEXANDRIA, May 15 (A. P.).—The Egyptian authorities today ordered the partial blackout of the country continued indefinitely and called up as unspecified number of retired army and navy reserve officers as uncertainty over Italy's intentions persisted.

Allied spokesmen reiterated that the combined Anglo-French battle fleet, concentrated here, is ready to fight "in whatever zone hostilities may develop."

The American legation has so far issued no warnings to its nationals to leave Egypt and there has been no general exodus of foreigners.

A usually reliable source indicated that Britain was easing her contraband control on Italian shipping, which gave rise to the anti-Allied demonstrations.

This report, coupled with others that the British were making progress in trade negotiations with the Italians, caused a climb in security prices in private brokerage dealings at Milan after the close of the stock market in the afternoon.

Several hundred students were reported to have started a march to the Yugoslav legation but were dispersed after they threatened to mob a restaurant proprietor who advised them to "quit clowning and go back to school."

Official quarters could not confirm Yugoslav reports of anti-Yugoslav demonstrations at Fiume, but informed observers believed that if such demonstrations actually had taken place, they were without official sanction.

Italian soldiers continued to guard the French and British Embassies as new posters were plastered on near by walls recalling that Germany had supported but France and Britain had opposed Italy during the Ethiopian war.

Awaits Allied Defeats

Lessening of tension prompted diplomatic observers to return to their assumption that Premier Mussolini would wait for a conclusive defeat of the Allies before plunging Italy into war.

The belief that Italian entry into the conflict was not imminent was strengthened by sailing of the liner Conte di Savoia with 1,000 passengers bound for New York.

Diplomatic quarters believed that one reason why Italy might prefer to wait before incurring the heavy financial strain of war was the state of the Italian budget as disclosed in the Senate today by Senator Frederico Ricci.

Billion-Dollar Deficit

He predicted that for the fiscal year of 1940-41 the deficit would amount to $1,000,000,000 on a budget expenditure of $2,500,000,000.

Ricci said this budget would represent thirty-five per cent of the national income.

FRENCH STOP TRAINS TO SOUTH FRONTIERS

Suspension Affects Routes Near Italian and Swiss Borders—Warships of Allies Out in Mediterranean.

PARIS, May 15 (A. P.).—The French ordered suspension tonight of main passenger trains, effective at midnight, on a number of important lines near the Italian border. The lines included those from Lyons to Mentone on the Italian frontier; from Lyons to Geneva and Lyons to Belfort and Chambery, near the Swiss border, and also from Lyons to Grenoble and from Dijon to Besancon.

LONDON, May 15 (A. P.).—Reuters, a British news agency, reported from Cairo today that the Allied fleet had put to sea from Alexandria for scheduled maneuvers.

Told to Shift Departure Plans.

GENEVA, May 15 (A. P.).—The United States Consulate received instructions from Washington today to advise any Americans planning to return to the United States to concentrate at Bordeaux, France, instead of Genoa, Italy.

The instructions apparently were a precaution in case Italy abandons her "non-belligerency."

ANTI-ALLIED ACTS STARTED AGAIN IN NAPLES

Thousands Of Youths March, Shouting Demands For French Possessions

Demonstrations in Naples

ROME, May 15 (AP). — Several thousand youthful Neapolitans revived anti-Allied demonstrations tonight, marching in the main street of Naples and shouting old cries for French possessions.

They carried huge pictures of Premier Benito Mussolino and signs saying "Mussolini is always right," "Chamberlain's umbrella leaks," "Djibuti, Nice, Corsica" and "Viva Italian Corsica."

Earlier, police put a sudden stop to such demonstrations in Rome when they dispersed about 10,000 students and others who gathered in the Piazza Venezia for a third day of parading and slogan-shouting. Premier Benito Mussolini failed to show himself to the crowd this morning, although yesterday he took three salutes from his Venice Palace balcony.

U. S. Minister to Bulgaria Warns Other Americans.

SOFIA, May 15 (A. P.).—George H. Earle, United States Minister to Bulgaria, the former Governor of Pennsylvania, disclosed tonight that he was sending his wife and two younger sons back to the United States.

The legation, at the same time, issued its third warning to Americans to leave "while means of egress still are available."

The Earles will sail on the United States liner Washington, leaving Genoa on May 18.

There are seventy American citizens in Bulgaria.

MAY 15 1940

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 15.—A blanket warning to Americans in western and southern European countries to leave for the United States was issued tonight by the State Department.

The Americans were urged to proceed to the Bordeaux region in southwest France or to Spain or Portugal. Hitherto they have been concentrating at Genoa, Italy, but State Department officials abroad have been reported to be diverting them from Genoa in fear of Italy's entrance into the war.

The State Department announced it would "consider the making of arrangements for their evacuation by American vessels from those areas" (Bordeaux, Spain or Portugal). Bordeaux at present is forbidden to American vessels by combat zone regulations.

American consuls in Switzerland were reported in Geneva dispatches to be telling Americans who wish to leave to proceed to the above destinations.

"Commencing some time before the outbreak of hostilities in Europe last September, the department's officials in Europe, acting under the discretionary authority which they have or warning Americans of dangerous situations and inviting them to leave, have generally and continuously so invited Americans to leave war areas in Europe unless they have compelling reason to remain.

"The duty of the government towards its citizens in a war area is accomplished when it has advised them of the dangers of the situation and invited them to leave, while affording those who chose to go every possible assistance in obtaining transportation and those who chose to remain such protection as may be possible. There can be no insistence upon the departure of our citizens since the government may not compel the return of its citizens and the decision whether to remain or depart is one the individual himself must make.

"Exercising the discretionary authority referred to above, the deparement's officers in southern European countries, in view of recent developments and the possible spread of hostilities, have invited citizens within their respective districts to return to the United States. The deparment's officers in Great Britain and France are also renewing their invitations to Americans to leave and to proceed to the Bordeaux region in southwest France. They may also proceed to Spain or Portugal. The department will then consider the making of arrangements for their evacuation by American vessels from those areas. The department's officials in Switzerland are giving similar advice to Americans who wish to leave.

Shippers Here Bewildered

Shippers in New York expressed bewilderment yesterday over the Consulate order telling Americans at Geneva to go to Bordeaux instead of Genoa, Italy, The Associated Press said.

American ships are not allowed to enter Bordeaux under the neutrality act, nor are Americans allowed to sail on belligerent ships. Thus the question of how Americans would return to America was raised immediately.

The United States Lines operates from Genoa and Naples, Italy, and with the Italian Line has been returning Americans fleeing the war. The lines said they had not been advised of the order. One shipping official said, however, that President Roosevelt was empowered to oast neutrality act restrictions to allow American vessels to enter Bordeaux. Others thought the step meant that Germany was planning to invade Switzerland and that Italy was ready to enter the war on Hitler's side.

The Italian Line said there had been no change in its shipping schedules and that they had booked numerous refugees. The United States Lines said its liner Manhattan planned to leave Genoa Saturday with more than one thousand Americans from invaded countries.

Bordeaux is on the Bay of Biscay, on the west coast of France, and is near Spanish ports open to American shipping. One shipper said it was possible for Americans to be sent from Bordeaux to Bilbao, Spain, a port used by a few American freighters. He said it had been reported that if the Mediterranean were closed to American trade ships might still be allowed to enter Spanish and Portuguese ports.

GREEKS RUSH FORCE TO ALBANIAN LINE

Allied Fleet Leaves Base in Egypt—Yugoslavs Hear Italy Is Set for War

MAY 16 1940

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, (Thursday) May 16—Greece rushed troop reinforcements to her frontier with Italian-occupied Albania this morning just after midnight.

It was understood precautionary measures had been ordered along the frontier regions.

[Here the telephone line between Athens and Budapest, Hungary, by which the foregoing dispatch was relayed, went dead. When communication was restored, the following information was received.]

Colonel Papademas, Under-Secretary of War, arrived in the frontier region of Yanina to take personal charge of preparedness operations. He is virtual head of Greece's armed forces, since the War Minister is Premier John Metaxas.

The Yanina district borders the island of Corfu at the mouth of the Adriatic, an object of Italian ambitions for many years because of its position dominating Otranto Strait. Italy occupied the island in 1923, but later vacated it.

It was reported, but not confirmed, that British pressure was being brought to bear upon Greece to permit establishment of naval bases for the British fleet on Greek islands.

Three Blockade Bases In Britain Being Closed

War in Low Countries Ends Check on Their Cargoes

LONDON, May 15 (AP).—An Economic Warfare Ministry official announced today that the spread of the war to the Low Countries had removed the need for contraband control bases in the British Isles and that three stations—Kirkwall in the Orkney Islands, and the Downs and Weymouth on the south coast—were being closed.

He said the bases were unnecessary because most of their work had been in dealing with ships destined for Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and Belgium, all of which now are belligerent territory. Two of the largest maritime powers, Norway and the Netherlands, neutral when the war began, now are numbered among the Allies.

A skeleton staff is being maintained at Kirkwall, however, to examine ships going to Sweden. The remaining control bases are in the Mediterranean.

BELGIANS WATCH SOVIET EMBASSY

Act on Story It Took In Nazi Parachutists

LONDON, May 15 (A. P.).—It was reported here today that the Soviet Russian embassy at Brussels was surrounded by a cordon of Belgian troops after the Belgian authorities heard that German parachute troops had been seen landing in the embassy grounds.

The Laborite London Daily Herald, which said that it got the report from Soviet sources in London, went on to say that Ivan Maisky, the Russian Ambassador to Great Britain, telephoned to his colleague in Brussels and then made representations to the Belgian Ambassador in London.

The latter was said to have told Maisky that he had obtained assurances from the Belgian Government that the "blockade" would be lifted.

The Russian Ambassador in Brussels was said to have denied the allegation concerning the German parachute troops.

Brussels Still Capital, Belgians Defy Invader

LONDON, May 15 (AP).—A Belgian radio announcement heard in London today said that the Belgian government was staying in Brussels and that Allied embassies also were remaining.

This proclamation was broadcast, in connection with the Netherlands' capitulation:

"The defeat of our northern neighbors will not discourage us. Our army, supported by French and British allies, stubbornly is resisting the attacks of the enemy. Belgium cannot be defeated. Justice, our cause, is bound to triumph after the dire test through which we are passing."

Belgian Fort's Guns Went Out of Order

BERLIN, May 15 (A. P.).—Belgian defenders of Fort Eben Emael, in the Liege fortified zone on the Albert Canal defense line, suddenly found that they were unable to operate their guns when the Germans attacked, it was reported today by a military writer in the newspaper Deutche Allemeine Zeitung.

The Belgian prisoners said their machine guns and artillery "went out of order," the writer declared.

German official reports said Fort Eben Emael was captured last week with a new weapon. No further details were disclosed.

British Warship Beached After Being Bombed

Destroyer Valentine Is Hit Off Coast of Holland; Other Nazi Claims Denied

LONDON, May 15 (AP).—The British destroyer Valentine has been beached after being damaged by German bombing planes off the coast of Holland, the Admiralty announced tonight. It said casualties were believed to have been slight.

The 1,100-ton Valentine, classified technically as an escort ship in the British fleet, normally carried nearly 200 men. She was built as a destroyer in 1917, but was rearmed as an escort vessel in 1938-'39.

The Admiralty said the information of damage to the Valentine was received after it had issued a communique which said that no British warship, with the exception of the lost British submarine Seal, had been "sunk, set on fire or seriously damaged" since Germany invaded the Low Countries.

German Claims Denied

The British announced the loss of the Seal several days ago. Yesterday German announcements said two British cruisers and one destroyer had been sunk off the Dutch coast; a cruiser and a 15,000-ton steamer set afire by bombs, and an 8,000-ton steamer seriously damaged by air bombs.

Nazis Attack Italian Ship

LONDON, May 15 (AP).—The (British) Press Association said tonight that the 3,059-ton Italian steamship Foscolo had sent a call for assistance after being attacked by German aircraft off the Dutch coast. The vessel's last port of call was Antwerp.

NARVIK REPORTED BADLY BATTERED

Swedes Doubt Nazi Garrison Can Resist Much Longer.

STOCKHOLM, May 15 (A. P.).—The newspaper Tidningen said today that the Allied bombardments of the last few days have devastated the Arctic Norwegian port of Narvik and that the German garrison could not possibly hold the town much longer.

The Nazi troops were said to be kept supplied by planes, which have also landed reinforcements by parachute. They were reported well equipped with automatic arms although lacking in artillery.

The Tidningen's special correspondent said that Fresh French troops and tanks had been landed from transports for an assault on the town.

[The War Office in London announced yesterday that new allied forces had been landed at Bjerkvik, seven miles north of Narvik.]

The newspaper Social Demokraten published a story from a correspondent in Norway declaring that German air bases in the central and southern part of the country were being bombed nightly by the British, which arrive regularly about 11 P. M.

Reports from Sweden's west coast, where German transports have been seen moving through the Kattegat, led to a belief here that the Nazis were reinforcing their drive through the Netherlands and Belgium with troops removed from Norway.

Norwegian refugees reported that two German transports attempted to land troops at Belsfjord, south of Mo, on Norway's west coast, but one was sunk by the Allies. The other landed about 400 men, presumably reinforcements for Narvik.

Sweden Recruits Men And Women To Guard Against Parachutists

Stockholm, May 15 (AP)—Sweden started recruiting men and women between the ages of 17 and 55 today as volunteers in home defense forces designed to guard against possible attack by parachute troops.

The volunteers will be given free board and lodging and one kroner a day as pay.

Norse Naval Base Blast Kills 7

OSLO, May 15 (AP).—An explosion which followed a fire at the Bergen naval station, on Norway's west coast, now occupied by German troops, was reported today to have killed seven firemen, including the chief of the Bergen fire brigade.

NAZI BOMB HIT SEEN BY LUCES

House Across Brussels Street Struck and Smashed.

THEY WERE IN U. S. EMBASSY

Publisher Says Sight Showed Him War's Savagery.

PARIS, May 15 (A. P.).—Henry R. Luce, editor of Time and Life magazines, said today that the sight of a German aerial bomb ripping through a house in Brussels on the day that Nazi troops invaded Belgium brought home to him the savageness of modern warfare.

He and his wife were standing at a fourth floor window of the American embassy across the street when the Nazi plane attacked.

They had arrived in Brussels from the Hague on the night of May 9 to keep an appointment with King Leopold of the Belgians, originally set for 10 A. M. on May 10.

"Mrs. Luce and I were awakened very early on the morning of May 10", Mr. Luce said. "The maid was so excited we could not understand her, but we finally made out that the Germans had entered Luxemburg and were on their way into Belgium."

Mr. Luce said that United States Ambassador John Cudahy told him of having telephoned to Washington at about 1 A. M. on May 10 with definite information that the Germans were going to move in.

Heard an Explosion.

"We were at the window looking down into the street when we heard a tremendous explosion," Mr. Luce said.

"The house across the street collapsed. The sirens began to blow. They kept blowing almost all day long. Soon after the bombing, Red Cross ambulances appeared and several casualties were carried out. I couldn't find out whether they were killed or merely injured, but there was no doubt that they were civilians."

Ambassador Cudahy tried to persuade Mr. and Mrs. Luce to leave immediately, the publisher said, but they decided to stay over until Saturday.

"One of the most extraordinary things," he added, "was that most of the guests whom the Ambassador had invited for dinner on Friday night arrived on time."

The Luces, accompanied by Mrs. Hugh Gibson, wife of the former United States Ambassador to Belgium, made the trip to the French border by private car, passing several lines of troops as they neared the frontier.

Nazi Dies in Her Play.

Mrs Luce is Claire Boothe, the playwright, whose most recent offering was "Margin for Error," a murder mystery in which the victim is a Nazi consul in an unidentified American city. It is to be produced shortly in London and Mrs. Luce is in Europe to attend the opening.

Blum Reminds U.S. That Allies Bar Nazis' Coal

Tells British Labor Parley a Hitler Victory Would Destroy Workers' Rights

BOURNEMOUTH, Eng., May 15 (AP).—Leon Blum, leader of the French Socialist party, told the British Labor party conference today that neutrals and our American friends should remember that the Allies were the only obstacle to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's success.

Denying a suggestion that the European conflict is a capitalist war, the former French Premier said: "I don't know what would happen to capitalism if we lose the war, but I do know what would happen to socialism if the Nazis win.

"Wherever this mechanized Attila has passed every workers' movement and institution has been destroyed."

Blum forecast collapse of "the bloody despotism of Hitler" at the first German defeat and added: "Because we are free we can survive reverses."

He spoke in French. The crowd cheered loudly as he finished. Mingled cheers and boos had marred introduction of the speaker. Those who booed were understood to be isolated Communist sympathizers who disapproved Blum's support of France's anti-Communist measures. It also is recalled that Blum had scolded British Laborites for their original opposition to pre-war conscription in Britain.

The disturbance was quelled when the chairman called for order, declaring "the overwhelming majority" of the conference wanted to hear their "French comrade."

Blum ridiculed the suggestion that France's government might impose a military tyranny on the nation. He said the death penalty decreed in France for the spreading of seditious propaganda was in reality a "penalty for treason to the French people."

Germany's Secret Weapon Is Said To Paralyze All Guns

"Artillery Suddenly Went Out Of Order," Belgian Prisoner From Fort Quoted As Reporting

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 15—The "paralyzed terror" of the Belgian garrison of Fort Eben Emael when all its artillery and even light weapons "suddenly went out of order" at the stroke of Germany's secret weapon was described tonight for German newspaper readers.

They were given little hint, however, of what the weapon is or how it works.

Lieutenant Colonel Hesse, military writer for the Deutche Allgemeine Zeitung, reporting from the Western front, said he had talked with some of the 1,000 prisoners taken from the key Albert Canal fort last Saturday after a small air force detachment had landed in the center of the citadel and used the mysterious Ausgriffsmittel to silence its guns.

"The prisoners with whom I talked showed every sign of paralyzed terror," said Hesse. "They said: 'We were unable to service our guns or machine guns any longer.'

"A wounded Belgian officer told me: 'Suddenly all our artillery went out of order.'"

Hesse said Fort Eben Emael was manned by a full Belgian regiment and had thirty pieces of artillery and one hundred machine guns.

Its concrete walls were five and ten feet thick, he said.

Other responsible Germans quoted a high air force officer as saying of the mysterious weapon: "Annihilation of resisting power occurs in one blow—and totally."

Hitler Praises Parachutists

Order of Day Hints He Eyes Britain After Taking Dutch Coastal Bases.

BERLIN, May 15 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler, in an order of the day paying tribute to his soldiers who conquered Holland, said today that the future will demonstrate the military importance of their five-day campaign.

Hitler did not mention England, but the implication was clear that he had that country in mind, since German military experts and the Nazi press have been emphasizing the proximity of the new Dutch air bases to Great Britain as one of the outstanding strategic results of the Netherlands' capitulation.

Text of Hitler's Order.

Hitler's order follows:

"Soldiers of the Dutch theater of war:

"In five days you have attacked a strong, well prepared army which stoutly defended itself behind barricades and military fortifications, seemingly almost invincible; you have eliminated its air force and finally forced it to surrender.

"You thereby achieved a performance which is unique.

"The future will demonstrate its military importance. This success became possible only through your model co-operation, through determined leadership as well as the bravery of soldiers; especially, however, through the heroic part in the face of death of the courageous parachute soldiers and the troops landed by plane.

"In the name of the German people I express thanks and my admiration."

Bergdoll Said To Know Secret Of Nazi Cannon

New York, May 15 (AP)—The solemn claim was made today that Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, notorious hoaxer and draft dodger, learned the details of a "secret German cannon" during his nineteen-year exile in Germany.

The weapon was described as capable of complete penetration of the strongest known defensive material.

It appeared likely that the United States Army was sufficiently interested in his new story to question him on the possibility that he had learned something of Nazi armament before returning here to military prison last summer.

The newest Bergdoll sensation was put into motion by his wife. From her home in Philadelphia she wrote as follows to President Roosevelt:

"He (Bergdoll) told me he knows something important about the secret cannon the Germans used in Belgium. He wants to tell this to you so you will know he knows what he is talking about, especially a new gun the Germans have."

Joseph Thomson, his present attorney, immediately attempted to visit Bergdoll at the Governors Island military lockup in New York harbor, but was refused admittance.

His former attorney, Harry Weinberger, said Bergdoll "told the War Department about it (the secret weapon) several months ago after I was convinced that he knew what he was talking about." Weinberger said ordnance officers of Fort Jay, on Governors Island, had seemed impressed by Bergdoll's working knowledge of the weapon.

TOKIO PROTESTS ANTI-JAPANESE RALLY IN LIMA

Demonstration in Peru Is Called Extremely Regrettable.

ASSURED ON EAST INDIES

Meanwhile Dutch Military Prepare for Any Eventuality in Islands.

TOKIO, May 15 (A. P.).—The Japanese Foreign Minister, Hachiro Arita, lodged a "strong" protest with the Peruvian Charge d'Affaires today against what he described as an "extremely regrettable" anti-Japanese demonstration in Lima.

A Foreign Office announcement said that the Japanese protest had been accompanied by a demand that the Lima Government assure protection of Japanese lives and property in Peru.

[Peruvians said that bands of students incited by rumored Japanese Fifth Column schemes stoned Japanese shops and restaurants in Lima on Monday. Peruvian authorities acted immediately to curb the demonstration, they said, and the Government issued a statement saying that all current stories of Japanese schemes to undermine Peruvian sovereignty were groundless rumors.]

The Netherlands Minister, J. C. Debst, notified the Japanese Foreign Office today that "in cases of extreme urgency" the Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies had been empowered to act on his own responsibility and to issue instructions to Dutch diplomatic representatives throughout the world.

Dr. Pabst assured the Foreign Office in a letter that the status of the East Indies Governor-General was otherwise unchanged, but that further extraordinary powers might be given him should communication between the islands and the Home Government, now in London, be severed.

East Indies on Guard.

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, May 15 (A. P.).—The Dutch military authorities prepared "to meet all eventualities" today as the Governor-General Tjarda Van Starkenborgh Stachouwer broadcast a proclamation announcing the laying down of arms in the Netherlands.

The Governor urged Batavians not to despair.

His broadcast was received with deep emotion. One of the first reactions was the decision of many Dutch citizens to apply for service with the Allied armies.

All native rulers and the representatives of other nations in the East Indies, including the Chinese and Arabs, declared their loyalty to Queen Wilhelmina, who will continue to rule her overseas possessions from Great Britain.

The head offices of many Dutch firms will be transferred from the Netherlands to the Indies. Shipping for Europe is at a standstill, but traffic to the United States is being carried on.

The K. L. M. (Royal Dutch) Airlines will henceforth operate their European service in conjunction with British Imperial Airways. The Dutch planes will fly from Batavia to Alexandria, Egypt, and there their passengers and cargoes will be transferred to British planes.

War-Time Budget Puts Italy a Billion in Red

ROME, May 15 (AP).—Italy's national budget, swollen by emergency expenses, will total 50,000,000,000 lire ($2,500,000,000) for the fiscal year of 1940-'41, with a deficit of $20,000,000,000 lire ($1,000,000,000), Senator Frederico Ricci told the Senate today. Ricci said this expenditure would represent 35 per cent of the national income, compared with 27 per cent in Germany and 24 per cent in England.

Senator Giuseppe Bevione, commenting on Ricci's speech, declared that "the plutocracies are deceiving themselves in supposing that the Duce's determination to break the bars of our Mediterranean imprisonment can be frustrated by the condition of our finance."

British Foreign Trade Is Greatest in Decade

LONDON, May 15 (AP).—British exports in April were valued at £48,300,000, or about $193,200,000 at the current rate of exchange, the highest monthly total since July, 1930. Imports were worth £202,986,000, or about $440,000,000, highest since October, 1929.

The Treasury has inaugurated a campaign to increase exports and hold down imports for ordinary uses in order that foreign credit may be used to purchase needed war supplies.

Counter-Espionage Is Set Up in Mexico

MEXICO CITY, May 15 (AP).—Responsible government officials said today that Mexico, seeking to forestall activity by German and Soviet Russian under-cover agents, was organizing the first bureau of military intelligence in the country's history. They said the work was being undertaken by the Defense Department, with Gen. Juan Felipe Rico, chief of the Technical Military Bureau of the War Ministry, slated to head the new division.

Monaco, Midget Nation, Is Ruled a Belligerent

Americans Mustn't Go Near Famed Gambling Casino

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP).—The Department of State has added another belligerent, the tiniest, to the growing list of warring nations—the little principality of Monaco, whose metropolis is Monte Carlo, most famous gambling center in the world. Because of the actions it has taken since the war began the infinitestimal nation, with a population of 24,000 and an area of less than one square mile, lying off the south of France on the Riviera, is ruled to be a belligerent.

The State Department, after consultat on with other departments, has therefore advised American shippers they may not send their ships to Monaco with passengers or cargo, and Americans may not go there without special authorization.

The reason is that Monaco, although an independent principality for 800 years, nevertheless feels itself tied to the fortunes of France, and has acted accordingly. Since the war began on Sept. 1 Monaco has not actually lent direct military aid to France. There is no army and the whole police force numbers only 200. But she has arrested all Germans resident there and turned them over to France for internment and has prevented any German activities, commercial or otherwise, on her soil.

PUZZLED OVER KAISER

'All Well' Message Is Not Entirely Clear.

POTSDAM, Germany, May 15 (A. P.).—Worries of the Hohenzollern family over the eighty-one-year-old head of the dynasty, former Kaiser Wilhelm, were partly relieved today by a laconic telegram from Gen. Wilhelm Dommes, chief of the Hohenzollern administration, saying: "Goal reached. All is well."

The telegram was filed in Emmerich, the border station for trains going to Holland from Koln and south Germany generally. It was thus not clear whether the Kaiser still was at Doorn in the Netherlands, where the general had been trying to reach him.

Normally trains for Utrecht and Doorn go via Bentheim. It is possible, however, that Gen. Dommes could obtain transportation only to Emmerich.

Authorized Nazi spokesmen said that they had no news concerning the former Kaiser who, they added, is not of interest to the present régime. They expressed the opinion that he still was at Doorn and would not be molested, anyway.

'Pravda' Sees U.S. at Odds With Allies in West Indies

Worried Lest Canal Be Raided From Islands, Reds Argue

MOSCOW, May 15 (AP).—The newspaper "Pravda" asserted that developments in Europe had increased the determination of the United States "to strengthen its position in the Caribbean."

American interests in the West Indies collide directly with Anglo-French interests, the paper said, adding that Washington was worried over vulnerability of the Panama Canal to air attack from the Dutch islands.

Although it was reported that Washington's permission was granted before British forces landed in the other day in the Dutch West Indies, "Pravda" said "one can hardly imagine that the United States would easily renounce its claims on the Dutch islands."

The Moscow magazine, "Literary Gazette," said: "The very rich and aggressive United States imperialism would like to be in the British boots. Overloaded with gold, the United States is feverishly arming to the teeth to make its word weighty again."

178 U. S. VESSELS SOLD

British Took 40 of Number Sent Abroad Since War Began

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP)—Some 178 United States vessels have been sold to foreigners since September, when the war began, the Maritime Commission reported today.

The major purchaser was Great Britain, which bought forty ships. Panamanian owners took thirty-six, Canadian, twenty-four; French, nineteen; Brazilian, fourteen; Greek, ten; Belgian, nine; Philippine, six, and Newfoundland, two. Other purchasers, who bought from one to three ships, were Chinese, Cuban, Estonian, Honduran, Italian, Norwegian, Colombian and Mexican.

All the craft were sold to private concerns, not to governments. None of the vessels involved was owned by the United States Government. The figures cover the period from Sept. 1 to April 30.

PRISON FOR 3 REDS

They Distributed Anti-war Leaflets in Ontario.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 15 (A. P.).—Justice Edgar Chevrier of the Ontario Supreme Court declared the Communist party of Canada today an illegal organization.

He sentenced Harry Binder, convicted of publishing and circulating anti-war pamphlets in violation of the Defenese of Canada Regulations, to three years in the penitentiary and fined him $2,000.

The judge set an additional year's imprisonment as an alternative to payment of the fine for the twenty-six-year-old former Parliamentary press gallery representative of the Clarion, a Toronto communist paper, now suppressed.

Louis Binder, 22, Harry's brother and a former private in the Royal Canadian engineers, and Arthur Roy Saunders, 27, a dominion civil servant, were sentenced to two and one-half years in the penitentiary and got a choice between an additional six months or a fine of $1,000 each.

Asserts Allied Defeat May Force U. S. To Take Over Mexico And Canada

Philadelphia, May 15 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Edward C. Shannon, former commander of the Pennsylvania National Guard, declared today that in event of an Allied defeat the United States might have "to take over" Mexico and Canada.

Speaking to a group of Pennsylvania Military College students, the retired guard leader said both Canada and Mexico present "a problem of a special nature" in view of events overseas.

"We must know the stand of the Mexicans, since they took possession of American oil concessions," he added. "Mexico would make an excellent foothold for foreign aggression.

"If the Allies should be defeated, Canada would be subject to enemy occupation. In fact, we don't know how long it may be before we will have to take over Mexico and Canada in order to protect ourselves."

U. S. Army Man Invents 'Blind Bombing' Device

Planes Can Be Out of Sight and Yet Locate Targets

BALTIMORE, May 15 (AP).—"The Sun" says a ground speed indicator for airplanes, which would make possible "blind bombing" with bombers out of sight of anti-aircraft batteries, has been invented by a young Army officer at Edgewood, Md., arsenal of the Chemical Warfare Service. The device reportedly was tested successfully last week in Chicago, and its inventor, Lieut. Bruce von G. Scott, said it recorded accurately an airplane's ground speed up to 300 miles an hour. Further tests for greater speed are under way.

Present airplanes have air speed indicators, but they do not have instruments giving the exact speed in relation to the earth. Reports of one test showed a plane's air speed indicator recorded a speed of 105 miles an hour. When the ground speed indicator was switched on the needle swung over to seventy-five miles an hour.

Lieut. Scott's invention would enable bombers to fly in weather when crews could not see the ground, for targets could be located from calculations based on the plane's speed and the time and direction of its flight. The instrument reportedly can be used on boats as well as airplanes.

How Parachutists Operate

MAY 15 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 15—The German Army's spectacular new service branch, the parachute troopers, comprises daring young men who have been trained in secret for special operatoins far beyond normal infantry practice.

Informed sources say that in recent months they were put through special training for the important part they were to play in the Lowlands campaign.

They trained and practiced in isolated districts in eastern Germany and in the "general government" area of German-occupied Poland.

These sources said varied tactics were developed for attacking fortified points, disrupting enemy reinforcements, encircling military objectives and occupying airports.

Indirectly discounting suggestions that parachute soldiers may have played a decisive part in the fall of the fort of Eben Emael, near Liege, where the Germans claimed use of a "new weapon," an air force officer told of some of the details of the parachute mode of attack.

"Ten or fifteen men spring from the plane at intervals," he said, "far enough part so their 'chutes do not tangle.

"The machine must not fly too fast or the men will be dashed against the rudders. The transport generally has a speed of 125 miles an hour. That throws the parachutists far apart. They must assemble on earth from areas of hundrers of yards. They certainly would not land in the center of a fort or close under armored turrets.

A Wonderful Target

"Besides, parachutists land slowly. After the opening of the parachute they drop at the average rate of thirteen feet a second. The customary height for jumping is 3,000 feet, so they need four minutes ten seconds to land.

"Parachutists, therefore, would be a wonderful target for fast-firing weapons."

Half a dozen pemmican sausages are among the food staples each parachutist carries. Other rations include soybeans, cranberries, dried fruit, bars of chocolate, lemon drops and two to four cans of prepared conserves of meat and vegetables.

Each man carries a box of anti-fatigue tablets with Vitamin C pills and a bag of powdered acid of wine which quenches thrist when dissolved in water.

The parachute soldier thus is provided to sustain himself at least eight days. He carries a special short-barreled firearm.

BRITISH FEAR---10,000 Nazi Raiders Ready

MAY 15 1940

By DEVON FRANCIS, Associated Press Aviation Editor

New York, May 15—The threat of imminent "total war" on England, voiced by German newspapers, was lent credence today by continuing, but unofficial and unsubstantiated, reports that the Germans have been prepared for a year to attempt seizure of the British Isles.

Stories of gigantic preparations made by the German high command—tales which a few months ago, before the invasion of the Low Countries, would have been discarded as fantastic—include the construction of 10,000 planes for the express use of an expeditionary force.

Holds England Real Enemy

To fix a time, a place and a method that the Germans would attempt to break the geographical isolation of the British Isles would be to appropriate the privilege of reading the minds of the German high command—which means the mind of Adolf Hitler.

But the stories, related by persons not given to exaggeration, persist.

They fit perfectly into the pattern of the German offensive as it has unfolded thus far. Repeatedly the German Führer has said that England is the enemy of his people. It is England which must feel the full force of German arms.

Strategy Forecast

The German strategy would seem to be the subduing of Holland, the acquisition of air bases close to England, the immobilization of British and French forces on the Continent and then a swift, decisive stroke from the air to "reduce" and capture the seat of the British Empire.

That may sound like a long gamble, but so did the invasion of Norway and the march into the Low Countries.

Ten thousand German airplanes, each carrying fighting armament, a small quota of bombs and four parachutists, could land 40,000 men in England in a space of two hours. By now the German method of seizing airdromes and using them to increase the expeditionary forces in any given area is well known.

Might Land 100,000

Even with considerable losses due to attacks by home-defense fighters and anti-aircraft fire, those original 10,000 planes, by frequent round trips, should be able to land 100,000 men in the course of a day.

The Germans have introduced a new note into aerial warfare. Airplanes are considered, like infantry, expendable. In an invasion of England, Germany would count on losses and on a sheer preponderance of numbers to achieve results.

Germany has the planes. Uncounted thousands of them are being hurled into the battle which began last Friday. Other uncounted thousands are used for reconnaissance and troop transport. It is known that of one type alone—withdrawn from competition on South American air routes because they were too slow—Germany is using hundreds to move infantrymen, forty men to a machine.

The pattern of such an attack on England likely would be an intensive bombing of highways, railroads, factories, airdromes and electric and water supply systems to soften resistance to the actual troop invasion.

Then the troop carriers, accompanied by protective fighter planes, would swoop down. How many men could be landed safely, how good a fight they could put up with the weapons of relatively low fire power they could take with them, and how spirited a defense the British could offer remain unanswered questions.

Among the many conjectures which have arisen incident to the German threat of "total war" on England is the use of new and terrible explosives by German bombers. One bomb of a particularly devastating character was used on Barcelona during the Spanish civil war.

It has not made its appearance since. The question occurs, What is it being saved for?

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE GREAT GERMAN OFFENSIVE ALONG THE LINE OF THE MEUSE RIVER IN BELGIUM HAD SWOLLEN TO HURRICANE CRESCENDO THIS MORNING, WITH THE FOCAL POINT ON THE HISTORIC BATTLEFIELD OF SEDAN, JUST INSIDE THE FRENCH BORDER AND WITHIN THE MAGINOT LINE DEFENSES.

HITLER'S WIN-ALL OR LOSE-ALL GAMBLE WAS HITTING ITS STRIDE FAST. A FEW HOURS NOW SHOULD SEE THE ALLIES AND INVADERS JOINED IN ONE OF THE CRUCIAL, IF NOT THE MOST MOMENTOUS, BATTLES OF ALL TIME.

ALREADY THE INDICATIONS ARE THAT THE SLAUGHTER HAS BEEN HEAVY. THE NAZIS ARE THROWING THEIR FORCES INTO THE ASSAULT WITH THE OLD NAPOLEONIC ABANDON.

HUMAN LIFE WON'T MEAN MUCH OVER THERE FROM NOW ON.

WORD FROM PARIS IS THAT THE ALLIED STRATEGY HAD CONTEMPLATED THE TURN WHICH EVENTS HAVE TAKEN AND THAT THE ANGLO-FRENCH PLANS PROVIDE FOR A STAND IN THE REGION WHICH HAS NOW BEEN REACHED.

MAY 15 1940

THE BATTLE LINE IS LONG AND THERE HAS BEEN BLOODY FIGHTING THROUGHOUT ITS LENGTH. IT RUNS FROM THE GREAT FORTRESSES OF LIEGE WESTWARD ALONG THE MEUSE TO THE FORTRESS OF NAMUR, THEN TURNS ABRUPTLY SOUTH ALONG THE LINE OF THE RIVER THROUGH DINANT TO SEDAN.

IT IS AT SEDAN, HOWEVER, THAT THE HITLERIAN FORCES ARE TRYING TO DRIVE A WEDGE IN THE ALLIED FRONT, FOR A BREAK THROUGH TO PARIS AND THE CHANNEL PORTS.

THIS IS A DANGEROUS OPERATION FOR THE ASSAULTING ARMY, SINCE IF IT SUCCEEDS IN BREAKING THROUGH IT MUST ROLL THE ENEMY BACK BOTH NORTH AND SOUTH AND RUN THE HEAVY RISK OF HAVING ITS OWN SPEAR-HEAD PINCHED OFF BY A COUNTER ATTACK.

30.24-2297

BUT THE FRENCH ASSERT THAT THE NAZI THRUST WAS THROWN BACK.

WORD FROM PARIS THIS MORNING BESPOKE ALLIED CONFIDENCE.

CERTAINLY I CAN REMIND THE READER THAT THE ALLIES MORE THAN ONCE IN THE WORLD WAR FACED SITUATIONS IN WHICH DEFEAT SEEMED INEVITABLE --BUT THEY LIVED TO FIGHT ANOTHER DAY. ALL OF WHICH IS BY WAY OF SAYING THAT A BATTLE NEVER IS WON OR LOST UNTIL THE WHITE FLAG IS RUN UP.

THE DUTCH THIS MORNING WERE STILL STRUGGLING TO HOLD THE PROVINCE OF ZEELAND IN THE SOUTHWEST CORNER OF THEIR LITTLE COUNTRY, BUT THE SURRENDER OF THEIR TROOPS IN THE REST OF THE NETHERLANDS WAS COMPLETE AND QUITE EXPECTED. THEY COULDN'T HOPE TO HOLD OUT LONG AGAINST THE OVERWHELMING STRENGTH OPPOSED TO THEM.

ZEELAND PRESUMABLY IS BEING HELD AS A PROTECTION TO THE IMPORTANT BELGIAN CITY OF ANTWERP JUST TO THE SOUTH. IF THE GERMANS OVERRUN ZEELAND IT MUST BE EXPECTED THAT THEY ALSO WILL GET ANTWERP.

NAZI OCCUPATION OF THE DUTCH COAST RAISES A GRAVE THREAT AGAINST BRITAIN. THE NAZIS NOW WILL HAVE AIRPORTS CLOSE TO ENGLAND FOR THE ATTACK WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN THREATENING. A NAZI RADIO ANNOUNCER FOR INSTANCE TODAY BOASTED THAT GERMAN PLANES NOW ARE LESS THAN 125 MILES AWAY FROM THE IMPORTANT PORT OF HARWICH.

THE BRITISH ALREADY ARE ORGANIZING DEFENSE AGAINST A POSSIBLE PARACHUTE LANDING IN ENGLAND. THEIR GRAVEST DANGER, HOWEVER, IS TO THEIR EAST PORTS AND SHIPPING WHICH NOW WILL BE LAID OPEN TO THE NAZI BOMBERS, EXCEPT FOR THE BRITISH AIR FLEET AND ANTI-AIRCRAFT DEFENSES.

MANY OF ENGLAND'S SUPPLIES COME IN THROUGH THESE PORTS.

MAY 15 1940

ESPECIALLY LONDON. AND THEIR TROOP REINFORCEMENTS AND MILITARY SUPPLIES FOR FRANCE MUST CROSS THE CHANNEL.

THE OCCUPATION OF HOLLAND OBVIOUSLY IS A POTENTIAL THREAT TO THE ALLIED BLOCKADE.

I WONDER HOW MANY OF US HAVE PAUSED TO CONSIDER AS THIS CRUCIAL BATTLE HAS ROLLED UP ACROSS THE CHANGING MAP OF EUROPE THAT THE ALLIED CAUSE DEPENDS IN LARGE DEGREE ON THE QUICKNESS OF DECISION AND FAR-SIGHTEDNESS OF A STOCKY LITTLE MAN OF SIXTY-SEVEN WHOSE LACK OF PERSONAL SHOWMANSHIP HAS KEPT HIM IN THE BACKGROUND WHERE HE LIKES TO BE.

MAY 15 1940

HE'S THE FRENCHMAN, MAURICE GAMELIN, ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST SPECIALISTS ON WAR AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF ALL THE ALLIED FORCES.

GAMELIN--UNEMOTIONAL, QUIET, METHODICAL, TENACIOUS, POSSESSOR OF A PRODIGIOUS MEMORY, AND NATURAL BORN MILITARY TACTICIAN.

GAMELIN--KINDLY, SIMPLE OF TASTE, WHOSE IDEA OF AN ENJOYABLE EVENING IS TO SPEND IT IN THE QUIET OF HIS OWN HOME READING (WHAT DO YOU GUESS?), PHILOSOPHY.

HE'S THE ALLIED MAN OF THE HOUR.

THAT'S NOT A NEW ROLE FOR HIM, HOWEVER, AND THE STORY IS WORTH REPEATING HERE AS THE GUNFIRE SWELLS ALONG THE MEUSE.

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY AGO, NOT FAR REMOVED FROM THE PRESENT SCENE OF BLOODSHED THE FRENCH WERE MAKING A LAST DITCH STAND BEFORE THE GATES OF PARIS TO STEM THE SEEMINGLY INVINCIBLE RUSH OF THE GERMAN HORDES AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WORLD WAR. GAMELIN, THEN A MAJOR IN HIS DAPPER FORTIES, WAS ONE OF FRENCH COMMANDER JOFFRE'S CHIEF AIDES.

IN THE DARKEST MOMENT OF THIS CRISIS THE QUICK MIND OF GAMELIN DETECTED A WEAKNESS IN THE GERMAN POSITION AND RECOMMENDED AN IMMEDIATE ATTACK. JOFFRE TRUSTED HIS MAN. THE ATTACK WAS MADE. THE INVADERS WERE DEFEATED AND THROWN BACK, AND THE ENTIRE COURSE OF THE WAR WAS CHANGED, FOR GAMELIN HAD TURNED THE GERMAN STRATEGY TOPSY-TURVY.

WHILE MANY PEOPLE FLOUNDERED AMONG HIGH SOUNDING DESIGNATIONS IN AN EFFORT TO FIND A NAME FOR THIS EPIC BATTLE, LITTLE GAMELIN QUIETLY NAMED IT HIMSELF. HE CALLED IT "THE BATTLE OF THE MARNE."

MAY 15 1940

NEW YORK, MAY 15-(AP)-GERMANY'S INVASION OF NORWAY, DENMARK, BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS INCREASED THE ALLIED MERCHANT FLEET BY 50 PERCENT AND SET THE STAGE FOR THE WORST DISRUPTION OF TRADE IN THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

ROUGHLY SPEAKING, THE ALLIES WERE HANDED ABOUT 5,000 SHIPS WITH TOTAL GROSS TONNAGE OF AROUND 10,000,000 TONS. BEFORE THE WAR FRANCE AND ENGLAND HAD A COMBINED MERCHANT FLEET OF ABOUT 10,200 SHIPS OF 23,000,000 TONS.

THEIR LOSSES OF APPROXIMATELY 250 SHIPS HAVE BEEN OFFSET BY NEW VESSELS, THE PURCHASING OF OLD SHIPS AND THE CAPTURE OF GERMAN SHIPS.

IN ADDITION, THE ALLIES NOW HAVE CONTROL OF THE SMALL BUT MODERNIZED DUTCH NAVY.

GERMANY, PARALYZED ON THE SEA BY THE BRITISH BLOCKADE, HAD ABOUT 2,500 MERCHANT SHIPS BEFORE THE WAR. MANY WERE LAID UP IN NEUTRAL HARBORS AND THE ONLY TRADE ROUTE LEFT OPEN TO THE NAZIS IS THE BALTIC SEA.

EXTENSION OF THE CONFLICT TO PREVIOUSLY NEUTRAL COUNTRIES CUT OFF THEIR TRADE TO SUCH AN EXTENT THAT ENGLAND HAS CLOSED THREE CONTRABAND CONTROL STATIONS IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

ASSOCIATED PRESS AVIATION EDITOR

NEW YORK, MAY 15--ENGLAND HAS TAKEN ELABORATE PRECAUTIONS FOR THE PROTECTION OF ITS CIVIL POPULATION IN THE EVENT OF "TOTAL WAR," NOW BEING THREATENED BY THE GERMAN PRESS, BUT HOW WELL BRITISH AIRCRAFT FACTORIES CAN BE GUARDED FROM DESTRUCTION MAY WELL BE THE ANSWER TO AIR SUPERIORITY.

ON AIR SUPERIORITY GERMANY OBVIOUSLY IS COUNTING TO PROVIDE THE FULCRUM FOR A SWIFT AND IRREVOCABLE DECISION IN THIS WAR.

BRITISH ISLES CARRIES THE THREAT OF DESTRUCTION OF THOSE FACTORIES, VITAL TO CONTINUED AIR ATTACKS BY THE ALLIES ON GERMAN LINES OF COMMUNICATION, TROOPS AND BASES OF SUPPLY. THEY ARE JUST AS VITAL, OF COURSE, TO AIR DEFENSE.

TOTAL WAR WOULD BRING RETALIATORY RAIDS, BUT THE RELATIVELY COMPACT BRITISH AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY WOULD OFFER AN EASIER TARGET TO GERMAN AIRMEN THAN GERMANY'S INDUSTRY WOULD TO BRITISH AIRMEN. THAT, IN SPITE OF THE "SHADOW SYSTEM" WHICH TWO YEARS AGO BROUGHT ABOUT A DISPERSION OF BRITISH PLANTS.

A CIRCLE WITH A RADIUS OF 150 MILES WOULD COVER THE BRITISH AIRCRAFT FACTORY SYSTEM. IN ROCHESTER, SOUTHAMPTON, LONDON, LIVERPOOL AND BIRMINGHAM ARE SOME OF THE MOST IMPORTANT PLANTS. A FEW UNITS ARE IN YORKSHIRE, ROUGHLY 150 MILES NORTHWEST OF LONDON.

EACH PLANT IN THE WIDELY SCATTERED GERMAN SYSTEM IS, UNLIKE THE BRITISH, A SELF-CONTAINED MANUFACTURING UNIT.

FRENCH AICCRAFT PRODUCTION UP TO NOW HAS BEEN ONLY A FRACTION OF THAT NEEDED FOR ACTIVE AIR WARFARE. THE FULL FORCE OF AMERICAN AIRPLANE OUTPUT FOR THE ALLIES WILL NOT BE FELT FOR SEVERAL MONTHS. IT NATURALLY FOLLOWS THAT IF THE NAZIS CAN SERIOUSLY DISLOCATE BRITISH PRODUCTION, THEY WILL HAVE TAKEN A LONG STEP TOWARD VICTORY ON THE PATTERN THEY HAVE BEEN FOLLOWING.

FOR HOME DEFENSE AGAINST AIR RAIDS THE BRITISH HAVE INTERCEPTOR PURSUIT SQUADRONS OF UNKNOWN STRENGTH AND ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERIES. FOR PROTECTION AGAINST PARACHUTE TROOPS, WHICH WOULD BE EXPECTED TO WREAK HAVOC WITH COMMUNICATION LINES, FACTORIES AND PUBLIC UTILITIES, THE TERRITORIALS (SIMILAR TO OUR NATIONAL GUARD) ARE BEING STRENGTHENED BY THE ADDITION OF CIVILIAN VOLUNTEERS.

FOR THE PASSIVE DEFENSE OF CIVILIANS, AIR RAID PROTECTION DEVICES DESIGNED TO WITHSTAND A RAIN OF 300 TONS OF BOMBS EACH 24 HOURS HAVE BEEN BUILT. IN ALL OF THE WAR OF 1914-18 NOT 300 TONS OF BOMBS WERE DROPPED BY GERMAN PLANES AND ZEPPELINS.

MAY 13 1940

THE POPULACE HAS BEEN WARNED THAT A 500-POUND SEMI-ARMOR PIERCING BOMB "WILL GO THROUGH ANY BUILDING IN LONDON FROM ROOF TO CELLAR," AND THAT A SHELTER 60 FEET BELOW THE GROUND LEVEL IS NECESSARY FOR SAFETY FROM IT.

THE "PROBABLE CASUALTIES" HAVE EVEN BEEN ANNOUNCED. THEY WOULD RUN, SAY BRITISH EXPERTS, FROM 16 TO 20 PERSONS TO THE TON OF BOMBS.

UNDATED FIRE WARFARE

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MAY 15 1940

REPORTED USE OF FLAME-THROWING TANKS AGAINST FRENCH TROOPS IN THE BATTLE OF THE MEUSE, AS CHARGED IN DISPATCHES FROM PARIS TODAY, REPRESENTS IF TRUE A NEW DEVELOPMENT IN WARFARE.

TECHNICALLY, SOME DOUBT EXISTS AS TO APPLICATION OF THE SO-CALLED LAWS OF "CIVILIZED" FIGHTING AS LAID DOWN IN SUCH INTERNATIONAL DOCUMENTS AS THE HAGUE WAR REGULATIONS OF 1907, THE GENEVA PROTOCOL OF 1925 OR THE WASHINGTON TREATY OF 1922.

WHETHER THE LIQUID FIRE OF FLAME-THROWERS WOULD COME UNDER THE

SUBHEAD OF "ASPHYXIATING GASES" OR "ANALAGOUS LIQUIDS" WAS NOT SPECIFICALLY STATED.

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA BRITANNICA, COMMENTING ON THE WORLD WAR, DECLARES:

"NEW METHODS OF WARFARE WERE ADOPTED WHICH CONSTITUTED A FLAGRANT BREACH OF THE ACCEPTED LAWS AND CUSTOMS OF WAR.

"AMONGST SUCH MEANS WAS THE EMPLOYMENT OF POISONOUS AND ASPHYXIATING GASES AND OF LIQUID FIRE."

THE GENEVA PROTOCOL EXTENDED FORMER PROHIBITIONS TO INCLUDE BACTERIOLOGICAL METHODS.

THE USE OF FIRE IN WARFARE DATES BACK TO MEDIEVAL TIMES. A GREEK ARCHITECT NAMED KALLINIKOS IS CREDITED WITH INTRODUCING A SECRET FORMULA "SEA FIRE" WHICH DESTROYED THE MOSLEM FLEET AT THE SIEGE OF CONSTANTINOPLE IN 668--1272 YEARS AGO.

THE "SEA FIRE," DISCHARGED FROM TUBES IN THE BOWS OF SHIPS, WAS SUPPOSEDLY MADE OF NAPHTHA, QUICKLIME AND SULPHUR.

IT WAS NOT UNTIL THE WORLD WAR, HOWEVER, THAT MAN DEVISED MECHANICAL FLAME-THROWERS FOR LAND WARFARE.

TAKING THE ALLIES BY SURPRISE, THE GERMANS UNLEASHED A FLAME ATTACK ON FRONT-LINE TROOPS AT 3:20 A.M. ON JULY 29, 1915. ONLY ONE ALLIED SOLDIER IN THE AREA WAS KNOWN TO HAVE SURVIVED.

ITALY REPORTEDLY USED FLAME-THROWERS IN CONQUERING EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE'S WILD WARRIORS IN ETHIOPIA IN 1936.

BUT UNTIL YESTERDAY, FLAME SPURTED FROM TANKS WAS UNKNOWN. HERETOFORE, THE PROJECTORS--A CYLINDRICAL STEEL VESSEL TWO FEET IN HEIGHT, 15 INCHES IN DIAMETER, FED BY OIL AND FIRED BY NITROGEN WERE ALWAYS CARRIED ON A MAN'S BACK AND THE FIERY BLAST SPRAYED FROM A NOZZLE LIKE A GARDEN HOSE.

HARD-WORKING DUTCH HAVE APPLIED THEIR SUPERB METHODS OF ADMINISTRATION, TRANSPLANTED THEIR COMFORTABLE STANDARD OF LIVING, TRANSMUTED THEIR FREE-THINKING.

THEIR LAND DEFENSES ARE MANNED BY SOME 63,000 DUTCH AND NATIVE REGULARS, RESERVISTS AND CIVILIAN MILITIAMEN; THERE ARE THREE MODERN NAVAL CRUISERS AND ONE OLD ONE; A DOZEN DESTROYERS; 18 SUBMARINES AND PERHAPS A COUPLE OF HUNDRED PLANES, MOST OF THEM AMERICAN MADE.

OIL REFINING, HEAVILY BACKED WITH AMERICAN CAPITAL, IS THE WORK OF CURACAO, AND ALLIED FORCES HAVE LANDED ON THE MAIN ISLANDS, CURACAO AND ARUBA, TO PREVENT SABOTAGE.

THE WARES OF THE MAINLAND COLONY, DUTCH GUIANA, SNUGGLED BETWEEN THE GUIANAN COLONIES OF BRITAIN AND FRANCE, ARE THINGS LIKE SUGAR, COCOA, BANANAS AND COFFEE.

SO MUCH FOR FIGURES. WHAT DO THESE ISLANDS ON TWO SIDES OF THE GLOBE MEAN TO THE NATIONS?

TO THE HOMELESS NETHERLANDS QUEEN, WILHELMINA, HER GOVERNMENT AND HER BOMBED TERRIFIED PEOPLE, THEY ARE THE HOPES OF POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC SURVIVAL, A BASIS FOR THE NEW NETHERLANDS THAT THE QUEEN EXPECTS TO ARISE, "WITH GOD'S HELP", WHEN THE WORLD ONCE MORE IS AT PEACE.

IN LONDON WITH THE GOVERNMENT, THE QUEEN HAS EMPOWERED THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF THE EAST INDIES TO ACT ON HIS OWN RESPONSIBILITY AND SUPERVISE DUTCH DIPLOMATS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD IF NECESSARY. SEVERAL OF HOLLAND'S LARGEST INDUSTRIAL AND TRADING FIRMS, WHICH DO BUSINESS EVERYWHERE, ARE PREPARED TO MOVE THEIR HEADQUARTERS TO THE EAST INDIES. DUTCH AIR AND STEAMSHIP LINES ARE REORGANIZING TO CONCENTRATE ON THE PACIFIC POSSESSIONS.

WITH THE PROTECTIVE HELP OF FRENCH AND BRITISH MARINES, THE DUTCH WEST INDIES CONTINUE UNDER DUTCH COLONIAL RULE.

JAPAN IS THE BIG QUESTION MARK IN THE EAST. WITH SOMETHING APPROACHING CLAIRVOYANCE, THE JAPANESE LET IT BE KNOWN JUST A MONTH AGO THAT SHE COULD NOT STAND WITH FOLDED ARMS IF DUTCH INVOLVEMENT IN THE EUROPEAN WAR SHOULD CHANGE THE "STATUS" OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL OF THE UNITED STATES LOOKED WITH SUDDEN CONCERN UPON THIS THE NEXT DAY, DECLARING THAT ANY OUTSIDE INTERFERENCE IN THE INDIES "WOULD BE PREJUDICIAL TO THE CAUSE OF STABILITY, PEACE AND SECURITY IN THE ENTIRE PACIFIC AREA."

THE DUTCH, STILL STRICTLY NEUTRAL THEN, WARILY ANNOUNCED THEY WANTED NO EAST INDIAN "PROTECTION" FROM ANYONE.

ONCE IN THE WAR, THE DUTCH SAID THIS WITH FERVOR AGAIN; BRITAIN AND FRANCE GAVE ASSURANCES THEY WOULD NOT INTERFERE IN THE ISLANDS; JAPAN SAID SHE WAS SATISFIED WITH THESE PROMISES "FOR THE PRESENT," BUT WOULDN'T BE CAUGHT UNAWARES BY ANY "UNTOWARD EVENTS."

JAPAN'S INTEREST IN THE ISLANDS IS THE FACT THAT THEY PRODUCE ENOUGH OIL, TIN AND RUBBER TO RUN HER INDUSTRIAL MACHINE AND HER WAR MACHINE, TOO. HER TRADE WITH THE ISLANDS, MOREOVER, IS NORMALLY BIGGER THAN WITH ALL LATIN AMERICA AND THE 70,000,000 DUTCH EAST INDIANS, UNDER PRESSURE, COULD ABSORB EVEN MORE.

ASIDE FROM THE AMERICAN INVESTMENT, AMERICA IS INTERESTED IN THE EAST INDIES OF HOLLAND BECAUSE THEY LIE, AT THEIR SOUTHERNMOST POINT,

MAY 15 1946

ONLY A FEW MILES FROM THE PHILIPPINES, FOR WHICH THIS COUNTRY STILL TAKES RESPONSIBILITY.

IN THESE DAYS OF SWIFTLY PROGRESSIVE WAR, FROM THE PHILIPPINES TO GUAM AND THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS, OUR OUTPOSTS OF DEFENSE IN MID-PACIFIC, MIGHT BE ONLY QUICK STEPS. THE AMERICAN NAVY IS STAYING IN THE PACIFIC, JUST NOW.

YET, IF NOT AS IMPORTANT IMMEDIATELY, THE WEST INDIES ARE MUCH CLOSER HOME TO THE UNITED STATES. THEY LIE OFF THE NORTHERN COAST OF SOUTH AMERICA, IN THE SHELTER OF THE WINDWARDS AND LEEWARDS, NOT MUCH MORE THAN 400 MILES FROM PUERTO RICO, THE NEW AMERICAN MALTA.

THEY ARE LITTLE MAGNETS FOR THE WAR THAT ALREADY HAS SCORCHED THE COAST OF LATIN AMERICA.

FOR BRITAIN THE EAST INDIES ARE VITAL. THEY ARE ALMOST AS IMPORTANT TO HER ALLY, FRANCE.

THE BRITISH AND DUTCH JOINTLY CONTROL THE ISLANDS' OIL INDUSTRY AND COOPERATE CLOSELY IN THE REGULATION OF TIN, RUBBER AND SUGAR PRODUCTION.

THEY ARE FLANKS OF THE BRITISH LIFELINE TO AUSTRALIA AND NEW ZEALAND, AND SUMATRA IS ONLY A FEW MILES ACROSS THE STRAITS OF MALACCA FROM SINGAPORE, ENGLAND'S NAVAL AND MILITARY BASTION IN THE FAR EAST.

FRANCE TAKES MORE THAN HALF OF THE DUTCH EAST INDIES' OIL--AND THE ISLANDS ARE BUT 550 MILES FROM FRANCE'S MOST VALUABLE COLONIAL POSSESSION, INDO-CHINA.

SINCE BRITAIN FORMALLY RECOGNIZED NETHERLANDS CLAIMS TO THE GREATER PART OF THE EAST INDIAN ARCHIPELAGO AFTER THE NAPOLEONIC WARS, DUTCH AUTHORITY THERE HAS NOT BEEN SERIOUSLY CHALLENGED.

THE MOTHER COUNTRY, HERSELF, WAS NOT INVADED FOR 145 YEARS--UNTIL LAST WEEK.

TODAY'S PATTERN FOR WAR IS PRESENT IN THE DUTCH EAST INDIES. HERE, TOO, ARE THE "FIFTH COLUMN" AND "TROJAN HORSE" DANGERS. THERE ARE 7,300 GERMANS, AND UNCOUNTED DUTCH NAZI SYMPATHIZERS WHO MIGHT, IN CASE OF INVASION, RISE UP AND HELP THE AGGRESSOR, OR CREATE THE EXCUSE FOR INVASION AS A "PROTECTIVE MEASURE."

IT HAPPENED IN FINLAND, IN NORWAY, IN DENMARK, IN BELGIUM, IN HOLLAND.

JAPAN IS 2,200 MILES FROM THE NEAREST DUTCH ISLAND, BUT JAPAN HAS USEFUL NAVAL BASES IN FORMOSA, 1,650 MILES FROM THE INDIES AND IS BELIEVED TO BE PREPARING A SUBMARINE BASE IN THE FORMER CHINESE ISLAND OF HAINAN, 550 MILES SOUTH OF FORMOSA, AND SUPPLY STATIONS IN THE SOUTH CHINA SEA ISLANDS OF SPRATTLEY, 600 MILES FROM THE DUTCH POSSESSIONS.

PREMIER OF FRANCE CONCEDES PERIL, BUT SEDAN GENERAL CLAIMS MASTERY

British, Occupying Environs of Louvain, Engage in Duel With Enemy Artillery Outside City—R. A. F. Looses Allies' Heaviest Air Attack in Belgium

MAY 17 1940

By the Associated Press.

A dispatch from Paris tonight described the situation as follows:

"France faced tonight what her Premier, Paul Reynaud, openly proclaimed to be 'peril' after the German break through the Allied line in the Battle of the Meuse.

"The Allied command, its positions and tactics changed, threw tanks and planes into a wide open war of movement, in a (here one word was censored) effort to turn the tide of battle (twenty-seven words censored).

"A war office spokesman, while describing hard French counter-attacks from the air and denying that the Germans had reached Reims or Laon, fifty and sixty miles from Sedan, admitted the German motorized columns had penetrated deeply into France from the Sedan sector.

"However, the General in immediate command of the sector north of Sedan where the Germans broke through reported to general headquarters the French were 'masters of the situation' and would regain complete control of their front within a week.

"News of the action on the long battle line was extremely meager, details being withheld for the sake of 'higher interests', in the words of the French command.

"The Germans were meeting tremendous resistance in pushing on through the three gaps they opened in the Namur-Sedan lines yesterday, on the west bank of the Meuse.

"On the northern extension of this line, from Namur through Gembloux, just east of Louvain and thence northwest to Antwerp—a line shielding both Brussels and the channel ports of Belgium—fighting also was general, and, again, details were very sparse.

"On the line of the southeast of Sedan, through Montmedy, Longwy and along the Franco-German frontier to the Vosges Mountains, the principal action was described as artillery duels between opposing fortifications."

Germans Heading for Channel.

From Berlin tonight came this report: "German armies were massed tonight in the Dyle River sector—from Antwerp south to Namur—for a fast-moving drive aimed at the strategic channel ports and a hopping off place for direct attacks upon Britain. The German right wing was being strengthened to perfect the Von Schlieffen plan for a wide assault—to turn France's northern flank—in what may be the 'battle of the ages.'

"DNB, the official news agency, said that 'several million of the best equipped soldiers are facing each other in this area.' Reports from the front further gave the impression of an imminent attack."

British Troops Push Into Louvain.

Meanwhile the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, in three counter-attacks, ousted from Louvain the German troops driving toward Brussels. The British held the environs of the city and exchanged artillery fire with the Germans in the country beyond.

The situation from Antwerp to Sedan was admittedly serious for the Allies; the details were so confused that no clear picture was obtained.

Armored units, cutting loose from their infantry, fought furiously on the fifty-mile line from Namur to Sedan and were reported to have penetrated the Allied lines in Belgium to a "considerable depth."

Meanwhile the Royal Air Force launched the greatest Allied bombing attack of the war so far. Tons of explosives were dropped east of the Rhine and on German troop concentrations in Belgium.

MAY 17 1940

By DREW MIDDLETON.

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN BELGIUM (Passed by Field Censor), May 16 (A. P.).—Hand-to-hand fighting of the fiercest kind swept through the sun-splashed streets of Louvain this morning as picked troops counter-attacked three times to throw out Germans who had gained a foothold on the eastern fringe of the town.

In the late afternoon the British were busily digging in after a day of furious combat in which an early German advantage had been overcome by three furious attacks by the British infantry.

The Germans had withdrawn outside the town and the artillery of both armies was busy—the Germans shelling the British position in the environs and the B. E. F.'s guns hurling metal over the town into the German lines in the country behind it.

Louvain is sixteen miles east of Brussels and was destroyed in 1914 by the German steamroller in the world war. Its famous library was rebuilt with pennies donated by American school children.

I watched the battle through glasses from three miles away and was able to see the towers of the library and City Hall rising serenely through the pall of smoke that hung over the city.

Despite the heavy shelling and bombing, the core of the city is still almost intact, although entire blocks on the outskirts are in ruins.

Among the last to leave Louvain were the sisters of the Convent of Pauvre Claire Colletine, who were taken out in British trucks.

One of the sisters told me:

"The Germans are near the railroad station and the noise of battle and shouts of men have been terrible."

She declared that the library and City Hall still were intact.

Irish Regiment Attacked.

Action started last night when, after a preliminary artillery exchange of some intensity, the Germans attacked behind a skirmish line or armored cars. The first thrust was at companies of the Irish regiment holding the strategically placed railroad station.

Despite furious fire of rifles and anti-tank and machine guns, they began to consolidate a new line.

The first British counter-attack came at dawn. It was followed by a second and then a third, which shook the Germans loose from dearly won positions and pitched them headlong across the railroad track.

Companies sifted through the streets in the hot sun and smashed the German positions as much by superior rifle fire as by anything else, according to officers who watched the action.

Lived Up to Traditions.

"They lived up to traditions; I need not say more," one officer said.

Roads leading to Louvain from the east were mined heavily and the British then plastered them with shells and bombs.

It was believed that this contributed greatly to the German failure to hold the railroad depot—and command of the city—for the invaders were evidently having trouble in bringing up ammunition.

Elsewhere along the long front the British were holding well, despite German shelling and bombing intermittently by dive bombers.

The air activity was mild compared with that of other days, as most of the German planes were believed concentrated around Sedan in France.

The population of Brussels and nearby villages started to leave last night and today the roads leading out of the city were rivers of misery and suffering.

MAY 17 1940

LONDON, May 16 (A. P.).—The Royal Air Force has unleashed its greatest bombing attack on military objectives in Germany, east of the Rhine and has thrown its power into the Belgian fighting with extensive attacks on Nazi concentrations and communication lines.

"Many tons of bombs were released in attacks that lasted throughout the night," the Air Ministry said.

The thrust apparently was a follow up after a blasting attack by 150 explosive-laden warplanes yesterday when the German lines converging on the Meuse River at Sedan in France were the target.

That fleet was said then to have been the largest of any massed by the Allies for a single raid and, according to the British Air Ministry, it helped slow up the German drive in the Meuse-Sedan sector.

Belgian fortresses of Liege and Namur, although apparently isolated, still are holding out, a British military commentator said today.

[The Germans have announced the capture of the Liege citadel and other forts at Liege and Namur.]

The Dutch are still fighting in Zeeland, the southwestern corner of their country, he asserted. They destroyed practically all the fuel oil at Amsterdam and Rotterdam before capitulating, he said, to keep it from falling into German hands.

Heavy Nazi Losses Claimed.

"The toll inflicted on enemy aircraft is working out at more than three to one in our favor," the British Air Ministry said tonight of fighting on the western front.

Amplifying a previous announcement of British air raids on German objectives last night, the ministry said that bombers had caused extensive damage over a wide area.

A military encampment, railway crossings and an important autobahn (a wide, highspeed highway) were among the objectives attacked. It said that "the largest force of R. A. F. bombers yet employed in a single operation" had attacked by moonlight, aided by "many previous reconnaissances."

"The majority found and bombed their targets with great effect causing widespread damage and many explosions and fires," it said adding that heavy Whitly, Wellington and Hampden bombers were used.

Battle Rages in Louvain

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN BELGIUM (Passed by Field Censor), May 16 (A. P.).—Picked British troops assaulted German positions in the eastern edge of Louvain three times today and, by furious hand-to-hand fighting and rifle fire, threw the Germans back across the railroad tracks.

MAY 17 1940

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch commented that the British troops were likely to abandon their unprepared positions near Louvain for stronger lines.

Tonight German shells were ripping into British positions at the edge of the town, and British metal was shrieking over its towers at the German artillery as the ancient university town once again became the objective of warring armies.

The action started last night when, after an artillery duel, the Germans attacked behind a skirmish line of armored cars. The first thrust was directed at companies of an Irish regiment holding the strategically situated railroad station. The Avenue des Allies (formerly Rue de la Station) leads straight from the station to the center of the town.

The Irish infantrymen met the German assault with furious rifle, anti-tank and machine-gun fire, but the Germans prevailed and carried the important position which commands the city.

The first British counter-attack struck them at early dawn. It was followed by another attack and still another, the last forcing the Germans to retire from a dearly won position and retreat across the railroad beyond the town.

Officers reported British troops who sifted through the sun-splashed streets smashed the German positions as much by superior rifle fire as anything else, although the Germans evidently had some difficulty in bringing up ammunition. Their communication lines ran along roads leading to Louvain from the east which were heavily mined and on which the British then laid a curtain of shells and bombs.

Nazis Report Capital Moved

A Berlin broadcast, recorded yesterday in the New York Herald Tribune radio room, quoted Geneva diplomatic quarters as saying the Belgian capital had been moved from Brussels to Ghent. Confirmation of the report was impossible, according to the broadcast, because telephone communication between Geneva and Brussels had been interrupted.

French Army's Night Report

PARIS, May 16 (A. P.).—A War Ministry spokesman said tonight that the Germans were under heavy counter-attack by French air forces.

He declared that the Nazi columns would be "rounded up quickly" and denied emphatically that the Germans had reached Laon and Reims, fifty miles southwest of Sedan, as has been rumored.

The French night communique said:

"The battle continues in general with the same importance.

MAY 17 1940

"Very spirited engagements have taken place at certain points.

"Our bombardment aviation, protected by pursuit planes, effected with success attacks executed vigorously against enemy armored columns detected by our scouting aviation."

A short while earlier Premier Reynaud had told the cheering Chamber of Deputies that France would defeat Germany's one desperate push to the west.

He warned, however, that "we will be called to take measures which in other times would have seemed revolutionary."

M. Reynaud, broadcasting to the nation tonight, denied rumors that the Government was leaving Paris, that the Germans had reached Reims or that the invaders were using "new and irresistible arms."

"The enemy has succeeded only in crossing the Meuse and opening a large pocket which our valiant troops are cleaning up," he said.

Meuse Battle Is Confused.

The spokesman said that the front from Sedan eastward along the Luxemburg border and the French-German frontier was relatively calm during the day.

But the fighting on the Meuse front, where thousands of warplanes and tanks clashed in an unprecedented battle of movement, involved a situation so serious and confused that the High Command withheld all but the barest details.

A general melee ensued along the fifty-mile front from Namur, in Belgium, to Sedan, in northern France—scene of the fiercest German attacks—with armored units from both sides cutting loose from their infantry and plunging boldly forward to strike the enemy from the rear.

The main battle line on the seventh day of the lowland invasion extended from near Antwerp, twenty-eight miles north of Brussels, southward to Sedan, in France, on the fringe of the famed Maginot Line. A second battlefront runs on from Sedan through Montmedy and Longwy along the Franco-Prussian border to the Vosges. In this area, the fighting was characterized principally by artillery duels between opposing fortifications.

Nazis Using Selan as a Pivot.

In the Selan region itself, the French claimed that the Germans were blocked in an attempt to deepen a pocket they had driven into northern France yesterday.

The Germans apparently are trying to widen that front at the south with a spearhead pointed deeper into France, while at the same time using the Sedan region as a pivot for swinging the whole front like a door through Belgium and into northeastern France.

Allied reports indicated that on one sector of the front between Namur and Sedan the Germans had dented the Allied lines near Sedan; that French troops were holding fast on the east side of that dent, but that on the west side the situation "is obscure and fluid."

Action was reported proceeding on that section of the front between Antwerp and Namur, but details were lacking. East of the battle line the forts of Namur and Liege were reported still resisting.

To the north all of the Netherlands has capitulated except the province of Zeeland. Northwest of Antwerp heavy fighting was reported.

Striking at French Rear.

Below Sedan the front runs southeast in the vicinity of France's border with Belgium, German-conquered Luxemburg and Germany. The German High Command reported that its forces had closed in yesterday toward the Maginot Line along the German-French border west of Saarlautern, almost 100 miles southeast of Sedan and near Lauterburg, close to the Rhine, 150 miles southeast of Sedan.

A War Ministry spokesman said that the enemy, flinging armored shock troops far ahead of the main body between Sedan and Namur, was striking at the rear of the French forces in an effort to cut them off.

A great battle is progressing and the situation is serious, he declared. However, the French remained confident of their ability to restore control of a situation which at the moment is admittedly very confused.

Anti-aircraft batteries around Paris went into action again this morning, but there were no air raid alarms and no immediate reports of any incidents.

Six alarms were sounded during the night in the region of Lille, just inside the French border and sixty miles west of Brussels, and two today in the area of Le Havre, the French channel port. It was not disclosed immediately whether any bombs were dropped here, but German raids on Nancy, south of Sedan and forty miles inside the Franco-German frontier, killed and wounded an undisclosed number of persons and caused nine air raid alarms during the night.

Mechanized Open Warfare.

The battle of the Meuse developed meanwhile into mechanized open warfare with such tremendous impact as to cause the French High Command, in a cryptic communique, to withhold today all details "for the sake of the higher interests" of the operations.

The communique said only that the battle "is taking on the characteristics of open warfare, with participation on both sides by motorized units and aviation."

"These higher interests of the conduct of operations," the communique added, "compel us not to give at the present moment any precise information as to the actions now taking place."

Fight Speed With Speed.

It became apparent that the German Army, slowed down by fierce counter-attacks at Sedan, was crashing headlong into Allied warfare of the Nazis' own style and that a great battle of movement roared on along the Meuse.

That was the picture of the conflict to be pieced together in Paris.

Germany's vaunted war of speed and flexibility, the Blitzkrieg that destroyed Poland, was adopted by the French to meet the thrusts of Nazi tanks on the fifty-mile line from Sedan to Namur.

When German troops were halted in the Sedan sector by French counter-attacks, the onrushing Nazi tanks had succeeded in battering their way across the Meuse at three points.

Pushed back by strafing planes and powerful tanks, the French infantry had given way.

Then the defending lines reformed to hold off the Nazi infantry rushing into three gaps in the Meuse line.

At the same time French tanks closed in behind the lines to engage those of the enemy that had broken through.

The decision of the French High Command to fight speed with speed meant that it had abandoned, at least for the moment, any plan to fight a war of position in the line of concrete pill boxes built on the Belgian frontier as a northwesterly extension of France's Maginot Line.

The Belgians told of several infantry engagements which checked German attempts to advance, of demolitions which hampered seriously the movements of the Reichwehr, and of stiff and effective defense against German war planes.

Today the French infantry clung to new positions after counter-attacks which, according to the Paris War Ministry, had driven back across the river the Germans who had punched a ten-mile salient into French territory south of Sedan the day before yesterday.

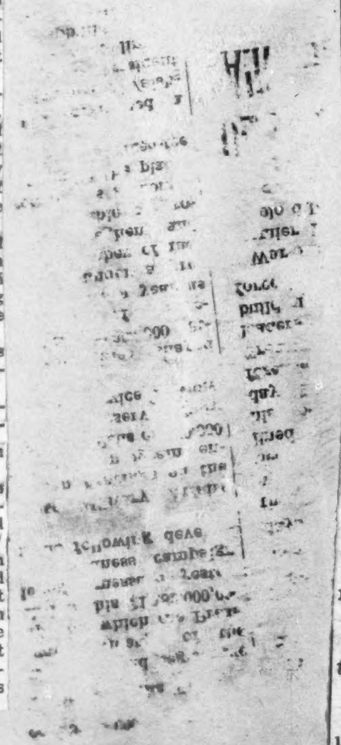
The French War Ministry acknowledged that Germans crossing the Meuse between Namur and Mezieres had pierced some Allied positions, Mezieres is five miles inside France.

Again War Ministry spokesman characterized the situation as "serious but not critical."

All told, there were some twenty divisions, or about 300,000 men on each side, engaged in the developing battle of the Meuse.

Bombs Fall on Arras.

ARRAS, France, May 16 (A. P.).—Several buildings in Arras, 100 miles north of Paris, were destroyed by German air bombs in a raid Tuesday night and yesterday morning. Of seven bombs dropped, three were duds.



CLAIM TO HAVE REPULSED FIERCE NAZI ATTACKS ON FAMOUS UNIVERSITY CITY

Paris Placed In War Zone And Put Under Army Rule As Premier Reynaud Admits Nation Is In Peril

MAY 17 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, Friday, May 17 — A British general headquarters communique early today said attacks on Louvain have been repulsed. Text of the communique:

"The British expeditionary force is in contact with the enemy and fighting is in progress. Attacks on Louvain have been repulsed."

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Friday, May 17—A Government decree placed Paris in the army zone last night and transferred control of the capital from civil to military authorities as dispatches reported Allied warplanes fighting terrific battles to stop the lightning strokes of the German army along the Meuse in northern France.

There was no official explanation of the sudden decree extending the army zone to Paris. (The censor deleted twenty-five words in the dispatch here.)

Anti-Aircraft Guns Firing

Paris anti-aircraft guns were firing last night, but no air-raid alarm had been sounded up to past midnight.

The war was brought closer to Paris also. (Here twenty-two words were censored.)

A close guard was posted over the city's gates in a round-up of foreigners and the internment of those of German origin as authorities guarded against any fifth-column uprising.

(Twenty-eight words were censored here.)

Americans Urged To Leave

Americans were urged by their embassy to leave unless they had compelling reasons to stay.

The army zone decree was proclaimed just after Premier Paul Reynaud had warned of the "peril" of the Nazi invasion.

The French War Ministry's spokesman admitted that German armored columns had pushed deep into France after breaking through the Allies' Meuse river front in the Sedan sector.

But he said the Germans were pinned down by counter-blows from the air.

MAY 17 1940

Says Counter-Attacks Hold Nazis

The Premier spoke twice during the day, once to the cheering Chamber of Deputies in person and again to the nation by radio.

Reynaud warned the Chamber that "we will be called to take measures which in other times would have seemed revolutionary."

Nevertheless, he emphatically denied alarming rumors spreading through Paris that the Government was quitting the capital and the Germans were approaching it.

He also called false other rumors that the Germans had reached Rheims, about eighty-five miles northeast of Paris, and that they were using "new and irresistible arms."

"The enemy has succeeded only in crossing the Meuse and opening a large pocket which our valiant troops are cleaning up," he said.

The principal battlefield was reported by the War Ministry still to be the west bank of the Meuse northwest of Sedan, where German tanks yesterday penetrated the French pillbox line.

French troops abandoned their concrete-covered machine-gun nests under the Allied command's new orders to meet enemy movement with movement and aerial squadrons dived in to bomb and machine-gun the German mechanized forces.

Aerial Successes Claimed

MAY 17 1940

Tonight's communique claimed success for the aerial counter-attack with reconnaissance planes scouting out the columns, pursuit planes clearing up the skies and bombing planes raining destruction on German armor. No details were given, however.

The struggle continued tonight west of the Meuse river. The German offensive was not definitely checked, but the French were confident they quickly could repair their lines.

Ground Fighting Dwindling

Ground fighting was reported dwindling in violence tonight after two days of severe shocks, but the Battle of the Meuse was by no means ended.

The Germans appeared to be holding back their spearheads to wait for anti-aircraft batteries and supporting forces to come up before resuming the daring dashes which proved so successful in their invasions of Poland, Norway and the Netherlands.

German aviation intervened to protect the motorized land columns and was reported suffering heavy losses. One French pilot was reported to have brought down seven German planes alone in two days.

The Allied command, its positions and tactics changed, threw tanks and planes into a wide-open war of movement, in a (here one word censored) effort to turn the tide of battle. (Twenty-seven words censored.)

Denies Nazis Are In Rheims

A War Office spokesman denied that the Germans had reached Rheims or Laon, fifty and sixty miles from Sedan.

However, the general in immediate command of the sector north of Sedan where the Germans broke through reported to general headquarters the French were "masters of the situation" and would regain complete control of their front within a week.

News of the action on the long battle line was extremely meager, details being withheld for the sake of "higher interests," in the words of the French command.

Hear Cryptic Review

Even the Chamber of Deputies, in a fifteen-minute session, heard only a cryptic review by Reynaud.

The Premier warned: "We know perfectly well the peril," and he spoke mysteriously of "revolutionary" measures and, perhaps, "changes in methods and men" to come.

(One word censored) the Chamber adjourned indefinitely (fifty-five words censored).

Reynaud did not elaborate on "changes of methods and men. Whether he was referring to the army, the Government, or both, was left for developments to answer.

Gamelin Still In Command

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin has remained in supreme command of the Allied land forces in the struggle which has swung into France from the invaded Low Countries.

Thousands of warplanes and tanks engaged in an unequaled battle of movement all along the Meuse front—a melee serious and confused—from Sedan, in northern France, to Namur, fifty miles north in Belgium.

Armored units on both sides, shaking their infantry loose, plunged boldly into the enemy's lines and tried to cut off their foes from the rear.

Meeting Great Resistance

The Germans were meeting tremendous resistance in pushing on through the three gaps they opened in the Namur-Sedan lines yesterday, on the west bank of the Meuse.

On the northern extension of this line, from Namur through Gembloux, just east of Louvain and thence northwest to Antwerp—a line shielding both Brussels and the channel ports of Belgium—fighting also was general, and, again, details very sparse.

On the line to the southeast of Sedan, through Montmedy, Longwy and along the Franco-German frontier to the Vosges mountains, the principal action was described as artillery duels between opposing fortifications.

Fail To Deepen Pocket

The French said the Germans south of Sedan had failed to deepen the pocket they drove into the French lines two days ago, but a War Office spokesman acknowledged they had continued to push ahead between Sedan and Namur.

North of Namur, German attacks were reported repulsed.

The fortifications around Sedan are not those of the Maginot Line, but a series of lesser defense works which extend the Maginot Line from the Moselle district northwest to the North Sea.

Reynaud Forecasts Victory

Reynaud, before the short Chamber session, told cheering Deputies that France would be victorious in the end.

"When all can seem lost," he said, "the world will see what France is capable of.

"Life counts for nothing . . . one thing only counts and that is to maintain France."

He stressed the great need of mechanized units in battle, called upon France to "forge a new spirit," and told the Chamber: "We will be called upon to take measures which in other times would have seemed revolutionary."

Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber, told Reynaud that body had shown by its applause "the confidence it has in you."

Air-raid sirens and the thud of bombs were heard over France.

Arras Buildings Destroyed

One of several enemy scouting planes was shot down in the Paris area. Several buildings in Arras one hundred miles north of Paris were destroyed by bombs.

Nancy, south of Sedan, was raided, with an undetermined number of dead and wounded. There were nine alertes.

Alarms sounded in Lille and Le Havre.

French officials said the American Meuse-Argonne Cemetery at Romagne, where there are 15,000 graves, was bombed yesterday.

Round Up Foreigners

The French rounded up many foreigners in Paris in a city-wide sweep aimed at "Trojan horses." Leon Degrelle, Belgian Fascist leader, was brought to France with seventy-seven other political prisoners.

GERMANS DRIVE MISS MORGAN FROM WAR ZONE

Friends Of France Compelled To Halt Aid To War-Stricken Civilians

MAY 17 1940

One American Ambulance Captured—Driver Of Another Is Missing

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 16—Miss Anne Morgan, 66-year-old sister of J. P. Morgan, unscathed by heavy German air attacks, which forced her and her coworkers in the Friends of France Committee to suspend their aid to war-stricken civilians, was reported tonight on her way back to Paris.

Miss Morgan reported to Paris by telephone that neither she nor any of her unit was hurt, despite being under fire, but that one ambulance of the American volunteers organization cooperating with her service had been captured by the Germans with its wounded occupants.

American Driver Missing

Another American ambulance driver, Lawrence A. Jump, of Nantucket, Mass., who was attached to the French army, was reported missing after his vehicle had been shelled by German artillery.

Miss Morgan's committee advised its Paris headquarters that the unit had been bombed repeatedly while removing civilians from the northern French Ardennes department.

Its ten ambulances and twenty automobiles were forced to take cover in woods to escape Nazi air attacks, she said, and returned to a village in the Aisne department when the planes made it impossible for them to continue their work.

MAY 17 1940

Monuments Group Called In

The Battle Monuments Commission supervising American World War cemeteries in France, meanwhile, ordered its civilian personnel to leave areas threatened by German bombings.

Officials said Americans and their families who reside in the cemetery grounds as caretakers are being brought to Paris for safety. (Three lines censored here.).

French officials said the American Meuse-Argonne Cemetery at Romagne was bombed yesterday. American authorities said they had no information about it.

The cemetery, the largest American World War cemetery in Europe, covers 126 acres and has nearly 15,000 graves.

8 New U. S. Drivers Arrive

Eight new drivers arrived in Paris from the United States today preparatory to going on active duty with the French army.

Another twenty are en route, ambulance officials said (twenty-five words were censored).

It was not known whether Jump, the missing ambulance driver, had been killed, wounded or taken prisoner. His ambulance, reported heavily shelled in the Sarreguemines sector of the Western front several days ago, was in flames when last seen by a French officer.

A Johns Hopkins Graduate

Charles Willen, of New York city, said he counted more than fifty shrapnel holes in his wrecked ambulance. Three other ambulances hit by shells were driven by Paul Willis, of Albuquerque, N. M.; Thomas Esten, of Stoughton, Mass., and Jack Calhoun, an American resident of Paris.

Miss Morgan helped the needy during the World War with her "American committee for devastated France" and, shortly after the outbreak of the current conflict, she announced the creation of "The American Friends of France" for the same work.

Charles Willen Graduated From Hopkins Last June

MAY 17 1940

Charles Willen, of New York city, graduated from Johns Hopkins University last June.

Fraternity mates at the Epsilon Tau Alpha house, 3020 North Calvert street, greeted the news of his danger and escape yesterday with awe and astonishment.

"Why, when he left here last spring he couldn't even drive an automobile," one of them said. "We heard some time ago he was driving an ambulance, and it hardly seemed possible."

Willen was described as a quiet, scholarly boy. "Still waters run deep" was the quotation beneath his picture in the 1939 Johns Hopkins yearbook.

Had Attended School In France

Jerome Hirsch, of New York city, who shared an apartment with Willen last year, said that Willen, having gone to school for six years in Switzerland and France, was deeply attached to France and the French cause.

"He loved living in France, and he took up driving an ambulance for the American Red Cross because that was the only way he could stay there where he wanted to be," Hirsch said.

At the university Willen went out for every sport and was considered an all-round athlete, the boys said, although he was not good enough to win any varsity letter. He was said to be a brilliant student who took an unusually heavy program of courses and graduated at 19, although he did not make Phi Beta Kappa grades.

Willen followed two brothers to the Johns Hopkins. Dr. Abner Willen, who was in the class of 1935, is now an interne at Sinai Hospital, while another brother, Gerald, who graduated two years ago, is now working in a New York hotel in which the family owns an interest. The young ambulance driver has a mother living in New York, but his father has been dead for twelve years.

Anne Morgan and Unit Bombed

Civilian Refugee Workers Recalled to Paris —American Ambulance Driver Missing.

MAY 17 1940

PARIS, May 16 (A. P.).—Miss Anne Morgan, sister of J. P. Morgan, reported from northern France today that she had undergone terrific German aerial bombings with her co-workers while seeking to rescue French civilians from war dangers.

Neither she nor any of her party of her Friends of France Committee was hurt, she said, but the bombardments forced suspension of rescue work and French officials ordered her unit to return to Paris.

On long distance telephone, she said that one American ambulance, laden with wounded, had been captured by the Germans during the removal of civilians by the American Volunteers Ambulance Corps, working in conjunction with her committee. The driver, Louis Wehrley of Berne, Ind., escaped before German troopers surrounded his vehicle.

Nantucket Man Shelled.

Another American ambulance driver, Lawrence A. Jump of Nantucket, Mass., who was attached to the French Army, was reported missing after German artillery had shelled his ambulance.

Wehrley's ambulance was captured after a long trip during which a child was born to a Frenchwoman in the vehicle, Miss Morgan advised Major George Washington Lopp in Paris.

Miss Morgan said that Wehrley had got out of the immediate war zone safely with part of his load of civilians and had returned to pick up the rest, but was unable to get through the lines.

German troops, rushing into the zone between the two main armies, took over the ambulance, but the driver, accompanied by several civilian refugees, hid in nearby woods.

Morgan Unit Shifted.

Miss Morgan's unit had been taking civilians from the French Ardennes Department, but shifted to a village in the Aisne Department under the pressure of Nazi aerial attacks.

Miss Morgan helped the needy during the world war with her American Committee for Devastated France and, soon after the outbreak of the current conflict, she announced the creation of the American Friends of France to function in the same way.

Ambulance Driver Jump was reported as missing in official French reports to the American Volunteers Ambulance organization in Paris.

These reports said that his ambulance was shelled heavily in a local action in the Sarreguemines sector of the western front several days ago.

At the same time Miss Anne Morgan's Friends of France Committee, which has been removing civilians from the French Department of Ardennes, reported to its Paris headquarters that the unit had been bombed repeatedly in northern France. Miss Morgan said that its ten ambulances and twenty cars were forced to cover in the woods to escape German planes. They returned to a village in the Aisne Department when the Nazi aerial attacks made it impossible to continue the rescue work.

[illegible]ther American ambulance [illegible]recked and three others were [illegible] shells, Col. James Sparks, of the Volunteer Unit, announced.

Col. Sparks said it had not been determined whether Driver Jump was killed, wounded or taken prisoner. His amburance was in flames when it was last seen by a French officer.

An ambulance driven by Charles Willen of New York city was reported wrecked. Driver Willen said he counted more than fifty shrapnel holes in the car.

Ambulances driven by Paul Willis of Albuquerque, N. M., Thomas Esten of Stoughton, Mass., and Jack Calhoun, an American resident of Paris, also were hit by shells.

Col. Sparks said the ambulances were plainly marked with the Red Cross.

Was Graduate of Dartmouth

NANTUCKET, Mass., May 16 (A. P.).—Lawrence A. Jump, an American ambulance driver attached to the French Army, who was reported missing after a German artillery bombardment, is the son of the late Rev. Herbert H. Jump of Boston.

He left for Europe soon after his graduation from Dartmouth College in 1936 and was attached to the International Labor Office at Geneva. At the outbreak of the war he joined the ambulance unit.

A sister, Mrs. H. Curtis Willett, of Lincoln, said that she received a letter from him a week ago, indicating he had been on the Saar front since February.

He also has a brother, Dr. Ellis Jump, a professor of the University of Chicago.

MAY 17 1940

Appeal Made to Washington.

At the headquarters of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps, 610 Fifth avenue, James Wood Johnson, president of the corps, said that inquiries are being made through the State Department in Washington to check on the possibility that Driver Jump may have been taken a prisoner.

He said that there had been a good response to the recent call for volunteers—the corps wants young college graduates between the ages of 21 and 30—and that eighteen new men are sailing Saturday.

BRITISH PLANES MAKE GREATEST ATTACK OF WAR

Tons of Bombs Dropped East of Rhine and on Belgian Front.

FLYERS ACTIVE ALL NIGHT

Assault in Germany Is on Lines of Communication Supporting the Foe's Columns.

LONDON, May 16 (A. P.)—Great Britain's Royal Air Force has unleashed its greatest bombing attack on military objectives in Germany east of the Rhine and has thrown its power into the Belgian fighting with extensive attacks on Nazi troop concentrations and communication lines.

"Many tons of bombs were released in attacks that lasted throughout the night, the Air Ministry said.

The thrust apparently was a follow up after a blasting attack by 150 explosive-laden warplanes yesterday when the German lines converging on the Meuse River at Sedan in France were the target.

That fleet was said then to have been the largest of any massed by the allies for a single raid and, according to the British Air Ministry, it helped slow up the German drive in the Meuse-Sedan sector.

Belgian fortresses of Liege and Namur, although apparently isolated, still are holding out, a British military commentator said today. (The Germans have announced the capture of the Liege citadel and other forts at Liege and Namur.

MAY 17 1940

The Dutch are still fighting in Zeeland, the southwestern corner of their country, he asserted. They destroyed practically all the fuel oil at Amsterdam and Rotterdam before capitulating, he said, to keep it from falling into German hands.

The Germans are held on the eastern side of the "dent" made at Sedan yesterday.

The situation is serious, but not critical, although it is difficult to say exactly what is happening.

Heavy fighting is reported in the vicinity of Welcheren and Beverland, in the north of Zeeland, but no definite results are known.

East of Antwerp to Charleroi and Louvain, southward toward Mezieres and from Sedan to Longwy, sporadic fighting is in progress. That in the vicinity of Dinant being the most serious.

British Coastal Guns Fire.

Meanwhile today a heavy burst of anti-aircraft gunfire was heard south of a British coast port at an early hour as searchlights swept the sky.

No bombs were dropped and no air raid warning was sounded during the firing, which lasted for but a short time.

The R. A. F. operation east of the Rhine was called "a big offensive against the enemy's road and rail communications which are supporting his forces in their invasion of the Low Countries and Luxemburg." Fires broke out and heavy explosions resulted, it was said, and the attacks lasted throughout the night.

Allied war communiques declared that Germany's big push through the Low Countries was being slowed down by the stiffening resistance of land and air forces.

British Tommies, thrown into the sagging Belgian line, were said by a headquarters communique to have "successfully held back serious German attacks" in hard fighting.

Waves of Allied planes were said to have broken up mechanized forces massed by the Germans in a drive to capture Brussels and turn the flank of the French fortified lines.

A British headquarters communique declared that since the start of the lowlands offensive the Royal Air Force with the British expeditionary force has destroyed at least 124 German planes, while twenty-three have been downed by anti-aircraft fire.

Repercussions from the gunfire at the great battle in progress in Belgium shook houses at Deal on the southeast coast of England, sixty miles from the Continental coast. Inhabitants recalled that cannonading in Flanders Fields a generation ago similarly rattled windows and doors.

Wounded from the fighting zones began arriving in England today. Between 200 and 300 British casualties, half of them stretcher cases, arrived at Liverpool from France and Norway.

Tommies wounded in the first engagements in the Low Countries remarked grimly: "We've got something to beat."

AIR TOLL 3 TO 1 IN THEIR FAVOR, BRITISH SAY

R. A. F. Wages Its Heaviest Attack Of War East Of The Rhine

Tons Of Bombs Dropped, 50 German Planes Reported Destroyed

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 16—Britain swept about 3,000 enemy aliens into "protective custody" today in a drive to stifle any fifth-column threat while her massed warplanes winged over Germany with "tons of bombs" in their greatest attack of the war.

Aliens affected by today's order of the Home Ministry were in category "B," male Germans and Austrians between 16 and 60 who had been under control but not detained.

Expected To Intern Women

The swiftness with which Prime Minister Winston Churchill's Government followed up criticism that the first swoop on aliens May 12 was too late and not broad enough led to belief in some quarters that enemy alien women soon would be interned.

About two-thirds of the aliens rounded up today were refugees from the Nazi rule.

Previously they merely had been forbidden to own automobiles or cameras, travel more than four miles from their homes or change their addresses without police approval.

R. A. F. Wages "Heaviest Attack"

The Air Ministry said British flyers had waged "the heaviest attack yet made by the Royal Air Force during the war" east of the Rhine throughout last night.

MAY 17 1940

The air offensive apparently was a follow-up of an attack yesterday by 150 Allied planes, described as the largest fleet they had massed for a single raid up to then. That attack, the Air Ministry said, helped stem the German drive in the Meuse-Sedan sector.

The second wave of bombardments, it said, was against "the enemy's road and rail communications which are supporting his forces in their invasion of the Low Countries and Luxembourg. . . . Many tons of bombs were released. . . . Fires broke out and heavy explosions were caused."

"Three To One" In Allies' Favor

The Air Ministry declared that "the toll inflicted on enemy aircraft is working out more than three to one in our favor" on the Western front.

It is said fifty German planes were destroyed during today and that in two mass flights the British had lost only three, one during the night attack and two in the day.

Among the targets it said were squarely hit were German highways, railroads, a military encampment and a two-mile-long motorized column.

Scene Of Heaviest Fighting

Allied military sources said the heaviest fighting in the momentous battle of the Meuse was between Dinant, Belgium, and the French city of Sedan, where the situation admittedly was serious "but not critical."

They said the Germans had failed to enlarge their "dent" in the French fortifications at Sedan and were held by the Allies east of that point.

Liege and Namur, Belgian anchors of the Allied Meuse line, admittedly were isolated, but a British military commentator said they still were holding out. Sporadic fighting was reported along the U-shaped front east of the Belgian port of Antwerp through Charleroi and Louvain, south to the French town of Mezieres and from Sedan to Longwy.

Leopold Rallies Belgians

The meager reports said also that fighting in the vicinity of Walcheren and Beverland, in the unsurrendered northern Dutch province of Zeeland, was "heavy."

Brussels radio broadcasts reflected optimism. Leopold III, King of the Belgians, called by radio to his men in "the forts of Liege" to "resist to the utmost for the fatherland."

A broadcaster admitted that German mechanized columns had broken through "to a considerable depth" at several Belgian points, but declared German infantry, "closely held" by the Allies, had not supported the mechanized columns.

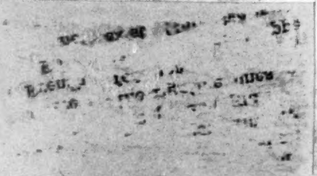
Influx Of Wounded Begins

Wounded, both German and British, began reaching England.

Between thirty and forty wounded German prisoners were brought to London today and 200 to 300 British casualties, half of them stretcher cases, reached Liverpool from France and Norway.

The commander of Britain's home forces urged owners of rifles and other firearms to lend their weapons for fighting a possible Nazi parachute invasion as volunteers for the new, unpaid home defense corps continued to crowd enrollment centers.

In a personal message to the navy, Churchill lauded the service's achievements in the first eight months of the war and said of his successor as First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, "I leave you in good hands both afloat and ashore."



REYNAUD PUTS SAVING FRANCE ABOVE ALL ELSE

Tells Deputies 'We Must Forge New Spirit—Lives Are Nothing.'

SAYS NAZIS PLAY LAST CARD

Predicts Suffering and Changes of Revolutionary Type Before Final Joy.

PARIS, May 16 (A. P.).—Premier Paul Reynaud told the cheering Chamber of Deputies today that France would be victorious against a Germany that was throwing her all into one desperate push to the west.

MAY 17 1940

Mr. Reynaud addressed the chamber at a session ending a parliamentary recess which began on April 25.

The chamber adjourned without a vote after its President, Edouard Herriot, followed Mr. Reynaud with an address. He told the Premier that the chamber showed by its applause "the confidence it has in you."

Adjourns Sine Die.

The Chamber adjourned sine die after granting M. Herriot's request that the date of the next session be left to him.

Premier Reynaud said:

"I have only a few words to say to you. Since the time the Chamber went on vacation Germany decided to play her last card. She threw hersalf on three free peoples and today she is aiming at the heart of France. The Belgium of 1914 has been found again. Her life will be closely related to ours, her sufferings will be our sufferings, her mourning will be our mourning.

"One day our joy will be hers. Holland has lost her territory, but she has regained in several days the virtues which made her greatness in history. The advance guard regiments have lost 80 per cent of their effectives. The Netherlands Government told me: 'We are beside you with all the resources of our empire clear to the end.'

"On the hinge of our front the German Army has unloosed all its forces of destruction. There they are—all the tanks and all the airplanes accumulated methodically during so many years, thanks to the privations of the German people and with the fixed idea of Germany's war leader to conquer France and dominate Europe and then the world.

'Hitler Has Taken Risk.'

"Hitler wants to win the war in two months. If he loses he is damned, and he knows it.

"That is why, after long hesitation, after having affirmed that he would let this war come to a head, he has taken his risk. We have perfect knowledge of the peril, we know that the days, weeks and months which are coming will forge the centuries of the future. We know perfectly well this peril and face it united.

"In France and England for the last several days all parties have achieved representation in the Government. The plutocratic nations, as Dr. Goebbels says, are governed by men—men belonging to all classes of the people. It is the day when everything appears to be lost that the world will see of what France is capable.

"These are not vague hopes and it is not with words we must content ourslves. Our soldiers are fighting. French blood is flowing. The period which we are going to live through will probably have nothing in common with that which we have just lived through. We will be called upon to take measures which would have appeared revolutionary yesterday. Perhaps we must change our methods and our men. For any punishment which will come will be death.

"We must forge for ourselves immediately a new spirit. We are full of hope. Our lives count for nothing. One thing alone counts—preserve France."

NAZIS REPORT GAINS ALONG 110-MILE LINE

Tell of Crossing the Meuse Near Namur and Again Defeating French.

FALL OF LONGWY REPORTED

MAY 17 1940

BERLIN, May 16 (A. P.).—The German forces attacked heavily today along a 110-mile front from Antwerp to Sedan in the seventh day of the sustained drive which has already netted them all the Netherlands except the province of Zeeland, half of Belgium and a small section of France.

The German High Command reported that the Allies yesterday "accepted the fight" in the Antwerp fortifications northeast of Brussels and along the Dyle defense line from that point southward through central Belgium to Namur.

Southwest of Namur, fifty miles from Sedan, the High Command said, "our divisions expanded their successes" by crossing the Meuse and "again defeating French armored units."

Say Counter-attacks Were Repelled.

French counter-attacks south of Sedan, it said, were repelled while the Germans pressed the attack toward the Maginot Line itself farther to the southwest, to take into their hands more of the strip beween the rival fortified lines.

Thus, the High Command said, "between the Moselle and the Rhine we advanced our positions west of Saarlautern (nearly 100 miles southeast of Sedan) and near Lauterburg." Lauterburg, near the Rhine, is about 150 miles air line southeast of Sedan.

Longwy Reported Taken.

The German press reported tonight that the swastika waved from the citadel of Longwy and the French city had been occupied—but there was no confirmation from German headquarters.

Longwy is in the northeastern corner of France near the point where the French, Belgian and Luxemburg frontiers come together, about forty miles airline southeast of Sedan.

The Volkischer Beobachter said that the French who had held the citadel had orders to "defend without hope of being withdrawn" and that the Germans took it only after a hard fight in which 100 prisoners were captured.

Claim Air Victories.

Hand-in-hand with the furious fighting on the ground, the German air forces saw heavy action. The High Command reported that it broke up enemy troop concentrations and destroyed tanks while losing only eighteen planes as compared with "definitely established total losses of the opponents" yesterday of ninety-eight planes.

It declared that two destroyers and three merchantmen were sunk by air bombs yesterday off the coasts of the Netherlands and Belgium and two destroyers and four merchantmen were "hit severely," while a submarine torpedoed a tanker and an armed merchantman.

Enemy flights over western Germany last night, the High Command said, caused "immaterial damage" but killed and injured a number of civilians.

The expected battle along the Dyle defense line in central Belgium from Antwerp to Namur was announced earlier today, when it was emphasized that the chief hope of Brussels, the Belgian capital, lies in the so-called "Dyle position."

Units Already Reach Dyle.

This is the Belgian second defense line, after the Albert Canal, which follows the northward course of the river Meuse as far as Namur, continues north from there to the Dyle River near Louvain, and then run west along the Dyle to Antwerp on the sea.

It was along this line that the long-expected major battle in the west, the outcome of which is regarded as of decisive importance, was developing, according to well-informed spokesmen here.

They said that the German vanguards, following up an Allied retreat all along this line, had already reached the Dyle positions and met the Allied forces at various points. One advance was said to have reached Ligny, north and west of Namur.

NAZIS SEEM SET FOR RAID ON RUMANIAN OIL

Blitz Units Massed On Slovak-Hungarian Frontier, Budapest Hears

Movement Is Linked With German Army's Pressing Need For Motor Fuel

MAY 17 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Friday, May 17—German motorized and mechanized Blitz troops were reported from Bratislava early today to be concentrated heavily near the Slovak-Hungarian frontier.

Many thousands were massed in the Zistersdorf region along the frontier, where military observers connected the movement with the German armies' pressing need for greater quantities of Rumanian oil.

These observers pointed out that these troops could rapidly knife through Hungary to Rumanian oil fields if an offensive were determined upon.

Rumania Lags In Oil For Nazis

Rumanian oil deliveries to the Reich, it was pointed out, are now well over 1,000,000 tons in arrears of the quota agreed upon by the two countries.

With the average warplane on the West front burning fifteen gallons of high-grade gasoline an hour, military sources said, 1,000 such planes would use 360,000 gallons each twenty-four hours, continuous operation, or about 1,400 tons daily.

To get that amount of aviation gasoline, Germany must transport and refine 8,600 tons of crude daily, or about twice her present quota from Rumania.

Militiary sources said these figures failed to take account of the needs of the mechanized and motorized forces, the navy and war industries.

Concentration Began Monday

A steady stream of columns of German mechanized forces began moving through Dresden en route to the Zistersdorf basin north of Vienna.

The high-speed columns were complete with artillery, tanks, armored cars, field kitchens and troop trucks, and took three days to pass through Dresden, it was reported here.

A steady stream of German troop trains with artillery and tanks was reported moving into eastern Slovakia, with temporary headquarters at Poprad, 140 miles from Rumania through eastern Hungary.

The defense corps formerly stationed at Brno was said to have moved in this fashion a few days ago over the railway from the Moravian protectorate through Zilinia to Poprad.

Orders To Go Through Hungary

Hundreds of Nazi planes were reported at Vienna and Slovak airports.

German officers quartered at Vienna hotels were reported here to have told foreigners that they had received orders to pass through Hungary, but that they had no idea when they would start.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—The Hungarian Government was reported in Budapest diplomatic quarters a few days ago to have been noncommittal when pressed by the British for a statement on their attitude should Germany request passage for her troops.]

Barges' Role In Nazi Advance

For a week observers here in Budapest and all along the Danube have remarked the absence of German barge traffic from Vienna south.

Some military quarters here said the barges were being fitted out to carry heavy artillery, munitions and supplies down the Danube.

Two days before the troops began moving on Monday, oil refineries in the Bohemian-Moravian protectorate (former Czecho-Slovakia) were reported to have been advised to transfer all their stocks into warehouses and to work day and night to "meet an urgent demand."

German-Born Consort of Juliana Returns After Taking Family to London

LONDON, May 16 (AP).—The Netherlands Legation announced tonight that German-born Prince Bernhard, consort of Crown Princess Juliana, had rejoined Dutch troops fighting in Zeeland Province. The Prince had come to London with his wife and small daughters, two-year-old Princess Beatrix and nine-months-old Princess Irene, when the government and royal family fled Holland.

Zeeland is the southwestern group of islands in which resistance to Germany is continuing despite capitulation of the rest of the Netherlands Army.

Nazi Pour Through City

LONDON, May 16 (AP).—The German-controlled Amsterdam radio station, in a broadcast heard in London today, announced: "From 11:45 a. m. until 7:30 p. m. today an uninterrupted column of German mechanized troops will pass through the city, coming from Haarlem and going on to Utrecht." The announcement warned that all roads in the affected areas would be closed.

Germans Claim Allied Sea Losses In One Day Total 100,000 Tons

MAY 17 1940

Berlin, May 16 (AP)—Authorized German quarters tonight estimated enemy sea losses yesterday at between 90,000 and 100,000 tons of warships, transports and auxiliary vessels.

Of this amount they said 55,000 tons were sunk and the remainder badly damaged or set afire.

In addition to two destroyers and three others mentioned in a communique as sunk, DNB reported one submarine sunk in the North Sea and a 32,000-ton transport and another of 15,000 tons sunk of the Dutch coast.

One destroyer and one 5,400-ton supply ship were said to have been damaged off Narvik and one 18,000-ton transport and one 1,500-ton auxiliary set afire.

LONDON, May 16 (A. P.).—Reuters news agency (British), in a dispatch from Stockholm today reported that thirty-one American members of an American-Scandinavian field hospital unit crossed the Swedish frontier from Grong, in the northern province of Trondelag.

They brought with them eighteen truckloads of equipment.

Grong is thirty miles east of Namsos, one of the ports used in the Allied withdrawal from Norway.

American Officials Have No Word on Incident

PARIS, May 16 (AP).—French officials said today that the American-Meuse-Argonne Cemetery at Romagne, in eastern France, the largest American World War cemetery in Europe, was bombed yesterday.

American authorities said they had not been informed of any bombardment.

MAY 17 1940

The cemetery covers 136 acres and has almost 15,000 graves.

[Romagne is near Montfaucon, in the heart of the Meuse-Argonne battlefield through which the American Army fought northward in the closing weeks of the World War and suffered its heaviest losses. It is about thirty-five miles south of the present Sedan battlefield.]

Attendants Ordered Out

The Battle Monuments Commission supervising American World War cemeteries in France ordered its civilian personnel to leave areas threatened by German bombings.

Officials said Americans and their families who resided in the cemetery grounds as caretakers were being brought to Paris for safety.

LEAGUE READY FOR FLIGHT TO FRENCH HAVEN

Closing Peace Palace In Event Of Invasion Of Switzerland

MAY 17 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Geneva, May 16—The League of Nations began closing its offices here tonight as the decision was announced for removal to Vichy, France, in event of invasion of Switzerland.

Only sixty-nine of the League's 329 employes were sure they would go to the new headquarters should Switzerland be drawn into the war.

Joseph A. C. Avenol, secretary general, at a meeting of the staff this afternoon gave 205 officials and employes the choice of handing in their resignations tomorrow or agreeing to suspension of their contracts at any time.

While sixty-nine League officials will go to Vichy in event of an emergency, thirty-seven will be given leave, subject to recall.

Rockefeller Library Closed

Only eighteen Swiss gardeners and caretakers will remain in the League's great Palace of Peace if the organization leaves Switzerland.

The American-built Rockefeller Library, a wing of the League palace, already is closed and valuable books and records are being packed and sent to France.

Those of the officials and employes who choose to resign tomorrow will get six months' pay while those who wait will receive three months' pay if their contracts should be suspended.

Avenol said, however, that Geneva would remain in the official headquarters, as only a vote of the League Council can change that.

Staff Would Hike To Safety

John G. Winant, director of the International Labor Office, set the League's sister palace to buzzing with a novel plan for removal of personnel.

He said that in event of invasion his staff would all pack knapsacks and start hiking to the French frontier.

Formed As World Peace Agency

Flight because of war faced an organization created two decades ago amid high-sounding phrases of "peace and security" and "honorable relations between nations."

Inspired by President Wilson's famous "fourteen points" to serve as a basis for world peace, the Covenant of the League was signed by thirty-two original members—still listed as being headed by the United States, which never ratified the Covenant or became a member.

Freedom Lost Or Curtailed

Many of the small European nations which joined the League, hoping to guarantee their borders in a "one for all, all for one" unity of nations, have lost their freedom or had it curtailed—including Austria, Poland, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, Finland, Albania and Czecho-Slovakia. China, in the Far East, is at war and Ethiopia, in Africa, is an Italian possession.

On the League's twentieth birthday last January 10, fifty-two nations still remained officially on the rolls, but nearly a score had resigned—including Germany, in 1933 — and Soviet Russia had been expelled for waging war on Finland.

WOULD FLEE GENEVA

League of Nations Prepares for War Departure.

GENEVA, May 16 (A. P.).—The staff of the League of Nations was informed today that in the event of an invasion of Switzerland, it would be reduced sharply and leave its place on the shores of Lake Leman.

MAY 17 1940

The new headquarters would be in Vichy, France, officials said. The present staff of 350 would be cut to fifty.

Many of the league's records already have been sent to France. A few employees have resigned and gone to their homelands.

Remaining employees are to be divided into three groups: The first to go to Vichy; the second, consisting mainly of a few gardeners, librarians and archivists, to remain in Geneva; the third and by far the largest group to choose between canceling their contracts and getting three months' salary or suspending their contracts.

Fears of a Nazi attack were heightened last night when German artillery rolled into place behind motorized divisions on the German side of the Rhine River from Basel to Schaffhausen.

Countering the German preparations, France poised a strong force at her Swiss frontier.

Meanwhile, the Swiss army toiled to perfect fortifications of the Winkelried Line, while thousands of women, boys and aged men volunteered for home guard duty. They received rifles and forty bullets each.

Roosevelt Renews Appeal to Mussolini to Prevent Spread of Combat.

By Associated Press.

From Geneva to the tip of the Balkans today governments took extreme precautions against the start of war.

American diplomats, by State Department order, urged their nationals to leave Italy and Switzerland, in particular, as well as all of western and southern Europe.

The entire staff of the League of Nations received instructions that, in the event of a German invasion of Switzerland, headquarters would be shifted, with the records, to Vichy, France.

Switzerland strengthened the Winkelried Line and issued rifles and ammunition to the thousands of women, boys and old men constituting a volunteer home guard.

The Yugoslav Government reviewed general mobilization plans.

Italians Quit Turkey.

Italians poured out of Turkey, which is friendly to the Allies.

The United States Ambassador to Italy, William Phillips, pressed President Roosevelt's continuing efforts to keep the European conflict from spreading through act of Italy.

Troops guarded Rome's French and British embassies against the chance of new disorders. None materialized.

Benito Mussolini silently awaited the "facts" which he has said would sway his decision on entrance into the war. These may be in the making in the great battles of Belgium and France.

Significantly, the Americans who are being urged to leave Europe will be embarked at the western French port of Bordeaux, rather than from Italian ports, which American liners have been using in recent months. Thus they will avoid the uncertain Mediterranean.

Roosevelt Tries Again.

WASHINGTON, May 16 (A. P.).—At the White House it was said today that President Roosevelt had sent another communication to Premier Mussolini of Italy in an effort to prevent the spread of the European war.

Stephen Early, a presidential secretary, told reporters that this communication was one of a series and was not "within itself any new, separate appeal."

Two weeks ago the President talked to the Italian Ambassador at about the same time that Ambassador Phillips talked to Mussolini. The President said he was continuing this Government's efforts to prevent the spread of the war to new areas and other nations.

In official quarters in Washington the belief was that the President and Mr. Phillips had not gone beyond an expression of hope that the war would not spread except to say also that American ships would be withdrawn from the Mediterranean if Italy entered the war. Italy would have then to rely on her own ships to bring her supplies.

Swiss See Italy Friendly.

BERN, Switzerland, May 16 (A. P.).—The Swiss Government in a communique called the nation's attention today to articles in the Italian press which expressed "friendship and understanding" for Switzerland.

MAY 17 1940

It also urged the Swiss to keep the calm of "strict discipline" as their national duty.

Americans Told to Leave Italy

Consul in Switzerand Issues Similar Warning —Sailing Plans Speeded.

MAY 17 1940

ROME, May 16 (A. P.).—The American diplomatic authorities today advised United States citizens to leave Italy as soon as possible.

The United States consulate sent the following circular to American residents in the Italian capital:

"The consulate has been directed by the embassy to call the attention of American citizens residing in the Rome consulate district to the advisability of returning to the United States at the earliest possible moment."

It was understood that other American consulates in Italy were issuing the same advice.

Roosevelt Note Delivered.

Ambassador William Phillips delivered a message from President Roosevelt to Italian authorities yesterday for transmission to Premier Mussolini, it was learned.

The embassy declined to add anything to the announcement from Washington that the message was sent in an effort to prevent the war from spreading.

Troops continued today to protect British and French embassies in Rome against demonstrations. None materialized.

Students of the English, Scotch and Canadian ecclesiastical colleges left for London today, occupying three cars on the Paris express.

Only the rectors and a few assistants stayed behind and they were settling their affairs.

The Same in Switzerland.

GENEVA, May 16 (A. P.).—The American consulate here sent a warning today to all American citizens who are "not prepared to remain in Switzerland in the event this country is involved in war" to leave the country "as speedily as possible."

The consulate advised Americans that if they planned to leave they should go immediately to the Bordeaux area of southwestern France. The warning said that the United States Government was contemplating sending United States ships to that area to repatriate Americans at their own expense.

The letter concluded with a reminder that each United States citizen must make his own decision.

Special Ship Service.

PARIS, May 16 (A. P.).—United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt said today that the State Department is contemplating sending ships to ports in southwestern France to carry American citizens home.

The usual wartime route for returning Americans has been by way of Genoa and Naples in nonbelligerent Italy.

Mr. Bullitt warned all Americans who have no "compelling reasons" for remaining in France to congregate "expeditiously" in Bordeau for repatriation.

[In a broadcast picked up by the Columbia Broadcasting System at New York today the official British wireless said that the State Department's warning to Americans to get out of European danger zones had made a deep impression in England.

"We in this country know how well informed the United States authorities are about the situation in Europe," the British broadcast said, "and a deep impression has been made by the State Department's warning to Americans in the countries of western and southern Europe to get out of the danger zone."]

Italians Leaving Turkey.

ISTANBUL, May 16 (A. P.).—An exodus of Italian nationals from Turkey was under way today. Italian employees in factories and on ships gave notice of their immediate departure.

PARIS, May 16 (AP).—Cancellation of more passenger trains, this time in eastern France, was announced today.

U. S. WARNS CITIZENS TO LEAVE ENGLAND

Move to Ireland Ordered, Rescue Ship Promised—Exodus in France, Italy Begins

MAY 17 1940

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 16—Americans in the British Isles, which are facing the threat of wholesale German aerial bombings, have been warned to go to Ireland.

The State Department, announcing this today, added that government officials here "will consider the possibility of sending to the west coast of Ireland a vessel for use of those desiring to return to the United States."

More than 7,000 Americans are in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, according to State Department figures.

The State Department's decision represented a change in the arrangements announced yesterday for the concentration of Americans for embarkation at Bordeaux, France, or in Spain or Portugal.

It was necessitated by a recommendation of Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy in London based on what Mr. Kennedy called "increasing difficulties in passenger services from England to France."

Ireland is in the ocean danger zone closed to American ships, but the State Department can permit a ship to proceed through the area to remove refugee citizens.

In making its announcement, the department declared that it "has repeatedly and during many months advised Americans in belligerent areas to return to the United States."

"Every facility has been afforded them to do so," the announcement said. "Ships were sent to Europe to be available for their repatriation, and funds were loaned to those who were destitute or financially embarrassed.

"In spite of these warnings many Americans chose to stay and the department is today faced with another emergency in helping them return to the United States."

Americans Prepare To Hurry From Italy

Rome, May 16 (AP)—Americans in Italy tonight made hasty preparations to leave on advice of United States consulates to return home "at the earliest possible moment."

American diplomatic officials themselves prepared to send their families home, but only as a precautionary measure, it was explained.

Many foreigners of other nationalities also packed their belongings to join the exodus. A long line of applicants for visas stood before the French consulate. The British consulate also was the scene of great activity.

No Sign Of Italian Move

With reports of growing fears in the Balkans, particularly in Greece and Yugoslavia, and rumors of possible action there, concrete signs still were lacking of any Italian intention to profit from the fierce warfare in the West and undertake any military adventure at this time.

Refugees From Belgium Report Vessel Bombed

British Subjects Claim German Planes Fired On Them In Belgian Port

London, Friday, May 17 (AP)—Refugees arriving in a British port early today from Belgium related that German warplanes bombed and machine-gunned their ship in a Belgian port.

The refugees—nearly all British subjects who had been living in Belgium—said there were no casualties, although at least two heavy bombs fell on the quay alongside their vessel.

"We all remained below decks during the attack, made on our ship at nightfall Wednesday," one refugee said. "It was a terrifying ordeal, but there was no panic. We were transferred to another ship Thursday before leaving for England."

A number of the refugees came from the Namur and Louvain districts, now scenes of heavy fighting. Special trains brought them to London.

Egyptian Government To Remain In Cairo

Will Not Go To Alexandria For Summer Because Of Possibility Of War Spread

Alexandria, Egypt, May 16 (AP)—The Egyptian Government tonight canceled plans to move Government departments from Cairo to Alexandria for the summer because of the possibility of war spreading to the Mediterranean.

The ministers were scheduled to make the move June 3.

Coincident with new mass removals of civilians from all military zones in the country, a permanent and total blackout was ordered for this port on the Nile estuary.

Meanwhile Allied fleet units which suddenly put to sea yesterday for maneuvers and gunnery practice returned to port. Newspapers gave prominent headlines to President Roosevelt's message to Premier Mussolini.

BRITISH BOARD ITALIAN SHIP

And American Passenger Tells How It's Done.

HEARS RESISTANCE IS RARE

Describes Night Incident Between Italy and Greece.

By G. C. JORDAN.

ROME, May 16 (A. P.).—This correspondent has recently seen the British method of halting and searching Mediterranean ships in contraband control, a practice which infuriates the Italians and has put a chronic strain on Rome's relations with the Anglo-French Allies.

A British sailor told me the incident I witnessed was a typical one.

I was on the Italian liner Egeo bound from Naples for Piræus, Greece. We were at dinner when we noted the ship had come to a standstill. I heard some one say, "It's a warship. They've stopped us."

A Sicilian army officer, returning to his post on the island of Rhodes, rushed from the room. I followed him.

Warship Moving Around Vessel.

Our ship was standing still. We had no idea where we were. The crew had thrown spotlights on big Italian flags painted on the vessel's sides.

At first it was hard to see anything, but finally we made out lights blinking at sea, then a huge form moving silently around our bow. It was a British warship talking with us in code with her twinkling lights.

The huge shape moved around us slowly. A searchlight was turned upon us. The warship made a complete circle, examining us minutely with her searchlight.

By the time she returned to our starboard side, a large rowboat reached us. A ladder was thrown over our side and three British officers and a red-haired sailor climbed up.

The British saluted the Egeo's officers smartly.

The latter did not return the salute.

The officers mounted to the captain's cabin on the upper deck. The red-headed sailor kept guard outside. A temporary ribbon around his hat hid the name of his ship.

He asked whether there were any Americans aboard and I told him I was an American. He wanted a cigarette, saying they had been at sea so long that they were out of American cigarettes.

His ship was a light cruiser, one of those which had been hunting the German pocket battleship formerly named the Deutschland. After Christmas the cruiser had been transferred from the North Sea to the Mediterranean.

I asked him whether the Italians ever made trouble about having their ships searched and he said No, that only one crew had raised objections to being searched. They were Greeks.

He said he had cowed them with his pistol. He said he had had to practice shooting with a pistol for six months before being sent as a guard with the boarding officers.

15 Ships a Day.

If the cargo of an examined ship was suspicious, he said, they took the vessel to Malta. That did not happen often. This warship had halted and examined as many as fifteen ships in one day.

Just then he saw the lights of another ship passing a few miles away and the boatswain in the rowboat below mumbled about having to go after that one next.

"We will be at it until 3 o'clock in the morning," I heard a voice in the rowboat say.

Soon the officers returned from their inspection of our manifest and the passengers' passports. They saluted, climbed down the rope ladder into the boat and were rowed away.

The whole business had taken exactly forty-five minutes.

SWISS-GERMAN FRONTIER SHUT BY BOTH SIDES

Borders From Basle to Lake Constance Are Tightly Closed.

ZURICH SHELL HITS NAZI PLANE

Other German Aircraft Chased Away by Fighting Ships of Switzerland.

SCHAFFHAUSEN, Switzerland, May 16 (A. P.).—Swiss and German military authorities tonight closed the Swiss-German frontier on the Rhine River on both sides from Basle to Lake Constance.

Even rail freight traffic was limited to a strict minimum.

German authorities refused to permit even Swiss peasants and farmhands to cross the frontier a few feet in the Schaffhausen area to tend their fields.

The Rome-Berlin express, which normally crosses north of Schaffhausen, was rerouted through the old Austrian frontier by way of Saint Margrethen.

Two of the Nazi planes were chased away near Rheinau, south of Schaffhausen, by Swiss fighting planes. One flew low over the post office and railway station at Schaffhausen.

Fears of a Nazi attack were heightened last night when German artillery rolled into place behind motorized divisions on the German side of the Rhine River from Basel to Schaffhausen.

Countering the German preparations, France poised a strong force at her Swiss frontier.

Meanwhile, the Swiss army toiled to perfect fortifications of the Winkelried Line, while thousands of women, boys and aged men volunteered for home guard duty. They received rifles and forty bullets each.

Swiss Shell Hits Nazi Plane.

ZURICH, May 16 (A. P.).—A Swiss anti-aircraft battery hit today a German bombing plane over Swiss territory north of Zurich, but the plane succeeded in landing in a field near the village of Illau.

Observers said that the plane first was warned away from the Schaffhausen area and then apparently continued southward over Zurich.

Swiss military officials withheld details and it could not be learned immediately whether any of the bomber's crew of three had been injured by a shell which ripped holes in the plane's wings.

SWISS PLANE SHOOTS DOWN NAZI BOMBER

One Of German Crew Interned And Two Others Surrender

[By the Associated Press]

Zurich, Switzerland, May 16—Emphasizing with machine-gun fire the Swiss determination to keep their territory inviolate, a Swiss fighting plane this afternoon shot down a German bomber which strayed across the line. One member of the German crew was wounded.

The incident highlighted steadily growing tension which today caused Swiss and Germans to close their frontier along the Rhine.

The Swiss plane machine-gunned the bomber and forced it to land in a field northeast of Zurich. The two uninjured members of the crew burned their plane and surrendered.

Freight Traffic Halted

In recent days German divisions concentrated south of the frontier have increased. Heavy artillery has rolled up behind them, and German engineers have been practicing building pontoon bridges across a part of the Rhine where they control both sides.

Brussels 'Dead,' Belgians Take Road to France

Reporter Says Cabinet Is Still in Capital, Describes Civilian Refugee Exodus

PARIS, May 16 (AP).—After thirty hours on the road with Belgian refugees who later were joined on the highways by Frenchmen cleared out of the menaced areas of northern France, this correspondent arrived in Paris tonight from Brussels.

At 1 p. m. yesterday the Belgian government still was in Brussels, the capital (nine words censored). But the city had a dead and deserted look. Only the refugees and the people waiting near the banks for money gave life to a place normally a bustling business center.

Several times yesterday morning Brussels was bombed in the outskirts, putting out of commission the national radio system, which had been broadcasting continually since the German invasion began last Friday.

Telegraph facilities also were suspended during Tuesday night. Railroad stations were packed with anxious refugees hoping for trains to take them out (nineteen words censored).

Discussing the Netherlands' capitulation that day, a Belgian government official declared: "We are going to fight on any line and every line, no matter if the government is destroyed."

Premier Hubert Pierlot, Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak and Defense Minister Gen. Denis held an early morning meeting when the news of the Dutch surrender reached Brussels.

The city was constantly on edge and any unusual movement brought a nervous crowd, and swarms of police who were watching for "fifth-column" troops and parachutists.

Behind the front in Belgium was a mass of automobiles, bicycles, peasant cats, trucks and pedestrians struggling toward the French frontier. But it was obvious that many had been prepared for a long time to move out, and in many ways this was a "de lume" migration. Many refugees were well dressed for the trip. Since the war was only five days 'old there was plenty of good. British soldiers directed traffic.

One group left Brussels in a hearse. Young Louvain University students, in black gown and pancake hats, rode gravely on bicycles, mixing strangely with new American-make automobiles and huge trucks. With them went tens of thousands of boys and men between the ages of sixteen years and thirty-five, who had been ordered by the government to leave (eight words were censored).

[During the World War able-bodied Belgians were forced by the Germans to serve in labor battalions.]

Despite the first bombing of Brussels, which announced the coming of the war to Belgium early Friday morning, the center of the capital was comparatively free of bombs throughout the time this correspondent was there. There were innumerable air raid alarms on the road to France, but no attacks that this writer saw. However, at Renaix, in Belgium, there was a road where bombs had killed nine people the day before.

In the first four days of the invasion Antwerp, Namur, Louvain, Olost, Tirlemont and other Belgium towns were reported bombed heavily. The government collected no figures, but estimated there were thousands of casualties from those attacks.

The refugees, accepted quickly in France and efficiently routed to a distant center, were still pouring through on the sixth day after the invasion began.

BOMBER TREND TO LIGHT CRAFT

MAY 17 1940

Speed and Range Found Main Essentials.

LESSONS FROM PRESENT WAR

Jack-of-all-Trades Plane Seen as Solution of Problem.

LONDON, May 16 (A. P.).—A fast, lightweight bomber, jack-of-all-war-trades—for pursuit, attack or bombing—is said by military experts to be likely to emerge from the present combat as the most effective air war weapon.

The old heavy bombers are headed for obsolescence, they say.

Neutral strategists who have been studying the air fighting since the war opened argued that it is becoming more and more obvious from the swiftness of the campaign in Norway and the Low Countries that the emphasis must be on speed.

Fighters now in use which have that speed do not have range, armament, or ability to carry bombs.

Heavy, well-armed bombers, on the other hand, are too easy prey for home-based fighters and are too slow for modern air warfare.

One tactician said that the new conception of an effective air force is likely to be this:

Fighters will be regarded as a defense weapon—a kind of long-range anti-aircraft artillery.

Heavy bombers will be looked upon as long-range heavy artillery for mopping up and work where speed is not too essential.

Light Planes Like Cavalry.

The lightweight, jack-of-all-trades planes would be a kind of new model cavalry. They would have extreme mobility, the ability to attack and feint and the capacity to convoy aerial troop transports and harass communications, supply lines and moving troops.

In this third field military experts see the biggest strides.

The new British Beaufort, which is said to be proving particularly effective in the Low Countries campaign, is in line with the trend toward the use of the middleweight plane.

It is heavily armed, with good range, fast and designed especially for strafing troops and making low flying bomb attacks.

The Defiant also is a step in the same direction. It is purely a fighter, but it is a two-seater, more heavily armed, with a powered gun turret.

It is a step up toward the middleweight class from lightweight planes, as the Beaufort is a step down from the heavyweight bomber.

Suspicion Annoys Nazis.

BELGRADE, May 16 (A. P.).—Copies of the Voelkischer Beobachter, Adolf Hitler's newspaper, arriving here today, attacked the Yugoslav press for suspecting this country's German minority of fifth column activities.

Britain Interns More Germans

MAY 17 1940

Austrians Also Rounded Up as Restrictions Are Tightened on 3000.

LONDON, May 16 (A. P.).—The British Home Secretary extended internment today to all male Germans and Austrians from 16 to 60 years of age throughout the nation whose movements had been restricted but who had not already been detained. Hundreds of police cars began a vast roundup in the London area.

The restrictions previously applied to enemy aliens in category B, those affected by today's order, were that they must not own motor cars or cameras nor travel more than four miles from their homes or change their addresses without police permission.

The British Press Association estimated that the order affected 3,000 persons, of whom 2,000 were refugees.

The army called today for the loan of privately owned firearms as Great Britain hastened to organize a home defense corps against a parachute invasion.

Between thirty and forty wounded Germon prisoners were brought to London today.

Roundup in Paris.

PARIS, May 16 (A. P.).—Elaborate precautions against parachute troops and fifth-columnists were taken today throughout France.

The police in Paris rounded up large numbers of foreigners for investigation last night in a citywide sweep through cafes and other meeting places.

A Mobile Guard is posted at the city gates to stop every car and investigate its occupants. Gendarmes and customs officers have received rifles. Provincial Mayors have been ordered to organize into a civil guard all eligible men.

Leopold Hails Liege Forts

'I Am Proud of You,' He Tells Garrisons in Radio Plea to Resist to Utmost.

LONDON, May 16 (A. P.).—King Leopold III of Belgium was heard calling on the men of "the forts of Liege" by radio today to "resist to the utmost for the Fatherland."

"I am calling on you, Forts of Liege," said the Monarch's address, read over the Brussels radio in French and Flemish.

"I address you, Col. Modard, commander, officers, non-commissioned officers and men—to resist to the utmost for the fatherland.

"I am proud of you.

"Leopold."

The Brussels radio broadcast that the Belgian capital was optimistic and calm, and that the public had confidence in "the field army, the defenders of Liege and the Allies."

The military command was reported convinced that "the new phase of events" would result in an Allied victory.

Says Liege Forts Hold Out.

Another broadcast on the wave length of the Brussels radio station said that German mechanized columns had penetrated the Allied lines in Belgium at several points "to a considerable depth," but that the thrusts were unsupported by infantry.

The German infantry was said to be closely held by the Allies.

In the Low Country, fighting British land forces were reported resting their left flank on Zeeland, the Dutch province, and Antwerp, in Belgium. Their lines were said to cover Brussels.

A Belgian communique declared that the Liege forts—some of which the Germans claim to have taken—continue to resist.

Reuters news agency (British) reported that the Belgian Government had decided to remain in Brussels despite the threat broadcast by the Germans that the city would be devastated if military operations continued there.

Fate of Warsaw Threatened.

BERLIN, May 16 (A. P.).—Brussels was threatened today with German devastation from the air.

She faced the fate that overtook Warsaw during the Nazi Blitzkrieg in Poland and that which would have befallen Rotterdam and Utrecht if the Dutch Commander-in-Chief had not surrendered to the Nazi invaders.

The threat to release the German Stukas (dive bombers) on the Belgian capital was contained in a warning issued by the German High Command to the Belgian authorities that "military objects (objectives) in Brussels will be attacked by the German Air Force" unless troop movements and work on fortifications in the city were suspended immediately.

The High Command announced in a communique last night that reconnoissance flights over Brussels in the last few days had established beyond doubt that it is no longer an open city, as the Belgian Government declared it to be when hostilities in the Low Countries began last Friday. It said that aerial reconnoissance during the last few days had disclosed military columns of all sorts marching through the city and troop trains coming in on the various railway lines. It warned the Belgians to stop all military activity in the capital at once if they wished to protect Brussels from the "horrors of war."

Canada Opens Parliament for New War Tasks

Address From Throne Calls Nation 'Ready to Share to Utmost of Strength'

OTTAWA, May 16 (AP).—Canada's Parliament assembled today to examine the Dominion's part in the conduct of the war and consider legislation proposed by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King to stabilize industry. The keynote was in the address from the throne, read by Lyman P. Duff, Administrator of the government since the death of Lord Tweedsmuir, the Governor General.

Recent events, the address declared, had served to "intensify our determination to share in the war effort of the Allied powers to the utmost of our strength." It said that the new Parliament had been summoned "at a time of the greatest conflict in the history of mankind. Upon the outcome of the struggle will depend the maintenance of civilized society and the inheritance of human freedom for our own and future generations."

Earlier in the day James A. Glen, Liberal, of Manitoba, was unanimously elected Speaker of the House of Commons. He was nominated by Prime Minister King and supported by R. B. Hanson, Conservative leader; J. S. Woodsworth, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation leader and John Blackmore, New Democracy leader.

The address from the throne, prepared by the government, said Parliament would be asked to make financial provisions for a war expenditure during the current year estimated at $500,000,000. Ordinary governmental costs have been slashed about $50,000,000.

Political observers predicted bickering would be reduced to a minimum, both because all factions have been deeply impressed by the power of the German offensive and because Prime Minister Mackenzie King's Liberal party holds 182 of the House of Common's 245 seats. The Conservatives returned only thirty-eight members to the House in the elections of March 26 and the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation only seven.

The flag on the peace tower flew at half-mast, reminding members and Senators of the death yesterday of Senator Charles Bourgeois, of Three Rivers, Que. Spectators in the galleries were few because admission was restricted to those having business and to relatives and friends of members.

Tomorrow spokesmen of the government (Liberal) will move and second the address, and on Monday Prime Minister King will open the general debate with an eagerly awaited report on Canada's conduct of the war.

REDS FORESEE WORLD AT WAR

Soviet Paper Thinks U. S. Will Fight Japan.

HALF MANKIND IN ALREADY

Izvestia Says Mediterranean Area Will Be Involved.

MOSCOW, May 16 (A. P.).—The Government newspaper Izvestia asserts that the European war is turning into a world conflict which will soon envelop the Mediterranean area and the Balkans and involve the United States and Japan in the Pacific.

"The imperialistic war begins to demand millions of victims," the paper says today. "One billion two hundred and fifty million men, or over one-half of mankind, already are drawn into the orbit of war in Europe and the Far East."

Izvestia asserts that differences between the British-French bloc and Italy in the Mediterranean and the Near East have reached a state of extreme acuteness.

"Contradictions between the United States and Japan have been sharply aggravated," it says, "in connection with the beginning of the struggle for the 'Dutch inheritance' in Asia.

Nazis Say French Shell Rastatt.

BERLIN, May 16 (A. P.).—Authoritative military spokesmen said tonight that the French had opened fire with long-range artillery on the "open" German city of Rastatt, west of Stuttgart and near the French frontier. In retaliation, the Germans said, the Nazi army has opened fire on the French city of Hagenau, sixteen miles north of Strasbourg.

KAISER SAFE IN DOORN

Nazi Army Detoured to Keep Battle From Him.

BERLIN, May 16 (A. P.).—Former Kaiser Wilhelm II is safe and unharmed at Doorn, his Netherlands refuge since his flight in the last days of the first world war, his family here has been informed.

Gen. Wilhelm von Dommes, administrator of the Hohenzollern family's properties, who was permitted by the German High Command to motor into Holland, reported that he found the eighty-one-year-old ex-monarch planning to remain at his retreat.

The German Army marching in the direction of Utrecht made a detour so as not to involve Doorn in action.

Because of the difficulties of communication Gen. von Dommes could send only the briefest message regarding the monarch, hence details were not known to the family.

Administration headquarters suggested that Dutch police guards, hitherto quartered in an outer entrance building to the estate, probably had to give way to German sentinels.

long provided for drawing Holland and Belgium into the war against Germany.

Izvestia, too, supports the German claim that Great Britain and France had been preparing an offensive across Holland and Belgium and that Germany bested the Allies by taking counter-measures.

It said editorially:

"The war of the Anglo-French military bloc against Germany has entered a new stage. It acquires scope and dimensions exceeding in many respects the first imperialist war. It keeps developing according to its own logic, which is stronger and more real than every other logic.

"England and France had been preparing an offensive against Germany across Dutch and Belgian territories. Germany this time again took her own counter-measures, getting ahead of the Allies.

Allies Behind Again.

"The Anglo-French command again lost the initiative and time.

"The positions won by the German troops in Belgium and Holland again radically changed the strategic situation to Germany's advantage. The German army outflanked the Maginot Line.

"The seizure of the Dutch coast leaves a distance of only about 300 kilometers (185 miles) between German aviation bases and London. High-speed bombers cover this distance in half an hour.

"By also possessing the Danish and Norwegian coasts, Germany acquires domination of the North Sea. German aviation ties down the great British navy, depriving it of the possibility of successful offensive actions, as was proved by the experience of the naval war in Scandinavia."

RUSSIA BLAMES ALLIES FOR WAR IN LOWLANDS

Warns Balkans And Near East To Learn About British Guarantees

MAY 17 1940

Government Paper Says Conflict Will Involve U. S. And Japan Eventually

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, May 16—Responsibility for the war in Holland and Belgium was charged to the Allies today by Pravda, Communist party newspaper, which suggested that the Balkans and the Near East learn a lesson from the Low Countries concerning the "effectiveness" of British guarantees.

In the first outspoken comment since the German invasion of the lowlands, an editorial asserted that Britain had long planned to involve Belgium and the Netherlands in the war and consequently forced Germany to take the initiative.

Sees U. S. And Japan In

Izvestia, Government newspaper, contended the conflict eventually would involve the Balkans and Mediterranean areas and envelop the United States and Japan in the Pacific.

"Contradictions between the British-French bloc and Italy in the Mediterranean and the Near East have reached a state of extreme acuteness," Izvestia said. "One may assume that in the near future the Mediterranean basin and the Balkan peninsula will become a new war theater as unequivocally stated by (British Prime Minister) Chamberlain shortly before his resignation."

Danger Grows In Pacific

The paper asserted that the war danger was growing in the Pacific where "contradictions between the United States and Japan were sharply aggravated in connection with the beginning of a struggle for the 'Dutch inheritance' in Asia"—Holland's rich East Indies empire.

Izvestia forecast "the imperialists will exert every effort to draw new countries into it."

"One must reiterate again and again that the policies of certain small neutral nations assisting in further fanning the war can be described only as suicidal," it said. "Such is the result of the slogan for an extension of the war advanced by the British-French bloc."

Russian Doctor Pays Calls by Parachute

MOSCOW, May 16 (A. P.).—Russia has a "parachute doctor"—A. A. Poll of Odessa—who uses the parachute method to reach urgent cases in outlying districts.

Yesterday he made his 194th jump to reach the bedside of a critically ill patient. Weather conditions did not permit his plane to land.

So-called "medical aviation" is an important factor in many outlying regions of the Soviet Union.

FRENCH REASSURE JAPAN ON INDIES

Agree Dutch Islands Must Keep Status Quo.

MAY 17 1940

TOKIO, May 16 (A. P.).—The French Ambassador, Charles Arsene Henry, today notified the Japanese Foreign Minister, Hachiro Arita, that France agrees with Japan that the status quo of the Netherlands East Indies must be maintained.

Meanwhile Mr. Arita conferred again with J. C. Pabst, the Netherlands Minister.

A spokesman for the Japanese Admiralty, expressing what is believed to be the general Japanese viewpoint on the status of the Netherlands East Indies, said today: "Japan's only concern now regarding the East Indies is whether the assurances of other Powers will be kept. In so far as diplomatic negotiations are concerned, the matter is closed."

To Peg East Indies Guilder.

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, May 16 (A. P.).—The Government announced today it was taking measures to stabilize the East Indies guilder. Telegraphic communication with the Netherlands was suspended temporarily.

Troops Rushed to Border of Italian-occupied Albania.

ALLIED FLEET ON MANEUVERS

Athens Uneasy as Britain Is Reported Asking Naval Bases.

ATHENS, May 16 (A. P.).—Greece poured troop reinforcements today into her mountainous frontier region facing Italian-occupied Albania, just across the entrance of the Adriatic from the heel of the Italian boot.

Troops at Piræus, near Athens, began embarking and disembarking exercises with infantry, cavalry, artillery, aviation and engineering units participating, and similar exercises were to be conducted at other ports.

[Apparently the Greeks were feeling the pinch of Allied and Italian rivalry for strategic position in the Eastern Mediterranean. However, insecurity of communications from Athens, by way of Budapest, the channel of dispatch, and perhaps Greek censorship obscured the full meaning of the troop movements. The telephone connection from Athens to Budapest was broken in the middle of the dispatch.]

Britain Seeking Naval Bases.

It was reported anew, without confirmation, that Great Britain was pressing Greece for permission to establish naval bases on Greek islands.

The Anglo-French battle fleet based at Alexandria, Egypt, had put to sea for scheduled maneuvers, and this caused new uneasiness among the Greeks.

Like Rumania and Turkey, Greece holds a promise of aid from Britain and France in case her independence is threatened.

Col. Papademas, Under-Secretary of War and outranked only by the Premier, Gen. John Metaxas as head of the armed forces of Greece, arrived at the frontier region of Yanina to take personal charge of general preparedness measures. The Yanina district, on the Greek mainland, is flanked at sea by the Greek island of Corfu, at the neck of the Adriatic, the Otranto Strait.

Italy Warned Off in 1939.

Corfu, back of which the Greeks laid their frontier defenses, has been the object of Italian ambitions because of its dominating position—virtually a cork for the Adriatic if fortified strongly enough.

Reports that Britain was pressing for bases on Corfu and other Greek islands had been circulated previously, some attributed to German sources.

In 1939 the British got wind of reports that Italy was about to occupy Corfu to safeguard her Adriatic flank. They served notice on Premier Mussolini that such a move would be an invitation to war.

Italian warships shelled Corfu and occupied the island for a month in 1923, in professed retaliation for the assassination of an Italian official for which she held the Greek Government responsible. The Italians withdrew when Greece paid 50,000,000 lire (currently more than $2,500,000) indemnity.

Assured by Rome and Berlin.

Greece, along with other countries in southeastern Europe, was reported on May 2, last, to have been assured by both Italian and German diplomats that she need not fear an Axis invasion. However, ten classes of army reserve officers were called up for active duty the same day.

The booming guns of the Anglo-French fleet in their practice off Alexandria formed an obbligato for the fluctuating fears of southeastern Europe, the Near East and Egypt.

The cross-currents of Allied and Italo-German promises and threats have kept the Balkans and the Near East in a dither of varying degree since the European war started last September.

Recently the greatest concern has been over the possibility that Italy would drop her non-belligerent or "pre-belligerent" status and join Germany in the war.

The Day's War Communiques

MAY 17 1940

The official communiques issued today by the warring Powers are presented below:

LONDON.

The British Air Ministry made the following announcement:

"The Royal Air Force last night carried out east of the Rhine a big offensive against the enemy's road and rail communications which are supporting his forces in their invasion of the low countries and Luxemburg.

"The attacks lasted throughout the night and many tons of bombs were released. Road and rail communications were attacked at many points, fires broke out and heavy explosions were caused.

"This was the heaviest attack yet made by the Royal Air Force during the war."

PARIS.

The French High Command said in its regular communique:

"From the region of Namur (Belgium) to that of Sedan (France) the battle is taking on the characteristics of open warfare, with participation on both sides by motorized units and aviation.

"These higher interests of the conduct of operations compel us not to give at the present moment any precise information as to the actions now taking place."

BERLIN.

The German High Command issued the following communique:

"German troops, after conclusion of capitulation negotiations in Holland, entered The Hague and Amsterdam.

"In Belgium the enemy accepted the fight in the Anvers (Antwerp) fortification, the Dyle position and the Namur fortification.

"Our divisions expanded their successes southwest of Namur where they reached the western embankment of the Meuse, again defeating French armored units.

"South of Sedan, French counter-attacks, which were conducted by use of the heaviest tanks, were repelled. Several of these tanks were destroyed.

"Between the Moselle and the Rhine we advanced our positions west of Saarlautern and near Lauterburg.

"The air force on May 15 again attacked strong units of enemy troops and traffic connections. Marching columns of troops and concentrations were dispersed and numerous enemy armored cars were destroyed by square hits.

"In the air, above the fighting army, forty-six enemy airplanes were shot down in air fights and two additional planes were bagged by anti-aircraft. During raids on enemy airports numerous airplanes were destroyed on the ground.

"Definitely established total losses of the opponents on May 15 amount to ninety-eight airplanes.

"Eighteen of our own airplanes were lost.

"In the sea region off the Netherlands and Belgian coast two destroyers and three merchant ships, among which were one 12,000-ton steamer, were sunk by bombs and two destroyers and four merchant ships were hit severely. One tanker and one armed merchant ship were torpedoed by one of our submarines.

"Last night again enemy airplanes made flights over western Germany. They dropped aimlessly a number of bombs, causing immaterial damage but killing and injuring a number of civilians. Military objectives neither were raided nor hit.

"The Narvik contingent again repulsed attacks with heavy losses for the enemy. This group, carrying out orders, strengthened far-advanced outposts in the region north of Narvik."

WAR FLASHES

London, May 16 (AP)—The Ministry of Home Security warned tonight that "there now is a risk that enemy parachutists may attempt to land in this country," and urged motorists to keep their cars out of German hands.

"All owners of vehicles should see that from dusk to dawn their vehicles cannot readily be taken away," the Ministry said, recommending that cars be locked in garages and spark plugs removed.

New York, May 16 (AP)—The Nazis have not yet employed their "new secret weapon" in warfare, a short-wave broadcast from Germany reported tonight.

Spanish Neutrality

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 16—Alexander W. Weddell, United States Ambassador to Spain, said today on arrival aboard the Italian liner Roma that he believed Spain would retain strict neutrality through the war. He is en route to Washington.

Weddell said he discounted rumors that Spanish air fields might serve eventually as German bases, in return for help which totalitarian powers gave the Nationalists during the civil war.

MAY 17 1940

"All evidence I have seen points to continued strict neutrality," he said.

Recovered Remarkably

The country has made a "remarkable" internal recovery, he added, under the leadership of Francisco Franco.

Capt. Adolfo d'Espito said that the Roma was held thirty hours at Gibraltar by the British but that "they gave us no explanation."

Took Juniper Oil

Line officials said the British removed only three barrels of juniper oil, probably because they believed it to be of German manufacture.

Crew members said contraband-control officers slit mattresses in their quarters and also the linings of coats.

Dutch Funds Frozen

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 16—The Treasury revoked today, at Holland's request, authority to remove Dutch Government funds from the United States without special permission of the United States Treasury.

Dr. A. Loudon, the Dutch Minister, asked Secretary Morgenthau to revoke the license, granted a few days ago, after the Germans occupied virtually all of Holland.

The Treasury secretary told reporters that the reason for the revocation request was "obvious."

He indicated that, now that Germany occupies the Dutch capital and most of its European territory, that a technical dispute might arise as to who constitutes the legal Dutch Government. The Dutch Government recognized by the United States has fled to London, but officials envisaged the possibility of the Germans setting up a new government in Holland and claiming ownership of the vast Dutch deposits in the United States.

Latest figures indicate that the Dutch Government and its people had at least $200,000,000 cash in the United States, not counting gold and securities.

The Dutch Government will still be able to use the funds in America by asking permission of the Treasury for each separate transaction.

Those Heavy Tanks Weigh 30 Tons or More

By Associated Press.

When military men speak of "heavy" tanks they mean just that.

MAY 17 1940

There are three classifications for the tread-track cruisers, the others are "light" and "medium."

Light tanks weigh from five to fifteen tons; mediums from fifteen to thirty. Most nations, including the United States, regard these as sufficient. French tank men are leading proponents of the heavies, which range from thirty tons up.

Roosevelt Sees Possibility Of Attack

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 16—President Roosevelt asked Congress today for $1,182,000,000 in cash and contract authorizations for military implements to "meet any lightning offensive against our American interest."

MAY 17 1940

In stark, realistic words, which were broadcast to the nation and relayed over the world by short wave, Mr. Roosevelt pointed to lessons learned by nations which were not ready for war and were overrun by enemies.

"Surely," he said, "the developments of the past few weeks have made it clear to all of our citizens that the possibility of attack on vital American zones ought to make it essential that we have the physical, the ready ability to meet those attacks and to prevent them from reaching their objectives."

"This means military implements—not on paper—which are ready and available to meet any lightning offensive against our American interest," he said. "It means also that facilities for production must be ready to turn out munitions and equipment at top speed."

The President, who has been in communication with Premier Mussolini in an effort to prevent spread of the war, said he still was praying for peace and for banishment from the earth of aggression and force.

Yet, he added, America plainly has a task before it of building up her armed might.

"Our Defenses Must Be Invulnerable"

"Our defenses must be invulnerable," he said, "our security absolute. But our defense as it was yesterday, or even as it is today, does not provide security against potential developments and dangers of the future. . . .

"Our ideal, our objective is still peace—peace at home and abroad. Nevertheless, we stand ready not only to spend millions for defense but to give our service and even our lives for the maintenance of our American liberties."

The text of the special defense message follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

"These are ominous days—days whose swift and shocking developments force every neutral national to look to its defenses in the light of new factors. The brutal force of modern offensive war has been loosed in all its horror.

"New powers of destruction, incredibly swift and deadly, have been developed; and those who wield them are ruthless and daring.

"No old defense is so strong that it requires no further strengthening and no attack is so unlikely or impossible that it may be ignored.

"Let us examine, without self-deception, the dangers which confront us. Let us measure our strength and our defense without self-delusion.

Must Recast Defense Ideas

"The clear fact is that the American people must recast their thinking about national protection.

"Motorized armies can now sweep through enemy territories at the rate of 200 miles a day.

"Parachute troops are dropped from airplanes in large numbers behind enemy lines. Troops are landed from planes in open fields, on wide highways and at local civil airports.

"We have seen the treacherous use of the 'fifth column' by which persons supposed to be peaceful visitors were actually a part of an enemy unit of occupation. Lightning attacks, capable of destroying airplane factories and munition works hundreds of miles behind the lines, are part of the new technique of modern war.

Danger Of Surprise Attack

"The element of surprise which has ever been an important tactic in warfare has become the more dangerous because of the amazing speed with which modern equipment can reach and attack the enemy's country.

"Our own vital interests are widespread. More than ever the protection of the whole American Hemisphere against invasion or control or domination by non-American nations has the united support of the twenty-one American republics, including the United States. More than ever this protection calls for ready-at-hand weapons capable of great mobility, because of the potential speed of modern attack.

"The Atlantic and Pacific oceans were reasonably adequate defensive barriers when fleets under sail could move at an average speed of five miles an hour. Even then by a sudden foray it was possible for an opponent actually to burn our National Capitol. Later, the oceans still gave strength to our defense when fleets and convoys propelled by steam could sail the oceans at fifteen or twenty miles an hour.

"If An Enemy Seized Bermuda"

"But the new element—air navigation—steps up the speed of possible attack to two hundred, to three hundred miles an hour.

MAY 17 1940

"Furthermore, it brings the new possibilities of the use of nearer bases from which an attack or attacks on the American continents could be made. From the fjords of Greenland it is 4 hours by air to Newfoundland; 5 hours to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec, and only 6 hours to New England.

"The Azores are only 2,000 miles from parts of our eastern seaboard and if Bermuda fell into hostile hands it is a matter of less than 3 hours for modern bombers to reach our shores.

"The islands off the west coast of Africa are only 1,500 miles from Brazil. Modern planes starting from the Cape Verde Islands can be over Brazil in 7 hours.

"And Para, Brazil, is but 4 flying hours to Caracas, Venezuela; and Venezuela but 2½ hours to Cuba and the Canal Zone; and Cuba and the Canal Zone are 2¼ hours to Tampico, Mexico; and Tampico is 2¼ hours to St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha.

"On the other side of the continent, Alaska, with a white population of only 30,000 people, is within 4 or 5 hours of flying distance to Vancouver, Seattle, Tacoma and Portland. The islands of the southern Pacific are not too far removed from the West Coast of South America to prevent them from becoming bases of enormous strategic advantage of attacking forces.

For Top-Speed Readiness

"Surely, the developments of the past few weeks have made it clear to all of our citizens that the possibility of attack on vital American zones ought to make it essential that we have the physical, the ready ability to meet those attacks and to prevent them from reaching their objectives.

"This means military implements—not on paper—which are ready and available to meet any lightning offensive against our American interest. It means also that facilities for production must be ready to turn out munitions and equipment at top speed.

"We have had the lesson before us over and over again—nations that were not ready and were unable to get ready found themselves overrun by the enemy. So-called impregnable fortifications no longer exist. A defense which allows an enemy to consolidate his approach without hindrance will lose. A defense which makes no effective effort to destroy the lines of supplies and communications of the enemy will lose.

Denies Waste In Program

"An effective defense by its very nature requires the equipment to attack an aggressor on his route before he can establish strong bases within the territory of American vital interests.

"Loose talking and thinking on the part of some may give the false impression that our own army and navy are not first-rate, or that money has been wasted on them.

"Nothing could be further from the truth.

"In recent years the defensive power of our army, navy and Marine Corps has been very greatly improved.

"The navy is stronger today than at any time in the nation's history. Today also a large program of new construction is well under way. Ship for ship, ours are equal to, or better than, the vessels of any foreign power.

Facing New Lessons Every Day

"The army likewise is at its greatest peace-time strength. Its equipment in quality and quantity has been greatly increased and improved.

"The National Guard and the reserve strength of the two services are better equipped and better prepared than during any other peace-time period.

"On the other side of the picture we must visualize the outstanding fact that since the first day of September, 1939, every week that has passed has brought new lessons learned from actual combat on land and sea.

"I cite examples. Where naval ships have operated without adequate protection by defending aircraft, their vulnerability to air attack has increased. All nations are hard at work studying the need of additional anti-aircraft protection.

Even Greater Changes In Air

"Several months ago the use of a new type of magnetic mine made many unthinking people believe that all surface ships were doomed. Within a few weeks a successful defensive device against these mines was placed in operation; and it is a fact that the sinkings of merchant ships by torpedo, by mine or by airplane are definitely much lower than during the similar period in 1915.

"Combat conditions have changed even more rapidly in the air. With the amazing progress in the design of planes and engines, the airplane of a year ago is out-of-date now. It is too slow, it is improperly protected, it is too weak in gun power.

"In types of planes, we are not behind the other nations of the world. Many of the planes of the belligerent powers are at this moment not of the latest models. But one belligerent power not only has many more planes than all their opponents combined, but also appears to have a weekly production capacity at the moment that is far greater than that of their opponents.

Asks Congress Cooperate

"From the point of view of our own defense, therefore, great additional production capacity is our principal air requisite.

MAY 17 1940

"For the permanent record, I ask the Congress not to take any action which would in any way hamper or delay the delivery of American-made planes to foreign nations which have ordered them, or seek to purchase more planes. That, from the point of view of our own national defense, would be extremely shortsighted.

"During the past year American production capacity for war planes, including engines, has risen from approximately 6,000 planes a year to more than double that number, due in greater part to the placing of foreign orders.

"Our immediate problem is to superimpose on this production capacity a greatly increased additional production capacity. I should like to see this nation geared up to the ability to turn out at least 50,000 planes a year. Furthermore, I believe that this nation should plan at this time a program that would provide us with 50,000 military and naval planes.

Asks Large Sum At Once

"The ground forces of the army require the immediate speeding up of last winter's program to procure equipment of all kinds, including motor transport and artillery, including anti-aircraft guns and full ammunition supplies. It had been planned to spread these requirements over the next three or four years. We should fill them at once.

"At this time I am asking the immediate appropriation by the Congress of a large sum of money for four primary purposes:

"First, to procure the essential equipment of all kinds for a larger and thoroughly rounded-out army;

"Second, to replace or modernize all old army and navy equipment with the latest type of equipment;

"Third, to increase production facilities for everything needed for the army and navy for national defense. We require the ability to turn out quickly infinitely greater supplies;

"Fourth, to speed up to a twenty-four-hour basis all existing army and navy contracts, and all new contracts to be awarded.

30.24-2315

For The Army—$546,000,000

"I ask for an immediate appropriation of $896,000,000, divided approximately as follows:

1. For the army, $546,000,000.

2. For the navy and Marine Corps, $250,000,000.

3. To the President to provide for emergencies affecting the national security and defense, $100,000,000.

"In addition to the above sum, I ask for authorizations for the army, navy and Marine Corps to make contract obligations in the further sum of $186,000,000.

"And to the President an additional authorization to make contract obligations for $100,000,000.

MAY 17 1940

"The total of authorizations is, therefore, $286,000,000.

Details To Be Given Committees

"It is my belief that a large part of the requested appropriation of $100,000,000 and the requested authorization of $100,000,000 to the President will be used principally for the increase of production of airplanes, anti-aircraft guns, and the training of additional personnel for these weapons. This would be in addition to the direct estimates for these purposes in the other items requested.

"The proposed details of the appropriation and authorizations asked for will be given to the committees of the Congress.

"These estimates do not, of course, duplicate any item now in the pending war and navy appropriation bills for the year 1941. Nor do they include supplemental or deficiency estimates which may become necessary by reason of pending legislation or shortage of funds under existing programs.

Voices Confidence In Democracy

"There are some who say that democracy cannot cope with the new techniques of government developed in recent years by a few countries—by a few countries which deny the freedoms which we maintain are essential to our democratic way of life. This I reject.

"I know that our trained officers and men know more about fighting and the weapons and equipment needed for fighting than any of us laymen; and I have confidence in them.

"I know that to cope with present dangers we must be strong in heart and hand; strong in our faith—strong in faith in our way of living.

"I, too, pray for peace—that the ways of aggression and force may be banished from the earth—but I am determined to face the fact realistically that this nation requires a toughness of moral and physical fiber. Those qualities, I am convinced, the American people hold to a high degree.

"Our task is plain. The road we must take is clearly indicated. Our defenses must be invulnerable, our security absolute. But our defense as it was yesterday, or even as it is today, does not provide security against potential developments and dangers of the future.

"Defense Cannot Be Static"

"Defense cannot be static. Defense must grow and change from day to day. Defense must be dynamic and flexible, an expression of the vital forces of the nation and of its resolute will to meet whatever challenge the future may hold.

"For these reasons, I need hardly assure you that after the adjournment of this session of the Congress, I will not hesitate to call the Congress into special session if at any time the situation of the national defense requires it. The Congress and the Chief Executive constitute a team where the defense of the land is concerned.

"Our ideal, our objective is still peace—peace at home and peace abroad. Nevertheless, we stand ready not only to spend millions for defense but to give our service and even our lives for the maintenance of our American liberties.

"Our security is not a matter of weapons alone. The arm that wields them must be strong, the eye that guides them clear, the will that directs them indomitable.

"These are the characteristics of a free people, a people devoted to the institutions they themselves have built, a people willing to defend a way of life that is precious to them all, a people who put their faith in God."

Americans Must Recast Their Thinking About Protection, Roosevelt Says.

To the Congress of the United States:

These are ominous days—days whose swift and shocking developments force every neutral nation to look to its defenses in the light of new factors. The brutal force of modern offensive war has been loosed in all its horror.

New powers of destruction, incredibly swift and deadly, have been developed; and those who wield them are ruthless and daring.

We have seen the treacherous use of the "fifth column" by which persons supposed to be peaceful visitors were actually a part of an enemy unit of occupation. WASHINGTON, MAY 16-(AP)-THE FRENCH DECREE EXTENDING THE ARMY ZONE TO INCLUDE PARIS WAS VIEWED BY MILITARY AUTHORITIES HERE TONIGHT AS AN ADMINISTRATIVE MOVE TO GIVE ARMY NEEDS A CLEAR RIGHT OF WAY OVER CIVILIAN REQUIREMENTS DURING THE CRUCIAL WESTERN FRONT STRUGGLE.

IT WAS NOT VIEWED AS NECESSARILY AN INDICATION THAT THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT CONSIDERED THE CAPITAL TO BE IMPERILED BY THE GERMAN DRIVE.

DESCRIBING THE ACTION AS "NATURAL AND EXPECTED," ALLIED OFFICIAL SOURCES EXPLAINED THAT HITHERTO PARIS HAD BEEN LEFT OUT OF THE ARMY ZONE BECAUSE OF ITS IMPORTANCE AS A METROPOLITAN AREA AND MANUFACTURING CENTER. FOR ADMINISTRATIVE PURPOSES IT WAS A CORPS AREA IN ITSELF.

THE ZONE EXTENDS FROM MEAUX NORTHWEST TO THE CHANNEL, IT WAS SAID.

THE DECREE WILL HAVE THE EFFECT , IT WAS EXPLAINED, OF PUTTING ANTI-AIRCRAFT DEFENSES, "BLACKOUT" CONTROL, TRANSPORTATION AND OTHER FACILITIES UNDER MILITARY CONTROL. EXTENDING THE ARMY ZONE, IT WAS ADDED, DIFFERS FROM MARTIAL LAW, UNDER WHICH THE ARMY IS GIVEN ENTIRE CONTROL OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

AUTHORIZED SOURCES INDICATED THE GERMAN RIGHT WIN WAS BEING STRENGTHENED WITH TROOPS RELEASED AS A RESULT OF THE NETHERLANDS CAPITULATION TO PERFECT THE VON SCHLIEFFEN PLAN FOR A WIDE ASSAULT--TO TURN FRANCE'S NORTHERN FLANK--IN WHAT MAY BE THE "BATTLE OF THE AGES."

MAY 17 1940

DNB, OFFICIAL NEWS AGENCY, SAID "SEVERAL MILLION OF THE BEST EQUIPPED SOLDIERS ARE FACING EACH OTHER IN THIS AREA." REPORTS FROM THE FRONT FURTHER GAVE THE IMPRESSION OF AN IMMINENT ATTACK AND REPEATED THAT BRUSSELS WOULD BE IN GERMAN HANDS WITHIN THE NEXT FEW DAYS.

ADVICES REACHING HERE LINKED MOVEMENTS IN THE DYLE AREA WITH THOSE FARTHER SOUTH, WHERE THE GREATEST ADVANCE WAS IN THE VICINITY OF FRENCH SEDAN.

DEEP PENETRATION OF THE SEDAN SECTION, IT WAS CONJECTURED, MIGHT HAVE THE DOUBLE EFFECT OF FORCING ALLIED WITHDRAWAL FROM BELGIUM AND THE DYLE SECTOR AND, AT THE SAME TIME, FORCING WITHDRAWALS FROM THE WESTERNMOST SECTION OF THE MAIN MAGINOT LINE.

DNB REPORTS FROM THE FRONT DESCRIBING THE IMPORTANCE OF AN IMMINENT BATTLE BETWEEN ANTWERP AND NAMUR, EMPHASIZED THAT BRITAIN WAS INSISTENT THAT THE BELGIANS DO THEIR UTMOST TO HOLD THE AREA BECAUSE OF THE PROSPECT THE GERMANS MIGHT GAIN POSITIONS DIRECTLY ACROSS THE NARROW CHANNEL FROM THE BRITISH COAST.

ALONG THE MEUSE RIVER, SOUTH OF NAMUR AND IN THE SEDAN REGION, DNB REPORTED THE GERMANS WERE GAINING SLOWLY BUT STEADILY.

THE GERMAN LEFT WING, IN THE VICINITY OF SEDAN, MUST BE PROTECTED, DNB SAID "TO PREVENT FLANKING BY THE FRENCH WITH A VIEW TO RELIEVING THE PRESSURE ON THE DYLE."

REPUTED INVINCIBILITY OF THE NEW HEAVY FRENCH TANKS, THE AGENCY SAID, HAS BEEN DISPROVED IN THE SEDAN REGION, WHERE PLANES FOUND THEM "ECELLENT TARGETS."

THE AGENCY REPORTED THAT GERMAN U-BOATS WERE NOW BOUND FOR BRITAIN FROM DUTCH PORTS.

IN THE BROADER STRATEGIC FIELDS, FOREIGN OBSERVERS NOTED RUMORS FROM THE BALKANS THAT YUGOSLAVIA AND GREECE WERE JITTERY AND NERVOUS AND WONDERING WHETHER AN ITALIAN DECISION WOULD BE DETERMINED BY THE OUTCOME OF THE PENDING BATTLE IN BELGIUM.

MAY 17 1940

SOME GERMAN SOURCES SPECULATED THAT THE MASSED ITALIAN-GERMAN AIR-FLEETS HAVE THE POWER TO "REND FRANCE LIKE A BUTTERFLY."

INFORMED SOURCES SAID THE FATE OF WARSAW MAY AWAIT BRUSSELS IF BRUSSELS CITIZENS HAVE "TORTURED" GERMAN PARACHUTE TROOPS, "AS CERTAIN BELGIAN NEWSPAPERS URGED THEY SHOULD DO."

SAID ONE AUTHORIZED COMMENTATOR, GRIMLY:

"WHEN WE ENTER BRUSSELS A FEW DAYS HENCE, IF WE FIND TRACES OF SADISTIC TREATMENT OF OUR PARACHUTERS, OUR VENGEANCE WILL BE FAST AND FURIOUS."

THE HIGH COMMAND LAST NIGHT ANNOUNCED THAT BRUSSELS, BECAUSE IT IS THE SCENE OF TROOP MOVEMENTS, CAN NO LONGER BE CONSIDERED AN "OPEN" TOWN, IMMUNE FROM BOMBS OR SHELLS.

HIGH COMMAND ACKNOWLEDGED THE ALLIES HAD "ACCEPTED THE FIGHT."

ON THE MAIN MEUSE FRONT, GERMAN DIVISIONS "EXPANDED THEIR SUCCESSES." CROSSING OF THE MEUSE AND BEATING BACK OF FRENCH ARMORED UNITS WERE CITED.

THE AIR FORCE WAS CREDITED WITH DESTROYING 98 ALLIED PLANES ON WEDNESDAY, AND LOSING BUT 18.

BEFORE THE MAIN MAGINOT LINE, BETWEEN THE MOSELLE AND THE RHINE, 100 MILES EAST OF SEDAN, THE GERMANS CONTINUED TO ATTACK, THE HIGH COMMAND SAID, TAKING MORE GROUND BETWEEN THE MAIN LINES OF FORTIFICATIONS.

NEW AIR BOMB DESTRUCTION AND DAMAGE TO ALLIED WARSHIPS AND TRANSPORTS WAS CLAIMED OFF THE LOW COUNTRY COASTS.

BUT DETAILS OF MILITARY ACTION BECAME SUDDENLY SCARCE IN BERLIN.

AUTHORIZED SOURCES SAID BOTH SIDES EVIDENTLY WERE BRINGING THEIR FORCES INTO FINAL POSITIONS AND SILENCE WAS IN ORDER TO KEEP THE PLANS FROM REACHING THE ENEMY.

RUMBLINGS OF POSSIBLE TROUBLE IN THE BALKANS STIRRED THE GERMAN CAPITAL. BUT OFFICIALS INSISTED GERMANY HAD NO INTEREST IN WIDENING THE AREA OF CONFLICT.

MAY 17 1940

THE VOLKISCHER BEOBACHTER, HITLER'S OWN PAPER, EDITORIALLY ADMONISHED THE YUGOSLAVS TO TREAT THE GERMAN MINORITY BETTER. YET AUTHORIZED SOURCES INSISTED THIS WAS A "FRIENDLY SUGGESTION," CONTAINING NO THREAT.

THESE PERSONS ALSO CONTENDED NOTHING IS KNOWN HERE ABOUT THE SOVIET UNION'S REPORTED NOTICE TO BRITAIN, FRANCE, ITALY AND GERMANY THAT RUSSIAN INTERESTS WOULD BE AFFECTED VITALLY BY ANY ATTEMPT TO CHANGE THE STATUS OF SOUTHERN EUROPE.

THE SOVIET AMBASSADOR, ALEXANDER SCHKWARZEW, RECENTLY HAD A LONG TALK WITH GERMAN FOREIGN MINISTER JOACHIM VON RIBBENTROP.

STOCKHOLM, MAY 16-(AP)-A BITTER STRUGGLE FOR POSSESSION OF NARVIK, NORWAY'S ARCTIC IRON ORE PORT, APPEARED TONIGHT TO BE INTENSIFYING WITH THE ALLIES REPORTED TO BE GETTING SOME LIGHT TANKS INTO ACTION AND GRADUALLY WINNING THE UPPER HAND.

SOME SWEDISH PRESS REPORTS SAID AN ALLIED OCCUPATION OF GERMAN-HELD NARVIK ITSELF MIGHT BE EXPECTED SOON. THEY SAID THE GERMAN GARRISON HAD BEEN SUBJECTED TO A PROLONGED, HEAVY BOMBARDMENT.

NEWLY-ARRIVED CANADIAN TROOPS WERE SAID TO HAVE JOINED THE ALLIED FORCES.

LATEST REPORTS SAID ALLIED AND NORWEGIAN TROOPS HAD TAKEN THE VILLAGE OF ELVEGAARDSMOEN, ON THE NORTH SIDE OF ROMBAKSFJORD, AND WERE MOVING STEADILY TO SEPARATE GERMAN OUTPOSTS FROM THE PORT AND TO CUT OFF A POSSIBLE LINE OF GERMAN RETREAT TO THE SWEDISH BORDER.

LONDON, MAY 16-(AP)-A NORWEGIAN HIGH COMMAND COMMUNIQUE, RELAYED BY REUTERS, BRITISH NEWS AGENCY, FROM SOMEWHERE IN NORWAY, SAID ALLIED AND GERMAN FORCES WERE FORCED TO RETIRE LAST NIGHT IN THE FACE OF A GERMAN ATTACK IN THE REGION OF FINNEID, 30 MILES NORTH OF MOSJOEN AND ABOUT 175 MILES SOUTH OF NARVIK.

TOKYO, MAY 17-(FRIDAY)-(AP)-THE JAPANESE PRESS DECLARED TODAY THAT ANY CURTAILMENT OF VITAL EXPORTS TO JAPAN FROM THE DUTCH EAST INDIES OR ANY SHIFT OF THEIR RESOURCES TO BRITISH CAPITAL WOULD BE CONSIDERED BY TOKYO AS A CHANGE IN THE STATUS QUO OF THE RICH NETHERLANDS ISLAND EMPIRE.

MAY 17 1940

"JAPAN COULD NOT IGNORE ANY PROHIBITION OR SUBSTANTIAL RESTRICTION ON THE EXPORT OF VITAL MATERIALS TO JAPAN ON THE PRETEXT OF SHORTAGES OWING TO THE NEED OF SUPPLIES FOR THE ALLIES," SAID THE NEWSPAPER KUKOMIN.

"FURTHERMORE SHE WOULD CONSIDER THE STATUS QUO CHANGED IF THE EAST INDIES RESOURCES WERE PLACED UNDER BRITISH CAPITAL."

OBSERVERS BELIEVE THAT ECONOMICS IS THE FUNDAMENTAL ISSUE BECAUSE, WITH THE UNITED STATES, THE EAST INDIES ARE THE PRINCIPAL SOURCES OF IMPORTANT MATERIALS FOR JAPAN, WHO STILL IS FEARFUL OF AN AMERICAN EMBARGO. JAPAN HAS BEEN WITHOUT A TRADE TREATY WITH THE UNITED STATES SINCE LAST JAN. 26 WHEN WASHINGTON DENOUNCED ITS AGREEMENT WITH TOKYO.

JAPAN SERVED NOTICE ON THE WORLD A MONTH AGO THAT SHE WANTED NO CHANGE IN THE STATUS QUO OF THE EAST INDIES. THE NEXT DAY SECRETARY OF STATE CORDELL HULL SAID THAT ANY OUTSIDE INTERFERENCE WITH THE DUTCH POSSESSIONS IN THE PACIFIC "WOULD BE PREJUDICIAL TO THE CAUSE OF STABILITY, PEACE AND SECURITY IN THE ENTIRE PACIFIC AREA."

KUKOMIN ADDED THAT JAPAN ALSO WOULD OPPOSE "ANY MAJOR INCREASE OF THE EAST INDIES ARMAMENTS EVEN IF AUTONOMOUSLY, AND ANY CHANGE IN THE EXISTING ARMAMENT CALCULATED ORIGINALLY TO STRENGTHEN SINGAPORE" OR ANY OTHER ALLIED FAR EASTERN DEFENSES. SINGAPORE IS THE GREAT BRITISH NAVAL BASE IN THE MALAY STRAITS.

THE NEWSPAPER ASSERTED JAPAN WOULD OPPOSE "ANY PLACING OF THE EAST INDIES ARMAMENT UNDER CONTROL OF OTHER POWERS OR THEIR INCORPORATION INTO A SCHEME OF FOREIGN DEFENSES." MAY 17 1940

WASHINGTON, MAY 16--THE FACT THAT A NATION CANNOT BE ARMED OVERNIGHT FOR MODERN WARFARE IS GRADUALLY BEING IMPRESSED ON MEMBERS OF CONGRESS BY MILITARY EXPERTS IN THE NEW DRIVE FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE FUNDS.

YET, THE OPPOSITION IS WILTING SLOWLY. SOME MEMBERS ON BOTH SIDES FIND IT HARD TO THINK IN TERMS OF BIG SCALE DEFENSE ARMAMENT, WANT TO PROCEED SLOWLY AND TAKE ADVANTAGE OF DEVELOPMENTS WHICH MAY PRODUCE NEW WEAPONS.

A FEW NOTES ON THE TIME-CONSUMING OPERATIONS THAT ARE NECESSARY MAY BE FOUND BY A LITTLE RESEARCH INTO THE WORLD WAR. THEY SHOW:

ORDERS FOR 4,000 HEAVY VICKERS MACHINE GUNS WERE PLACED IN DECEMBER, 1916. ONLY 2,000 HAD BEEN PRODUCED BY THE END OF 1917. NOT UNTIL 1918 HAD PRODUCTION BEEN STEPPED UP TO A RATE OF 10,000 A YEAR.

MAY 17 1940

IT WAS 13 MONTHS AFTER THE DECISION TO PRODUCE THE BROWNING AUTOMATIC RIFLE AND BROWNING MACHINE GUN BEFORE THEY WERE TURNED OUT IN ANY QUANTITY. HERE, THE NECESSARY MACHINERY AND EQUIPMENT HAD TO BE PROCURED AND MEN TAUGHT TO MAKE THE GUNS. THE PRODUCTION OF AUTOMATIC RIFLES AND MACHINE GUNS JUMPED FROM 8,000 IN 1917 TO 219,000 IN 1918.

INITIAL PLANS IN 1917 CALLED FOR 3,200 75-MILLIMETER GUNS, TWO-THIRDS OF THEM TO BE PRODUCED AT ONCE. AN EARLY PRODUCTION OF 300 TO 400 A MONTH WAS REQUIRED IF THEY WERE TO BE OBTAINED ON ANYTHING LIKE SCHEDULE.

ON ANY BASIS OF CONSUMTPION DISCLOSED HERE, GERMANY'S ARMY IS CONSUMING GASOLINE IN ITS PRESENT FULL-FORCE WAR EFFORT AT A FAR GREATER DAILY RATE THAN IT IS RECEIVING NEW SUPPLIES.

THE MOST FAVORABLE ESTIMATE OF A GOVERNMENT EXPERT WAS THAT GERMANY COULD PROCURE ONLY 2,980,000 TONS OF GASOLINE A YEAR FROM ALL SOURCES-CONTROLLED TERRITORIES, RUMANIA, RUSSIA AND SYNTHETIC GASOLINE PRODUCTION. THAT WOULD AMOUNT TO 945,000,000 GALLONS OR AN AVERAGE DAILY INFLOW OF 2,589,000 GALLONS.

IN THE THREE WEEKS OF THE POLISH CAMPAIGN, GERMANY'S LAND FORCES ALONE ARE ESTIMATED RELIABLY TO HAVE USED 4,675,000 GALLONS OF GASOLINE A DAY.

MAY 17 1940

IN THAT CAMPAIGN 48 DIVISIONS WERE REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN ENGAED, TWELVE MORE MOVING UP AND 10 MORE IN RESERVE. ON THIS BASIS, GAS CONSUMPTION AVERAGED 66,700 GALLONS A DAY FOR EACH DIVISION. AT A SIMILAR RATE, THE 100 DIVISIONS REPORTED TO BE IN ACTION ON THE WESTERN FRONT WOULD REQUIRE 6,670,000 GALLONS A DAY---MORE THAN TWICE GERMANY'S ESTIMATED AVERAGE DAILY INFLOW.

AND NONE OF THOSE FIGURES TAKE INTO ACCOUNT THE SWARMING NAZI AIR FORCE. IF 3,000 PLANES ARE OPERATING OVER THE WESTERN FRONT ON AN AVERAGE OF SIX HOURS EACH A DAY, IT IS ESTIMATED RELIABLY THEY ARE BURNING 1.920.000 GALLONS OF GAS A DAY.

HITLER

BY ANDRUE BERDING

WASHINGTON, MAY 16-(AP)-SEVEN OF THE 31 NATIONS WHOSE TERRITORY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ASKED HITLER LAST YEAR TO RESPECT HAVE BEEN INVADED BY GERMANY, AN EIGHTH IS UNDER ATTACK, AND SEVERAL OTHERS LIVE IN FEAR OF INVASION.

AS THE PRESIDENT PRESENTED HIS EXTRAORDINARY DEFENSE PROGRAM TO CONGRESS TODAY, OFFICIALS RECALLED HITLER'S SPEECH TO THE REICHSTAG OF APRIL 28 LAST YEAR, IN ANSWER TO MR. ROOSEVELT'S TELEGRAM OF APRIL 14.

THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT, SAID HITLER, "IS PREPARED TO GIVE EACH OF THE STATES NAMED AN ASSURANCE OF THE KIND DESIRED BY MR. ROOSEVELT ON THE CONDITION OF ABSOLUTE RECIPROCITY, PROVIDED THAT THE STATE WISHES IT AND ITSELF ADDRESSES TO GERMANY A REQUEST FOR SUCH AN ASSURANCE TOGETHER WITH APPROPRIATE PROPOSALS."

ACCORDING TO INFORMATION THAT REACHED THE STATE DEPARTMENT, DIPLOMATIC CONVERSATIONS WERE BEGUN WITH A NUMBER OF NATIONS. THREE NON-AGGRESSION PACTS RESULTED IN JUNE, WITH DENMARK, LATVIA AND ESTONIA.

IN THE TREATY WITH DENMARK, GERMANY NOT ONLY PROMISED NON-AGGRESSION BUT ALSO AGREED THAT THE DANES COULD CONTINUE THEIR COMMERCE UNHAMPEERED IN THE EVENT THAT GERMANY ENGAGED IN WAR WITH OTHER NATIONS.

BELGIUM RELIED ON AN EXCHANGE OF NOTES OF OCTOBER, 1937, WITH GERMANY AFTER BELGIUM HAD DECLARED HER NEUTRALITY IN CASE OF A EUROPEAN WAR. HITLER PROMISED GERMAN RESPECT FOR BELGIAN NEUTRALITY CONTINGENT UPON BELGIUM'S NOT PERMITTING TROOPS OF OTHER NATIONS TO CROSS HER TERRITORY.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN SAID THEY DID NOT FEEL THE NEED FOR NON-AGGRESSION TREATIES.

A91 HOLLAND REJECTED ANY GERMAN NON-AGGRESSION OVERTURES. SHE SAID HER INDEPENDENCE WAS "AXIOMATIC," AND DID NOT REQUIRE GUARANTEES.

MAY 17 1940

HITLER TOLD THE WORLD IN HIS SPEECH THAT "I HAVE TAKEN THE TROUBLE TO ASCERTAIN FROM THE STATES MENTIONED (BY MR. ROOSEVELT) FIRSTLY WHETHER THEY FEEL THEMSELVES THREATENED, AND SECONDLY AND ABOVE ALL, WHETHER THIS INQUIRY BY THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT WAS ADDRESSED TO US AT THEIR SUGGESTION OR AT ANY RATE WITH THEIR CONSENT. THE REPLY WAS IN ALL CASES NEGATIVE, IN SOME INSTANCES STRONGLY SO."

ACCORDING TO INFORMATION RECEIVED HERE, HOWEVER, SOME NATIONS, PARTICULARLY RUMANIA, INDICATED THEY DID INDEED FEEL THEMSELVES THREATNE BUT DID NOT WELCOME A NON-AGGRESSION PACT.

HITLER ALSO SAID, "ALL STATES BORDERING ON GERMANY HAVE RECEIVED MUCH MORE BINDING ASSURANCES AND ABOVE ALL, SUGGESTIONS, THAN MR. ROOSEVELT ASKED FROM ME IN HIS CURIOUS TELEGRAM."

SIX OF THE NATIONS BORDERING ON GERMANY HAVE BEEN INVADED---FRANCE, BELGIUM, THE NETHERLANDS, LUXEMBOURG, POLAND AND DENMARK.

ANOTHER NATION NOT IMMEDIATELY BORDERING ON GERMANY HAS BEEN INVADED NORWAY---AND GREAT BRITAIN IS UNDER ATTACK.

OTHER NATIONS MENTIONED BY MR. ROOSEVELT HAVE TAKEN EXTRAORDINARY MILITARY PRECAUTIONS, IN ADDITION TO MAKING NUMEROUS ARRESTS OF PERSONS SUSPECTED OF "FIFTH COLUMN" ACTIVITIES. THESE NATIONS INCLUDE SWITZERLAN

THESE NATIONS INCLUDE SWITZERLAND, SWEDEN, HUNGARY, YUGOSLAVIA AND RUMANIA.

HITLER, IN THE SPEECH WHICH WAS HIS SOLE ANSWER TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, CONCLUDED HIS COMMENT WITH THESE WORDS:

"I HERE SOLEMNLY DECLARE THAT ALL THE ASSERTIONS WHICH HAVE BEEN CIRCULATED IN ANY WAY CONCERNING AN INTENDED GERMAN ATTACK OR INVASION ON OR IN AMERICAN TERRITORY ARE RANK FRAUDS AND GROSS UNTRUTHS, QUITE APART FROM THE FACT THAT SUCH ASSERTIONS, AS FAR AS THE MILITARY POSSIBILITIES ARE CONCERNED, COULD HAVE THEIR ORIGIN ONLY IN A STUPID IMAGINATION."

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

MAY 17 1940

THE GERMANS CONTINUED TO THRUST FORWARD THIS MORNING ON THE SOUTHERN END OF THE GREAT BELGIAN BATTLE-LINE, HAVING CROSSED THE MEUSE RIVER AT THREE POINTS BETWEEN THE FAMOUS FORTRESS OF NAMUR AND SEDAN, BUT THEY WERE ENCOUNTERING STRONG OPPOSITION AND THE ALLIED REPORTS INDICATED THAT THEY WERE HOLDING WELL AT OTHER POINTS.

THE ALLIES GAIN CONSIDERABLE SATISFACTION FROM THE PRESENT POSITION IN VIEW OF THE FACT THAT THE INITIAL FURY OF THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE HASN'T YET BEEN SPENT. A FEW HOURS MORE AND IT SHOULD BEGIN TO WANE--AND THEN WE SHALL SEE WHAT THE ANGLO-FRENCH-BELGIAN FRATERNITY HAS IN STORE.

THERE IS LACK OF INFORMATION OWING TO THE TURMOIL OF THIS MAMMOTH CONFLICT, BUT THE BATTLE SEEMS TO BE DEVELOPING ALONG TWO MAIN LINES --(1) AN EFFORT TO DRIVE RIGHT THROUGH THE HEART OF BELGIUM TO THE CHANNEL PORTS SO TO BE ABLE TO GET AT ENGLAND, AND (2) A TURNING OPERATION IN WHICH THE NAZIS ARE TRYING TO CUT THROUGH THE ALLIED LINE AT SEDAN AND ROLL IT BACK BOTH WAYS, A HIGHLY DANGEROUS UNDERTAKING.

IT STILL SEEMS TO ME THAT THE FIRST OF THESE MOVEMENTS--THE DRIVE TO THE COAST--IS THE PARAMOUNT OBJECTIVE OF THE GERMANS. THE SMASHING OF THE ALLIED BLOCKADE AND ENGLAND HERSELF DEPENDS ON THAT.

POOR BRUSSELS, FROM WHICH KING LEOPOLD TODAY BROADCAST ENCOURAGEMENT TO HIS MEN IN THE FORTIFICATIONS OF LIEGE, NOT ONLY LIES IN THE LINE OF THE NORTHERN DRIVE BUT THE NAZIS HAVE THREATENED TO BOMB THE CITY UNLESS TROOP MOVEMENTS THROUGH THE CAPITAL ARE SUSPENDED.

THAT WILL BE TOUGH, BUT BRUSSELS WILL BE ABLE TO TAKE IT. SHE ENDURED FOUR YEARS OF OCCUPATION DURING THE WORLD WAR, AND I'VE SEEN THE INVADERS BUTCHERING CATTLE IN A MAIN BOULEVARD FOR THEIR ARMY KITCHENS.

LIKE A LOT OF OTHER FOLK I WENT TO BED LAST NIGHT WITH THE KNOWLEDGE THAT MORNING MIGHT SHOW A GERMAN INVASION OF SWITZERLAND. THE SWISS HAVE PLENTY OF JUSTIFICATION FOR STANDING AT ARMS IN FEAR OF A GERMAN INVASION.

MAY 17 1940

THE MAIN OBJECT OF SUCH AN ASSAULT WOULD BE TO USE THIS NEUTRAL COUNTRY IN AN EFFORT TO OUTFLANK THE FRENCH RIGHT-WING IN THE MAGINOT LINE, WHICH TERMINATES CLOSE TO THE SWISS FRONTIER.

SUCH AN OPERATION, IF THE GERMANS COULD BE ASSURED OF SUBDUING THE SWISS QUICKLY, MIGHT PROVE VALUABLE SUPPORT FOR THE NAZI OFFENSIVE THROUGH THE LOW COUNTRIES. I SHOULD SAY THAT SUCH A MOVE WOULD DEPEND ON THE SUCCESS OF THE LOW COUNTRY BATTLE. IF THE NAZIS SHOULD MAKE A BIG BREAK THROUGH THE LINE AT SEDAN, THEY MIGHT STRIKE IN THE FAR SOUTH.

WE SHOULD NOT OVERLOOK, EITHER, THAT AN ASSAULT ON SWITZERLAND MIGHT SIGNAL THE ENTRANCE OF ITALY INTO THE WAR ON THE HITLERIAN SIDE. I'M NOT PREDICTING THAT MUSSOLINI IS READY TO GET INTO THE CONFLICT YET, BUT IT IS WELL TO RECOGNIZE THE POSSIBILITY.

WITH WAR OPENING UP ON THE FRANCO-ITALIAN FRONTIER, GERMAN POSSESSION OF SWITZERLAND WOULD BE AN INVALUABLE ASSET.

THE METHOD WHICH MUSSOLINI MIGHT EMPLOY FOR HIS ADVENT INTO THE BIG SHOW IS A MATTER OF DEEP CONCERN TO MANY PEOPLE. THE ALLIED FLEET HAS PUT OUT FROM ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT, FOR "SCHEDULED MANEUVERS." YUGOSLAVIA IS TAKING EXTRAORDINARY PRECAUTIONS FOR FEAR OF AN ITALIAN INVASION. GREECE LIKEWISE HAS MASSED TROOPS ON HER FRONTIER WITH ITALIAN ALBANIA. THERE IS AN EXODUS OF ITALIANS FROM TURKEY.

THE ONLY THING ONE CAN SAY WITH CERTAINTY ABOUT THE SHREWD ITALIAN CHIEFTAIN IS THAT HE WON'T COMMIT HIMSELF UNTIL HE IS PERFECTLY SURE ON WHICH SIDE HIS BREAD IS BUTTERED.

IT WOULD INDEED SEEM THAT THERE IS NOTHING WHICH SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS, JUDGING FROM THE WAY ALLIED STOCK TAKES A TUMBLE AMONG SOME ONLOOKERS IN OUR COUNTRY EVERY TIME THE NAZI MILITARY STEAM-ROLLER CRUSHES ANOTHER DEFENSE. WELL, AFTER ALL, WHAT SHOULD ANYBODY EXPECT?

MAY 17 1940

HERR HITLER HAS BEEN PREPARING FOR WAR FOR SEVEN YEARS. HE HAS GIVEN THIS PROGRAM EVERYTHING HE PERSONALLY HAD AND EVERYTHING THE REICH HAD, UNTIL HE HAS CREATED WHAT IS PERHAPS THE MOST PERFECT MILITARY MACHINE EVER CONSTRUCTED. IT WOULD INDEED BE STRANGE IF SUCH A MACHINE DIDN'T WIN VICTORIES, AND STILL MORE VICTORIES.

BUT AS SOMEBODY HAS REMARKED, IT'S THE FELLOW WHO WINS THE LAST BATTLE WHO WINS THE WAR. WE SHOULDN'T BE TOO HASTY IN PICKING THE WINNER OF THE PRESENT CONFLICT BECAUSE A LOT OF THINGS CAN HAPPEN BEFORE THE WHITE FLAG GOES UP. THE KAISER'S ARMIES HAD THE ALLIES ALL BUT BEATEN SEVERAL TIMES DURING THE WORLD WAR, BUT THE ANGLO-FRENCH BROTHERHOOD SEEMS TO BE IN FAIRLY GOOD HEALTH YET.

THERE WAS THE BATTLE OF THE MARNE, FOR INSTANCE, AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WORLD WAR WHEN THE GERMANS ALL BUT GOT PARIS. THERE WERE OTHER CLOSE CALLS, AND FINALLY THAT AWFUL SECOND BATTLE OF THE SOMME IN THE LAST YEAR OF THE WAR. YOUR HUMBLE SERVANT WAS IN THE MIDST OF THAT SHOW AND GLAD TO GET OUT.

THIS BATTLE DEVELOPED WHEN THE GERMANS IN THE SPRING OF 1918 TRIED TO BREAK THROUGH THE BRITISH LINE AT AMIENS AND REACH THE CHANNEL PORTS.

THE GERMANS ALMOST WON THE WORLD WAR IN THIS ONE OFFENSIVE. THE ALLIES NEVER WERE NEARER DEFEAT. THE GERMANS CONCENTRATED 500,000 MEN ON A 42-MILE FRONT AGAINST 285,000 BRITISH. THERE WERE TIMES WHEN THE GERMANS WERE BREAKING THROUGH SO FAST WE DIDN'T KNOW WHERE THE BRITISH TROOPS WERE.

MAY 17 1940

WHEN NO REGULAR TROOPS WERE AVAILABLE AT ONE VITAL GAP IN THE LINE, GENERAL CAREY ASSEMBLED EVERY AVAILABLE MAN--COOKS, SAPPERS AND FINALLY BUT NOT LEAST, AMERICAN ENGINEERS--AND THIS MOTLEY CREW, WHICH DIDN'T EVEN HAVE PROPER ARMS, HELD THE LINE AGAINST TREMENDOUS ODDS UNTIL REINFORCEMENTS ARRIVED.

THE YANKEE ENGINEERS FOUGHT WITH PICK-HANDLES AND WHAT NOT, THERE BEING NO RIFLES FOR THEM. WHEN I TRIED TO GET THEM TO TELL THEIR STORY AFTER THIS HEROIC BATTLE THEY SAID "AW, HELL," AND REFUSED TO TALK.

THE BRITISH LOST 200,000 MEN AND THE GERMANS 180,000. Nazis Drive at Paris on 65-Mi. Front; In Brussels

12,000 Prisoners Claimed By Germans

By PRESTON GROVER

Berlin, May 17 (AP)—Germany's power in two great thrusts smashed into Brussels tonight, as Allied resistance melted through the center of Belgium, and to the south drove "deep in northern France" along a 65-mile front aimed toward Paris.

One report, without official verification and lacking details, said the German drive into northern France between Maubeuge and Montmedy had carried to within 76 miles of Paris.

The High Command announced German troops marched into the Belgian capital after sweeping through Louvain, 16 miles to the east, and Malines (Mechlin), 14 miles northeast.

Marking the speed of Hitler's blitzkrieg, Brussels was entered in the eighth day of the current campaign whereas Kaiser Wilhelm's troops in 1914 goose-stepped into the city on the 17th day of their invasion.

Drive to Antwerp.

The whirlwind drive also brought German troops pounding at the outer fortifications of Antwerp, 28 miles north of Brussels, while to the south of the capital they were reported to have pierced the Dyle River position between Brussels and Namur.

South and west from the Namur region, the German advance on French soil pushed through sections of the Little Maginot Line, where that defense system has been extended along the Belgian-French frontier, the High Command reported, and brought claims that Nazi forces had punctured the main French defenses.

Dienst aus Deutschland, authoritative commentary service, said the massed British troops concentrated in Belgium were heading for the coast while the French were backing toward Paris.

Battle for Namur.

Evidently breaking through the Allied lines in the vicinity of Namur the Germans were said to have penetrated a distance of 20 to 40 miles to a point south of the heavily fortified French city of Maubeuge, which is on the River Sambre some 40 miles southwest of Namur and about 120 miles northeast of Paris.

Namur, extreme right wing of the Belgian Dyle line, is believed here to be the scene of a terrific battle, after the Germans were reported to have taken the outer Namur forts.

Namur is at the Juncture of the Meuse and Sambre Rivers and, according to the Germans, is equipped with all modern defensive weapons.

"France's Turn Now."

North of Namur the Dyle fortifications extend into Belgium; south from Namur, the Meuse defenses extend to Sedan, thence southeast to the main Maginot Line.

The German bulge into northern France begins just below Namur.

It now is France's turn to experience what it means to hitch her wagon to England's star, after Poland, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and Belgium, authorized Germans said.

The advance into France was one of the fastest in the current campaign and apparently the Germans occupied a position along the French-Belgian frontier region from the outskirts of Maubeuge to the west end of the main Maginot fortifications east of Sedan.

Germans asserted that the French and British were in dispute over where to make a stand against the German assaults.

The French, they reported, insisted on holding against a drive on Paris, while the British demanded that the Germans be kept from gaining a foothold along the Channel, from which they might launch a killing attack against England herself or cut the way for strengthening the expeditionary force in France.

Air Force Gets Credit.

"We have made progress of a magnitude almost beyond comprehension" in France, an authorized source said.

German successes were attributed largely to the air force, which Berlin officials contended had unnerved the Allied armies with constant pounding by dive-bombers and ground strafers.

At one point, an authorized source said, a French battalion (of about 800 men) marched into captivity to escape further bombing, while an another point two generals surrendered with 12,000 troops.

Mass application of the air force, it was reported, has netted 1,500 enemy planes destroyed on the ground or shot down, with airports to a large extent paralyzed by bombs.

A British source in London reported more than 1,000 German airplanes had been destroyed since the invasion of the Low Countries.

For the air arm, the German High Command communique today also claimed these successes in the war at sea:

Sinking of one enemy cruiser and one gunboat off the Netherlands-Belgian coast; damaging of two French destroyers; heavy hits on a transport which had to be stranded; a bomb hit on a battleship near Narvik, in far northern Norway, and on a light cruiser; setting fire to a 1,500-ton tanker. Also, in the North Sea, a submarine presumably was destroyed by an air bomb.

Allied "Catastrophe."

In the land warfare the Germans estimated the French forces in Belgium totaled 100 divisions, or approximately 1,500,000 men; the British 350,000 men and the Belgians 300,000.

Government spokesmen used the term "catastrophe" to describe what is happening to these masses of Allied forces in the face of the combined German air and ground attack.

In the advance through lower Belgium, Namur apparently still held out although the High Command said "the northeastern front of Namur fortress was taken."

Communique On Advances

The fall of Louvain and Melcheln (Malines) and entrance of German forces into Brussels was announced in a special night communique, which stated:

"After the collapse of the British-French position to the south of Louvain, the German troops have entered Brussels this evening. Louvain also has fallen today to encircling attack.

"After fierce fighting, German forces have penetrated the Dyle line north of Louvain and have taken Melcheln.

Developments In Norway

"Yesterday the Allies attempted to effect a landing in the immediate vicinity of Narvik (in Norway). Enemy troops, assembled in cutters, tried to take the German mountain troops by surprise under cover of darkness. The attack was, however, repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy."

During the World War Louvain fell to the Germans on August 18, 1914, two days before Brussels was entered.

Six days later, German accounts say, Belgian troops from Antwerp advanced on the city and German troops moving forward to meet them were fired upon by Louvain residents. Returning from beating back the Belgian soldiers, the Germans again were fired upon by civilians, the Germans charged, whereupon numbers of residents were taken from their houses and shot and their houses set afire.

The university library and cathedral were set afire by the spread of the flames, the German accounts said.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 17—German troops tonight were reported "deep in northern France"—one source said without confirmation that they were within seventy-six miles of Paris—in a continued drive from a broad opening forced between Maubeuge and Montmedy.

"Events in the next few days will show what it meant to force this opening," an authorized source said as it was hinted that the German campaign now is aimed at France in general and Paris in particular.

(In Paris it was admitted that the Germans had driven thirty-five to forty miles into France in the Rethel region, southwest of Sedan, about one hundred miles northeast of Paris.)

Maubeuge and Montmedy, between which the Germans forced their way, are about eighty miles apart. Maubeuge is about 120 miles north and a little east of Paris; Montmedy is about 140 miles east and a little north of the capital.

German forces have reached the outer fortifications of Antwerp, DNB, the official German news agency, announced tonight.

1,500 Allied Planes Declared Destroyed

Authorized sources summarized six achievements in the eight-day campaign in the west:

1. Luxembourg was seized in one day.
2. The Netherlands, despite brave resistance, capitulated in five days.
3. Belgium within seven days had her outer frontier fortifications overrun and her Dyle Line so effectively smashed that now she merely has the choice between destruction of Brussels or capitulation.
4. In France, defenses along the Meuse river have been broken and German forces are advancing rapidly.
5. Mass application of the air force has netted 1,500 enemy planes destroyed on the ground or shot down and airports to a large extent paralyzed by bombs.
6. The war has been carried to England's very gates with heavy loss to the British navy.

The Allies have been routed from Antwerp to Sedan, and German forces have pierced the Maginot

Line in a way which even German optimists had believed impossible, authorized Germans claimed.

The Berlin radio reported today that 12,000 prisoners, including two generals, were captured in fighting southeast of Sedan, Northern France.

The high command announced today that "south of Maubeuge (Northern France) the Maginot Line was broken through on a width of one hundred kilometers (sixty-two miles)" and the Dyle position protecting Brussels, has been pierced.

"The northeastern front of Namur fortress was taken," declared the communique, describing a great battle from Antwerp to Callignant, south of Sedan.

"Day Of Castrophies For Allies"

"Yesterday was a big day of catastrophies for all categories of enemy weapons," one authorized commentator asserted in advance of the high command's regular communique. "We have made progress of a magnitude almost beyond comprehension."

Authorized sources claimed that the "Dyle position," Belgium's second line of defense before Brussels, has been smashed at Louvain, sixteen miles east of the Belgian capital, and Wavre, twelve miles south of Louvain, Belgium, it was stated, "practically is finished."

The commentator, who claimed that yesterday was one of catastrophies for the enemy, moreover, asserted there was disunion between the English and French commands.

The French, he said, are insisting on retiring before Paris to defend their capital, while the English persistently are heading for the coast.

He asserted the Allied forces were unnerved by Germany's awe-inspiring "Stukas"—dive bombers—and were "in hopeless confusion."

For Belgium, he said, there is only one sensible choice—capitulation before Brussels is laid in ruins and the remaining Belgian forces annihilated.

The High Command said in its regular communique that in Northern France the Maginot Line (actually the "Little" Maginot Line in that region) "was broken through on a width of 100 kilometers (sixty-two miles)" in the sector extending south of Maubeuge, sixty miles airline northwest of Sedan, to Calignant (Carignan), about twelve miles southeast of Sedan.

It reported that in Belgium the Dyle River defense system was pierced south of Wavre, twenty miles southeast of Brussls, and on the Namur front "the fortress was taken."

"Yesterday was a big day of catastrophies for all categories of enemy weapons," one authorized commentator asserted in advance of the High Command's communique.

"We have made progress of a magnitude almost beyond comprehension."

Authorized sources claimed that the "Dyle position," Belgium's second line of defense before Brussels, has been smashed at Louvain, sixteen miles east of the Belgian capital, and Wavre, twelve miles south of Louvain.

Belgium, it was stated, "practically is finished."

They said the remaining forts ringing Leige had surrendered.

(The Brussels radio, however, broadcast today that the forts were holding out.)

At the same time it was understood the immunity which the Germans conceded to Brussels from bombing attacks would expire today unless the German High Command was satisfied that the city was stripped of its character as a fortified town. Such a warning was given United States Charge d'Affaires Alexander Kirk to pass on, if he chose, to the Belgians.

The commentator who claimed that yesterday was one of catastrophies for the enemy moreover asserted there was disunion between the English and French commands.

The French, he said, are insisting on retiring before Paris to defend their capital while the English persistently are heading for the coast.

Before Narvik, in far northern Norway, and in the English channel, it was claimed, bombers operated with great success with a loss of only twelve aircrafts.

Their asserted victims, damaged or sunk, were said to include one battleship at Narvik and one destroyer in the channel.

Moreover, informed sources said, Germany now is so placed strategically that it is doubtful whether Britain can land many more transports.

An authorized commentator offered the following as an example of the terrifying effect of the dive bombers: A whole French battalion (about 800 men) when attacked by "Stukas" during their march was terror-stricken and spread white sheets as a sign of capitulation. The commander of the bomber formation, he said, dropped a message directing an about-face march to a point where German troops disarmed the men and took them prisoner.

"It is not that the French are cowardly," this commentator made haste to assure this correspondent.

"They are gallant, brave and courageous. But there is nothing so unnerving as a bombing attack from the air."

The jitters among the enemy caused by almost a week's constant harrying from the air was illustrated further, it was asserted, when a colonel of a sharpshooters battalion reaching the enemy with his staff ahead of his troops induced two general and 12,000 men to surrender.

"We are treading new paths of conducting war," this informed commentator said. "The standards and methods of the past simply do not apply."

Authorized sources, claiming military secrets were involved, declined to affirm or deny reports of extensive troop movements from Dresden to the neighborood of Vienna.

Generally speaking, however, they said it must be taken for granted that Britain and France will try to strike a counter-blow somewhere else.

Therefore, it was said, Germany must be prepared on all fronts.

Germany has less interest now than ever in widening the conflict to Southeastern Europe, these sources contended.

(Budapest reports said Germany was massing mechanized and motorized forces on the Slovak frontier of Hungary and pointed at Rumania, 140 miles away, where the rich oil fields were seen objectives of a possible drive).

"Naturally, if compelled to fight in that area," it was said, "we will know how to draw military profit from the situation."

Kirk Hears Threat to Brussels

U. S. Told It May Pass On to Belgians Nazi Reasons to Bomb City.

BERLIN, May 17 (A. P.).—Alexander Kirk, the American Charge d'Affaires, was summoned to the Foreign Office yesterday and told why Germany no longer regards Brussels as an open town. It was left to the American Government's discretion whether to pass the information on to the Belgian Government.

It was understood that the Belgian capital's immunity from German bombing attacks expires today unless the city is stripped of its character as a fortified town to the satisfaction of the German high command.

German scouting lanes, Mr. Kirk was told, established the fact that there were large army concentrations within the capital, that railway stations were jammed with war materials and that cannon were mounted in parks and public squares.

On Wednesday night the High Command issued a communique stating that the Belgian Government's declaration of May 10 that Brussels is an open city "does not correspond to the facts." It warned that "in case the Belgian Government is really in earnest to save the city of Brussels the horrors of war, all military transports and marching through the town must cease immediately and the building of defenses must be suspended immediately."

Mr. Kirk paid a second visit to the Foreign Office later.

It was believed that the Government only emphasized its previously expressed view that Brussels is not an undefended city and that German parachute troops are a regular army unit.

It was understood in connection with the German definition on "open" cities that Paris is outside this classification.

Nazis 100 Miles From Paris

PARIS, May 17 (A. P.).—Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, the Allied Commander-in-Chief, tonight ordered his troops to "die on the spot" rather than cede further ground to the German invaders.

The Generalissimo issued this command as an order of the day after the French armies had been fighting all through another day of Blitzkrieg in northern France and in which the Germans reached a point about 100 miles from Paris.

Gen. Gamelin's order of the day read:

"The fate of the fatherland, that of our Allies and the destiny of the world depend on the battle now in its course. The English, the Belgian and the Polish soldiers and foreign volunteers are fighting at our sides.

"The British aviation is engaged to the full, like ours.

"Any soldier who cannot advance should die on the spot rather than abandon the part of the native soil confided to him.

"As always, in the grave hours of our history, the word of order is today: 'Conquer or die! We must conquer!'"

A War Ministry spokesman, meantime, told tonight's press conference that the Germans had resumed their attacks today in the 35- to 45-mile deep pocket which they have sawed out in northern France, from Rethel on the south to the Sedan sector onthe east and to the Sambre River on the north.

There was "very heavy fighting" northwest of Rethel, he said.

The Germans also drove against the French lines south of Sedan, trying to broaden the eastern end of their pocket, but the spokesman said the result was "not great."

portrayed as a distinctly heartening effect.

United States Ambassador William Bullitt had an interview with Premier Reynaud this morning

Paris, meanwhile, maintained its calm after anti-aircraft batteries again were in action during the night. (Here 13 words were censored.)

The military was in charge of the capital as a result of last night's decree placing the city in the army zone.

French said that along the line east from Luxembourg, where the main underground Maginot fortification system is situated, there has been little alteration of positions.

The German tactics have been to flank this formidable system rather than attempt to take it by storm.

Deepest Penetration at Rethel.

It is in the Rethel region that the swift German armored units which broke through from Sedan have effected the Nazy Army's deepest penetration into Franch soil. Rethel is half-way between that frontier fortress town and Reims.

French mechanized columns, supported by bombers and strafing planes, attacked the invaders.

The battle continued all through the night in the Rethel area, the high command communique said, and from there north to the Sambre River, which runs eastward out of France to join the Meuse at Namur.

The heaviest fighting was in French territory, including continued combats involving tanks and planes immediately south of Sedan.

Fighting doggedly to check a Nazi drive toward the heart of France, allied ground forces struggled to repair their lines while their planes ranged far and wide, hurling down destruction on German mechanized units.

The lightning thrust of Germany's light tanks and armored cars through the Sedan fortifications appeared aimed at Paris itself.

In this crucial hour French authorities extended the military zone to Paris, placed guards at the city's gates, rounded up foreigners and interned all Germans.

It was indicated that placing Paris under military authority did not mean the city was in peril, but rather it would put anti-aircraft defenses, the blackout, transportation and other facilities under military control.

Including Paris in the military zone, it was made clear, does not mean martial law.

(Washington military authorities viewed the move as an administrative action to give the army precedence over civilian needs during the western front struggle."

Nazis Repulsed at Louvain.

Three German counter-attacks were repulsed by Belgian and British forces on the eastern side of Louvain, the British reported. Louvain is 16 miles from the Belgian capital of Brussels.

As to the comparative speed of the present German drive and the invasion by way of Belgium in 1914, it was noted that the Kaiser's drive started August 4, 1914, and reached a point 20 miles from Paris September 6 for the first battle of the Marne.

Today, at the start of the second week of Adolf Hitler's drive, one spearhead of the German attack is acknowledged to be about 100 miles east of Paris and at least 170 miles to the northeast in the Brussels or Louvain area.

The French claimed success for allied aerial operations, announcing pursuit planes were sweeping Nazi craft out of the skies at the same time heavier allied craft carried out bombing missions.

President Roosevelt's defense message to Congress was reported prominently and fully by press and radio.

"America seems to be awakening from a long dream," said Le Petit Parisien.

Three great battles are raging—one in the German bulge toward Paris in the Rethel region southwest of Sedan, another south of Sedan, and the third in Belgium, where the Germans are thrusting toward Brussels, with Louvain, 16 miles east of the Belgian capital, the main scene of conflict.

Declare "Pocket" Surrounded.

The French high command admitted that German mechanized units had reached the region north of Rethel, 100 miles from Paris, but a military spokesman said the "pocket" formed by this drive was being surrounded by French mechanized forces.

The French spokesman said the Rethel "pocket" ran from near Sedan, its northeastern end, to the neighborhood of Rethel, 30 miles southwest, and then back to the Sambre River, its northwestern extremity.

The point where the outline of the "pocket" joined the Sambre was not given, but the river runs eastward through part of France and into Belgium, where it joins the Meuse River at Namur.

Military authorities reported several air bombings of outlying districts of Nancy today, but said casualties were slight. In the 24 hours up to early evening, 22 air raid alarms were sounded in the Nancy region.

Battle Spectacular.

A spectacular battle continued through its third day in Northern France, where the French said that at least for the moment they had halted the German drive toward Paris.

It was a battle of swiftly attacking columns of tanks and armored cars and the mass use of aviation, with no tendency yet to settle into the World War style of fixed lines.

The Germans, after see-saw fighting that lasted throughout last night, launched a new attack at dawn today. Simultaneously, they attacked the British and Belgian lines north of the Sambre. (Here six words were censored.)

Fight 'Extremely Violent.'

Meanwhile a War Ministry spokesman said fighting south of Sedan was "extremely violent" during the night, with villages changing hands as many as five or six times.

In view of the grave developments British Prime Minister Churchill flew to Paris from London yesterday, accompanied by military experts, for an urgent conference with French leaders.

French Premier Reynaud, Generalissimo Maurce Gustave Gamelin, commander in chief of the British and French forces; Mr. Churchill, French National Defense Minister Daladier and others were together for hours formulating campaign plans.

It was not a formal session of the Supreme War Council, though it brought together its principal members.

Heartened by Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt's special message to Congress on national defense, in which among other things he asked Congress not to take any action which would hamper or delay delivery of American-made planes to foreign nations which have ordered them or may order them, came at a time when the allies are hard pressed and had what the press and public commen

POILUS ANSWER GAMELIN COMMAND BY UNLEASHING BITTER COUNTER-ATTACKS

Move After Generalissimo Tells His Troops To "Die On The Spot Rather Than Give Further Ground" To Germans

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Saturday, May 18—Spurred by the order of Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin to "conquer or die," the French army unleashed furious counter-attacks today, seeking to draw a hangman's knot about the ponderous advance of heavy German tanks into northern France.

In wooded ravines and open fields of the sector bounded by Avesnes, Vervins, Rethel & Sedan the French closed in by land and air, trying to strangle the Nazi thrust west of the Meuse. The Germans advanced daringly forward of their supply bases, which Allied warplanes bombed incessantly.

Paris, now in the army zone, was quiet. Policemen patrolled their regular beats with rifles slung over their shoulders.

The violent action came with the dawn of the ninth day of the advance of Hitler's gray-green legions into Belgium and France in a desperate try for a decisive victory.

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 17—The French armies, under orders from Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin to "die on the spot rather than give further ground," battled a massive German tank drive into northern France tonight in a clash described by the high command as "a veritable melee."

Adolf Hitler's gray-green fighters carried their week-old offensive on the Western front to a peak during the day with violent blasts both in Belgium and France in a desperate effort to drive home a decisive victory.

Belgian Government Flees To Ostend

The German thrust through Belgium struck straight at Brussels, from which King Leopold's Government fled to Ostend, on the North Sea.

The drive into France was directed through a pocket carved out of the battle-scarred northern plains.

"The fate of the fatherland, that of our allies and the destiny of the world depends on the battle in course," General Gamelin, commander in chief of the Allied forces, said in an order of the day.

"Volunteers Fighting At Our Sides"

"English, Belgian and Polish soldiers and foreign volunteers are fighting at our sides. British aviation is engaged to the full like ours.

"Any soldier who cannot advance should die on the spot rather than abandon the part of native soil confided to him.

"As always at grave hours of our history the word of the order is today: Conquer or die! We must conquer!"

Driven Back 35 To 40 Miles

French troops barring the way (here nine words were censored) took their stand around the Sedan-Rethel-Sambre triangle, driven thirty-five to forty miles into France after the German break-through on the Meuse front.

The Germans attacked on the west side of this bulge around Avesnes and Vervins, roughly ten and fifteen miles from the Belgian border, striving to take control of the main northern highways.

The bulk of the Germans' heavy tank divisions lumbered into the fray following armored cars and whippet tanks which led the lightning advance.

Nazis Defy Old Military Laws

French advices from the front said the giant machines were striking out in small numbers, driving far from their bases in defiance of old-established military laws for protecting the flanks of advancing forces.

How far they had progressed tonight could not be determined.

German planes took over the task of protecting the armored advance forces and tangled with Allied aviation in innumerable dogfights.

British pursuits alone were reported to have downed 157 German planes over the Western front since the German invasion started last Friday. Twenty-one of them were accounted for today.

French planes attacked the rear of the enemy motorized forces.

People Told To Be Calm

The Paris Municipal Council tonight issued a notice to its population, now included in the army zone, declaring "everything necessary has been done to assure you protection and supplies."

The notice urged the people to "be calm and resolute, as you have been in every tragic period of our history."

The French Ministry of Information also issued a warning that German agents were spreading false rumors in an effort to create a panic and urging civilians not to abandon their homes without formal orders.

A Government decree was published creating territorial guard formations to protect against "enemies behind the front," such as German parachute troops and fifth columnists, for duration of the war.

The formation is open to all non-mobilized men 16 or older to serve in their home communities under military orders.

While the Germans fought hard on the western edge of their bulge, other invading forces tried, without success, the French said, to widen it south of Sedan to Montmedy.

The French high command acknowledged that the the fluid battle-front had spread back to the Sedan-Rethel-Sambre line yesterday, and that the Germans renewed their slashing attacks at dawn.

The French, however, with their armies regrouped to meet the threat, pressed in on all sides of the pocket. (Here twelve words were censored.)

[Associated Press Editor's Note—A survey of opposing claims indicates that the pocket is 35 to 40 miles deep in France at the [illegible] edge, from the Sedan area to Rethel, and 55 to 60 miles in width on the west, from Rethel north to the Sambre river in the Maubeuge sector. Rethel, the lower edge of this loosely stitched military pocket, is about 100 miles northeast of Paris.]

Mobile Fighting

The battle of the Meuse-Sambre, begun as one of fixed positions on the Meuse river along the Belgian border, has become one of mobile fighting on the World War battlefields of northern France.

For the first time since springing their Blitzkrieg methods on Poland, however, the German lightning columns encountered organized resistance behind the front, after breaking their way across the Meuse and through the Allied lines.

Calendar Of War

Monday—The Germans, after rushing sixty miles through Belgium, reached the east bank of the Meuse and occupied French Sedan.

Tuesday—Three passages were forced by the Germans across the Meuse on the fifty-five-mile front from Sedan north to Namur.

Wednesday—German tanks, fanning out from bridgeheads on the west bank of the Meuse, raced into the French interior.

Thursday—The German columns camped off the highways, awaiting reinforcements and supplies of food, gasoline and ammunition.

Friday—The German blitz patrols resumed their rush, but French and British air forces were counter-attacking and French infantry, armed with anti-tank [illegible] in ambush. Overnight, south of Sedan, villages changed hands five or six times in violent, isolated engagements.

The German advance point, in the region north of Rethel, lies in the zone occupied by the Germans in 1914, just north of the Champagne plains and northwest of the bloody forest of the Argonne.

Exact Lines Not Known

Exact lines tacked out by the German blitz battalions within the Sedan-Rethel-Sambre bulge are not known here, but their evident aim is as Reynaud told the Chamber of Deputies yesterday: "To strike at the heart of France."

The French command, on the other hand, was said by military authorities to be working to "establish a continuous front line, as short as possible, to end the mobility of the operations under way.

The Aisne river line runs just south of Rethel.

On the flanks of the Meuse-Sambre front, action was reported less intense in Belgium, where the Germans have been driving on Brussels, and, on the east, France's real Maginot Line front was reported quiet.

BRITISH TROOPS RETIRE TO WEST OF BRUSSELS BUT DENY COLLAPSE IN SECTOR

Withdrawal From Belgian Capital In Advance Of German Invasion Apparently Made To Thwart Nazi Pincer Movement

BY EDWIN STOUT

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 17—British troops withdrew tonight to the west of Brussels, occupation of which was announced by the Germans, while Dutch and French forces abandoned the Netherlands islands of Beveland and Walcheren, among the last of the Dutch fronts of resistance to the Nazi invaders.

Disclosure of the withdrawal from Brussels was made in a brief British War Office communique following an appeal by an official source to Britons to keep "stout hearts and cool heads" in the face of German successes in Belgium and the deeper drive into northern France.

King In Close Touch With Front

King George VI, keeping closely in touch with the great battle in France and Belgium, studied maps at the War Office and later received Prime Minister Winston Churchill at Buckingham Palace.

The War Office declared there was "no question of a collapse or break-through" in the Brussels sector, where Allied and Belgian troops had fought bitterly to halt the Germans east of the city, in the vicinity of Louvain.

"During the night of May 16-17, certain adjustments to the front having become necessary, the B. E. F. was withdrawn to positions west of Brussels," it said. "This readjustment was carried out without interference."

Nazi Pincer Movement Indicated

The cause of the withdrawal was said to be the fact that German armored divisions which had penetrated into France were spreading fanwise, with one column swinging northwest toward the sea. The apparent reason for this move was to try to catch the British forces in Belgium in a pincer movement.

Abandonment of the two Dutch islands, in the province of Zeeland where the Dutch still are fighting the German invaders, was decided upon, according to an authoritative Dutch source in London, after heavy bombardment by German planes and artillery. Among the points on the islands bombarded were the towns of Middelburg and Veere.

All objects of military and naval importance on the islands already had been destroyed by the Dutch, including Vlissingen (Flushing) harbor installations, oil tanks and dockyards.

Shifted To Allied War Base

An authoritative statement added that personnel and planes of the air force training center on Walcheren had reached an Allied war base.

The admiral in charge of French forces in Zeeland province was said to have decided to leave the islands after consultation with the Dutch commandant in Zeeland.

The appeal to the British public said "Britain has faced tests like this before and can face them again."

First Stages Of Greatest Battle

Declaring that the future of Europe might hinge on events of the next few days, the official source added:

"There must, however, be no illusion about the fact we now are facing the first stages of the most tremendous battle in the history of the world." It was explained that while the situation is grave, it is not irremediable, and that "shocks may occur but the Government is certain the people will prepare themselves to face any test with nerves and steel."

Greatest Menace Since 1918

The day's development brought Britain and France face to face with the most dangerous menace to their existence since the dawn of March 12, 1918, when the Germans launched their attack against the British Fifth Army—an attack which almost won the World War for the Kaiser.

Earlier the British, cautioning against false optimism, ordered 10,000 London children from havens on the east coast to safer places in Wales.

One bright spot in the dark picture presented to Britons was an account of achievements by British warplanes which continued relentless bombing to hamper the advance of German columns.

The Air Ministry claimed the Germans had lost more than 1,000 planes since the invasion of the Low Countries began and credited its own airmen with inflicting tremendous damage on communications in western Germany, on mechanized columns, tanks, transport and gasoline reserves.

Nazi Air Claims Denied

Deriding German claims of 1,462 Allied planes destroyed, the Air Minister commented that the German high comand "must have published their own losses in error." The Allied losses, it added, were only a fraction of the figure reported by the Nazis.

Nevertheless, the Air Ministry's communique warned that Germany's reserves "are considerable and for the time being at least are able to sustain their effort."

Military sources said the French army now had the task of attacking the bulge the German forces had driven into Allied lines in northern France and of catching them in a pincer movement or forcing them to fall back.

Must Increase Air Power

But first of all, it was pointed out, there is the necessity of increasing the striking power of the Allied air forces in France to beat off German machines which cover advancing tank columns.

Assaulting the French lines, the Germans are using tanks heavier and more thickly armored than any used in Poland. A British military source estimated the Nazis were using three divisions, each consisting of 400 tanks, some of which are thirty-five-ton land battleships.

In this admittedly grave situation, the British Air Ministry reported a fierce and successful attack on German forces in which "pontoon bridges were blown up, roads blocked, troops on the march bombed and machine-gunned" and that German mechanized unit received heavy casualties.

The air raids were designed to wreck communications by which Germany was bringing supplies and reinforcements to the Western front, the ministry said.

Air Raids Around Sedan

An earlier communique said a force of medium bombers made sustained attacks on German transport and gasoline reserves in woods around Sedan, as well as upon troop reserves and supply columns.

"As a result of these operations, several fires broke out," the statement said, while reporting the loss of eleven Blenheim bombers in a battle with a large formation of German fighters amid intense anti-aircraft fire. Thirty-five German aircraft were brought down yesterday, it said, and preliminary reports today indicated further that thirty-one were shot down and many more disabled.

Navy's Part In Dutch Campaign

Naval officers disclosing details of the Dutch campaign said the British had landed troops in the Netherlands soon after the start of the invasion. The did not give the number of men.

The navy was credited with bringing the Netherlands royal family safely to England, bringing millions of dollars' worth of diamonds to Britain, destroying oil reserves and blocking the Rotterdam harbor by scuttling an old 12,000-ton liner.

One marine officer back in England said he saw German parachute troops come down "like butterflies" while planes raked the marine headquarters with bombs and machine-gun fire.

The officers said his men bundled refugees into ships for England and helped get gold out of the country.

Demolition Of Oil Supplies

"Then, at the request of the Dutch authorities, I began the work of demolition," he said. "Soon there were explosions everywhere. I sent some of my chaps to Amsterdam to attend to the oil supplies and they burned every scrap."

In the Scandinavian area, German oil tanks at Bergen, Norway, were destroyed by air raiders, hangars and slipways in Stokke fjord were damaged extensively by bombs, and fires were started on the Stavanger airdrome in southwestern Norway, where direct hits also were made on runways, it was said.

To Keep Up Fight For Narvik

The Admiralty also reported naval aircraft raids on Norway, saying that fuel tanks were destroyed at Slorgaaspynt, two tanks were blown up at Strudshaven and two more were fired at Knarven, all in the Bergen Sea.

Britain's determination to keep up the fight for Narvik, far-north Norwegian ore port where the Allies are laying siege to a German garrison, was voiced by Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax in a speech inaugurating a Norwegian relief fund.

The Day's War Communiques

German

BERLIN, May 17 (AP)—The communique of the German High Command follows:

In the battle between Antwerp and Namur the Dyle [River] position was pierced south of Wavre [twenty miles southeast of Brussels].

South of Maubeuge the Maginot Line was broken through on a width of 100 kilometers [sixty-two miles] up to Carignan, southeast of Sedan.

French armored forces which threw themselves against tanks west of Dinant were defeated. Detachments of the army and air force are everywhere pursuing the enemy, who are retreating westward.

The German air force achieved a series of successes in the morning hours of May 17.

On the Belgian front a German air squadron composed of six Messerschmitt chasers within one hour shot down thirteen British fighters of the Blenheim type without any losses to themselves.

In the port of Dunkerque one destroyer was sunk within a few minutes after being hit by two heavy-calibre bombs.

Off Dunkerque one cruiser and one merchantman were hit by bombs and severely damaged.

In the fight southeast of Sedan the commander of a motorized sharpshooters' regiment, Lieut. Col. Balck, achieved special success with his troops by a feat of personal fearless daring.

Until now 12,000 prisoners, including two generals, have been captured in this sector, and numerous weapons of all kinds have been taken.

On the southern wing our own strong forces threw back enemy relief attacks and were able to gain ground by four thrusts which followed.

As already announced by special bulletin, French long-range artillery shot at the undefended city of Rastatt without any military reason. The heaviest German batteries thereupon in reprisal opened fire on Hagenau [a French town].

Rear communications in France and Belgium constituted the chief objects of attack for the air force on May 16. Many stretches of railways, including highways, have been effectively destroyed. Troop transport trains have been annihilated, troop concentrations and marching columns have been scattered.

Off the Netherlands-Belgian coast, one enemy cruiser and one gunboat were sunk in the course of an attack upon enemy naval forces and transport ships. One transport ship was struck so heavily it had to be stranded. Two French destroyers were damaged.

In the central North Sea, one submarine after diving under was hit by a bomb and its destruction is presumed.

Before Narvik it proved possible to score a bomb hit on one battleship and a light cruiser and set fire to one 1,500-ton tanker.

One enemy pursuit plane was shot down during air fights there.

It proved possible to relieve our Alpine troops during their defense by air attack on enemy debarkations and concentrations. Reinforcements were sent to them.

Yesterday the enemy lost fifty-nine planes all told in the West. Of these, thirty planes were shot down during air fights, eight by anti-aircraft and artillery, and the rest were destroyed on the ground.

Fifteen of our own planes are missing.

After the collapse of the British-French position to the south of Louvain the German troops have entered Brussels this evening. Louvain also has fallen today to encircling attack.

After fierce fighting German forces have penetrated the Dyle line north of Louvain and have taken Melchein [Malines].

Yesterday the Allies attempted to effect a landing in the immediate vicinity of Narvik [in Norway]. Enemy troops, assembled in cutters, tried to take the German mountain troops by surprise under cover of darkness. The attack was, however, repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy.

French

PARIS, May 17 (AP)—Tonight's communique of the French High Command said:

The German attack developed today in a massive manner not only in Belgium but also in the region of Avesnes and Verdins.

Farther east the enemy attacked without success in the region of Sedan and Montmedy.

In close coordination with British aviation, our aviation pursued its energetic and effective action against land troops, road junctions and railroads.

While assuring protection of our troops, our pursuit planes took part in numerous aerial combats. Numerous enemy planes were brought down.

Under the present circumstances of the war of movement, it is impossible to enumerate them.

PARIS, May 17 (AP)—A communique issued by the High Command this morning states:

The battle continued yesterday and throughout the night between the Sambre River and the region north of Rethel as well as south of Sedan. Fighting was less violent in Belgium. There was nothing to report from Lorraine and Alsace.

Belgian

PARIS, May 17 (AP)—The following Belgian war communique, dated "somewhere in Belgium," was published tonight by Havas [French news agency]:

Our troops accomplished methodically the movements foreseen by the plan of operations.

On the afternoon of May 16 a regiment of foot soldiers participating in the defense of a canal particularly distinguished itself in repulsing with heavy losses German units which were trying to cross by foot-bridges.

An earlier Belgian communique stated:

In relation to the operations by the Allied forces and in close cooperation with those forces the Belgian forces have moved to new positions calmly and in good order.

Despite the numerous and difficult combats which many units have had to engage in since the start of hostilities, our army remains intact and its morale is high.

LONDON, May 17 (AP)—A Belgian communique, dated Ostend, Thursday night, and issued here, states:

North and northeast of Antwerp enemy patrols made contact with our positions.

Further to the south some local infantry attacks failed under the fire of our defense.

In Central Belgium violent attacks were delivered against positions occupied by the Allied forces.

British

LONDON, May 17 (AP)—The following British communiqué was issued today:

During the night of May 16-17, certain adjustments to the front having become necessary, the B. E. F. was withdrawn to positions west of Brussels. This readjustment was carried out without interference. There is no question of any collapse or breakthrough in this sector as suggested by the German communiqué.

LONDON, Saturday, May 18 (AP)—British General Headquarters issued the following communiqué early today:

Successful operations were carried out by the B. E. F. yesterday. Several enemy aircraft were brought down by anti-aircraft and small-arms fire in addition to successes of the Royal Air Force.

Morale of the troops is very high.

Ostend Made Belgian Capital As Government Quits Brussels

Extreme Gravity of Situation Admitted in London as Allies Fall Back Along Front of 115 Miles.

LONDON, May 17 (A. P.).—Allied troops were reported tonight to have fallen back along the 115-mile front from Antwerp to Sedan and the British public was warned that the military situation is "extremely grave."

The Belgian capital, it was disclosed today, has been shifted from Brussels to Ostend.

The Press Assocation, a British news agency, said authoritative quarters in London "do not attempt to disguise their opinion that the situation is of extreme gravity" and cr[illegible]ed against "false optimism."

A London source said allied troops were still covering Brussels, and that the open type of warfare and mobility of forces made difficult any accurate definition of the line of battle.

The Belgian Government is now at Ostend, on Belgium's North Sea coast, having moved there yesterday from Brussels, Reuters, the British news agency, reported today from Ostend. The first indication of the move came today when Reuters and Havas, the French news agency, issued a Belgian communique dated from Ostend.

Later Havas, apparently to cover up the government's moving, corrected this dateline to read "Brussels." The dispatches do not mention the whereabouts of King Leopold, who assumed command of the armies on the first day of the German invasion.

Today's Belgian war communique admitted allied withdrawals in Belgium, but said the Belgian Army "remains intact and its morale is high."

Situation Termed Reassuring.

Gen. Henri Denis, Belgian defense minister, insisted after issuance of the communique that "the situation is reassuring" and warned against nervousness. The communique text follows:

"In relation to the operations by the allied forces and in close cooperation with those forces, the Belgian forces have moved to new positions calmly and in good order.

"Despite the numerous and difficult combats which many units have had to engage in since the start of hostilities, our army remains intact and its morale is high."

An earlier Belgian communique, dated Ostend, Thursday evening, said:

"North and northeast of Antwerp enemy patrols made contact with our positions.

"Further to the south some local infantry attacks failed under the fire of our defense.

"In central Belgium violent attacks were delivered against positions occupied by the allied forces."

Situation Termed Better.

An authoritative source said today that the military situation from the standpoint of the allies "though very serious may be regarded as very slightly better than yesterday or on Wednesday."

The Air Ministry announced that "During last night the Royal Air Force made further successful attacks on military objectives in Germany." The single sentence communique offered no details of the raids.

A meeting of the Allied Supreme War Council in Paris yesterday, attended by Prime Minister Churchill, was described as having had "a very beneficial effect." The Prime Minister flew to Paris and returned by plane.

Air Superiority Claimed.

This is an authoritative British view of today's war position:

1. The situation on the French battle line is very serious.
2. However, the outcome is awaited with "complete confidence."
3. Reports from the fighting zones make it clear that the Royal Air Force, "machine for machine and man for man, is decisively superior to the enemy."

A British spokesman compared the present battle of the Meuse with the protracted fighting at Verdun in the World War (from February to November, 1916.)

He said the battle might be expected to continue "with varying fortunes for both sides" and that it was impossible to form a "clearer appreciation" of the situation at this time.

Mr. Churchill, he said, calls the fighting the "Battle of the Bulge," due to the conformation of the line of battle.

Fresh Drive Expected.

British fighting men reported they had checked the German drive on Brussels, but expected a fresh onslaught soon, while the empire, busy with war's ramifications, strengthened her army in the Near East.

A War Office communique announced the arrival of a second contingent of the second Australian force, which is proceeding to its specified areas in Palestine."

Great Britain's army moves in the Near East came as the Germans, eager for Rumania's oil for their war machine, were reported concentrating mechanized forces on the Slovak-Hungarian frontier, perhaps for a drive through Hungary, and Italy's war intentions remained in doubt.

"At this critical hour your arrival brings us all encouragement and is a very welcome demonstration that Australia will be there," said Lord Caldecote, secretary of state for colonial and dominion affairs, in a message to the Australian troops.

Government Has Left Brussels, Report Says

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 17—A Havas (French news agency) dispatch from Brussels today said the Belgian Interior Minister informed Belgians by radio that the Government had moved "elsewhere in Belgian territory."

Previous dispatches said the Government moved to Ostend, on the coast.

The Minister, Van Der Forker, said it was "a painful decision to which we were resigned in the face of evidence of the necessity."

Looks For Early Improvement

"After several days of war," he said, "we find ourselves in a situation which, without being nearly so serious, recalls in certain respects that of the first weeks of the 1914-1918 war. We have conviction we will soon see the same improvement as then."

The earlier Havas report from Ostend said that although the Belgian Government had moved United States Ambassador John Cudahy, with some other neutral diplomats, had remained at Brussels.

The Italian Ambassador, the counselor of the Spanish Embassy and the Papal Nuncio still are at Brussels. The Argentine and Peruvian legations moved with the Government, said Havas.

British Hold To Louvain Area

With the British Expeditionary Force on the French-Belgian Front, May 17 (AP)—British forces have stemmed Nazi attacks in the Louvain area, and the road to Brussels, sixteen miles west of Louvain, still remains in Allied hands. The British army is holding its positions after two days of open warfare with German shock battalions and is waiting to see which way the German power concentrated in the Sedan area, in France some eighty miles airline to the south, will strike.

The Germans there are poised to strike either to the north toward the defenses before Brussels or to the south into France.

They may try to roll up to the British lines in a northward thrust from the Sedan area, but it was pointed out that such a movement would leave them open to vigorous counter-attack by the French field army from the south.

The Germans have attacked heavily in the Louvain area and have sent bombers far behind the lines in an attempt to demolish roads and cut British communications.

The latter movement met with small success. But three days of bombings in Belgium and France have cost hundreds of lives.

It appeared that if British lines shift elsewhere, it will be because French Generalissimo Gamelin's strategical plan so dictates, not because the British have been forced back.

Despite the heaviest aerial bombing and strafing, plus continued shelling, the British position caused no pessimism. In the last two days the line has been bent at several places, but in each case has snapped back on the heels of damaging artillery fire and furious counter-attacks by British infantry regiments.

The Nazi air offensive has been met with bravery by the British Royal Air Force. The present R. A. F. strength is not enough to launch an offensive of its own.

The fluid situation shows the Germans are now in a position similar to that preciding the World War battle of the Marne: the first momentum carried them deep into enemy country, a position that makes the slightest error dangerous and emphasizes that although the Germans have thrust through the Maginot Line extension at its weakest point, they are now exposed to counter-attack from north and south.

The British air force today shot down twenty-one more German planes and sent bombers over the lines to smash the advancing German columns.

The Royal Air Force now claims it has "conclusively" shot down 156 German planes.

There has been no relief for British pursuit squadrons fighting Nazi planes attacking British troops and positions on land.

Only this morning came word that German Heinkel planes dive-bombed a railway station where a trainload of Belgian refugees had just arrived.

Twelve refugees were killed and scores were wounded.

'Military Objectives.'

Technically, the bombing is confined to "military objectives"—a phrase which covers every town with a railway station or bridge.

Aircraft bearing high explosive, incendiary and delayed-action bombs have attacked these at a dreadful cost of human life.

Last night the sky was alight with burning towns. The town we stopped in shook with the explosion of heavy bombs and anti-aircraft fire.

The effects of the bombing were brought close when we passed through a village which fifteen minutes later was bombed by eight Heinkels.

Incendiary bombs had turned the placid main street into a roaring bonfire when we returned. Refugees huddles in doorways or lying under ponderous farm carts had been wounded or killed.

Soldier Samaritans.

Troops turned from their own tasks to the rescue of the wounded and the extinguishing of fires. An hour later the streets were cleared and the refugees—a twenty-mile column of suffering and pain—again stumbled through the town, past charred houses and broken bodies.

tacks on Louvain were repulsed, was marred by the report that German reinforcements were moving down from the Netherlands Provinces they already have conquered.

A report picked up from the German-controlled radio station at Hilversum said the German high command now was able to withdraw large formations from the Netherlands to reinforce contingents attacking further south. Louvain controls approaches to Brussels, 16 miles away.

A radio broadcast on the wavelength of the Brussels station heard in London this morning said that Belgium's Liege forts still are holding out.

Fighting was reported in progress near the famous Waterloo battlefield.

Warning of Parachutists.

The ministry amplified a previous announcement to give detailed description of how the Royal Air Force wreaked havoc on German communication lines, ammunition dumps and troop concentrations behind the battle lines.

Expanding its precautions against an attack on Britain itself, the Ministry of Home Security warned "there now is a risk that enemy parachutists may attempt to land in this country." Motorists were urged to lock up their cars in garages and remove spark plugs, from dawn to dusk, to keep them out of German hands.

More than 250,000 persons have volunteered for a home defense force against parachute invasion, said the war office.

London military commentators expressed the belief the military situation in Belgium was fairly well in hand at the present, but they said the greatest danger to allied forces existed on the French frontier in the Sedan sector where mechanized columns broke through.

The Norwegian high command, meantime, disclosed in a communique that allied troops now are cooperating with Norwegian forces in the fighting near Mosjoen, some 180 miles south of Narvik.

The communique said the allies withdrew at Finneid, 30 miles north of Mosjoen, in accordance with a prearranged plan of operations.

In the Narvik area troops were reported cleaning up territory around Narvik Lake and the mountainous region south of the Cukke Valley.

Reporter Watches Raid By 30 German Bombers

Sees Allied Fighters Scatter Nazi Planes in Belgium

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, SOMEWHERE IN BELGIUM, May 17 (AP).—Standing in front of a village church, this correspondent saw a squadron of about thirty German planes carry out a bombing raid today. In a near-by field a farmer continued his plowing.

About ten miles away the Germans started dropping their bombs. French and Belgian anti-aircraft guns opened up, adding puffs of smoke from their bursts to the wisps of cloud in the sky.

Out from the west a French and British fighter squadron suddenly appeared, scattering the German planes. One plane dived toward our group, and we jumped to a stone wall for protection against the machine-gun bullets which we expected to spatter against us. The plane pulled out of the dive, however, and returned to the combat, which was now split up.

One of the aerial fights ended in death for the unidentified British pilot—but not before he had downed one of the three German planes attacking him from the front, rear and above.

The British plane crashed about four miles away from us in a meadow. Belgian peasants, with tears in their eyes, said afterward: "The poor lad. He was a hero. He fought with his plane to the very end to keep it from falling into the center of our village. He lost his own life, but he saved many of ours."

In one French town on the frontier, the official death list of an earlier German raid stands at thirty-seven, of whom fifteen were children. But one bomb made a direct hit on a cafe where several score others had taken refuge, destroying it. Those others are not yet accounted for.

Witnesses of the raid said that after the Germans had dropped their bombs they returned and machine-gunned crowds in the streets who were helping the wounded.

1,200 Huge Nazi Tanks Surprised Foe at Sedan

New Vehicles Called Heavier Armed Than Those in Poland

LONDON, May 17 (AP).—Huge new tanks, larger and more heavily armed that those which rolled through Poland last September, were used by the Germans to break through the French extension of the Maginot Line in the Sedan area, a British military source said today.

This authority estimated that the Nazis used three armored divisions, each having 400 tanks.

It was emphasized that the Germans did not strike at the main Maginot defenses, but at the extension, which is regarded as considerably weaker than the principal fortifications.

The French defenders were described as "surprised by the direction and weight of the blow."

The German penetration was said to have been not very wide but still considerable.

In advance of the land column were waves of dive bombers, raking everything before them. Then came heavy tanks and the infantry. Some parachute troops also floated to earth behind the French lines.

French Blast Bridgehead On German Side of Rhine

By the Associated Press.

BASEL, Switzerland, May 17.—French artillery early today blasted away the red granite bridgeheads and piers on the German side of the Rhine opposite Huninge and north of Basel, Paris military quarters reported. German guns did not reply.

Observers said the bridgehead might have been used by the Germans as a base for an army pontoon bridge.

ADMIRALTY IS BARRICADED

Barbed Wire Is Thrown Around London Building

LONDON, May 17 (AP)—A stout barbed wire barricade today was thrown around the greystone Admiralty building, nerve center of the British Navy. Khaki-clad soldiers with bayonetted rifles guarded the entries.

There was official silence on the move, but it was assumed to be a part of the "at the ready" plan instituted since Nazi parachutists were employed so successfully in the invaded Low Countries.

A night and day military guard also was established during the day about Broadcasting House, home of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Nazis Say Dutch Oil Paid Profit on Attack

BERLIN, May 17 (A. P.).—Germany fell heir to 300,000 tons of gasoline in the Netherlands, outside of Amsterdam, and an estimated 90,000 tons more in Amsterdam as a result of the Dutch army's capitulation, excellently informed spokesmen said today.

The Dutch set fire to their Amsterdam storage tanks on the day of the capitulation.

These quantities, the Berlin spokesmen said, were far in excess of what the German planes, tanks and other motorized war machinery consumed during the five-day Blitzkrieg which, therefore, was "good business."

In Norway, it was said, Germany also inherited much more gasoline than was expended there.

German Plane Loss Put Above 1000 in Week.

LONDON, May 17 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry said tonight that Germany has lost over 1,000 aircraft since the invasion of the Low Countries a week ago. Allied losses were put at only a fraction of the 1,462 planes which the Germans say they have shot down.

Nancy Bombed Again: 22 Alarms

Nancy, France, May 17 (AP)—Military authorities reported several air bombings of outlying districts of Nancy today, but said casualties were slight. In the twenty-four hours up to early evening twenty-two air-raid alarms were sounded in the Nancy region.

Nazis Say Planes Sank Destroyer Off Dunkirk.

BERLIN, May 17 (A. P.).—The German High Command reported today that an Allied destroyer had been sunk at Dunkirk and two other vessels hit off that port in a series of raids by the German air force.

MAY 18 1940

LINER BEACHED AFTER BOMBING

Passengers Saved From Former President Harding.

4 OF CREW KILLED OFF OSTEND

Survivors in London Say They Had No Guns to Fight Plane.

LONDON, May 17 (A. P.).—The Belgian liner Ville da Bruges, formerly the United States liner President Harding, has been beached after a German bombing attack on Tuesday, members of the crew disclosed on their arrival today in London.

They said that the 13,869-ton liner was heading out from Antwerp with sixty-four passengers, mostly women, when an aerial torpedo burst and killed four members of the crew.

Every passenger was landed safely, according to James Gibson, thirty-five years old, of Montreal, the boatswain. He said that they made shore, about 200 yards away, in seven boats.

The four killed were two Canadians and two Belgians. The crew of 115 included sixty-two Canadians.

Sold Under Neutrality Law.

The vessel was one of eight sold to the Societe Maritime Anversoise, a Belgian company, by the United States Lines soon after American neutrality regulations barred American ships from most European waters.

While still under the American flag as the President Harding, she sailed from England last November 15 with American refugees from the British Isles.

"We were near Ostend," Gibson said, "when a single plane came over about 6:15 A. M. and machine-gunned us.

"We had no guns to defend ourselves.

"At 7:19 A. M. three bombers came over and dropped one aerial torpedo which struck. Most of the passengers were in their quarters at the time.

"We mustered the passengers on the promenade deck. There was a little panic amid the shouting of orders but it soon quieted down.

"We were flying the Belgian flag when the first plane came over, but we hauled it down immediately. No flag was up when the bomb was dropped."

The passengers' quarters were protected by steel bulkheads, Harold Kelland, thirty-six-year-old carpenter from Toronto, said.

American Money Lost.

While she was technically owned by a Belgian firm, loss of the former President Harding was a blow to American pocketbooks.

When the United States Lines sold its ships to the Societe Maritime Anversoise it obtained a 40 per cent interest in the company, and set up as American agents for the Belgian firm.

The eight ships have ferried thousands of tons of war materials to the Allies, including planes, munitions, trucks, copper and other metals.

The President Harding figured in several rescues at sea and brought thousands of Americans home from war-torn Europe.

She was built by the United States Government in 1921 at Camden, N. J., as a troop transport. As the Lone Star State and the President Taft she traded along the Pacific Coast and in the Caribbean before being placed in the trans-Atlantic service.

She completed her last voyage under the American flag on October 21, 1939, braving a hurricane that swept a cabin boy overboard and injured seventy-three persons.

The difficulties imposed by Britain's censorship on the coverage of news is shown by the following London dispatch, just received. It was held up by the censor, although another dispatch of the same subject and character to an American news agency was allowed to pass promptly.

As a result of vigorous protest by the Associated Press, the censor stated that the dispatch which reached New York promptly was passed "by mistake."

Sailors Call It a Jinx

LONDON, May 17 (AP).—A jinx seemed to dog the Belgian liner Ville de Bruges from the time she left New York until she became a battered and burning wreck at the mouth of the River Scheldt, Canadian survivors said today.

Crewmen said misfortune began a day out of New York last November when a seaman died. As the liner neared Europe, the engines broke down and she had to be towed to Falmouth, England.

Later another crewman died of a mysterious illness—and then came the bombing by the Germans.

One old sailor said: "I guess changing her name placed a curse on her."

Mine Exploded Near Dutch Queen Fleeing to Britain

London, May 17 (AP)—The destroyer in which Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands fled to England Monday was disclosed today to have had a narrow escape when a German plane dropped a magnetic mine only 40 yards ahead of the vessel.

An authorized source said the mine exploded with terrific force, but the destroyer had swerved and was unscathed.

Reviewing the British navy's role in the campaign touched off a week ago by Germany's invasion of Belgium and Holland, this source also said that warships brought fortunes in gold, diamonds and securities, as well as Crown Princess Juliana and the other members of the Netherlands royal family, and other refugees from Holland.

The British naval officer who told the story of Queen Wilhelmina said:

"I have never seen a woman so completely calm in all my life."

The officer was in charge of the British destroyer flotilla assisting the Dutch authorities at the Hook of Holland. He said the Queen decided at sea to go to England because of the danger on every side in her own country.

Warships Bombed

At the outset of operations in the Low Countries, an authorized source said, the British landed soldiers to support Royal Marines and the Dutch Army in combating Nazi parachute troops and "Fifth Column" saboteurs in Holland. Warships dispatched to the Belgian coast, he said, faced terrific air bombardments, and in many cases their gun crews fired from dawn to dusk at raiding German planes.

The navy has three aims in the lowlands' campaign, he reported—to assist in the removal of civilians, to lay mines and to aid troops ashore when possible. He reported that the Germans laid fields of magnetic mines at port entrances, but British minesweepers cleared passages swiftly.

British motor torpedo boats entered the Zuider Zee for the first time in history to aid the fight against the on-rushing Germans, he said, while minelayers laid fresh fields of mines off Holland to pr...

American Tells of Siege

Mrs. J. M. De Booye, American wife of the Dutch general manager of an oil firm, who escaped with her husband and two daughters in a fishing trawler during the German siege of The Hague, said in an interview today that "it was simply impossible for us to hold out longer in the face of such great odds." Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, commander in chief of the Dutch Army, "ceased fighting only when he saw what inevitably would happen should he attempt to hold out longer," she said.

Mrs. De Booey said the Germans arrived first at 3 a. m. Friday. On landing, Nazi parachutists used buses, motorcycles and other means to get to their designated stations.

"Grenades, incendiary missiles and rifles were used from points our troops could not see," Mrs. de Booey added.

The German controlled radio station at Hilversum, Holland, in a broadcast heard in London today, warned of "grave danger of typhoid fever in Holland." The broadcast said the use or sale of milk was prohibited unless it had been boiled at least three times.

Flight From The Hague.

LONDON, May 17 (A. P.).—Mrs. J. M. De Booey, American wife of the Dutch general manager of an oil firm, who escaped in a fishing trawler in the German siege of The Hague, said today: "It was simply impossible for us to hold out longer in the face of such great odds."

With her two daughters and husband, Mrs. De Booey made her way across the English Channel, starting last Tuesday night, navigating by dead reckoning because of lack of instruments.

Gen. Henri Gerard Winkelman, commander in chief of the Dutch army, ceased fighting only when he saw what inevitably would happen should he attempt to hold out longer, she said.

Mrs. De Booey said that the Germans arrived at 3 A. M. on Friday.

On landing, the Nazi parachutists used buses, motorcycles and other means to get to their designated stations.

"Grenades, incendiary missiles and rifles were used from points our troops could not see," Mrs. De Booey added.

"How can you justify the bombing and machine-gunning of women and children?" one of the women asked him.

Miss Tiley said that the pilot replied:

"This is war. Heil Hitler!"

Then he asked that his wife and family be notified after his death.

Many of the casualties among the civilian population were caused by bombardments of railways and stations which are considered to be military objectives, Miss Tiley said.

Outside of one town, in a courtyard, she said she saw the bodies of two women "cut into pieces" by machine-gun bullets.

The unit left its base late in the day on which the German invasion of the Low Countries started, and by the next morning had established refugee shelters in several northern French towns.

Crowded Roads.

Miss Tiley said that the roads were lined with French farmers and their families, trudging southward with all the possessions they could carry.

Bombs, she continued, had wrecked railway lines, preventing the departure of refugee trains.

Miss Tiley said that several stations, crowded with civilians waiting for trains which never came, were bombed, casualties resulting.

She added, however, that she did not see any civilians machine-gunned on the roads, although her cars picked up several wounded on the way south.

Miss Tiley, with the help of a French school teacher, organized the first rescue station in a school house outside the heavily bombed area.

She brought back, among thirty refugees, a French boy who had a bullet wound in his right side.

He had been traveling with his grandparents, who told Miss Tiley that the boy's brother was killed.

Bombs' Work 'Utterly Horrible'

Anne Morgan Describes Havoc Visited on Civilians in Northern France.

PARIS, May 17 (A. P.).—Miss Anne Morgan, sister of J. P. Morgan, called German bombardments of civilian refugees in northern France "utterly horrible" today. Miss Morgan, organizer of the Friends of France Committee, was forced out of the north yesterday by German bombardments, while her unit, accompanied by cars of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps, was trying to rescue civilians.

She declined to give a formal interview.

"I'm too busy getting my girls out in the field again after the awful experience they have just gone through," she said.

She delegated Miss Ophelia Tiley of Essex, Conn., to report on the work of the rescue unit since May 10.

Most of the most startling things that the women drivers discovered, Miss Tiley said, was a German pilot who had been shot down while wearing a British Royal Air Force uniform.

His back was broken and he was dying in a French shelter when the women arrived in a little northern French town.

The Reason.

Ambulances Arrive.

Three of the ambulance corps drivers reached Paris today with sick and wounded French civilians from bomb-battered northern France.

The drivers were Sam Pierce of Dallas, Tex.; Phil Coniglio of Lincoln, Neb., and Julius Berger of New York city.

Mr. Pierce said that nine of the ten ambulances which originally set out with Miss Morgan's Friends of France Corps were driven deep into the woods without lights to escape detection by German planes. German planes.

He said that they had a full load, most of them wounded under the care of one of Miss Morgan's nurses.

One Ambulance Lost

"We had already lost one of our ambulances, although the driver, Louis Wehrley, had escaped," Pierce said. "We didn't dare leave the woods until after the planes had disappeared, which was about two hours later. Later, we set up a makeshift camp kitchen, fixed a meal and ate."

Pierce's uniform had been badly torn and he was wearing an ordinary blue jacket, which caused him to be held for questioning temporarily by French officers after a well meaning civilian reported him as a possible Nazi parachute trooper landed behind the lines.

Miss Morgan returned to Paris with additional drivers and nurses and with all but the one ambulance which was captured by the Germans.

John Paul Jones Last to Invade Britain, 1778

American Raider's 32 Men Armed Only With Candles Attacked Harbor Town

LONDON, May 17 (AP).—The British, organizing a force of 250,000 "minute men" to resist any invasion, by German parachute troops, dug into history books today and discovered that the last foreign raider to set foot on English soil was John Paul Jones, the American naval hero—and he was born in Scotland.

They figured the Nazis would follow the American's strategy in at least one respect—choose a remote part of the country for their landing—but that the Nazis also would be tougher to throw out.

Jones spread consternation in England with a landing on the bleak, rocky Cumberland coast on April 22, 1778. Leaving his ship, the Ranger, off Whitehaven, he landed a band of thirty-two men "armed" with candles.

They first surprised the two forts commanding the harbor and spiked the guns, and then set out to try to destroy shipping in the harbor. That attempt failed, however, because the invaders' candles burned out.

The resourceful Jones sent a man to a house to ask for a light. The raiders then set fire to one large ship before guns of the other ships compelled them to retreat.

In the present crisis the public is being warned to beware of charming strangers making any kind of a request, whether for a match or merely for the distance to the next town.

Jones was said to have made another landing on the other side of Solway Firth from Whitehaven. His objective was to capture the Earl of Selkirk, who lived within a stone's throw of Jones's birthplace in Scotland. Jones failed to find the earl, but made off with his silver plate, valued at about $400.

Following these raids, Jones engaged in one of the first of the naval actions that won him the title "Founder of the American Navy." His Ranger swooped down on the British sloop-of-war Drake off the coast of County Antrim, Ireland, and forced the vessel's surrender.

War Dieting for Britain Proposed Under Experts

Science to Cope With Economic Losses by Latest Plan

A committee statement warned that the country might be forced to make full use of a body of "scientists and practical men" to draft the basic future food policy was urged.

The report forecast that the government would lose an estimated £25,500,000 ($66,625,000) annually on its meat supply, and said a rise in Canadian prices had increased the wheat subsidy loss to £3,000,000 ($9,750,000).

GERMANS POISED FOR A BLITZKRIEG DRIVE IN BALKANS

Hungary Fears Plan Is to Cross It to Get Oil Supplies in Rumania.

BUDAPEST, May 17 (A. P.).—Germany was reported today to be massing whole divisions of mechanized and motorized blitzkrieg troops on the Slovak frontier of Hungary, pointed at Rumania, 140 miles away.

Unconfirmed advices from Vienna, credited indirectly to German Army officers there, said that all but the date had been set for a lightning march through Hungary.

The reports plunged the Balkans into new fear. Military observers expressed belief that Germany might strike into the Rumanian oil fields to keep her war machine in the west from running out of gas.

From Bucharest came word that the Rumanian Government decreed that all oil companies must sell and store in their own reservoirs whatever quantity of petroleum products the army need for possible wartime use.

The Rumanian Army's estimate of its possible requirements was not made public, but privately it was said that as much as 2,000,000 tons might be purchased.

The decree applied to all producers, refiners and retailers, whether the firms are foreign or Rumanian ownership.

Obstacle to Germany.

Observers in Bucharest regarded the measure as a new obstacle for Germany in her strenuous efforts to obtain a promised quota of 130,000 tons monthly, which is less than half filled so far in 1940.

Anti-aircraft searchlights played over Bucharest last night and new sirens were tested atop the Rumanian capital's tallest buildings.

Additional anti-aircraft guns were mounted today on the highest building in Zagreb, Yugoslavia. Municipal elections scheduled for Sunday in six districts on the Italian frontier in Yugoslavia were cancelled. Troop train traffic through Zagreb was reported to be heavy.

Military informants said that a new man had been called for every reservist given leave from the army for farm work. The army strength is still estimated at more than 1,000,000 men.

[The British Broadcasting Corporation announced that Rumania had decided to cancel army leaves. Rumania is credited with an armed force of 1,600,000 men and holds a guarantee of British-French aid if she has to fight for her independence.]

A steady stream of troop trains and columns of German high speed fighting equipment, including artillery, tanks, armored cars, field kitchens and [illegible] trains, was reported from Yugoslava to be moving into eastern Slovakia.

Slovakia, which gained a measure of independence under German military protection in the breakup of Czecho-Slovakia, lies across the narrower eastern point of Hungary from northwestern Rumania, the Transylvania section which Hungary lost in the world war and would like to get back.

Still other German forces were reported concentrated in the Zistersdorf region, north of Vienna, at the western tip of Slovakia.

The movements in eastern Slovakia were said to have started on Monday, with Poprad as temporary headquarters.

Airplanes Are Ready.

Hundreds of Nazi warplanes were said to be poised at Vienna and at Slovak airports, ready for the customary softening action of the Blitzkrieg technic.

Two days before the reported troop movement into eastern Slovakia, oil refineries in the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate, another part of dismembered Czecho-Slovakia, were said to have been advised to transfer all their stocks to warehouses and to work night and day to meet an urgent demand.

For a week observers at Budapest and elsewhere along the Danube have noted an absence of German barge traffic down river from Vienna, and some military men here said that the craft were being fitted to carry heavy artillery, munitions and supplies toward Rumania.

German officers quartered in hotels at Vienna were reported to have told foreigners that they had orders to march through Hungary, but that they had no idea when the jump-off would be ordered.

Military observers believed that the German columns could spear quickly through Hungary. They held this belief despite the still undetermined attitude of Hungary—whether to oppose the Nazis or grant an easy right-of-way.

Oil Is In Arrears.

Pointing to the fact that Rumanian oil deliveries to Germany are now well over 1,000,000 tons in arrears of the quota agreed upon by the two countries, they promptly linked word of the German concentration with what they held to be a growing German need for engine fuel and lubricants.

They said that Germany's particular need is high grade gasoline to power the planes she has been using by the thousands in the big drive to the west through the Netherlands and into Belgium and France.

They held it to be a simple matter of arithmetic. The basis of their figuring was that each of Germany's planes burns an average of fifteen gallons of gasoline each hour of every twenty-four.

Fifteen gallons is not sufficient to sustain a bomber or a fighting plane for an hour in the air—150 gallons and sixty gallons, respectively, would be closer to their hourly consumption—but the consumption of the average plane on an around-the-clock basis would be fifteen gallons an hour.

Thus the observers arrive at a consumption of 360 gallons a day for the average plane, on the basis of more than two hours in the air for the average bomber and six for the average fighter.

Multiplying this by only 1,000 they have 360,000 gallons as the daily need for even that number of planes, or about 1,400 tons of high grade gasoline. To get that amount, Germany would have to transport and refine 8,600 tons of crude oil daily, or about twice her present quota from Rumania.

Such figuring does not take into account the Reich's needs for her motorized and mechanized forces, her navy and war industries. Neither, for that matter, does it reckon with the great reserves she is supposed to have had before the war started last September, nor other sources of supply, notably the Russian and Polish field.

Rumania Eliminating Fifth-Column Menace

All Aliens Without Work Permits Required To Leave Country Immediately.

Bucharest, May 17 (AP)—All foreigners not having work permits must leave Rumania immediately, the Ministry of Interior decreed tonight. All work permits issued before May 1 were canceled. At least 10,000 aliens are affected.

All unable or unwilling to leave will be interned in a concentration camp opened tonight.

Elimination of the "fifth-column" menace was described as the motive.

Zagreb Mounts Guns

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia, May 17 (AP).—Additional anti-aircraft guns were mounted today on Zagreb's highest building because of Yugoslav fears of being involved in the war.

Municipal elections scheduled for Sunday in six districts on the Italian frontier were canceled. Troop train traffic through Zagreb w heavy.

Athens, Greece, Saturday, May 18 (AP)—The War Ministry early today called to the colors the 1935 military class.

The class, composed of men 26 years old, will report May 25.

It was announced officially that these men, reported to number 60,000, were called for a month's training "in the use of new weapons."

Informed military observers said most would be sent to the border of Italian Albania to swell the already large number of Greek troops manning fortifications facing Italian forces on the other side.

Simultaneously, Premier-Dictator John Metaxas held long conferences with the Yugoslav and Rumanian Ambassadors. Aleksandar Vukcevic, the Yugoslav envoy, sounded out Metaxas last Tuesday on what assistance Yugoslavia could expect from Greece in the event of an Italian attack.

Bid to Berlin for Guaranty of Neutrality Reported; Balkan Status Quo Sought

The Moscow government also was reported to have dispatched another note to Berlin. The subject of it was not specified in the "Tidningen" dispatch.

Gibraltar Lets The Rex Go By Without a Halt

Italy Wins Round in Fight; Anti-Allied Rome Crowd Mauls U.S. Photographer

ROME, May 17 (AP).—The Italian campaign against Allied contraband control apparently bore fruit today as the Italian liner Rex, eastbound from New York, passed Gibraltar without being stopped.

The Italian Line reported that the west bound Conte di Savoia had passed Gibraltar earlier in the day, but was not specific on whether it, too, had been exempted from the customary British search.

That anti-Allied feeling persisted, however, was indicated when Lionel Green, a New York photographer, was attacked by Italians who objected to his photographing the Hotel Eden, from which the nameplate has been removed.

[Anthony Eden was the leading figure in the imposition of sanctions against Italy during the Ethiopian conquest when he was Foreign Secretary, and his appointment as British War Secretary last week raised no cheers in Italy.]

Green said the Italians asked him if he was English. When he replied that he was American, they tried to smash his camera, but did him no physical injury.

The Italian Senate, which heard today a report that extraordinary military expenses would put the country 26,000,000,000 lire (about $1,300,000,000) further into the red this year, went into secret session, presumably to hear confidential war reports.

Official enthusiasm ran high for German war successes against the Allies. It was announced that Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano would go to Milan Sunday for a rally celebrating the signing last May 22 of the Italian-German military alliance.

The Vatican City newspaper "L' Osservatore Romano," subject of angry criticism in recent days by pro-German elements because of its war reports and comments, dropped its political matter today, and Italians who read it to get a different slant on the news than they find in their own papers, discovered only the regular war communiques of the belligerents.

The Fascist Catholic paper "L'Avvenire," however, broke the press silence on the matter of Italian-Yugoslav tension by remarking:

"In the Balkans, Yugoslavia seems to be giving way to restlessness, which, if it has a precedent in the traditions of the tripartite kingdom, furthers neither Danubian equilibrium nor Mediterranean peace."

Although Yugoslavs have been manifesting fear of an Italian invasion, the subject had been ignored by officials and the press in Italy.

United States warnings to Americans to return home appeared likely to cause closing of the North American College for Catholic theological students here.

As another by-product of the European conflict, Italian importers began seeking tin, cocoa and oil seeds in South America to replace commodities formerly bought in the Dutch East Indies. Business circles reported that inquiries had been made in Venezuela, Peru, Bolivia and Argentina.

(about $1,300,000,000).

The deficit, he said, was caused by extraordinary military expenditures. It is more than four times as large as that foreseen in the original budget estimates for the year ending June 30.

The minister said expenditures for the year would total 56,140,000,000 lire (about $2,800,000,000) instead of the 35,975,000,000 ($1,800,000,000) forecast originally.

Deficits Total $3,717,000,000.

Signor De Revel said the accumulated deficits for the last five years now totaled 74,345,000,000 lire (about $3,717,000,000).

Currency circulation of 22,600,000,000 lire as of March 20 was up 38 per cent from 1935. Signor De Revel said this increase was not excessive in view of the rise in national income during the same period from 80,000,000,000 lire (about $4,000,000,000 a year to 115,000,000,000 lire (about $5,750,000,000).

Two new anti-Allied posters appeared on walls today—one a mock [illegible] notice for the British fleet, and the other reminding Italians of the "Italianity" of French Corsica.

2,000 Americans Pour Into Genoa, Bound Home

Genoa, Saturday, May 18 (AP)—Two thousand homeward bound Americans, mostly from Hungary, Yugoslavia and Rumania, poured into Genoa last night and today. REX IS NOT HALTED

Gibraltar Lets Italian Liner Pass Without Search.

ABOARD THE LINER REX, May 17 (A. P.).—The British failed to halt the liner Rex at Gibraltar today for the first time since contraband control was established at the start of the war last September.

GENOA, May 17 (A. P.).—The Italian Line reported today that the liner Conte di Savoia passed Gibraltar westbound for New York about 8 A. M. (3 A. M., New York time) today.

The report from the ship did not say whether she had been stopped by the contraband control.

AMERICANS URGED TO LEAVE BRITAIN

U.S. Embassy Advises Them to Await Ship in Ireland.

LONDON, May 17 (A. P.).—The American embassy, on instructions from Washington, today advised all citizens in Great Britain to return home if possible.

The United States is sending American ships to meet them on the west coast of Ireland.

An authoritative American spokesman said there would be no compulsion. He added that there was no indication what ships would be used nor when they would be available.

He said that Americans compelled by business and other reasons to remain would be advised to leave the congested areas for safer parts of Britain, but that no specific areas would be indicated.

Many Americans called at the embassy today, seeking advice about ways of getting out of Britain and obtaining passage home.

The embassy estimates that there are still about 3,500 Americans in the United Kingdom, more than half in the London area.

The State Department said the total in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, as of January 1, was more than 7,000.

Gibraltar, May 17 (AP).—The United States consul today advised Americans residing in Gibraltar to leave for the United States without delay.

Students said that they expect Bishop Hayes to send them home if the decision is left to him.

Normally there are 120 students in the college, but about thirty already have left because they have finished their studies and been ordained, or because their families or bishops thought it wise.

In addition there are at least 200 American priests in Rome engaged in various ecclesiastical activities. Many of these are preparing to leave.

It was recalled that Jews leaving Germany cannot reenter the country under any circumstances.

AUSTRALIANS LAND NEW FORCE IN EAST

Contingent Reaches Egypt After 9000-mile Trip.

CAIRO, Egypt, May 17 (A. P.).—Great Britain's army in the Near East was bolstered today by arrival here of a big convoy of Australians. Many of them sons of men who fought at Gallipoli in the world war. They formed the second contingent of Australian troops sent overseas since the war began.

Some of the Australians traveled in a big liner which was painted a drab gray. Others came in troopships which have been moving imperial regiments.

Bronzed by their 9,000-mile voyage, the men looked fit and well as they crowded the decks of the transports. All are volunteers, of splendid physique, and they have had at least six months' training in handling modern weapons.

The first contingent of Australians landed here just over two months ago and now they are part of the Allied forces assembled to guard the lower Nile valley.

ALLIES FORCED BACK IN ARCTIC

Norwegians Also Withdraw North of Narvik.

BLITZKRIEG PLAN REPORTED

Stockholm Hears Nazis Are Out to Conquer North Norway.

LONDON, May 17 (A. P.).—The Swedish radio, heard in London, said today that Norwegian and Allied troops had been forced to withdraw "at several points" in the mountains north of Narvik, the rich iron ore port where a German garrison has been under siege.

The radio said that two German planes were shot down yesterday.

Norwegians are holding positions in the sector north of Bukkedal, according to the Norwegian Telegraph Agency.

Britain will continue to press vigorously the Allied campaign to capture Narvik so as to establish a secure base for the Norwegian Government, Lord Halifax, the Foreign Secretary, said today in a speech inaugurating a Norwegian relief fund.

The British Admiralty announced today that naval aircraft had destroyed fuel tanks at Slofrgaaspynt, blown up two tanks at Strudshaven and fired two more at Knarven, all in the Bergen area of Norway. All the Royal Air Force planes returned safely, the Admiralty said.

Blitzkrieg Forecast.

STOCKHOLM, May 17 (A. P.).—Indications that the Germans may be planning a highly organized attack against the Allied force besieging Narvik and all of northern Norway were seen today in press reports of continued military activity in the Oslo district.

The correspondent of the Stockholm Tidningen reported that trucks, motorcycles and horses were being unloaded at Oslo and that a steady procession of military trains was heading northward.

Reports of fighting in the Narvik area, where Allied forces are besieging an isolated German force, indicated that the Germans are losing ground. A small German patrol was interned by the Swedes after crossing the Swedish border.

Sweden forbade today all sailors on foreign vessels to leave their ships while staying in Stockholm Harbor as a further restriction on foreigners and safeguard against possible fifth column activity.

A police official said that the order marked "a significant increase of control over foreigners."

The captain of each ship will be permitted ashore to arrange for food supplies and to take care of ships' papers, the order stated, but for nothing else.

Swedish anti-aircraft fired yesterday on twelve German planes which flew over Swedish territory while maneuvering apparently to assist German soldiers in their mountain positions.

Get Supplies by Air.

The German radio station DJL, in an English language broadcast picked up by the National Broadcasting Company's listening post at New York today, said that German airplanes had dropped food and supplies to the German forces in the Narvik region.

REPORT ALLIES ABOUT TO TAKE NARVIK ITSELF

Stockholm, May 17 (AP).—Allied and Norwegian troops were reported tonight about ready to enter the town of Narvik.

Reports from the Narvik sector said French "Blue Devils" (Alpine troops) were pounding ceaselessly against confused German resistance in mountains east of Narvik.

In London, the British War Office said Allied forces continued their successful advance in the Bjerkvik area and had occupied the north shore of Rombaks Fjord, and had seen parties of Germans withdrawing toward the Swedish frontier.

In Berlin, authorized sources said English troops attempted to land at night at Narvik but were beaten off by German mountain troops with heavy

War Flashes

Stockholm, Saturday, May 18 (AP)—King Haakon of Norway broadcast an appeal to his subjects today to maintain their "hope and courage" and expressed belief that "with our allies we can . . . regain freedom for the whole Norwegian people."

NAZI INVASIONS CONDEMNED BY 21 REPUBLICS

All Americas Approve Declaration Protesting Reich Conquests

Pro And Anti-German Demonstrations Held In Two Nations

[By the Associated Press]

Montevideo, May 17—All twenty-one American republics tonight approved a joint declaration protesting German invasions of neutral countries.

The declaration, drafted by Uruguay, was approved after Chile and Nicaragua communicated unreserved approvals.

Impromptu Demonstrations

Crowds stoned a German-owned cafe. Several shots were fired in the air as police dispersed the demonstrators.

Other groups tried to demonstrate on the central streets of Montevideo but were broken up by the police.

Objections Withdrawn

Before the replies of Chile and Nicaragua were received, Argentina and Paraguay withdrew minor objections while Alberto Guani, Foreign Minister of Uruguay, telegraphed the Colombian Government asking the withdrawal of similar amendments "in the interests of Pan-American unity."

Chile, meantime, announced her willingness to meet with other American governments "to study all means designed to reinforce and make more effective the security of the nations on thi shemisphere."

An official announcement in Santiago said the protest proposal was accepted "in so far as it conforms to the spirit which animated the consultative meeting at Panama which declared 'Nothing can justify the interests of belligerents prevailing over the rights of neutrals,' and Chile reaffirms her firm purpose to maintain peace and neutrality."

Buenos Aires, May 17—Four noise bombs exploded tonight in the central part of Buenos Aires as groups of German sympathizers gathered on some corners shouting "Down with England" and "Down with France."

Allegiance Reaffirmed By Dutch West Indies

Integrity Of Islands Will Be Maintained By Force If Necessary, Governor Declares

Willemstad, Curacao, Dutch West Indies, May 17 (AP)—The Legislative Council assembled in special session today to hear the Governor proclaim that the Dutch West Indies still are Netherlands territory whose integrity against aggression will be maintained by force of arms, if necessary.

French and British naval detachments were landed on Curacao and Aruba to prevent possible sabotage soon after the German invasion of the Netherlands.

This colony consists of six small islands in the Carribbean Sea off the coast of Venezuela.

The other Dutch colony in the Western Hemisphere is Netherlands Guiana, or Surinam, on the north coast of South America.

SABOTEURS FACE DEATH IN INDIES

Government Fixes Extreme Penalty for Offenders.

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, May 17 (A. P.).—The Government today prescribed the death penalty for sabotage and other offenses against the State under the state of siege proclaimed last Friday upon the German invasion of the Netherlands.

TOKIO, May 17 (A. P.).—The Japanese Foreign Office spokesman said today: "We have reasons to believe that there will be no intervention in the trade between Japan and the (Dutch) East Indies." He declined to amplify the statement.

The French Ambassador to Tokio yesterday assured the Japanese that his Government agrees with them that the status quo of that vast section of the Netherlands' empire should be maintained.

Earlier today the Japanese press declared that any curtailment of vital imports from the Dutch East Indies or any shift of Dutch resources there to control of British capital would be considered a change in the status quo.

Commenting on President Roosevelt's message to Congress requesting vast expansion of land, air and sea power, Yakichiro Suma, Foreign Office spokesman, said:

"We shouldn't be afraid of spectacular remarks by a spectacular people. The United States defense measures are concerned with internal politics. We should be patient and strive to keep out of war."

SAYS NAZI VESSEL DODGED BLOCKADE

Line Reports the Seattle's Captain Fooled Allies.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 17 (A. P.).—The Hamburg-American Line announced here today that the freighter Seattle, reported captured off the Dutch West Indies, was safe in the German-occupied port of Trondheim, Norway, as the result of her captain's determination to take his vessel safely through the Allied blockade because it was his last trip before his retirement from the sea.

The line officials said that Capt. H. Lehmann, who commanded the vessel for many years in the West Coast to Germany trade, deliberately sent out the report of his capture by radio in order to shake Allied ships off his trail. Thereafter, they continued, he sneaked to Iceland from the South American coast, then played hide and seek with enemy warships to Norway.

A report from Aruba, in the Dutch West Indies, on March 6 last said that the Seattle, carrying a cargo of lumber, had been reported intercepted. The report simply quoted the Seattle's master as having said the ship had been captured.

British Armed Liner In N. Y.

New York, May 17 (AP)—The British armed liner Cameronia arrived today from Scotland with sixty-five passengers who said they had been ordered not to discuss the voyage. Thirty British marine officers who will man American ships purchased by the Allies, were aboard.

Canadian Town Bars Public Use of German

LEAMINGTON, Ont., May 17 (AP).—The Town Council here forbade today the use of the German language in public or the teaching of it in private or public schools for the duration of the war.

In Leamington, which has a population of 3,000, the German language is heard frequently on the streets, since the community is in the center of a large settlement of German-born people. There have been several street fights among individuals recently.

SOLDIERS IN OUTBURST

Canadians Smash Windows on Hearing of Nazi Reply.

REGINA, Sask., May 17 (A. P.).—Demonstrating soldiers paraded through the streets of Regina last night, smashed windows and caused other damage at five establishments. There was no personal violence and the military authorities induced the men later to return to barracks. No charges were filed.

Reports indicated that from forty to fifty soldiers were in a group which smashed windows and overturned furniture at the Ukrainian Labor Temple, the German-Canadian Hall, the Austrian Kitchen, a South Railway street billiard parlor and a dance hall.

One of the demonstrators told newspaper men that the soldiers had learned of plans for a pro-Nazi rally, but the only gathering in evidence was a bazaar which half a dozen men and several children had started at the Ukrainian Labor Hall.

U.S. Prepares for War, British Press Says After Message

Newspapers Gratified; Allied Plane Buying Will Not Be Cut

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 17.—The British press today splashed accounts of President Roosevelt's message to Congress under such headlines as: "United States Prepares for War."

The newspapers expressed gratification that the United States' rearmament efforts—according to the President's expressed wish—would not curtail allied buying of warplanes in America.

The London Daily Mail's commentator, G. Ward Price, writing under a four-column headline, "Will America Enter the War?" declared:

"Britain and France are fighting desperately to defend the vital interests—even the existence of every democratic nation in the world, including the United States. In that struggle we may be sure that America will not stand idly by to see us defeated and destroyed."

In a leading editorial, the London Daily Telegraph said:

"Mr. Roosevelt has faced the position with a realistic policy. Recognizing that this is no longer merely a European war, but in its issues closely involves American interests, he sees clearly that only the strength of the British and French Empires now stands between Hitler and world dominion. Therefore he calls his people to arms. They cannot be blind to the truth and the need."

The News Chronicle's comment:

"We need every plane we can get and the American contribution is valuable. But planes which America can send during the next few weeks will be only a small factor in the battle.

"The prospect is that pressure on the allies will become much greater in the near future through the entry of Italy into the war and the only way America could give the allies effective help at this moment would be to warn Italy that such a move would find the United States at the allies' side."

Berlin Regards Message As Domestic U. S. Matter

BERLIN, May 17 (AP).—Berlin official quarters today generally regarded President Roosevelt's preparedness message as a domestic American matter.

Germany, they said, is the last country to object to any other nation building up its defenses.

Foreign office circles were especially interested in the President's renewed assuarance that the United States wants to stay out of war.

They gave no reaction to Mr. Roosevelt's reference to the proximity of foreign forces in the Antilles and Iceland, explaining that Germany was not interested in the Western Hemisphere.

President Roosevelt's mention of "fifth column" activities prompted German officials to remark that evidently he had listened too much to British and French radio commentators and had concerned himself too little with real facts.

PARIS, May 17 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt's defense message to Congress was reported prominently and fully today by press and radio.

"America seems to be awakening from a long dream," said Le Petit Parisien.

Soviet Paper Calls U. S. On Course Toward War

Says 'Imperialism' Will Lead to Fighting on Allies' Side

MOSCOW, May 17 (AP).—The trade-union newspaper "Trud" asserted today that "American imperialism" was adopting a course which would lead to American participation in the war on the side of the Allies.

No Russian papers have yet commented on President Roosevelt's preparedness message to Congress, but "Trud" said that the German publication of alleged documents from the Polish archives "cast a bright light on the position of American diplomacy and the White House."

The paper said that the forthcoming Presidential election and the necessity of a long-range change of American public opinion appeared to be restraining American policy. In the course of a prolonged war, "Trud" said, "Germany faces a new rival—the United States."

NORRIS DOUBTS WAR

But Says All Aid Should Be Given to Allies.

WASHINGTON, May 17 (A. P.).—Senator Norris, independent, of Nebraska, the only remaining Senator who opposed American entry into the world war, predicted today that the United States would not join in the present European conflict even if Germany appeared to be on the verge of crushing the Allies.

Senator Norris said that he had noted a sharp change in public sentiment in the last two weeks.

"Letters are now coming in by the thousands," he told reporters, "that we ought to do everything we can—short of getting into the war—to help England and France.

"I think that is the right kind of sentiment for the public to have. I want to see England and France win, but I will part company with the sentiment if it ever goes to the point where it favors sending our troops abroad again."

Switzerland Shifts Wealth To Prevent Nazi Seizure

Gold and Securities Shipped to U. S. For Safekeeping, Wall Street Reports

By FRED GARDNER

NEW YORK, May 17.—(AP)—Tiny Switzerland, famed as a citadel of wealth as well as of democracy, has shifted much of her movable riches out of the grasp of possible Nazi conquest to the United States, Wall Street sources said today.

The little republic, nestled in the mountains south of Germany, with a population of 4,200,000, is rated in financial circles as probably the wealthiest nation in the world in proportion to size.

Switzerland, by latest official figures, had more than $500,000,000 in monetary gold, held American investments totaling about $1,115,000,000, including $540,000,000 in common and preferred stocks.

At least one-fourth of the gold and large amounts of securities were said to have been shipped to this country for safekeeping. Swiss financial institutions have increased their Wall Street branches and connections to follow the golden trek from the little countries of Europe.

Bankers suggested the bulk of the remaining riches either had been transferred to Paris and London or was ready to leave on the first roar of a gun to join uncounted billions of refugee capital in London, Paris and New York.

A great deal of Swiss mobile wealth represented by gold and securities is attributed to foreign ownership, either for account of refugees and resident foreigners in Switzerland or sent to the mountain haven in recent years for temporary stay.

for International Settlements, part of the post-war dream of European co-operation and economic recuperation, is house in Switzerland.

Ever since outlines of the Nazi expansion drive came into view, some trade experts have considered Switzerland in the pull of the German economic orbit. Germany is the republic's biggest market. German is spoken in the majority of the Swiss cantons.

But a loyal Swiss who specializes in economic study of his country insisted the foundation of the riches is the habit of thrift long instilled in the sturdy farmers and factory workers who turn out the cheese, watches, dye stuffs and precision machinery prized in the export markets.

These products largely accounted for the $30,617,000 in goods Switzerland sold to the United States last year. United States exports to Switzerland, mostly cotton, grains, tobacco, motor and oil products, totaled $18,609,000.

Swiss trade was a modest item in Uncle Sam's commerce. The flow of gold and securities from the ancient mountain guardhouse of democracy, however, was a major contribution to the epic trek of wealth to Wall Street. The Bank

G. O. P. Chiefs Back F. D. R.'s Defense Plan

N. Y. News

Washington, D. C., May 17.—Joining in an extraordinary coalition, ex-President Hoover and the G. O. P.'s 1936 standard bearers, Alf Landon and Col. Frank Knox, today put their shoulders behind President Roosevelt's preparedness program.

This total comprised the Army appropriation of $512,877,723 for the current fiscal year, plus the $1,182,000,000 the President demanded yesterday.

The measure, hastily approved in the face of fresh Nazi triumphs against the Allies forces, called for an additional immediate cash outlay of $50,000,000 to be used for a plan secretly urged before the subcommittee by Major Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff. He wanted the money to bring the Army quickly to full peace-time strength of 280,000.

Dewey Endorses Program.

New York County District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, Republican Presidential aspirant, endorsed expansion of our defenses but he added that the "defense requirements of this country should be completely removed from politics." Knox went further. He announced actual participation in a plan to train 10,000 civilian air pilots as an immediate defense measure.

Today's other important developments were:

1—Aviation manufacturers were summoned to meet here Monday with army and navy officials to lay plans to expand plane production capacity to the 50,000 units annually demanded by F. D. R.

2—The Army set an immediate goal of 20,000 fighting aircraft within two years as a start toward the armada of 50,000 planes which Roosevelt declared was his eventual aim.

3—One hundred million dollars of naval appropriation funds will be earmarked for naval warplanes, Senator Byrnes announced.

4—Roosevelt promised that the RFC would extend direct financial assistance if necessary to step up the nation's industrial expansion and Loan Administrator Jesse Jones instantly declared: "We can do it. There'll be no demand for plant expansion we can't meet."

5—The President revealed that he was exerting pressure on aviation manufacturers to put their expanded facilities in the form of a defense chain of plane factories, safely located inland between the Alleghenies and the Rockies. In December, 1938, The News revealed that the army and navy strategists were urging a similar project on F. D. R.

6—Recommissioning of 35 more old World War destroyers was announced by the President.

7—Chairman Pat Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee indicated after a White House conference that the problem of financing the new billion dollar expenditures would be deferred until the next session of Congress with the present Congress devoting all its energy to perfecting the program.

8—A start toward demanding a longer work week from labor in the crisis was made when Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee said his group would report tomorrow a bill relaxing provisions of the Wage-Hour and Walsh-Healey laws to speed naval building.

That the labor question may prove troublesome in the hurried vast expansion of American industry was indicated when John L. Lewis, CIO president, asserted in New York that labor would demand the right to organize in plants developed to assemble the weapons of national defense.

Lewis Urges Labor's Side.

Labor was not represented in the Roosevelt preparedness conferences hurriedly called this week and Lewis resents it. He has always contended that in defense programs particularly labor had a right to participate because "labor will do the work and labor will do the dying if war comes."

The speed with which Congress tackled the War Department appropriations means that by the latter part of next week debate will have been held on these measures and, in fact, some of the funds probably will have been appropriated.

Hoover's co-operation was praised by the White House. At the same time Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early announced that Landon had accepted an invitation to lunch at the White House Wednesday, when the President is expected to discuss his plans with the titular leader of the Republican Party.

Meanwhile Landon, in a nation-wide radio broadcast last night from Warrensburg, Mo., declared that Roosevelt "in his splendid address to Congress" spoke as "the leader of all the people." Landon pledged support to the President's defense plans, but criticized the Administration as "tragically late" in its preparedness program.

"We are going to keep out of this war," Landon said, "but we can no longer rest on the assumption of a stalemate with an exhausted Germany."

Knox's Air Training Plan.

Col. Knox in Chicago disclosed plans for organization of nine camps for training an estimated 10,000 additional civilians as airplane pilots. The camps, he said, would be opened about July 1 and would be operated under army supervision as an extension of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

At his regular press conference the President discussed the situation at length and dwelt upon the need for speedy action.

Any immediate threat to this country, he warned gravely, would necessitate an infinitely larger program. These were the angles which were now causing him concern, he said:

1. Most American airplane factories are on our seaboards. F. D. R. seriously doubted that it would be wise to expand these plants and will make every effort to have new ones built within the shelter of our mountain ranges.

2. Supplies of machine tolls are insufficient. Foreign orders for these tools may be cancelled so we may have them for our own defense. The Government possesses the power to do this.

Lists Big Needs Ahead.

3. Acute need exists for skilled mechanics. A training program will have to be developed.

4. Production of high quality aviation gasoline presents a problem. F. D. R. declared it might be wise to build up big reserve stocks and expand existing facilities.

And finally, Roosevelt admitted he himself will need some new helpers. He indicated that he might set up a special industrial mobilization group to take some details off his hands.

Knox Tells Plan For Nine Camps To Train Pilots

'Aviation Plattsburg,' Aided by Civilian Organization, Has Roosevelt's Bocking

CHICAGO, May 17 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox said today that he had been authorized by President Roosevelt to announce a project by a group of patriotic Americans for the establishment of camps for the "advanced training of pilots in military flying."

The publisher of "The Chicago Daily News," returning from Washington, where he conferred with the President yesterday, said the plan had been approved by Mr. Roosevelt, the Army Chief of Staff, Army Air Corps authorities and the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Tentative plans, Col. Knox said, provided for the opening of the camps by July 1 in the nine Army corps areas with the hope of enrolling a maximum of 10,000 young men between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five.

A civilian organization would sponsor the voluntary enlistments and supply the students, and the Army would take over from that point, furnishing the camp sites, housing, instructors and, he hoped, training planes.

Col. Knox said the project was titled tentatively "Aviation Plattsburg," after the officers' training camp movement of the World War headed by the late Gen. Wood.

"Aviation Plattsburg" would accept experienced or amatuer flyers within the age group and with certain educational requirements and train them in advanced military flying with the hope that graduates of the course ultimately would be admitted to the Reserve Corps.

The movement would supplant nothing now being accomplished by the Army, but would supplement it.

Col. Knox said the aviation "bottleneck" was "pilots rather than planes."

"It takes longer to train pilots than to build ships," he said, "and for every plane the Army needs two flyers. This is an opportunity to give a lot of young men who are air-minded the chance to perfect themselves in flying."

Obtaining the voluntary enlistments would be the limit of the civilian participation in the project, he said. The camps themselves would be operated under military discipline, although the enrollees would not be enlisted in the Army.

The civilian personnel of the project has not been completed. Among those behind the movement in New York, however, Col. Knox said, were Artemus L. Gates and Winthrop W. Aldrich, bankers; Arthur Hays Sulzberger, publisher of "The New York Times"; Col. William J. Donovan, the attorney who commanded the old "Fighting 69th" in the World War, and Lewis W. Douglas, former Director of the Federal Bureau of the Budget, now an insurance executive.

AUTO INDUSTRY SET FOR DEFENSE PLAN

Plants Prepared To Produce War Materials Within Short Time

Tanks, Plane Motors And Sub Chasers May Be Built At Factories

[By the Associated Press]

Detroit, May 17—Tiny tool and die or submarine chasers, gun sights or aviation engines—whatever the nation's giant preparedness program may call for—the factories of the automotive industry, most of them located in Michigan, are ready for any eventuality.

From the tiny tool and die shop to the huge automobile assembly plants, a degree of "preparedness" has been the rule for many months, accelerated by more than $10,000,000 worth of "educational orders" from the United States War Department, and as much more in contracts from foreign nations embroiled in war.

Beyond that the production facilities of every plant of consequence have been thoroughly surveyed and definite plans made for each of them. Of the biggest "peacetime" preparedness budget proposed by President Roosevelt, approximately $50,000,000 in orders are expected to come immediately to Michigan automotive factories.

Take It In Stride

This volume of business, say authoritative sources, can be "taken in stride" by the automobile industry, whose production capacity never has been fully taxed. Currently it is assembling about 100,000 motor vehicles a week. It could double that capacity with additional shifts and turn the entire capacity over to war munitions production on relatively short notice.

In 1929 the motor industry assembled 5,600,000 cars and trucks, and it was said at the time that had there been occasion for it, this volume could have been stepped up to around 9,000,000 units. The car-production capacity is significant because most of it can be converted to the making of war machinery without material alteration.

Easy To Make Tanks

There is, for example, the tractor-production machinery and assembly lines of the Ford Motor Company. Conversion of the tractors into light tanks does not require much imagination. There are also the ways upon which Ford built Eagle boats during the World War—still standing and available for the "mass production" again of submarine chasers.

Many of the War Department's "educational orders" have been placed with the various divisions of General Motors Corporation. It has enormous facilities for the production of Diesel engines of all sizes, adaptable for tank and truck power plants.

In its group also is Fisher Body, understood to be constructing a number of fast torpedo boats for coastal defense; Cadillac Motors, which is producing parts for aviation engines, and Chevrolet, with large contracts for army trucks.

Knudsen Heads Firm

At the head of General Motors is Danish-born William S. Knudsen, a production genius with few if any equals in the automobile industry.

The plants of the Chrysler Corporation, including the huge Dodge truck unit, which has been working on an order for more than 10,000 trucks for the army, also have large "educational orders." These include contracts for fuses, shell forgings and machinings and cartridge cases.

The Briggs Manufacturing Company has a navy contract for an experimental aviation motor.

Elsewhere in the industry similar orders have been placed—orders for work that would smooth the way for a quick conversion to the greatest munitions production program in American history.

Federal Officials Predict Industrial Boom By Midsummer Under New Defense Plan

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 17—Administration economists predicted today that President Roosevelt's billion-dollar defense program would have a substantial stimulating effect on American industry by midsummer. Employment for billions of dollars of idle money in banks also was predicted.

One economist, who is a frequent consultant of the President, said his colleagues believed business already was recovering from the slump which set in after Christmas and were optimistic about the year's outlook even before the new defense expenditures were requested.

He added that, while some phases of the President's program might take many months to get under way, Mr. Roosevelt had suggested several activities which could be translated into immediate work. On shipyards, airplane factories, motor factories, parachute plants and munitions plants, this economist said the President contemplates doubling or tripling the shifts already at work.

Later on, according to Washington officials, there will be much work for other kinds of laborers, such as construction workers needed to build new factories or annexes to existing ones. Labor officials and government sources gave assurances that the nation's supply of skilled labor was sufficient to handle the program.

Steel and other important materials to go into the new planes, shells and tanks can be ordered almost immediately, so that they will be ready by the time new factories are erected to fabricate them.

Some of the proposed steps will take small amounts of labor out of the labor market, such as the enlistment of more men for the army and the sending of thousands of others to aviation schools.

Besides industries plainly allied with armaments, officials cited many others which might benefit. For instance, the President's recommendations call for the purchase of huge quantities of blankets and similar items normally produced for civilian purposes.

To date, Federal economists asserted, the only real stimulation to business from the war has come from foreign customers, particularly the Allies and Latin America. These heavy purchases are expected to continue and to be supplemented by the United States Government's orders.

American factory production, as measured by the Federal Reserve Board's index of industry, was sagging at 92 a year ago. Slight improvement was made during the Summer, but when the war broke out, speculative production and orders boosted factory output to a record high index figure of 128 in December.

When factory owners found that they were making more goods than they were selling, the index slumped off to 119 in January, 109 in February, 104 in March and 102 in April. May is expected to be slightly higher.

Declares Finland Will Pay Its Debts

Hjalmar Procope Says His Country's Currency Remains Unshaken

New York, May 17 (AP)—With property losses mounting into "hundreds of millions of dollars," Finland is "up against a woeful task in the economic field during the period of rehabilitation," Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister to the United States, declared today.

Speaking to members of the Bond Club, of New York, Procope asserted that, nevertheless, his country's currency had remained unshaken and no private transfer of funds has been made to foreign nations.

Finland, he said, had paid its obligations in the past and would "manage to pay its debts" when peace is restored in Europe.

WELLES COMPARES TODAY AND 1914-18

Sees Western World Much Better Prepared Now.

WASHINGTON, May 17 (A. P.).—Sumner Welles, Uuder-Secretary of State, said today the Western Hemisphere was "in a far better position" to face the present European war than it was the world war of 1914-1918.

In an address closing the eighth American Scientific Congress held here, Mr. Welles speculated, however, on the possibility of "a return to the Dark Ages" in "those parts of the world where free inquiry is no longer possible."

As for the nations of the Western Hemisphere, he said: "We have a community of interests. We have attained a solidarity of intent to promote and to protect these interests. We are, therefore, in a far better position to face the difficult days that confront us than were any of us twenty-five years ago. Today not only are we able to safeguard our rights and to obtain respect for our position as neutral nations desiring to live at peace with each other and with the world, but the entire world knows of our capacity and of our intention to defend our new world and our institutions."

Reported Family Lands Of Roosevelt Fall To Nazis As Tholen Yields

MAY 18 1940

Washington, May 17 (AP)—Surrender to German invaders of the island of Tholen, Holland, has brought within the hands of Hitler the supposed ancestrial lands of President Roosevelt.

Dispatches today told of the fall of the island in the province of Zeeland, in southwest Holland. Zeeland was the only portion of Holland where soldiers were not ordered by the Dutch high command to cease firing this week.

From the island of Tholen, so some historians say, Klaes Martenszen van Roosevelt, lineal ancestor of two American Presidents, came to New Amsterdam (later New York) in 1649. His other Presidential descendent was Theodore Roosevelt, who visited the island when he made a tour of Europe after retiring from office.

At the White House today it was said that while monuments and relics indicate that the village of Oudvossemeer, on the island of Tholen, may have been the cradle of the President's family, such a fact has never been definitely established.

Behind The Scenes MAY 17/40.

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

Out of a welter of conflicting claims for the belligerent capitals the only vital point which emerges with clarity is that the Allies are hard-pressed.

German sources this morning asserted that the Allies were retreating all along the line from Antwerp to Sedan. The Anglo-French said they were holding the enemy, although Paris admitted that the onrushing Teutons had driven thirty miles into French territory to a region north of Rethel, forming a "pocket" which was surrounded by French mechanized columns and planes.

This salient bulges out from Sedan, swings to the north and brings the Germans to a point about 100 miles north east of Paris.

It is in this zone that the fiercest and most critical fighting appeared to be taking place this morning, with the Nazis exerting every ounce of strength to break through, roll the Allied front back and reach the French capital.

Paris has been placed under military control, but one hastens to point out that this is precautionary and not an act of despair

It means that the military authorities will be able to handle situations in place of the civil authorities where the occasion arises.

The French are taking no chances on fifth column activities in a critical time like this.

The advance in the Sedan-Rethel area has been achieved through mechanized thrusts, with light tanks and armored cars, supported by airplanes. The German strategy is to cut through to the allied front with these steel-headed drives and then menace the defenders from the rear. This might force the allies to reform their lines.

On the northern end of the battle-front, along the line protecting Antwerp and Brussels, hard fighting has continued. The British claim to have held the German onslaught.

The Nazi drive here is for the purpose of smashing through to the channel ports, to bring the Germans up against England.

Berlin this morning announced that Brussels no longer would be regarded as an open city, claiming that there are heavy movements of troops and supplies through the capital. This means that the capital likely will be bombed.

Now is the time when the German air superiority should begin to tell if it is to achieve what Hitler expects of it. He is banking on this arm of his fighting services more than any other to win the blitzkrieg for h'm.

Neither Hitler nor anybody else knows the full power concealed in that vast air armada, for it never yet has been put to the full test. That test is being made now, and upon it may depend the future of Europe.

Up to this point in the fighting the Allied air branch would seem to have held its own well. Details are lacking, but we do know that there have been some bitter battles in the sky.

However, in order to combat forces so much greater numerically, the Allied airmen must have been placed under a strain which by now has become very severe. They need rest, and one wonders how they are going to get it if the Germans are able to throw fresh airmen into the battle while the Allied reserves may be low.

Mind you, my suggestion is speculation. The Allies may have more in reserve than we suspect. In any event, it is clear that if the fuehrer has the preponderance of power which he has been talking about, we should see the effects of it now.

The German troops cannot keep up the pace they have been going, but must slow down. That's where their air force should fit in.

When French Premier Reynaud remarked yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies that Germany is throwing her all into one desperate push to the west he summed up very accurately Herr Hitler's position.

The Nazi Fuehrer is risking everything in this one gamble. Either he wins the war in this blitzkreig, or he is finished.

Hitler has created the greatest and most perfect fighting machine ever put together. Into this he has poured everything which the Reich possesses, until he stands stripped of all except his machine.

He has no money. The financial and economic situation of his country is worse than bad. He has few resources. His reserve supplies, especially oil and gasoline, are being burned up in this vast military operation, and there are no sources from which he can anywhere replenish his stores.

Herr Hitler must win now, or lose everything. He has no alternative.

Reynaud called the turn on the situation more than a year ago when I was chatting with him in Paris. He then was finance minister, and a mighty smart one, too. He told me that he had warned the Germans they were headed straight for economic chaos and would land there unless they stopped their stupendous rearmament program and returned to normal economic life.

I have no doubt it was with this in mind that Reynaud told the deputies yesterday, in connection with his remark about Germany risking everything, that France would win. That was the economist speaking fully as much as the premier who has faith in his army.

You must have noted another dramatic utterance during his speech yesterday.

"Life counts for nothing. One thing only counts and that is to maintain France."

Few would dispute that fervent thought. Yet it does seem very terrible that nations should be forced to pay the price of human sacrifice in order to maintain their freedom.

I saw some awful slaughter in great offensives during the World War, but I fear we are going to get even more shocking casualty lists out of the present highly mechanized warfare.

Did you see the Dutch official statement that 100,000 of their troops were killed out of a total of 400,000 effectives?

That is an amazingly high death rate for a five-day period. However, we can only hope that exceptional circumstances accounted for this big list and that the subsequent fighting hasn't taken so heavy a toll.

THE PRESS MADE NO EFFORT TO MINIMIZE THE SITUATION ON THE CONTINENT. ALL GAVE PROMINENCE TO THE REPORTS OF THE GERMAN DRIVE.

IN AN EDITORIAL CAPTIONED "BACK TO THE WALL," THE EXPRESS REPRINTED EARL HAIG'S IMMORTAL ORDER OF APRIL 12, 1918, WHEN THE GERMANS THREW 106 DIVISIONS AGAINST THE ALLIES ON A 50-MILE FRONT IN AN EFFORT TO SEPARATE THE BRITISH AND FRENCH.

"EVERY POSITION MUST BE HELD TO THE LAST MAN," HAIG'S ORDER SAID. "THERE MUST BE NO RETIREMENT. WITH OUR BACKS TO THE WALL, AND BELIEVING IN THE JUSTICE OF OUR CAUSE, EACH ONE OF US MUST FIGHT TO THE END."

"IN 1940 AS IN 1918 THE SAME ALLIES STAND READY TO FIGHT THROUGH TERROR TO TRIUMPH," THE EXPRESS COMMENTED.

THE NEWS CHRONICLE SAID: "OUR MESSAGE TO THE BRITISH PEOPLE AT THIS TIME: BE OF GOOD HEART. THESE ARE DARK DAYS BUT ALSO GREAT DAYS. THE FUTURE OF MANKIND IS BEING MOULDED."

"WE MUST NOT BLIND OURSELVES TO THE POSSIBILITY OF A REVERSE," SAID THE DAILY MAIL. "THERE'S EVIDENCE THE GERMANS HAVE WORKED OUT NEW AND BRILLIANT TACTICS. SUCH TACTICS CAN NOT BE COUNTERED IN AN HOUR.

"THAT'S THE WORST. OUR PEOPLE NEVER FEARED TO FACE THE WORST AND IT'S GOOD TO REMEMBER WE HAVE ALWAYS OVERCOME IT."

LONDON,MAY 17-(AP)-TWO REFUGEES FROM HOLLAND--ONE A YOUNG DUTCH ACTRESS AND THE OTHER A 46-YEAR-OLD BRITON WHO LOST A LEG IN THE LAST WAR--ARRIVED HERE TODAY AFTER CROSSING THE TREACHEROUS NORTH SEA IN AN OPEN, 16-FOOT BOAT POWERED BY AN OUTBOARD MOTOR.

THE PAIR--ILONA RICARDO AND ERNEST JUDD--SAID THEY WERE MACHINE-GUNNED BY A GERMAN WARPLANE DURING THE 125-MILE CROSSING, BUT ESCAPED BY "PLAYING DEAD."

THEY WERE PICKED UP BY A BRITISH COLLIER AS THEY NEARED THE ENGLISH COAST.

JUDD WAS VISITING IN YMUIDEN WHEN THE GERMANS INVADED HOLLAND. FEARING HE WOULD BE SENT TO A CONCENTRATION CAMP IF CAPTURED BY THE GERMANS, HE COMMANDEERED A TINY BOAT--INTENDED FOR USE ON THE DUTCH CANALS--AND PUT OUT TO SEA WITH EIGHT GALLONS OF GAS AND A POCKET COMPASS. MISS RICARDO DECIDED AT THE LAST MINUTE TO GO WITH HIM.

"NO SOONER HAD WE GOT INTO THE OPEN SEA," JUDD SAID, "THAN A GERMAN PLANE BEGAN TO MACHINE-GUN US. I STOPPED THE ENGINE AND LAY DOWN IN THE BOTTOM OF THE BOAT, SHAMMING DEATH.

"THE GERMAN MUST HAVE THOUGHT HE'D FINISHED US OFF, FOR HE CIRCLED THE BOAT ONCE AND FLEW AWAY. ONE BULLET JUST GRAZED A FINGER ON MY RIGHT HAND. I RE-STARTED THE MOTOR AND SET A COURSE WHICH I

WASHINGTON, MAY 17-(AP)-THE HARD-PRESSED ALLIES ARE PREPARING TO DOUBLE THEIR ORDERS FOR AMERICAN WAR PLANES, AN ANGLO-FRENCH COMMISSION INDICATED TODAY IN ANNOUNCING THAT ITS PURCHASES OF GOODS IN THIS COUNTRY ALREADY HAD PASSED $1,000,000,000.

MAY 18 1940

FOUR THOUSAND PLANES, PLUS ACCESSORIES, ALREADY HAVE BEEN ORDERED AT A COST OF ABOUT $650,000,000, THE COMMISSION SAID, ADDING THAT ALMOST AS MUCH MONEY HAD BEEN EARMARKED FOR ADDITIONAL PURCHASES.

"WITHIN A FEW WEEKS," IT WAS PREDICTED BY ARTHUR H.BALLANTYNE, THE SECRETARY, "CONTRACTS FOR MORE THAN $500,000,000 OF THIS AMOUNT PROBABLY WILL BE PLACED FOR PLANES OF THE MOST ADVANCED AMERICAN ARMY TYPES AND FOR ENGINES."

CROWDED AMERICAN PLANTS ARE UNABLE TO DELIVER THE WARPLANES AS FAST AS DESIRED, THE ALLIED SPOKESMEN STRESSED. TO SPEED THEIR ARRIVAL AT THE WAR FRONT, SOME OF THE BIG BOMBERS COULD BE FLOWN ACROSS THE ATLANTIC, BALLANTYNE TOLD REPORTERS, BUT ASKED IN ALMOST THE SAME BREATH: "WHERE ARE WE GOING TO GET THE SHIPS TO FLY OVER?"

MAY 18 1940

PLANES OF ALL TYPES HAVE BEEN DELIVERED RECENTLY AT THE RATE OF NEARLY 200 A MONTH, ACCORDING TO AUTHORITATIVE ESTIMATES.

A STATEMENT RELEASED BOTH IN WASHINGTON AND NEW YORK SAID THE $1,000,000,000 PURCHASES INCLUDED ORDERS MADE THROUGH THE JOINT PURCHASING AGENCY, OTHERS PLACED BEFORE THE COMMISSION WAS FORMED, AND SOME THAT WERE MADE DIRECT BY THE BRITISH AND FRENCH GOVERNMENTS. ASIDE FROM THE $650,000,000 SPENT FOR AIRCRAFT AND AVIATION MATERIALS, IT WAS ESTIMATED THAT MACHINE TOOLS AND MUNITIONS ACCOUNTED FOR MORE THAN $200,000,000. OTHER PURCHASES LISTED INCLUDED ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT, CLOTHING, METALS, BOATS, HORSES AND MULES.

CONFIRMING EARLIER REPORTS BY ARMY-NAVY OFFICIALS TO CONGRESS, THE COMMISSION SAID AMERICAN AIRCRAFT WHICH ALREADY HAD REACHED THE WAR FRONT HAD PROVED "HIGHLY SATISFACTORY" IN ACTUAL COMBAT, WHEN "AMENDED TO MEET EUROPEAN REQUIREMENTS"---PRESUMABLY BY THE ADDITION OF ARMOR, HEAVIER GUNS AND SELF-SEALING FUEL TANKS.

"IT IS CONFIDENTLY ANTICIPATED THAT THE LATEST MODELS WILL PROVE INCREASINGLY SUPERIOR," THE COMMISSION ADDED.

NEW YORK, MAY 17-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES LINES, WHICH WITH A BELGIAN CONCERN IS OPERATING CHARTERED BELLIGERENT SHIPS IN THE HAZARDOUS TRADE OF TRANSPORTING WAR IMPLEMENTS, DECLARED TODAY THAT IT WOULD CONTINUE THE ARRANGEMENT DESPITE THE LOSS OF THE OLD LINER PRESIDENT HARDING TO GERMAN PLANES. MAY 18 1940

THE HARDING, RENAMED THE VILLE DE BRUGES, WAS BEACHED AFTER AN ATTACK ON TUESDAY DURING WHICH FOUR MEMBERS OF HER CREW--TWO CANADIANS AND TWO BELGIANS--WERE KILLED BY AN AERIAL TORPEDO.

THE U.S.LINES SOLD THE HARDING AND SEVEN OTHER SHIPS, TOTALING 66,124 TONS, LAST FEBRUARY TO THE SOCIETE MARITIME ANVERSOISE, A BELGIAN FIRM, AFTER AMERICAN VESSELS HAD BEEN FORBIDDEN UNDER THE U.S.NEUTRALITY ACT FROM OPERATING IN THE EUROPEAN WAR ZONE. THE SELLING PRICE WAS $4,100,000.

THEN THE LINES, FOR THE SAME TOTAL PRICE--$4,100,000--BOUGHT A 40 PER CENT INTEREST IN THE BELGIAN SYNDICATE, WITH THE UNDERSTANDING THAT THE MONEY WAS PAYABLE AT $410,000 A YEAR FOR TEN YEARS, AND THEN CHARTERED THE 8 SHIPS AND SET UP AS NEW YORK AGENTS.
ALL HAVE BEEN SERVING BELLIGERENT PORTS EXCLUSIVELY, CARRYING PLANES, MUNITIONS, TRUCKS, MACHINERY, COPPER AND THE LIKE.

THE EFFECT WAS THAT THE AMERICAN COMPANY WAS THUS ENABLED TO MAINTAIN ITS SHORE PERSONNEL AND TO CONTINUE OPERATIONS IN THE ZONE FROM WHICH ALL AMERICAN VESSELS HAD BEEN BARRED. THE SHIPS' PERSONNEL, HOWEVER, IS ALL FOREIGN, AMERICAN SEAMEN BEING BARRED FROM THE BELLIGERENT ZONES. MAY 18 1940

THE ARRANGEMENT WAS PROTESTED BY RIVAL U.S.SHIPPERS, WHO ASSERTED IT WAS AN EVASION OF THE SPIRIT OF THE NEUTRALITY ACT, AND UNOFFICIALLY BY SECTIONS OF THE GERMAN PRESS, WHICH DECLARED IT WAS INTENDED TO "CIRCUMVENT THE (AMERICAN) CASH-AND-CARRY NEUTRALITY LAW IN FAVOR OF GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE BY EXPLOITING THE NEUTRALITY OF AN ACCOMMODATING THIRD PARTY."

OTHER GERMAN PAPERS ALLEGED BY INNUENDO THAT ENGLISH MONEY BOUGHT THE REMAINING 60 PER CENT OF THE SOCIETE MARITIME ANVERSOISE.

THE HARDING, 13,869 TONS, WAS THE FIFTH LARGEST MERCHANT MARINE CASUALTY OF THE WAR. THE U.S.LINES DECLINED TONIGHT TO PLACE A SPECIFIC VALUE UPON HER, BUT A CONSIDERATION OF THE FACT THAT SHE

AND THE SEVEN OTHER SHIPS WERE SOLD TO THE BELGIAN SYNDICATE ON A TONNAGE BASIS INDICATED HER PRICE AT THAT TIME HAD BEEN PUT AT $848,484. HER ORIGINAL COST WAS $4,432,000, AT THE TIME OF HER CONSTRUCTION IN 1921. THERE WAS NO INFORMATION AS TO THE CARGO LOSS.

FRENCH CHECK DRIVE, GERMANS SWING TO WEST TOWARD THE CHANNEL PORTS; CAPTURE ANTWERP; BRITISH BOMB BIG HAMBURG BREMEN OIL STORES

BERLIN, May 18 (A. P.).—Germany's mighty forces raced into strategic Antwerp today, while to the south their left wing thundered to within sixty miles of Paris, authorized sources said, and to the north their right wing mopped up in southern Holland, where resistance on islands of Zeeland province crumbled.

MAY 19 1940

Heavy attacks by Nazi warplanes against enemy troops reeling back under the impact of the onrushing warriors were reported by the High Command to have turned the Allied withdrawal into a retreat which "at a number of places resembled a rout."

Three high points of the pounding drive in the west toward the Belgian and French channel ports facing England and toward Paris stood out in German reports:

1. Advance guards in northern France cut through to within sixty miles of Paris, while the main army is within 100 miles of the French capital.

Swastika Flying Over City Hall.

2. Antwerp was entered today and the Swastika flag raised over the City Hall after yesterday's sweep in Belgium which netted Brussels, twenty-eight miles south of Antwerp, Mechelen (Malines) and Louvain.

3. The last vestiges of Dutch resistance on Walcheren Island, part of Zeeland province, was eliminated as the Dutch Army commander offered his capitulation, while on the islands of Schouwen and South Beveland more than 2,000 Dutch and French were captured.

Mad Dash for French Capital.

After smashing a sixty-two-mile-wide gap in northern France in the Maubeuge-Montmedy region, the German Army dashed on madly in a rush for the French capital.

The German High Command etched in stark language the speed and the weight of the drive south of Maubeuge, which is about 120 miles air line northeast of Paris.

It said:

"South of Maubeuge, German armored forces penetrated French frontier fortifications, dispersed two enemy divisions and pursued the retreating enemy beyond the upper Sambre (river) in a southward direction as far as the upper Oise (river).

"Infantry divisions are now closely following up in tremendous marches. Many prisoners among the defeated French troops were made and large supplies captured."

South of Sedan, in the region where the main Maginot Line has its western anchorage, the High Command said, "we gained ground in a southerly direction."

Dutch Batteries Taken Over.

The entry into Antwerp, important and heavily fortified port at the northern end of the Allied lines, was reported by the German official news agency at almost the same time as the High Command communique, reviewing yesterday's developments, had announced:

"We succeeded in breaking into the outer ring of the Antwerp fortresses at two places."

Cleaning up resistance in the Province of Zeeland in the Netherlands, northwest of Antwerp, and the seizure of Antwerp will enable the Germans to aim for channel bases facing England and to seek to turn the Allied flank downward toward Paris.

The High Command reported that newly seized Dutch coastal batteries already had been manned and that parts o fthe Dutch Navy had been taken over.

The Germans were encouraged by the Allied Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin's order of the day calling on the French to "conquer or die" in the desperate battle to halt the Germans. The Germans described this as "exceedingly gloomy."

Antwerp Falls — "Pacification" Of Dutch Proceeding Speedily

MAY 19 1940

Cleanup In Zeeland Will Release 800,000 Men For Coastal Drive

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, May 18—The iron legions of Adolf Hitler hoisted the German battle flag today on the city hall of Antwerp, fortified North Sea anchor of the whole Allied line, and swept west and south toward the heart of France and the English Channel ports needed for the frontal assault on the British Isles.

Antwerp fell to the German motor columns in nine days, fifty-seven days ahead of World War schedule. The troops of Imperial Germany entered the city on October 9, after shelling it for eleven days. They invaded Belgium on August 4, 1914.

South Thrust Aimed At Paris

The German plunge through Belgium and through the Netherlands, to the north, is so swiftly fluid that it is difficult to pick out its immediate objectives.

But the thrust through the French fortifications of the Meuse and over Maubeuge and the Sambre, further northwest, seems aimed at Paris.

Authoritative sources said German troops are within sixty miles of the French capital, but they declined to state just where.

"Pacification" Of The Dutch

What the authorities call complete "pacification" of the Netherlands is proceeding speedily, with Dutch resistance ended on Walcheren island and more than 2,000 Dutch and French troops reported captured on the islands of Schouwen and South Beveland, all in Zeeland above Antwerp.

When Zeeland's cleanup is complete this will release 800,000 men for a drive on the Belgian and French Channel ports.

With these ports occupied, it is believed in some circles that the British will be given a chance to capitulate or deal with swarms of German bombing planes.

Straight Toward Paris

The spectacle of the German armies of the left lancing straight toward Paris seems to justify the conjecture among military observers here that Hitler has changed the classic Graf von Schleiffen plan for a flanking move on Paris.

Instead it looks like the German "bullet troops" are taking a short cut to the heart of France without waiting for envelopment of retiring Allied troops by the right wing of the army.

The right flank, indeed, seems to be employed in seeking to cut off British forces from seaports and make their return to England impossible.

Entry Of Antwerp Described

The German entry into Antwerp, which is one of the world's ten busiest seaports in normal times, was effected, DNB said, after the outer ring of the city's heavy forts had been broken in two places.

On the left wing, in France, the high command asserted German armored forces penetrated French frontier fortifications, dispersed two Allied divisions beyond the upper Sambre river and pursued "the retreating enemy" southward to the upper Oise, more than twenty miles south.

Claim Many French Prisoners

This is on the western end of the deep and wide pocket which the Germans have gouged into northern France.

Infantry divisions now are following up these troops in "tremendous marches," and many French prisoners and large supplies have been taken, the Germans said.

South of Sedan, too, the Germans claimed southward gains to widen the east end of their French pocket where the Meuse forts approach the western anchorage of the main Maginot Line.

Turning To Italy's Position

From the glowing reports of operations in the west, German writers are turning to Italy's position in the Mediterranean.

One of the most influential of them, Karl Megerle, of the Boersen Zeitung, wrote:

"The Government and people of Italy are at an end of the patience with which they have endured eight months of measures and effects of the British-French blockade war. To establish freedom of the seas for all is the task, accomplishment of which would bring good to all nations."

Fate Of Switzerland To Fore

Possibility of Italy's entrance into the war again pushes the fate of Switzerland to the fore, because a campaign in southern Europe might, for strategic reasons alone, envelop this historic neutral in Europe's bonfire.

There have been occasional hints in the German press that Switzerland is not as neutral as she might be.

The official news agency today told the story of the German entry into Brussels, relating that the German troops entered the Belgian capital yesterday without a fight, enemy (British) troops withdrawing beyond the city.

Stand In Lille Area Expected

Heavy enemy losses, and relatively small German ones, were claimed in the fighting for Louvain and Malines, now in German hands.

Now that Antwerp, twenty-eight miles from Brussels, is in German hands, authorized Nazi sources expect the Allies to make a stand from below that city to Lille in northwestern France to shield such ports as Belgian Ostend, where the Belgian Government has moved; and French Dunkerque, Calais and Boulogne.

Bombing Threats At England

The possibilities of bombing attacks on England from such ports as these were underlined today by a DNB report that twenty-nine civilians had been killed and fifty-one injured in an Allied air raid on Hamburg and eleven killed and sixty-three injured by British raiders on Bremen last night.

MAY 19 1940

This report was coupled with high command assertions that raids on "non-military objectives" in Hamburg and Bremen have especial significance "in view of subsequent consequences."

DNB reported that of seventy-one Allied air attacks on Germany since May 10, fifty-one were on non-military objects.

The authoritative Dienst Aus Deutschland said the raids on Hamburg and Bremen must be regarded "as a very serious state of affairs," and "one would not go wrong in the assumption that Germany will note the character of these attacks very carefully and make this the basis for its own decisions and actions."

New Air Successes Claimed

Tremendous success was claimed anew for Germany's own air force, and it was reported to be almost completely dominating the air over the battlegrounds of Belgium and France, as well as continuing to harass British and French ships along the Belgian coast and sinking one enemy destroyer.

On Friday, the high command said, 108 Allied planes were shot down, while Germany lost but 26.

German "naval units" (presumably submarines) struck afar to bottle up Britain and her empire. It was announced they had mined South African ports which serve as bases for the enemy fleet.

Short Cut To Paris Hitler's Strategy?

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 18—The headlong rush of the German forces for Paris made military observers speculate today whether, after all, Führer Hitler was attempting to carry out the classic plan of Graf von Schlieffen—a wide flanking move on Paris—to the letter.

MAY 19 1940

As mobile as German general staff plans have been throughout, the conjecture seems justified that Hitler is taking a short cut to the heart of France without waiting for the right flank of his army to envelope retiring forces.

Hitler May Offer Terms To Britain

In fact, it seemed to observers here that the right flank of the German army was being used to cut off the British forces from seaports and thus make their return to England impossible.

This gave rise to rumors that Hitler, before beginning a threatened bombardment of the British Isles, would first try to occupy the Belgian and northern French coasts and then ask the British to capitulate.

Men who usually know something of Hitler's mind freely gave expression to this theory.

Meanwhile, the possibility of Italy's entry into the war loomed bigger than ever.

Karl Megerle, Germany's "Virginio Gayda," said today in an editorial in the Boersen Zeitung, under the caption "Unbearable," that "the Government of the people of Italy are at the end of their patience." (Virginio Gayda is the editorial spokesman of Premier Mussolini.)

Megerle's article was described by authorized sources as "well informed."

Meanwhile authorized German sources said they expected the Allies would make a new stand along the line from Lille to Antwerp in an effort to prevent the Germans from reaching the Belgian coast.

From there the Nazis could launch a destructive air attack against England, they said, as well as harry British lines of supply to the expeditionary forces in France and Belgium.

Authorized sources said the latest military developments in Belgium included the capture of the cities of Louvain and Mechel (Malines) and an advance on Antwerp where the northern forts of the city were reported reached.

Paris Blasts Back Massed Bombers

Reynaud Becomes War Chief in Cabinet Shakeup; Petain, Hero of Verdun, Made Vice-Premier

SAY FOE LOSES HEAVILY

PARIS, May 18 (AP).—Speeding German columns swung West across France tonight toward the Oise Valley—the road to Paris—meeting stiffened resistance from Frenchmen fighting under a new government headed by Premier Paul Reynaud and Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, World War "Victor of Verdun."

MAY 19 1940

The French High Command's night communique said the Germans were "attacking in a westerly direction with powerful resources, despite considerable losses."

This was at the end of nine days of the battle in Belgium and Northern France which fighters and war correspondents say is like nothing ever witnessed in history.

'Worse Than Battle of Verdun'

One French officer told H. Taylor Henry, Associated Press war correspondent:

"Two hours of this is worse than two days of the battle of Verdun."

Today the Germans advanced to Guise, about 14 miles west of Vervins, and to Landrecies, about 12 miles west of Avesnes and some 85 miles east of the English Channel.

Avesnes heretofore had been the western edge of the salient into the northern French plains, its lower edges well within 100 miles of Paris.

[According to an International News Service dispatch from Paris last night, a German tank column, which blazed its way forward with flame throwers, has reached Sissone—only 85 miles from the French capital.]

Far ahead of the main German forces, advanced units struck in all directions. Six German motorcycle soldiers who reached Laom, 25 miles south of Guise, were captured.

'Chutists Roam Behind Lines

Other light units were reported to have reached Saint Quentin, 15 miles west of Guise. It was in this vicinity, in a railroad car in the forest of Compiegnee, that the World War armistice was agreed upon.

German parachute soldiers roamed behind the French lines, but "these can have no effect on the general development of operations," declared a War Ministry spokesman.

The German objective in turning to the west appeared to be:

First, to try to cut off the main French armies from the Allied forces in Belgium, and, second, to reach the Oise Valley.

MAY 19 1940

Germans Reach Aisne at Rethel

The sectors of Guise and Landrecies lie about 20 miles within France from the Belgian border, near the headwaters of the Oise River and roughly 100 miles northeast of Paris.

Midway between the Germans and Paris, however, runs the Aisne River line.

Farther East, at the point of the triangle they have driven into France, the Germans were reported to have reached the Aisne in the Bethel sector, 30 miles south of the Belgian border where the French took their stand.

Most of the fury of the battle on the Western Front was concentrated in the Guise and Landrecies sectors. To the northwest in Belgium, where Brussels and Antwerp have been abandoned, and to the East on the Maginot Line where German assaults have been repulsed, tonight's communique said:

BOMBERS REPULSED.

"Nothing of importance to report."

German bombers visited the Paris region this afternoon at the very moment Premier Reynaud was dropping a bombshell of his own with announcement of a cabinet shakeup, making himself War Minister as well as Premier, naming Marshal Petain Vice Premier, and Georges Mandel, former Minister of Colonies, Minister of the Interior.

The German squadron of 16 planes was reported to have bombed communication centers outside the capital, but lost four of their number in the attack.

A general speed-up of French arms production was ordered by the Armament Ministry, ruling that all factories turning out national defense orders must work 24 hours a day. Aviation plants started 12-hour double shifts.

RACE FOR PLANES.

This is designed to overtake eventually Germany's numerical superiority in planes and tanks, which largely have been responsible for the German's swift advance.

A fleet of up to 3,000 German tanks, some of them 80-ton mammoths compared to the biggest French land battleships of 70 tons, batter the French lines around the pocket bulging into France's northern plains, while the Nazi air force blackened the skies.

Against these forces the French wheeled their mobile artillery, especially 75 milimeter guns into action and massed their infantry, both outweighing the parallel German arms in numbers.

The battle was reported especially heavy tonight from the Sambre to the Aisne River on the west side of the pocket.

(Here 22 words were censored.)

It appeared Vervins (here one word was censored) was occupied.

A War Ministry spokesman said the Germans appeared to be withholding some tank columns for a new effort.

FIGHTING REACHES AISNE.

Fighting at the southern extremity, he said, reached down to the Aisne River (here four words were censored).

The spokesman estimated that at least half of Germany's entire mechanized army had been thrown into the battle in Northern France.

The French declared their own lighter tanks had proved superior to the German giants in combat where they met.

Only the formidable French 75's were able to penetrate the heavy armor of the biggest Nazi tanks—and the French were said to be firing point blank at them with good effect.

Accompanied by masses of planes and followed by lighter units and infantry, great numbers of the German tanks struck through the Vervin region toward the Oise and through the Avesnes region toward the Sambre.

The main Nazi effort appeared to be in the Vervins vicinity, the French there were pouring tons of artillery shells against the enemy tanks and were said to have brought up enough of their tanks to match the Germans.

The French said the experience of the last few days had taught them how to deal with German tanks thrusts.

Germans Widen Sedan Pocket

PARIS, May 18 (A. P.).—German armored troops, pushing deep into northern France, are fighting beyond Vervins to the vicinity of the Oise River, a French military spokesman said tonight.

(Twenty-four words were censored here.)

The fighting is west of Vervins, the spokesman said, and just north of Guise.

This drive is one of two the Germans are making to widen the pocket which they have driven more than sixty miles west and south into France. Guise is fifteen miles northwest of Vervins, on the Oise River, slightly more than thirty miles below the Belgian frontier.

At the same time the spokesman disclosed that two waves of eight German bombers each had reached the Paris region during the afternoon's air raid alarm, but were driven away by the capital's defenses. Four were shot down, two by planes and two by anti-aircraft guns.

Paris is within 100 miles of the German pocket in northern France.

MAY 19 1940

Junctions Bombed Near Paris.

(Twenty-two words censored.)

It appears that Vervins (one word censored) is occupied by the Germans.

At the southern extremity of the German pocket, the fighting reaches down to the Aisne River (here four words were censored).

[Rethel, on the Aisne 100 miles from Paris, previously was acknowledged by the French as the southern extremity of the pocket. The Aisne, however, gets much closed to the capital, and the censored cable does not give the exact location of the Germans on the river. The Germans claim they are within sixty miles of Paris.]

Today the battle appeared less violent as the day wore on, leading to the belief that the Germans were withholding some tank columns and refueling for a new effort.

In do-or-die sorties, the French forces lashed out against all Germany sent—and Germany sent tons of steel and bullets, clouds of bombing and strafing airplanes, great fleets of the most powerful and fastest tanks, and always shock troops and more shock troops.

France and her allies faced the Germans between thirty-five and forty miles inside the French border—and Paris was less than a hundred miles away from the fighting zone.

In the wooded ravines and on the open fields of that sector, bounded by the towns of Avesnes, Vervins, Rethel and Sedan, the battle roared at such a pitch that the French high command, usually matter-of-fact, called it a "veritable melee."

Germans strove to fork out from the bulge they [illegible]fter breaking through on the Meuse river front. They were trying to get control of main northern highways leading into the heart of France.

Spurred on by the order of Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin to "conquer or die," the French endeavored to close in by land and air. Allied planes incessantly bombed Nazis who advanced daringly away from their supply bases.

General Marie Louis Adolphe Guillaumat, 76, former War Minister and World War veteran, died of pneumonia today at his home in Nantes.

The high command took note of the Allied withdrawal in Belgium westward from Brussels, saying this was ordered to "suit the general situation," and added this footnote on the war in the skies:

"During the night our aviation violently bombed columns on the march and points the enemy was obliged to pass."

Fighting In Wooded Ravines And Open Fields

Text of French Communique.

Tonight's French communique read:

"Fighting has continued all day with the same violence, chiefly in the region of Guise and Landrecies, where the enemy, despite considerable losses, is attacking in a westerly direction with powerful resources.

"On the rest of the front nothing of importance to report.

"Our bombers continued to harass the enemy's motorized columns which suffered heavily. Numerous reconnaissances were carried out and numerous enemy planes were brought down, both by our anti-aircraft defenses and by our pursuit planes."

The French met the German onrush in the Vervins and Avesnes sectors on the western side of the pocket with massed artillery fire, doggedly determined infantry and artillery at some places was firing point blank at the lumbering monsters.

Great numbers of these, accompanied by masses of planes and followed by lighter units and infantry, were striking through the Vervins region toward the Oise River and through the Avesnes region toward the Sambre River.

The French Command said that after the experience of the last few days, the French had learned how to deal with the German tank onslaughts.

The Germans also attacked near Sedan, at the southeastern extremity of the pocket, more than sixty miles air line southeast of Avesnes, and further east at Montmedy, a fortified position guarding the western end of the main Maginot Line, but these attacks were beaten off, the French said.

Heavily-armored 80-ton German tanks—impervious to any guns short of the formidable French 75s—have clashed at several points with France's famed "land battleships," military dispatches said.

It was estimated that the Germans were using 2,500 to 3,000 tanks in the French pocket and French

The French declared that their own tanks have proved superior in combat where these giants have met.

British and French fighter planes without regard to the Nazis' numerical superiority, were pitted against the hundreds of low-flying German machines that swept forward to support the Nazi ground forces.

Other Allied flyers dumped, the French said, thousands of tons of bombs on the German communications lines and mechanized units assembling inside the pocket.

The "most gigantic battle of all times" is in full progress, the French War Ministry spokesman said.

(Here six words were censored).

Naval Claims Denied.

The French Admiralty flatly denied a German communique to the effect that a destroyer had been sunk and a cruiser damaged by German airplanes at the French port of Dunkerque.

The War Ministry spokesman said that the situation in northern France was "very serious, but not catastrophic."

"The great rush is on again," he said tersely, describing a renewal of mass attacks in which the Germans hurled masses of tanks, supported by planes, into the widening salient between the Sambre River and Rethel.

The War Ministry spokesman estimated that at least half of Germany's entire mechanized army was making the drive into northern France.

German forces penetrated into Brussels and occupied Louvain and Malines after the British-Belgian forces had withdrawn to the west. Allied spokesmen declared that the withdrawal was a strategic one and accomplished in good order.

How Battle Line Stretches.

The battle line now stretches from Rethel in France northwestward through the Vervins and Avesnes regions to the Belgian border and through Belgium to the west or seaward side of Brussels and Malines to Antwerp.

Some isolated points in the regions overrun by the Germans, like forts around Liege, were declared to be holding out.

The Paris region, where anti-aircraft fire was heard during the day, remained calm. The nearest point of the battle area was still in the Rethel zone, about 100 miles away.

[Authorized sources in Berlin asserted that German advance guards were within sixty miles of Paris and the main army within 100 miles of the capital.]

A special militia was being formed rapidly throughout France to cope with possible German parachute troops and Fifth Column or enemy agent activities.

A notice was published that military courts henceforth will deal with all law violations and that there will be no appeal.

Resistance Stiffens

PARIS, May 18 (AP).—Speeding German columns swung west tonight toward the Oise Valley—the road to Paris—but met stiffened French resistance.

Today the Germans advanced to Guise about fourteen miles west of Vervins, and to Landrecies, about twelve miles west of Avesnes and some eighty-five miles east of the English Channel. Avesnes heretofore had been the western edge of the salient into the northern French plains, its lower edges well within 100 miles of Paris.

Far ahead of the main German forces, advanced units struck in all directions. Six German motorcycle soldiers who reached Laon, twenty-five miles south of Guise, were captured.

Other light units were reported to have reached St. Quentin, fifteen miles west of Guise. (It was in this vicinity, in a railroad car in the Forest of Compiegne, that the World War armistice was agreed upon.)

German parachute soldiers roamed behind the French lines, but "these can have no direct effect on the general development of operations," a French War Ministry spokesman asserted.

The German objective in turning to the west appeared to be first, to try to cut off the main French armies from the Allied forces in Belgium, and, second, to reach the Oise Valley.

The sectors of Guise and Landrecies lie about twenty miles within France from the Belgian border, near the headwaters of the Oise River and roughly 100 miles northeast of Paris. Midway between the Germans and Paris, however, runs the Aisne River line.

Farther east, at the point of the triangle they have driven into France, the Germans were reported to have reached the Aisne in the Rethel sector.

A fleet of up to 3,000 German tanks, some of them eighty-ton mammoths compared to the biggest French land battleships of seventy tons, battered the French lines around the pocket bulging into France's northern plains, while the Nazi air force blackened the skies. Against these forces the French wheeled their mobile artillery, especially 75-millimeter guns, into action and massed their infantry, both outweighing the parallel German arms in numbers.

Tonight's communique follows:

"Fighting has continued all day with the same violence, chiefly in the region of Guise and Landrecies, where the enemy, despite considerable losses, is attacking in a westerly direction with powerful resources.

"On the rest of the front nothing of importance to report.

"Our bombers continued to harass the enemy's motorized columns, which suffered heavily. Numerous reconnaissances were carried out, and numerous enemy planes were brought down both by our anti-aircraft defenses and by our pursuit planes."

The morning communique read:

"In France, the battle continues with the same violence in the regions already mentioned in last night's communique.

"In Belgium, to suit the general situation, Allied troops carried out a withdrawal and have moved west of Brussels.

"During the night our aviation violently bombed columns on the march and points the enemy was obliged to pass."

Describes "Serious" Situation

PARIS, May 18 (AP).—Premier Reynaud told the people of France over the radio today that the situation was grave, adding: "It is more serious than in any past years."

"There is an enemy pocket in the northern front which has been slightly enlarged," he went on. Toward the west, he said, the situation was serious, "but it is far from desperate."

"The greatness of our people lies in the fact that in such trials they can ignore their own suffering and think only of the peril of the nation," he said.

Speed Up Arms Output

PARIS, May 18 (AP).—A general speed-up of French arms production was ordered today by the Armaments Ministry, ruling that all factories turning out national defense orders must work twenty-four hours a day. Aviation plants started twelve-hour double shifts.

This is designed to overtake eventually Germany's numerical superiority in planes and tanks, which have been largely responsible for the Germans' swift advance.

A special militia was being formed rapidly throughout France to cope with possible German parachute troops and "fifth column" or enemy agent activities. A notice was published that military courts henceforth would deal with all law violations and there would be no appeal.

TEXT OF REYNAUD SPEECH

Here is the text, in part, of Premier Paul Reynaud's speech as translated from a recording made yesterday by the Columbia Broadcasting System:

MAY 19 1940

You have all heard that the enemy succeeded in reaching the Meuse and is approaching toward the west. The situation is grave—the French people realize that. It is graver than in any past years. But the morale of the French Army is excellent.

Marshal Petain has returned today from Spain, where he has served France's cause so well. He will remain in France until victory.

It was also necessary for the head of the government to take the most dangerous place in the government, to take the heaviest responsibilities. He is going to assume the direction of the national forces. M. Daladier will take the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

So far as the Ministry of the Interior is concerned, that will pass under the direction of Georges Mandel, who was aide to Clemenceau.

I add that a diplomatic movement is going to take place which will give to France and its foreign representation a maximum of efficiency.

All the French administration will have to adapt itself to war. It is necessary that the spirit of war circulate among the government offices as it once used to. • • • Each Frenchman, whether he is in the army or not, tonight must take an oath that his motto will be to conquer.

For more than 70 miles I bicycled along roads packed with slowly plodding peasants and automobiles and convoys moving in the opposite direction.

I started back to Paris 24 hours ago from Cambray after being bombed for more than an hour (four words censored). At least 30 old men, women and children were killed.

The fighting in this first of modern battles has been terrific, like nothing before in history.

A French officer who fought in the last war told me "there can be no comparison between this battle and the worst ones of the last war. Two hours of this is worse than two days of the battle for Verdun."

[Verdun was the greatest center of resistance to the German invasion during the Word War and both the French and Germans suffered tremendous losses.]

Losses were reported (two words censored) heavy.

Nazis Bombed Correspondents As They Travel on Bicycles

As P. J. Philip, of the New York Times, and I were setting out early yesterday for Paris on bicycles, the only available means of transportation, a German plane dive-bombed behind us.

It loosed five bombs on railroad tracks. We were within 40 yards. We threw ourselves flat against a wall amidst a shower of bricks and glass and then raced to a shelter to avoid the plane's spraying machine gun bullets as it returned.

I pedaled back toward the hotel.

Again the planes attacked. The bombs fell a block away. They were bigger bombs this time. The force of the explosion knocked me off the bicycle, ripping the back wheel to pieces.

Again the plane returned to machine gun attack. Again I ducked to the cover of a wall.

A French major who slept in the hotel room next to mine the night before was among those killed.

I recalled he had said to me:

"If they get one of us and the other escapes it will be pretty nice shooting, won't it?"

We were not over 50 yards apart when they got him and I escaped with only bruises.

Screams of the wounded after the bombing were ghastly.

One woman with arteries severed in both legs was holding a small baby in her arms, crooning to it.

MAY 19 1940

Lost Everything In Frightful Flight

An old man hobbled around trying to stop the flow of blood spurting from the stump of his arm.

A baby huddled in the corner of the station kept wailing:

"Mama, mama."

Bombs destroyed the hotel which for a week had been my headquarters between trips to the front.

Everything I had, including a typewriter and a steel trench helmet issued by the American Embassy, was lost.

Unbroken Columns of Refugees Wind Down from the Hills

I prevailed on a terror-stricken boy on a bicycle to repair my wheel.

Philip and I started out again for Paris. As we left a squadron of at least 30 planes was bombing and machine-gunning behind us.

We saw billowing clouds of smoke rising from burning towns and villages as we pedaled 70 miles to the next halting place.

From every hill unbroken columns of refugees could be seen winding down to the main highway.

Nazi planes were flying everywhere singly and in squadrons up to 30. Time and time again we jumped from our bicycles and dropped in the ditches alongside the roads to hide.

Town criers went through villages ringing great bells and warning everyone to be on the move within an hour.

Methodically the peasants closed their homes, loaded their belongings on pushcarts, in old trucks and in great two-wheeled farm chariots drawn by from four to eight farm horses.

Repeat Terrible Trek of 1914 Days

What was left they strapped to their backs and with scarcely a look behind started on the same trek trat all but the very young had made in 1914.

We reached a little town on the main highway line to Paris just before nightfall, too tired to do anything but wait for a train. It never came.

MAY 19 1940

I finally left by car, driving a family of refugees and taking the place of a 76-year-old woman because there was nobody else who could drive and there was a mother and five children in the car with room for only one more.

The old lady gave me a smile as we left her h[ome]. "It's the only thi[ng I have left]" she complained. "My husb[and and son] were killed in the o[ld country]. I am all alone and don't

FRENCH SAY NAMUR STILL HOLDS OUT

Leopold Urges Defenders to Resist to the End.

PARIS, May 18 (A. P.).—The Belgian forces at Namur are still holding out, Havas, the French news agency, reported today in a dispatch from "somewhere in Belgium."

MAY 19 1940

King Leopold was reported to have sent the city's defenders a message calling on them to "resist to the end for the Fatherland."

The defenders also received a message of "profound sympathy" from the Belgian people broadcast by the Belgian radio station at Ostend.

Havas distributed the following Belgian communique:

"The operations that were mentioned in the last communique have been continued according to plan.

"Belgian troops have checked enemy assaults at various points of the front.

"In Antwerp province especially they inflicted heavy losses on the attackers."

Petain Also Becomes Minister Of State

Petain became a Minister of State as well as Vice-Premier.

Reynaud, who succeeded Daladier as Premier last March 21, took the War and National Defense portfolio he had given to Deladier at that time and turned over to him the post of Foreign Minister. Reynaud had been acting as his own Foreign Minister.

Camille Chautemps had been Vice-Premier.

Georges Mandel, who had been Minister of Colonies, replaced Henri Roy as Minister of Interior when the latter declined to accept a post in the reorganized Government.

Louis Rollin, who was Minister of Commerce, took Mandel's place, and Leon Barety, a Deputy belonging to the Left Republican Alliance, took the Commerce post.

Hero Of Verdun Called Back To Wars As Vice-Premier

Petain, 84 Next Friday, Becomes Reynaud's Right-Hand Man In Reorganized French Cabinet

[By the Associated Press]

MAY 19 1940

Paris, May 18—Premier Paul Reynaud concentrated military and political power in his own hands today, called back Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, 83-year-old World War hero, as vice-premier, and tightened France's internal defenses to meet Germany's fast-moving invasion.

France's situation now was acknowledged to be as grave as it had been at some of the blackest hours of the World War.

The Cabinet shakeup, announced while Paris was undergoing an air raid alarm, made Reynaud Minister of War and National Defense as well as Premier and shifted Edouard Daladier to the Foreign Ministry. Reynaud had held the foreign portfolio since succeeding Daladier as Premier last March 21; Daladier had been Minister of War and National Defense.

Petain Just Back From Spain

Marshal Petain, defender of Verdun in the World War, arrived only this morning from his post as France's first Ambassador to Nationalist Spain and became Reynaud's right-hand man as Minister of State and Vice-Premier.

Petain, who will be 84 years old next Friday, was expected to play an important part in the military campaign.

In 1916 he commanded the fixed fortresses of Verdun; today he is faced with the problems of a fast-changing war of movement.

A communique from Reynaud's office said "developments have proved the necessity of concentrating the di-

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 18—Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, commander of French armies in the World War and defender of Verdun, today was appointed Vice-Premier.

In a sudden reconstruction of the Cabinet, Premier Reynaud took charge of the War Ministry and named Edouard Daladier Foreign Minister.

A communique from the Premier's office said the changes were made in the interests of combining political and military leadership in one man—Reynaud.

The Premier will be assisted by Marshal Petain in his leadership.

rection of political and military affairs" in the hands of one man—the Premier.

Other Changes In Cabinet

In other changes in the Cabinet reorganization, Georges Mandel, whose work as Minister of Colonies had given him the reputation of being a "strong man," became Interior Minister in place of Henri Roy; Louis Rollin shifted from the Ministry of Commerce to the Colonial post, and Leon Barety, a Deputy belonging to the Left Republican Alliance, became Commerce Minister.

Camille Chautemps, who was Vice-Premier and Minister of State for Alsace and Lorraine, retained the latter office.

The shakeup ended Daladier's four-year reign over the War Ministry.

Reynaud's original Cabinet was formed March 21 after Daladier fell as Premier under public protest against the standstill war.

Morale Declared Excellent

Reynaud, presenting his new Government tonight in a five-minute broadcast which was relayed to the United States, told his people:

"You have all heard that the enemy succeeded in reaching the Meuse and is approaching toward the west. The situation is grave—the French people realize that.

"It is graver than in any past years but it is in no way desperate.

"The morale of the French army is excellent. . .

MAY 19 1940

"To Conquer," French Motto

"Each Frenchman, whether he is in the army or not, tonight must take an oath that his motto will be to conquer."

He said that Marshal Petain, who had returned from Spain "where he has served France's cause so well, will remain in France until victory, with all his wisdom and strength at the service of the people."

He called Mandel, his new Interior Minister, "a disciple of Clemenceau." Mandel was chief of Premier Clemenceau's secretariat during the last war.

To Shuffle Diplomatic Corps

In addition to his Cabinet shuffle Reynaud promised there would be a shake-up in the French diplomatic corps abroad, saying:

"I add that a diplomatic movement is going to take place which will give to France and its foreign representation a maximum of efficiency."

Shortly after completion of his broadcast announcing the Cabinet shakeup, Premier Reynaud received William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador.

Giraud Leads Armies

LONDON, May 18 (A.P.)—Gen. Henri Honore Giraud is commanding the "groups of armies" of the Allies now fighting the "Battle of the Bulge" in northern France, an authoritative spokesman said today. Until a year ago this sixty-one-year-old veteran was Military Governor of Metz, in Alsace, facing the German border.

MAY 19 1940

Giraud wears two wound stripes as souvenirs of the World War and the Moroccan campaign against the Riff. He knows the present fighting area intimately. As a captain, he was wounded and captured in the 1914 Battle of Guise and interned in Germany. Guise today is the scene of furious fighting. Giraud escaped from Germany and returned to France in time to take part in the attack at the Malmaison in 1917.

Weygand May Get Post

Gen. Maxine Weygand, commander in chief of the Allied land forces in the Near East, may replace Gen. Maurice Gamelin as commander in chief of all the Allied land forces in the war, American military sources at New York reported yesterday. Gen. Weygand reached the age limit of sixty-eight on Jan. 21, 1935, and was succeeded as generalissimo of the French Army at that time by Gen. Gamelin, then chief of the general staff. Last August, when war was imminent, Gen. Weygand returned to the army to take command of the Allied land forces in the Near East, which are believed to number between 200,000 and 250,000 men.

[illegible] West of Brussels

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE in Belgium, May 18 (AP)—British troops, weary after eight days of almost continuous movement and action, clung stubbornly today to new lines west of Brussels.

The British who, seventy-two hours ago, occupied a line on the Dyle River running through Louvain to Wavre, east of Brussels, now are in a better position to meet the German push, despite the Allied withdrawal.

There is no tendency to minimize the desperate Allied situation here. One comfort to the Allies is that the British and French armies virtually are intact and are well equipped for the defensive warfare dictated by the German tactics.

The Royal Air Force was declared to be holding on to advanced bases in France in spite of the severe battering administered during the first week of the Blitzkrieg.

Success was credited to British fighters in countering to a large extent waves of bombers and fighters at the head of Chancellor Hitler's tank columns south of the Sambre River.

In the twenty-four hours ending last midnight the British claimed that an average of nearly one German machine an hour had been destroyed.

One patrol of six British Hurricanes were said to have engaged forty Messerschmitt 110's protecting a Nazi bomber formation, and shot down six of the enemy craft.

French Blow Up Rails to Basle.

LONDON, May 18 (A. P.).—The Exchange Telegraph Company (British) reported in a dispatch from Zurich today that railway connections between Basle, Switzerland, and St. Louis, France, a short distance north, were blown up last night by French military engineers. The railway there parallels the Rhine near the juncture of Germany, France and Switzerland, and the action was reported taken as a precaution against a German surprise attack on Switzerland.

British Claim Air Victory Over Nazis

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 18—The Air Ministry announced today that ten German Junkers-87 bombers were shot down by nine Hurricane fighters in a single battle over France yesterday.

A communique said the Hurricanes rushed to attack twenty enemy bombers when they were seen circling over a wood.

The squadron leader shot down three planes, four Hurricane pilots got one bomber each and the patrol jointly shot down three others. The remaining ten fled.

No British planes were lost in this action.

MAY 19 1940

Also Destroy Dive Bombers

Another section of three Hurricanes over Belgium attacked more than twenty Nazi dive bombers and downed one, the Ministry reported.

A British Spitfire patroling off the Dutch coast went after a Junker-88, Germany's newest-type twin-engine bomber. The Nazi bomber dived from 14,000 feet to thirty feet at 400 miles per hour in a vain effort to shake off the British plane, but two bursts from the eight guns on the Spitfire disabled the engines and the bomber crashed into a breakwater.

The Ministry announced that squadrons of the Royal Air Force bombed German bases and lines of communication in France and Belgium during the night. The communique added that "other R. A. F. squadrons successfully attacked important military objectives in western Germany. The operations were again on a very heavy scale, but none of our aircraft was lost."

Blitz Slackens, Foe Tiring, Says London

An authoritative spokesman declared that the situation on the Western front "is very serious but certainly no worse and possibly a little bit better" than yesterday.

The German advance in "the battle of the Bulge" in northern France, he said, "has very much slackened, perhaps only temporarily, but exhaustion of German units taking part in the operations is apparent."

The British and Belgian lines in Belgium, he asserted, had to go back in order to conform to movements southward.

He emphasized, however, that "there was no question of a break through, or of troops retiring in confusion."

Morale of the Allied troops is very high, he said, and they were indignant at the withdrawals for which they could see no apparent reason.

Warning against German tactics designed to shake the morale of the soldiers and civilians behind the lines, he said a "fifth column" was working differently in France and Belgium than in the Netherlands.

Rumor-mongers, he said, start reports among refugees—such as that the Germans were coming through on the right or left—and thus cause confusion, doubt and mistrust among troops holding the front.

Press Admits "Darkest Hour" Since 1918

The British press admitted, however, that the Allies are facing "the darkest hour" since 1918, when their World War armies were hovering on the brink of a crushing defeat.

There was no official confirmation of a Berlin announcement that German troops already had occupied Brussels, but a War Office communique acknowleding that British troops had withdrawn to new positions west of the Belgian capital plunged London deep into gloom.

Intensifying the forebodings was the disclosure that Dutch and French forces had abandoned the Netherlands' islands of Beveland and Walchern, in Zeeland province, after a heavy bombardment by German planes and artillery.

"Grave But Not Irremediable"

The press made no attempt to hide the gravity of the situation, despite a reassuring bulletin from British General Headquarters which said that the morale of the troops is high.

Official sources counseled the British public to keep "stout hearts and cool heads," and said that while the situation is grave it is not "irremediable."

"Britain has faced tests like this before and can face them again," the appeal said. "There must, however, be no illusion about the fact we are now facing the first stages of the most tremendous battle in the history of the world."

Withdraw To Escape Nazi Trap

The War Office communique announcing withdrawal of the Allied lines to a point west of Brussels said merely that "certain adjustments to the front became necessary" and were executed "without interference."

The withdrawal was said in informed circles to have been ordered to frustrate a German attempt to catch the British forces now operating on the northern flank of the Belgian front in a huge pincer movement.

German mechanized forces, which have penetrated the Allied lines in the vicinity of Charleroi, some thirty miles south of Brussels, were reported to be fanning out, threatening encirclement of British right flank.

New Bulge In Line At Brussels

Although the situation was confused by the high speed of action and the widespread use of roving mechanized units on both sides, the new Allied position in the north appeared about as follows:

The left flank of the British forces rests on the west coast of Holland, near the Belgian border. The line extends southeast in front of Antwerp, bends back to pass west of Brussels and then almost due south to the French border near Maubeuge.

From Maubeuge the front follows an irregular line southeast to Rethel, about 100 miles from Paris, and then bends sharply east toward Longwy.

Wounded soldiers from the British forces in France and Belgium were landed from a hospital ship last night and taken to Birmingham.

The Exchange Telegraph news agency quoted the Berlin radio as saying that German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop today received the new Italian Ambassador, Dino Alfieri.

NAZIS TIRING UNDER STRAIN, BRITAIN HEARS

Progress Of Drive "Very Much Slackened," Says Military Spokesman

[By the Associated Press]

London, Sunday, May 19—Scotland Yard detectives broke up Fascist and Communist meetings in London during the night in a drive to end anti-war propaganda. Several arrests were made.

MAY 19 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 18—Waning power of the Nazis' massive blows was reported tonight to have eased some of the pressure on the Western front, but Britain steeled itself for bad news.

A calm military spokesman admitted that the Allied armies in "the battle of the bulge" in northern France were being shoved back ever closer to the gates of Paris.

The British spokesman made no effort to minimize the "very serious" situation, but declared it was "certainly no worse and possibly a little bit better" than Friday.

German Progress Slackened

German progress, he said, "has very much slackened, perhaps only temporarily, but exhaustion of German units taking part in the operations is apparent.

The situation in France necessitated the British and Belgian withdrawal in Belgium, he asserted, and "there was no question of a break-through or of troops retiring in confusion." The morale of the troops is high, he said, and they were indignant at the withdrawals for which they saw no apparent reason.

R. A. F. Harries Nazi Bases

While Germany's ponderous tanks were approaching the time when lack of fuel is expected to halt them, at least temporarily, British flyers harried German bases and communications lines and battled Nazi air fleets over the front.

The Air Ministry announced overnight aerial bombardments ranging from Bergen, Norway, to France and Belgium "on a very heavy scale" and said no British planes were lost.

At Bergen, Bremen and Hamburg, it said, British flyers attacked German oil tanks, destroying some and heavily damaging others.

It also told proudly of disaster that British Hurricanes and Spitfires wrought on Junkers dive-bombers leading the Nazis' mechanized drive toward the heart of France.

Air Successes Recounted

Nine British Hurricane fighters were said to have emerged unscathed from an air battle over France in which they shot down ten German Junkers "87" bombers and dispersed ten others.

Three other Hurricanes over Belgium attacked more than twenty Nazi dive-bombers and downed one, a communique said, while a British Spitfire brought down a Junker "88," Germany's newest-type twin-engine bomber, fleeing in a 400-mile-an-hour power dive over the Netherlands coast.

In the dark and bitter days that seemed ahead, Britons looked on Prime Minister Churchill as the nation's man of destiny.

Spokesmen by radio and newspaper warned the public that reverses might come and urged Britons to maintain the tradition of the "bulldog breed" as personified by the chunky Prime Minister.

Britain, confident that in Churchill the nation has the match in brains and tactical cunning of Adolf Hitler, has seen action stepped up all along the home front with a new enthusiasm in Churchill's first week of leadership.

He swiftly completed his Government, flew to Paris for a war conference on strategy to stem the German onslaught and took time to lunch with the Japanese Ambassador as part of the empire's effort to court Japan's friendship.

Swift Blow At Fifth Column

The Government has struck swiftly at "fifth column" dangers—police have been armed for the first time and 6,000 enemy aliens have been interned—the nation has been prepared for further ration restrictions; wider dispersal of children in the event of air raids has been ordered and 250,000 volunteers have enlisted as a home guard against parachutists.

This corps was given the status of soldiers today by an order in council.

Members will serve without pay and without prejudice to their liability for conscription in the fighting forces but will be granted regular army compensation if they should suffer permanent injury on active service.

BRITISH CLAIM HITS ON NAZI OIL STORAGE TANKS

Air Ministry Says Raids On Hamburg and Bremen Were Successful.

BASE IN NORWAY BOMBED

R. A. F. Reports That Planes in Attack on Bergen Have Reached Objectives.

LONDON, May 18 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry reported today hits on oil storage tanks in Hamburg and Bremen during a night raid on Germany by British flyers. Some storage tanks were destroyed and others were heavily damaged, it was said.

British raiders also successfully bombed German oil tanks at Bergen, Norway, the Ministry announced.

[DNB, the German official news agency, reported today that twenty-nine civilians were killed and fifty-one injured in an air raid on Hamburg last night. A number of houses and other buildings were reported damaged.]

British warplanes made extensive bombing attacks against road and rail communications being used by advancing German columns west of Namur, Belgium, the Air Ministry announced.

R. A. F. Issues Statement.

Another British statement today said that the Royal Air Force would adhere to its policy of bombing only military objectives and described as "completely untrue" German allegations that British flyers had bombed civilians.

The statement said:

"His Majesty's Government have made it clear that it is no part of their policy to bomb non-military objectives, no matter what the policy of the German Government may be.

"In spite of wanton and repeated attacks by the German Air Force on undefended towns in Poland, Norway, France, Holland and Belgium, His Majesty's Government steadfastly adhere to this policy.

"Statements to the effect that the Royal Air Force have deliberately bombed civilians or non-military objectives are completely untrue and are obviously designed to prepare the way for extension to this country of inhuman methods used by Germans in other countries."

Air Victories Reported.

The Air Ministry announced that ten German Junkers 87 bombers were shot down by nine Hurricane fighters in a single battle over France yesterday.

A communique said that the Hurricanes rushed to attack twenty enemy bombers when they were seen circling over a wood. The squadron leader shot down three planes, four Hurricane pilots got one bomber each and the patrol jointly shot down three others. The remaining ten fled.

No British planes were lost in this action.

Another section of three Hurricanes over Belgium attacked more than twenty Nazi dive bombers and downed one, the Ministry reported.

A British Spitfire patrolling off the Dutch coast went after a Junkers 88, Germany's newest one twin-engine bomber. The Nazi bomber dived from 14,000 feet to 30 feet at 400 miles an hour in a vain effort to shake off the British plane but two bursts from the eight guns on the Spitfire disabled the engines and the bomber crashed into a breakwater.

German Bases Bombed.

The Air Ministry also announced today that squadrons of the Royal Air Force bombed German bases and lines of communication in France and Belgium during the night.

The communique added: "Other R. A. F. squadrons successfully attacked important military objectives in western Germany. The operations were again on a very heavy scale but none of our aircraft was lost."

British General Headquarters issued the following communique earlier today:

"Successful operations were carried out by the B. E. F. yesterday. Several enemy aircraft were brought down by anti-aircraft and small arms fire in addition to successes of the Royal Air Force. Morale of the troops is very high."

British

LONDON, May 18 (AP)—The following British Air Ministry communique was issued tonight:

In the area northwest of Namur [Belgium] extensive operations were carried out last night on road and rail communications used by the enemy's advancing columns. Bridges and railway tracks were hit. Airdromes were bombed and a large supply convoy damaged by our machine-gun fire.

Intense air activity continues over the fighting front. In an engagement over France yesterday nine Hurricanes [British fighters] shot down ten dive bombers without loss to themselves.

A Blenheim aircraft, while over Bergen [Norway], engaged and shot down a Messerschmitt 110, which was seen to crash into a mountainside.

A Hudson aircraft of the Royal Air Force, while on patrol over the North Sea, attacked a convoy of merchant ships with bombs; one of the enemy vessels was damaged.

No air-raid alarms were sounded ashore, although a number of aircraft were heard, apparently not far out to sea.

Churchill Seen Aiming at New Soviet Rapport

Attacks in Press Softened as British Pave Way for 'More Friendly Approach'

LONDON, May 18 (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill's new government was said by a reliable source today to be seeking a "new and more friendly approach" to improvement of relations with Soviet Russia.

Inclusion of the Labor and Liberal parties in the new Cabinet was said to have paved the way for abandonment of the so-called "stiff-necked" attitude toward the U. S. S. R., credited to former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and most of his Conservative regime. A softening of press attacks already was noted.

Russian Ambassador Ivan M. Maisky saw Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, on Thursday, and it is understood they discussed problems raised by British contraband control—principally delays in shipping and how to shorten them.

It was hinted that this discussion might open the way for trade negotiations on a broader basis and ultimately lead to an improvement in Anglo-Russian political relations.

A few days before Churchill took over as Prime Minister, May 10, Russian circles here said that Britain's entire attitude toward reaching a trade agreement with the Soviets was regarded as "unsatisfactory."

Concerning the new government's attitude, however, it was recalled that Churchill, in a broadcast address March 30, declared that "there is no need for Russia to be drawn into this struggle" unless she desired it.

Other members of the new government have hinted at a desire to draw Russia away from Germany. The Liberal leader, Sir Archibald Sinclair, who is now Air Minister in the Churchill Cabinet, urged on Oct. 26, 1939, that Britain take a "vigorous initiative" to improve trade and political relations with Russia.

Lord Halifax on the same date in a measure condoned the Russian move into Poland after the German invasion by saying that the Soviet step would never have been taken if Germany had not acted first. He also pointed out carefully that the Russians had advanced only to the boundary recommended in the Versailles treaty.

Maj. Clement R. Atlee, Lord Privy Seal in the new Cabinet, said a friendly word for Russia as long ago as 1937, asserting that, united, France, Britain and Russia could "form a force which would make any would-be aggressor think twice." He urged such a union.

DUFF COOPER SAYS HITLER STAKES ALL

Information Minister Sees War Being Decided.

LONDON, May 18 (A. P.).—Alfred Duff Cooper, Britain's Minister of Information, told the nation in a broadcast tonight that if Germany loses the present great battle on the western front, "she will lose the war, as well."

"Like a mad gambler at roulette, determined to win or lose all, she has gathered together her vast resources and staked them on the red. If black turns up, it will be a black day, indeed, for the Nazis," he said.

MAY 19 1940

"The enemy is playing for far greater stakes than are we. We may win or lose this battle, but if we lose the battle, we shall not have lost the war. If Germany loses the battle, she will lose the war as well."

"She knows this," Mr. Duff Cooper said. "That's why she has thrown into the battle the whole of a vast accumulated force she has been building up for so many years, both before and since the coming of the Nazis."

Mr. Duff Cooper pointed out that after the battle of the Marne, in 1914, the Commander-in-Chief of the German armies said, "We have lost the war."

"He was quite right," Mr. Duff Cooper said, "but the Germans are stubborn people, and it took four more years to convince them of what already was apparent to more far-sighted observers."

King Says R.A.F. Makes Victory 'Doubly Sure'

Sees Ascendancy Over Foe in Flyers' 'Matchless Spirit'

LONDON, May 18 (AP).—King George VI, in a message to the Royal Air Force, asserted tonight that the flyers' "matchless spirit, that has shown so clear an ascendancy over the enemy, makes final victory of the Allies doubly sure."

The text of the King's message follows:

"During my visit to the headquarters of the Bomber Command today, I was able to hear more about the epic deeds of our bomber forces in recent weeks.

"Coupled with the arduous and unceasing duties of the coastal command and with the heroic exploits of our fighter squadrons in this country and in France, they make an immortal story—a story that fills the whole Empire, whose sons are now fighting in all three branches, with gratitude and admiration.

"I congratulate the Royal Air Force with all my heart and wish them good luck and continued success. The matchless spirit that has shown so clear an ascendancy over the enemy makes the final victory of the Allies doubly sure."

"It is reported that only a small German force is left in the town of Narvik. A French officer declared fighting was near an end in this sector.

DUCE ANSWERS ROOSEVELT'S LATEST NOTE

His Reply Believed To Be Noncommittal Without Being Alarming

Fascist Press Openly Exults At German Advance Into France

MASSOCK

(By the Associated Press)

MAY 19 1940

Rome, May 18—Premier Benito Mussolini has replied to President Roosevelt's latest efforts to prevent spread of the European war, it was learned from a reliable source tonight. The nature of the reply was not disclosed but it was believed to have been noncommittal without being alarming.

The reply, in courteous terms, was said in informed quarters to have been communicated to Mr. Roosevelt through United States Ambassador William Phillips, who delivered a personal message from the President to il Duce May 15.

Tight-Lipped On Contents

Italian and American authorities here have kept tight-lipped silence on the contents of the President's message.

Foreign circles assumed, however, since it was described in Washington as "in the interests of peace," that Mr. Roosevelt told il Duce again of Washington's desire that the war be kept out of other parts of Europe.

With Italy's entry into the war believed by most observers to be awaiting a Nazi death blow to the Allies, the Fascist press is openly exulting at the advance of Germany's war machine into France.

A declaration by Mussolini's Il Popolo d'Italia that Fascist Italy "must reach its great predestined goal, legitimate imperial aspirations and Mediterranean destiny now or never," was interpreted by some as perhaps a sign that Italy was about to strike somewhere.

Italians kept tab on the Balkans also.

Gayda Cites Adriatic Bases

Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor who often reflects the views of Mussolini called attention in his newspaper, Il Giornale d'Italia, to the "natural naval bases" on the Adriatic coast from Yugoslavia to Greece, with the declaration that Italy's protection depended on conditions along that shore.

Gayda drew no conclusions in the article devoted to the Balkans except to say that "the problem of the Balkans" was a 'vital theme" of the Italian foreign policy.

Contraband Letup Kept Secret

Britain's relaxation of contraband control at Gibraltar by letting the Italian liner Rex pass without stopping her for examination was kept from the Italians. Instead, newspapers reported that the Italian liner Roma, which already is in New York, had been stopped at Gibraltar and detained thirty hours without explanation.

Relazioni Internationali, authoritative review of foreign affairs, said it was the unavoidable duty of Italian people to break the pressure of the Allied contraband control, but added there was nothing to do but "await events."

ROME-LONDON PHONE OUT

Interruption in Line Is 'Beyond Paris,' Italian Officials Say

ROME, May 18 (AP)—Telephonic communications with London were interrupted tonight.

Telephone officials said they knew only that "the line is interrupted beyond Paris."

They suggested various reasons—that it might have been cut between London and Paris because of the fighting in France or perhaps that an air raid alarm in London caused operators there to be off duty temporarily.

The line to Paris was cut for an hour during the day, due to an air raid alarm in Paris, telephone officials said.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS READY FOR FLIGHT

Would Quit Switzerland if Nazis Invade.

MAY 19 1940

GENEVA, May 18 (A. P.).—About 185 officials and employees of the League of Nations resigned today under a plan of curtailment preparatory to possible flight of the organization's headquarters due to war.

Secretary-General Joseph A. C. Avenol at a staff meeting Thursday had given 205 of them the choice of handing in their resignations—and getting six months' pay—or agreeing to suspension of their contracts, with only three months' pay, at any time he should declare an emergency.

There are 329 employees in all, sixty-nine of whom will establish new headquarters in Vichy, France, in event Switzerland is invaded, while thirty-seven will be given leave and eighteen will remain in Geneva as gardeners and caretakers at the great Palace of Peace.

Avenol said removal of the headquarters to Vichy "probably" would not occur unless Switzerland were invaded.

A voluntary exodus has sent more than 150,000 persons into Swiss Alpine and southern lake resorts from the region opposite the German frontier, it was estimated unofficially.

Switzerland as a whole remained calm, however.

ITALIANS URGED BY LEGATION TO QUIT RUMANIA

Bucharest Orders All Aliens Lacking Work Permits to Leave Country.

GREECE CALLS UP MORE MEN

Premier Metaxas Has Conference With Envoys of Yugoslavia and Rumania.

MAY 19 1940

BUCHAREST, May 18 (A. P.).—Italians in Rumania were caught up today in the scurrying of foreigners for cover from the war clouds over the Balkans. They were advised by their legation to go home.

Almost concurrently, the Rumanian Ministry of the Interior—presumably intensifying efforts to stamp out "fifth columnists"—ordered all foreigners without work permits to leave the country and canceled permits issued prior to May 1.

At least 10,000 aliens were affected. Those not departing at once were to be interned in a concentration camp opened last night.

Greece, in stern preparation for any eventuality, called up another class of reserves—the 1935 class, which is made up of men 26 years old. They will report on May 25. The War Ministry's explanation was that this group, reported to number 60,000, would receive a month's training "in the use of new weapons."

Informed military observers at Athens said that most of the class would be sent to the wild, mountainous region bordering on Italian-occupied Albania, to bolster the already large number of Greek troops manning the fortifications there against any possible Italian thrust.

At the same time the Greek Premier, Gen. John Metaxas, held long conferences with the Yugoslav and Rumanian Ambassadors, it was reported from Athens.

The Yugoslav envoy, Aleksandar Vukcevic, sounded out Gen. Metaxas last Tuesday on what assistance Yugoslav could expect from Greece in the event of an Italian attack. Greece, Rumania and Yugoslavia, as well as Turkey, are partners in the Balkan Tntente.

Activity in Moscow.

Possibly connected with the Balkan maneuvering was the report of a Stockholm newspaper, the Tidningen, under a Moscow date line, of rumors in the Soviet capital that Russia had made representations to Berlin in the interests of preserving Yugoslav neutrality. The rumor lacked official confirmation.

Part of it was that a Yugoslav representative paid a visit yesterday to the Moscow Foreign Commissariat. Thereafter, it was reported, the Kremlin dispatched its note to Berlin. It was even rumored that a second note went to Germany, but what it concerned was a mystery.

Yugoslavia, in a renewal of friendship with the U. S. S. R., notably lacking since the Bolshevist revolution, has had a delegation at Moscow negotiating a trade treaty as a prelude to establishment of diplomatic relations.

A Yugoslav military commission also is preparing to leave, or has left, for Moscow, it is said, and Balkan diplomatic spokesmen have detected in that the possibility of Russo-Allied collaboration to keep Germany out of the Balkans, or at least the possibility of independent Russian pressure to that end.

Bucharest, May 18 (AP)—The Rumanian National Bank today marked up the valuation of its gold supply fifty per cent. in terms of Rumanian currency, announcing that half the paper profit of 10,500,000,000 lei (about $50,000,000) would be used for armaments and the other half to write off Government debts to the bank.

The new valuation of the gold stock is 31,000,000,000 lei.

Nazis' Advance At Sedan Laid to Air Superiority

Invaders Substitute Planes for Artillery to Clear Way for Tanks and Infantry

MAY 19 1940

PARIS, May 18 (AP).—German superiority in the air, backed by mass attacks of armored divisions of shock troops using flame-throwers, has been the main factor in carving out the pocket in the French line from Mons to Sedan.

During the five days of heavy fighting on the northern front, air superiority has counted heavily. German tactics have ignored the traditional artillery preparation, but have gained the long-sought combined effect of preparation and surprise by substituting attack aviation for artillery.

The Germans made the initial opening in the pocket by attacking on a restricted front and then shifting the force of attack to a neighboring sector so quickly that it seemed almost a simultaneous action.

The action opened almost as soon as the French had entered Belgium and dug their hasty trenches behind rocks and under trees. Fleets of from 300 to 400 German planes dived and bombed French nests in each sector. As fast as they swooped—at some 200 miles an hour—to drop bombs from a height of sometimes no more than 100 yards, they turned and swooped again to machine-gun soldiers who remained.

After the air attack as many as ten armored divisions of medium and heavy tanks crashed against the narrow front, spewing fire from their flame-throwers. Trailing the tanks, light motorized infantry rushed to take over the territory.

As soon as the crack divisions had smashed into one sector, they suddenly were shifted in an effort to strike a demoralizing blow against another.

The best defense the French brought against the constant air attacks was individual rifle fire. A staff officer explained that an infantryman in an advanced position had a better chance of using a light rifle, which he could swing about to follow the plane, than the more cumbersome machine gun.

The general opinion among French military observers is that the German high command is staking everything on a complete breakthrough before the United States has a chance to realize the situation and bring effective aid to bear (here forty-three words were censored).

Reports Civilian Fatalities

BERLIN, May 18 (AP)—D. N. B., official German news agency, reported today that twenty-nine civilians were killed and fifty-one injured in an air raid on Hamburg last night. A number of houses and other buildings were reported damaged.

The news agency said tonight that eleven civilians were killed and sixty-three injured in last night's British air raid on Bremen.

The possibilities of bombing attacks on England from ports in the Lowlands were underlined by the D. N. B. reports, coupled with High Command assertions that raids on "non-military objectives" in Hamburg and Bremen have special significance "in view of subsequent consequences." D. N. B. reported that of seventy-one Allied air attacks on Germany since May 10 fifty-one were on non-military objects.

The authoritative Dienst aus Deutschland said the raids on Hamburg and Bremen must be regarded "as a very serious state of affairs" and "one would not go wrong in the assumption that Germany will note the character of these attacks very carefully and make this the basis for its own decisions and actions."

Nazis Claim Marked Victory.

BERLIN, May 18 (A. P.).—The German High Command declared today that 108 Allied airplanes had been shot down in the last twenty-four hours' fighting with a loss of only twenty-six German planes.

Nazis Bombed Red Cross, Juliana's Consort Charges

Pan-American Note Condemns Nazi Invasions

U. S., 20 Other Republics Call Low-Country Drive 'Unjustifiable and Cruel'

PANAMA, May 18 (AP).—The United States and twenty other American republics characterized today Germany's invasion of Belgium, Holland and Luxemburg as "unjustifiable and cruel" in a joint declaration concerning the German drive through the Low Countries.

President Augusto S. Boyd of Panama, whose government acts as a clearing house for Pan-American neutrality matters, published the declaration, on which the twenty-one republics reached agreement last night.

The text of the declaration follows:

"The American countries, in accordance with the principles of international law and in application of the resolutions adopted by them in their continental conferences, consider as unjustifiable and cruel the violation by Germany of the neutrality and sovereignty of Belgium, Holland and Luxemburg.

"In the fourth and fifth articles on the declaration (on maintenance of international activities within the bounds of Christian morals) of the consultative reunion held in Panama in 1939, it was established that the violation of the neutrality or the invasion of weak peoples as an expedient for the prosecution of and the triumph in wars justified the protest of the American nations against the violation of international law and the demands of justice.

"Therefore the American countries resolve to protest against the military attacks against Belgium, Holland and Luxemburg, at the same time issuing an appeal for the re-establishment of law and justice in the relations between peoples."

'Blitzkrieg' Drive Recalls Petain's Stand at Verdun

Marshall Halted Similar Sweep Toward Paris

By The Associated Press.

Marshal Henri Philippe Petain summoned to bolster France's leadership in an hour of grave peril, became one of her heroes because of his stand against another great German assault—at Verdun—24 years ago.

What Foch and Joffre were to France at the Marne—the nearer parallel to the present Nazi sweep toward Paris—Petain was in the stemming of the Verdun assault.

There Petain, now nearing 84, commanded the French armies in a battle from February to November, 1916.

BECAME CHIEF OF STAFF.

Later he became chief of the general staff at the Ministry of War, and on May 15, 1917, he replaced General Nivelle as commander-in-chief of the armies in the field.

Petain by means of reforms overcame an army crisis which included mutiny in some units. He had a hand in the battles of 1918, helping draw up plans for Allied offenses.

Immediately after the war, the general received the marshal's baton at Metz.

When the World War started Petain was commanding an infantry regiment, but immediately was given a brigade and soon a division. He was advanced to command of the 33rd Army Corps in Artois on October 25. 1914 and distinguished himself during the French offensive near Arras in May, 1915.

He was given command of the second French Army in 1915 and later was put in command of Verdun.

"In Northern Belgium we succeeded in breaking into the outer ring of the Antwerp fortress at two places.

"The cities of Mechelen (Malines) and Louvain were captured in severe fighting.

"Brussels was surrendered without fighting by the Chief Mayor. Our troops entered the city. The enemy retreat from the Dyle (River) position is being pursued.

"South of Maubeuge German armored forces penetrated French frontier fortifications, dispersed two enemy divisions and pursued the retreating enemy beyond the upper Sambre (River) in a southward direction as far as the upper Oise (River).

"Infantry divisions are now closely following up in tremendous marches. Many prisoners among the defeated French troops were taken and large supplies captured.

"Also South of Sedan we gained ground in a southerly direction. The air force chiefly attacked enemy communications in the rear and highways on which the enemy was retreating in dense columns in Belgium and France. Under the effect of these attacks the enemy retreat at a number of places resembled a rout.

"DESTROYER SUNK."

"During armed reconnoitering flights along the Dutch and Belgian coast one enemy destroyer was sunk.

"In Narvik (Northern Norway) waters disembarking enemy troops were attacked and full hits scored on a heavy cruiser and a large transport.

"During the day the enemy lost 108 airplanes, 35 in air battles and 11 by anti-aircraft fire while the remaining number was destroyed on the ground.

"Twenty-six of our own planes are missing.

"Enemy air attacks were directed against a number of cities in the north German coast district especially Hamburg, Bremen and western Germany.

"As in all previous instances, with the exception of one military barrack, only non-military objectives were aimlessly attacked.

"The High Command of the German armed forces specially calls attention to this fact in view of subsequent consequences.

"Germany naval units laid mines in front of South African ports which enemy naval forces are using as bases."

FRENCH

PARIS, May 18 (AP).—The French High Command announced today:

"In France the battle continues with the same violence in the regions already mentioned in last night's communique.

"In Belgium, to suit the general situation, Allied troops carried out a withdrawal and have moved west of Brussels.

"During the night our aviation violently bombed columns on the march and points the enemy was obliged to pass."

Tonight's French communique said:

"Fighting has continued all day with the same violence, chiefly in the region of Guise and Landrecies, where the enemy, despite considerable losses, is attaching in a westerly direction with powerful resources.

"On the rest of the front nothing of importance to report.

"Our bombers continued to harass the enemy's motorized columns which suffered heavily. Numerous reconnaissances were carried out and numerous enemy planes were brought down by our anti-aircraft defenses and by our pursuit planes."

BRITISH

LONDON, May 18 (AP).—Today's Air Ministry communique follows:

"In the area northwest of Namur, extensive operations were carried out last night on road and rail communications used by the enemy's advancing columns. Bridges and railway tracks were hit. Airdromes were bombed and a large supply convoy damaged by our machine-gun fire.

"Intense ai ractivity continues over the fighting front. In an engagement over France yesterday nine Hurricanes (British fighters) shot down ten dive bombers without loss to themselves.

"A Blenheim aircraft, while over Bergen (Norway), engaged and shot down a Messerschmitt 110, which was seen toc rash into a mountainside.

"A Hudson aircraft of the Royal Air Force, on patrol over the North Sea, bombed a convoy of merchant ships; one of the enemy vessels was damaged."

MAY BELGIAN

PARIS, May 18 (AP).—The Belgian night communique, relayed "somewhere in Belgium" by Havas, French News Agency, said:

"The systematic withdrawal executed in these last days by the Belgian Army has been carried out in favorable conditions.

"The prescribed movements were made in good order. The enemy, hindered by our destructions, was not able to put strong pressure on ou rtroops, who retired and broke contact without losses.

"The operation unfortunately meant the abandonment of Brussels and Antwerp. These two cities have suffered no important destruction. The Liege and Namur forts continue their heroic resistance."

SOME LEAGUE OFFICES MAY BE SHIFTED TO U.S.

Geneva Considers Possibility Due To Spread Of War

MAY 19 1940

Fears Nazis And Italian Armies May Invade Switzerland

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 18—A shift of a portion of the League of Nations to the United States was considered a possibility in official quarters today as the Geneva institution began preparations for removal to Vichy, France, in case Switzerland is invaded.

The transfer would be in line with the desire of the Roosevelt Administration to promote the non-political activities of the league—such as economic studies, control over opium production and sale, and suppression of white slavery. Well-informed persons felt this portion of the league would be the most logical to transfer to the new world.

Officials would not be surprised to see also a transfer to this country—temporarily—of the international labor office at Geneva, of which an American, John G. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire, is secretary general. That organization, which seeks improvement of labor standards in all countries, likewise has begun preparations to move to France.

Invasion Is Feared

The danger of German or Italian invasion of Switzerland in an effort to turn the French right flank, while the German army in the north is pushing back the left flank, has resulted in the League of Nations' preparations to move.

Since both Germany and Italy left the League and have since repeatedly denounced it as anti-Fascist and dominated by the Allies, officials here feel that League executives and personnel would receive unsympathetic treatment from the invaders if Geneva were occupied.

They wonder, however, if the League organization would feel safe even in France, in view of the ever-widening scope of the German aerial bombardments. Some reports have been received that the organization would continue on to Lisbon, Portugal.

Preparations for removal of the League from Geneva come at a time when the institution created by President Woodrow Wilson is completing a project for the separation of the non-political activities of the League from its political activities and, in effect, setting up a separate body.

Interested In Project

Officials here have been keenly interested in the project. Under the guidance of President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, it was thought this government might consent to become a member of a non-political league.

Last year Hull sent Joseph C. Avenol, secretary-general of the league, a formal note stating this government's emphatic approval of the league's non-political program. The American government in recent years has sent a number of delegates to represent it at the meetings of the non-political committees.

Transfer of a portion of the league to the United States would be an ironic footnote on the history of the Geneva society. An American president was responsible for its foundation, the name of the United States was placed at the head of the list of the foundling nations and yet, the Senate having refused its consent, this country remained outside.

ASSERTS U. S. ARMY LACKS EQUIPMENT

Gen. Marshall Says It Can't Meet War Test Now.

WASHINGTON, May 18 (A. P.).—The army is so deficient in reserve arms, equipment and man power that Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, told Congress, that it could not possibly meet the test of real warfare at the present time.

Gen. Marshall made the statement in testimony taken by the Senate Military Appropriations Committee in connection with President Roosevelt's request for a $1,182,000,000 emergency defense fund and made public today by the committee when it approved a record-breaking army supply bill. He testified that a force of 70,000 men maneuvering in Texas and Louisiana, as well as the Third Division on the West Coast, had no reserves of material or men.

"In other words," he said "if they were bombed actually instead of theoretically in their maneuvers today, there is no duplicate truck to take the place of the one that is destroyed. If our pilots who are operating in those maneuvers today are shot down, we have not the replacements in actual pilots to take their places. We have the replacement in planes, or rather, we will have them when production comes to current orders."

Gen. Marshall said it would be necessary to "process" 75,000 young men to get the 7,000 pilots set as the army's goal now.

U.S. ARMY USES 75 AS ANTI-TANK GUN

500 of Nation's 3,500 Pieces Adapted to Needs Shown by War in France

MAY 19 1940

900 MORE TO BE ALTERED

Basic Design of 40-Year-Old Weapon Never Improved, Officers Declare

WASHINGTON, May 18 ((AP))—The United States Army for years has been adapting its 75-millimeter field guns for use as an anti-tank weapon, in the same manner that the French Army is using it against powerful German tanks.

Since the World War, the 75 signed by the French more four decades ago, has been the standard light field piece of American artillery. More than 3,500 are in service or in reserve now; 500 or more have been adapted for use against tanks, and the Administration's new arms program includes funds to make suitable alterations in 900 or so others.

American artillery and ordnance officers have repeatedly told Congress that the basic design of the 75 has never been improved.

The United States, however, has streamlined the ammunition, increased the range, improved the sight, attached motor wheels so the gun can be towed at high speed by motor trucks, and has made other changes to add flexibility. The barrel and recoil mechanism are the same as first developed in France before the turn of the century.

The 75 is rated an extremely accurate, fast-firing weapon. Its original effective range of about 8,000 yards has been lengthened by the American changes to 12,000. Shells are loaded by hand, and the gun can be fired as fast as one shot every three seconds, although over long periods the normal rate is two shots a minute to prevent overheating.

Until the World War the United States Army used a 3-inch gun, but switched to the French 75 because it could be procured quickly for the American Expeditionary Force. The difference in caliber is slight.

The changes to permit using the gun effectively against tanks involve chiefly altering the traverse so that the aim can be changed quickly without shifting the entire carriage. In this manner repeated shots can be fired against a fast-moving target.

For use against tanks with armor up to two inches thick, the United States Army recently has standardized a 37-mm. gun that weighs only 900 pounds and can readily be shifted around a battlefield by man power.

MANY PLANS OFFERED FOR DEFENSE TAXES

MAY 19

Roosevelt Leaves Problem Of Unusual Expenditures Up To Congress

Borrowing Viewed In Administration Circles As Best Method Now

MAY 18 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 18—Treasury files contain scores of tax proposals which could be used to pay for the new $1,182,000,000 defense program, with levies ranging from stiff increases in income taxes to imposts on bachelors.

President Roosevelt has left to Congress, for the present at least, the problem of paying for the extraordinary expenditures.

Privately, borrowing was regarded in Administration circles as the only important method to be used immediately. But new taxes, possibly at the next session of Congress after the Presidential election is out of the way, were not ruled out. Increasing the Treasury's $45,000,000,000 debt limit to make borrowing possible was believed by most officials to be a virtual certainty, at least by next year.

Called "Trick Methods"

A third group of possible methods, mostly opposed by the Treasury as "trick methods" but favored by various Congressmen, involves using idle assets of the Treasury. This group includes taking money out of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, spending part of the estimated $2,000,000,000 "paper profit" which the Treasury has made on silver purchases, printing $3,000,000,000 of "greenback" paper money as authorized in 1933 and converting into cash some of the Treasury's $3,662,660,000 interest in Government corporations.

Last January Mr. Roosevelt ordered Government corporations to give the Treasury $700,000,000 on account within the next year.

Refer To Gold Hoard

Officials indicated that no substantial amount of cash could be realized on the Treasury's $18,800,000,000 gold hoard because nearly all the gold purchased in recent years was cashed immediately in at the Federal Reserve banks.

The Treasury has said that it has not been asked yet to draft any tax proposals, but a corps of officials there studies such proposals regularly.

One source of tax ideas they use is a list of what foreign countries do. Files of this sort show bachelor taxes in Italy and Germany, a tax on trees in Siam, on bills—the kind that clutter up the first-of-the-month mail—in France, on race-bet bookmakers in Australia, and on funerals in Rumania.

One tax thought current in Washington, which the President is reported reliably to like, is a "super-tax" on incomes.

This tax, usually proposed at ten per cent., would be determined by adding that percentage on to whatever income tax a person or corporation would pay regularly. At ten per cent., this levy would raise about $200,000,000 a year.

Would Yield $200,000,000

Senator La Follette (Prog., Wis.) and some Administration officials have favored at various times a "broadening of the income-tax base." This would mean reducing personal exemptions—probably from $2,500 to $2,000 for heads of families and from $1,000 to $800 for single persons—and increasing tax rates on moderate incomes, up to $100,000. It has been estimated these two proposals together would yield slightly more than $200,000,000 a year.

A general sales tax, similar to those levied by many States, also has been suggested. However, present Federal excise taxes on liquor, tobacco, gasoline, automobiles, radios, theater admissions and many other items already have taken the cream off this source. A five per cent. sales tax on everything, the stiffest rate proposed, would raise about $1,000,000,000, but not many millions on the items not now taxed.

Special Taxes Cited

The World War brought some special taxes in this country that could be revived. These included taxes on soft drinks, transportation, insurance and many luxuries such as silk shirts and pianos. The liquor tax, now $2.25 a gallon, also was boosted to $6.40. More recently, this country had abandoned special taxes on checks, soap, sporting goods and chewing gum. None of these levies, by itself, would raise a great deal. The check tax, for instance, brought in $41,000,000.

During the war, the United States also imposed stiff excess profits and war profits taxes, ranging from 30 to 65 or more per cent. These taxes raised billions in the later war years, because of war-stimulated profits, but might not be so productive at current profit levels.

DEFENSE FUND READY AS SOON AS BILL PASSES

Senate Group Speeds New Army Measure Toward Final Action.

CALLS FOR NEARLY 2 BILLIONS

Vinson Would Empower President to Relax Wage-hour and Walsh-Healy Acts.

MAY 19 1940

WASHINGTON, May 18 (AP).—Discarding the usual restraints on when new appropriations may be spent, an appropriations sub-committee sped a $1,827,491,724 army bill toward Senate action today after inserting a provision to make the full sum available for emergency defense purposes as soon as the measure becomes law.

The measure, as approved by the military sub-committee, carried both regular army funds and emergency appropriations asked by President Roosevelt on Thursday as part of his unprecedented peacetime rearmament program. Emergency funds included a lump of $132,000,000 to be spent at the President's own discretion.

Ordinarily the funds would not become available until the beginning of the fiscal year July 1. But Chairman Thomas, Democrat, of Oklahoma, reported that the subcommittee wrote in his amendment to make all funds available as soon as President Roosevelt signed the bill, once it had won full congressional approval.

Depending on how quickly Congress acts, this provision, if approved by Senate and House, might make the money available as much as a month earlier than otherwise.

To Ask Emergency Powers.

Chairman Vinson, Democrat, of Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, meanwhile, whipped into shape legislation to give Mr. Roosevelt extensive emergency powers to suspend Federal labor and financial regulations which, Mr. Vinson said, might hamper the quickening drive to rearm.

Mr. Vinson said he would have a comprehensive bill—providing for suspension of wage and hour standards as applied to Federal contracts among other things—ready for committee approval Monday and would seek "prompt action by the House."

The Senate committee provided that Mr. Roosevelt should account to Congress for the lump sum placed at his disposal by June 30, 1942.

The army bill carried $1,499,263,088 in actual cash and contract authorizations to make the rest of its total.

Additions to the regular navy supply bill are scheduled to be made by a sub-committee next week in line with the President's request. They will bring the total prospective outlays for the navy to $1,303,980,728, of which $1,247,797,478 will be in cash appropriations and the remainder in contract authority.

Thus the nation's total defense bill, including cash outlays and contract authority, for the new fiscal year would reach $3,131,472,452.

The Chief Executive himself, closely following major developments of the huge program which he laid down on Thursday, kept his calendar largely free of engagements today that he might summon officials as needed. Of the few calls arranged one was for Bernard M. Baruch, financier and chairman of the former World War Industries Board, to meet with Mr. Roosevelt at luncheon.

Mr. Vinson made his proposal for increasing the President's emergency powers after hearing testimony by Navy Department experts as to "bottlenecks and delays."

New Powers Proposed.

He said that whenever the President declared a "national emergency to exist" the Chief Executive and the Secretary of the Navy should be able to do these things now prohibited by law:

1. Make advances on naval contracts up to 30 per cent before start of work or up to 100 per cent before completion to finance contractors.
2. Remove present requirements for competitive bidding on naval contracts, including aircraft.
3. Suspend present wage and hour standards of the Walsh-Healy act when these were found to be "prejudicial" to national defense.
4. Suspend Federal profit limitations of 10 and 12 per cent on contracts of $25,000, or less. The present limit is $10,000.
5. Permit the Navy Department to make allowances for plant expension costs on navy contracts. These costs now are subject also to Treasury Department approval.
6. Remove present work period limits of forty hours weekly and eight hours a day, with a provision for overtime payment at a rate of "time and a half." This would apply to Government naval workers or those on Government contracts and would set up a maximum of forty-eight hours subject to increase by presidential order.
7. Permit re-employment of retired Government Navy Department employees.
8. Grant priority to naval orders for machine tools and equipment with all private manufacturers.
9. Eliminate vacations for Navy Department and yards workers when necessary, with a provision for double pay during period.
10. Increase congressional cost limitations on sixty-eight ships under construction.

To Protect America

Emergency Power Asked For President

MAY 19 1940

Panama, May 18 (AP)—The United States and twenty other American republics today characterized Germany's invasion of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg as "unjustifiable and cruel" in a joint declaration on the German drive through the Low Countries.

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 18—Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem., Ga.) of the House Naval Committee, proposed today that President Roosevelt be given emergency power to suspend wage and hour standards and relax Federal financial controls in order to eliminate "bottlenecks and delays" in the billion-dollar armament drive.

The President himself, closely following major developments of the huge program which he laid down Thursday, kept his calendar largely free of engagements today that he might summon officials as needed. Of the few calls arranged, one was for Bernard M. Baruch, financier and chairman of the former World War Industries Board, to meet with Mr. Roosevelt at luncheon.

Vinson made his proposal for increasing the President's emergency powers after hearing testimony by Navy Department experts as to "bottlenecks and delays."

Vinson's Six Proposals

He said that whenever the President declared a "national emergency to exist" the President and the Secretary of the Navy should be able to do these things now prohibited by law:

1. Make advances on naval contracts up to thirty per cent. before start of work or up to one hundred per cent. before completion to finance contractors.
2. Remove present requirements for competitive bidding on naval contracts including aircraft.
3. Suspend present wage and hour standards of the Walsh-Healy Act when these were found to be "prejudicial" to national defense.
4. Suspend Federal profit limitations of ten and twelve per cent. on contracts of $25,000, or less. The present limit is $10,000.
5. Permit the Navy Department to make allowances for plant-expansion costs on navy contracts. These costs now are subject also to Treasury Department approval.
6. Remove present work-period limits of forty hours weekly and eight hours a day, with a provision for overtime payment at a rate of "time and one-half." This would apply to Government naval workers or those on Government contracts and would set up a maximum of forty-eight hours, subject to increase by Presidential order.
7. Permit reemployment of retired Government Navy Department employes.
8. Grant priority to naval orders for machine tools and epuipment with all private manuacturers.
9. Eliminate vacations for Navy Department and yards workers when necessary, with a provision for double pay during period.
10. Increase Congressional cost limitations on sixty-eight ships under construction.

"Action—and action now" was the unphrased slogan as Congress cut through more legislative preliminaries with the aim of having the new $1,182,000,000 program ready for Senate and House approval next week.

A Senate subcommittee set the pace, voting quickly in favor of $647,648,994 in extra army appropirations recommended in President Roosevelt's defense message and then adding an unrequested $50,000,000 for more regular troops.

Plans were simultaneously being drafted elsewhere to cover the whole sphere of military effort—from large-scale expansion of aircraft and munitions industries to the training of flyers.

Led by former President Herbert Hoover and Alfred M. Landon, 1936 Presidential nominee, key Republicans backed the Administration in putting defense needs foremost.

There was conjecture in some quarters as to whether a bipartisan defense coalition might be in the offing. This speculation was spurred by an invitation to Landon to lunch with President Roosevelt on Wednesday. There was a deterrent, however, in Landon's charge that the Administration had been "tragically late" in assuring preparedness.

Interest likewise attached to the announcement of Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice-Presidential nominee in 1936, that Mr. Roosevelt had authorized him to disclose plans for "Plattsburgs of the air," an idea conceived by a group of citizens for a series of camps to train thousands of military flyers.

The Senate military appropriations subcommittee, which acted on some of Mr. Roosevelt's defense recommendations yesterday, met again today to add another $132,000,000 to the army bill.

This additional sum would represent the army's share of the $200,000,000 fund which the President asked Congress to place at his personal disposal.

Plane-Plant Expansion

One of the first steps toward expanding the nation's industrial resources to meet preparedness demands was the calling of a meeting of American aircraft manufacturers here Monday to discuss increasing warplane production to 50,000 annually. Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson estimated that a 25,000-a-year mark would be reached by next January without emergency methods.

Announcing the "Plattsburgs-of-the-air" plan, Colonel Knox voiced hope that camps would be ready in each of the nine army corps areas by July 1. He said the aim was to enroll voluntarily a maximum of 10,000 young men between the ages of 18 and 35.

[By the Associated Press]

Tulsa, Okla., May 18—If the United States builds 50,000 warplanes there will be plenty of gasoline to keep them in the air, leaders of the oil industry said today.

MAY 19 1940

Frank Phillips, of Bartlesville, Okla., whose company has been a leader in developing high-test gasoline, declared:

"When the Government has built 50,000 airplanes the oil industry will be able to supply not only adequate quantities of aviation gasoline but of a grade much higher in quality and efficiency than is now being used by belligerent nations."

Easy, Others Agree

Other oil men here for the International Petroleum Exposition said gasoline production could easily be made to keep pace with plane manufacture.

At present, the industry is making about 30,000 barrels of aviation gasoline daily. About 3,400,000 barrels are in storage. In recent months, about one-fourth of the production has been exported.

"Ready Before Planes Are"

John Day, secretary-manager of the Western Petroleum Refiners Association, said some motor fuel now being produced would be suitable for training planes, with high octane gasoline needed only for swift fighting and bombing ships.

Other officials said that if one hundred-octane gasoline were needed for all planes, the additional refining facilities required could be constructed and in operation long before factories could make the planes.

Steel District Ready

MAY 19 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Pittsburgh, May 18—This great industrial center, which turned out eighty per cent. of the nation's munitions steel in the World War is geared to begin work at once helping to arm again under President Roosevelt's proposed $1,182,000,000 defense program.

That was the report today from leaders of strategic war industries. They said the railroad and industrial "bottlenecks" that slowed output in 1917-18 had been broken and all industries were in "excellent position" to commence production for the armed forces. Many already have received "educational orders."

Steel First Requirement

In the highly mechanized army contemplated by Mr. Roosevelt, steel is the first requirement for machinery and tank armor plate. This section expects to produce the major part of it.

In addition, the army expects to draw upon the mills that sprawl along the Ohio, Allegheny and Monongahela rivers for shell casings, gun tubes, gun forgings, bombs, armor plate for ships, gas masks and, on a small scale, ammunition and chemicals.

Miles Of New Track

Since the World War the railroads have laid down miles of new track for additional freight lines from the city. At the same time they increased freight car stocks.

"We can't tell just what the situation might be," stated a spokesman for one of the three big carriers, "but proof that we're capable of a heavy load was demonstrated by the manner in which we handled the greatest boom in transportation's history last autumn. There was plenty of track and no shortage of cars."

A steel company spokesman, observing that Pittsburgh mills produce more than one-third of the nation's output and is the largest steel-producing center in the world, said the mills would have "no difficulty" handling rearmament orders. The streamlined, continuous mills—an innovation since 1917—have never reached capacity production, he said, "although they were kept pretty busy last autumn."

An ample supply of coal to feed the glowing furnaces here and in other industrial areas was assured by Byron Canon, secretary of the Western Pennsylvania Coal Operators Association, who said the rich bituminous fields could step up production more than 30 per cent. "if we can get the manpower."

C. OF C. HEAD WARNS U. S. TO STAY NEUTRAL

Says Entry Into War May Lead To National Bankruptcy

MAY 19 1940

Also Chance Of Opening Door To Dictatorship, Kemper Points Out

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 18—James S. Kemper, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, warned the country today that entry into the European war might lead to national bankruptcy and open the door to dictatorship at home.

The Chicago insurance executive, who was elected head of the organization of businessmen at its annual meeting May 2, sounded this warning in a formal statement issued through chamber headquarters here.

"The primary concern of American business today," he said, "is that our country not become involved in any foreign war. Business is not looking for the advantage of war profits and definitely is opposed to sending American boys and young men to fight on foreign soil.

Peace At Any Price Not Favored

"This does not mean that business favors peace at any price. On the contrary, it believes that every provision should be made for the national defense. Peace for ourselves best can be assured by providing ourselves with a navy, air force and military supplies adequate for any emergency."

Mr. Kemper did not mention directly President Roosevelt's proposal to increase next year's armament program by $1,182,000,000 as the result of Germany's thrust through Belgium and Holland.

However, he said business believed adequate defense was the best insurance against foreign entanglements.

Government Cost Held Too High

Declaring the cost of government was entirely too high, the Chicagoan added:

"That is why business properly protests the resulting high rates of taxation. But so far as the national defense is concerned, business is willing to assume its full share of the cost."

Every businessman recognized that Federal spending must be curtailed—"and that soon"—Mr. Kemper continued, and "participation by us in the present war would make that curtailment impossible."

"A breakdown of the credit of our own Government," he added, "would open the same door here that has made possible the appearance on the European scene of the totalitarian state, and with it the loss of representative government."

In business circles it was recalled that the Chamber of Commerce, at its recent annual meeting, had called upon Congress to "reaffirm its determination to keep the United States out of war, unless our nation is endangered."

Some Western delegates to the annual meeting urged also that the business organization oppose relaxation of statutes which prevent the granting of credit to the Allied governments.

The resolutions committee brought out nothing on this question, however, and the proposition was not pressed before the full meeting. Reliable sources said the committee took the position that any stand on the matter would be premature, since the Allies were estimated to have sufficient assets in this country to finance their purchases for a year or two.

U. S. to Rush Planes to Allies

WASHINGTON, May 18 (AP).—President Roosevelt was said authoritatively today to have decided to put the Administration's force behind efforts to speed deliveries of American-made warplanes to the hard-pressed Allies.

Informed air men said means to hasten completion of more than 4,000 planes which Britain and France had ordered since the war started would figure prominently in a conference of industrial leaders with government officials Monday.

The feasibility of turning over to the Allies new planes manufactured for the Army probably would be considered also, it was predicted, though officials said no formal requests that this be done had been received thus far.

The conference of industrial leaders with government officials here Monday, was called yesterday by Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War. He called together representatives of more than forty principal manufacturers of planes and engines to devise means of putting into effect quickly Mr. Roosevelt's recommendation that the nation's productive capacity be expanded to 50,000 planes a year.

Originally it was understood that the manufacturers were to meet only Army and Navy officials. Subsequently, the conference was shifted to the Treasury and broadened to include representatives of every government agency concerned with aviation.

The Army is so deficient in reserve guns, equipment and man power, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, told Congress today, that it could not possibly meet the test of real warfare at the present time.

Gen. Marshall made the statement in testimony taken by the Senate Military Appropriations Committee in connection with President Roosevelt's request for a $1,182,000,000 emergency defense fund and made public today by the committee when it approved a record-breaking Army supply bill.

Gen. Marshall testified that a force of 70,000 men maneuvering in Texas and Louisiana, as well as the 3d Division on the West Coast had no reserves of material or men.

NEW MARTIN BOMBER DESIGNED FOR ALLIES

Contract Is Made for Total Output of Type for 18 Months

MAY 19 1940

BALTIMORE, May 18 (AP)—Glenn L. Martin, president of the Baltimore airplane company bearing his name, said today that specifications for a new type bombing plane had been completed and that the Anglo-French Purchasing Commission had agreed to take every one which could be turned out in eighteen months.

The contract specified, however, that exceptions on delivery to the Allies would be necessary in case the United States Government called for the aircraft under President Roosevelt's national defense program.

Neither Mr. Martin nor the Allied commission would divulge the dollar value of the unusual contract, nor would they comment on the number of planes to be built. Performance or features of the bomber were not disclosed.

Mr. Martin said that an announcement might be made later concerning expansion of the Baltimore plant and the possibility that the Martin company might open a new factory at an inland location.

Sergt. A. C. York Says U. S. Should Arm Fast

World War Hero Asserts German Advance Should Teach Value Of Preparedness

Pall Mall, Tenn., May 18 (AP)—Sergt. Alvin C. York, World War hero, declared tonight the potent and swift thrusts of the German army of today "should teach us what can happen when a nation is unprepared."

"I've always been a believer in preparedness—plenty of guns, and the best guns—and think now more than ever the United States should arm and arm fast," said York, now an East Tennesse farmer and founder of a Bible school for mountain youths.

York is credited in Government reports with capturing "practically unassisted" an entire German machine gun battalion. Gen. John J. Pershing called him the "greatest individual soldier of the World War."

Yarnell On U.S. War Role

[By the Associated Press]

Newport, R. I., May 18—Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, U. S. N., retired, declared today that America should keep out of war until she is assured that her men and money "will be spent to a far better end than in 1918."

"The people of this country," he told the graduating class of the Naval War College, "are still painfully aware of the result of the last World War, when we sent two million men abroad and spent thirty or more billions of dollars to make the world safe for democracy; then witnessed a resumption of selfish policies that planted the seeds of future war.

"Do not enter the war to assist any nation," he admonished, "until that nation unreservedly pledges itself to support a treaty of peace that will be fair to all and will be of some value in discouraging in the future the use of war as an instrument of national policy."

In the event, however, that the United States should reach the end of its endurance, Admiral Yarnell said, the war should be made "purely a naval war," and no troops should be sent beyond the limits of the continental United States.

"The Atlantic ocean still remains a large body of water and the probability of plane attack from overseas on this country will remain remote for some time to come," he asserted. "Command of the sea is and will remain the primary factor in our plan of national defense and as long as we have it we are safe from successful enemy invasion.

"Bear firmly in mind that seapower defeated Napoleon and it will be seapower, today and tomorrow, that will prevent another dictator who lacks it from acquiring domination."

Armored Baby Carriages Built for Dutch Indies

By The Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 18—The operator of a hotel-general store-automobile agency business in the Dutch West Indies is taking no chances on an unfavorable turn of the war and that is why today a nursery furniture company here began turning out bullet-proof baby carriages.

The company received an order from Aladar Pieschta of Aruba, in the Indies, for twenty-five armored perambulators.

Executives of the furniture company were puzzled until they learned that Aruba processes about 70 per cent of the oil from Venezuela and that France gets most of it. When the French landed 150 marines there Pieschta saw a need for a wartime baby buggy.

Quarter-inch armor plates will be fitted to the carriages so they can be dropped into place in a jiffy. The company says they will shield a carriage so completely that it could go through machine-gun fire safely.

Casualties Swamping Ambulances At Front

MAY 19 1940

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 18—James Wood Johnson, president of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps, announced that a cable received today from the corps' French office disclosed that members of the corps were working day and night near the front lines but were unable to care for the great number of casualties.

The message also disclosed the loss of the sixth ambulance within a week.

The cable, sent by Col. James V. Sparks, head of the corps in France, said:

"Regarding the ten ambulances sent out with the Anne Morgan group, one is known to be lost, five still are out in the north of France evacuating civilians. Four returned for repairs to ambulance bodies. Eight men (drivers) arrived from Italy Wednesday, leaving Sunday to relieve greatly overworked members of the General Pershing and Myron Herrick sections now operating day and night near the front lines; utterly incapable of handling all wounded in sector but evacuating very large number of serious cases to field hospitals."

Emporia, Kan., May 18 (AP)—William Allen White, publisher of the Gazette, urged today that the United States "throw its economic and moral weight" on the side of the Allies in the European war.

In telegrams to several hundred influential Americans recommending a committee be formed to do the job, he asserted:

"Terrible as it may seem, the people of our country cannot avoid the consequence of Hitler's victory and those who are or may be allied with him. . . .

"The time has come when the United States should throw its economic and moral weight on the side of the nations of western Europe, great and small, that are struggling in battle for a civilized way of life, that constitute our first line of defense."

PARIS, MAY 18—(AP)—GERMANY'S TRAITOROUS INVASION OF HOLLAND ENDED TODAY AS DUTCH ARMY CHIEF ORDERED HIS MEN TO CEASE RESISTANCE AND SET AT LIBERTY THE 80 GERMANS HELD PRISONER IN ANNUL CITY HALL BUILDING.

DUTCH DEFENSE HOLDS STRONG; GERMANS CONCENTRATE ON ROTTERDAM FRONT; ALLIED AIR FORCE BLASTS NAZI BASES; BRITISH ARMY ATTACKS ENEMY FLANK

DUTCH ARMY CHIEF ORDERS CEASE FIRE; GERMANS HOLD CITY

THESE AUTHORITIES DISCLOSED HOW THE MODERN BLITZKRIEG METHOD AND COMPLETE DISREGARD OF "THE RULES" ACCOMPLISHED THE TASK IN FIVE DAYS.

IN POLAND AND NORWAY THE GERMANS HAD GIVEN NO REAL INKLING OF WHAT THEY HAD IN THE BAG. ON HOLLAND THEY TURNED LOOSE TRICKS THAT IN ANY CIRCUMSTANCE SHORT OF THE ACTUAL PROOF WOULD HAVE BEEN TERMED FANTASTIC PIPE DREAMS.

AT ONE BOLD STROKE, FOR INSTANCE, THE NAZIS REMOVED THE FLOOD WATER DEFENSES OF THE ROTTERDAM-THE HAGUE-AMSTERDAM AREA UNLESS. AFTER THAT THERE WAS LITTLE HOPE IN CONTINUING THE FIGHT. THE DUTCH SURRENDERED.

PARACHUTE TROOPS DUMPED OUT OF THE SKIES FROM PLANES WHICH HAD DETACHABLE BOTTOMS FELL BY THE HUNDREDS IN THE ROTTERDAM AREA.

BIG HYDROPLANE TRANSPORTS ALIGHTED ON CANALS, RIVERS AND IN THE PORTS.

MAY 19 1940

GERMAN AGENTS DISCARDED THEIR DISGUISE IN THE CITY PROPER AND THE THREE FORCES COMBINED.

THE ROTTERDAM AIRDROME WAS SEIZED. STIFF FIGHTING OUSTED THE INVADERS BUT MORE PARACHUTISTS AND MORE TRANSPORTS ARRIVED. AGAIN THE AIRDROME WAS SEIZED BY THE NAZIS AND AGAIN IT WAS RE-TAKEN BY THE DUTCH.

THEN SUDDENLY A MECHANIZED COLUMN OF NAZI TROOPS WHICH HAD BEEN DASHING THROUGH CENTRAL HOLLAND ARRIVED AT THE MOERDIJK BRIDGE COMMANDING ROTTERDAM'S DEFENSE AREA.

THEY GOT ON THE BRIDGE AND, SAID DUTCH FOREIGN MINISTER EELCO N. VAN KLEFFENS, SLAUGHTERED THE GUARDS AND THREW THEIR BODIES INTO THE RIVER.

THE CITY FELL. THE LINE OF WATER DEFENSES HAD BEEN TURNED AND ITS VALUE WAS LOST.

WHEN THE INVASION OF HOLLAND BEGAN, LITERALLY THOUSANDS OF PARACHUTISTS DESCENDED ONTO THE LOWLANDS, MOSTLY BY NIGHT.

THE FIFTH COLUMN INSIDE THE COUNTRY WAS ESTIMATED TO HAVE NUMBERED AS MUCH AS 100,000.

THE PARACHUTISTS AND FIFTH COLUMNISTS STARTED FIRES AT POINTS THROUGHOUT THE INTERIOR. A LARGE PART OF THE ARMY HAD TO BE DIVERTED TO MOPPING UP PURPOSES.

OFFICIAL DUTCH SOURCES SAID HOLLAND'S AIR FORCE WAS ALMOST ANNIHILATED IN THE TERRIFIC AERIAL WARFARE THAT ACCOMPANIED THE INVASION.

IT WAS A HOPELESS FIGHT, VAN KLEFFENS REPORTED AFTER FLEEING TO PARIS.

RATHER THAN FACE POSSIBLE WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER OF THE COUNTRY'S CIVILIAN POPULACE IF THE FIGHT HAD CONTINUED WITH AERIAL BOMBARDMENTS AND MACHINE GUNNING, THE ARMY GAVE UP.

ON THE GERMAN-NETHERLANDS BORDER, MAY 18-(AP)-

WHAT COULD BE SEEN OF THE NETHERLANDS FROM THE GERMAN BORDER TODAY SHOWED NO SIGN OF WAR BUT A SHORT DISTANCE BEHIND US WAS GRIM EVIDENCE--A PRISON CAMP WHERE MORE THAN 5,000 DUTCH, BELGIAN, POLISH AND ONE LONE ENGLISH PRISONER WERE HELD BEHIND BARBED WIRE.

MAY 19 1940

THIS CORRESPONDENT WAS TAKEN TO THE PRISON CAMP IN THE WESTERN FRONT MILITARY ZONE BY GERMAN OFFICIALS WHO SOUGHT TO DEMONSTRATE THAT PRISONERS OF WAR ARE BEING HUMANELY TREATED ACCORDING TO THE CODE OF WAR.

30.24-2359

GERMAN MILITARY PLANES HUMMED CONSTANTLY OVERHEAD DURING THE DAY BUT [redacted] NO ALLIED AIRCRAFT.

IT WAS OBVIOUS THE PRISONERS WERE WELL FED BUT OBVIOUSLY THEY WERE NOT JUBILANT. MANY OF THEM, CAPTURED DURING THE FIRST DAY OF FIGHTING ON THE WESTERN FRONT, FACE GRIM MONTHS OR POSSIBLY YEARS BEHIND THE FORBIDDING BARBED WIRE BARRIERS.

THE CAMP IS LOCATED AT [redacted], ONLY A SHORT [redacted] DISTANCE FROM THE GERMAN-DUTCH BORDER. GROUPS OF [redacted] PRISONERS WERE BROUGHT [redacted] FOR QUESTIONING BUT WERE FORBIDDEN TO MENTION MILITARY MATTERS OR [redacted] HINT WHETHER THEY HAD SEEN ADOLF [redacted] HITLER'S "SECRET WEAPON" IN ACTION.

MAY 19 1940

THE LONE ENGLISHMAN WAS PILOT OFFICER PATRICK [redacted] GREENHOUSE, 21, OF [redacted], A BRITISH RAILWAY POINT NORTH OF BIRMINGHAM.

"WHY WERE YOU NAMED PATRICK?" HE WAS ASKED.

"BECAUSE MY MOTHER WAS IRISH," REPLIED THE BRITON, A HANDSOME, CLEANCUT YOUNGSTER WHO HAD BEEN IN TRAINING TWO YEARS AS A PILOT.

[redacted] WAS SHOT DOWN LAST MONDAY BY A FLIGHT OF [redacted]SCHMITTS WHICH ATTACKED A SQUADRON OF BRITISH PLANES FLYING OVER THE NETHERLANDS.

HE SAID HIS GUNNER BAILED OUT WHEN THEIR MOTOR WAS HIT. HE TRIED TO GLIDE TO A LANDING BUT CRASHED. THE PAIR ESCAPED INJURY EXCEPT FOR A SLIGHT CUT [redacted] ON HIS FOREHEAD.

"COME TO NEW YORK WHEN THE WAR IS OVER," AN AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT SAID IN PARTING.

"WE HOPE NEW YORK WILL BE COMING TO US," GREENHOUSE REPLIED.

MAY 19 1940

THE CAMP AT [redacted] IS AN [redacted] INTERMEDIATE CONCENTRATION CENTER TO WHICH PRISONERS ARE BROUGHT FROM BARBED WIRE ENCLOSURES IMMEDIATELY IN THE REAR OF THE FRONT LINES. AFTER PRELIMINARY REGISTRATION AT THESE INTERMEDIATE CAMPS, THE PRISONERS ARE TAKEN TO INTERIOR CENTERS TO WAIT OUT THE WAR.

CONDITION IN THE [redacted] CAMP ARE NO DOUBT [redacted], ALTHOUGH [redacted] UNDOUBTABLY [redacted] UNCOMFORTABLE CONSIDERING THIS IS WAR. THE CAMP HAS TWO HOSPITALS AND [redacted]

KITCHENS. MOST OF THE MEN ARE QUARTERED IN LARGE WHITE TENTS WHERE THEY SLEEP ON THE STRAW-COVERED GROUND, WITH AN APPARENT PLENTIFUL SUPPLY OF BLANKETS.

THE DUTCH APPEARED TO BE THE MOST DOCILE OF THE LOT; THE BELGIANS AND FRENCH THE MOST HIGH-SPIRITED.

"WHY DID YOU FIGHT," A BELGIAN ARTILLERY OBSERVER NAMED EMILE DE VRIESE WAS ASKED.

MAY 19 1940

"TO PROTECT OUR NEUTRALITY," HE ANSWERED UNHESITATINGLY, FACING THE RING OF FOREIGN AND GERMAN REPORTERS.

"HE WOULD HAVE FOUGHT EITHER AGAINST THE FRENCH OR THE GERMANS, WHICHEVER ATTACKED," DE VRIESE ADDED.

HE WAS CAPTURED AT MARWICK WHEN HIS GROUP THOUGHT THE APPROACHING GERMANS WERE DUTCH COMRADES. THE GERMANS ALREADY HAD REACHED THE MARWICK BRIDGEHEAD, WHERE RESISTANCE WAS IMPOSSIBLE, WHEN THE DUTCH LEARNED THEIR IDENTITY.

A FRENCH SERGEANT [illegible] OF THE 23RD INFANTRY REGIMENT FROM MARSEILLE, WHERE HE WAS A CUSTOMS COLLECTOR, STILL[illegible] DECLINED TO GIVE HIS NAME. HIS OUTFIT LEFT FRANCE ONE DAY. THE GERMANS

LEAD 37TH WEEK OF THE WAR DAY-BY-DAY

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS MAY 19 1940

NINE DAYS OF GERMAN BLITZ WARFARE ON THE WESTERN FRONT CARRIED ADOLF HITLER'S LEGIONS THROUGH THE NETHERLANDS AND LUXEMBOURG, HALFWAY THROUGH BELGIUM AND, AS THE 37TH WEEK OF THE WAR END-ED, FOUND THEM STRIKING AT THE OISE VALLEY IN NORTHERN FRANCE--THE ROAD TO PARIS.

THE WEEK BROUGHT RAPID STRIDES IN THE NAZIS' WESTWARD SWEEP. NIGHTFALL SATURDAY FOUND THE GRAY-GREEN GERMANS AND THEIR HIGHLY MECHANIZED WAR MACHINE 90 MILES FROM PARIS, LOCKED WITH THE ALLIES IN A BATTLE DESCRIBED AS ONE OF HISTORY'S MIGHTIEST.

BY TUESDAY, THE GERMANS HAD FORCED THE SURRENDER OF THE DUTCH ARMY, WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE ISLAND PROVINCE OF ZEELAND.

ON THE SAME DAY ANOTHER NAZI FORCE TOOK SEDAN, HISTORIC SITE OF THE PRUSSIAN VICTORY OVER THE FRENCH IN 1870.

THE FOLLOWING DAY THE INVADERS OCCUPIED ALL IMPORTANT CITIES OF THE NETHERLANDS.

THE NAZI BATTLE FLAG WAS HOISTED OVER BRUSSELS, BELGIUM'S CAPITAL, ON FRIDAY, AND AT THE WEEK'S END THE STRATEGIC CITY OF ANTWERP--A POSSIBLE JUMPING OFF PLACE FOR DIRECT AERIAL ASSAULT UPON ENGLAND--ALSO FELL INTO GERMAN HANDS. MAY 19 1940

THE ALLIED FORCES IN BELGIUM FELL BACK TO POSITIONS WEST OF BRUSSELS, BUT IN FRANCE, GENERAL MAURICE GUSTAVE GAMELIN, ALLIED COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, ORDERED EVERY SOLDIER TO DIE IN HIS PLACE RATHER THAN RETREAT FARTHER.

SOME SLACKENING OF THE TERRIFIC DRIVE OF NAZI MECHANIZED FORCES WAS REPORTED BY THE BRITISH SATURDAY ALTHOUGH THE FIGHTING STILL WAS TERRIFIC AS THE TITANIC STRUGGLE FOR NORTHERN FRANCE, TERMED THE GREATEST BATTLE IN HISTORY, CONTINUED.

ANTWERP - BEHIND THE NEWS. (WITH BERLIN)

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILITARY MEN HAVE RATED ANTWERP AS ONE OF THE STRONGEST FORTIFICATIONS IN EUROPE.

BUT THE GERMANS SAY THEY HAVE CAPTURED IT NOW EVEN MORE QUICKLY THAN THEY DID IN THEIR 1914 DRIVE THROUGH BELGIUM.

BERLIN DECLARED IT FELL SWIFTLY TODAY AFTER THE ALLIED LINE IN BELGIUM HAD TO FALL BACK FROM THE DEFENSE OF BRUSSELS TO PRESERVE CONTACT WITH THE BATTERED AND IMPERILLED ALLIED LINE IN NORTHERN FRANCE.

MAY 19 1940

ITS FALL TO THE GERMANS MAY PROVE FAR MORE COSTLY TO THE ALLIES IN THIS WAR THAN IT DID IN THE LAST.

FIRST, IT WOULD GIVE THE NAZIS A NEW WEDGE ON THE NORTH SEA COAST -- THE CLOSEST THEY HAVE COME YET TO THE CHANNEL PORTS FROM WHICH THEY MIGHT LAUNCH AN AERIAL BLITZKRIEG ON ENGLAND.

SECOND, ANTWERP PROVIDED A STRONG ANCHOR FOR THE ALLIES' NORTHERN FLANK ON THE WESTERN FRONT, AND, THEREFORE, A POSITION OF VITAL IMPORTANCE TO THEIR WHOLE DEFENSE STRUCTURE.

IN THE WORLD WAR, GERMAN ARTILLERY LET LOOSE ON ANTWERP SEPT. 25, 1914, IN THE GERMANS' SECOND BID FOR VICTORY AFTER THE BATTLE OF THE MARNE HAD STOPPED THE FIRST.

THE BELGIAN ARMY BEGAN TO WITHDRAW ON OCT. 5 -- NOT WITHSTANDING THE ARRIVAL OF 2,000 BRITISH SENT BY WINSTON CHURCHILL, THEN FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY -- AND KAISER WILHELM'S LEGIONS MARCHED INTO THE CITY OCT. 9.

UNDATED WAR SITUATION

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RUMBLING TANKS AND ROARING WARPLANES FACED GERMAN ADVANCES TODAY WHICH BULGED DEEP INTO FRANCE, OVERRAN ALL BUT A THIRD OF BELGIUM AND THREATENED TO END HOLLAND'S LAST STAND.

THESE WERE THE GERMAN CLAIMS:

BELGIUM -- ANTWERP, PIVOT OF THE ALLIES NORTHERN FLANK, CAPTURED; BRUSSELS, LOUVAIN AND MALINES OCCUPIED.

FRANCE -- ADVANCED UNITS WITHIN 60 MILES OF PARIS, THE MAIN ARMY WITHIN 100 MILES, DEEPENING THE NAZI BULGE IN NORTHERN FRANCE.

HOLLAND -- 2,000 DUTCH AND FRENCH PRISONERS TAKEN IN ZEELAND, THE ONLY UNSURRENDERED NETHERLANDS PROVINCE; THE DUTCH COMMANDER THERE READY TO CAPITULATE.

MAY 19 1940

THESE DRIVES BUCKLED THE ALLIED LINE PRINCIPALLY AT TWO POINTS, ON THE DYLE RIVER FRONT IN NORTH-CENTRAL BELGIUM AND IN THE "BULGE" REACHING TOWARD PARIS.

FROM THE END OF THE MAIN MAGINOT LINE AT THE LUXEMBOURG-FRENCH FRONTIER, THE FRONT APPARENTLY SWAYED BACK INTO FRANCE AROUND THE TOWNS OF RETHEL, ST.MICHEL AND MAUBEUGE; SWERVED BACK TO THE MEUSE RIVER AT NAMUR, IN BELGIUM, AND STRETCHED ALMOST STRAIGHT NORTH TO THE COAST NEAR ANTWERP.

THE ALLIES' DEFENSE, ALTHOUGH DEEPLY DENTED, WAS NOT BROKEN. THEY ADMITTED THE SITUATION WAS GRAVE BUT DECLARED THAT THE GERMANS WERE PAYING FOR THEIR GAINS WITH TREMENDOUS CASUALTIES.

IN 1935, ANTWERP WAS THE WORLD'S NINTH BUSIEST PORT, HANDLING 19,000,000 TONS OF SHIPPING -- A FIGURE TOPPED IN EUROPE ONLY BY LONDON AND ROTTERDAM.

MAY 19 1940

A CITY OF ABOUT 273,000 POPULATION ON THE RIGHT BANK OF THE SCHELDT ESTUARY, ANTWERP IS BELGIUM'S CHIEF COMMERCIAL CITY AND, ARCHITECTURALLY, ONE OF THE FINEST IN EUROPE.

MOST NOTEWORTHY IS ITS CATHEDRAL OF NOTRE DAME WHICH DATES FROM THE 14TH CENTURY.

SPANIARDS SEIZED ANTWERP, UNTIL THEN A FREE GOVERNMENT, IN 1576. FROM 1794 TO 1814 IT WAS HELD BY THE FRENCH. IN 1815, THE UNION OF BELGIUM AND HOLLAND GAVE IMPETUS TO ITS COMMERCE AND IT HAS CONTINUED TO PROSPER. IT WAS GIVEN TO THE BELGIANS IN 1839.

OTTAWA, MAY 17-(AP)-THE FOREIGN EXCHANGE CONTROL BOARD TODAY ORDERED THAT ALL APPLICATIONS FOR PERMISSION TO EXPORT SECURITIES OR CAPITAL FROM CANADA TO HOLLAND, BELGIUM, LUXEMBOURG, SWITZERLAND AND ITALY BE REFERRED TO THE BOARD FOR APPROVAL.

MAY 19 1940

CANADIAN BANKS AS AGENTS FOR THE BOARD HAVE AUTHORITY TO AUTHORIZE SUCH TRANSACTIONS FOR MOST COUNTRIES, BUT IN THE CASE OF THE FIVE NAMED, THE OFFICIAL BOARD WILL HENCEFORTH PASS ON EACH APPLICATION.

(THIS ORDER WAS VIEWED IN NEW YORK BANKING CIRCLES AS SIMILAR TO THE ACTION TAKEN BY THE U.S.TREASURY TO CONTROL EXPORTS OF CAPITAL TO COUNTRIES INVADED BY GERMANY, AS PROTECTION AGAINST FUNDS FALLING INTO HANDS OF OTHERS THAN THE RIGHTFUL OWNERS.

(INCLUSION OF SWITZERLAND AND ITALY IN THE CANADIAN ORDER, HOWEVER, WAS VIEWED IN WALL STREET AS SIGNIFICANT, POSSIBLY INDICATING FEARS OF INVOLVEMENT OF THOSE COUNTRIES IN THE WAR.)

FORMER YUGOSLAVIAN PREMIER

HELD PRISONER IN SERBIAN

MOUNTAINS

MAY 20 1940

GOVERNMENT TAKES NO CHANCES WITH PRO-NAZI (725)

BY DANIEL DE LUCE

(ADVANCE)..BELGRADE--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)--IN A SLEEPY VILLAGE HIDDEN AWAY IN THE SERBIAN MOUNTAINS, PLAINCLOTHES POLICE WITH AUTOMATICS IN THEIR HIP HOLSTERS STAND GUARD OVER A FORMER PREMIER OF YUGOSLAVIA.

LAST YEAR MILAN STOJADINOVIC--"LUCKY MILAN," HIS FRIENDS CALLED HIM--WAS HEAD OF THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. TODAY HE IS ITS CHIEF POLITICAL PRISONER.

HIS FORTUNE OF 4,000,000 DINARS IS NOT BIG ENOUGH TO BUY HIM A LONG-DISTANCE TELEPHONE CALL TO HIS WIFE AND TWO DAUGHTERS IN BELGRADE.

THE LEGION OF STRAPPING HOUTHS HE ONCE DRILLED AND DRESSED IN BLUE SHIRTS AS HIS PERSONAL MILITIA--J.U.N.O.--HAS LONG SINCE SCATTERED LIKE DRY LEAVES IN A GALE.

HIS ABLEST HENCHMEN, MEN WHO HELD CABINET POSTS DURING HIS FOUR YEARS IN POWER, ARE UNDER HOUSE-ARREST. AND HIS BROTHER, DRAGOMIR, A NEWSPAPER EDITOR WHO SERVED HIS REGIME AS MOUTHPIECE, HAS BEEN JAILED.

THE CONDOLENCES WHICH GERMAN AND ITALIAN LEADERS WROTE HIM WHEN HE LOST THE PREMIERSHIP IN FEBRUARY, 1939, NOW REPOSE IN THE ARCHIVES OF THE SECRET POLICE IN BELGRADE. NO SIMILAR CONDOLENCES REACHED HIM WHEN HE WAS INTERNED THIS APRIL. HE IS NOT ALLOWED TO SEND OR RECEIVE LETTERS.

IN ISOLATED LITTLE RUDNIK, ON ITS MOUNTAINOUS PERCH SOME 70 MILES FROM BELGRADE, MILAN STOJADINOVIC IS SLATED TO PLAY INDEFINITELY THE ROLE OF FORGOTTEN MAN.

THE ACCUSING RUMORS THAT THIS STOCKY, PUGNACIOUS SERB POLITICIAN WAS A POTENTIAL QUISLING OF YUGOSLAVIA--A LIKELY TOOL FOR NAZI INTERVENTION--ARE EXPECTED NEVER TO BE AIRED IN COURT. EVEN IF THERE WERE STRONG EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT THE RUMORS, YUGOSLAVS SAY, IT WOULD BE TOO DANGEROUS TO NATIONAL SECURITY TO INTRODUCE AT A FORMAL TRIAL.

THE GOVERNMENT, REPORTEDLY AFTER A REQUEST BY THE GERMAN LEGATION, ISSUED A COMMUNIQUE DECLARING STOJADINOVIC'S INTERNMENT WAS NOT DUE TO "FOREIGN POLITICAL REASONS" BUT WAS "ONLY AN INTERNAL MATTER TO DEFEND THE SECURITY OF THE STATE." MAY 20 1940

HIS ARREST COINCIDED, HOWEVER, WITH EXPULSION FROM THE COUNTRY OF HUNDREDS OF FOREIGNERS, PRINCIPALLY GERMANS, WHO COULD NOT EXPLAIN THEIR PRESENCE HERE TO THE SATISFACTION OF THE POLICE.

THOSE OF HIS FRIENDS STILL AT LIBERTY HEATEDLY DENOUNCED THE TRAITOROUS CHARGES WHISPERED ABOUT HIM AND AGAINST WHICH HE HAD NO CHANCE TO MAKE A PUBLIC DEFENSE.

YUGOSLAV POLITICS, THEY POINTED OUT, HAVE ALWAYS BEEN TURBULENT AND IT IS AN ACCEPTED FACT THAT THE "OUTS" MUST SPEAK SOFTLY OR RISK PROSECUTION BY THE "INS." PREMIER DRAGISA CVETKOVIC WAS ONCE ARRESTED WHEN HE WAS IN OPPOSITION. VICE-PREMIER VLADIMIR MACEK ONCE SERVED TWO YEARS IN JAIL ON A POLITICAL CHARGE.

ACCORDING TO HIS FRIENDS, STOJADINOVIC WAS PUT OUT OF THE WAY SIMPLY BECAUSE HE WAS TRYING TO MAKE A COMEBACK--AT CVETKOVIC'S ULTIMATE EXPENSE.

BUT THE GOVERNMENT CRACKED DOWN ON STOJADINOVIC AND SUSPICIOUS FOREIGNERS AT THE VERY MOMENT SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE WAS MOST ALARMED THAT GERMANY'S LIGHTNING PLUNGE INTO SCANDINAVIA MIGHT BE DUPLICATED IN THIS DIRECTION. IN THE PUBLIC MIND, THESE THINGS WERE LINKED TOGETHER OMINOUSLY.

STOJADINOVIC, WHILE PREMIER, HAD BEEN EXCEEDINGLY FRIENDLY WITH GERMAN NAZIS. HE WAS SAID TO HAVE KEPT UP THESE CORDIAL CONTACTS AFTER HIS RETIREMENT TO RELATIVE OBSCURITY. HIS ENEMIES DESCRIBED HIM AS HUNGRY FOR POWER AGAIN, WILLING TO MAKE BARGAINS WITH THOSE WHO MIGHT HELP HIM ACHIEVE IT. MAY 20 1940

ONE DEFINITE ALLEGATION MADE BY OFFICIALS WAS THAT STOJADINOVIC HAD CIRCULATED ANONYMOUS LEAFLETS ATTACKING NOT ONLY THE CVETKOVIC REGIME BUT REGENT PRINCE PAUL (PAVAO) AND THE AUTHORITY OF THE THRONE. GOVERNMENTS COME AND GO, BUT THE MONARCHY REMAINS. STOJADINOVIC APPARENTLY HAD TRESPASSED SACROSANCT TERRITORY.

AT THE TIME OF HIS ARREST, WHATEVER HIS POTENTIALITIES, STOJADINOVIC HAD NO BIG POLITICAL FOLLOWING. HE HAD STARTED A NEW SERBIAN RADICAL PARTY A FEW MONTHS EARLIER, BUT COMPETENT OBSERVERS SAY IT WOULD HAVE POLLED SCARCELY 3,000 OR 4,000 VOTES AT A GENERAL ELECTION.

HE HAD MONEY OF HIS OWN AND HE USED IT FREELY IN ORGANIZING A POLITICAL MACHINE. THERE ARE SEVERAL SERB OPPOSITION PARTIES.

30.24-2371

SINCE THE SUPPRESSION OF STOJADINOVIC'S, CVETKOVIC HAS TRIED TO INDUCE LEADERS OF THE OTHERS TO JOIN A CABINET OF NATIONAL CONCENTRATION.

THE DOWNFALL OF THE BURLY, HARD-HITTING EX-PREMIER IS ASCRIBED IN BELGRADE CIRCLES TO POOR JUDGMENT MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE. IT IS SAID THAT STOJADINOVIC REACHED THE TOP ONLY BECAUSE HE WAS PRINCE PAUL'S CHOICE. DURING HIS FOUR YEARS IN OFFICE HE CAME TO REGARD HIMSELF AS A "STRONG MAN" IN HIS OWN RIGHT. HE WAS ASTOUNDED WHEN PRINCE PAUL REPLACED HIM WITH CVETKOVIC AS A BETTER NEGOTIATOR TO APPEASE MACEK'S CROATIAN AUTONOMISTS.

MAY 20 1940

DISGRUNTLED AND STILL AMBITIOUS, STOJADINOVIC WAS A NUISANCE IF NOT A DANGER TO THE GOVERNMENT.

WITH "QUISLINGISM" FEARED AS A DISEASE LIABLE TO SPREAD TO THE BALKANS, THE GOVERNMENT ACTED. STOJADINOVIC WAS DISPATCHED TO THE MOUNTAINS UNDER ARMED GUARD.

ISOLATED AND POWERLESS, THE FORMER PREMIER GETS LITTLE SYMPATHY FROM MANY YUGOSLAVS. THEY SAY INTERNMENT AT RUDNIK IS NOT SO BAD A FATE. THE MOUNTAIN AIR IS VERY HEALTHY.

RUMANIA TAKES A DIPLOMATIC GAMBLE

ON OIL AND WHEAT AGREEMENTS

WITH GERMANY

AMOUNTS PROMISED NOT IN SIGHT

TO RELIEVE THEM OF SITUATION;

REPEAT AN OLD LEGEND (650)

MAY 20 1940

BY ROBERT ST. JOHN

(ADVANCE)..BUCHAREST--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)- RUMANIAN DIPLOMATS ARE GAMBLING TODAY AS THEY HAVE NEVER GAMBLED BEFORE.

THEY ARE GAMBLING, FOR EXAMPLE, THAT THE BRITISH WILL NOT MAKE ANY SERIOUS ATTEMPT TO PUT A TIGHT PLUG INTO THE RUMANIAN LEAK IN THEIR ECONOMIC BLOCKADE OF GERMANY.

THEY ARE GAMBLING, TOO, THAT SOMETHING WILL SAVE THEM FROM HAVING TO GIVE GERMANY ALL THE OIL THEY HAVE PROMISED HER THIS YEAR.

THEY ARE LIKEWISE GAMBLING THAT THEY WILL NEVER HAVE TO LIVE UP TO THE WHEAT CONTRACTS THEY HAVE RECENTLY SIGNED WITH DR.KARL CLODIUS, HITLER'S ECONOMIC ENVOY.

THEY KNOW THAT IF THE BRITISH GET SERIOUS ABOUT SHUTTING THE REICH OFF FROM ALL RUMANIAN GOODS, THE GERMAN ARMY MAY ATTEMPT TO MARCH IN SOME DAY AND TAKE OVER THE WHOLE COUNTRY, LOCK, STOCK AND BARREL.

THEY KNOW THAT THE ONLY WAY THEY CAN GET THE 1,600,000 TONS OF PETROLEUM THEY HAVE PROMISED GERMANY THIS YEAR WOULD BE TO SEIZE THE FRENCH AND BRITISH OIL WELLS.

THEY KNOW THAT IF THE WHEAT CROP TURNS OUT TO BE AS SCANT AS ESTIMATES NOW INDICATE, RUMANIA WOULD HAVE TO STARVE HERSELF IN ORDER

TO LIVE UP TO THE RECENTLY-MADE CONTRACTS WITH GERMANY.

BUT THE RUMANIANS ARE A GAMBLING PEOPLE. THEY BOAST THAT THEY LOVE TO "TAKE A CHANCE"--ON ANYTHING FROM THE TURN OF A CARD AND A HORSE RACE, TO LONG-SHOT DIPLOMACY.

"GAMBLING IS OUR NATIONAL VICE," A PROMINENT RUMANIAN SAID THE OTHER DAY, "BUT THIS TIME IT MAY BE OUR NATIONAL SALVATION."

SINCE THE WAR BEGAN, ALL RUMANIAN DIPLOMACY HAS BEEN BASED ON AN ANCIENT NATIVE FABLE ABOUT A RUMANIAN, WHO, IN THE DAYS OF TURKISH OCCUPATION, WAS CONDEMNED TO DEATH BY THE SULTAN.

AS THE DAY OF HIS RENDEZVOUS WITH THE EXECUTIONER APPROACHED, THE JAILER NOTICED THAT HE WAS TAKING GREAT INTEREST IN A MONKEY IN THE PRISON GARDENS, AND INQUIRED THE REASON.

"IF I HAD A YEAR MORE TO LIVE," THE PRISONER BOASTED, "I COULD TEACH THAT MONKEY TO TALK."

MAY 20 1940

THE JAILER RUSHED OFF TO THE SULTAN WITH THE STORY, AND THE SULTAN, AFTER HEARING THE RUMANIAN REPEAT HIS BOAST, AGREED TO GIVE HIM A YEAR'S REPRIEVE ON THIS CONDITION:

"IF AT THE END OF ONE YEAR THE MONKEY IS NOT ABLE TO TALK, YOU SHALL NOT ONLY BE KILLED, BUT HORRIBLY TORTURED FIRST."

THE RUMANIAN WENT OFF SMILING WITH CONFIDENCE.

LATER, A FRIEND WHO HEARD OF THE BARGAIN ASKED HIM IN AMAZEMENT:

"ARE YOU CRAZY, GRIGORE? YOU KNOW YOU CAN'T TEACH A MONKEY TO TALK. WHY DID YOU MAKE SUCH A CRAZY AGREEMENT? IN ONE YEAR YOU WILL MOST SURELY BE TORTURED."

TO WHICH THE REPRIEVED MAN REPLIED GAYLY:

"LOOK. I FIGURED IT OUT THIS WAY. THREE THINGS MAY HAPPEN WITHIN A YEAR TO SAVE ME. EITHER THE MONKEY WILL DIE, OR THE SULTAN WILL DIE OR I WILL DIE. NOW DO YOU SEE?"

THAT IS HOW THEY EXPLAIN RUMANIAN DIPLOMACY THESE DAYS. IT IS ALL A GAMBLE THAT SOMETHING MAY HAPPEN TO SAVE THE COUNTRY FROM WHAT LOOKS TO MANY COOL OBSERVERS LIKE ULTIMATE WAR.

TAKE THE OIL SITUATION AS AN EXAMPLE.

THIS YEAR'S PRODUCTION IS NOT EXPECTED TO EXCEED 400,000 TONS A MONTH -- AND SOME EXPERTS EVEN ESTIMATE THE TOTAL AT MUCH LESS.

OF THIS AMOUNT 80,000 TONS A MONTH MUST BE SET ASIDE FOR DOMESTIC CONSUMPTION--AN AMOUNT WHICH MAY HAVE TO BE GREATLY INCREASED IF "EMERGENCIES" RAISE THE ARMY'S NEEDS.

THAT LEAVES ONLY 320,000 TONS FOR EXPORT. ALL BUT 96,000 TONS OF THIS PRODUCTION IS CONTROLLED BY FRENCH AND BRITISH COMPANIES, WHO HAVE FLATLY REFUSED TO MAKE ANY DIRECT SHIPMENTS TO GERMANY.

THE RUMANIAN OIL COMMISSAR RECENTLY HIT ON AN IDEA OF COLLECTING ROYALTIES FROM FOREIGN-OWNED COMPANIES IN OIL INSTEAD OF IN CASH. THIS WILL GIVE THE GOVERNMENT 24,000 TONS A MONTH, WHICH, ADDED TO THE 96,000 TONS, CONTROLLED BY NONE-ALLIED COMPANIES, MAKES 120,000 TONS A MONTH.

MAY 20 1940

OUT OF THIS TOTAL TENS OF THOUSANDS OF TONS A MONTH MUST BE SHIPPED TO SUCH COUNTRIES AS ITALY, YUGOSLAVIA, TURKEY AND GREECE, IN ORDER TO FULFILL OLD CONTRACTS, IN ORDER TO PAY FOR WAR MATERIAL AND OTHER VITAL IMPORTS, AND IN ORDER TO KEEP RUMANIA'S FOREIGN TRADE RUNNING NORMALLY.

AND YET RUMANIA HAS PROMISED TO SHIP 130,000 TONS A MONTH TO GERMANY: TEN THOUSAND TONS A MONTH MORE THAN IS AVAILABLE FOR THE FULFILLING OF ALL CONTRACTS.

TO MEET THIS PROBLEM FOR A FEW MONTHS, THE OIL COMMISSAR

30.24-2373

HAS DECIDED TO MAKE THE ORDER ABOUT THE PAYMENT OF ROYALTIES IN OIL INSTEAD OF CASH RETROACTIVE TO OCTOBER 1, 1939.

THIS WILL GIVE THE GOVERNMENT ABOUT 350,000 TONS--ENOUGH TO MAKE UP THE EXPORT DEFICIT FOR A FEW MONTHS AND ALLOW THE GOVERNMENT TO LIVE UP TO ALL ITS PROMISES UNTIL ABOUT MID-SUMMER.

AND THEN WHAT?

WHEN THAT PROBLEM IS POSED, RUMANIANS WINK AND TELL AGAIN THE STORY OF THE SULTAN AND THE MAN WHO PROMISED TO TEACH THE MONKEY TO TALK.

Paris Reports Germans Pounding At Gates Of St. Quentin—"Confused And Hot" Battle Raging In Oise-Sambre Sector

MAY 20 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, May 20—The British general headquarters reported this morning on Sunday operations in Belgium that "the British front was held today successfully in the face of enemy pressure."

The communique was in almost the same words as those reporting the action of Saturday.

[By the Associated Press]

MAY 20 1940

Paris, May 19—France tonight named an adopted son, Gen. Maxime Weygand, generalissimo of the Allied armies in place of Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin and called upon him to halt the German Blitzkrieg, which an official spokesman described as the "greatest offensive of modern warfare."

General Weygand, who is 73, was given command of Allied forces in "all theaters of operations" as German light units pounded at the gates of the textile manufacturing city of St. Quentin, eighty miles north of Paris.

Taken From Near East Post

Weygand was taken from his post as commander of the French forces in the Near East just a day after Premier Reynaud put the World War hero of Verdun, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, in his Government as Vice-Premier.

A communique announcing the change said General Weygand was named "chief of the national defense general staff and commander in chief of all theaters of operations."

The appointment resulted from two conferences held with Premier Reynaud in the Premier's office.

Weygand Bounds Up Steps

The first began at 2.30 P. M., with Marshal Petain and the Premier. The second opened at 6.30 P. M., when General Weygand alighted from an official automobile and bounded up the steps two at a time.

An hour later the three men emerged from Reynaud's office, chatted cordially on the porch for a minute and then drove away.

The fight on the outskirts of St. Quentin was one phase of a German push which the French expected to tell within twenty-four hours whether the Nazis would drive on toward the Channel ports or turn southward down the Oise river valley toward Paris.

MAY 20 1940

Fierce Battle Raging

In the St. Quentin sector the Germans hurled a motorized army corps, estimated at about 60,000 men at least, into a fierce battle between Guise and Landrecies. The French high command reported tonight that its troops "are opposing stubborn resistance to the enemy" in that area.

The high command said Allied fighters and anti-aircraft guns had inflicted heavy losses during attempted bombing raids.

With Germany hitting the Allied armies harder since dawn, a War Office spokesman told of fighting on the edge of St. Quentin and said larger groups of the belligerents were battling "in the woods outside of town."

"Confused And Hot"

"Confused and hot," was the way military spokesmen described the battle from the Oise Canal to the Sambre river.

German tanks, aviation and artillery were declared joining in "unceasing attacks," although the latest reports from the front at 6 P. M. said the French troops had stopped the Nazi advance at St. Quentin at least temporarily.

However, the battle was admitted to be "up and down" with the advantage seesawing.

The military spokesman said the situation farther north, in the region of Landrecies, was even "more confused."

Severe combats are continuing in the woods and forests where in several unidentified places French troops have launched attacks with success, it was claimed.

Reports filtered through slowly from the Maubeuge region where the French fort still holding out against the German offensive dates from the World War.

The military spokesman declared the "general situation" had not changed. He added that it still was not determined in what direction the Nazis would drive—whether toward the coast or upon Paris—from positions on the Oise river, which flows between Guise and St. Quentin.

Positions Recaptured

French counter-attacks in the Maubeuge region, fifteen miles north of Landrecies and within ten miles of the French-Belgian border, resulted in recapture of a number of positions the military commentator said.

In Belgium, he added, the withdrawal of British and Belgian troops was "progressing satisfactorily." The Allied forces in Belgium were said to be dropping back in a maneuver to keep the battle line straight.

At the southern extremity of the German thrust into France, the French held their positions and recaptured several villages near Rethel in counter-attacks.

Pocket 80 Miles Wide

The German pocket in France now is about eighty miles wide at its greatest width and varies in depth between thirty and fifty miles. Its deepest penetration is about seventy-five miles from Paris.

MAY 20 1940

The latest German advance was northwest of Laon, which is eighty-six miles north of Paris and about twenty-five miles from St. Quentin. The Germans had cut to the canal paralleling the Oise river nine miles east of St. Quentin and later joining the Oise to the Sambre river.

Slightly farther north between Guise and Landrecies, where the Germans are attacking with massed tanks supported by hundreds of planes and a great quantity of artillery, the battle started again with daylight after waxing furious all through yesterday.

Between Guise and Landrecies the Germans are following the usual plan of hurling large bodies of infantry forward through paths cleared by tanks. After forcing a hole in the defense lines the tanks whip around and attack the French from the rear. The French War Ministry spokesman said this strategy was decreasing in value because the French had now had experience in dealing with it. He said the German progress was much slower than when these tactics were first loosed on the French a few days ago.

The Allied forces in Belgium, the War Ministry spokesman said, were falling back in a strategic movement to keep the line straight. Should the Germans pierce to the sea west of St. Quentin, they would cut off the French British and Belgian forces in the north from the main French armies, or force them to abandon Belgium. However, the French expressed confidence that the drive could be checked.

Maginot Line Calm

On the main Maginot Line from the Swiss border all the way to Montmedy, just below Belgium's tip, there was only light fighting today. No change of importance has taken place in that area since the beginning of the Low-Country blitzkrieg.

From Sedan southwestward to Rethel, a number of sharp clashes occurred during the last twenty-four hours.

Meanwhile, in Paris, most Americans who could do so and who had remained in the capital through the first part of the war have gone during the last few days to southern France.

Bullitt Visits Daladier

Edouard Daladier's first visitor after taking over his new post as Foreign Minister this morning was William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador.

A communique announcing tonight's change said Gen. Weygand had been named "chief of the National Defense General Staff and commander-in-chief of all theaters of operations." It failed to mention what post Gen. Gamelin would take.

The replacing of the veteran French General had bee nexpected for days. Paris evening papers all published pictures of Gen. Weygand without captions.

The communique announcing the change said:

"The President of the Republic signed this evening a decree by which Gen. Maxime Weygand was named chief of the National Defense General Staff and commander-in-chief of all theaters of operations. "This appointment resulted from the conference which brought together Premier Reynaud, Gen. Petain and Gen. Weygand and which lasted one hour."

A huge crowd attended special prayers for an Allied victory at the Notre Dame Cathedral.

General Weygand Known As "Foch's Shadow"

General Weygand was a close associate of the late Marshal Ferdinand Foch in the World War and was trusted so completely by Foch that he became known as "Marshal Foch's shadow."

MAY 20 1940

"See Weygand about this" was a byword at the French general headquarters in World War days, so frequently did Foch use the expression.

"Activity, vigilance and decision" were the qualities ascribed to Weygand when, in 1918, he was made a commander of the French Legion of Honor.

He was born in Brussels, Belgium, January 21, 1867, and became a French citizen when he was 20. He had received French military instruction earlier as "a student of foreign nationality."

Joined Army In 1888

In 1888 he joined the French army as a lieutenant of cavalry. By 1896 he was a captain. In 1912 he was advanced to lieutenant colonel and at the start of the World War to colonel. He was assigned to the general staff and became chief of staff of one of the armies. In 1916 he became chief of staff of the armies under Foch.

The two were inseparable thereafter.

Gamelin, predecessor of Weygand as Allied chief in the present war, was a favorite of another French hero of the World War—Joffre. Gamelin is five years younger than Weygand.

Weygand's Ability Cited

The French Government's regard for Weygand's military ability was so great even in 1918, when Ludendorf was leading the German forces against the British front and toward the channel ports, that Premier Clemenceau ordered Foch to designate him as the French representative at a military council of Allied generals considering the emergency.

Later, when the Russians were hammering at the gates of Warsaw, Josef Pilsudski, the Polish marshal, wired the French War Office, "Send us Foch or we perish."

Foch told the French Minister of War:

"Send them Weygand. He will do just as well as I would."

Criticized Strategy

When General Weygand reached Warsaw he found Polish strategy not to his liking. Assembling Polish generals he began lecturing and demonstrating to them on maps what he wanted done. He ordered:

"Place a battalion here; install a battery of 75s there; protect this crossing of the Vistula; blow up this bridge Then we will stop them."

As his lecture proceeded he talked louder and finally was shouting Finally it was said that Pilsudski remarked irately:

"Remember you are speaking to a marshal of Poland. There is only one man in the world from whom I wouldn't resent this talk. He is Marshal Foch."

Weygand replied:

"Marshal Foch never scorned the advice of his staff officers. He invited it. That was what made him a great captain."

"Proceed," said Pilsudski.

In five days the Russians had been driven back.

Tell of Storming Maginot Fort

BERLIN, May 19 (AP).—Fort No. 505 in the Maginot Line, which the German high command said had been captured, was described today by D. N. B., official German news agency, as one of France's strongest and indicated that it was taken by storm.

Attacking Germans threw their full force at the fort despite heavy defense fire, D. N. B. said, in contrast to the sudden German capture of Fort Eben Emael in Belgium by use of a new, secret wapon.

Allied losses also have been heavy, D. N. B. said, particularly because of German air and tank attacks on retreating columns. On the other hand, it reported, German losses during the lightning advance had been "relatively small."

In contrast to the World War when, in the same area, positions were open and fought over for weeks, the agency explained, in this war even the most formidable obstacles simply are being overrun. It admitted, however, that heavier losses might have been necessary at certain isolated points.

Paris was still sixty miles beyond the deepest Nazi penetration.

One enemy warplane was shot down during an Allied raid on Saturday night on Hamburg, D. N. B. reported. No damage was done, there were no injuries, and the the raiders were chased away, it said. (The British reported bombing German oil storage tanks at Hanover, Hamburg and Bremen.)

Military sources, in a partial summary of how the Allies were alleged to have lost 147 planes, said twenty French Morane pursuit craft were shot down "by turns" in an air battle with German Messerschmitts near Tournai yesterday. German losses in this fight were put at six. In another air combat twelve enemy planes were sent crashing to earth.

At a French airport at Vitry-en-Artois, the report said, German bombers surprised a great number of French planes tanking up, and at lease fifty were destroyed, it was declared. At another airfield sixteen French planes were reported destroyed.

Claim Twenty Tanks Destroyed

Twenty Allied tanks were destroyed when the Germans turned anti-aircraft artillery on them at point blank to beat off an armored car attack southwest of Brussels on Saturday night, D. N. B. declared.

Berlin Minimizes Damage

BERLIN, May 19 (AP)—D. N. B., official German news agency, said that an enemy air raid over Bremen at 1 A. M. today resulted in serious injury to two persons, destruction of one house and damaging of another.

Anti-aircraft fire then drove off the raiders, D. N. B. said.

This was the second successive night of air raids at Bremen and the vicinity of Hamburg in northern Germany.

Reich Gains 348 Square Miles

BERLIN, May 19 (AP).—The re-incorporation into the Reich of Eupen, Malmedy and Moresnet, as announced by Fuehrer Adolf Hitler today, adds 348 square miles and a population of about 64,000 to the German nation. Five-sixths of the population is German.

Eupen and Malmedy are east of Liege and the Meuse (Maas) River below the German frontier city of Aachen (Aix la Chapelle) near the Rhine, and constituted part of the Belgian province of Liege. Moresnet is north of Eupen. Eupen and Malmedy were assigned to Belgium by the League of Nations, March 6, 1925.

Hitler's decree of incorporation, dated May 18, said:

"The territories separated by the Versailles dictate from the German Reich and incorporated in Belgium again are in German possession.

"Inwardly, they always have remained bound to Germany. They therefore should not be temporarily regarded and treated as an occupied enemy land.

"I therefore now decree:

"First, the territories of Eupen, Malmedy and Moresnet, cut off from the German Reich by the Versailles dictate, are again part of the German Reich;

"Second, the referred to territories will be attached to the Rhine Province (governing the district of Aachen);

"Third, I reserve to myself directions for carrying out this decree."

Arthur Seyss-Inquart, the Netherlands' commissioner, will be responsible directly to Hitler and will have supreme authority in the civil administration. He was authorized to carry out his administration with the aid of Dutch authorities. It was said that law existing in the Netherlands would remain in force in so far as it was compatible with the occupation.

Military and sovereign rights will be exercised in Holland by the German army commander there, who will have the right to prescribe measures necessary for military operations and security.

MAY 20 1940

Hitler appointed Arthur Seyss-Inquart, who had been Deputy Governor of German-occupied Poland, as Reich's commissioner for the Netherlands.

MAY 20 1940

The purpose of the appointment of Seyss-Inquart, who was chancellor of independent Austria and became its nazi governor after the anchluss in March, 1938, it was announced officially, was to "safeguard public order and public life."

ENGLAND'S TURN TO FACE NAZI WAR MACHINE NEXT, PRIME MINISTER ASSERTS

"Battle For Our Island" Will Follow Abatement Of Fighting In France, Premier Predicts, Stressing "Imperious Need For Vital Munitions"

MAY 20 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 19—Intermittent gunfire and occasional heavy explosions were heard tonight as German aircraft again appeared off the southeast coast of England.

Heavy gunfire also was heard from across the Channel and shells could be seen bursting in the sky.

MAY 20 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 19 (By Radio)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the nation tonight that German and Allied forces were fighting behind each other's lines on the Western front.

Thus he described both sides as in "an extremely dangerous position," but predicted "stabilization" of the front "which will enable the qualities of the French and British soldiers to be matched squarely against those of their adversaries."

In a ten-minute radio address, rebroadcast in America, Churchill declared that "mastery can only be regained by a furious and unrelenting assault."

Predicts War On British Isles

"It would be foolish to disguise the gravity of the hour," he said, predicting the war would turn to the British Isles after fighting abates in France. Britain, he added, is ready to face the coming ordeal.

"For myself," he said, "I have invincible confidence in the French army and its leaders. Only a very small part of that splendid army has yet been heavily engaged. . . .

"There is good evidence to show that practically the whole of the specialized and mechanized forces of the enemy have already been thrown into the balance, and we know that very heavy losses have been inflicted upon them."

Stresses Need For Munitions

Making his first address to the nation as Prime Minister, the former First Lord of the Admiralty, speaking quietly and deliberately, stressed the "imperious need for vital munitions."

He warned that when "the battle for our island" comes, the people will be called upon to exert "the last ounce and the last inch of effort of which they are capable," adding that "the interests of property, the hours of labor are nothing compared to the struggle for . . . right and freedom to which we have bound ourselves."

Text Of Churchill Address

The text of his speech follows:

"I speak to you for the first time since becoming Prime Minister in a solemn hour in the life of our country, of our empire, of our Allies, and, above all, of the cause of freedom.

"A tremendous battle is raging in France and Flanders. The Germans, by a remarkable combination of their bombing and heavily armored tanks, have broken through the French defenses north of the Maginot Line and strong columns of their armored vehicles are ranging the open country, which for the first day or two was without defenders.

"They have penetrated deeply and spread alarm and confusion in their tracks. Behind them are now appearing infantry in lorries and behind them again the large masses are moving forward.

"The regroupment of the French armies to make headway against, and also to strike at this intruding wedge, has been proceeding for several days, largely assisted by the magnificent efforts of the Royal Air Force."

Both In Dangerous Position

"We must not allow ourselves to be intimidated by the presence of these armored vehicles in unexpected places behind our lines. If they are behind our front the French are also at many points fighting actively behind theirs.

"Both sides are, therefore, in an extremely dangerous position; and if the French army, and our own army, are well handled, as I believe they will be, and if the French retain that genius in recovery and counter-attack, for which they have so long been famous; and if the British army shows the dogged endurance and solid fighting power of which there have been so many examples in the past, then a sudden transformation of the scene might spring into being.

MAY 20 1940

"But it would be foolish, however, to disguise the gravity of the hour. It would be still more foolish to lose heart and courage or to suppose that well-trained, well-equipped armies numbering three or four millions of men can be overcome in the space of a few weeks, or even months, by a swoop, or raid, or mechanized vehicles, however formidable.

Confidence In The French

"We will look with confidence to the stabilization of the front in France, and to the general engagement of the Nazis, which will enable the qualities of the French and British soldiers to be matched squarely against those of their adversaries.

"For myself, I have invincible confidence in the French army and its leaders. Only a very small part of that splendid army have yet been heavily engaged, and only a very small part of France has yet been invaded. There is good evidence to show that practically the whole of the specialized and mechanized forces of the enemy have already been thrown into the battle, and we know that very heavy losses have been inflicted upon them.

"No officer or man, no brigade or division, which grapples at close quarters with the enemy wherever encountered, can fail to make a worthy contribution to the general result. The armies must cast away idea of resisting attack behind concrete lines or natural obstacles, and must realize that mastery can only be regained by furious and unrelenting assault! And this spirit must not only animate the high command, but must inspire every fighting man.

Three Or Four To One In Air

"In the air, often at serious odds, often at odds hitherto thought overwhelming, we have been clawing down three or four to one of our enemies. And the relative balance of the British and German air forces is now considerably more favorable to us than at the beginning of the battle. battle.

"In cutting down the German balance we are fighting our own battle, as well as that of France. My confidence in our ability to fight it out to the finish with the German air force has been strengthened by the fierce encounters which have taken place and are taking place.

At the same time our heavy bombers are striking nightly at the tap root of German mechanized power, and already inflicted horrible damage upon the oil refineries upon which the Nazi efforts to dominate the world directly depend.

England's Ordeal Imminent

"We must expect that soon as stability is reached on the Western front, the bulk of that hideous apparatus of aggression which dashed Holland into ruin and slavery will be turned upon us. I am sure I speak for all men when I say: We are ready to face it, to endure it, and to retaliate against it to any extent that the unwritten law of the war permits.

"There will be many men and many women in this island who, when the ordeal comes upon them, as come it will, will feel comfort and even a pride that they are sharing the perils of our lads at the front—soldiers, sailors and airmen, God bless them—and are drawing away from them a part, at least, of the onslaught they have to bear. Is not this appointed task for all to make the utmost exertions in their power?

Stresses Need For Arms

"If the battle is to be won we must provide our men with ever-increasing quantities of the weapons and ammunition they need. We must have and have quickly more airplanes, more tanks, more shells, more guns. There is imperious need for these vital munitions. They increase our strength against the powerfully armed enemy. They replace the wastage of the obstinate struggle and the knowledge that wastage will speedily be replaced enables us to draw more readily upon our reserves and throw them in now that everything counts so much.

"Our task is not only to win the battle but to win the war. After this battle in France abates its force, there will come the battle for our island, for all that Britain is, and all that Britain means. That will be the struggle.

"In that supreme emergency we shall not hesitate to take every step, even the most drastic to call forth from our people the last ounce and the last inch of effort of which they are capable. The interests of property, the hours of labor are nothing compared to the struggle for life and honor, for right and freedom to which we have bound ourselves.

Pledged To Fight To End

"I received from the chief of the French republic and in particular from its indomitable Prime Minister, M. Reynaud, the most sacred pledges that whatever happens they will fight to the end, be it bitter or be it glorious; nay, if we fight to the end it can only be glorious.

"Having received his Majesty's commission I have formed an administration of men and women of every party and of almost every point of view. We have differed and quarreled in the past, but now one bond unites us all, to wage war until victory is won and never to surrender ourselves to servitude and shame, whatever the cost and the agony may be. And if this is one of the most awe-striking periods in the long history of France and Britain it is also beyond doubt the most sublime.

To Rescue Of All Mankind

"Side by side, unaided except by their bonds in the great dominions and by the wide empires which rest beneath their shield, side by side the British and French peoples have advanced to rescue not only Europe, but mankind from the foulest and most soul-destroying tyranny which has ever darkened and stained the pages of history.

"Behind them, behind us, behind the armies and fleets of Britain and France gather a group of shattered states and bludgeoned great races—the Czechs, the Poles, the Norwegians, the Danes, the Dutch, the Belgians—upon all of whom the long night of barbarism will descend unbroken even by a star of hope unless we conquer, as conquer we must, as conquer we shall.

"Today is Trinity Sunday. Centuries ago words were written to be a call and a spur to the faithful servants of truth and justice.

"'Arm yourselves and be ye men of valor and be in readiness for the conflict for it is better for us to perish in battle than to look upon the outrage of our nation and our altars, as the will of God in His heaven. Even so let Him do.'"

Growing Task of Servicing Tanks Expected to Hamper Nazi Advance

Need to Bring Up Motor Fuel to Extended Lines Looms as Crucial Problem—Shock Also Is Wearing Off

MAY 20 1940

PARIS, May 19 (AP)—Belief that the extension of lines necessary to supply gasoline to the Nazi blitzkrieg machinery as it plunges deeper into France will slow it down automatically was expressed today by French military men. They also place reliance on the increasing experience of the French troops in dealing with German methods.

To get a true picture of the fighting, French troops must be visualized in hastily built individual trenches, perhaps only a yard deep, or crouched behind stones and hidden in clumps of bushes. They are not, in the present fighting sector, behind long-prepared ramparts.

Forced into open warfare by the rapidity and unforeseen nature of the German advance, French units had to make preliminary resistance in country they had just begun to fortify. Their line of more or less isolated posts, linked only by the crossing of their machine-gun and rifle fire, was attacked first by dive bombers and then machine-gunned.

Drive Without Warning

Against narrow sections of this line, the Germans sent wave after wave of bombers, which opened the action in the early morning so that the sun at their backs would blind defenders until the planes were on them.

The new-type German bomber is a twin-engined Junkers 88, which can dive from 4,000 feet almost straight down to fifty feet at 400 miles an hour. The first warning that a sector chosen by the Germans was under attack came when 300 to 400 bombers dived in successive formations of threes, striking at French positions almost literally from just overhead.

The planes attacked in one wave after the other, aiming with uncanny accuracy at the nests dug out by the French soldiers. By the time the third or fourth wave had dived with its load of bombs, the first wave had wheeled and dived again to spray the line with machine-gun fire.

This writer has been in sectors dive-bombed and then machine-gunned in the Blitzkrieg on the Northern Front and has observed the effect. The first several times it is demoralizing. After that one becomes more or less hardened. That is naturally what the unexpectedness of the German attack did to the French soldier. Now that the first shock is over, he is holding more firm.

Tanks Advance Side by Side

After the planes came the famed Panzer divisions of tanks attacking in line almost side by side. These armored divisions are formed of 300 to 400 heavy tanks. They swept over what was left of the French lines, spurting flame 100 yards ahead and raking the ground with fire from automatic weapons.

As the tanks rumbled through, they wheeled and struck the neighboring section of the line from the rear. If it could have been seen from above, the track they made would have looked like an in-and-out curve.

Behind the tanks, Nazi light infantry divisions poured into the holes, rushed up in scout cars and armored trucks to take over and organize the ground, while the planes and tanks went on to strike at ever-widening sides of the pocket.

Through the holes made in the French lines, squads of specially trained shock troops raced on motorcycles, mounted with machine guns, to dash up and down the highways, firing on the re-forming French troops until they were captured.

Some Attacks Smashed

So hard was the initial shock that the French troops were pulled back [here six lines were censored]. The Germans, however, did not have it all their way, even in the initial attack. Where they tried to break through without preliminary bombing, the drive was smashed in many sectors.

One German tank attack that was broken earlier in the week was made against a long, narrow, wooded crest just outside the little Belgian town of Gembloux, fifteen miles north of Namur.

A fleet of thirty German tanks that had been concealed in an opposite forest suddenly started moving across in two waves of fifteen each to attack the French position protected by France's new 47-millimeter anti-tank guns and a battery of famed 75's.

The 75's, firing at point-blank range, knocked out eighteen tanks. Anti-tank shells blasted two others apart. Then a line of French tanks rolled out to meet the remaining ten in the wave, forcing them to turn and run, leaving the French position safe.

Berlin Says Scouts Saw Enemy Cruiser Aground

Reports Heavy Craft Stranded Off Northern Norway—Claims Transport Wrecked

Berlin, May 19 (AP)—The official German news agency reported today that Nazi air scouts sighted a heavy enemy cruiser stranded off Bodo, Northern Norway.

The cruiser was listing heavily and was guarded by enemy planes and one destroyer, DNB said.

The wreckage of a transport of 25,000 tons or more was discovered today off the Netherlands port of Flushing, DNB said. The ship apparently had been broken in the middle, hit by a mine.

'Inferno' Toll Put at 100,000 In Bomb-Wrecked Rotterdam

MAY 20 1940

LONDON, May 19 (AP)—At least 100,000 people were killed and a third of Rotterdam was destroyed when the Germans bombed that Netherlands seaport before its surrender, a Dutch Legation communique from Paris, as quoted by British news agency dispatches, said today.

Two squadrons of German bombers, dropping delayed-action bombs, flew over Rotterdam in close formation, the communique said, dropping a deadly cargo of heavy bombs that "plowed a veritable furrow of destruction." Scenes reminiscent of Dante's "Inferno" ensued, with fires and explosions "everywhere," the communique related.

Bombing operations were conducted from an estimated 4,500 feet. Buildings over an area of more than five square miles were destroyed, the communique added.

"A moderate estimate," it continued, "is that in this monstrous work of destruction, horrifying as a nightmare and absolutely without precedent, at least 100,000 people must have perished."

Antwerp Appears Deserted

BERLIN, May 19 (AP).—Antwerp, normally Belgium's chief port and commercial city, was described today by D. N. B., the German official news agency, as appearing virtually deserted after the German occupation, effected yesterday.

"The deathly stillness was uncanny," it was reported.

Electric light wires were pictured as sagging across highways leading from the suburbs to the center of the city and the streets were cluttered with burning, shell-splattered automobiles, scattered army equipment, wandering cattle and carcasses of horses.

MAY 20 1940

German engineers have strung a pontoon bridge across the River Scheldt to replace the destroyed span, D. N. B. said.

Except for residents of the outskirts, most of Antwerp's inhabitants stayed, D. N. B. said, "but, in spite of this, the city looks as though it had died out."

D. N. B. said the people reported they had been without water or light for forty-eight hours before the German occupation.

Allied Air Attack Between Hanover and Munster Is Viewed by Correspondent

BERLIN, May 19 (AP).—Allied aircraft bombed a point somewhere between Munster and Hanover in western Germany this morning, bringing to an abrupt halt a train on which this correspondent was traveling to Berlin from the Holland border after inspecting a German prison camp in the military zone.

German heavy and light anti-aircraft guns immediately went into action, peppering the skies with shrapnel. The show was staged from the train, from which the bomb explosions could be seen clearly.

MAY 20 1940

The first evidence that a raid was in progress was a loud roar, audible approximately a mile and a half above the clattering of train wheels. The train, approaching Hanover from the west, halted, apparently to avoid drawing attention as a moving traget.

It was a good night for bombing, with a bright moon about two hours above the eastern horizon casting long shadows behind the most important targets.

The bursts of high-reaching heavy anti-aircraft shells appeared like pin-point stars, so high were Allied attackers. The number of planes in the attack could not be determined, nor could the motors be heard.

All passengers aboard the train, which carired mostly civilians, with a few soldiers returning on leave orfm the western front, fought for places at windows on the side of the train from which the bombing could be seen.

Almost at once a second bomb exploded and the anti-aircraft guns went into renewed activity. After a brief pause, two more bombs fell in the same vicinity, each explosion lighting up the neighborhood.

There was no evidence that fires were set by the bombs. When the bombing and cannonading ceased, no lights or fires were visible from the train. After a further half-hour pause, the train continued its journey to Berlin without incident.

Ground Forces Fight Bombers Over Germany

British Planes Rake Factories In Rhine Town

Two Raiders Brought Down, Another Hit, Nazis Say; Civilians Reported Killed

MAY 20 1940

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY IN THE RHINELAND, May 19 (AP).—Traveling through the German Rhineland, this correspondent observed today some t of the effects of British bombing raids. In one town, a small industrial center whose tall chimneys stand up like beacons, there had been hits on factories whose products were not disclosed by officials.

German authorities said there was no serious damage, but that at one barracks building which was hit, a soldier received a cut hand. Anti-aircraft officers, busy throughout a two-hour raid, said two enemy planes were brought down and another hit. Seven planes took part, while the population huddled in cellars during the chilly morning.

One bomb sliced through a three-story house, exploded in a basement where nine persons had sought safety and killed all of them, Germans said. Three men walking through the street to work were killed and a number injured.

30.24-2327

The British apparently were using extremely heavy bombs. After dropping flares they came back seven or eight times, gliding each time, one German officer estimated, from 12,000 feet to about 5,000 before releasing their cargos. Bomb fragments cut up an entire neighborhood adjoining one factory.

It was obvious that the inhabitants of the town were stirred by this unaccustomed visitation of war.

A few miles away a wrecked British bomber was crumpled in a field surrounded by a curious crowd. The fields around were being searched foot by foot for the pilot, who had escaped by parachute.

ISSUES URGENT APPEAL FOR AIR MECHANICS

Need Of Hour Is More Warplanes, Says Lord Beaverbrook

R. A. F. Bombers Harass Germans From Hamburg To Sedan

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 19—Great Britain urgently called skilled workmen for her airplane industry today and transferred 10,000 children from eastern and southern coastal towns.

Back of both moves was the fear of aerial Blitzkrieg from German bases just across the North Sea in conquered territory of the Netherlands and Belgium.

Britons found tentative comfort in the lack of any official acknowledgment of further withdrawal on the Belgian front.

A morning communique from general headquarters announced simply that "the British front held firmly yesterday in the face of strong enemy pressure."

Oil Depots Bombed

The Air Ministry, giving further details of previously reported forays over Germany Friday night, said the raids extended from Hamburg in the north to Sedan, France, in the south.

More than 300 bombs were dropped on oil depots at Bremen, and similar establishments at Hamburg were said to have been bombed from 8 P. M. Friday to yesterday morning. Road and rail bridges across the Meuse river also were reported heavily damaged.

Still other targets were airdromes, troop columns and road and rail junctions.

The Air Ministry said at least twenty German planes were shot down by British fighters ranging the Western front and Germany's western interior, and that R. A. F. bombers had destroyed oil and fuel tanks at Hanover.

Flames Shoot 2,000 Feet

Flames from Bremen oil reservoirs shot up 2,000 feet, pilots said, lighting the countryside for fifty miles and covering the city in a deep blanket of smoke.

After dropping 300 bombs in the five-hour attack, the planes turned for home as other fires popped into view among oil tanks.

At home, Britain girded grimly against invasion in the Blitz style.

Men behind machine-guns, sand bags and barbed wire entanglements guarded the nation's "nerve centers" against attack by fifth columns or troops carried by air or both.

More Airplanes Needed

Britain's "most urgent" need of this hour, declared Lord Beaverbrook, new Minister of Aircraft Production, is more airplanes. He appealed to men who know how to assemble aircraft to report to the nearest factories "at once."

His call was addressed particularly to garage mechanics. Beaverbrook said "a large number of fitters is immediately required."

The Air Ministry soon afterward issued an urgent call for women, some to cook, some to sew balloon fabric and others to do "special confidential duties."

The War Cabinet, service ministers and defense chieftains met for more than an hour today at No. 10 Downing street, Prime Minister Churchill's official residence.

Migration Is Second

The migration of the children from threatened coastal towns to new reception areas in Wales, considered less liable to bombing, was their second since the war started last September. They had been moved to the coast from London and other big population centers.

The children, carrying hand baggage and one-day rations, moved in sixteen special trains, none of which passed through London. All were due to reach Wales tonight.

Accounts from the coastal centers pictured the farewell between the city-bred youngsters and the local children, whose schoolrooms they had shared, and the older residents of the towns, who had served as their temporary foster parents.

Many foster mothers sobbed: "It's just like parting with our own kids."

Slogans Chalked On Walls

Farewell slogans had been chalked on the walls of the towns and residents loaned their automobiles to carry the children to the stations.

The railways offered another gripping spectacle of Britain at war—two trainloads of wounded from the British expeditionary force on the Western front rolled into the provinces from a British port.

Britain's local defense volunteers are to be directed by commanders of the country's military areas, it was disclosed today.

Each area will be divided into zones and these will be divided into subgroups. Organizers and officers of the zones and groups will be appointed by area military commanders consulting with the country's regional commissioners, who were appointed before the war to exercise the Government's administrative functions in event of serious interruption of communications.

No date was fixed for commencement of training, which will vary according to local requirements.

German Tanks Moved From Swiss Border

French Move Theirs, Too, but Basel Believes Both Sides May Be Pretending

BASEL, Switzerland, May 19 (AP).—German forces concentrated in Swiss frontier regions moved their armored cars and light tanks away from the immediate border sector today, but where they went was a German secret. Some observers expressed belief that they had gone northward toward the battlefields of Belgium and France.

Others, however, speculated that it was a ruse to lead the French into sending their mountain forces into the northwestern battle, and that the Germans actually had withdrawn only a few miles.

The French countered by removing similar equipment from immediate border regions, but it could not be learned whether they, too, went into action elsewhere or merely remained on guard out of sight.

Despite the German movement from Baden, Wuerttemburg and Bavaria, small forces of troops known to have been concentrated there still could be seen from Switzerland. Although it was believed these might be only small groups left behind, the Swiss took no chances. They kept all their forces mobilized, granted no leaves and kept a road patrol on duty against the contingency of "fifth column" activities.

The Swiss command also enforced a federal decree requiring all arms factories in the country working for any of the belligerents to turn over all stocks and present output to the Swiss Army for safe keeping.

Sweden Hears Germans Demand Troop Passage

Berlin Hints at Allied Attack on Ore Fields if Narvik Falls

STOCKHOLM, May 19 (AP).—Germany has made demands for transit facilities for troops to relieve the Nazi garrison at the Norwegian ore port or Narvik, it was rumored today. The rumor was denied in authoritative quarters.

However, reports were published here of Berlin press "warnings to Sweden" which called attention to the "danger" of a British-French attack on Swedish ore fields and the necessity of Sweden's being well prepared.

Swedish circles said such warnings were hardly necessary, since this country was fully prepared to defend its neutrality.

Germany's press warnings coincided with reports that the surrender of the small German force at Narvik appeared imminent. The warnings implied, without saying it in so many words, that if the Allies took Narvik they would be in a position to move against Sweden's ore fields to stop shipments of ore to Germany by way of the Gulf of Bothnia.

Sweden, determined not to be caught unprepared, pushed plans for a special home guard of 50,000 men whose major duty would be to spot and track down parachute troops.

Allied Cruiser Reported Stranded

BERLIN, May 19 (AP).—D. N. B., the German official news agency, reported today that Nazi air scouters had sighted an enemy heavy cruiser stranded off Bodoe, in northern Norway. The cruiser was listing heavily and was guarded by enemy planes and a destroyer, D. N. B. said.

The wreckage of a transport of 25,000 tons or more was discovered today off the Netherlands port of Flushing, D. N. B. said. The ship apparently had been broken in the middle after hitting a mine.

Nazis Suggest Americas Do Protesting to Allies

Call Low Countries Invasion 'Just a Counter-Move'

BERLIN, May 19 (AP).—Authorities here said today that, aside from press reports, they knew nothing of the protest by the United States and twenty other American republics against the German march into the low countries and that hence there could be no official reaction.

High Nazi sources, however, expressed belief that the Americas had misdirected the note.

"It should have gone to England and France, who really violated the neutrality of Belgium and Holland," the ysaid. "The German action was just a counter-move."

War Flashes

Belfast, Northern Ireland, May 19 (AP)—A secret radio station of the outlawed Irish Republican Army broadcast the assertion today that a British troopship carrying 2,800 men was sunk on the way to the Skagerrak by explosives placed by the IRA.

The broadcast was announced by street posters.

It said the ship was on its way from Hull, England, when blown up.

The broadcast further declared IRA bombs had damaged a British ammunition factory.

The British Admiralty had no comment to make on the IRA report.

Rio De Janeiro, May 19 (AP)—A decree by President Getulio Vargas today extended application of Brazil's neutrality laws to Norway, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg. They previously had applied only to Germany, France and Great Britain.

MAY 20 1940

Buenos Aires, May 19 (AP)—A Nazi-controlled secret radio station was seized by postal and police officials in a raid at the interior city of Campana yesterday. The station, unlicensed, had been used to broadcast propaganda, officials said.

Batavia, Java, May 19 (AP)—Authorities in the Netherlands East Indies announced today they would pay the fares of all Dutch reserves and soldiers abroad who volunteer for military service in the Netherlands East Indies, a Reuters dispatch said today.

Communiques

MAY 20 1940

German

Berlin, May 19 (AP)—Following is the text of today's communique of the German high command:

"After disposing of the last opposition on the Island of Walcheren, the entire Netherlands, with all its islands, is in German hands. In northern Belgium, after the fall of Antwerp as already announced by a special bulletin, our troops are throwing the enemy always farther back.

"West of Antwerp, the river Schedlt has been crossed, west of Brussels the Dendre sector has been reached. Between Maubeuge and La Fere, the attack continued .

"The rivers Sambre and Oise were crossed, Le Cateau and St. Quentin are in German hands. On the south wing, we have reached the district north of Laon as well as the Aisne near Rethel with heavy forces.

"In the fight northwest of Montmedy, heavy Maginot Line fort number 505 has been taken. In this operation, a first lieutenant of the German engineer corps battalion distinguished himself.

"The number of prisoners and the amount of war booty has risen. Up to now, not counting the Dutch army, prisoners number 110,000 and countless artillery up to 28 centimeter (11-inch) guns have been captured.

"The air force effectively supported the advance of the army. The heaviest blows were dealt at the enemies' rear connections, railroads and retreating columns. There were bombings of numerous airdromes, hangars and wharves as well as of planes on the ground.

"Off the French-Belgian coast a merchantman of 6,000 tons was sunk by bombs and a destroyer was damaged.

"Losses of the enemy were 147 planes. Of these, forty-seven were shot down in air battles and thirteen by anti-aircraft artillery. The rest were destroyed on the ground. Twenty-seven of our own planes are missing.

"In Norway, the Narvik group, supported by the air force, still is continuing heavy defensive fighting. One merchant ship of 1,500 tons and one transport ship of 6,500 tons were sunk at Narvik. One enemy flying boat was shot down in an air battle.

"Enemy airplanes again attacked various cities in the north German coastal area and west Germany with bombs. Military objectives were not hit."

British

London, May 19 (AP)—The British Air Ministry's communique tonight follows:

"Direct hits were made on oil and fuel tanks at Hanover (Germany).

"At other points railway junctions and sidings suffered considerable damage.

"All night continuous watch was kept on military traffic over a wide area in western Germany and offensive action was taken against enemy movements.

"Rail and road communications were attacked. At one point a heavy explosion was caused. At another, airdrome buildings were set on fire."

"During the night (Saturday-Sunday) bombers caused further damage to oil fuel tanks at Hamburg and Bremen."

MAY 20 1940

French

Paris, May 19 (AP)—The French communique tonight said:

"The main fighting has taken place in the region northeast of Saint Quentin where our troops are offering stubborn resistance to the enemy.

"Violent attacks have been repulsed by us in the region of Montmedy with heavy losses.

"Great activity in the air.

"Our fighters and anti-aircraft opposed enemy bombing raids with very heavy losses on them.

"In particular, a group of fifteen machines lost two-thirds of its effectives."

MAY 20 1940

Norway

Stockholm, May 19 (AP)—The Norwegian high command issued the following communique tonight on cases of German military atrocities:

"Since the war broke out April 9, we of the Norwegian military, as well as civilians, have witnessed numerous cases of German military atrocities.

"The waging of war contrary to international law and human conceptions portrays a brutal soldier spirit.

"We have seen plundering of cities, townships and houses and attacks upon points of no military value.

"We have seen women and children machine-gunned by German flyers. We have seen detachments of Norwegian troops being fooled into submission and thereafter being shot down without a chance of defense.

"We have seen German soldiers, who claim to be the world's best warriors, use Norwegian peasants and prisoners as a shield against Norwegian bullets. We have seen Norwegian ships being used as transports for German soldiers, with the result that the Norwegian crews on these ships were killed by Norwegian bullets.

"The German radio denies these charges, but we who have seen these atrocities know they are facts.

"The Norwegian high command is asking all Norwegians who have witnessed or will witness further atrocities to write a description of them and, if possible, have such descriptions witnessed by reliable persons and signed.

"Persons in occupied territories are to keep their written descriptions until they can safely turn them over to the Norwegian high command."

ITALY AWAITS ORDER OF DAY, CIANO ASSERTS

Foreign Minister Declares Nation "Must And Will Say" Word In Europe

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 19—Italy "must say and will say" her word in European events, and only awaits "the order of the day," Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister, told the Italian people today as air-raid precautions were ordered for areas in the northern part of the country, facing France.

"Italy cannot remain a stranger to events in European life," Ciano said in a speech at Milan, but the people must wait until Mussolini speaks to know what to do next.

"Italy of the Ethiopian undertaking and victories in Spain is not a stranger nor can it be a stranger to events in European life in which Rome must say and will say its word," he continued.

Duce May Give Word Tonight

Ciano spoke briefly on the first anniversary of the signing of "the pact of steel," the Italian-German military alliance.

While Ciano was speaking in Milan a rumor circulated in Rome that Premier Mussolini was planning to speak tomorrow night from his balcony at the Palazzo Venezia.

It was in the spirit of her victories, Ciano said, that Italy was hastening "these new tasks for which it will be called."

These tasks, he said, were dictated by "the necessity of finally achieving our aspirations."

To Keep Faith With Germany

Italy, he said, in what appeared to be a reference to the alliance with Germany, "intends to keep faith in her engagements and likewise her greater destiny."

Ciano said he knew the people would not expect him to say more because "the order of the day will come to us all from il Duce when he will have decided upon it."

"And when he gives it," Ciano continued, "Milan will leap once again to its feet."

The Foreign Minister spoke at a time when Fascists hinted Italy was being drawn to the brink of war by German successes on the Western front.

Blackouts On French Border

Blackouts and air-raid-defense experiments were ordered to begin tomorrow in the important industrial areas of Milan and Turin, close to the French frontier.

These were the first precautions of that kind since Italy adopted her policy of non-belligerency at the start of the European war last September.

Authoritative Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, Ciano's newspaper, dwelt in his weekly broadcast to the Italian armed forces on Germany's victories.

He told the troops that when il Duce gives the order, "we shall conquer."

The outspoken Il Resto Del Carlino, of Bologna, also announced that Italy's "hour is near."

Describing the Italians as "impatient to march" after hearing of the German successes, the newspaper promised there still was time for Italy to get into the fight.

"The end of the two giants (Britain and France) will not be sudden," it said. "They will defend themselves tooth and nail with the realization that they deserve no quarter.

"There is, therefore, glorious work for everyone and we must not feel any jealousy for the lightning victories our comrades of Hitlerian Germany are winning over the common enemy."

Duce's Paper Refers To Next Test

Premier Mussolini's Il Popolo d'Italia, welcoming Ciano on behalf of the city, assured him that "Milan . . . with firmness waits for il Duce to call the people to the next test."

En route to Milan, Ciano visited Cremona, where he opened an art exhibition and attended ceremonies inaugurating the new plant of the newspaper Il Regime Fascista, published by pro-Nazi Roberto Farinacci.

Ansaldo told the troops that Germany is short of gasoline but that she has coal and cellulose "in great quantity" and that with these, a nation can go forward. He said:

"Our course is clear. At all hours of the day and night, our duty is to prepare, discipline and train ourselves, taking full advantage of the respite so that when il Duce commands, we also will be ready and victorious."

Imitate Nazis, Forecasts Told

He added that two nations like Great Britain and France "cannot be reduced in a few days as Holland and Belgium were."

Ansaldo declared the principal reason for German military successes was the stern schooling and discipline which the German youth has undergone under the National Socialist regime.

Another deciding factor was careful and intensive preparation, with every move planned to insure maximum efficiency, he said, and concluded:

"Let us Italian soldiers take a leaf out of the German's book in this, the very last moment of our preparation, and when il Duce gives the marching orders, we shall follow him to victory."

Ciano Opens Art Exhibition

ROME, May 19 (A.P.).—Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, opened an art exhibition at Cremona today and attended ceremonies inaugurating the new newspaper plant of "Il Regime Fascista," published by Roberto Farinacci.

Lindbergh Again Warns: Keep U.S.Out

Calls Nation Safe From Air Threat, but in Need of Clear Defense Plan

Assails 'Hysterical Chatter of Invasion'

Sees It Too Late to Enter This War Successfully; Bids Us Stop Meddling

From the Herald Tribune Bureau

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh warned the nation tonight that decision on "a definite policy of defense" would have to be formulated before the building up of greater air, land and sea arms could be made effective in safeguarding the security of the United States.

He called for an end to "hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion," and declared that Americans need have no fear of attack unless they bring it on through meddling with affairs abroad.

In an address over the Columbia Broadcasting System on the anniversary eve of the start of his memorable flight to Paris from New York, on May 20, 1927, Col. Lindbergh declared that if the United States is to defend the entire Western Hemisphere, the policy will have to be co-ordinated with the foreign and defense policies of the sister nations, and American warplanes must be provided with adequate basing facilities in those countries.

Says It Too Late to Help Allies

He insisted that the geographic situation of the United States gives it natural advantages, with aviation an asset, in preventing attacks from overseas. Holding that "there is no longer time for us to enter this war successfully," he reiterated his belief that "we need not fear a foreign invasion unless American peoples bring it on through their own quarreling and meddling with affairs abroad."

Without specific mention of President Roosevelt's recommendation for the construction of 50,000 airplanes, he said:

"Until we have decided upon a definite policy of defense, the mere construction of large numbers of aircraft will not be adequate for our national safety."

He assailed "the course we have been following in recent months" as leading to "neither strength nor friendship nor peace," but rather to a situation which "will leave us hated by victor and vanquished alike" because we aided the enemies of one side and "did not help enough" the other side.

"Chatter of Calamity"

Asserting that "the air defense of America is as simple as the attack is difficult," Col. Lindbergh declared, "We are in danger of war today not because European people have attempted to interfere with the internal affairs of America, but because American people have attempted to interfere with the internal affairs of Europe."

He pleaded for a return to "America's traditional role—that of building and guarding our own destiny," and said:

"We need a great air force, a greater Army, and a greater Navy; they have been inadequate for many years. Let us form with our neighboring nations a clear-cut and definite policy of American defense. But above all, let us stop this hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion that has been running rife these last few days."

Col. Lindbergh's address came on the eve of high-pressure developments in Congressional and Administration quarters to speed up and expand enormously the nation's defenses in the light of developments in Europe.

"Regardless of which side wins the war," Col. Lindbergh said, "there is no reason, aside from our own actions, to prevent a continuation of peaceful relationships between America and the countries of Europe.

Says We Can't Be Attacked

"If we desire peace, we need only stop asking for war. No one wishes to attack us, and no one is in a position to do so."

Col. Lindbergh declared that while it was possible to build bombers capable of flying the Atlantic Ocean and returning, they were not in existence today. He asserted a foreign power could conquer the United States only if bombers were accompanied by an invading army, and great armies must still cross the oceans by ships. He said transportation of relatively small forces by air was of great significance in Europe, but not in America.

"No foreign navy will dare approach within bombing range of our coasts," he declared.

Col. Lindbergh's plea that the United States stay out of foreign wars was in line with his previous utterances since the European conflict started. At the outset he advised that this country be careful to avoid involvement lest democracy be imperiled at home. Last October he entered the controversy over neutrality legislation by proposing an embargo on the sale of "offensive weapons" to belligerents.

Let us re-examine the position of America in the air. New discoveries and developments affect nations in different ways. In Europe, aviation has affected England adversely and Germany advantageously. One nation may have a psychology and topography which promotes the development of aviation, while another finds itself entirely unadjusted to the tempo of the air.

Judged by aeronautical standards, we in the United States are in a singularly fortunate position. Our people have natural ability in the design, construction and operation of aircraft. Our highly organized industry, our widely separated centers of population, our elimination of formalities in interstate travel, all contribute to the development of American aviation.

From the standpoint of defense, we still have two great oceans between us and the warring armies of Europe and Asia. In fact, there is hardly a natural element contributing to air strength and impregnability that we do not now possess. Aviation is for us an asset. It adds to our national safety. With a firm and clear-cut policy, we can build an air defense for America that will stand above these shifting sands of war.

Strong Policy of Defense

But until we have decided upon a definite policy of defense, the mere construction of large numbers of aircraft will not be adequate for our national safety. In fact, without a strong policy of defense, we will not even know what types of planes to build. The speed and range of our fighting planes must depend upon the bases available for their use. If we are to defend the United States alone, then we must construct numerous air bases along the Mexican and Canadian borders. Such a plan would require large numbers of small bombers and pursuit planes, and eventually it would leave us as vulnerable to air attack as the nations of Europe are today. On the other hand, if we are to defend the entire Western Hemisphere, we need long-range bombers capable of attacking a hostile fleet a thousand miles or more at sea. But there is little use discussing types and numbers until a defense policy is established.

This brings us to an issue which must sooner or later be faced. An adequate air defense of the Western Hemisphere necessitates the cooperation of the other nations of this hemisphere. Our military aircraft must have access to their bases. Their foreign policy must have some relationship to ours. We cannot hold this hemisphere free from foreign war if nations which lie within it declare war on foreign powers.

Let us not be confused by this talk of invasion by European aircraft. The air defense of America is as simple as the attack is difficult when the true facts are faced. We are in danger of war today not because European people have attempted to interfere with the internal affairs of America, but because American people have attempted to interfere with the internal affairs of Europe.

It is true that bombing planes can be built with sufficient range to cross the Atlantic and return. They can be built either in America or Europe. Aeronautical engineers have known this for many years. But the cost is high, the target large and the military effectiveness small. Such planes do not exist today in any air force. A foreign power could not conquer us by dropping bombs in this country unless the bombing were accompanied by an invading army. And an invading army requires thousands of small bombers and pursuit planes; it would have little use for huge trans-Atlantic aircraft.

Danger at Home

No, the advantage lies with us, for great armies must still cross oceans by ship. Only relatively small forces can be transported by air today and over distances of a few hundred miles at most. This has great significance in Europe, but it is not an element that we have to contend with in America. Such a danger can come, in any predictable future, only through division and war among our own peoples. As long as American nations work together, as long as we maintain reasonable defense forces, there will be no invasion by foreign aircraft. And no foreign navy will dare to approach within bombing range of our coasts.

Our danger in America is an internal danger. We need not fear a foreign invasion unless American peoples bring it on through their own quarreling and meddling with affairs abroad. Our eyes should not search beyond the horizon for problems which lie at our feet. The greatest lesson we can draw from Europe today is that national strength must be built within a nation itself and cannot be achieved by limiting the strength of others.

What of the unforeseen develop-

Text of Lindbergh Broadcast on Defense

WASHINGTON, May 19 (A.P.).—The text of the radio address of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh follows:

In times of war and confusion, it is essential for our people to have a clear understanding of the elements upon which our national safety depends. Aviation has now become one of these elements, and it is about the air defense of America that I speak to you tonight.

The power of aviation has been greatly underrated in the past. Now, we must be careful not to overrate this power in the excitement of reaction. Air strength depends more upon the establishment of intelligent and consistent policies than upon the sudden construction of huge numbers of airplanes.

Even here in America, it is difficult to think clearly amidst the conflict of facts and headlines, the contradictory advice of columnists, the claims and counterclaims of propaganda, and the blind selfishness of party politics. The conservative who scoffed at aviation yesterday has become the radical who says that tomorrow we will be invaded by European aircraft.

Nations Differently Affected

ments of science? Rocket propulsion? New forms of energy? New methods of destruction? No generation can entirely safeguard the future for those that follow. They must meet their own problems as those problems arise. The greatest inheritance we can pass on to our children is a reasonable solution of the problems that confront us in our own time—a strong nation, a lack of debt, a solid American character free from the entanglements of the Old World. Let us guard America today as our forefathers guarded it in the past. They won this country from Europe with a handful of Revolutionary soldiers. We certainly can hold it now with a population of 130,000,000 people. If we cannot, we are unworthy to have it.

Vacillating Policies

But the course we have been following in recent months leads to neither strength nor friendship nor peace. It will leave us hated by victor and vanquished alike, regardless of which way the tide of battle turns. One side will claim that we aided its enemies; the other, that we did not help enough.

To be successful in modern warfare, a nation must prepare many years before the fighting starts. If any one doubts that, let him turn his eyes to Europe. Years ago we decided to stay out of foreign wars. We based our military policy on that decision. We must not waver now that the crisis is at hand. There is no longer time for us to enter this war successfully. The result of vacillating policies lies clearly before us in the chaos of Europe today.

Let us turn again to America's traditional role—that of building and guarding our own destiny. We need a greater air force, a greater Army, and a greater Navy; they have been inadequate for many years. Let us form with our neighboring nations a clear-cut and definite policy of American defense. But above all, let us stop this hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion that has been running rife these last few days. It is not befitting to the people who built this nation.

Peaceful Relations as Usual

That the world is facing a new era is beyond question. Our mission is to make it a better era. But regardless of which side wins this war, there is no reason, aside from our own actions, to prevent a continuation of peaceful relationships between America and the countries of Europe. If we desire peace, we need only stop asking for war. No one wishes to attack us, and no one is in a position to do so.

The only reason that we are in danger of becoming involved in this war is because there are powerful elements in America who desire us to take part. They represent a small minority of the American people, but they control much of the machinery of influence and propaganda. They seize every opportunity to push us closer to the edge.

It is time for the underlying character of this country to rise and assert itself, to strike down these elements of personal profit and foreign interest. This underlying character of America is our true defense. Until it awakes and takes the reins in hand once more, the production of airplanes, cannon and battleships is of secondary importance. Let us turn our eyes to our own nation. We cannot aid others until we have first placed our own country in a position of spiritual and material leadership and strength.

WAR TO HOLD POPE PIUS IN VATICAN CITY

Pontiff In Constant Touch With Current News And Diplomatic Circles

MAY 20 1940

Days Begins With Mass In Private Chapel And Ends After Midnight

[By the Associated Press]

Vatican City, May 19—Pope Pius XII, anxious to keep in constant touch with war news and diplomatic circles, probably will remain here throughout the summer instead of going to Castel Gandolfo in the Alban Hills, for a much needed rest, Vatican prelates said today.

In recent weeks the Pontiff, saddened by the European war, has spent a large part of each day studying reports on the international situation from all parts of the world, it was learned.

His radio, tuned to broadcasts from European capitals, seldom is switched off until after midnight.

Offers Mass For Peace

The Pontiff's day begins early with celebration of mass in his private chapel, where he offers prayers for peace. Immediately after completing his devotions the Pope inquires for the latest news as he goes from the chapel to his study, where the morning papers await him.

Having read these, the Pontiff receives from his Secretary of State, Luigi Cardinal Maglione, dispatches from his papal nuncios in most capitals of Europe and the Americas.

After an interlude for private audiences, often with foreign diplomats, he opens two thick white envelopes addressed to "The Holiness of Our Lord Pope Pius XII, Gloriously Reigning."

Transcripts Of News

One contains stenographic transcriptions of war news from the world's radio stations, which the Vatican radio prepares for him several times a day. The other contains clippings which the Vatican printshop staff culls from hundreds of newspapers in many languages.

Having perused these, the Pope goes again to his private chapel to pray, and then, generally after 1 P. M., enters his bare little dining room to eat a frugal lunch alone.

Because the Pontiff suffers from lack of appetite, his physician, Dr. Riccardo Galeazzo Lisi, has advised him to invite companions to his table with the hope of stimulating him by conversation. The Pope, however, has refused to violate the custom in accordance with which the Holy Father always eats in solitude.

Reads While Walking

Like many Italians, he takes a brief siesta after lunch, but soon leaves his apartment for a short stroll in the Vatican grounds. He takes documents with him and reads continually while walking.

In the evening the Pope turns to his private correspondence, read to him by his secretary, Monsignor Giovanni Battista Montini, who also is assistant Secretary of State. The Pontiff frequently instructs Monsignor Montini to send assistance to war refugees

The Pope returns once more to his chapel to pray before dinner, which takes him only a few minutes to eat. He then goes to his study on the third floor of the papal palace and turns on his powerful American radio to hear the latest war news, frequently consulting the many atlases he has added to his private library.

Attendants say that the sadness which has been apparent in the Pope's thin, ascetic face since the beginning of the war is broken only by the melancholy smile which he bestows during the general audiences he holds twice a week on crowds of pilgrims, mostly the humble poor, to whom he wishes to show his fatherly affection.

The Pope's keen awareness of what the war means, those close to him say, is heightened by the fact that he saw the effects of the last war at close hand as papal nuncio to Germany.

The Pontiff ends his long day some time after midnight with prayers that peace again may reign over the world.

Roosevelt Pins Peace Hopes On Liberal Economic Policies

Foreign Trade Week Message Says They Will Be Dominant U. S. Purpose

MAY 20 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 19 — President Roosevelt tonight asserted that hopes of future world peace depended upon the ultimate adoption of "liberal" economic policies by nations generally.

His message was included in a speech Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, was to have broadcast in connection with Foreign Trade Week. However, the secretary was notified to expect an important telephone call from Paris, presumably from Ambassador William Bullitt, at the time he was to have gone on the air. Breckenridge Long, Assistant Secretary of State, read his chief's manuscript for him.

It developed later that the expected communication from Paris came by cable and was given to Secretary Hull at his home. Its nature was not disclosed, but a State Department spokesman said it was "nothing sensational" and explained that frequent messages were being exchanged in these times.

Called Dominant Purpose

Mr. Roosevelt's message said that the promotion of liberal economic policies would continue to be "a vital part and a dominant purpose of the foreign policy of the United States."

"In this way, and in this way alone, can the United States contribute to the economic reconstruction of the world when the destruction now going on shall have ceased," the President declared.

Secretary Hull's prepared speech warned that if the doctrines of "totalitarian autarchy" — "so ominously spreading today" — became widely dominant in international trade relations mankind would be plunged "into a period of chaos and impoverishment, and, inevitably, into moral and spiritual decay."

The principles underlying the Administration's trade agreements program, he asserted, "offer the only possible basis on which the economic life of the world can be successfully rebuilt when the present wars are over."

Gives Answer To Isolationists

Detailing dislocating effects of the European war on American commerce and agriculture, the Secretary said difficulties now being experienced in obtaining "essential imports" provided an "unanswerable refutation to those who indulge in reckless assertions that our country can isolate itself from the rest of the world and prosper."

He said it was America's duty to itself to make "every appropriate contribution toward the establishment of stable peace and orderly international relations."

Secretary Hull contended the paramount task of the country was twofold:

1. "We must increase our national strength, redouble our national vigor and courage, create for ourselves adequate means of defending this country's safety and security against any armed challenge."
2. For use when circumstances permit, there should be held in readiness "the proven and tested instrument for constructive action" provided by the trade agreements program.

Must Face Greater Shift

Listing some of the dislocations of American export trade caused by the European war despite an increase in the total since last September, the Secretary advised that "we must frankly face the possibilities that these difficulties may become greater."

He said the Government was striving earnestly to deal with them and also with the interference with the flow of certain raw materials and other imports, but added:

"Whether in war or peace, the prosperity of our foreign commerce must depend upon the vigor and ingenuity of those actually engaged in the process of trade, upon their initiative and enterprise."

MAY 20 1940

He termed as satisfying the fact that the shipping industry had adjusted itself to emergency conditions with such effect that most American-flag ships were busily employed.

Some Things Are More Precious Than Peace, Methodist Prelate Asserts

MAY 20 1940

Declares German Victory Would Bring Menace Closer To America

[By the Associated Press]

Richmond, May 19—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Church, made public here today an open letter to Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, urging that he use his "great influence with the President and Congress to declare war against Hitler and his fellow-monsters."

Declaring that some things were more precious than peace and that there could be no "permanent peace unless and until justice and righteousness prevail," Bishop Cannon asserted defense of the oppressed and of human rights was sometimes both necessary and Christian.

Repeal Neutrality Act, He Asks

"If the United States would today repeal the cowardly neutrality act and would today declare war against Germany because of the restriction of our rights by her barbarous submarine warfare, there would instantly be a great change in the attitude of the nations of the world," he said. "Instead of fear there would be hope, and I believe that there would be no menace that the sword-rattling Mussolini would enter the war.

". . . It would certainly be a great calamity to the world for Hitler to win this war. Whatever may be the known and acknowledged faults and mistakes of Great Britain and France, yet the things for which they stand, as opposed to the things for which Hitler stands, are so vital for the preservation of life and liberty as we have known them that it is impossible, without a feeling of horror, to think of the overthrow of Great Britain and France and their conceptions of freedom of conscience, of thought, of speech, of liberty of person and the substitution of Hitler's idea of domination by brute force, his persecution of the Jews and of the church and all that is implied by his victory.

Nazi Victory Menace To America

"If Hitler does win the war against the Allies and the British and French fleets are either captured or destroyed, not only will the front line of the defense of the United States be lost, but Hitler would obtain control of Bermuda, Jamaica, Trinidad, the French islands of the West Indies, British, French and Dutch Guiana (unless we went to war with him to prevent it), and thus by air force and submarines impose upon the United States his own regulations as to all our commerce, trade and international relations and, in combination with Russia, Japan and Italy, compel the United States to comply with all their demands."

Bishop Cannon said it would be said in opposition to declaring war that the United States was not prepared.

"That is true," he said, "but it is as well prepared today as it was in April, 1917, and certainly the United States is not prepared for such results as would inevitably follow the Hitler victory."

War To Defend Freedom

The Methodist prelate asserted it must be recognized that this is not a war "simply to protect individual countries, but to defend freedom all over the world from the active implementation of the four totalitarian nations."

He said it might not be necessary for American infantry to cross the seas, "but if it should finally become necessary that contingency must be squarely faced and met."

The bishop saw "far greater possibility of victory for the United States, combined with Great Britain and France, against Hitler than a war with Hitler alone after Great Britain and France have been defeated."

Says U. S. Dances To Hitler Tune

Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Finland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, he said, were attacked without the United States raising a hand "to defend these innocent, helpless people or to defend our challenged right to the freedom of the seas."

Bishop Cannon said Hitler had "called the tune and the United States has danced to his music."

Had the United States declared war on Germany last October to maintain "her rightful freedom of the seas," he said he did not believe there would have been any war against Finland, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Further delay Bishop Cannon termed "dangerous," and declared that while he abhorred war, he must agree with Patrick Henry when he cried "Give me liberty or give me death."

Says Spain's Aid To Axis Rests On Benevolence

Foreign Policy Group Claims Friendly "Neutrality" Toward Nazis Or Italy Would Serve Nation

Washington, May 19 (AP)—Belief that Spain could be of greater aid to the Axis Powers as a "benevolent neutral" than as an ally of Germany or Italy was expressed today by the Foreign Policy Association.

The association, a private research organization, said in a report that because of internal conditions in Spain and the belief that British forces could sweep in from Portugal, Spain "could scarcely be induced to enter the present war unless the Allies were already on the verge of collapse."

But if Spain were a "benevolent neutral," the association said, submarines could refuel and take on provisions in her Atlantic and Mediterranean harbors and planes might find her fifty or sixty airfields useful as bases of secret operations."

Moscow Paper Notes Trend Toward Repetition Of World War Experience

Moscow, May 19 (AP)—The danger of the United States "crawling into the European war has considerably increased," the Moscow newspaper Pravda, Communist party organ, said today in an article discussing the possibility of American war credits to the Allies.

"The fact that there is a campaign in American newspapers for credits to the Anglo-French Allies shows a trend toward repetition of the experience of the first World War," Pravda said.

The newspaper declared the American capitalists did not lose in the non-payment of war debts by the Allies but that the taxpapers did. Wall Street was repaid but Washington was not, therefore American workers and farmers suffered, Pravda added.

The broadcast commented on the resources of the British and the French, Reuters said, and the determination of the Allies to fight on to victory.

WEYGAND PLANS PINCER PUSH FROM BELGIUM AND FRANCE

Berlin Reports British Armored Relief Column Destroyed by Bombers as French Evacuate St. Quentin--- Invaders Reach Oise-Aisne Canal.

May 20, 1940

By the Associated Press.

MAY 21 1940

The Blitzkrieg drive toward Paris appeared for a time today to have veered toward the English Channel.

The German High Command said that its drive to the west had gained twenty to thirty miles on a line northward from St. Quentin, which is eighty miles northeast of Paris and which has been evacuated by the French. Tonight Berlin claimed the capture of Laon, seventy-five miles from the French capital, and a further advance to the Oise-Aisne Canal.

If successful, it was estimated that the German thrust to the English Channel might isolate 300,000 British soldiers on the Allies' north flank—and also attain channel bases for a quick, short attack on England. The channel port of Calais, presumably one of the main German objectives, is only twenty miles from Dover.

The sudden shift in Nazi tactics came as Gen. Maxime Weygand, new Commander-in-Chief of the Allies, was reported to be massing a huge French-British-Belgian force to pinch off the fifty-mile deep German salient striking into the heart of France on the Meuse River valley front. The Germans apparently realized the threat of this pincer movement, and decided to abandon the road to Paris.

Germans Report Laon Taken

MAY 20 1940

BERLIN, May 20 (AP).—German troops today stormed Laon, seventy-five miles northeast of Paris and on the eastern side of their bulge in France, and followed up their capture of that city by advancing beyond it in a southwesterly direction to the Oise-Aisne Canal, it was announced tonight.

The High Command said that the German flag is flying over the Laon citadel.

The text of the night communique read:

"German troops stormed Laon today. The German war-flag is flying from the citadel of Laon.

"In the advance from Laon toward the southwest the Oise-Aisne Canal was reached."

This announcement was made after the German drive across France had veered toward the English Channel, apparently with the aim of destroying the British Army.

Although the High Command did not definitely state its objectives, the German day communique pointed out that Nazi forces had struck westward—off the road to Paris—and had gained twenty to thirty miles on a line northward from St. Quentin between Peronne and Cambrai.

Germans estimated that a successful drive to the coast might isolate 300,000 British soldiers on the Allies' northern flank.

In addition to the British, they appraised the Allied onslaughts were splitting the Allies—the British falling back toward the channel and the Belgians and French seeking a southern outlet toward Valenciennes and Maubeuge.

Capture of the inner fort system at Liege as well as all but one fort at Namur was claimed by the High Command.

[A British military spokesman said that the Belgians still were holding Liege and Namur.]

The Germans, the High Command said, are pursuing the Allies in Belgium, have crossed the Dendre Rives west of Brussels and have reached the upper Scheldt River west of Antwerp.

The retreat between Valenciennes and Maubeuge, the communique said, cost the Allies their heaviest losses, especially in armored troops.

'Enemy Retreating Shattered.'

"The enemy, after a vain attempt to break through, is retreating westward severely shattered," it said. "Southwest of there our motorized and armored troops reached the Somme battlefield of 1916 on the line of Cambrai-Peronne.

"Stuka [dive-bomber] fighting and destroyer plane squadrons destroyed an armored column moving north from Laon and forced them to turn back."

The whole German maneuver of plunging deeply into France—almost half way to Paris in ten days—regardless of the masses of French, Belgian and British forces on both flanks, is testimony to the Nazis' amazing confidence in their air force and armored divisions.

Air Force Efforts Stressed.

To protect their exposed flanks, which are as far west and south as St. Quentin and Le Cateau, and as far east as Rethel, the High Command has stressed for three days running how the air force has been hammering Allied efforts to bring up re-enforcements.

The communique today emphasized the point that French and Belgian attacks on the German flanks between Cambrai and Peronne had been beaten off on the Somme battlefield, bloodily familiar to both armies.

That the Allies realize the gravity of their situation, Germans said, was disclosed in their replacement of Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin by Gen. Maxime Weygand as Allied Commander-in-chief. The switch brought only derision from German commentators, who declared that Gen. Weygand was an old-style fighter, who cannot meet the modern German attack.

One authorized source, remarking that the French cling to "the magic of the past to rejuvenate the present," declared that it is beyond German understanding that the general staff could be changed at the present, critical hour, unless it means military confusion in France.

Advanced on Narrow Front.

In their thrust into France to the vicinity of St. Quentin, about eighty miles northeast of Paris, the Germans advanced on an extremely narrow line which easily might have been pinched off with heavy losses, except for the evident overwhelming Nazi air and armored superiority.

Since that three-day-old drive, the Germans have broadened their narrow hold to a salient fully as wide as it is deep, an irregular block forty or fifty miles long.

The Germans express confidence that there is a serious rift between the British and French. They insist that the British are demanding protection for the Channel ports—opposite England—and are withdrawing their army in that direction, while the French want to protect Paris and as much of northern France as possible.

It seems likely that the heavy drive toward the Channel has been launched on the heels of the first push toward Paris to take advantage of that supposed situation.

[Paris and London have given no sign of anything but closest harmony on the western front.]

At the same time, the Germans are taking fullest advantage of airports in Holland near the Channel to harass British efforts to strengthen their expeditionary forces.

Air Danger Called Slight.

The High Command said that Allied air bases again had been attacked, two destroyers had been destroyed off the French-Belgian coast and one destroyer, a French torpedo boat and three merchant ships damaged.

The only evidence here that the Allies' position might be improving slightly was that the High Command now reports inflicting about four to one air losses—141 against thirty-one yesterday—as against six to one in the first days of the drive.

Allied night raids over Germany were dismissed as planless and unimportant militarily, but a spokesman reiterated Berlin's warnings of grim German retaliation which, he said, will follow.

Already in possession of St. Quentin and the west bank of the Somme, according to the High Command, the armored Nazi legions were within 100 miles of Calais, threatening to cut off British troops engaged in desperate fighting in Belgium.

Farther south, between the Oise and Aisne rivers, the Germans continued to hammer at the bending Allied battle lines near Laon.

Authoritative sources said that the French were regrouping their armies for an attack northeastward from central France to relieve the pressure on the capital, but declared that effective counter measures to meet this operation had been devised.

While the heavy fighting in northern France threatened to assume even greater proportions, Adolf Hitler scrapped another provision of the Treaty of Versailles by incorporating into the Reich the Eupen-Malmedy-Moresnet territory lost to Belgium in the world war settlement.

From his secret headquarters "somewhere in the west," the Fuehrer issued a decree announcing that this territory, occupied by German troops in the thrust into Belgium, would be attacked to the Rhine province.

He issued strict orders that the area, which covers about 384 square miles and has a population of 64,000, should "not be regarded as an occupied enemy land."

At the same time, Hitler moved to consolidate Nazi conquests in the Lowlands by appointing Arthur Seyss-Inquart, former Deputy Governor of German-occupied Poland, as Commissioner of the Netherlands.

Seyss-Inquart was authorized to carry out his administration with the aid of Dutch authorities and it was said that Netherlandish law would remain in force so far as compatible with the existing situation.

To the German military commander in the Netherlands, however, will be left the task of taking measures necessary to preserve order.

Withdrawals Reported.

The High Commond's reports on Sunday on the rapidly developing military situation said that the Allies had continued to withdraw on all fronts in Belgium and France over the week end, yielding more than 100,000 prisoners and suffering heavy casualties.

In addition to widening the pocket carved out of northern France, the Germans said that their troops had succeeded in capturing an "important" fortification in the Maginot Line northwest of Montmedy, near the junction of the French, Belgian and Luxemburg frontiers. The position, described as "Fort 505," was said to have been taken by direct frontal attack.

The salient which the Germans have driven into northern France varies in depth from thirty to fifty miles and is about eighty miles across at the widest point. From Sedan, northwest of Montmedy, the German lines extend south and west to Rethel, about 100 miles from Paris; from Bethel, the line runs northwest to the Laon region and across the Oise and Some rivers to St. Quentin, then northeast toward the Franco-Belgian border at Maubeuge.

From Switzerland came reports that mechanized German forces concentrated along the Swiss border had been withdrawn. Neutral observers theorized that these troops might have been sent north, but said that on the other hand the movement might be a feint to relax French vigilance along the Rhine.

Air Raid Belittled.

British reports that their planes again had raided northern Germany, inflicting heavy damage on oil depots near Bremen and Hamburg, were minimized by the official German news agency, DNB, which said that anti-aircraft fire had driven off the enemy.

DNB said that a raid on Bremen had resulted in the destruction of one house, damage to another and serious injury to two persons.

Lynn Heinzerling, Associated Press correspondent en route to the Netherlands from Berlin, reported a British air raid on a town in Hanover province early on Sunday in which thirty bombs fell in an eight-block area, killing eighteen persons.

Hits on Factories.

There were some hits on factories, Heinzerling said, and a military barracks was struck. German officers told him that most of those killed were women and children.

The Germans said that the Allies were suffering heavy losses both on the ground and in the air, compared to which their own losses were "slight."

The High Command communique yesterday said that 147 Allied planes had been downed against twenty-seven German planes reported missing.

German planes were said to have sunk a 6,000-ton merchantman off the Franco-Belgian coast and damaged a destroyer. One merchant ship and one transport were reported sunk near Narvik, in northern Norway.

GERMANS CLAIM CAPTURE OF LAON IN FRANCE, SET 'SACK' TRAP FOR BRITISH

Nazis Report New Advance In Shift Toward Channel; Aim To Cut Off And Destroy Thousands Of Enemy Troops

MAY 1 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Tuesday, May 21—Authorized Germans asserted confidently today there would be no "wonder on the Marne" to turn the tide of battle as in the World War, so superior is the German military machine racing on one front for Belgian-French channel ports and on another hammering toward Paris.

These sources contended the British have "absolutely faded out of the picture" in the fighting in Belgium and are in "headlong flight."

[By the Associated Press]

London, Tuesday, May 21—British general headquarters early today said "repeated attacks (Monday) by German armored and motorized formations had been repulsed by Allied forces in the area south of the River Scarpe and against the Scheldt position."

"The Belgian army has contributed largely toward the success of the defensive battle now being fought."

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 20—Germany's Blitzkrieg troops pushed deeper into France today by capturing the city of Laon, seventy-five miles northeast of Paris, while, in the west, Nazi warriors created a huge "sack" which they sought to close and trap thousands of Allied soldiers.

The German high command, in a special communique, declared the German war flag "is flying from the citadel of Laon" and that the Germans had advanced to the canal connecting the Oise-Aisne rivers, six miles southwest of Laon.

Nazis Head Toward Noyon

Thus, with new ground gained on the eastern edge of the German pocket in France, the Nazis were headed toward Noyon, only fifty miles north of Paris. Both Laon and Noyon were held by the Germans during most of the World War and Noyon then was destroyed by heavy bombardments.

MAY 1 1940

In the west, where the German army swung toward the English Channel in an attempt to isolate and destroy the British army in northern France, an authoritative source pictured the sack as follows:

The bottom is the Belgian city of Charleroi, on the Sambre river.

The northern part of the "mouth," which opens westward toward the Channel, is Tournai, Belgium, fifty miles northwest of Charleroi.

The southern part of the mouth is Cambrai, France, thirty-five miles southeast of Tournai and fifty-five miles southwest of Charleroi.

Allies Believed Surrounded

DNB saw in the possible closing of the sack a repetition of the Kutno battle in the Polish campaign last September where the Germans reported bagging 170,000 prisoners.

The Germans called Kutno one of the greatest destructive battles of all times.

The news agency said there was great activity along the Channel ports on the Continent, indicating the British desired to withdraw "to their island."

British Withdrawal Claimed

DNB added that the British had been withdrawn from the Maginot Line to Channel ports.

Although not telling definitely why the German steel-sheathed spearheads on the west side of the bulge had swerved from the road to Paris, the high command pointed out that they had plunged twenty to thirty miles westward from St. Quentin, which is thirty miles below Cambrai, in a day's attack.

The Germans estimate that 300,000 British on the Belgian-French front would be in danger of being pinched off from the main Allied forces if the Nazi drive toward the coast succeeds.

In addition to the British, they appraised the Allied strength in their path through Belgium as roughly more than 1,000,000 French and 250,000 Belgians.

MAY 21 1940

Allies Launch Counter-Attack

Combined French-Belgian forces strongly counter-attacked on the old Somme battlefield, soaked in the blood of both armies in 1916, but the Germans said they had driven back the Allies despite a tank onslaught. This was on a front between Cambrai and Peronne, about 20 to 30 miles northwest of St. Quentin, where the Nazis had reached a point about 80 miles northeast of Paris.

The French not only were resisting in that sector, the Germans acknowledged, but another French-Belgian army, facing entrapment in Belgium by the Nazis' westward thrust, also had tried to make a stand between Valenciennes and Maubeuge, near the Belgian border. There, too, the effort failed, the Nazis said, and the French-Belgian Allies headed westward to try to get around the German spearpoint already between them and Paris.

British Withdrawal Reported

The high command earlier had reported a withdrawal of these forces between Valenciennes and Maubeuge, while the British fell back toward the channel ports under forced march with the Germans in pursuit.

The German army, meanwhile, was making every effort to prevent enemy withdrawal and to hinder Allied reinforcements. Much of this was borne by the air force.

Fighting still was progressing on the southern flank of the narrow Nazi thrust between La Fere and St. Quentin, but the pace in this direction slowed down as the drive evidently veered westward through Cambrai.

Course Of War At Stake

On the Cambrai advance, the well-informed Hamburger

Fremdenblatt commented, depends much of the future course of the conflict.

It called this a war of "breath-taking maneuver" and said it resulted from the breakdown of France's fortifications along the Belgian frontier which let the Germans plunge almost half way to Paris.

That the Germans sped so deeply into France despite the large Allied armies on both flanks was considered in Berlin as evidence of their reliance on their air force and armored divisions. Their extremely narrow line easily might have been pinched off with heavy losses except for this seemingly overwhelming superiority.

Belgian Fighting Continues

But even as the main theater of war shifted to the Cambrai sector, fighting continued in Belgium.

All inner forts at Liege have been taken by the Germans and all but one at Namur, the high command claimed. The Nazis also were reported to have swept twenty-five miles west of Brussels to the Dendre river, apparently encountering stiff resistance there from Allied forces trying to bar the way to the channel ports as well as to Flanders.

On a broader front, Germany steadily was building up a case to justify air raids, perhaps on Paris and London, in retaliation for what she called the "planless" bombing of non-military objectives in western Germany.

Eighteen Civilians Killed

In the Sunday morning raid on an industrial village near Hanover, eighteen persons, mostly women and children, were said to have been killed. DNB said Salzbergen, on the Ems river, was hit tonight and that only farms had suffered damage.

DNB said British bombs had destroyed the Deaconess Home in Bremen and killed fifty and injured eighty-five. Deaconesses are members of a Protestant sisterhood who devote themselves to works of religion and charity.

Germans, meanwhile, were piling up an increasing score of Allied planes, reporting 141 destroyed yesterday to only thirty-one of their own.

On the German side, the high command reported attacks on Allied air bases, destruction of two destroyers off the French Belgian coast and damage to a destroyer, a French torpedo boat and three merchantmen.

The only hint of an improvement in the Allies' situation was the high command's ratio of four Allied planes lost for every German machine destroyed as against the six-to-one ratio in the first days of the drive.

Nazi commentators express belief that a rift has developed between the British and French, with the British demanding protection for the Channel ports—opposite England—while the French want to defend Paris and as much of France as possible.

Supposed Discord Credited

The rapid shift toward the Channel is laid partly to the advantage created by the supposed discord.

They also see military confusion in Paris as a result of the lightning German drive. No other reason, one authorized observer commented, could explain the replacement of Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin by Gen. Maxime Weygand as Allied commander in chief. The change was derided by German commentators, who declared Weygand was an old-style fighter who could not meet the modern German attack.

Further consolidating Germany's newest conquered territory, Germany sent Gen. Alexander von Falkenhausen to Holland and Belgium to organize a military administration; raised a 3,000,000,000-mark credit to finance her armies in the newly occupied zones and introduced dual currency in the form of so-called Reichs credit bank notes in Luxembourg and German-held parts of France and Belgium.

Nazis Acclaim 48-Hour Fight To Take Fort 505

Berlin, May 20 (AP)—A forty-eight-hour dramatic onslaught was required to take Fortification 505 in the Maginot Line, northwest of Montmedy, DNB disclosed today.

Lieut. Alfred Germer, a 26-year-old Strasbourgh youth who led a detachment of engineers in the attack, was singled out for particular mention. An infantry battalion and heavy artillery with guns of the largest caliber also participated in the attack on 505 while the engineers blasted the fort's mighty turrets.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—The French deny that Fortification 505 is an important Maginot Line unit, referring to it as an 'outpost not part of the main line.]

Infantry Paves Way

DNB said the infantry prepared the way for the rush by beating down opposition in the village of Villy, about eight miles northwest of Montmedy. House to house fighting took place in the village, DNB reported, because these structures are built as pillboxes.

While the infantry mopped up the approach to the fort, the artillery laid down a cruel fire along the one-mile approach to the fort from the village. Engineers and infantrymen then worked their way slowly to the foot of the hill upon which the fort stands.

Finally, DNB related, the "forward march" command was ordered for the course up the hill.

A "blind corner" in the fort from which defense fire could not be directed at the attackers was reached by one detachment that had fought its way forward by crawling in and out of shell craters.

Top Blown Off Turret

In the "blind corner" a heavy explosive charge was placed and set off. The DNB report said the charge was so well placed that "the steel top of a turret—two meters (about 6½ feet) in diameter and thirty centimeters (about one foot) thick—was raised about a meter (39 inches) out of its anchorage and then fell back diagonally on its support, making an opening in the turret for an additional heavy load of explosives."

Then followed systematic charge after charge which put the eight turrets all out of operation finally, whereupon dynamite was tossed inside. The dynamite exploded with tremendous crashes.

An enemy tank attack added to the hazards of the engineers, DNB related.

The strength of fortification 505 was so great, the news agency said, that ordinary artillery fire had no observable effect upon it.

Nazi Dive Bombers Set Pace In Hitler's Biggest Blitzkrieg

Work of Air Force Along Western Front Is Seen by American Correspondents at Fuehrer's Special Behest.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

[Mr. Lochner, chief of the Berlin Bureau of the Associated Press, has gone to the western front with the German forces by personal invitation of Adolf Hitler in the first trip to the front offered to foreign correspondents. Here is his first story.]

WITH THE GERMAN WESTERN ARMIES, May 20 (A. P.).—The air force is Germany's super-ace in this war. The first line, therefore, usually is where the dive bombers have done their devastating work, but only now, with the German forces at last, am I able to see what the air arm really means in war.

It has been the dream of every newspaperman in Berlin, ever since May 10 when the Reich's gigantic offensive by way of Holland and Belgium began to see Hitler's amazing and awe-inspiring armed forces in action. Not until yesterday, however, did Fuehrer's invitation give permission for three Americans to join the active forces.

After crossing over from the last German border town in the dust and mist, mingled with clouds of smoke from roaring planes, it took us but a short time to realize how war has been revolutionized by the air force. This is how Germany operates in this decisive area:

First, an air squadron determines just how enemy troops are moving. The flyers learn exactly the strength of the enemy's forces. Their equipment, types of weapons used and other details.

With this knowledge, re-enforced by photographs, the Germans' terrorizing Stukas (dive bombers), followed by heavy bombers, dash madly down upon the enemy, smashing towns—if necessary—through which troops are pushing, demolishing railway tracks, telephone lines and industrial plants and annihilating marching columns.

Bridges Replaced.

Meanwhile, the air information service informs speedy mechanized units where the bombing has been successful. Quick as lightning, these dart forward in the face of the enemy with death-disdaining courage, while the foe is in utter confusion.

After these mobile forces have routed the enemy, the main army is ready to move in. We had one glimpse of Germany's extreme preparedness when we saw with what speed bridges are replaced.

The fact is that Germany's army engineers have exactly-fitting substitute bridges ready for every strategic river or canal crossing in Belgium or France likely to be dynamited or otherwise damaged. German re-enforcement cars bring all this ready-made equipment with them on wheels in the motorized vanguard.

Hitler's Peace Goal.

Another indication of preparedness in every detail came to us when, in our 400-mile drive from Berlin to the last German frontier station, we passed through Munster, in Westphalia, the scene of the signing of the Westphalian peace treaty in 1648, which brought to an end the thirty years' war. Hitler already seems determined that if he forces England and France to their knees, he will make their representatives come to Munster's picturesque and ancient hall to sign on the dotted line.

In other words, Hitler is not content with wiping out the last vestiges of the Versailles Treaty. His mind goes back to 1648, when the Germany of the Holy Roman Empire was broken up into principalities and powerless miniature States. To rectify that mistake, he is reported to have chosen Munster symbolically for the peace conference. How completely the air force dominates the situation was apparent to us during the cross-country drive.

Air Raids at Night.

Long columns of anti-aircraft guns, cannon, air-force supply cars and gasoline vehicles were moving with unabating regularity toward the actual operations area. If any column called for a short rest, two anti-aircraft guns were mounted immediately and the sharpest lookout kept for any possible enemy.

With the exception of these moving motorized columns and the fact that we saw many men in uniforms, in cities large and small through which we passed, there was nothing indicating the mad holocaust only a relatively short distance away. Germany seemed at peace and even the Polish prisoners working in the fields seemed harbingers of peace.

Loss of Sleep.

Not so at night, however. All along the western German fringe through which our car passed people told us how, night after night, they must go to air-raid protection cellars as a precautionary measure.

They claimed that only a little damage has been done but, they said, it is annoying to have one's sleep broken. We hardly reached our hotel on the German border when we, too, learned what it means to drop everything and run for cover as warning sirens resounded. It proved to be a false alarm, however.

"Where is Hitler?" was one of the first questions we asked. Each officer or private asked that question would tell us he saw the Fuehrer some time or other in the past week.

Apparently, Hitler is moving from one formation to another with the same dash which characterizes all his actions. Naturally, his whereabouts at any given moment is a closely guarded secret.

ALLIES PLAN COUNTER-BLOW, SWISS REPORT

Weygand Said To Aim At Pinching Off German Pocket In France

Pressure On Switzerland Eased By Late Developments

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, May 20—Allied forces under the direction of their new generalissimo, Gen. Maxime Weygand, are preparing a counter-offensive to pinch off the German pocket from the Valenciennes region to Rethel, it was reported here today.

Valenciennes is just across the Belgian border in France, along the northern flank of the Allied West front. Rethel is on the south side of the Nazi thrust.

Weygand, close friend and disciple of the late Marshal Ferdinand Foch, is said to aim at sewing up the German pocket, which has reached a point eighty miles from Paris.

Allied Forces Massing

Bearing out the reports heard here were the massing of British and Belgian forces supported by French motorized units in the Valenciennes region and a still more powerful French force at Bethel and nearby Rheims, behind the Aisne river.

The French concentration south of Bethel is said to include large tank and armored-car divisions and is ready to move despite Nazi bombing raids.

The pincer move, if successful, would help reestablish the French line along the Ardennes through Mons to Ghent.

[Associated Press Editor's Note: The Nazis have recognized the peril of thrusting a deep and narrow salient into France, but apparently are confident of the ability of their air and armored forces to protect flanks.]

Pressure Relieved

Pressure on Switzerland has been relieved by the developments, although the country remained on a full wartime basis.

German forces concentrated in the Swiss border area withdrew today. How far and for what purpose was not known here, but speculation was that they were rushed to the battle fields of France and Belgium.

The Swiss command today enforced a decree requiring all arms factories which had been working for belligerents to turn over all stocks and current output to the army for safekeeping.

Library At Louvain Is Burned; 700,000 Volumes Believed Lost

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the German Western Armies, May 20—American newspaper correspondents, guests of Adolf Hitler, today saw the ruins of Louvain Library, which was erected on Herbert Hoover Square by cooperation of numerous American universities.

The building had been gutted by fire.

Its 700,000 volumes must be considered lost.

All floors had been swept by the blaze.

No one seemed to be able to say by whom or how the blaze had been set.

From the basement wisps of smoke still rose.

Practically the entire population of Louvain, 41,000, had fled. The German military commander of the city, Lieutenant Colonel Engelmann, tried to form an emergency city council with a fire captain and the lone professor remaining as the nucleus. Engelmann indicated that most of the civil administration would be turned over to the council.

There was neither light nor water available. The city, studded by the ruins of the library, presented a picture of desolation.

Another scene which I saw was the shambles of the Chateau of Sternockerzeel—property of the Archduke Otto, pretender to the non-existent Austrian throne.

On the other hand, life in Brussels, on the surface at least, went on unperturbed.

The scene there was in marked contrast t that at Sternockerzeel, the Belgian castle of the ex-Empress Zita, the pretender Otto and others of Zita's numerous family. The British had made the castle a divisional staff headquarters, which prompted the Germans to bomb it.

One bomb dug a hole thirty feet deep beside the massive structure. The repercussion blew off part of the roof while everything within was thrown together in utter confusion.

Otto's shaving outfit was superimposed on the grand piano. Hungarian newspapers and costly French prints were jumbled together.

Wandering from one desolate room to another, I found in Zita's boudoir the carbon copy of a letter she had written in French to a relative.

She observed "as you saw in the papers, Otto has gone to America." Of Otto's brother, Felix, also in America, she wrote, "I suppose he talks Yankee."

The scene at the castle was one angle of the kaleidoscopic view of the battle-scarred area where Hitler changed his general headquarters three times today to keep up with his forces.

The swift movement caused newspaper correspondents, his personal guests, several dejected moments. It was necessary to obtain his approval for the specific section of the front which we wished to visit. Adjutants of the high command assigned to escort us were unable to make contact with general headquarters so quickly did it move.

Drama Of Misery

We had no reason, however, to regret a slight loss in time, for what we saw was a human drama of the misery and horror wrought by modern warfare.

More than a day in a speedy automobile, over the abandoned battleground, was a revelation.

But the eye also cannot forget that group of twenty-five to thirty English Tommies whom we encountered almost as soon as they were captured.

Tomorrow, however, we are to be back at the front, closer than ever to the fierce battle.

Invited By General

Col. Gen. Walther von Reichenau asked us to visit him in the late forenoon tomorrow.

When we inquired whether he was near the front he replied significantly, "Quite near."

Reichenau is the man who achieved fame as a tactician in the Polish campaign.

From what I have beheld, it is evident that Nazi Germany's tremendous air force dominates the fighting in Germany's blitzkrieg attempt to bring France and Great Britain to their knees.

Roads Jammed

Regiment after regiment of infantry, detachment after detachment of well-nourished cavalry, and seemingly inexhaustible reserves of air force and artillery poured into the operations area.

Main connecting roads from Germany, via Holland, and in the conquered sector of Belgium toward western Belgium and northern France, were jammed.

In this endless march I noticed how many Belgian and Dutch private cars now bore German troops. In other words, the machines promptly were requisitioned. I also noted in various villages that horses were being taken for German war service.

Trek From Louvain

As we left Louvain and motored toward Brussels we saw that same sad treck homeward of dejected civilians who had fled from Louvain before the fighting started. It was the same old refugee story—babies fastened onto baskets on bicycles on which papa also had loaded bedding and other necessities.

We passed through villages, lying on the direct line of march of Belgian troops retreating from east of Louvain and later from Louvain to Brussels, where there was not the slightest indication of damage. In others, where the Belgians had made a stand, the villages were given the same devastating treatment as befell Louvain.

We heard first-hand accounts of the terrifying effects produced by bombs thrown by Stukas (dive bombers). On some streets there was not a dwelling which had escaped damage.

A Saint's Picture

Now and then, a saint's picture would protrude from a bit of wall on the second story which had not crumbled. We gazed into shattered rooms where only a bridal couple's photograph remained to adorn a bit of jagged wall. Somewhat suggestive of the whims of hurricanes, sometimes a grand piano, undamaged, would stand out in the midst of wreckage.

I had expected to see a large part of Brussels in ruins. As a matter of fact, the city itself is practically unhurt, but Schaerbeek Railway Station, outside the city, where trains connect to all parts of Belgium and, indeed, all Europe, was demolished. Residents of Brussels accepted the occupation philosophically and the German officers and their troops were shown courtesies.

Shops were well filled with customers and supplies. Only the telephone lines were not working—the high command having deemed it inexpedient to resume general telephone business.

May Write Home

One Tommy, among twenty-five young British infantrymen who were taken prisoners, remarked, "They (the Germans) have been very decent in taking care of our wants." He exhibited bandages on his head which he said the Germans had provided "immediately."

The Britons were worried about not having been able to send word home. I interpreted their wish to the German lieutenant in charge of the prisoners.

"Please make them understand," he explained, "and I sincerely mean it, that just as soon as they've been passed on to German soil, which will be in a day or two, they'll be permitted to write daily, via the Red Cross."

Asks For Beer

"Have they any other wishes?" asked the lieutenant.

"Any chance at lager beer?" piped up a doughty Welsh sergeant.

The lieutenant smiled, explaining: "I fear not over here in the operations area."

"May we have tea?" chimed the Tommies.

"You bet," said the German lieutenant.

"Five Days Of Hell"

Asked why they had surrendered, a young prisoner from Liverpool said: "Oh, 'twas the incessant bombing and shelling of the past five days of hell. So finally when we were surrounded and trapped we just gave up."

Blasting at everything in the path of Führer Hitler's mechanized warriors and infantry, Field Marshal Hermann Goering's air legions are Germany's aces.

It was only when I went to the front with two other American newspapermen on the Führer's invitation that I was able to see just what Nazi air power means.

Newspaperman's Dream

The invitation from Hitler meant realization of the dream of every newspaperman in Berlin since the Führer began his gigantic offensive against Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and his old enemies, France and Britain.

We crossed the last German border town in the dust and morning mist amid the roar of planes.

Here is a general idea of how the Germans operate in this area:

An air squadron first determines where enemy troops are moving. It learns exactly the strength of the enemy's forces, their equipment, types of weapons and other details.

Stukas Follow Tips

With these tips, reinforced by photographs, the German Stukas followed by heavy bombers, dash upon the enemy. They smash towns, if necessary, through which troops are pushing, demolish railroads, telephone lines and industrial plants and destroy marching columns.

The air information service tells the mechanized units where the bombing has been successful and, with terrific speed, these forces dart into the face of the confused enemy. Mobile land units follow through. Then the main army is ready to occupy the positions.

Columns Of Guns

So thoroughly did the Germans prepare for the campaign that they have exactly fitting substitute bridges ready for every strategic river or canal crossing in Belgium or France likely to be dynamited or damaged. This ready-made equipment is brought up in reinforced cars.

As we drove to the front from Berlin, we saw long columns of anti-aircraft guns, cannon, air-force supply cars and gasoline vehicles moving regularly toward the operations area.

Hitler, whose army seemingly has prepared for everything, also is prepared for peace. He seems determined that if he wins he will make France and England send their representatives to historic Munster, in Westphalia, to talk peace conditions.

Munster is symbolical for Hitler. Not content with wiping out the last vestiges of the Versailles treaty which ended the World War, his mind goes back to 1648, when the Germany of the Holy Roman Empire was broken into powerless bits by the treaty at Munster which ended the Thirty Years War.

French Plan Pincers Counter-Blow, Report

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, May 20—Gen. Maxime Weygand, the new Allied generalissimo, apparently is shaping a powerful pincers counter-offensive from the Valenciennes and Rethel areas, it was reported here today.

Reports reaching Switzerland indicated that a powerful British-Belgian force ,supported by French motorized units, was massing in the Valenciennes region and still more powerful French concentrations were assembling near Rheims and Rethel, behind the Aisne river.

Valenciennes is just across the Belgian frontier in France along the northern flank of the Allies' Western front. Rethel is on the south side of the German "budge" into northern France.

Hopes To Sew Up Pocket

Weygand, who succeeded Gen. Maurice Gamelin yesterday as the Allied commander in chief, is said to envisage a counter-thrust from these two sides aimed at sewing up the German pocket, which has reached a point about eighty miles northeast of Paris.

Such a maneuver, if successful, could reestablish the French line along the Ardennes, through Mons, to Ghent.

Heavy French concentrations south of Rethel were reported to include large tank and armored-car divisions and to be ready to move despite constant Nazi bombing raids from airports behind the Rhine.

[The Nazis also recognized the peril of thrusting a deep, narrow salient into France, it was believed in Berlin, but were confident of the ability of their air and armored forces to protect the German flanks.]

Foreign military observers here reported that the German westward drive was confined to such a narrow point between St. Quentin and Le Cateau, about thirty miles to the northeast, as almost to invite an Allied counter-offensive from the south, east and northwest.

Pressure on Switzerland was relieved, meanwhile, as both Germany and the Allies pulled more and more divisions and equipment from frontier zones into the western front. Nevertheless, the Swiss remained on a wartime basis of full mobilization, with no troops relieved or dismissed.

Threat to Paris Eased.

PARIS, May 20—(A. P.).—Five German mechanized divisions, with 60,000 men inside their armor, battered west across the northern French plains today in a drive toward the English Channel, easing the threat of a smash at Paris.

Their apparent objective was to drive a wedge between the French forces defending Paris and the Allied armies—British, Belgian and French—in Belgium. Whether this meant that the Nazis definitely had abandoned the idea of striking at Paris remained a matter of conjecture.

The northern Allied forces dropped back to meet the new threat.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Information disclosed this afternoon that the French had evacuated St. Quentin yesterday in the face of the German advance.

Previously a War Ministry spokesman had asserted that, in see-saw fighting at St. Quentin—bloody battleground of the world war eighty miles northeast of Paris—the Germans had entered the city, but that its fate was in doubt.

Situation Is Confused.

The situation there is confused, the spokesman said, with charges and counter-charges between French and German columns of tanks.

"Fighting was particularly heavy in the western suburbs of St. Quentin yesterday," he added.

The French also faced an enemy "push" north of St. Quentin. Military advices said that an extreme advance German motorcycle squad had reached Peronne—fifteen miles northwest of St. Quentin—yesterday, but withdrew at nightfall to avoid being cut off.

Peronne was the westernmost point reached by a Nazi force in the drive toward the channel ports.

Attack East of Cambrai.

The spokesman reported other German columns attacking heavily east of Cambrai, which is twenty-five miles north of St. Quentin.

Five German bombers attacked the region of Dieppe, French port on the English channel, on Saturday night, killing one person and wounding another, according to press reports published in Paris today. (Here four lines were censored.)

The War Ministry spokesman said that the Germans had captured the crew of a small casemate near Montmedy, on the Little Maginot Line southeast of Sedan. The communique said that further German attacks in this area were repulsed.

The spokesman also reported the capture of German troops who crossed the River Aisne near Rethel, 100 miles from Paris and southeast of St. Quentin, and remained on the southern side after the main Nazi force was thrown back.

As military experts judged the situation, the Germans may attempt to continue west from the Cambrai sector to reach the sea—Dunkirk, on the Channel, is only seventy miles north—and thus cut French liaison with the Allied forces still retiring in orderly fashion in Belgium.

At the same time, they said, the enemy columns, having reached Saint Quentin, on the river Oise, may try to roll southwest, down the Oise valley, toward Paris.

Steel Meets Steel.

The French fought throughout yesterday in the Cambrai region and the surging, swirling struggle began again at dawn today. Military authorities said that the greatest melee exisited in the region between La Fere, about twelve miles south of St. Quentin and Landrecies, about twenty-five miles north of that city.

Steel met steel in this see-saw battle in which the Germans have continued to advance with the aid of four or five armored divisions. The situation, said the War Ministry spokesman, "continues grave."

At Montmedy, some twenty miles southeast of Sedan, at the hinge of the main Maginot and Little Maginot lines, German infantry came over in two massive attacks on the main Maginot fortifications after very heavy artillery preparation. The French were said to have thrown them back, causing enormous losses at the Montmedy bridgehead over the Chiers River, but the enemy succeeded in capturing a small advanced casemate, it was said, and imprisoned the French who manned it.

Prefect Dismissed.

This attack was interpreted as a diversion to the flank of the general drive toward the west.

In the Paris region, the drone of plane motors was heard this morning, followed by gunfire, but ther were no immediast reports of incidents. (Apparently the correspondent wanted to say bombings at this point.)

News of the German crossing of the Aisne River was followed by the announcement of the dismissal of the Prefect of the Aisne Department.

Under the leadership of a new commander-in-chief, Gen. Maxime Weygand, the armies, of France braced today for a "do or die" fight to halt the German invaders hammering at their lines eighty miles from Paris.

This morning, the French High Command announced that severe German attacks were thrown back near Montmedy, southwest of Sedan and in the region of Rethel, 100 miles northeast of Paris, where the enemy was repulsed after crossing the Aisne River.

Near St. Quentin, west of Rethel and eighty miles from the capital, French troops "fought vigorously" to "hold the enemy push," while French bombing planes continued their raids on Nazi communications.

Gen. Weygand, seventy-three-year-old veteran of the world war, was called to supreme command of the Allied land forces yesterday to succeed Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin as the bitter battle in northern France, described by military experts as "the greatest in modern times," rapidly approached a critical stage.

Similar Situations.

The situation facing the new Allied chieftain closely paralleled the dark days of 1918 when, as an understudy of the late Marshal Foch, he helped map the strategy which saved Paris and broke the back of the Kaiser's last great offensive.

It was complicated, however, by the possibility that the Germans, having penetrated France to a depth of thirty to fifty miles on an eighty-mile front, might elect to drive westward toward the Channel to cut off British troops fighting in Belgium instead of striking south along the Oise River toward Paris.

Military authorities believed that the next twenty-four hours would answer the question of which direction the main German offensive would take. Much was expected to depend on the outcome of fighting surging around the outskirts of St. Quentin.

Motorized Army Corps.

In this sector, the Germans were reported to be employing an entire motorized army corps, numbering at least 60,000 men, in a fierce assault on the Allied lines. The French said that their troops were offering "stubborn resistance."

Northeast of St. Quentin, spearhead of the German westward thrust, the French said that they had regained some ground by counter-attacks on the Nazis flank near the border town of Maubeuge.

At the opposite end of the tank-lined pocket the Germans hold in northern France, French troops were reported to have recaptured several towns in the vicinity of Rethel. Still farther east, near Montmedy, the French said, German frontal attacks on fortified positions at the junction of the Belgian, French and Luxemburg borders were repulsed with heavy losses for the invaders.

Pincer Move Hinted.

Reports on the action around Maubeuge and Rethel led some observers to believe that the Allies might be launching a pincer movement in an attempt to cut off the pocket and isolate the German troops in France.

French military men expressed the belief that the operations of the mechanized Nazi columns which have led the advance into France were being handicapped by the difficulty of supplying them with gasoline via extended communication lines.

They also seemed confident that the French had gained valuable experience in dealing with German Blitzkrieg methods which would make the Nazis' task more difficult now.

Weygand Choice Hailed.

Gen. Weygand's appointment as "Chief of the National Defense Staff and commander in chief of the Allied land forces' 'came just one day after Premier Paul Reynaud had summoned Marshal Philippe Petain, world war hero of Verdun, to participate in his Government as Vice-Premier.

Gen. Weygand, a native of Belgium who became a French citizen at the age of 20, relinquished the command of the French forces in the Near East to take over his new post.

The communique announcing Gen Weygand's promotion, which followed two conferences yesterday afternoon between M. Reynaud and Marshal Petain, did not say what post Gen. Gamelin would take over. A change in the Allied command had been expected for several days.

NATION FEELS IRON HAND OF NEW LEADERS

Deserters And Pillagers Face Firing Squad Under Drastic Order

Sugar Ration Created By Cabinet—Newspapers Reduce Pages

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 20—France felt the iron hand of its new leaders today when a Cabinet meeting attended by Gen. Maxime Weygand and Marshal Philippe Petain ordered swift, hard punishment of military offenders and created a sugar ration.

Under the new regime, deserters and pillagers can be stood up against a wall almost as soon as they are caught. The new decree permits no appeal to any higher court.

The army courts will deal with both soldiers and civilians summarily.

Factory workers who leave their posts without permission were classified the same as army deserters.

"A. W. O. L." No Joke

"A. W. O. L." is no joke in France tonight. In the grim words of the law governing the power of the military courts:

"No appeal will be permitted to the sentences pronounced and they (the offenders) will be immediately executed."

As for rationing, coal cards already have been distributed, bread cards will be in use June 1, and now it is sugar.

The effect of the war is plainly evident in Paris. No French family is without someone at the front.

You see it in the eyes of elderly taxi drivers, the bowed shoulders of trudging women, refugees with their bundles.

Gayety Is Missing

These are the days of that celebrated springtime in Paris, but the luxury shops and cafe terraces are glum and the gayety is missing.

Paris newspapers were ordered to reduce from four to two pages starting tomorrow as an economy measure.

Germans are attempting to cause abandonment of French industrial centers by spreading false news on the advance of the German army, a communique said. It added:

"The civil and military authorities are alone qualified to order the evacuation of localities that military activity could make dangerous for the population."

Nazi Legions Roll West

Along the battle fronts, Adolf Hitler's men in rolling armor—60,000 strong in the advance guard—battered westward on a new tangent, the English Channel as their goal.

The shift of direction of this steel-plated spearhead of five mechanized divisions eased the threat to Paris after the vanguard had thrust to within eighty miles of the French capital.

Allied Split Is Objective

The new objective—beside the oft-mentioned aim of bases for direct attack on the British Isles—apparently was to drive an iron wedge between the main French forces defending Paris and the British-Belgian-French armies in Belgium.

Northen Allied armies were forced to drop back to intercept the threat, while the main body of French troops fought to stem the German advance. These movements recalled the "race to the sea" at the start of the World War which left the Allies in control of the channel.

Nazis May Pass Up Paris

Whether Germany definitely had abandoned the idea of striking at Paris remained uncertain.

From St. Quentin, abandoned by the French after a see-saw battle of tanks, and from the Le Cateau-La Fere sector—thirty miles wide across the German "bulge"—it is roughly 100 miles to the channel port of Calais, which is directly across from Dover, England.

Most of the armored columns and aerial strking forces were concentrated in the Le Cateau-Le Fere sector, where they reached the west bank of the canal running from the Oise to the Sambre river.

French Forced Back

Their charge forward continued there, forcing the French to withdraw from St. Quentin—80 miles northeast of Paris—but 11 days of titanic struggle on the Western front, with constant fighting, mangling of roads by machines and lengthening lines of communication, appeared to be slowing down the German advance. (Here twenty words were censored.)

French military advices said an extreme advance German motorcycle squad touched Peronne—15 miles northwest of St. Quentin and westernmost point reached by a Nazi force—yesterday but withdrew at nightfall to avoid being cut off from main lines far to the rear. (Fifteen words censored.)

Germans attacked at two points in the Rethel sector on the southern flank of the "bulge" (Five words censored) and crossed the Aisne river, where the new French lines defending the capital had been erected.

The French in converging counter-attacks reported, however, that they had blasted away the German bridgeheads and captured two "detachments" of prisoners.

Another German attack was launched farther east in the Montmedy sector—where the so-called "Little Maginot" line facing Belgium joins the original Maginot Line—with heavy artillery preparation followed by waves of infantry.

After submerging one small advanced pillbox, the French reported, the German attackers were beaten off by the crossfire of the Maginot Line, leaving their dead piled high in front of the main forts.

Picture "Confused"

The picture of the fight in the St. Quentin area is "confused," a War Ministry spokesman said. He acknowledged that St. Quentin "certainly has been taken" by the Germans and that Peronne is "perhaps held by light elements" of the Nazis.

Fighting also continued around Caudry, eighteen miles north of St. Quentin, but the important town of Cambrai, ten miles northwest of Caudry, still was held by the French, the spokesman asserted. La Fere, the south end of the sector, remained in French hands, and the French counter-attacked from that base.

Literally thousands of vehicles, ranging from motorcycles to giant tanks, streamed into the modern mechanized cavalry battle around St. Quentin.

Allies Rumble Up

French and British motorized divisions, held in reserve when the Germans broke through the Meuse front last week, rumbled up to meet the Nazis' armored forces.

The Germans, stronger in number, still were rolling ahead, but the Allies were striking and then withdrawing to escape the heavier Reichswehr weight.

Swarms of French infantry, being regrouped under General Weygand, massed around the widening German salient which now bulged (nine words censored) near St. Quentin and at its bases at Maubeuge, to the north, and Sedan, to the south.

Premier Reynaud, after a conference with William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador, talked for more than an hour with his new Vice-Premier, Marshal Petain, and General Weygand.

Five Mechanized Divisions Striking

MAY 21 1940

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Correspondent

With the British Expeditionary Forces in France, May 20 (Passed by Field Censor)—The British Expeditionary Force, fighting with a desperation born of the knowledge that their columns stand between the German hosts and the death of an empire, continued withdrawals today to positions on which they must inevitably make a final stand.

The situation resulting from an incredibly swift Nazi advance still is obscure.

Even experienced officers admit they have no idea of the exact extent of the fighting or for certain where the next German blow will be delivered.

Censorship more rigid than ever forbids mention of the whereabouts of the new line, but it is far stronger than any on which the British have stood thus far.

60,000 Mechanized Nazis Battering West

Five German mechanized divisions, with 60,000 men inside their armor, battered west across the northern French plains today in a drive toward the English Channel, easing the threat of a smash at Paris.

Their apparent objective was to drive a wedge between the French forces defending Paris and the Allied armies—British, Belgian and French—in Belgium. Whether this meant that the Nazis definitely had abandoned the idea of striking at Paris remained a matter of conjecture.

The northern Allied forces dropped back to meet the new threat.

Retreat In South Reaches St. Quentin

Only that much can be said of the British position in this hour of the gravest peril to the Empire.

In the south, withdrawals which started ninety-six hours ago are said to have reached St. Quentin.

There were isolated instances where the German mechanized columns have pounded their way even farther into the heart of the region which saw some of the World War's heaviest fighting.

British Left Flank Holding Nazis

No one can say where or when the Allied high command intends to counter-attack. But one consideration everyone agrees on: it is to come soon, or not at all.

The most likely point might be to the north, where the Germans pouring through Brussels are vulnerable to flanking movement and air attack.

The British left flank, which strategically withdrew, cut up but conscious that it badly mauled the Germans at Louvain and at Wavre, is now in a better position.

Battling stubbornly, it checked half a dozen German attempts at a break through and appears adequate to handle any large-scale attack in that sector.

Allies' Reserves Forced Into Action

The B. E. F., once more as in March, 1918, stands with its back to the Channel and a triumphant German army before it. But a new danger exists tonight.

Using mechanized cavalry as mobile units have not been used since Napoleon's day, the German high command has flung hundreds of tanks and armored cars forward. This not only has brought the death and destruction of war to cities and towns which had considered themselves safe from ground attack at least, but also has complicated the general strategical situation by forcing the Allies to throw reserve units into action.

The situation is confused in many sectors where the French, British and Belgians, fighting shoulder to shoulder, seek to ward off mechanized blows.

Allies Scoring Some Successes

There have been isolated Allied successes. A German mechanized column nearing a city I was in yesterday was smashed and destroyed by the combined fire of anti-tank guns and French 75's hurriedly rushed into action.

The German infantry met its match at Louvain against raw courage and the splendid discipline of the Guards and a rugged Irish regiment.

But these were the exception, not the rule.

Tonight the lavalike flow of Nazi forces has rolled to the sea at Antwerp on the north and is moving southward protected by a cloud of "Luftwaffe"—bombing and fighting planes.

Despite desperate forays by R. A. F. pilots against German formations far greater in number, the German air force maintains its numerical superiority in the skies.

Villages far behind the lines have been machine-gunned and bombed in the last twenty-four hours, and the retreating British and French have been harried by strafing and bombing

Nazi Tactics Revolutionize War, Likened to Naval Battle on Land

MAY 21 1940
NORMAN LODGE

No Defense Found; Planes Serve as Artillery and Cavalry, Clearing Way for 'Land Battleships' and 'Destroyers'; 'Chutists Seize Key Depots

LONDON, May 20 (AP).—The modern method of warfare as used by the Nazis was said today by military observers to have revolutionized tactics, and was described as a naval battle on land. The idea that artillery preparation must precede infantry advance and that supply and ammunition trains must follow the troops was said to be a thing of the past.

By the new method employed by the German war machine, a huge armada of heavy bombers appears over the country or objective to be attacked. Carrying bombs of up to 500 pounds, these act as the long-range artillery, dive-bombing previously selected targets. Each plane has a definite target of its own.

As these planes drop their bombs and turn about, they become, on the return trip, mechanized machine-gun units, strafing anything visible on the ground. As they return, a new wave of lighter planes, armed with lighter bombs and incendiary fuses, descends like locusts, taking the part formerly delegated to cavalry.

Screening the attack, the new wave clears the way for still another squadron of planes, which includes transports bearing parachute troops. The parachutists, dropped far beyond the objective, presumably attempt to take over gasoline depots and supply stations and to make contact with previously planted fifth-column men. The demoralizing of civilians and whatever defensive troops may be in the vicinity is their aim.

After dropping their loads of parachutists, the transports in turn become machine-gun units on the return trip.

With the way thus cleared, a new air force comes to protect the advance of heavy tanks.

The tanks in battle arrange themselves in a fashion similar to naval warfare. The thirty to sixty-ton tanks are in the middle, while lighter and faster armored cars and small tanks are on the flanks. They screen the advance of the infantry which is moved up in buses, trucks and whatever mobile facilities are available.

It was pointed out that these infantry troops never are brought up unless the way is cleared, and that the entire mission is under the constant protection of fighter planes.

While the infantry is coming up, the parachutists—and there are several branches of parachute troops—perform previously appointed duties. Wearing five winged birds on their tunic lapels, the parachutists make contact with the fifth columnists, who have been protecting their descent, for subsequent maneuvers.

Parachutists wearing four birds are landed beyond their objective and make a back-trek toward it, mopping up whatever they find.

Three-birders seize and hold supply depots, while the two-birders seize whatever airports there may be, or, lacking those, suitable landing fields. The single-bird troops are engineers who open roads so that the advancing infantry may be rushed onward.

Co-ordination of these tactics has been attained thus far. No defense against such an overpowering attack has been created.

Like clockwork, a new transport plane group appears and, after dropping from thirty to fifty parachutists, goes to fields presumed to have been seized for the use of wounded soldiers, to return them to the home base.

British Call Situation 'Grim'

State at Front Held Morally Better, but Not Improved Geographically.

LONDON, May 20 (A. P.).—An authoritative British spokesman today described conditions on the front as "pretty grim." Saying that geographically the situation is no better and that there is no use pretending it is, he added, however, that morally the situation was improved.

Pointing out that the advantage at the beginning must be with the aggressor, the spokesman said that it must be so especially with "an aggressor as efficient and ruthless as the Germans."

He said that the base of the bulge driven into northern France by the Nazis had been widened slightly but that it was not much deeper, and that the general direction of movements at present was northwest.

Give and take air fighting roared on the edges of the war fronts.

The Air Ministry stated that thirty more German aircraft were destroyed today and successful attacks made on oil refineries in northwest Germany last night. Its communique said that Royal Air Force bombers made a direct hit on a railway bridge at Roux, south of Brussels.

Two British aircraft failed to return from the raids, it said.

In bomb raids south of Brussels, the Royal Air Force hammered enemy communication lines, railway stations and bridge.

Aisne Sector Attacked.

"Damage was done to rolling stock and the permanent way," the Air Ministry said. "Troop and tank concentrations were attacked in the Aisne sector. Near Sedan a lorry park was set on fire."

Returning bombers said they encountered "intense" anti-aircraft fire. In Varnes, the Air Ministry said, "a large number of enemy aircraft standing out on the airdrome were repeatedly bombed and machine-gunned by relays of Hudson aircraft. Much damage was believed done."

German progress has been slow, the spokesman declared, and insisted that there was "no reason to lose heart or courage."

Calls Belgians Magnificent.

The Belgians have been fighting magnificently, he said, and there has been no break through their lines. Liege and Namur still are holding out, he declared.

But he admitted that there has been "some progress with resultant mixups"—places where the French were behind the Germans and others where the situation was reversed.

The German mechanized forces no longer pack such a terrific punch, he said, and French 75s have proved extraordinarily effective in stopping the Nazis' huge tanks and the German drive has lost momentum.

Thousands of these famous guns, which can fire twenty-five times a minute when handled by a well-trained crew, have been rushed to defensive positions.

He said that the selection of Gen. Maxime Weygand as Commander in Chief "has given everybody tremendous confidence."

British Retiring.

British troops on the Allied left wing were retiring to conform to the shifting of the southern situation, he said, but no gap has been punched in the Allies' front.

"Every time the Germans have met our boys they have gotten a bloody nose," the spokesman said.

"They now have the greatest respect and caution for the British.

"Despite what the Germans might have said, we have not abandoned any material. Our boys are now getting used to bombing and are protecting themselves accordingly.

"We are not losing many men through these bombings now. But the noise is great and unpleasant."

The British, ready in the words of Prime Minister Churchill, to "face, endure and retaliate against" the air might of Nazi Germany, concentrated their efforts at home on combating that power and its threat to the British Isles.

Stricter control of industry, notably the airplane industry, was believed indicated by Prime Minister Churchill's statement last night that considerations of private property would not be allowed to interfere with the Government's war effort.

Britishers held that the Government would assume control of a large number of privately owned factories producing war equipment to intensify production. Mr. Churchill may discuss plans for stepped-up production when he makes a statement in the House of Commons tomorrow.

At the same time, Lord Beaverbrook, new Minister of Aircraft production, issued an appeal to garage workers employed in servicing civilian cars to accept employment immediately in aircraft factories for assembly work. Eight thousand children who previously had been moved out of London and other big cities were removed from exposed east and south coast towns to the shelter of Wales, in the west; 2,000 others go back to London.

Air Raid Protection.

For the rest, Britain relied upon the efficiency of her huge air raid precaution organization to make it impossible for massed Nazi bombing attacks to bring the nation to its knees. Observers pointed out that cities like Rotterdam—where, the Dutch legation in Paris announced, at least 100,000 persons were killed by methodical German air attacks—lacked London's balloon barrage and her organization to combat fires started by incendiary bombs.

On the offensive side, the Air Ministry announced that Royal Air Force bombers over the week end raided German communication lines and supply bases from Hamburg in the north to Sedan in the south. The R. A. F. centered its attacks on oil stores, feeding tanks and concentrations of the dive bombers which form the spearhead of the Nazi offensive.

At least twenty German planes were reported shot down.

Front Is Holding.

On land, the headquarters of the British Expeditionary Force announced that "the British front was held successfully in the face of enemy pressure" after four successive days of falling back in the face of the German iron drive pivoting westward through northern France toward the Channel ports and England.

Mr. Churchill, in his first broadcast to the empire as Prime Minister, said that he counted upon "dogged endurance" to stabilize the western front with the help of the French "genius for recovery and counter-attack. Mr. Churchill's declaration that "mastery can be gained only by furious, unrelenting assault" coincided with the appointment of Gen. Maxime Weygand, a master of offensive warfare, to the supreme command of the Allied armies.

Mr. Churchill indicated the new Allied strategy by asserting:

"The armies must cast away the idea of resisting attack behind concrete lines or natural obstacles."

Warning to Nation.

He voiced his confidence that the western front would be stabilized in time to draw on the full resources of the Allied empires to check the German Blitzkrieg. At the same time, he grimly warned his countrymen that, once the front was stabilized, "the bulk of that hideous apparatus of aggression which dashed Holland into ruin and slavery in a few days will be turned upon us."

Referring to the air power which crushed Holland, he said:

"We are ready to face it, to endure it and to retaliate against it to any extent that the unwritten laws of war permit. There will be many men and women in this island who, when the ordeal comes upon them, as come it will, will feel comfort and even a pride that they are sharing the perils of our lands at the front."

Wounded Return Home.

The German aerial threat was driven home for the second night in succession when Nazi aircraft nosed over England's southeastern coast. Inhabitants heard occasional heavy explosions and intermittent gunfire as searchlights swept the sky.

At the same time, the sound of guns could be heard from across the English Channel, where the great land battle continued. Shells could be seen bursting in the sky.

While twelve special trains carried 8,000 children from the English coast to Wales, two hospital trains from a British port carried to the provinces the first British wounded brought from Belgium.

Flyers Blow Up Oil Tanks, Roads And Bridges Inside Germany

Troops In Belgium Drop Back In Face Of Foe's Thrust West

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 20—Britain's airmen, outnumbered but claiming superiority, plane for plane and man for man, tonight were reported doing steady damage to supply bases and communication lines of the Germans driving to Channel ports for an attack on England.

An Air Ministry bulletin said fighter patrols of one Royal Air Force group had brought down more than fifty Heinkels, Dorniers, Junkers and Messerschmitts Saturday and Sunday, "with less than half that number of casualties to themselves."

A detailed account of Saturday bombings of oil storage tanks near Hanover and railway junctions at Cologne, said a "strong formation" attacked oil tanks at Misburg, and roads and bridges behind the German lines at Gembloux, Givet, Dinant and Namur on the Belgian front.

Attack Lasts 2 Hours

The midnight attack on the oil tanks lasted two hours and the raiders reported "at one stage in the operations seven bombs were seen to fall diagonally across the target and three big explosions immediately followed. Several huge fires were seen to break out."

The raiders said that on their way home they saw the oil tanks bombed on Friday at Bremen still were "well alight."

In the railway junction attacks, thirty-six bombs dropped on one point, the account said, with "several direct hits . . . causing extensive damage."

Bridge Destroyed

One end of a bridge over the Sambre was destroyed by a bomb. German troops on the march near Gembloux were "machine-gunned and dispersed."

The Air Ministry said British bombers last night scored a direct hit on a railway bridge at Roux, south of Brussels; wrecked rolling stock and the railway right of way in Belgium, and attacked troop and tank concentrations in the Aisne sector in France.

The British said fourteen of their fighters and two bombers were missing after the raids.

Swinging north of the fighting front the British airmen attacked oil refineries in northwestern Germany and started seven fires in the airdrome at Varnes, north of Norway's German-held port of Trondheim.

British Drop Back

The British troops in Belgium were reported dropping back because of the westward drive by the Germans in northern France.

A military official described the Western front situation as "grim" and said the British were retiring in Belgium to keep the German St. Quentin push from driving a wedge between the British-Belgian troops and the French army.

The British spokesman said the German thrust was not packing as heavy a punch as at the start. He praised the Belgians as fighting magnificently and declared there was no break through their lines. He added that the important centers of Liege and Namur—islands of Belgian stronghold in the midst of German conquest— still were holding out.

Front Still Intact

In speaking of the British withdrawals, the spokesman asserted that no gap had been punched in the Allied front.

"Every time the Germans have met our boys they have gotten a bloody nose," he said.

The Admiralty disclosed the loss of the escort ship Whitley, a 1,090-ton converted destroyer, which it said had been bombed and subsequently beached.

Eelco van Kleffens, Dutch Foreign Minister, in an account of the German conquest of the Netherlands, disclosed the extent to which technique for invasion from the air had been developed.

Nazis Land From Planes

"Hundreds and hundreds," of German soldiers landed from seaplanes, he said, and some wearing Dutch uniforms mingled with regular Netherlands units, then suddenly turned and shot them down.

The drive for quickened war production opened by the new government of Winston Churchill, Prime Minister, gained momentum with a nation-wide response of thousands of garage hands to an appeal by the new Minister of Aircraft Production, Lord Beaverbrook, for help in the aircraft industry.

Herbert Morrison, Supply Minister, appealed to munitions workers to "give of your very utmost." He said that peace and the civilization of the entire world "depends on the effort we make now to produce arms and win the war."

DUTCH CHARGE NAZI BOMBERS KILLED 100,000

Legation at Paris Issues Communique Telling of Devastation.

ROTTERDAM RUINS DESCRIBED

Systematic Destruction of City and Port by Massed Air Armada Related.

PARIS, May 20 (A. P.).—German bombers, flying wing tip to wing tip, killed more than 100,000 persons in systematic bombings of Rotterdam in the Nazi conquest of the Netherlands, the Netherlands legation charged in a communique. To subdue the port city's citizens, the legation said in its statement, issued last night: "German aviation began a systematic destruction of the city of Rotterdam.

"More than a third of the city was demolished by two bombing squadrons which flew over the city in thick formation with wing tips almost touching in a straight line.

Systematic Devastation.

"From a height of 1,500 meters (about 4,900 feet), they dropped with great regularity bombs weighing more than 1,000 kilograms about 2,200 pounds) each, tracing veritable paths of destruction and returning to the place where they started to attack the next strip of land.

"An area of 15 to 20 square kilometers (5.7-7.7 square miles) thus was devastated entirely, not a house remaining standing.

"Fires raged on all sides and debris of all kinds, falling after being blown high into the air, buried everything and allowed no one to escape.

No Other Course.

"The number of those killed in this operation of monstrous destruction as horrifying as a nightmare and absolutely without precedent must certainly be more than 100,000, the population of Rotterdam being 500,000 and the area of devastation representing about a third of the city."

30.24-2391

The communique added:
"Knowing that the same fate was in store for the other great cities located in the provinces of Holland and Utrecht, where the population is very dense, the commander-in-chief (of the army) had no other recourse than to capitulate."

Fascists Break Through Police Lines; Are Halted By Soldiers

Italy Swings War Preparations Into A New High Speed

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Tuesday, May 21—Solid ranks of troops and carabinieri were kept on duty until early today around the French and British embassies and the British consulate after preventing anti-Allied demonstrators last night from reaching the buildings.

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 20—Italy swung her war preparations into a new high speed tonight as the feeling grew stronger in many Italian minds that her entry into the conflict merely was a matter of time and new demonstrations against Great Britain and France broke out.

The War Department ordered three days of air-raid drill and blackouts in Rome province as well as at Terni, forty-five miles northeast, where great arms and munitions factories are running full blast.

Nothing developed to indicate whether general mobilization was imminent, but military experts said the closing of schools May 31, two weeks ahead of schedule, would make buildings available for temporary barracks if needed.

Report On Frontier Troops

Premier Mussolini received a report from Marshal Pietro Badoglio on troops posted on the frontier. It followed a report last week on the Littorio Line of fortifications in the north which il Duce ordered further strengthened.

Whether an Italian move would come on the French frontier or on the eastern borders facing the Balkans was a secret likely to be learned only after such a move was made.

Air-raid drills and blackouts were ordered to start tonight in Terni, Rome, Milan, Turin and Genoa, to continue for three days.

Demonstrations against the British and French broke out afresh in Rome tonight.

Soldiers Block Path

A shouting group of youthful Italians was held off from the British consulate by helmeted soldiers who appeared suddenly to block their advance.

Guards around the French and British embassies were redoubled.

A large number of sailors mingled with the crowds for the first time.

After breaking through a cordon formed by carabinieri and several hundred feather-hatted Bersaglieri who came on the run, a crowd of about a thousand persons swept into the Piazza Venezia waving Japanese and Italian flags.

The demonstrations soon took an anti-French turn as the crowd began to shout "Down with France," and "Tunis!"

From the Piazza Venezia, where Premier Mussolini failed to appear in response to cries of "Duce, Duce," the crowd separated and headed for the British and French diplomatic establishments, seizing flags from buildings as they went.

Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's speech in Milan yesterday left Italians expecting Mussolini to rally them suddenly some day to hear their army was on the move—just as he did when he launched the conquest of Ethiopia.

Count Ciano will go tomorrow to Albania, Italy's Balkan outpost. Friends said he intended to inspect public works which were started after Italy occupied Albania a year ago.

Meanwhile, many Americans made their plans to leave Italy. A large number of priests and nuns reserved passage on the Rex which will sail from Genoa May 29. American authorities estimated there are only about 550 United States citizens in Italy who likely would require to be taken out, with some 1,500 more Italian-Americans probably choosing to remain.

"Awaiting Single Word"

The Rome newspaper Il Popolo di Roma said today that "we are awaiting a single word, a single command of il Duce to go toward those goals which he will point out to us."

Another Rome newspaper, La Tribuna, declared: "It is becoming ever more difficult to maintain a position of non-belligerency in the face of regular provocations by those who do not want to recognize the rights of non-belligerents on the sea."

There were some possibly peaceful signs in Rome to offset the tone of war expectancy in the press. One was a report in diplomatic circles that the British and Italians have virtually settled their trade problems. The British were said to have agreed that Italy could import surplus raw materials for an emergency supply. They previously had insisted that imports must be held to peacetime levels so there would be less chance for the surplus reaching Germany.

Rome gave a festive welcome to a Japanese delegation which came here for commercial and political negotiations. Increased Italian-Japanese trade, which would be extended to China and Manchoukuo, is expected to result from the talks.

CIANO WILL LEAVE ROME ON ALBANIAN TOUR TOMORROW

MAY 21 1940

Trip Will Be Watched by Balkans—Italy's Plan Still Not Clear.

ROME, May 20 (A. P.).—Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano is arranging to go to Albania—Italy's Balkan outpost—tomorrow as a sequel to his advice to Italians yesterday to be ready for a call from Premier Mussolini to gain the nation's aspirations. Count Ciano, it was said, intends to inspect public works projects in Albania which Italy occupied on April 7, 1939, but his trip is bound to be watched closely because of Italy's military foothold there in the Balkan peninsula between Yugoslavia and Greece.

Italian schools were ordered to close on May 31, a fortnight earlier than had been intended, but there were no definite signs of imminent Italian entry into the European war.

Rumors that a mass meeting had been called for an important announcement by Mussolini were dispelled by the assertion that tonight's turnout in Piazza Venezia was to welcome a Japanese delegation come to negotiate a new trade agreement.

An Italian dispatch reported further "vexations" to Maltese Nationalists by British authorities in that island. The term "Nationalists" generally is taken in Rome to mean sympathizers with Italy.

The official Stefani news agency reported new arrests at Malta and a dozen temporary detentions, including that of the former president of disbanded university students. It said that the British action caused a "feeling of profound uneasiness among all island circles."

New 'Vexations' Reported.

Italians interpreted Count Ciano's Milan speech as a recapitulation of Italy's position, not a modification. They said that it meant that Italy had claims she wants settled, and that Italians were willing to go to war, if necessary, but that if they can be settled without fighting so much the better.

Count Ciano's speech included an apparent reaffirmation of the durability of Italy's military alliance with Germany. It was he who negotiated Italy's part of the "pact of steel" a year ago. He said yesterday that Italy "intends to keep faith in her engagements."

Making his first public address in five months, in celebration of the alliance's first anniversary, the Foreign Minister promised a crowd at Milan that "Rome must say and will say its word" in European events, but he told them that any decision as to what that word would be must come from Premier Mussolini. Count Ciano told the Milanese that they might be called upon to "face new tasks" designed to defend Italy's sovereign rights and prestige and to realize her aspirations.

No Abrupt Move Seen.

He expressed confidence that Milan, where the Italo-German pact was settled early last May before its signing at Berlin on May 22, would respond enthusiastically "if and when" Il Duce gave the order. In political circles, the Foreign Minister's words were taken as evidence that Italy is not contemplating an abrupt move.

Instead, they believed, Mussolini is studying the European situation, especially military developments on the western front, to determine how best he can serve Italy's interests.

There was at least one sign that Italy plans to be ready to intervene any time, should the occasion arise, in the resumption of air raid precautions in northern Italy today. Blackouts and other defense experiments were ordered in the industrial regions of Milan and Turin.

Word from Two Sources.

Italy has had no air-raid exercises since she took her non-belligerent stand at the outbreak of the war last September. Italian readiness for word from Mussolini came from two sources.

Il Duce's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, hailed Count Ciano's arrival at Milan with the statement that "Milan with firmness waits for Il Duce to call the people to the next test." Giovanni Ansaldo, edtior of Ciano's paper, said in his weekly broadcast to the army:

"When Il Duce commands, we will be ready and victorious."

Americans Sail Home.

Americans homeward bound from the war zones and potential war zones crowded the United States liner Washington, which sailed from Genoa yesterday, a day late, with nearly 1,500 passengers. Some 400 had to be contented with emergency accommodations.

One of the last to board the ship was Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador to Russia. At the same time, the Italian liner Rex, which came through Gibraltar for the first time without being stopped by the Allied contraband control, arrived at Naples with a small passenger list.

In Rome, the substitution of Charles Roux for Alexis Leger as Under-Secretary at the French Foreign Office is regarded as a bid for better relations with Italy on the part of the French Government. Whereas M. Leger was regarded as more or less anti-Italian, M. Roux is considered friendly toward Italy.

At the same time, his long service as French Ambassador to the Vatican placed him on excellent terms with Pope Pius XII. The pontiff, according to Vatican prelates, may forgo the usual summer stay at Castel Gandolfo in the Alban hills to keep in touch with war news and diplomatic circles at Vatican City.

Italian Editorial Irks Yugoslavia

U. S. NOT TO PUBLISH MUSSOLINI EXCHANGE

Correspondence of Roosevelt on War Won't Be Made Public

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—The White House said today that President Roosevelt's communications to Premier Mussolini of Italy would not be made public, nor would anything be said about replies received from Rome.

Reporters asked Stephen T. Early, presidential secretary, about reports that Signor Mussolini had replied to a recent communication from Mr. Roosevelt which was understood to have urged that the war not be extended. They asked whether in his reply Signor Mussolini had proposed that the United States assist in obtaining adjustment of Italy's territorial claims.

"I think all I can say," Mr. Early asserted, "is that we have never given out the President's correspondence and don't expect to say anything about Mussolini's correspondence to him."

SAYS STRATEGY IS ALL HITLER'S

MAY 21 1940

Goering Compares Him to Frederick the Great.

BERLIN, May 20 (A. P. via Radio).—Field Marshal Hermann Goering compared Adolf Hitler to Frederick the Great today. He pictured the Nazi Fuehrer as a master military strategist who personally maps even minor actions down to the very last detail.

Back in Berlin for a twelve-hour visit from the front, Marshal Goering disclosed that the Belgian fortress of Eben Emael, in the Liege area, had been considered by German militarists as the strongest fort in the world and that it had been captured in conformity with plans "made by the Fuehrer himself."

Like Frederick the Great, Goering said, Hitler possesses an "almost incredible amount of expert knowledge" of every type and kind of arms. The Field Marshal asserted that there is no warship, no gun and no weapon in existence which Hitler cannot judge as to its effect on operations.

He said that Hitler, in long nights of study, had originated the plans for all recent Nazi conquests, in Poland and Norway and now on the western front.

"The Fuehrer not only has an intimate knowledge of weapons but also, as an old soldier of the front line during the world war, he knows what man power can achieve," the Field Marshal continued.

"These experiences and expert knowledge allowed the Fuehrer not only to make all plans of operations but also to lead the armies himself.

"The Fuehrer is in continuous contact with everything that happens anywhere on the fighting fronts, and consequently he is able to make his dispositions accordingly."

Hitler Has Already Chosen Treaty Town

BERLIN, May 20 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler, apparently has chosen a site for the peace conference at which he hopes to wind up the war on German terms.

It is Munster, a Westphalian city of quaintly gabled homes and irregular streets, where the signing of the Westphalian peace treaty on October 24, 1648, ended the Thirty Years War.

In Munster's town hall is a room known as the Friedensaal, where signatures were affixed to one of two documents which closed that bloody conflict between Catholics and Protestants. The other was signed at Osnabruck.

The Munster treaty was signed by representatives of France and the Holy Roman Empire. France won Alsace, Swiss independence was recognized, and German States and Sweden achieved religious and political concessions.

British Beach Destroyer Damaged in Bomb Attack

Admiralty Lists 4 Casualties in Raid on the Whitley

LONDON, May 20 (AP).—The British destroyer Whitley was damaged by bombs and subsequently beached, the Admiralty announced today.

The Admiralty communique said: "The secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that one of our destroyers, H. M. S. Whitley, has been damaged by bombs and was subsequently beached. There were four casualties, and the next of kin have been informed."

The Whitley, a vessel of 1,090 tons, was launched in April, 1918, and was rearmed in 1938-'39 as an escort ship. A ship of the Whitley type would normally carry a crew of 130.

The Whitley was one of a class of fifteen ships launched as destroyers of war design before they were rearmed as escort vessels. She was armed with four four-inch, high-angle guns and two multiple machine-guns, and had a speed of thirty knots.

The Whitley was of the same class as the Valentine, which was reported beached on the Dutch coast on May 15 after an air attack.

Nazis Fortifying Line At Narvik for Last Stand

Swedes Report Poles Seized One Side of Fjord

STOCKHOLM, May 20 (AP).—German troops defending the Norwegian ore port of Narvik from Allied attackers were reported tonight building fortifications along the Narvik-Kiruna, Sweden, railroad for a last stand.

(In London a British dispatch said the Swedish radio had announced that a Polish unit captured the southern side of Narvik Fjord.)

German Help on Way.

LONDON, May 20 (A. P.).—A dispatch from Goteborg, Sweden, today said that refugees from Norway reported that the German Army occupied Mo and the district halfway between Trondheim and the Nazi-held arctic port of Narvik last Saturday.

They said that the Germans shelled the town and at the same time dropped parachute troops, and that grenades were used in hand-to-hand fighting before a British-Norwegian force was driven out. The refugees said that 4,000 Germans occupied Mo, part of which was in flames.

Mo is on the coast, some 200 miles north of Trondheim and about 175 miles south of Narvik.

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, May 20 (Via Radio)—Reports from Norway received here today said that Varnes Flying Field, east of Trondheim, was subjected to a heavy bomb attack by British flyers last night. Numerous craters were made on the field and the airdrome building was set afire.

Despite anti-aircraft fire, the reports said, the British planes attacked a large number of enemy parked aircraft from a height of 300 feet.

such warnings hardly were necessary, since this country was prepared to defend her neutrality.

LONDON, May 20 (A. P.).—An airdrome at Varnes, north of Norway's German-held port of Trondheim, was said today to have been attacked successfully last night. Seven fires were started there, it was stated.

SWEDEN UNLIKELY TO LET NAZIS PASS

Stockholm Denies Rumors of German Demands.

STOCKHOLM, May 20 (A. P.).—Usually well informed circles declared themselves convinced today that Sweden had made it plain to Germany that she could not permit the transit of Nazi troops and supplies across this nation to help lift the Allied siege against German-held Narvik, Norwegian ore port. Authoritative quarters, however, steadfastly denied rumors that formal demands for transit facilities had been received.

The rumors coincided with reports indicating that surrender of the small German force at Narvik was imminent and that only by quick re-enforcements could Germany hope to prevent defeat there.

Allied and Norwegian forces were reported as steadily beating down stubborn resistance of the Narvik Nazis. The Swedish press said that some small German detachments had come to the aid of the beleaguered force by perilous mountain routes through northern Norway, but this help was regarded as insufficient.

Newspapers have published reports of Berlin press "warnings to Sweden," calling attention to the "danger" of a Franco-British attack on Swedish ore fields and the necessity of Sweden's being well prepared. Swedish circles said that

FINNS SENDING AID TO NORSE

Hospital Supplies and Red Cross Units Help.

SACRIFICE MADE CHEERFULLY

Republic Is Hardly Recovered From Russian Invasion.

STOCKHOLM, May 20 (A. P.).—Finland, facing with depleted resources a heavy task of reconstruction imposed by her war with Russia, nevertheless has found means to aid invaded Norway in that country's hour of need. Norse officials here disclosed that the Finns placed at their disposal Red Cross units and large quantities of hospital supplies.

In addition, they said, Finland is withdrawing her own refugees from Sweden to make room here for fugitives from Norway and has offered to provide shelter for several hundred homeless Norwegian children.

Spokesmen for the Norwegian legation expressed gratitude for this offer and said that it undoubtedly would be accepted. Foreign observers pointed out that the aid to Norway represents a sacrifice by Finland, burdened as she is with the problem of resettling almost 500,000 of her own people whose homes were devastated by war or who fled border areas ceded to Russia.

35,000 Wounded Soldiers.

Moreover, Finland faces the task of caring for an estimated 35,000 wounded veterans of the war with Russia, which will tax Finnish hospital facilities for some time. The Norwegian legation said that Finland sent Red Cross units and medical supplies to Norway immediately after the German invasion began on April 9, but the Nazis advanced so rapidly that much aid was unable to cross the border before the roads were closed.

"We have plenty of offers of hospital supplies," said Dr. Olaf Bank, director of the Norwegian hospital and ambulance service, "but our problem is getting it into Norway." He said that some Finnish Red Cross units might be of assistance in northern Norway, where the Allies are attempting to drive the Germans out of Narvik.

Big Task in North.

The wild terrain in this territory, however, makes motor equipment almost useless and horse-drawn ambulances are being used to bring out the wounded. Dr. Bank said that the biggest task was not dealing with the homeless and wounded in the northern areas occupied by the Allies, but in aiding the thousands in southern and central Norway whose livelihoods were swept away by the German invasion.

Another Norwegian official said that contacts were being made with the American Red Cross and other American organizations which have access to German-occupied Norway in the hope that they may be able to take over the relief work. Norwegians fleeing into Sweden and wishing to remain there are being absorbed into the Swedish economic system as rapidly as possible.

The Norwegian legation and Swedish authorities are furnishing them with food, clothing and living quarters until jobs are available. Norwegian authorities said that almost no refugees were crossing the Swedish border in the Narvik region, which was taken here as an indication that the Allied forces hold a controlling hand in the warfare there.

Archbishop Tells Diocese to Hope for Just Peace.

LONDON, May 20 (A. P.).—The Archbishop of Canterbury, writing in the Diocesan Gazette today, said that "the real testing has come" to the English people.

"In spite of provocation, which will be great," he said, "restrain the passions of war—righteous indignation is one thing, mere clamorous anger is another. Keep clear before your minds the hope of a peace which, because it is just, will be lasting, and, in the final framing of which, all nations shall have their part."

BASLE, Switzerland, May 20 (A. P.).—A French shell killed five railway workers who sought safety from artillery fire today in a bomb shelter at the German village of Istein, just under the great rock which the Germans have turned into a "Gibraltar of the Rhine."

It was a direct hit on the Istein railway station, the shell plunging down three stories to explode in the shelter.

The station master, who remained in the station during the bombardment, escaped unhurt. His wife was slightly injured by a picture which fell from a wall.

8,000 Refugee Children Get New Haven in Wales

Mining Folk in Bleak Hills Fly Flags in Welcome

CARDIFF, Wales, May 20 (AP).—Humble Welsh mining folks opened their homes today to 8,000 English children rushed to the shelter of the near-by bleak hills, away from the war dangers threatening the east and southeast coast of England.

It was the second flight of the youngsters. When the war broke last September they were taken from London and other large centers of population to what the authorities thought was the safety of England's coastal resorts. They arrived in Wales yesterday in twelve special trains.

The Welsh made their coming a gala occasion with flags flying and brass bands playing, "See the Conquering Hero Comes" and "Land of My Fathers."

The bewildered children heard the greeting shouted in a strange tongue: "Croesaw-I-gymru." When told it meant "Welcome to Wales" they shrilled back excitedly: "Hip! Hip! Hooray!"

Motor coaches and private cars took them to schools and church halls where they were classified for dispersal to new billets. Their "foster" parents who tearfully bade them good by in the English coast cities had loaded them with gifts.

Tiny tots, with gas masks slung on their shoulders, clasped dolls and toys and made friends quickly with their new guardians. Language was no barrier.

"We do see a bit of the country, don't we?" remarked one little girl carrying a teddy bear.

Lauder Sings For Troops

Aldershot, England, May 20 (AP)—Sir Harry Lauder lifted his voice today in the Garrison Theater to sing for Canadian troops just as he sang for many of their fathers in the last great war.

Some of the power of his voice is gone, but none of the lilt. His hair is snowy and his face is creased. Sir Harry will be 70 in August.

Americans Warned, Begin Leaving Egypt

Beirut, Lebanon, May 20 (AP)—United States Consul General E. E. Palmer tonight advised Americans in Lebanon and Syria "to give careful thought to the advisability of returning to the United States with the least possible delay." The same advice was given to inquiries at Jerusalem. About 8,500 Americans are estimated to be living in the Holy Land.

[By the Associated Press]

Alexandria, Egypt, May 20—Americans were advised today by the United States Legation to leave Egypt "while there still remains an opportunity to do so," because of the possibility of the war's spreading to the Mediterranean area.

There are approximately 900 Americans in Egypt, mostly missionaries and teachers, with a few business men.

Many men began arranging to send their wives and children home. The steamer Excambion will sail Wednesday with eighty Americans, and the President Harrison will take thirty from the Alexandria district next Monday.

Italian Action Expected

Twelve American ships now are in the Mediterranean.

Belief in Allied-Egyptian circles that Italy's entry into the war is just a matter of time brought further defense measures.

Egyptians have been warned to watch for possible invasion by parachute troops and to report immediately the landing of any suspicious planes anywhere in the country.

Special police squads were assigned to surveillance of all persons suspected of espionage.

Spy Activity Suspected

Competent Allied sources expressed belief there are "a considerable number of foreign spies securing important information here which would be of great value if the country were to be invaded."

Persons suspected of "fifth column" activities were placed under strict police supervision. In Cairo the Premier issued a military order outlining steps designed to deal with possible parachute landings.

The Egyptian press continued to discuss prominently the possibilities of Italian war action, declaring that "Italy sways in the balance" and that London is tiring of the suspense over Italy's intentions.

Americans Urged To Leave Egypt

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, EGYPT, May 20.—The United States Legation and consulates throughout Egypt warned American citizens today to consider returning home while facilities are available.

It was believed unlikely that many of the estimated 800 Americans in Egypt will quit the country at present. Most of them are missionaries and teachers, with a few business men and oil men.

WANTS INDIA TO OBEY

Nationalist Leader Says This Isn't Time to Strike.

BOMBAY, May 20 (A. P.).—Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, a left wing All-India Nationalist Congress leader, said in a speech at Lucknow today: "Launching a civil disobedience campaign at a time when Britain is engaged in a life and death struggle would be an act derogatory to India's honor."

This had a disconcerting effect on the radical section of the Congress, which believes that England's difficulty is India's opportunity to achieve her independence.

Mohandas K. Ghandi, the Nationalist leader, has advocated a civil disobedience program, but without violence.

NOTHING HAPPENED TO HIM—NOT MUCH

So Refugee, 11, Adorned Himself a Bit.

PARIS, May 20 (A. P.).—This is the story of eleven-year-old Charles Ferrand, who stubbed his toe on a rock and "bandaged it big" so that every one would think he had been machine-gunned by the Germans like his little sister.

Charles was at a Belgian village near the French frontier in the foothills of the Ardennes Mountains, with a group of other peasants from his little village.

Charles was just a grubby, barefooted youngster who couldn't bear to have anything happen to little sister that hadn't happened to him.

A bar of chocolate made him talkative.

"You know," he said, "I didn't really get machine-gunned. Nothing ever happens to me."

"Nothing"—except that he had seen his native village burned.

"Nothing"—except that his group had been bombed and machine-gunned by German planes three times in a four-day march.

"Nothing"—except that he had seen twelve peasants from his village killed by an attack in which his eight-year-old sister, Marie, suffered an arm wound.

A reporter looked meaningly at his big toe.

"Well," he said with a blush, "that wasn't hit.

"Sister was getting all the attention, so when I stubbed my toe I just bandaged it big so people would think I had been shot, too."

French refugees fleeing from the battle zones."

Wayne Chatfield Taylor, American Red Cross delegate to Europe, had telephoned to headquarters here that many of the refugees, fleeing from areas "where the fighting beggars of all description," were sick and wounded and that many were "forced to leave members of their families dead along the roadside."

Norman H. Davis, Red Cross chairman, announced the organization would buy $1,000,000 worth of ambulances, field hospital equipment, surgical and other supplies in the United States for immediate shipment to Europe. In addition it is contemplating sending another $500,000 in cash.

Gen. John J. Pershing urged "every patriotic and sympathetic American" to contribute to the Red Cross campaign for a $10,000,000 war relief fund.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, May 20.—This is the story that correspondents with the Royal Air Force in France sent back today:

Eight times R. A. F. bombers tried to destroy a German bridge, but failed.

Then the pilots and crews of four bombers went to their commanding officer with the request, "May we finish it off?"

The permission was given.

The four bombers took off.

None returned.

The bridge was destroyed.

Rivers, in Proclamation, Decrees Fingerprinting.

ATLANTA, May 20 (A. P.).—Gov. E. D. Rivers in a proclamation citing "national emergency" today requested that all aliens in Georgia submit immediately to registration and fingerprinting.

He gave them the choice of:

1. Registering "at their earliest convenience" with the nearest police, sheriff or Georgia State Patrol office for voluntary fingerprinting and identification.

2. Being sought out "and requested to do so" by the police authorities, with penalty upon refusal to comply that such aliens "be reported immediately to the executive department of the State of Georgia."

Troops Tell Girls Too Much, So Egypt Expels 500 Dancers

Hungarians And Spaniards Told To Leave By End Of Month As Nation Pushes Counter-Spy Campaign

MAY 21 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Alexandria, Egypt, May 20—Nearly 500 Hungarian and Spanish dancers today were ordered to leave Egypt by the end of the month as the Government and British authorities intensified their counter-espionage drive.

The Government decided the dancers learned too much while entertaining Allied soldiers and sailors. Consequently cabarets were prohibited from renewing their contracts.

With the tightening of the network for national security, civilians were barred from zones 600 feet from Alexandria's fortified areas. Foreigners were required to register with police within forty-eight hours after arrival in Egypt.

Allied sources emphasized that the uncertainty of the Italian attitude made maintenance of powerful forces in the Near East necessary.

In addition to the formidable Allied war fleet in this vicinity, nearly 1,000,000 soldiers are scattered in Egypt and the Near East.

The American Legation has advised Americans to leave this area as quickly as possible. One hundred and ten Americans are booked for passage on two ships sailing this week.

The rate of exchange for credit bank notes has been fixed at one Dutch guilder for one mark and 50 pfennigs, the Belgian and Luxemburg francs at 10 pfennigs (one-tenth of a mark) and the French franc at 5 pfennigs.

PORTUGAL REPORTED CLOSING HER BORDER

Yankee Clipper Passenger Says Visas Are Being Refused

BALTIMORE, May 20 (AP)—Passengers arriving from Europe aboard the Pan American Airways' Yankee Clipper, told today of preparations to close the Portuguese border to all travelers, a development that may bring disruption of air service to European ports.

Henry R. Luce, New York magazine publisher, said he and his fellow passengers had left France just in time. He said the Portuguese Embassy in Paris suddenly had refused to grant any more visas. Lisbon now is Pan American's only European terminal.

The Yankee Clipper arrived on the first anniversary of its inauguration of commercial service to Europe. The ship could not put in at its New York base because of a heavy fog blanketing La Guardia Field.

The crossing was the 152d for the line, which in its first year of operation transported 2,174 passengers and 234,000 pounds of mail. The Yankee Clipper flew 556,900 plane-miles.

Pan American Airways officials here refused to discuss reports of passengers arriving on the Yankee Clipper that Portuguese ports were to be closed. However, Melvin Hall, chief of the foreign research section of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, speaking in Washington on May 16 before the American Scientific Congress, said that it might become necessary to transfer the Clipper ships' runs to South America because of the closing of the Portuguese border.

25,000 More Troops Will Also Go To Europe, Prime Minister Says

[By the Associated Press]

Ottawa, May 20—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said tonight in the House of Commons that Canada has more than 100,000 men on military duty, 23,000 in England, and will undertake to raise a third division for service.

The Prime Minister reported that the first division in Europe will be followed by another of 24,645 men.

More than 9,000 are engaged in coast defense, 16,000 are assigned to various depots, 1,665 are guarding vital centers and more than 6,000 are at miscellaneous tasks, he said.

12,000 In Air Force

The Canadian air force has 1,389 officers and 10,926 men.

The House of Commons tonight adopted without vote the "speech from the throne," which was read by Sir Lyman P. Duff, Administrator of the Government, last Thursday.

The address, prepared by the Government, declared its intention "to intensify our determination to share in the war effort of the Allied powers to the utmost of our strength."

$2,000,000 A Day

Outlining a war program involving $700,000,000 for the fiscal year—$2,000,000 a day—the Prime Minister asked approval of creation of a new Ministry of National Defense for Air.

He said the following projects were included in the Canadian war program:

To advance the date of sending the second division of the Canadian expeditionary force overseas and to advance the date of further reinforcements of the first division.

To push recruiting of reinforcements for the second division, which will follow the first division as soon as possible.

To form a Canadian corps in the field which will involve the sending overseas of several thousand men in addition to those already mentioned.

Raising of a third division, to be available for service in Canada or overseas.

Duty In Caribbean

Further Canadian contributions outlined are assignment of naval and military units to duty in the Caribbean and North Atlantic areas, and dispatch overseas of No. 112 Army Cooperation Squadron to act as a reserve for No. 110 Cooperation Squadron already there.

Canada now has twenty shipyards engaged in building ninety war vessels and the construction program is "well in advance" of schedule, it was reported.

U. S. Staff Satisfied Nazis Have No Secret 'Nerve Gun' Weapon

MAY 21 1940

Washington, May 20 (AP)—Brig. Gen. L. D. Gasser, deputy chief of staff, declared today that the War Department was quite satisfied Germany had no secret weapon such as a "nerve gun" or other such device.

His statement was made to the House Military Affairs Committee in response to an inquiry inspired by the German high command's recent report that a new type of weapon had enabled the Nazis to capture Eben Emael, described as the strongest fort in Belgium's Liege defenses.

Neutral military attaches at Berne, Switzerland, expressed belief subsequently that the new weapon claimed by the Germans might be a gas which affected the nerves of those inhaling it and produced lassitude.

"The River Dendre was crossed and the upper Scheldt reached during the pursuit.

"British troops are pushing toward Channel harbors in forced march while Belgian and French troops, seeking a southern outlet, have been thrown back between Valenciennes and Maubeuge.

"The enemy suffered the heaviest losses in this engagement, especially armored troops. The enemy, after a vain attempt to break through, is retreating westward, severely shattered. Southwest of there our motorized and armored troops reached the Somme battlefield of 1916 on the line of Cambria-Peronne.

"Stuka (dive-bomber), fighting and destroyer plane squadrons destroyed an armored column moving north from Laon and forced them to turn back. The inner fort system of Liege, as well as all the forts of Namur, except one, are in our hands.

"In tank fighting the past few days in Belgium, Baron Nolde, First Lieutenant of an armored regiment, distinguished himself through special cold-bloodedness (Kaltbluetigkeit).

"On May 19, the German air force increased its attacks on rear connections and roads of retreat of the enemy in the north of France and Belgium.

"The attack against enemy airdromes continued with success.

"Two enemy destroyers were destroyed in the course of armed reconnaissance of the sea area before the Belgian and French coasts; one destroyer and one French torpedo boat, the Incomprise ("Janes Fighting Ships" lists no such boat), as well as three merchantmen totaling approximately 15,100 tons, were severely damaged.

"The enemy total loss yesterday was 141 airplanes, of which ninety-five were shot down from the air, fifteen by anti-aircraft guns, the remaining were destroyed on the ground. Thirty-one German airplanes are missing.

"Before dawn this morning British airplanes repeated their planless bombing of west Germany, whereby a number of civilians were killed and wounded. The single military objective hit was a prison camp. A number of prisoners were killed."

Operators attributed the break to a "cable breakdown" and said messages were subject to "indefinite delay."

Bucharest, May 20 (AP)—The Rumanian Government banned war maps and war headlines from the press today. Comment on battles also was barred.

There was no confirmation of a report that the action followed a German complaint that many war maps appearing in the press had been based on claims of the Allies.

BRITISH

London, May 20 (AP).—The text of the night communique of the British Air Ministry:

Bomber aircraft of the Royal Air Force maintained their pressure on enemy lines of communication last night.

Oil refineries in northwest Germany also were successfully attacked.

South of Brussels operations were carried out against railway stations and bridges. A railway bridge at Roux sustained a direct hit. Damage was done to rolling stock and the permanent way.

Troop and tank concentrations were attacked in the Aisne sector. Near Sedan a lorry park was set afire.

From all these operations involving a large number of R.A.F. bombers only two have failed to return in spite of intense enemy ainti-aircraft fire.

An aerodrome at Varnes, north of Trondheim, also was attacked successfully last night. A large number of enemy aircraft standing out on the aerodrome were repeatedly bombed and machine-gunned by relays of Hudson aircraft. Much damage is believed to have been done. Seven fires were started.

From our fighter aircraft day by day come stories of matchless courage. All day long they are called on to engage superior forces of the enemy, to drive off formations of bombers which continually harass the Allied troops and to attack their fighter escorts.

WEYGAND SEPARATE

AY 21 1940

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE NEW SUPREME COMMANDER OF THE ALLIED LAND FORCES WAS KNOWN AS "MARSHAL FOCH'S SHADOW" IN THE WORLD WAR.

HE IS GENERAL MAXIME WEYGAND, 73. HE SERVED AS MARSHAL FOCH'S CHIEF OF STAFF IN 1917-18. IN HIS NEW ROLE, HE SUCCEEDS FRENCH GENERAL MAURICE GUSTAVE GAMELIN.

HE AND MARSHAL FOCH BECAME INSEPARABLE THEREAFTER.

"SEE WEYGAND ABOUT THIS" WAS A PHRASE SO REPEATEDLY USED BY FOCH THAT IT SOON WAS A BY-WORD AT FRENCH GENERAL HEADQUARTERS.

IN 1918, WHEN GENERAL LUDENDORFF WAS HAMMERING AT THE BRITISH FRONT IN A DRIVE TOWARD THE CHANNEL, WEYGAND WAS DESIGNATED AS THE FRENCH REPRESENTATIVE AT A MILITARY COUNCIL OF ALLIED GENERALS CONSIDERING THE EMERGENCY.

LATER, WHEN THE RUSSIANS WERE THREATENING TO CAPTURE WARSAW, THE POLISH MARSHAL, JOSEF PILSUDSKI, WIRED THE FRENCH: "SEND US FOCH OR WE PERISH."

30.24-8397

30.24-2397

FOCH TOLD THE FRENCH WAR OFFICE:

"SEND THEM WEYGAND--HE WILL DO AS WELL AS I."

FIVE DAYS AFTER WEYGAND TOOK OVER AT WARSAW THE RUSSIANS WERE IN FULL RETREAT.

MAY 21 1940

BORN IN BRUSSELS, WEYGAND RELINQUISHED HIS BELGIAN CITIZENSHIP AT 20 TO BECOME AN ADOPTED SON OF FRANCE, WHERE HE PREVIOUSLY HAD RECEIVED MILITARY INSTRUCTION AS "A FOREIGN STUDENT."

WEYGAND ENTERED THE FRENCH ARMY IN 1888 AS A SECOND LIEUTENANT OF CAVALRY. HE BECAME A CAPTAIN IN 1896, A LIEUTENANT-COLONEL IN 1912 AND A COLONEL AT THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD WAR.

FOLLOWING THE WORLD WAR, WEYGAND WAS MADE A COMMANDER OF THE FRENCH LEGION OF HONOR IN RECOGNITION OF HIS SERVICES TO THE REPUBLIC. THE QUALITIES ASCRIBED TO HIM ON HIS APPOINTMENT WERE:

"ACTIVITY, VIGILANCE AND DECISION."

HE PROMISED THE CONTINUANCE OF THE NATION-WIDE HIGHWAY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM AND THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF TOURISTS.

NO REFORMS IN THE AGRARIAN SYSTEM ARE UNDER CONSIDERATION, THE GENERAL EXPLAINED. HE PRAISED SONORA'S ALTAR DISTRICT FARM DEVELOPMENT AND PROMISED THAT THE GOVERNMENT, IF HE IS ELECTED, WOULD HELP TO PROVIDE NECESSARY FARM IMPLEMENTS.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

FRENCH MILITARY AUTHORITIES THIS MORNING EXPRESSED BELIEF THAT THE NEXT 24 HOURS WILL SETTLE THE QUESTION OF WHICH DIRECTION THE MAIN GERMAN OFFENSIVE WILL TAKE--WHETHER IT WILL CONTINUE IN FULL FORCE TOWARDS PARIS OR CONCENTRATE ON THE WESTWARD DRIVE WITH THE IDEA OF CUTTING OFF THE ANGLO-BELGIAN FORCES IN THE NORTH AND REACHING THE CHANNEL PORTS.

I THINK WE MIGHT PUT THE SITUATION IN TERMS OF THE PEAK OF THE CRISIS BEING REACHED WITHIN THE NEXT DAY OR SO.

THAT IS TO SAY, THE TIME IS RAPIDLY APPROACHING WHEN ONE WOULD EXPECT THE NAZI OFFENSIVE TO LOSE ENOUGH OF ITS MOMENTUM SO THE ALLIED FORCES COULD STABIGIZE THE FRONT AND BEGIN TO COUNTERATTACK.

MECHANIZATION HAS REVOLUTIONIZED WARFARE BUT THERE STILL REMAIN A COUPLE OF THINGS IT CAN'T DO. ONE IS TO OVERCOME FATIGUE IN THE HUMAN BODY AND THE OTHER IS TO PREVENT AN ADVANCING ARMY'S LINES OF COMMUNICATION FROM EXTENDING.

MAYBE I'M UNDERESTIMATING THE GERMAN POWERS TO OVERCOME THE LAWS OF NATURE, BUT I BELIEVE THE TIME NXXX MUST COME SOON WHEN THE NAZI FIGHTING MEN WILL HAVE TO PAUSE FOR A BREATHER. AFTER ALL, THE HUMAN BODY CAN STAND ONLY ABOUT SO MUCH AND THE ATTACKING TROOPS HAVE BEEN UNDER A TERRIFIC STRAIN.

MEANTIME, OF COURSE, THE MECHANIZED BRANCHES HAVE BEEN GETTING FURTHER AWAY FROM THEIR SUPPLIES OF GASOLINE, AND EVEN THE MOST PERFECT GAS ENGINE EVER CREATED WON'T RUN WITHOUT ITS FUEL.

THE MOMENT THERE IS A DEFINITE SLACKEING OF THE GERMAN ONSLAUGHT WE MAY EXPECT A HEAVY COUNTER-ATTACK, IF THE STAMINA OF THE ALLIED DDEFENSE HASN'T BEEN SHATTERED, AND I DON'T BELIEVE IT HAS.

MAY 21 1940

THEN WE SHALL KNOW WHETHER THIS IS GOING TO BE A BLITZKRIEG OR JUST A KRIEG WHICH HAS BEEN STRIPPKED OF ITS BLITZ.

IT MUST BE EMPHASIZED THAT THE SITUATION IS STILL CRITICAL FOR THE ALLIES.

FIERCE FIGHTING IS PROCEEDING IN THE ST. QUENTIN SECTOR ALONG THE HEAD WATERS OF THE SOMME RIVER WHICH AGAIN, AS SO OFTEN IN THE PAST, IS RUNNING RED. A GREAT DEAL UNDOUBTEDLY DEPENDS ON THE OUTCOME OF THIS PHASE OF THE OFFENSIVE.

THIS ZONE IS THE GATEWAY TO THE WINDING VALLEY OF THE SOMME AND ONE OF THE ROUTES TO THE CHANNEL PORTS WHICH THE NAZIS ARE SEEKING SO EAGERLY IN ORDER TO LET LOOSE THE POWER OF THEIR AIR FORCE ON ENGLAND.

IF THE GERMANS BREAK THROUGH HERE AND CHOOSE TO PURUSE THIS ROAD TO THE COAST WE SHALL HAVE ANOTHER BATTLE OF THE SOMME SUCH AS DEVELOPED FROM THE GREAT GERMAN OFFENSIVE IN THE SPRING OF 1918

THE ALLIED COUNTER-ATTACK CAME WHEN THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE BEGAN TO SLOW DOWN, AS ALL OFFENSIVES MUST DO IN DUE COURSE.

THE ALLIED COUNTER-ATTACK CAME WHEN THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE BEGAN TO SLOW DOWN, AS ALL OFFENSIVES MUST DO IN DUE COURSE.

THE GERMANS THEN, AS PROBABLY NOW, WERE HEADED FOR ABBEVILLE ON THE COAST THROUGH THE HISTORIC CITY OF AMIENS, AND FOR THE OTHER CHANNEL PORTS, INCLUDING THE IMPORTANT CITY OF CALAIS, ONLY 20 MILES AWAY FROM THE WHITE CHALK-CLIFFS OF ENGLAND'S DOVER.

THE ALLIES PLACED MARSHAL FOCH IN SUPREME COMMAND TO STEM THIS AVALANCHE. NOW THEY HAVE CALLED ON THE MAN WHO WAS HIS RIGHT HAND AIDE--GENERAL WEYGAND.

TO MY MIND CAPTURE OF THE CHANNEL PORTS, WHICH WOULD PLACE THE GERMANS RIGHT UP AGAINST ENGLAND FOR AIR ATTACKS, LIKELY REPRESENTS THE NUMBER ONE PROJECT IN THE GERMAN MIND. SHOULD THE DRIVE INTO THE HEART OF FRANCE DEVELOP WELL, IT MIGHT SUPPLANT THE NORTHERN PUSH IN IMMEDIATE IMPORTANCE. FOR THE MOMENT, HOWEVER, THE IDEA OF BRINGING FRANCE TO HER KNEES IN THIS WHIRLWIND SMASH MUST REMAIN A GRAND NAZI HOPE RATHER THAN SOMETHING THEY HAVE CONFIDENTLY EXPECTED TO ACHIEVE.

YOU AND I HAVE DISCUSSED THE IMPORTANCE OF THE CHANNELPORTS SEVERAL TIMES BEFORE. OCCUPATION OF HOLLAND ALREADY HAS BROUGHT THE GERMAN AIR FORCE WITHIN LESS THAN TWO HUNDRED MILES OF IMPORTANT ENGLISH PORTS, INCLUDING THE ALL IMPORTANT PORT OF LONDON ITSELF.

IF THE NAZIS GET THROUGH TO THE BELGIAN COAST THIS DISTANCE WILL BE SLASHED TO A LITTLE OVER A HUNDRED MILES, AND THE OCCUPATION OF THE FRENCH PORT OF CALAIS, NEAR THE BELGIAN BORDER, WOULD BRING THE INVADERS UP THE NARROWEST PART OF THE ENGLISH CHANNEL ONLY 20 MILES FROM BRITAIN. THIS IS WHERE THE CHANNEL SWIMMERS DO THEIR STUFF--AND HOW MUCH MORE COULD A BOMBING PLANE DO OVER THIS SHORT STRETCH.

MAY 18 1940 MAY 21 1940

GERMANY'S GREATEST MENACE IS THE BRITISH NAVY AND THAT NAVAL BLOCKADE WHICH HAS SHUT OFF ALL HER SEA-BORNE SUPPLIES. HITLER MUST SHATTER THE BRITISH NAVAL POWER IF HE IS TO WIN. HENCE THE GERMAN DRIVE FOR THE CHANNEL PORTS WHERE THEY CAN GET AT THAT BLOCKADE, WITH THEIR AIRFORCE, TRY TO CUT BRITISH COMMUNICATIONS WITH THE EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE AND STRAFE THE GREAT PORTS AND MERCHANT SHIPS ON ENGLAND'S EASTERN SEABOARD.

IN SHORT, THE NAZIS PROPOSE NOT ONLY TO SMASH THE BRITISH BLOCKADE AND BREAK THE POWER OF THE NAVY, BUT IMPOSE A COUNTER BLOCKADE ON ENGLAND, WHICH ALSO IS LARGELY DEPENDENT ON THE OUTSIDE WORLD FOR SUPPLIES OF ALL SORTS INCLUDING FOODSTUFFS.

THE POSITION OF THE ANGLO-BELGIAN DEFENDERS IN BELGIUM IS ONE OF EXTREME DIFFICULTY. IT WILL REQUIRE SOME SMART SOLDIERING TO PREVENT THE ONRUSHING GERMANS FROM CUTTING THE BRITISH AND BELGIANS OFF FROM THE FRENCH AND INFLICTING A GRIEVOUS DEFEAT.

DEATH FOR ERROR, WARNS REYNAUD

Nazi Flyers Drop Bombs On Great Britain

REYNAUD CONCEDES DISASTER TO FRENCH

Premier Admits Blitzkrieg Tactics Upset Army's Conception of War—Reveals Bridges Were Not Blown Up.

PARIS, May 21 (AP).—Premier Reynaud blamed the French High Command today for "incredible faults," as a result of which "disaster" and "total disorganization" were inflicted by German armored blows on the French Army defending the Meuse.

Warning that "the Fatherland is in danger," the Premier solemnly told the Senate that those "faults will be punished." The Senators cheered.

But he asserted that there was no need for further disaster "if each soldier realizes his enormous task and the millions of sons of France realize their future is at stake."

"France cannot die!" he declared. "If a miracle is needed to save France, I believe in miracles because I believe in France!"

The Premier painted a dark picture. He admitted that the Germans had taken Amiens and Arras, and that, pouring through a sixty-two-mile-wide breach on the French-Belgian front, "they were taking in the rear of our entire fortified system" on that front.

Admits French Concept Was Upset.

He freely confessed that the classical French concept of war had come up against something new in deep motorized raids and parachutists; that vital bridges had been left undemolished; that thinned-out French forces, badly trained and badly entrenched, had been asked to stand up to the massive blows of Germany's Panzer (armored) divisions.

Telling the Senators "the truth," because it alone "can save the Fatherland," the Premier declared that "we must take immediate decisions."

He explained the disorganization of the army assigned to hold the line of the Meuse River in Belgium by a disclosure that French divisions "were less numerous" in that sector.

"The best troops had been sent farther into Belgium," he continued, declaring that made it "easy" for enemy mobile units to penetrate into the Meuse region.

French Bridges Not Blown Up.

The Premier laid part of the blame (here three words censored) for the Nazi advance on the failure of French defenders to blow up bridges across the Meuse.

These faults "will be punished," he shouted, and the Senate, which had been listening in somber silence, broke into cheers.

The Premier's announcement indicated a twenty-five-mile German advance within the last twenty-four hours as the Nazis pushed toward the English Channel.

M. Reynaud spoke about ten minutes, after which the session adjourned, leaving the Government free to call another when it deemed it necessary.

Reynaud Explains Retreat.

M. Reynaud told the Senators that the French withdrawal had started when the army of Gen. Andre George Corap (here one word censored), famed in France as the conqueror of Abd-el-Krim, was forced to fall back from its advance positions in Belgium to the line of the Meuse River.

Explaining the first phases of the operations, M. Reynaud said that when the Germans invaded Holland, Belgium and Luxemburg, the French were forced to move forward to meet them out of their line of prepared fortifications along the Belgian frontier.

It was then, M. Reynaud said, that the enemy launched its attack, forcing Gen. Corap's advancing army to withdraw.

"One would think the Meuse River was easy to defend, because of the way it winds and because of the woods which are about it," the Premier said, adding that it is "just because of these things that it is difficult to defend."

Defense also was difficult, he continued, because of "faults which will be punished," and went on amid cheers to explain that bridges across the Meuse had not been demolished.

Hails Return of Heroes.

"When I took over the War Office" . . . the Senators interrupted with loud cries of "finally!" . . . "that was the situation," M. Reynaud said.

"We must make immediate decisions," he declared. "This is not the first trial we have met and surpassed.

"But we will reply to the enemy—but this only if each soldier realizes his enormous task and the millions of sons of France realize their future is at stake."

"Two of these sons can be proud they came forward to serve the country. I speak of Gen. Weygand and Marshal Petain.

"Petain, the winner of Verdun, and Weygand, the man of Foch who stopped the Germans in 1918!

"Weygand is on the field of battle today.

"Between Petain and Weygand and myself there is complete accord."

Over last week end, M. Reynaud appointed Gen. Maxime Weygand to replace Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin as the Allied Commander-in-Chief and brought Marshal Philippe Petain, France's first Ambassador to nationalist Spain, into the War Cabinet as Vice Premier.

Praises British Air Force.

As he concluded, Mr. Reynaud told the Senators:

"There you are, gentlemen. I have told you the truth because it alone can save the Fatherland."

He praised the "admirable" British air force and "the full aid Great Britain has offered."

"These two great peoples (France and Britain) are united," he said. "France cannot die."

Indicts War Ministry.

M. Reynaud bluntly indicted the manner in which the War Ministry directed operations before he took it over.

Speaking of "incredible faults," he cited as an example that a reduced number of French divisions was thinned out along the Meuse River, because it had been considered in itself a "redoubtable obstacle."

French divisions, "badly intrenched and badly trained to bear such attacks," were forced to combat the mighty thrust of the German armored divisions because bridges were not blown up, he cried. cried.

"You understand now the disaster, the total disorganization of the Corap army!"

Took Over From Daladier.

This, in detail, was the situation which Mr. Reynaud said he found when he went to the War Ministry with Marshal Petain and Gen Weygand to take over yesterday from Edouard Daladier, former Premier:

"A breach 110 kilometers (sixty-two miles) wide had been opened. Into that breach surged a German army made up of armored divisions followed by motorized divisions which, after having opened a large pocket in the direction of Paris, launched out to the west toward the sea.

"They were thus taking in the rear our entire fortified system along the French-Belgian frontier and menacing the Allied forces still engaged in Belgium who were not given the order to retreat until the evening of May 15.

"The day before yesterday, an armored division had reached the line of Quesnoy-Cambrai-Peronne and the Somme River to Hamm.

"For the last forty-eight hours, the German advance has continued.

"This morning at 8 A. M. (3 A. M., New York time) the High Command informed me that Arras and Amiens were occupied."

MAY 22 1940

Paris Admits German Sweep

PARIS, May 21 (A. P.).—The Germans, striking with devastating force, hurled armored cars today almost to the English Channel.

Amiens and Arras, on the edge of the coastal plain, were ablaze and in German hands.

Nazi motorcycle vanguards had reached the outer environs of Abbeville, twelve miles from the Channel and about twenty-five miles west of Arras and Amiens.

A War Ministry official said that light German elements of 3,000 to 4,000 men pierced the Allied lines to take Amiens and Arras.

The front became "completely confused," he said, with French forces still holding Cambrai, east of Arras, and still behind German advance positions.

"I do not think Abbeville itself has been taken, but I can give no official confirmation," this official said.

There was no mention of any Germans actually reaching the English Channel.

Out of Touch With Gen. Giraud.

The spokesman said that general headquarters had been "out of communication" with Gen. Henri Giraud for forty-eight hours and he could neither confirm nor deny German reports that the General had been captured.

Some of the General's staff was acknowledged to have been taken prisoner. There was one report that Gen. Giraud had escaped in a tank.

The spokesman called the situation "exceptionally grave," but said that with the French holding Cambrai and the British battling the Germans in other sectors the Allied command was confident it could "re-establish" its lines.

A French spokesman said that the Germans had thrust long points (advance units) of motorcycle soldiers along chosen roads toward the Channel. German planes, the spokesman said, bombed and machine-gunned these roads, and also others which were packed with civilian refugees.

The French had withdrawn from Laon, on the southern edge of the Nazi "bulge" into France.

Aims to Separate Armies.

The full might of the Nazi power fell on the Allied forces as the German drive rushed toward its goal—possession of the Channel and separation of the Allied armies.

At the same time, a semi-official French news report said that "the whole region behind Cambrai," east of the German thrust through Arras and Amiens, "is being burned systematically by incendiary bombs."

Nazis Set Villages Ablaze.

The region immediately west of Cambrai was described by an Information Ministry spokesman as "completely in flames."

The Germans, he said, systematically fired villages and hamlets. Some Nazi troops carried flame throwers, he declared, while others, descending from the sky, set blazes to railroad stations, post offices and hotels.

The destructive advance of the Germans, the spokesman said, was "certainly not confined to military objectives, but objectives of all sorts were attacked and ruined."

Tonight's Communique.

Tonight's French communiqué said:

"In the region north of the Somme, the enemy, continuing their pressure, succeeded in pushing advanced elements to Amiens and Arras.

"On the rest of the front the situation is unchanged despite local efforts of the enemy.

"Intense activity of our scouting aviation and bombing formations, in co-operation with dive-bombing units of the navy, harrassed enemy land troops without respite.

"The minimum number of enemy planes which French aviation and anti-aircraft guns have brought down in our lines during the period from May 10 to May 19 is 303."

Parisians Not Yet Told.

Parisians, who have taken calmly the news of the war's grim course had not been told late today of the latest German thrust into Arras and Amiens, across the north of France. The reduced-sized newspapers of Paris in late afternoon editions carried no account of the capture of the cities.

The attitude of the average Parisian was stoicism. For several days the city of gayety has had a more serious air, heightened by an 11 P. M. curfew and closing of all dance halls.

There has been little traffic on the usually bustling boulevards. Many have left for suburban refuges, but millions who remained expressed confidence they were safe.

Meanwhile, as the melee continued on the world war battlefields of Picardy, German bombers sped to attack Channel ports.

Advance motorcyclists and other light armored units of the enemy pushed west and north of St. Quentin to be met in violent combat in the Peronne-to-Cambrai region, which is midway between the Meuse River and the English Channel.

Rear guard stabs were made by both sides.

German refueling was interrupted vigorously, a French spokesman said, by French bombers which caused considerable damage on "magnificent objectives" formed by the enemy's rear line concentrations of armored vehicles.

The Germans, following tactics which succeeded in the Netherlands, sent parachute troops ahead of the armored columns in "rather deep raids to the west," the spokesman said.

This aerial infantry seeks to capture or put out of commission railway stations, bridges and other strategic points behind the Allied lines.

British Flyers Join French.

The British Air Force joined French flyers in harassing German operations by bombing lines deep into the Rhineland. German aerial casualties now far exceed the ratio of three planes to each one lost by the Allies previously announced, the spokesman asserted.

[The Germans maintain they have the edge on a four-to-one basis.]

The spokesman gave this picture of land fighting elsewhere on the front:

Two or three German infantry attacks between the Somme and Aisne rivers were repulsed. These were especially strong in the Rethel sector, where the Germans had been tossed back after attempting a crossing.

Heavy artillery fire was poured on French fortifications in the Montmedy region.

Allied troops in Belgium continued their withdrawal to intercept the German threat to channel ports.

In the region between the Somme and Cambrai the situation was described by the French High Command as "confused." Here the Nazi armies apparently had turned westward to drive toward the Channel after having driven principally southward toward Paris.

Rethel, where enemy attacks were reported repulsed, is at the bottom of the "pocket" formed by the German advance line where the Nazis yesterday were reported thrown back in an abortive attempt to cross the Aisne at two points.

The repeated push in this sector was taken as an indication that the Germans had not given up the idea of an attempted southward thrust toward Paris despite the evidence that the main effort now was being exerted in the direction of the sea.

Battle Surges Around Peronne.

The swiftly changing fortunes of war surged meanwhile around the little Picardy town of Peronne, sixty miles from the English Channel, as the Allies battled furiously to halt the German offensive westward across the plains of north France.

So fast was the pace of fighting on this shifting front that the authorities found it difficult to keep abreast of developments, but French military dispatches said that Peronne itself, which was reached by Nazi motorcycle troops yesterday, remained in Allied hands.

The French also said that they were in possession of Cambrai, twenty miles northeast of Peronne, and LaFere, twenty-five miles to the southeast.

A War Ministry spokesman said that an Allied counter-attack on the German left flank had been launched from LaFere in the general direction of German-occupied St. Quentin, thirteen miles to the north.

The advance units of the German army which filtered into Peronne yesterday, led by hard-riding motorcycle troops, were said to have paid for their advance with terrific losses. Allied planes swooped low over the Germans, bombing them and strafing them with machine-gun fire, the French said. French tanks were said to have aided in beating them off, cutting wide swaths in their lines.

Nazi Technic Discovered.

The technic employed by the Germans was said to hinge on swift daylight sallies by mechanized units, which returned to temporary bases after nightfall. On discovering these methods, the French asserted, they have been able, by sudden slicing attacks, to cut off the retreat of many of the units and to destroy them.

Fresh motorized divisions of French and British troops were rolling up to join the fighting in the LaFere-Cambrai sector, which was one of the famous battlegrounds of the world war.

It was at Cambrai that the first large-scale attack by tanks—a British development—was launched in the last conflict.

Literally thousands of vehicles jammed the roads behind the lines on both sides of the front in this sector today. Heavy forces of French infantry were being massed there.

Fighting at the Aisne.

Sharp fighting continued at the eastern end of the pocket which the Germans have driven into France through the border defense system just north of the heavily fortified Maginot Line, which ends at the junction of the Belgian, Luxemburg and French frontiers.

At Rethel, 100 miles from Paris on the lower fringe of this pocket, the Germans succeeded in crossing the Aisne River, but the French said they were driven back by fierce counter-attacks. A number of Germans were said to have been taken prisoner in this action.

In Belgium, where the forts at Liege and Namur were said to be holding out still, in spite of German claims that all had fallen but one at Namur, the British and Belgians continued a strategic withdrawal necessitated by the German advances in the St. Quentin sector, which threatened to cut them off. Allied spokesmen said that the withdrawal was being carried out with a minimum of casualties.

Reich Allied Forces Drive British Back To Channel, Nearly Cutting Troops In North Off From Main French Army

London, Wednesday, May 22—The Air Ministry announced that German aircraft dropped bombs in two districts in southeast England last night. No casualties or damage were reported.

in the southeast of England last night. Some bombs fell on land and others in the sea. Anti-aircraft guns were in action. There were no casualties and no damage is reported."

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Wednesday, May 22—The German thrust toward Paris has reached the region of Rheims, it was said in official German circles early today.

Rheims is eighty miles east and slightly north of Paris. Occupation of this region would mark a new bottom of the "pocket" formed by the advancing German armies in the French lines. It would be an advance of twenty-five miles southwest of Rethel or thirty miles southeast of Laon, the previous far points of the German drive in that sector.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 21—The German armies of the west pounded their iron spike tonight to Abbeville on the English Channel's Somme estuary, 12 miles from the open water, and made their death threat to England one of the immediate hour.

In a vast "encirclement within encirclement" maneuver, which Germans estimated had trapped a million soldiers of the French, British and Belgian northern armies, Hitler's armored men on the twelfth day of their great offensive swept westward through Arras and Amiens and reached Abbeville.

Infantry Waves Surge In

Behind them, the high command said, came wave after wave of infantry.

Caught also in the German military thresher as it gouged across northern France was the Ninth French Army, which had been fighting from Namur, Belgium, west to Maubeuge, France, to hold a connection between the northwestern outposts of the Maginot Line and the Belgian front.

The high command asserted General Giraud, new commander of the French Ninth Army in this "battle of the bulge" had been captured with his staff; that his crushed army was being dissolved.

Command Post Overrun

Giraud scarcely had received his command, said DNB, before German troops overran his headquarters.

With the Allies in the north fighting what Germans proclaimed as "the battle of desperation," the German advance southward toward Paris appeared, from the high command's report, to be moving on schedule, though that schedule seemed less spectacular.

Reports from the field said the Eiffel Tower was clearly visible to the advance troops who moved south from Laon twelve miles to reach the Oise-Aisne Canal and, farther east, completed the occupation of Rethel. At their point farthest south, the Germans thus are about sixty miles from Paris.

Nazis Press Toward England

Etched in clearest outline for Germans by military spokesmen and by the press, however, was the picture of the battle being carried toward England.

The plunge of the German army from the Cambrai-Peronne front to Abbeville, seventy miles from the English coast, was said by Nazis to have put the German army in position for a battle to destroy the British Expeditionary Force.

This force is considered thwarted in its attempt to reach the Channel ports for homeward flight "in the delusion that the British Isles are invincible."

Seaports Bombarded

The massed German air force now is bombarding the seaports of Zeebrugge and Ostend, Belgium and Calais and Boulogne in France, above Abbeville, to cut off this path of escape.

Then comes England's turn, the press warned.

"England need not worry," said Der Angriff, organ of Paul Joseph Goebbels, Propaganda Minister. "She herself will have to pay with her own money, on her own soil, for the bill she has run up!"

At several points past the furthermost penetration of the imperial German armies during the World War, the German troops now are declared by military sources to have raced a total of 240 miles since they first crossed the Belgian frontier May 9.

Some days they have made break-throughs of 45 miles and their speed has averaged 20 miles a day.

Bridgehead Established

Late today, German military spokesmen said, the German wedge toward the Channel was steadily broadened by strong forces. They declared that any attempt of the Allies to break through was bound to fail.

A German bridgehead over the Somme at Amiens, to the south, was declared established, and lines were being pushed further north.

Military experts said the German strategy had inclosed the Allies in a circle within a circle.

While combined Allied and northern forces as a whole are bottled up between the Somme and the east coast, one Belgian-French army in the Valenciennes sector of northern France is surrounded within the greater encirclement.

They said that estimates abroad of a million Allied soldiers sewn up in this pocket were "not too great."

Allies Fighting Hard

Especially in the Valenciennes area, which is heavily wooded, the French and Belgians were acknowledged to be making desperate efforts to break through the German lines southward.

"But their fate is sealed," one German commentator said.

Strong Allied resistance developed also at Ghent and along the River Scheldt, where the extreme northern wing of the German front is attempting to move southwestward along the Belgian coast.

Early Decision Expected

German authorities said they believed the final decision for the northern forces would come within a few days.

This, they declared, is being hurried by disruptive German bomber attacks on marching columns and the general chaos on the clogged roads resulting from the trek of refugees and retreat of the Allied soldiers.

The air force likewise was carrying out heavy punishment of transports, merchantmen and war vessels of the Allies off both the French and Belgian coasts, the Germans said.

ALLIES BATTLE GERMAN DRIVE FOR CHANNEL

British Bearing Brunt As Nazis Threaten To Isolate England

French Declared Confident They Can Reestablish Lines In North

---

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 21—The Allies, with their backs to the English Channel, tonight fought against a new German advance which spread a party of fire across northern France and threatened to isolate England.

The French high command's night communique admitted the Germans had driven their advance guard to Amiens and Arras on the edge of the coastal plain leading to the English Channel.

A War Ministry spokesman added that German motorcycle troops had pushed on to penetrate the outskirts of the Abbeville region. The city of Abbeville is on the Somme estuary, 12 miles from the Channel's open waters, and about 25 miles west of Arras and Amiens.

British Feel Bombardment

Heavy rumbling like distant thunder, such as that heard during the World War, rattled teacups and windows across the Channel in the British east coast towns of Great Yarmouth and Gorleston. Old-timers recalled the artillery fire heard on windy days during the World War.

The British Expeditionary Force was bearing the brunt of the battle. The troops of Lord Gort, British field commander, were installed in the coastal sector fighting with rifles and machine guns against German planes and tanks in a last stand to keep the Reichswehr from taking control of the Channel.

Farther east, the French were reported still holding out at Cambrai, behind the German advanced lines.

There was no mention in Paris of any Germans reaching the Channel itself.

"Extremely Grave"

The French called the situation "extremely grave," but said that with their troops holding Cambrai, east of Arras, and the British battling the Germans in other sectors, the Allied command was confident it could "reestablish" its lines.

General headquarters have been out of communication for forty-eight hours with Gen. Henri Giraud, commander of the Meuse area, and a War Ministry spokesman said he could neither confirm nor deny German reports that he had been captured.

One report said General Giraud caped in a tank. Some members of his staff were taken prisoners.

The War Ministry spokesman said he believed the Frnech still held Abbeville itself, but that "I can give no official confirmation."

Motorcycle Units Lead

German motorcycle units thrust along roads to the west of Arras and Amiens behind advance bombardments and machine gunning from Nazi planes.

Other roads radiating from the French towns, filled with refugees, were reported strafed by the Germans from the air.

Amiens and Arras were enveloped in flames by the time they were reached by German motorized elements of 3,000 to 4,000 men each.

After their fall the French said the front became "extremely confused."

Nearing Objective

The Germans unleashed their full blast of destruction as they neared their objective of reaching the sea and cutting off the British, French and Belgian forces in Belgium.

To the bombs launched from planes and shells fired from armor-covered guns were added flames from incendiary bombs and torches carried by parachute troops.

Towns, villages and fields west of the battle lines were reported burning as the German tanks lumbered through clouds of smoke into Amiens and Arras, two of their greatest prizes since their invasion of France.

The Allies called upon all the force they could muster to meet the German challenge.

Bombers Taken From Fleet

The high command announced that dive bombers had been taken from the fleet to harass the German land columns, in cooperation with scouting and bomber formations.

A number of American dive-bombing planes were delivered recently to the French navy.

The French alone were reported to have brought down 303 German planes with their anti-aircraft guns and fighter ships since the German push started May 10, not counting those accounted for by the British.

There were no signs of a weakening (one word censored) in the French determination to fight on.

400-Mile-Long Front

At the close of the twelfth day of the German offensive, the Western front ran nearly 400 miles from Belgium, south through Arras and Amiens, then east along the Aisne river to Montmedy and down the Maginot Line to Switzerland.

The Germans turned most of their power to the west, racing to cut off the Allied armies falling back from Belgium into northern France but persisting also in attacks on the Aisne river front toward Paris, less than 100 miles to the south.

Thus the Nazi war machine, slowed down yesterday to gather strength, had bounded forward again.

Paris had a 35-minute air-raid alarm just before nightfall. It ended in a drizzling rain as the capital remained strangely silent and calm.

INVADERS SEIZE AMIENS AND ARRAS; REPORT CRUSHING GIRAUD'S ARMY

Berlin Announces General Captured and Million Men Trapped—Invasion of England Appears Imminent—Enemy Only Sixty Miles From Paris.

MAY 22 1940

By the Associated Press.

The Blitzkrieg knifed today deep into France within sight of the Eiffel Tower in Paris—only sixty miles away—and smashed a salient sixty miles west to reach the outskirts of Abbeville, twelve miles from the English Channel.

The peril of a Nazi invasion of England, already heralded by Prime Minister Churchill, appeared hourly more imminent. So great was the din of battle on the Continent, where swift-striking Nazi mechanized legions threatened to cut off more than 550,000 British and Belgian soldiers in Belgium, that distant rumblings of gunfire could be heard on the English coast.

The historic city of Amiens, site of the great French cathedral of Notre Dame, and nearby Arras were ablaze. A French military spokesman admitted that both cities had fallen to the Nazi invaders in their sweep to the sea.

The German High Command said that Abbeville—a possible springboard for an attack on England—also had been captured. The French admitted that motorcycle vanguards had reached the environs of that channel estuary town.

Premier Reynaud warned a grave-faced French Senate that "the fate of the fatherland is at stake," and bitterly criticized the French High Command for "incredible faults" which permitted Nazi armored columns to inflict "disaster . . . total disorganization" on the French Army defending the gateway to Paris.

In a triumphant communique, the German High Command reported that the Ninth French Army on the Meuse River front estimated at 112,500 men had been crushed "in the biggest attacking operation of all time." The High Command also reported the capture of Gen. Giraud, newly appointed Commander of the French Ninth Army.

Nazis Drive Close to Channel

MAY 22 1940

BERLIN, May 21 (A. P.).—The German armies of the west pounded their iron spike tonight to Abbeville on the Somme estuary of the English Channel, twelve miles from the open water, and made their death threat to England one of the immediate hour.

In a vast "encirclement within encirclement" maneuver, which Germans estimated had trapped a million soldiers of the French, British and Belgian northern armies, Adolf Hitler's armored men on the twelfth day of their great offensive swept westward over Arras and Amiens and reached Abbeville.

Behind them, the High Command said, came wave after wave of infantry.

Caught also in the German military thresher as it gouged across northern France was the Ninth French Army, which had been fighting from Namur, Belgium, west to Maubeuge, France, to hold a connection between the northwestern outpost of the Maginot Line and the Belgian front.

MAY 23 1940

Germans Report Giraud Captured.

The German High Command asserted that Gen. Giraud, new commander of the French Ninth Army in this "Battle of the Bulge," had been captured with his staff and that his crushed army was being dissolved.

[This may refer to Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, whom British sources Saturday identified as commanding "groups of armies" in the "Battle of the Bulge" in northern France, attempting to roll back the Nazi tide.]

Gen. Giraud scarcely had received his command, said DNB, the German news agency, before German troops overran his headquarters.

With the Allies in the north fighting what the Germans proclaimed as "the battle of desperation," the Nazi advance southward toward Paris appeared, from the High Command's report, to be moving on schedule, although that schedule seemed less spectacular.

Reports from the field said that the Eiffel Tower was clearly visible to the advance troops, who moved south from Laon twelve miles to reach the Oise-Aisne Canal and, further east, completed the occupation of Rethel. At their front furthest south, the Germans thus are about sixty miles from Paris.

Drive on England Stressed.

Etched in clearest outline for Germans by military spokesmen and by the press, however, was the picture of the battle being carried toward England.

The plunge of the German Army from the Cambrai-Peronne front to Abbeville, seventy miles from the English coast, was said by the Nazis to have put the German Army in position for a battle to destroy the British Expeditionary Force.

This force is considered thwarted in its attempt to reach the channel ports for homeward flight "in the delusion that the British Isles are invincible."

The massed German Air Force now is bombarding the seaports of Zeebrügge and Ostend in Belgium, and Calais and Boulogne in France, above Abbeville, to cut off this path of escape.

Then Comes England's Turn.

"England need not worry," said Der Angriff, organ of the Propaganda Minister, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels. "She herself will have to pay with her own money, on her own soil, for the bill she has run up!"

30.24-2405

At several points past the furthermost penetration of the Imperial German armies during the world war, Hitler's troops now are declared by military sources to have raced a total of 240 miles since they first crossed the Belgian frontier on May 9. Some days they have made break-throughs of forty-five miles and their speed has averaged twenty miles a day.

Late today, German military spokesmen said, the Nazi wedge toward the channel was steadily broadened by strong forces. They declared that any attempt of the Allies to break through was bound to fail.

A German bridgehead over the Somme at Amiens, to the south was declared established, and lines were being pushed further north.

Military experts said the German strategy had enclosed the Allies in a circle within a circle.

While combined Allied and northern forces as a whole are bottled up between the Somme and the east coast, one Belgian-French army in the Valenciennes sector of northern France is surrounded within the created encirclement.

They said that estimates abroad of a million Allied soldiers sewn up in this pocket were "not too great."

Especially in the Valenciennes area, which is heavily wooded, the French and Belgians were acknowledged to be making desperate efforts to break through the German lines southward.

"But their fate is sealed," said one German commentator.

Strong Allied resistance developed also at Ghent and along the River Scheldt, where the extreme northern wing of the German front is attempting to move southwestward along the Belgian coast.

German authorities said they believed that the final decision for the northern forces would come within a few days.

This, they declared, is being hurried by disruptive German bomber attacks on marching columns and the general chaos on the clogged roads resulting from the trek of refugees and retreat of the Allied soldiers.

The High Command also reported heavy naval blows during air operations in which, it said, it lost fifteen planes to forty-seven by the Allies.

Claims Sinking of Transport.

It said German flyers had:

Sunk—six transports and a tanker, totaling 43,000 tons, before dawn today in the Straits of Dover.

Severely damaged—four additional ships of about 13,000 tons, a French destroyer, the French navy tanker Niger of 5,482 tons, the French freighter Pavon and two additional freighters.

Newly acquired air bases in Holland are being used in these operations and in attacks on enemy shipping in the North Sea.

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 21 — The British Admiralty spokesman said tonight that no British transports or tankers had been sunk in the Dover Straits on Monday night. A German communique claimed six transports and tankers, totaling 43,000 tons, had been sunk.

Nazis Drive Close to Channel

BERLIN, May 21 (A. P.).—In a lightning breakthrough, the Nazis declared today that they had stormed to within fifteen miles of the English Channel, while their vanguards on the southern front had pushed within sight of the Eiffel Tower in Paris.

The Germans reported these successes:

1. Capture of Abbeville, Amiens and Arras in the drive toward the English Channel.

2. Crushing of France's Ninth Army and the capture of a French commander, Gen. Giraud, with his staff.

3. Elimination of the last Allied resistance in Rethel, the capture of Laon and an advance to the Aisne-Oise Canal on the southern edge of the bulge in northern France.

4. Capture of the last fort in Belgium's Namur fortifications, attacks east of Ghent and frustration of an "enemy attempt to force a way out southward from Valenciennes."

5. Heavy damage by air attack to transports, merchantmen and war vessels on the French-Belgian coast; bomb hits on a British battleship and heavy cruiser off the Norwegian coast.

British Army Reported Endangered.

The plunge to Abbeville, about midway between the French channel ports of Dieppe and Boulogne, was said by the Nazis to have put Adolf Hitler's army in position for a battle which might bring destruction to the British expedition in France, as well as to a large segment of the Belgian-French defenses.

Opposing the German march, the Nazis have estimated, are about 300,000 British, 250,000 Belgians and 1,000,000 French troops.

In the drive westward, called by the Germans a march of unprecedented magnitude, the Nazi armies apparently had succeeded in cutting off the mass of Allied troops fighting for the last twelve days on Belgian soil.

They said that the developments of the last twenty-four hours—apparently carrying the Nazis farther at some points than the German armies pushed throughout the world war—indicated that the Allies were on the verge of paralyzing losses in Belgium and northern France.

The Germans seemed confident that they had bottled up the whole British Expeditionary Force.

English Reported Fleeing.

Acidly, these sources asserted that the English were fleeing to the channel ports to embark for home "in the century-old conviction that the British Isles are invincible."

In the dozen days since crossing the Belgian border on May 10, the Germans have raced 240 miles, first toward Paris and then in a strategic shift toward the coast. Their speed averages about twenty miles a day, while on some days there have been break-throughs of as much as forty-five miles.

"In the German drive on Amiens, French and Belgian troops fought bravely," an authorized source said, "but their technical equipment was no match for the German Army.

"We recognize that the French are bending every effort psychologically and militarily to stave off—in vain, however—the German advance.

"It is a tragic collapse of the time-honored French democratic system."

Called Record Attack.

The High Command called the swift advance northward to the channel "the biggest attacking operation of all time."

"The Ninth French Army, which was on the Meuse between Namur and Sedan to hold and maintain connection between strong enemy operation groups in Belgium and the Maginot Line south of Sedan," it said, "has been crushed and is about to be dissolved."

It said that "Gen. Giraud, hitherto commander of the Seventh French Army who assumed command over the Ninth Army," had been captured with his army staff.

[This may refer to Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, whom British sources Saturday identified as commanding "groups of armies" in the "Battle of the Bulge" in northern France, attempting to roll back the Nazi tide.]

Spearhead of Nazi Drive.

The drive toward the coast was the spearpoint of a general German advance which widened the pocket in northern France and pushed forward the conquest of Belgium.

On the southern boundary of the bulge, the High Command said, German forces have overcome the last French resistance in Rethel, have captured Laon and pushed on to the Aisne-Oise Canal over the Chemin des Dames, famous world war battlefield.

In Belgium, it said, the Germans attacked east of Ghent and farther south on the Scheldt River and blocked "enemy attempts to force a way out southward from Valenciennes."

Nazis Report Swift Stroke.

The German progress was so swift that the communique described Nazi forces as "crowding toward the channel coast all the French and Belgian armies still to be found north of the Somme."

"German divisions flow into the breach forced by the German thrust," it said. "German armored cars and motorized troops at their head took Arras, Amiens and Abbeville."

The German advance from St. Quentin forked westward to Abbeville, about sixty-three miles west of St. Quentin, and northwestward to Arras, about thirty-eight miles beyond St. Quentin.

The High Command also reported heavy naval blows during air operations in which, it said, it lost fifteen planes to forty-seven by the Allies.

Claims Sinking of Transport.

It said German flyers had:

Sunk—six transports and a tanker, totaling 43,000 tons, before dawn today in the Straits of Dover.

Severely damaged—four additional ships of about 13,000 tons, a French destroyer, the French navy tanker Niger of 5,482 tons, the French freighter Pavon and two additional freighters.

It was indicated that the Germans sought to close a "bag" around the territory on all sides of Valenciennes, from which the Belgians and French were attempting to flee. Valenciennes is in France just below the Belgian frontier, north and slightly east of Paris.

Earlier today Germany reported triumphantly that her iron legions had scored fresh gains that carried the Nazi battle flags to within sixty-nine miles of Paris and threatened with encirclement hundreds of thousands of Allied troops fighting in Belgium.

The High Command announced that the German army, driving southward toward the French capital, had already reached the Oise-Aisne Canal after capturing Laon, and official spokesmen declared with high confidence of German superiority that there would be no repetition of "the wonder of the Marne" which halted the big push for Paris in 1914.

It was said that only eleven days had been required to seize Laon—a feat which the Kaiser Wilhelm's armies needed twenty-six days to accomplish.

Report British Trapped.

Military spokesmen were equally jubilant over the progress being made in Belgium, where a British retreat, they said, had turned into a "headlong flight."

The Allied troops in Belgium were described as being caught at the bottom of a huge sack, which the Germans are attempting to close by driving west through northern France toward the Channel and south along the Belgian coast from Antwerp.

The action was said to be developing into a race for the Channel ports, where the Germans seeking to draw tight the strings of the sack before the British can reach the coast to flee by boat.

Bombers Harassing Troops.

Spokesmen said that the British withdrawal was being severely impeded by German dive bombers, which are destroying bridges and railway lines and harassing troop columns.

Newly acquired air bases in Holland are being used in these operations and in attacks on enemy shipping in the North Sea.

German forces were reported making fast progress through Belgium and to be "before Ghent," which is thirty-eight miles from the Belgian coast at Ostend.

Large Nazi forces released from the campaign in the Netherlands are assisting in the action in Belgium, authorized spokesmen said.

Million French Troops in Belgium.

It was estimated that the Allied troops opposing the Germans in Belgium include approximately 1,000,000 French, 250,000 Belgians and 300,000 British—but the latter were said to be "no longer a factor."

All the inner forts around the Belgian city of Liege have fallen to the Germans, it was said, and all but one at Namur.

The Germans said that Allied warplanes were continuing a series of raids on northern Germany but declared that these were "planless" and had resulted in no serious damage to military objectives.

Authorized spokesmen expressed complete confidence in the superiority of the German air force. This superiority, they said, is being increased steadily by the current fighting through the destruction of four Allied planes to every one lost by Germany.

PREMIER SAYS FAILURES ARE NOT TOLERATED

Pledges Speedy Penalty Against Saboteurs Or Cowards

Senate Gives Government Free Hand To Cope With Crisis

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 21—Declaring death is mild punishment for errors against the vital interests of the country, Premier Reynaud today told the Senate no failure would be tolerated in the effort for public safety.

There will be no dilatory procedure against traitors, saboteurs or cowards, he added and "no private interest will have anything to say."

When the Premier finished his address the Senate adjourned indefinitely, giving the Government a free hand to cope with the crisis.

"The fatherland is in danger," said Reynaud, in beginning his speech.

"The first duty of the Government is to tell the truth to the Senate and to the country.

"You know that the fortifications which protected the country could be divided into two parts: The Maginot Line, going from Basel to Longwy, on the Luxembourg frontier; and a lighter line of fortifications going from Longwy to the sea.

"Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg having been invaded, the left wing of the French army left its fortifications between Sedan and the sea and, pivoting on Sedan, went into Belgium on a line from Sedan to Antwerp and even to Bois le Duc in Holland.

"In the face of this situation which they counted on, what did they do?

Unleashed Attack

"They unleashed a formidable attack on the hinge of the French army established behind the Meuse between Sedan and Namur.

"The Meuse, a difficult river at first sight, had been considered wrongly a redoubtable obstacle for the enemy.

"This is the reason why the French divisions which were charged with defending it were not numerous and were spread over a great width along the river.

"Moreover, the Corap (Meuse) army had been put there composed of divisions less solidly formed and less trained, the best troops having been assigned to the marching wing in Belgium.

"Now, if it is true that the Meuse is a river which looks difficult, it is precisely because it is difficult to defend. Flanking fire by machine guns is impossible. On the other hand, infiltrations are easy for maneuverable troops.

"Add to that the fact that more than half the infantry divisions of the Corap army had not yet reached the Meuse, although they had the shortest movement to make since they were nearest the pivot.

Bridges Not Destroyed

"That is not all. As a result of unbelievable errors which will be punished, the bridges on the Meuse had not been destroyed. Over these bridges passed the panzer divisionen (armored divisions) preceded by fighting planes which came to attack divisions scattered out, poorly organized and poorly trained for such attacks.

"You understand now the disaster, the total disorganization, of the Corap army.

"That is how the hinge of the French army was broken.

"The day before yesterday when I arrived at the War Ministry I was joined by Marshal Petain and General Weygand. What was the situation?

"A breach 100 kilometers wide was opened in our front. Into this breach poured a German army composed of armored divisions followed by motorized divisions, which, after having opened a large pocket in the direction of Paris, were launched west toward the sea, taking from the rear all our fortified system on the Franco-Belgian frontier and menacing the Allied forces still engaged in Belgium, to whom the order to retreat was given only on the evening of May 15.

"The day before yesterday an armored division had reached the line of Quesnoy-Cambrai-Peronne and the Somme to Ham.

Continues 48 Hours

"For forty-eight hours the German advance has continued. This morning at 8 o'clock the command informed me Amiens and Arras were occupied.

"How did we come to that?

"Is the morale of our army at fault? Not at all. The battles in Belgium in the first days proved it.

"The truth is that our classic conception of the conduct of war has come up against a new conception. The basis of this conception is not only the mass use of armored divisions and the cooperation of armored divisions with fighting planes, but an effort to disorganize the enemy rear by raids in depth and by parachutists which in Holland almost took The Hague and which in Belgium captured the most powerful fort of Liege.

"I shall not speak to you of false news and orders given by telephone to civil authorities, for example, to provoke evacuations.

Needs Immediate Decisions

"The Senate understands that of all the efforts for recovery which are required of us, the first is of an intellectual nature. We must think of the war, the new war which is being waged against us and make immediate decisions.

"This surprise is not the first we have undergone and then overcome in the course of our history.

"At the beginning of the last war we knew the inferiority which resulted for us from the lack of heavy artillery; we suffered from the too small number of machine guns; we underwent the great surprise of the foul arm of gas and, nevertheless, we replied, we adapted ourselves, we ended by dominating.

"It will be the same today if everyone so wishes it, if every soldier understands the immense role he plays, if every worker who is laboring twelve hours a day attaches himself to his machine with fierce passion, if every man and every woman understands the grandeur of the hour we are living.

Beginning To Understand

"They are beginning to understand abroad. There are millions of men, women and children far off who are beginning to understand that they themselves and their futures are involved. May they understand before it is too late.

"In the misfortune of the fatherland we are proud to think that two of its children who would have had the right to rest on their glory have come to put themselves at the service of the country in these tragic hours: Petain and Weygand.

"Petain, the victor of Verdun, the great chief who knew how to be human, who knows how a French victory can come out of an abyss. Weygand, the man of Foch, who stopped the German rush when the front was split in 1918, who then changed the fates and led us to victory. I thank them each in the name of France.

"General Weygand yesterday took up his command. Today he is on the battlefield. The conduct of military operations is up to him alone.

"What I want to say to the Senate is that on the plan of conduct of the war there exists a complete communion of ideas among Marshal Petain, General Weygand and me.

Will Tolerate No Failure

"Effort for the public safety has been undertaken, no failure will be tolerated. Death is indeed mild punishment for any error against the vital interests of the country.

"While our soldiers are dying there will be no dilatory procedure with traitors saboteurs or cowards.

"No private interest will have anything to say.

"Let us be equal to the sorrows of the fatherland.

"I told you the truth because it alone may give us the power to act.

Urges Confidence

"Have confidence in the great chief who has taken command of our armies.

"Have confidence in the soldiers of France, they will be worthy of their ancestors.

"Our aviators are covering themselves with glory and let me thank here the admirable Royal Air Force for the complete aid it has given France both in its action on the battlefield and against the sources of enemy supplies.

"These two great peoples, these two empires, united as one, cannot be beaten.

"France can not die!

"As for myself, if I were told one day that only a miracle could save France I would say that day: 'I believe in the miracle because I believe in France.'"

Spies Behind Lines of Allies Aid Planes and Spread Rumors

Work Is Easier Because of Confusion Due to Refugees — German Air Force Ranges Widely.

By DREW MIDDLETON.

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, May 21 (A. P.). (Passed by the Military Censor).—The German Air Force, sowing death by day and night, has bombed objectives far behind the fighting lines in seventy-two hours of extensive operations. At the same time, the raiding planes undoubtedly are aided by spies working with Nazi parachute troops, who destroy communication lines, signal flyers at night, gather military information and encourage panic behind the lines by wild rumors of defeat.

[Note: This dispatch was written before Mr. Middleton returned to London with other correspondents, on orders of the B. E. F.]

Arras 'Dead and Buried.'

Arras, the birthplace of Robespierre, "is dead and buried" under the German onslaught in northern France, I was told this morning just as I was starting for London.

"Arras as we knew it last fall is dead and buried," a British officer told me, "its buildings are demolished; its people have fled or are dead."

Amiens, which when I saw it on Friday, was jammed with refugees from France, Belgium and Holland, now has felt the fist of war.

A flying officer told me that its cathedral had been shelled and bombed by Germans before they entered the city. He did not know the extent of the damage.

Until the confused situation on the western front settles into some form of stabilization spy operations are expected to continue, with the Allies taking what measures they can, where they can, to meet them.

The town in which I am writing is packed with refugees, some Dutch, some Belgian, some French.

Easier for Spies.

Here, as elsewhere, counter-espionage is handicapped by these surges of population. With the entire nation on the move, all a parachutist needs to pose as a refugee is a bicycle, tattered clothes and a forged identification card.

Rumors run through every town. There is wild talk of revolution in Paris, breaks in the defense lines and the landing of German troops behind the lines.

The bombing alone is bad enough. Two nights ago I crouched beside a wall as three bombs shattered a hotel a hundred yards away. Last night I slept in an air raid shelter where I could hear the bursting of bombs and the crackle of anti-aircraft fire.

Despite the bombing in towns from which much of the civilian populace has not been evacuated, I do not believe civilian casualties have been anywhere near as great as in Spain or China.

An Earlier Dispatch.

WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE IN FRANCE, May 20 (A. P.) (Delayed: Passed by Military Censor).—British troops fought stubbornly today along one side of a German salient thrusting northwestward toward English Channel ports.

The Nazi salient, driven at headlong speed after the Sedan break through, is many miles wide at its mouth and many miles deep.

Tonight it lies like a broad bayonet pressed to the heart of the British and French empires and is the gravest factor in the Allied military situation.

Even if the status is no worse than it was twenty-four hours ago, it remains extremely grave.

One of the war's hottest actions was fought by the Allies against the Germans in a town on the edge of the salient, which is tactically important as a junction of the roads leading north and west to the Low Countries and south and east to the center of France.

German troops in the salient, buttressed and screened by hundreds of tanks and armored cars, appeared to be gaining their second wind today.

Except for a big battle at the town mentioned above, there were no other large scale engagements along the front, which is still as inconstant and changeable as quicksilver.

The Allies' Chance.

The Allies tonight seemed faced with no other alternative than to strike—and strike quickly—at the base of the salient.

Such a counter-attack, delivered simultaneously by the British to the north and the French to the south, might end, for the moment at least, the danger which threatens the Allied cause.

If, however, the Germans have been moving fresh troops and ammunition into the area during the last forty-eight hours, the Allies will be forced to dig in, in front of the German steam-roller, and continue to fight on the defensive.

The conflict in the town mentioned above exceeded in violence any other action fought by the Allies thus far.

The Allies and Germans sifted through the narrow cobblestoned streets, sniped from half-ruined houses and swept streets and plazas with showers of machine gun fire.

As well as being important strategically, this town, which until a week ago had thousands of inhabitants, is of great historic importance.

Engagements of small bodies of troops occurred in numerous other locations in the Cambrai-St. Quentin area.

Mobile warfare of a type unseen in Europe since the first weeks of the first world war is continuing on a large scale.

It's Cavalry Fighting.

Except for the substitution of tanks and armored cars for horses, it is cavalry figthing. Sudden dashes, raids on isolated posts and occasional full-dress attacks constitute the main German tactics, but ever behind this steel screen is the mass of the German Army.

Meanwhile, the British are reenforcing every minute despite the fact that thousands of refugees continue to pour toward the coast in columns of homeless, helpless, hopeless humanity.

There is no indication by either the British or French as to the extent of casualties, but one officer who toured the front remarked to me it was the first time he had ever seen so few ambulances at the British front.

The Royal Air Force again tonight was playing a bad hand well against a force vastly superior in number of planes.

There were indications that the Germans had learned the lesson they were taught by the French at the world war battle of the Marne, and this time they are taking no chances of being hit while tired and breathless.

British Soldiers Prepared To Die To Keep Nazis From Channel Ports

U. S. Writer Says Tommies Mean To Fight German Horde And Perhaps Counter-Attack

Drew Middleton, Associated Press war correspondent, returned to London yesterday from France and Belgium, where he had been accompanying the British Expeditionary Force since the German offensive started against the Netherlands, Belgium and France.

By DREW MIDDLETON

London, May 21—The British Expeditionary Force, in peril of being pinned against the English Channel, means to die where it stands rather than let the Germans occupy the coast where they could base an attack on the British Isles.

I have traveled over 1,000 miles through the British positions in Belgium in the last ten days, and men I knew well are dead or horribly wounded.

But as I left France this morning (on orders from the B. E. F.), their fellows gave but one impression:

They mean to fight.

Arras "Dead And Buried"

Arras, the little city of culture where Robespierre was born and the scene of five battles, including Vimy Ridge in the World War, "is dead and buried"—as one British officer told me.

Amiens, too—jammed with pathetic refugees from France, Belgium and Holland when I saw it Friday—has felt the awful weight of war. Its famous Cathedral of Notre Dame has been shelled and bombed by the Germans, who are in possession as they were for four years during the World War.

When I left the Continent, the German attacks, to my knowledge, had not been extended to the coast, nor were the British and their Allies in Belgium completely separated from French forces in France.

Now, however, the Germans appear to have reached Abbeville, on the Somme estuary, twelve miles inland from the channel's open waters, and whether they have cut off the two Allied forces depends on the staying power of this western wedge.

Most Serious In History

It is apparent that the situation has become the most serious in the long history of British arms.

The B. E. F., plus French and Belgian units, must stand and fight to protect Channel ports, beyond which, a scanty thirty miles away, are England and the Britons' homes.

With their feet planted in the soil hallowed by generations of warring sires, the Britons appear to have but one hand left to play—a hand dealt them when the Germans first drove their salient northwestward and made plain their intention of dividing the Allied forces and striking for the channel.

Counter-Attack From North

This is a counter-attack from the British on the north and the French on the south in the region of St. Quentin and Cambrai, which, if successful, would recover the old British line and wipe out the salient.

It is a desperate measure against an enemy as powerful as the Germans.

The invaders, following their precept of divide and conquer, command the situation. They can check the British in the north and turn on the French in the south, or they can lay siege to the British lines with their force, superior in numbers, armament and aviation, and attempt to wipe out the grim line of khaki that stands once more with its back to the wall.

The British have fought savagely against the gray-green tide of Nazi soldiery.

All along the British line there was hot fighting. In Arras, still swept by flames, there was fierce battling in the streets—one of the war's heaviest actions yet.

Machine Guns In Streets

The British sifted through the narrow cobblestoned streets with machine guns to hold this town, center of a railway network that reaches into central France (including Paris) and Belgium, and also center of vital French coal mines.

But the German mechanized forces screened the German infantry masses, and Arras fell.

Raiding German planes undoubtedly were aided by spies who worked with parachute troops, signaled flyers at night, gathered military information and spread untrue tales of disaster.

All a parachutist needs, in order to appear as a refugee, is tattered clothes and a forged identification card.

The British are handicapped in attempting to hold their line by lack of prepared battle positions and gun emplacements with which to smash the armored Nazis.

Against waves of Nazi tanks and armored cars they are throwing flying columns of infantry in trucks and a few tanks while their Blenheims swoop low and plaster the German motorized sections with explosive.

The B. E. F.'s withdrawal—which was not due to its own failure—was a stubborn, rear-guard operation carried out under bomb and shell by night and day. The Tommies got sleep and food when they could, and were hindered by thousands of terrified refugees.

But still they were saying today, as I left, "Let's have a crack at that — — Hitler."

In their own language, "their tails are up."

Punishment They Took

I know something of the punishment the British went through.

As I walked along an old cobblestone street on a soft May night "it" started—the sky was lighted up by searchlights, and I saw a plane dropping bombs on what probably was a storage dump.

The German pulled up, as he always does, to about 20,000 feet, his motor purposely non-synchronized to confuse the British listening apparatus and sounding like a huge mosquito in a dark room.

I went to bed. I do not know how long I was asleep before I was awakened by a thump on the wall behind my head.

Two holes had been made by machine-gun bullets from a German plane strafing an anti-aircraft battery on the bluff behind the house.

I went away from there.

A moment later, as I groped for the door, another German bomber, diving, let three 500-pounders go hardly one hundred yards away.

Knocked Flat

The terrific concussion knocked me flat.

I left the building amid falling plaster and broken windows, the hideous noise of clanging army ambulances and the screams of some wounded.

That went on the rest of the night. A dozen times I heard that whistle which precedes the bursting of a bomb.

Crouched in a shelter I heard the clang of bursting bombs on the roof.

Not until 4 A. M. did the last German bomber leave. When he did go he left the town and its people shaken.

We had threaded our way up with the stench of putrid cadavers of horses and cows in our nostrils, with abandoned tanks, motorized guns and horse-drawn French artillery scattered here and there.

Pour In From Belgium

All day and night battalion after battalion of German infantry and artillery had been pouring into this section from conquered sections of Belgium and there was many a halt before we could move out again in the midst of vehicles moving in three columns.

At noon we had been with the man who bears the responsibility for this action, Col Gen. Walther von Richenau.

At 3 o'clock this morning he had moved into new headquarters, this time into a delightful seventeenth-century modernized chateau at Enghien, property of the Duke of Arenberg.

Greeting us warmly on the terrace, he observed that until now the German troops had not encountered the main body of the Allies.

"Utmost Confidence"

"We are facing the future with utmost confidence," he said.

"This is no mere phrase. But we have no illusions.

"We have not yet come into direct contact with the Allied main forces. That's why we do not propose to proclaim victory prematurely.

"We know we have completely offset plans of our enemies for present operations and we also know we are bound to win in the end."

Von Richenau declined firmly to make any prophecy regarding the duration of the war.

Never Took Back Reports

"I pride myself on never yet having had to take back any report I have made to my superior," he said. "That was true of the World War in 1914 and 1918 and I want it to be true also this time.

"I report only what I absolutely know. I hope that after what you yourself have seen you will agree our high command reports are accurate."

With a smile, he added, seizing his monocle and putting it tighter into his eye: "But perhaps I can answer you indirectly by describing little scenes which ensued when I talked to a captive British officer.

"'You will be treated decently and I do not think you will be with us long,' I said to the officer.

"Take It As I Do"

"To this he replied somewhat dejectedly: 'I don't know, sir, whether I can take it in the right spirit.'

"Whereupon, I said, 'Take it in the same spirit as I.'"

Asked how many enemy troops in Abbeville and Antwerp were injured, he again declined to commit himself.

With a twinkle in his eye, he observed, "The surgeon says the full facts can become evident only after the autopsy."

Adoration Of Hitler

Richenau, who often switched from German to English during the conversation, spoke with the greatest adoration of Adolf Hitler.

"He not only is the political leader of the Reich; he also in truth is the supremest commander of the Reich's armed forces," General von Richenau said.

"I talk to him every day. He knows just where every army is operating."

He seemed more concerned with routing the Belgian, French and English troops headed for the English Channel.

No less a man than Gen. Walter von Reichenau, commander of the Eighth Army, was selected to perform this task.

Yet even Von Reichenau was not too busy to offer a welcome to American correspondents visiting the German western armies as Hitler's personal guests.

Compares Paris to a Ripe Apple.

Von Reichenau is credited with knowing every detail of Germany's famous pincer tactics. He distinguished himself during the Polish campaign by a practical illustration of how these tactics can be applied.

With Von Reichenau's army on the right wing apparently heading in the direction of the French and Belgian coastal points and with the left wing gradually moving southward, Hitler could afford to let the center take care of itself, as indicated in yesterday's High Command communique.

Paris will fall into his lap, he feels, like a ripe apple from a tree if Von Reichenau can intercept the Allied forces heading for the coast. Besides, Hitler is not nearly so much interested in Paris as in London.

Calls England the Foe.

One must not forget that Hitler regards the present war primarily as a fight with the British empire. Months of incessant propaganda have inculcated this idea also in the minds of the German people.

Significantly, every radio announcement concerning events in the west ends with the stereotyped playing of the song "We Are Sailing Against England." No tune is

Lochner Sees Germans Push Back British Army

U. S. Correspondent Stands On Ground Held Day Before By English And Watches Nazi Forces Drive Ahead

MAY 22 1940

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the Western German Army, May 21—From a hill within one mile of the retiring Allied forces, I witnessed this afternoon the brilliant attacks along one small sector of Gen. Walther von Richenau's Eighth Army as it relentlessly drove to complete the encirclement of perhaps 500,000 British, French and Belgium soldiers.

Some German sources said there may be even 1,000,000 Allied soldiers in this trap against the English Channel.

The Allies, chiefly British, were below me in a valley withdrawing from the Sheldt Canal, near Renaix, thirty-five miles southwest of Brussels.

The German artillery was behind me.

Watches Shells Drop

Cannon boomed, shrapnel rent the air, and German scouters roared overhead directing the artillery. Ugly clouds of yellow-white or gray smoke indicated when the deadly loads were deposited on the roads upon which Allied troops were withdrawing.

Invisible to us, because they were hidden by trees, were German infantrymen relentlessly pushing after the enemy.

Where we stood English artillery observers had been only a day before. Thus quickly do the fortunes of war change in this area.

Nazis in Sight of Eiffel Tower, But Push Is Aimed at Channel

Von Reichenau, Master of Pincer Tactic, in Command of Vast German Attack—Louvain Library in Ashes Again.

MAY 22 1940

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

WITH THE GERMAN WESTERN ARMIES, May 21 (A. P.).—The famous Eiffel Tower of Paris was clearly visible to the advance guards of Adolf Hitler's forward-dashing army today but it was by no means certain that Der Fuehrer would endeavor to capture the French capital in a hurry.

ever played indicating an anti-French theme. The anti-English song also was played during the seizure of Denmark and the Norwegian campaign.

Once in control of the Belgian and French coastal harbors, Hitler would want to get ready for a smashing drive on the British Isles, for which the first chapter would be a gigantic air attack.

Here, among army people, one constantly hears this phrase uttered with decided advance satisfaction: "Not since 1066 has England had an enemy on her shores. Hitler will continue where the Normans left off."

This may be wishful thinking, but there is no doubt that a spirit of supreme confidence pervades the army as it pours reserve after reserve into gaps opened in the French and Belgian defenses.

Louvain Library Destroyed.

Meanwhile another war tragedy has been repeated. The library of the University of Louvain, burned in 1914 and rebuilt in 1928 with American funds, is charred wreckage once more.

Flames have gutted the $500,000 structure, erected through public subscription in the United States, and have destroyed its 700,000 rare volumes, collected from around the world and contributed to replace those lost in 1914.

The loss of the new library was discovered by American newspaper correspondents visiting Louvain as guests of Adolf Hitler. No one seemed to be able to say how the fire began. All floors had been swept by the flames, and smoke still came from the basement as we looked at it late yesterday.

350,000 Books Contributed.

In the Germans' world war advance through Belgium they occupied Louvain on August 19, 1914. A week later the library was destroyed by fire, with thousands of books and manuscripts which could not be replaced.

To help equip the new building, which was built after Cardinal Mercier, head of the university, had visited the United States and suggested aid for it, various governments contributed a total of 350,000 volumes. Of these, 30,000 came from Germany, 55,000 from Great Britain and 33,000 from France.

The ancient town of Louvain itself, a fourteenth-century cloth-making center and long famous as the seat of the university, was shelled and shattered, and practically the entire population of 41,000 had fled. It presented a picture of desolation.

Wanderers Trek From Town.

Entire families, from aged grandmother to nursing infant, were seen perched miserably on top of springless carts drawn by horses. Interminable lines of wanderers on foot, weighted down with as much as they could carry, trekked out of the town.

The German administration was trying to organize relief with characteristic efficiency.

Later when the correspondents passed through Louvain a second time some homes had been opened up and found undamaged. Before other houses citizens sat weeping or stood and stared.

Otto's Castle Bombed.

I saw another scene of wrecking at Steenockerzeel, where the little Belgian castle of the Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, pretender to the Austrian throne, had been bombed and blown apart.

The Germans were prompted to bomb the castle because the British had made it a Divisional Staff Headquarters, it was said. One bomb struck beside it, digging a hole thirty feet deep and blowing off part of the roof. Otto's shaving equipment was spread over the grand piano. Costly French prints were scattered in the wreckage.

Letters belonging to Otto's mother, the former Empress Zita, were strewn about.

[Reports last week said that Zita and her family had fled safely to France in advance of the German invasion. Otto had been home but a few days after returning from his trip to the United States.]

Brussels Almost Unhurt.

These scenes at Steenockerzeel and Louvain were in marked contrast to the situation found at Brussels, where I had expected to find at least a large part of the capital in ruins. But as a matter of fact that city is practically unhurt.

The Schaerbeek Railway station, outside the city, from where trains normally journey to all parts of Belgium and Europe, was demolished, but in Brussels proper life seemed amazingly normal.

German officers and soldiers were treated courteously by the people, who seemed relieved that their city had ben spared bombing.

Germans Anxious to Be Nice.

It is reported that there has been no sniping in any part of Belgium or Holland, and as a result the German authorities say they expect it will be much easier than in 1914-1918 to put into operation the German administration of the occupied areas.

In numerous shops I visited people bought and sold as usual. Cafes and restaurants were well filled and still had peacetime stocks and rations. There was butter, bread, eggs and meat aplenty.

Telephone lines were not working yet, but this was not because they had been cut, but because the High Command deemed it inexpedient at present to resume general telephone service.

The German soldiers on their part seemed most anxious to be nice to children and to deal courteously with grownups. The average German soldier, I have observed again and again, is a bitter, unyielding, determined and even terrible fighter, but he also has a vast sentimental strain in him.

BRITAIN BRACES ITSELF TO MEET GERMAN ATTACK

Defense Measures Speeded With Air Raids or Invasion Expected.

PEOPLE HAVE FAITH IN FLEET

More Men Called to Balloon Barrage Duty---Bill Rushed to Equip Volunteers.

LONDON, May 21 (A. P.).—Great Britain mustered her defense power tonight to save the heart of the empire from a German thrust across the English Channel.

German claims of an advance to the Channel and isolation of the British and Belgian armies on the Continent were said by a spokesman in London to be "grossly exaggerated" and another described the battle there as "confused."

However, the menace of a Blitzkrieg across the channel—described by Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express as "perfectly feasible"—broughtt hese developments:

1. Prime Minister Churchill asked the House of Commons to hurry through to passage a bill providing equipment for the local defense force. A quarter of a million men already have volunteered for a minuteman army to combat invaders.

2. The Air Ministry called for men 35 to 45 years of age to man balloon barrages protecting vital areas from dive bombing.

Death for Treachery.

3. The Government announced hastening of enactment of the death penalty for the treachery bill to combat fifth column activties.

Mr. Churchill, after the first session of the House of Commons attended by his new ministers, was received in audience at Buckingham Palace by King George.

The Air Ministry announced tonight that British bombers had been "continuously engaged" over the French and Belgian fronts throughout the day.

It reported repeated British aerial forays yesterday and last night also in the embattled northern French regions of Arras, St. Quentin and Cambrai, especially on German armored columns and troop concentrations.

Five Blenheim bombers, it acknowledged, failed to return.

Anti-Aircraft Fire.

This Afternoon terrific anti-aircraft fire was heard twice off the southeastern coast as airplane motors droned overhead. "Everything shook ond trembled," residents thereabouts said.

The average Briton said of the plight of the British expeditionary force "pretty bad, but they'll pull through."

Today's final editions told London newspaper readers of German claims of advances toward the English Channel. Smaller headlines: "But London treats claims with reserve."

All evening papers carried French Premier Paul Reynaud's speech admitting the capture of Amiens and Arras by the Germans.

In earlier editions there were headlines saying that German thrusts had been repulsed and editorials asserting that Britain "can take it—and win."

Correspondents who had accompanied the B. E. F. have returned to England, so that Britains were without any direct word from the front from these sources.

Faith in the Navy.

Far more reassuring to the average Briton than the statement, "the B. E. F. is fighting on positions assigned," was faith in the navy as a bulwark against invasion.

This first line of defense against any German Blitzkrieg blow is Britain's home fleet with bases at Devonport, Chatham and Portsmouth, skirting the Channel.

Even without many wartime auxiliaries, the home fleet is three times as large as the entire German Navy and is supplied with anti-submarine and anti-aircraft ships. The Admiralty has called for all privately-owned small craft of more than thirty feet to aid in coastal defense.

The naval craft are backed up by coastal defense batteries around the whole of Britain.

Air Raid Defenses.

To fight invasion from the air, Britain has hundreds of fighter planes based on islands, a network of anti-aircraft batteries and a nationwide organization of civilian defense in the air raid precautions system.

German fuel storage depots at Rotterdam were the target again of British night bombing attacks. The Government spokesman said that the bombings threw behind-the-lines communications into confusion and wrecked many gasoline storage tanks. Direct hits at Rotterdam that sent yellowish smoke columns 7,000 feet into the air were described. Despite heavy shrapnel fire from ground batteries, damage to the raiding bombers was termed slight.

Nurses Are Wanted.

The Ministry of Health appealed for more trained nurses as convoys of wounded soldiers arrived at English ports, and the Ministry of Supply appealed to arms and munitions workers to put on "war speed." The Supply Minister, Herbert Morrison, said:

"The hour is critical; the nation's need is great. . . . If we waste a minute at our desk or bench, we sacrifice a life."

Parliament was called to meet this afternoon in its first regular session since the Whitsun recess, which was interrupted for a brief session on May 13 after the new Government under Prime Minister Winston Churchill took office.

The Ministry of Home Security disclosed that the production of a new filter for civilian gas masks, increasing their efficiency against smoke and gases, has been going on for some time. Supplies are being sent first to the more vulnerable areas.

Malcolm MacDonald, Minister of Health and former Colonial Secretary, moved today for second reading of a bill authorizing expenditure of £5,000,000 (about $16,325,000) annually for ten years for colonial welfare and development.

He commented that passage at this critical hour would show confidence in ultimate victory, and added:

"We must not default upon our colonial obligations.

The Cardiff Peace Pledge Union was ordered today to quit its stall in the Central Market because of pamphlets considered subversive.

British Rush Home Defenses

LONDON, May 21 (A. P.).—British home defenses were pressed at war speed today as the German lightning drive toward France's north coast brought steadily nearer the double threat of air attack and actual invasion.

"Invasion of Britain is perfectly feasible," said the Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, "but it cannot be successful if we are prepared."

War Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that response to the call for local defense volunteers had been satisfactory.

Prime Minister Churchill sat between his predecessor, Neville Chamberlain, now Lord President of the Council, and Mr. Eden at the first session of Commons attended by his new ministers.

The Air Ministry called today for more men 30 years old to 45 for duties with the balloon barrage, the system of balloons attached to steel cables by which a defensive cordon has been placed around London and other cities and along Britain's coasts.

An authoritative source said today that the claims made by today's German communique, which declared that the Germans had captured Abbeville, fifteen miles from the English Channel, as well as Amiens and Arras, were regarded as grossly exaggerated.

The spokesman said that the western front battle, however, was "more confused than ever, with everybody behind everybody else's lines."

"Bands of German tanks wandering about living on the country," he said, are thrusting a wide salient into France, but are becoming more vulnerable to counter attack and he added that the French hold many places from which to deliver such blows.

Nurses Are Wanted.

The Ministry of Health appealed for more trained nurses as convoys of wounded soldiers arrived at English ports, and the Ministry of Supply appealed to arms and munitions workers to put on "war speed." The Supply Minister, Herbert Morrison, said:

"The hour is critical; the nation's need is great. . . . If we waste a minute at our desk or bench, we sacrifice a life."

The London Times commented:

"The plain reason for the dangerous position into which the Allied armies have been forced is not a failure of strategy or valor but a deficiency of material.

"The German onrush could have been stayed and their future defeat can be secured only by overcoming their immense superiority in the air."

Parliament Meets.

Parliament was called to meet this afternoon in its first regular session since the Whitsun recess, which was interrupted for a brief session on May 13 after the new Government under Prime Minister Winston Churchill took office.

Mr. Churchill announced that a bill carrying the death penalty for treachery would be hurried through its second and third readings tomorrow to hasten its enactment as a move against Fifth Column activity.

He assured James Maxton, Laborite, that if any attempt had been made to suppress criticism or opposition in the Commons, it was apparent that it already had failed.

The speaker told William Gallacher, Communist, that he would do his best to see that all sides were heard.

As further points of order were raised, the American-born Lady Astor interjected heatedly: "Does the House of Commons realize that there is a war on?"

Want Producton Speeded.

Public clamor echoed Mr. Churchill's demand of Sunday:

30.24-2409

30.24-2409

"We must have quickly more tanks, more airplanes, more shells and more guns," as reports indicated a lack of material had caused repeated withdrawals in France.

Supply Minister Morrison is to broadcast a call tomorrow, urging the nation to mobilize its industrial manpower and drop internal quarrels to speed supply output.

Britons found some cheer in the Germans' wastage of airplanes and trained crews in a ratio which Mr. Churchill placed at three or four to one, but it was recognized that this was not decisive.

The effect on morale of German tank assaults is lessening, an army spokesman said, with the realization in the ranks that the Nazi armored strength is being destroyed.

Lord Beaverbrook's newspaper said that British sea power, without air parity, could not resist an invasion of the British Isles with absolute certainty.

Recalls Norway.

It compared Britain's situation with that of Norway, should the Germans reach the Channel, and painted this picture:

"If Hitler conquers the French coast, his planes could escort troopships and drop a curtain of bombs to screen a point of landing.

"Land batteries could cover the channel. A sea passage for transports might be mined on both sides. . . .

"Hitler landed troops in Norway's western ports by decoy which deceived the British Navy.

"The lesson of Norway is this: Invasion of Britain is perfectly feasible. But it cannot be successful if we are prepared."

Col. J. J. Llewellin, Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Aircraft Production, said that production of war planes had been hampered, but not seriously, by calling to the colors of skilled workmen.

He said that steps to protect this vital industry against the inroads of conscription were considered.

Food Price Controls.

A Food Ministry spokesman told the House that price controls and greater imports of food were being arranged.

Hugh Dalton, Minister of Economic Warfare, said that there had been a sharp decline in copper imports through Vladivostok, the Russian Pacific port.

He said that the Government was considering means of stopping traffic in other war materials.

The Air Ministry told of successful attacks by British bombers against oil refineries in northwestern Germany and of a steady pounding of lines of communications of the Germans' mechanized offensive.

A communique said that British fighter plane pilots displayed "matchless" courage in battles with numerically superior German air forces and caused heavy losses among the German bombers.

The Ministry of Home Security disclosed that the production of a new filter for civilian gas masks, increasing their efficiency against smoke and gases, has been going on for some time. Supplies are being sent first to the more vulnerable areas.

Britain Musters Defense To Meet German Threat

London, May 21 (AP)—Great Britain mustered her defense power tonight to save the heart of the empire from a threatened German thrust across the English Channel, narrowed now by the roar of guns and bombers on the eastern shore.

German claims of an advance to the Channel and isolation of the British and Belgian armies on the Continent were said by an authoritative London source to be "grossly exaggerated," and a British spokesman described the battle there as "confused."

Menace "Feasible"

However, the menace of a Blitzkrieg across the Channel—described by Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express as "perfectly feasible"—brought these developments:

1. Prime Minister Churchill asked the House of Commons to hurry through to passage a bill providing equipment for the local defense force. A quarter of a million men already have volunteered for a minute-man army to combat invaders.
2. The Air Ministry called for men 35 to 45 years of age to man balloon barrages protecting vital areas from dive bombing.
3. The Government announced hastening of enactment of the death penalty for the treachery bill to combat "fifth column" activities.

Churchill Sees King

Churchill, after the first session of the House of Commons attended with his new ministers, was received in audience at Buckingham Palace by King George.

The navy, on which the first shock of any lightning attack would fall, disclosed the loss of the 9,550-ton cruiser Effingham and the minelayer Princess Victoria with thirty-four men and officers feared lost. The Effingham, first cruiser officially listed by the British as lost, went down after striking a rock off Norway.

To add to the picture, an authorized spokesman said four British merchant ships totaling 8,955 tons, one Allied vessel of 316 tons and three neutral ships totaling 5,737 tons had been sunk "by enemy action" in the week ended May 12.

Bomber Raids Coast

A German bomber skirted the southeast coast of England tonight and dropped several bombs a short distance offshore, apparently in an effort to hit anchored shipping.

The raid was one of a series of feints against the British coast line. None of the bombs found a target.

Admiralty Also Announces Loss of a Minelayer With 33 Believed Dead.

BERLIN, May 21 (A. P.).—A battleship, probably of the 29,150-ton Resolution class, was hit heavily twice near the forward turrets and a heavy cruiser also hit wtih bombs yesterday off Narvik, Norway, the High Command said today in a special communique.

[The class, which the British call the Royal Sovereign class, was composed of five dreadnaughts, each of 29,150 tons with normal complements of about 1,100 officers and men.

One, the Royal Oak, was torpedoed and sunk in Scapa Flow on October 14, the only battleship the British have acknowledged losing. The others are the Resolution, Royal Sovereign, Ramilles and Revenge.

All are world war veterans.]

Cruiser Founders.

LONDON, May 21 (A. P.).—The 9,550-ton British cruiser Effingham has been lost after striking a rock off the Norwegian coast, the Admiralty announced today. She became a total loss, but all aboard were saved.

The Effingham's normal complement was 749 officers and men.

The sinking by a German mine of the British mine-layer Princess Victoria with four officers and thirty-one men missing and believed lost, was also announced today by the Admiralty.

Eighty-five survivors were landed at an east coast port yesterday. Twenty-four required hospital treatment.

The Effingham is the first cruiser which Great Britain has officially listed as lost in this war.

The Rawalpindi, sunk on November 25 by the German pocket battleship Deutschland off Iceland with the loss of 280 men, was a merchant steamer converted to an armed merchant cruiser.

British Admiralty Says Capta Is Among the Missing

LONDON, May 21 (AP).—The sinking of the British minelayer Princess Victoria by a German mine was announced today by the Admiralty, which said that four officers, including the commander, and thirty-one men were missing and feared lost.

Its communique said: "The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that the minelayer H. M. S. Princess Victoria, Capt. J. B. E. Hall, R. N., has been sunk by an enemy mine.

"The commanding officer, three officers and thirty-one ratings (seamen) are missing and it is feared that they have lost their lives. The next of kin have been informed."

Eighty-five survivors were landed at an east coast port yesterday. Twenty-four required hospital treatment.

An authoritative spokesman said today that four British merchant ships totaling 8,955 tons, one Allied vessel of 316 tons and three neutral ships totaling 5,737 tons were sunk "by enemy action" in the week ended May 12.

"Some Dutch tonnage inevitably was lost as a result of the German invasion of Holland," he said, "but many Dutch vessels escaped."

The Admiralty, at the same time, issued a report that the 4,541-ton German steamship Campinas was sunk by a mine May 10. It said this brought the total known German mercantile losses to approximately 630,000 tons.

An additional five German ships, totaling about 25,000 tons, were "considered sunk as a result of submarine operations," it was said.

The spokesman estimated that the total sinkings of enemy ships, whose names and exact tonnages have not been ascertained, amounted to 190,000 tons, and the total German losses at 820,000 tons—approximately 20 per cent of Germany's pre-war tonnage.

Since the war started up to May 14, the spokesman said, 267 officers and men from Nazi U-boats have been captured.

The spokesman said German mines reported by the South African Government last week off the Cape "might have been laid" by a German surface raider, submarine or merchant ship which escaped from port.

Britain Lists Holland, Luxemburg, Parts of Norway and Belgium

LONDON, May 21 (AP).—A Foreign Office announcement in "The London Gazette" said today that parts of Norway, the Netherlands, Luxemburg and parts of Belgium must be considered areas in occupation by Germany.

All Norway except the northern Provinces of Nordland, Troms, Finmark and Svalbard was included in the German-occupied area. The announcement did not apply to overseas dependencies of the Netherlands.

VICTORY PREDICTED BY DUFF COOPER

Briton Sees No Cause for Great Alarm.

LONDON, May 21 (A. P. via Radio).—Alfred Duff Cooper, the British Minister of Information, told his countrymen tonight that while the present war news was "grave" there was "no cause for great alarm."

Acknowledging German successes, he declared nevertheless "the army of Great Britain, and the still greater army of France, are still there."

He said three facts could be "definitely stated" and that one of them was that "the armies of Great Britain and France are undefeated."

"As I told you last week the end of this battle, whatever it may be, cannot entail the defeat of Britain and France. . . .

"Meanwhile, it is up to each one of us to bear our part. . . . We must acquit ourselves."

He warned again against "rumors," denouncing one which he said was current to the effect that the French Prime Minister had expressed fear of defeat. On the contrary, said Mr. Duff Cooper, the French were "superbly confident."

". . . These grave events will act, as they have already acted, as a tonic to the nation."

He added that the House of Commons was now "united as perhaps it never has been."

His voice was low and grave and weary, reflecting the gravity or perhaps the darkest hour yet to face the Allies.

". . . We are all one, and all engaged in a great battle. We here behind the lines must bear our part. . . . Let them know that behind their steady lines . . . is a calm, a faithful and a united people," he concluded.

London, May 21 — Alfred Duff Cooper, the British Minister of Information, acknowledged tonight the "grave" news of German successes, but told the people:

"The army of Great Britain and the far greater army of France are still there!"

He added that the Allies "are undefeated."

"Three facts alone can be definitely stated," he said in a broadcast to the country.

Channel Is Objective

"First, that the present objective of the enemy is the channel ports from which they hope to laupch war upon this island.

"Second, that small parts of the (German) mechanized troops have succeeded in eluding their opponents, in advancing great distances, and coming near to their objective.

"Third, that the armies of France and Great Britain are undefeated.

"In enormously superior numbers they (the Allies) occupy the battlefield, and the counter-attack, when it comes, should prove formidable. The swaying fortunes of the fight matter little; it is the end of the battle that counts, and . . . the end of this battle, whatever it may be, cannot entail the defeat of Great Britain or France in the war."

His voice low and weary. At this dark hour for the Allies he insisted there was "no cause for serious alarm, still less for panic," despite the fact that it was "no good pretending" that the news was not bad.

"In employment of a new technique," he went on, "small bodies of the German army have succeeded in penetrating to great distances, but they are small bodies only, and the successes that they have achieved involves them in fearful danger."

Warns Of Rumors

He went on then to warn the British against "the danger of rumors," declaring:

"I experienced such a good example of it myself this afternoon. I was told by a perfectly reliable and truthful reporter that the Prime Minister of France had said that nothing but a miracle could save his country.

"I could hardly believe that so brave a fighter as Monsieur Paul Reynaud had said anything of the sort, and indeed, when I came to read the full account of what he had said, I found that he had said something quite different.

Message Of Confidence

"His message was one of superb confidence. He firmly announced his faith that nothing could defeat the united forces of his country and the British Empire. . . ."

He spoke then of the unity of the country and of the House of Commons—"united as perhaps it never has been"—and called upon the people to stand firm, saying:

"The battle is being fought so close to our shores that each and every one of us is taking part in it; therefore, we are all soldiers and as such we must acquit ourselves."

Then he closed with this last appeal:

"We here behind the lines must play our part as worthily as those who are keeping watch tonight in the front lines, or those who may spring to the attack at dawn tomorrow."

"Let them feel, let them know, that behind their steady lines and stalwart hearts there exists the vast reserve of a calm, a faithful and a united people."

ORE SHIPMENTS GIVE SWEDEN NEW PROBLEM

Thaw Clears Lulea Route But Port Is Not Equal To Narvik

Improvement By Germany Would Involve Violating Neutrality

Stockholm, May 21 (AP)—German planes late today crossed the border into Sweden along the iron-ore railway from Narvik, Norway, returning to Norway after the Swedish neutrality guard had fired warning shots.

Other planes were seen in other parts of Sweden during the day.

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, May 21—The melting ice barrier far north in the Gulf of Bothnia clearing the short route from the Swedish iron ore fields to Germany posed a new problem tonight for neutral Swedish.

Germany, whose war machine needs iron, has been awaiting the thaw. With the ice gone, ore can be shipped directly down the gulf between Sweden and Finland from the key port of Lulea, seventy miles south of the Arctic Circle.

Cannot Load As Readily

That ore would help supplant the supply which the British cut off at Narvik, on the Norwegian coast. However, because of less adequate port facilities, ore cannot be loaded at Lulea as readily as at Narvik.

There have been insistent rumors of German demands for access to the port to improve loading facilities with German engineers and German equipment.

Taking the port over by Germans for improvement would be a violation of Sweden's neutrality.

Deny Plan Was Discussed

Authoritative sources have denied emphatically that such improvement even has been discussed. A report that Germany had asked permission to transport troops to the Narvik area from Lulea, also was denied.

In 1936, Lulea shipped 2,700,000 tons of ore. It has been estimated that shipments from Lulea and the nearby ports of Gavle and Oxelosund could be boosted to a top total of 8,000,000 tons.

YUGOSLAV-ALBANIA FRONTIER CLOSED

Italians Order It Shut—Ciano Is on Way.

SKOPLJE, Yugoslavia, May 21 (A. P.).—The frontier between Yugoslavia and Italian-held Albania was closed late today by Italian order. Reports filtering across the frontier to Yugoslav military quarters here said that the Italian Army had speeded up transport of large quantities of war materials across the Adriatic to the Albanian port of Durazzo.

News of the border closing was received here shortly after the announcement in Rome that Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano was leaving for Tirana, capital of Albania.

Although it is reported that only 70,000 Italian troops are now in Albania, it is said that barracks, storehouses and arsenals are being built on twenty-four-hour shifts, leading to the belief in Yugoslav military circles that a large number of troops soon will be sent there.

Albania would be a likely starting place in the event of an Italian push toward Salonika, which, military experts say, also would be the goal of Allied air, sea and land forces in the case of war in the Mediterranean area.

Italy Reported Rushing Arms To Yugoslav Border In Albania

Fears Of Strife In Balkans Growing As Frontier Is Closed On Orders From Rome

[By the Associated Press]

Skolpje, Yugoslavia, May 21—Fresh fears that Italy might be girding to strike into the Balkans were stirred tonight by reports filtering across the suddenly closed Yugoslav - Albanian frontier that munitions were being rushed to Albania.

The frontier was closed by Italian order shortly after announcement in Rome that Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano was leaving for Tirana, capital of Italian-held Albania.

Yugoslav military staffs along the frontier heard that barracks, storehouses and arsenals were being built on twenty-four-hour shifts in Albania, where Italy is reported to have only 70,000 troops, and that vast shipments of war materials were being speeded across the Adriatic from Italy.

It was said, too, that Italians were circulating propaganda maps to excite Albanian ambitions. The maps were described as depicting a "greater Albania," which would embrace parts of southern Serbia.

In some Yugoslav quarters it was suggested Italy might be preparing to guard her "backdoor" in Albania against an Allied counter-blow, while she enters the war with a main attack upon France.

Italy's purpose in Albania, above all, would be to prevent the Allies from debarking troops at Saloniki, Greece, for a counter-blow.

This view seemed supported by reports from Fiume, near the northern Yugoslav frontier, that big Italian troop concentrations there were being reduced and apparently moved in the direction of the Greek border.

afterward naturally would be discussed at least in general terms.

The country's newspapers reported the country merely was awaiting il Duce's orders to go into action as blackouts and air raid drills in Rome, the munitions center of Terni, forty-five miles northeast, and the northern cities of Milan, Turin and Genoa made it appear the country was preparing to enter the war.

Blue Lights In Streets

Blue lights on Rome's street lights reappeared as if by magic tonight, for the first time since last Septemb when they were removed as a sign Italy's non-belligerency.

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Count Ciano's newspaper Il Telegrafo, wrote that it is obvious that "the hour is near in which our influence on the course of events must become more active."

When Italy does move, he said, one of her objectives will be "territorial increases."

Complementary To What She Has

He said these increases would be complementary to Italy's natural territory or her colonial empire.

Although Britain and France undoubtedly would react differently to Italian aspirations than they did eight months ago, Ansaldo declared it is "too late."

He emphasized that the choice of the actual moment for Italy to move is up to il Duce.

British Push Trade Talks

The British, nevertheless, pressed efforts to reach a trade arrangement with the Italians.

J. W. Nicholls and Sir Wilfred Green, representatives of the British Ministry of Economic Warfare, were due to arrive for an attempt to appease Italian objections to Britain's contraband control without giving Germany an advantage. The principal difficulty in the trade negotiations has been Britain's determination not to allow Italy to build up raw material stocks which might be useful in war.

Count Ciano Leaves

Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano entrained for Brindisi tonight to go to Albania for an inspection of public works. Before leaving, he entertained the Japanese trade delegation at Villa Madama, Italy's guest house for important visitors of state.

More than the usual importance was attached to Ciano's Albanian trip in view of the unsettled situation in the Balkans, especially in Yugoslavia where Italy is reported to have closed the Albanian-Yugoslav frontier.

The Japanese trade negotiators arrived last night and a Fascist welcome arranged in their honor developed into one of the most vociferous anti-Allied demonstrations yet staged in Rome.

Solid ranks of troops and carabinieri were thrown around the British and French embassies and the British consulate and were kept on duty all night to prevent the demonstrators from reaching the buildings.

Reich Colonial Expert Confers With Mussolini

Rome, May 21 (AP)—Premier Mussolini and Germany's colonial expert, Gen. Ritter von Epp, held a long talk today, presumably on the outlook for colonial expansion of both Italy and Germany, while Italians awaited a call to arms.

Nothing was disclosed as to the conversation, but foreign circles said the outlook for expansion in the war or

Greek Dictator Holds Parley With Generals

Athens, May 21 (AP)—Dictator George Metaxas conferred tonight with his council of generals, then went to see the King.

It was assumed that Greek defense measures were discussed in the light of the present Mediterranean situation. However, no communique was issued.

The Greek-Albanian frontier remained open. Officials said they had no reason to believe attack from Italian-"protected" Albania was imminent, but that the Greek public, strongly pro-Ally, was dismayed by the news from the Western front. Considerable tension was evident.

AIR RAID DRILLS AND BLACKOUTS ORDERED IN ITALY

Rome Hears Nation Awaits Mussolini's Word on Entering War.

ROME, May 21 (A. P.).—Italy, Germany's non-belligerent ally, appeared today to be preparing to enter the war as she ordered blackouts and air raid drills in her chief industrial areas for a three-day test beginning tonight.

Speeches at Milan and Cremona, in which the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, said that Italy awaits only "the order of the day" from Premier Mussolini, "when he will have decided upon it," increased the feeling among Italians that they may be shortly called to fight on one of their frontiers. Many simply wondered whether the call would come within a week, a fortnight or later still.

Diplomatic observers attached significance to an article by Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Count Ciano's Leghorn newspaper Il Telegrafo, asserting: "The hour is near when our influence on the course of events must be more active."

When Italy does move, he added, one of its objectives will be "territorial increases."

He declared that, although Britain and France would undoubtedly react differently now to Italian claims than they did eighteen months ago, it would be "too late."

English Mission Due Tonight.

Meanwhile today Premier Mussolini had a long talk with the German Colonial chief, Gen. Ritter van Epp.

On the other hand, the British pressed their efforts to arrive at a trade arrangement with the Italians which would lessen their objections to contraband control. Two representatives of the British Ministry of Economic Warfare, J. W. Nicholls and Sir Wilfred Green, were expected in Rome tonight to try to iron out difficulties, particularly the question of permitting Italy to import raw materials to build up her war stocks.

The British were believed to be seeking satisfactory assurances that the supplies admitted to Italy will not reach Germany.

Telephone connections between Rome and London remained suspended.

The possibility of Italy's entering the conflict in the immediate future was indicated further by the air raid drills, which were the first ordered since the opening days of the war last September.

Anti-aircraft Guns on Roofs.

The drills were ordered for Rome province; Terni, forty-five miles northeast, where great arms and munitions factories are operating at top speed, and Milan, Turin and Genoa. They were to test anti-aircraft guns and to give Italians another taste of what to expect when the nation goes after its so-called "aspirations."

Fascists were ready to patrol the streets and to see that pedestrians take shelter when the sirens screech their warnings of pretended raids.

Anti-aircraft batteries were uncovered on the roofs to "fire" at sky invaders who might be expected to swoop in mock raids at any time during the next three days.

Anti-allied Rallies Continue.

Along with these preparations for war, there were continued demonstrations against Britain and France which brought out troops and carabinieri. A shouting group of young Italians marched toward the British consulate but were held back by helmeted soldiers who appeared suddenly on the scene.

For a time early today solid ranks of troops and carabinieri were still massed on the streets around the French and British embassies and the British consulate.

The demonstration began as a friendly welcome to a Japanese delegation arriving here on a combined good will and trade agreement mission. A group of about 1,000 youths, waving Japanese and Italian flags, suddenly changed the character of their demonstration by shouting "Down with France!" The crowd then headed for the embassies and the consulate.

Il Duce Gets Report on Troops.

With Italians feeling that they were about to be called into war, the questions of when and how remained.

Premier Mussolini had reports from Marshal Pietro Badoglio on troops posted along the frontier. Earlier Il Duce received a report on the Littorio Line of fortifications in the north, which he had ordered further strengthened.

Whether an Italian move might come on the French frontier or on the eastern borders facing the Balkans, should Italy join Germany, was a secret. Nothing developed to indicate whether general mobilization was imminent, but military experts said that the closing of schools on May 31, two weeks earlier than usual, would make the school buildings available for use as barracks.

Russia Refuses To Cut Commerce With Reich For Pact With Britain

Moscow, May 21 (AP)—Tass, the Soviet news agency, said tonight that Premier Molotoff has informed Great Britain that Russia "cannot subordinate the trade policy of the U. S. S. R. to the war aims of any foreign state" in connection with newly reopened British-Russian trade negotiations.

"Being a sovereign state, the Soviet Union will carry on its foreign trade both with belligerents and neutrals on the basis of principles of complete equality of parties and reciprocity of obligations," Molotoff said.

Britain has sought to limit Russian trade with Germany in seeking a trade agreement with Moscow. In this connection Molotoff stated:

"The Soviet Government notes that the very fact that the British Government has raised for discussion questions coming solely under the competence of the Soviet Government does not testify to the desire of the British Government to conduct trade negotiations with the U. S. S. R."

SWEDEN PROTESTS SHARPLY TO NAZIS

Say German Plane Fired on Crowd at Station.

STOCKHOLM, May 21 (A. P.).—The Swedish Foreign Office said today that a sharp protest was being made at Berlin against the machine-gunning of a railroad station at Vassijaure, across the Swedish frontier east of Narvik, Norway. Stockholm newspapers said a German seaplane flew over the frontier yesterday, firing into a crowd of fifty persons waiting for a train. One was killed.

A shortage of ammunition in the German garrison at Narvik, the Norwegian port, which is besieged by strong Allied and Norwegian forces, is reaching a critical stage and occupation of the city by the attackers is imminent, reports from the Swedish frontier said.

These reports indicated that the Germans might resist to the last man rather than surrender or retreat into Sweden.

An official Norwegian communique, broadcast by the British radio today and picked up by the Columbia Broadcasting System, said: "German troops have taken up new fortified positions on a pleteau north of Narvik, . . . and have ceased fighting in the area between Narvik and Trondheim."

MOSCOW SAYS TIME FAVORS THE ALLIES

Sudden Change of Emphasis Noted in Russia.

MOSCOW, May 21 (A. P.).—If the European war is of long duration, the time factor favors the Allies because of their huge resources, raw materials and also the economic backing of the United States, Trud, the organ of the Russian trade unions, declared today.

"The productive capacity of the American steel industry," it said, "is twice as much as Germany's.

. . . A war of exhaustion, prolonged for years, would serve in the Allies' favor."

Hitherto the Soviet press has recorded the progress of the war as favorable to Germany.

The Soviet Union, since the signing of the Russo-German non-aggression and trade agreements last summer, has been cited both in Berlin and Moscow as a Nazi source of supply.

'CHUTE TROOPS TOUGHENED UP

Look Like Football Squad in Preliminary Stage.

GYMNASIUM WORK STRESSED

Out-of-doors Training Comes Last, Nazi Film Shows.

BERLIN, May 21 (A. P.).—German parachute troops undergoing their initial training look like American football players engaged in toughening up exercises.

How they are groomed for their work was disclosed in a motion picture film on parachute jumping shown to the foreign press and soon to be released to theaters.

Besides the training of men, the picture showed cases of rifles and light machine guns landed separately in attacks. As soon as the parachute troopers hit the ground they rip off their parachutes and rush to these weapons. They also carry light arms.

Beginning their careers, the troopers first receive thorough infantry training. Then they are introduced to the art of parachute jumping indoors.

They tumble and perform somersaults on heavy mats. They are dragged along the ground and then struggle to their feet against a tugging parachute.

Then, suspended from cords just a few feet above the ground, they experience the sensation of swinging through the air and learn how to land properly and manage in capricious winds.

The technic of jumping at intervals from an airplane so that they will not become entangled is practiced by diving from the doorway of a transport on the ground into a sandpit.

Then the troopers in this new type of war are ready for the real thing.

The film emphasized the care with which each parachute must be packed to guard against the chance that it may not open.

Each series of parachutes manufactured is first tested by being dropped with a heavy, sand-filled dummy.

ITALIAN CASUALTIES

Two of Freighter's Crew Killed at Antwerp.

CORK, Ireland, May 21 (A. P.).—The Italian freighter Fidelitas, arriving in Cork harbor today, reported that two members of her crew were killed and three wounded in a bombing and machine gun attack at Antwerp.

The Fidelitas left Boston for Antwerp with a load of grain on April 17, and was in Antwerp at the start of the German invasion of the Low Countries.

NEWSPAPER MEN OUT OF BELGIUM

Americans Sent to London Apparently for Safety.

LONDON, May 21 (A. P.).—American correspondents who had been with the British Army in Belgium returned today to London. Among them were Drew Middleton of the Associated Press and Arthur Mann of the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Messages reaching New York said it was believed that all correspondents with the British troops on the continent had been ordered back to London.

This was interpreted as an indication that the situation of the British Army of 300,000 men in Belgium had become extremely precarious as a result of the German Army's great mechanized thrust toward the English Channel.

If that drive reaches the coast, said Berlin dispatches, the British Army will be cut off from its French Allies and penned between the coast and greatly superior numbers of Germans.

In addition the committee requested governments of rubber-producing areas to issue as soon as possible export permits for the whole period covered by the announcement.

LONDON EXPLAINS TELEPHONE DELAY

Says Wires to Continent Are in Government Use.

LONDON, May 21 (A. P.).—The interruption of telephone communications between England and the Continent was reported today to be the result of heavy requirements for Government and military purposes.

Service was broken off at 7 o'clock last night (2 P. M., New York time).

A telephone official said that contact between the British and French governments was unbroken but that there were long delays on ordinary lines, the result of "a main cable failure."

The Western Union Telegraph Company which has a direct cable between London and Paris said there had been no interruption there or on the New York to Paris cable, and the American Telephone & Telegraph Company said that its radio telephone service with London and Paris had not been affected. RCA Communications and Commercial Cables reported no disruptions.

Western Union and RCA said that communications with Holland and Belgium were still suspended but the A. T. & T. was able to reach a few Belgian points by radio telephone and Commercial Cables said messages for Belgium were being accepted, subject to delay.

Their identities were not immediately made public. The corps said they either were killed or captured.

Lawrence A. Jump, of Nantucket, Mass., was reported missing May 16 after his ambulance had been shelled near Sarreguemines.

The latest group was lost in northern France. Two ambulances are a total loss and others have been battered by shellfire.

Civilians Flee Paris in Packed Trains and Cars

Champs Elysees Deserted as People Hear Nazi Gains, but Cafes Keep Up Gayety

By The Associated Press

PARIS, May 21.—Many civilians left the French capital tonight by train and automobile as the official announcement of the German capture of Amiens and Arras, and Nazi penetration to Abbeville, became generally known.

The gates to the south and west of Paris (here two words were censored) with slowly moving lines of automobiles.

The Lyons, Austerlitz and Montparnasse stations, feeding the southern and western sections of France, were packed with refugees waiting for trains.

Each train carried more than (here four words censored) normal number of passengers, with people standing in the aisles and half-grown children sitting on their mothers' laps.

Paris itself was a strange, mixed picture of emptiness and normal gaiety. Sections such as the great Champs Elysees, running from the Place de la Concorde in the heart of the city, were almost deserted.

Along the boulevards, however, sidewalk cafes were full of people sipping coffee or champagne in the shadowy light of blacked-out windows. Orchestras played gay music in the brightly lighted interiors.

It was almost impossible to find taxis. Bus service was suspended several days ago. (Thirty-seven words censored.) Subway trains were almost the only means of transportation. (Four lines censored.)

At the Austerlitz station policemen in steel helmets were pushing hand trucks piled with refugee luggage.

Red Cross nurses and doctors were in attendance on every train, helping mothers care for their children. Many of the children had been standing in the trains since nightfall and were faced with an all-night ride to the south of France.

British Print Nazi Claims

But Press Says London "Treats Them With Reserve"

LONDON, May 21 (AP).—Today's final editions of London newspapers told readers of German reports of advances toward the English Channel. Smaller headlines added, "But London treats claims with reserve."

New York, May 21—(AP)—Several thousand members of the Communist party and their sympathizers marched into the Times Square area in a "peace demonstration" tonight and clashed with police who were hurriedly called to maintain order.

Police put the number of demonstrators at 4,500. Marching two abreast, they blocked pedestrian traffic on Broadway between Forty-second and and Forty-seventh streets and caused a partial tie-up of crosstown automobile traffic.

They carried placards bearing such words as "Roosevelt, Dewey and Hoover are united for war," and shouted "no, sir, the Yanks are not coming," "let God save the king," "we want peace" and "keep America out of war."

Department Silent

Washington, May 21 (AP)—The Navy Department declined to comment today on reports that a second United States squadron was due to arrive at Lisbon soon. The department explained that all news of the movements of naval vessels had been restricted rigidly since the start of the war last September and the inauguration of a neutrality patrol.

MAY 22 1940

Ottawa, May 21—Canada's war effort is to be speeded up by a series of new Government decisions which include appointment of two additional cabinet ministers and enlistment of a third army division.

Acceleration of the national war program was announced in the House of Commons last night by Prime Minister W. L. McKenzie King. Other steps which he said were "being translated into action" included:

Advancement of the date for the Canadian Second Division to sail abroad and further reinforcements of the First Division.

Early enlistment of Second Division reinforcements.

Assignment of certain naval and military forces to service in the Caribbean and North Atlantic areas.

Adoption of "every feasible method" of accelerating the output of pilots and air crews from Canada.

Conferring of special powers on the Ministry of Munitions and Supply, "which would not be accorded in normal times," so that it can expedite the provision of war equipment and materials.

Calls On Britons To Work Week Ends

London, May 21 (AP) — Lord Beaverbrook, newly appointed Minister of Aircraft Production, appealed today to all employes of airplane factories to work full speed throughout the next two week ends. "They are asked to work by night and by day, full overtime for the present," his appeal said.

BULLETINS

Bombs Wound Duke of Gloucester.

LONDON, May 21 (A. P.).—The Duke of Gloucester, brother of King George VI, was disclosed tonight to be suffering from cuts caused by bomb explosions on the Franco-Belgian front. Both hands also are badly bruised. For three successive nights the Duke, who holds the rank of Major-General, was in areas which were heavily bombed. Last September he was appointed chief liaison officer to the British field forces in France.

English Sight a German Plane.

LONDON, May 21 (A. P.).—A German plane was reported tonight off the English southeast coast. Anti-aircraft guns immediately went into action. During the afternoon intense anti-aircraft fire was heard twice off the same coast. The crash of guns mingled with the drone of airplane engines high overhead.

Air Raid Alarm in Paris.

PARIS, May 21 (A. P.).—An air raid alarm was sounded in Paris at 6:10 P. M. today (1:10 P. M., New York time). The end of the alarm was sounded thirty-five minutes later.

Artillery Believed Heard in England.

LONDON, May 21 (A. P.).—Heavy rumbling like distant thunder was heard tonight in the east coast towns of Great Yarmouth and Gorleston and residents thought that it was gunfire on the Continent. Doors were shaken and crockery rattled. Dwellers there often heard artillery fire in the first world war.

French Said to Have Annihilated a Column.

A French language announcement by the British Broadcasting Company said today that French artillery had annihilated an entire German motorized column north of Laon. The announcer, heard in New York by the National Broadcasting Company, said that it was reported that new Allied re-enforcements had arrived in the vicinity of Cambrai and were checking the German drive westward.

Turkish Military Mission Goes to See Allies.

ANKARA, Turkey, May 21 (A. P.).—A second Turkish military mission was reported today to be leaving shortly for Syria to confer with the Allied staff. One delegation already is in Beirut. The Government, meanwhile, asked the National Assembly to vote a new extraordinary credit of 25 million pounds sterling (about $75,000,000) for defense, be added to 47 million pounds previously authorized.

LORD SIMON SWORN IN

MAY 22 1940

The former Sir John Simon, he relinquished the post of Chancellor of the Exchequer and his seat in the House of Commons to assume his new office, which necessitated his elevation to the peerage. He has taken the title of Viscount Simon of Stackpole Elidor in the county of Pembroke.

The Lord Chancellor is the presiding officer of the House of Lords as well as a Cabinet Minister.

France and Germany Exchange Civilians

BERNE, Switzerland, May 21 (A. P.).—France and Germany carried out their second exchange of civilian prisoners through the Swiss Red Cross today, ninety-two French Nationals entering France by way of Geneva, and sixty-five Germans returning home by way of Schaffhausen.

Those involved were all women, children or invalided men, except for seven French Dominican friars from Warsaw.

ABBEVILLE MISSED BY KAISER'S ARMY

German Forces Never Got So Far West in Last War.

MAY 22 1940

By Associated Press.

The German High Command, in reporting that Hitler's legions had taken the cities of Abbeville, Amiens and Arras, in north France, claimed a further western advance in twelve days of war than the Imperial German Army gained at any time in four years of the world war.

Abbeville, used as a British base throughout most of the world war, lies ten miles west of the farthest advance of the Kaiser Wilhelm's forces. The city is twelve miles from the mouth of the Somme, which flows into an inlet of the English Channel.

Abbeville is sixty miles south of Calais, where the distance to England is shortest—twenty miles across the Straits of Dover.

Amiens, the chief city of Picardy and site of a famous Cathedral of Notre Dame, is eighty-one miles north of Paris and twenty-five miles southeast of Abbeville.

The Germans entered Amiens on August 24, 1914, but abandoned the city a week later. In 1918 it was defended successfully against German attacks. It was the scene of a German victory over the French in 1870.

Arras, 120 miles north of Paris and thirty-five miles northeast of Amiens, was the scene of five major battles in the world war. This ancient city became so famous for its tapestries that it's name was given to tapestry hangings.

NAZIS' PRISONERS OVERWORK ENVOY

MAY 22 1940

U. S. Embassy Supervises Treatment of Allies.

WASHINGTON, May 21 (A. P.).—With thousands of British, French and Belgian prisoners of war being transported into Germany Alexander C. Kirk, Charge d'Affaires of the American embassy in Berlin, has appealed to the State Department for help in supervising their treatment.

Mr. Kirk, a career diplomat, has formed a special organization in the embassy to handle such supervision at the request of the Allies. It consists of an American army officer who went recently to Berlin, an American public health officer attached to the embassy, and two foreign service officers.

This organization is proving insufficient, so Dr. Kirk has asked for aid. Berlin dispatches claimed the capture of 100,000 Allied soldiers during the week end.

In supervising the treatment of prisoners the United States is acting under a 1929 agreement signed at Geneva by all the leading nations, including Germany and the Allies.

It guarantees that prisoners shall not be mistreated or forced to give information, must be permitted to write letters home, cannot be compelled to work on military objectives and must be paid like civilian employees on civilian work.

Officials believe that prisoners of war are receiving better treatment in Germany than they got in the world war. In that conflict, it is said, Germany was prepared in every other respect, but had forgotten that prisoners would be taken.

Say Giraud Walked Into Trap

Nazis Assert French General Arrived at New Command to Find Germans in Charge

MAY 22 1940

BERLIN, May 21 (A. P.).—The Berlin wireless broadcast a description today of the capture by the Germans of "Gen. Giraud," whom it identified as the newly transferred commander of a French army.

The German High Command said that the General commanding the Seventh French Army had been taken in action in which the Ninth French Army had been crushed.

"His predecessor had been discharged by order of the High Command of Allied troops and had already left his army," the wireless account said.

"Shortly afterward the staff headquarters was overrun by German troops and the whole staff was captured.

"The new army leader, Gen. Giraud, entered the staff headquarters unaware of what had happened, to take over command. He was received by German troops and taken prisoner."

Captured in 1914.

If the Nazi troops have actually succeeded in capturing Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, the general commanding the group of Allied armies in northern France, the French Army has lost one of its greatest tacticians and strategists and the Germans have carried off what is considered a rare feat in any war—the capture of the chief commander of an entire army.

For Gen. Giraud it would be a particularly bitter and ironic twist of fate, for it would mark the second time he had been a prisoner of the invading Germans.

As a young officer at the outbreak of the world was Gen. Giraud was wounded at the battle of Guise, in the area where the fighting is going on today, and was captured by the Kaiser's soldiers. He escaped on his second attempt, made his way through the Low Countries and thence to England and was able to rejoin the French forces in 1915 and to fight throughout the remainder of the war.

Born in Paris.

Gen. Giraud was born in Paris on January 18, 1879, and entered St. Cyr at the age of 19 years. On his graduation he joined the Fourth Regiment of Zouaves. He served for years with the regiment.

When the Armistice ended the world war he was Chief-of-Staff of a Moroccan division. Later he fought in the Moroccan campaign in North Africa and, as a colonel, directed the campaign against the rebellious Riffs in 1925. During one of the most important engagements of that war he led a small force against a large army of Riffs. He was shot twice in the legs, but his aids held him on his horse and he won the battle and saved the strategic city of Taza.

Captured Abd-el-Krim.

A short time later he captured the crafty Riffian leader, Abd-el-Krim, and crushed the rebellion. He received high praise from Marshal Lyautey, France's famous Colonial builder.

He was called back home in 1936 and appointed military governor of Metz and commander of the army corps there. When Hitler's troops moved into Belgium and Holland, he was named commander of the hard-fighting armies facing the Germans in northern France. He has received thirteen citations for heroism and is an officer of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, France's highest decoration.

GIRAUD ARMY MAY BE 112,500 STRONG

But Washington Says Size Varies Frequently.

MAY 22 1940

WASHINGTON, May 21 (A. P.).—Germany's claim to have crushed the Ninth French Army would mean, if true, that possibly 112,500 men were involved.

Experts here said that the size of an army engaged in battle probably would vary greatly from day to day, as tactical situations demanded.

They estimated, however, that an infantry division in any one of the belligerent armies normally would average 12,500 men; a corps would equal three divisions; and an army, three corps—a total of 112,500 men to an army, with each unit subject to frequent alteration in size.

In a different category are the swift, compact German armored divisions, which are believed here to consist of about 9,000 men, each manning 500 to 600 armored vehicles of perhaps seven different sizes.

The six armored divisions reported spearheading the German thrust to the English Channel thus would number about 60,000 including headquarters and supply units. That figure coincides with published information from Paris.

SAYS AMERICANS LAG IN WAR AREA

Hull Urges Citizens to Go to Eire or Bordeaux.

MAY 22 1940

WASHINGTON, May 21 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull reported today that despite repeated official warnings Americans in Europe have been slow to flee the dangers of war.

The State Department's latest efforts were devoted toward getting Americans in England to go to Ireland and those in western Europe to go to Bordeaux, France, or to Spanish or Portuguese ports.

None has gone to Ireland, Mr. Hull said, and only seventy-five have reached Bordeaux, so far as he has heard. This, he indicated, lessened the likelihood of sending a special refugee ship to Bordeaux and made it possible that the Americans there would be transported to some Mediterranean city at which an American vessel could be made more easily available.

The tide of war which swirled over Belgium and the Netherlands, Mr. Hull also reported, has cut the department off from the embassy in Brussels since May 16 and the legation at The Hague since May 15.

Through the embassy in Berlin has come word that the American foreign service officers stationed in Luxemburg are all safe.

Roosevelt Says Nazi Planes Take Terrible Refugee Toll

Tells Press Conference He Is Opposed to Weakening Our Social Gains in Rearmament Effort.

MAY 22 1940

WASHINGTON, May 21 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt declared today that enemy planes were sweeping down the roads of France with machine guns wide open, taking a death toll of refugees the like of which never has been seen before.

He said he though the United States would realize the implications of the method of warfare.

His remarks were part of a general discussion of the defense program at a press conference at which he laid down three points of policy:

1. He does not want to see a single war millionaire created in the United States as a result of what he termed the war disaster abroad.

2. He does not think labor will or should seek to take advantage of the current emergency situation, where it would hold a tactical advantage through the power to strike, to seek higher wages or privileges withheld from labor without such power.

3. The Government proposes in no way to weaken social gains made in the last few years.

This, the President termed very, very important.

Texts of the Day's War Communiques

BERLIN, May 21 (AP)—The High Command issued the following communiqué today:

The biggest attacking operation of all time in the West now, after a number of great individual tactical successes, is yielding the first operative effects.

The Ninth French Army, which was on the Meuse [River] between Namur and Sedan to hold and maintain connection between strong enemy operation groups in Belgium and the Maginot Line south of Sedan, has been crushed and is about to be dissolved.

The army staff and General Giraud, hitherto commander of the Seventh French Army, who assumed command over the Ninth Army, have been captured

German divisions flow into the breach forced by the German thrust. German armored cars and motorized troops at their head took Arras, Amiens and Abbeville. Thus the Germans began crowding toward the Channel coast all the French and Belgian armies still to be found north of the Somme.

In Belgium our troops attacked the enemy, which again accepted the fight east of Ghent and farther south on the Scheldt River. Enemy attempts to force a way out southward from the Velenciennes region foundered.

On the southern wing of our attack, German troops, as previously reported in a special announcement, took Laon and stormed over the Chemin des Dames [highway] as far as the Aisne-Oise Canal. Here, during a defense against French counter-attacks, numerous armored cars were destroyed. The city of Rethel, which was still controlled by enemy units, was taken.

The air force shares outstandingly in the victory of the army. The air force, through complete control of the air, through destruction of river crossings and traffic connections, through attacks on marching and transport columns, speeded up dissolution of the Ninth French Army.

All attempts at endangering the flanks of our break-through were nipped in the bud.

During reconnaissance over the sea before the French coast one French destroyer, the French Navy tanker Niger of 5,482 tons, the French freighter Pavon and two additional freighters were seriously damaged.

In the course of the night of May 21 in the Dover-Calais straits six transports and one tanker, with a total tonnage of 43,000, were sunk by bombs and four additional ships of approximately 13,000 tons were severely damaged.

Total losses of the opponents in the air yesterday amounted to forty-seven planes. Fifteen German planes were missing.

A special High Command communiqué said:

Fighting units of the air force near Narvik took effective part in surface engagements and relieved our troops.

An attack against units of the British Fleet operating off Narvik was highly successful. A battleship, probably of the Resolution class, received two heavy bomb hits near its forward turret, and a heavy cruiser was hit between its fighting top and the forward funnel.

Heavy fire and explosions were observed on both warships. It can be assumed with the greatest probability that at least two other war vessels and three merchantmen were damaged by bomb hits.

PARIS, May 21 (AP)—The French communiqué issued this morning follows:

MAY 22 1940

Despite numerous engagements, the enemy has not carried any important change in the situation, which remains confused between the Somme and the region of Cambrai.

Enemy attacks have been repulsed at various points of the front, notably along the Aisne in the region of Rethel.

Our aviation has continued during the night to bombard the enemy rear.

Tonight's French communiqué said:

In the region north of the Somme the enemy, continuing their pressure, succeeded in pushing advanced elements to Amiens and Arras.

On the rest of the front the situation is unchanged despite local efforts of the enemy.

Intense activity of our scouting aviation and bombing formations, in cooperation with dive-bombing units of the navy, harassed enemy land troops without respite.

The minimum number of enemy planes which French aviation and anti-aircraft guns have brought down in our lines during the period from May 10 to May 19 is 303.

LONDON, May 21 (AP)—An Admiralty communiqué issued today follows:

The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that, as a result of damage sustained through striking an uncharted rock off the Norwegian coast, H. M. S. Effingham [cruiser, 9,550 tons] has become a total loss. There were no casualties.

Another Admiralty communiqué said:

The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that the minelayer H. M. S. Princess Victoria, Captain J. B. E. Hall, R. N., has been sunk by an enemy mine. The commanding officer, 3 officers and 31 ratings [seamen] are missing and it is feared that they have lost their lives. The next of kin have been informed.

An Air Ministry communiqué issued today follows:

Yesterday heavy bombing attacks were made by R. A. F. aircraft on the enemy's lines of communication and troop concentrations immediately behind the fighting fronts in France and Belgium. The attacks were continued during the night.

In a night raid on Rotterdam oil tanks were bombed and set on fire.

An Air Ministry communiqué tonight said:

Yesterday, Monday morning, Blenheim aircraft carried out a successful attack on armored vehicles in the Arras-Cambrai area. In the afternoon heavy bombing attacks were made in the Arras-Bapaume area. All our aircraft returned.

During the night a large force of Royal Air Force bombers attacked troop concentrations in the Cambrai-Le Cateau-St. Quentin area.

In the forest of Nuvion, north of the Aisne [river], a successful attack was made on enemy troops. Several large fires were started in this area. From these operations five of our aircraft failed to return.

Today, Tuesday, our bomber and fighter aircraft have been continuously engaged in operations over the confused fighting fronts in Belgium and Northern France.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 22 (AP)—The following Air Ministry communiqué was issued early today:

Enemy aircraft jettisoned bombs in two districts in the southeast of England last night. Some bombs fell on land and others in the sea. Anti-aircraft guns were in action. There were no casualties and no damage is reported.

LONDON, MAY 22-(WEDNESDAY)-(AP)-GERMAN PLANES BOMBED ENGLAND LAST NIGHT, DROPPING EXPLOSIVES OFFSHORE AND ON LAND AT TWO PLACES ALONG THE SOUTHEAST COAST BUT, THE AIR MINISTRY SAID, WITHOUT DOING ANY DAMAGE.

ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE AND HEAVY EXPLOSIONS OVER THE MOUTH OF THE THAME INDICATED AN ATTEMPTED THIRD RAID.

THE AIR MINISTRY SAID THE GERMAN PLANES DROPPED BOMBS "IN TWO DISTRICTS IN THE SOUTHEAST OF ENGLAND LAST NIGHT. SOME BOMBS FELL ON LAND AND OTHERS IN THE SEA." IT ADDED THAT THERE WERE NO CASUALTIES OR DAMAGE REPORTED.

ONE RAID OFF THE KENTISH COAST WAS IN AN APPARENT ATTEMPT BY A LONE PLANE TO HIT ANCHORED SHIPPING.

AN AIR RAID WARNING WAS SOUNDED AND ANTIAIRCRAFT BATTERIES AS WELL AS FIGHTER PLANES WENT INTO ACTION.

BRIEF BUT INTENSE ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE DROVE OFF ANOTHER GERMAN PLANE OVER THE SOUTHEAST COAST EARLY THIS MORNING. FIGHTING PLANES WERE SENT OUT.

ANTIAIRCRAFT FIRE IN THE THAMES ESTUARY EARLY TODAY WAS FOLLOWED BY A SHARP EXPLOSION AND A SUDDEN GLARE. THEN THERE WAS THE SOUND OF GUNFIRE OVER THE ESTUARY.

PLANES WERE HEARD AND SEARCHLIGHTS FINGERED THE SKIES, BUT NO AIR RAID WARNING WAS SOUNDED.

NONE OF THE BOMBS OFF THE KENTISH COAST LAST NIGHT FOUND A TARGET.

TWICE EARLIER IN THE DAY HEAVY ANTI-AIRCRAFT FIRE WAS HEARD IN THE SOUTHEAST COASTAL REGIONS, TOGETHER WITH THE DRONE OF A HIGH FLYING PLANE.

AND THEN, LATE TONIGHT, AN AIR-RAID WARNING WAS SOUNDED ON THE KENTISH COAST AND PURSUIT PLANES DASHED OUT TO SEA.

WATCHERS SAW STREAKS OF TRACER BULLETS, THE PLAY OF SEARCHLIGHTS AND HEARD MUCH FIRING.

NO BOMBS WERE DROPPED ON LAND AND THE "RAIDERS PASSED" SIGNAL WAS SOUNDED AN HOUR LATER.

MANY PERSONS WERE ON THE WATERFRONT DURING THE RAID AND DASHED FOR COVER.

ANTI-PARACHUTE PATROLS WERE PLACED ON DUTY AT CHATHAM.

MAY 22 1940

THE DAILY EXPRESS PAINTED A GRIM PICTURE OF HOW GERMANY'S AIR SUPERIORITY MIGHT ENABLE NAZI FORCES TO CROSS THE CHANNEL UNDER

THE "PROTECTION" OF A CURTAIN OF BOMBS.

THE NEWSPAPER, WHOSE DIRECTING HEAD IS BRITAIN'S MINISTER OF AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION, WARNED THAT THE GERMAN AIR FORCE COULD ESCORT TROOPSHIPS ACROSS THE CHANNEL, ONLY 20 MILES WIDE AT ITS NARROWEST POINT, WHILE COASTAL BATTERIES SET UP IN FRANCE HURLED A PROTECTIVE BARRAGE TO ENGLAND'S SHORE AND SWIFTLY-LAID GERMAN MINES FENCED IN THE INVASION.

SHORE GUNS ARE MORE THAN A MATCH FOR WEAPONS OF A SIMILAR CALIBER IN WARSHIPS--AS PROVED IN THE WORLD WAR FAILURE OF THE GALLIPOLI CAMPAIGN TO FORCE THE DARDANELLES.

GERMAN SUBMARINES, MARKEDLY INACTIVE IN RECENT WEEKS, ARE BELIEVED IN BRITAIN TO BE HELD IN RESERVE FOR A MASS ATTACK ON THE EMPIRE'S HOME FLEET AT THE MOMENT ANY INVASION IS ATTEMPTED.

AT THE SAME TIME, WAVES OF BOMBERS MIGHT BE DIRECTED AT BRITISH SURFACE VESSELS. ALTHOUGH NO CAPITAL SHIP HAS BEEN ADMITTED BY THE BRITISH AS SUNK BY AIR ATTACK, SOME SOURCES SAY IT IS UNLIKELY BATTLESHIPS COULD WITHSTAND CONTINUED ATTACKS WITH 2,000-POUND BOMBS.

JUST AS IN THE DAYS OF PHILLIP AND THE SPANISH ARMADA, AND ANPOLEON AND HIS FLEET OF FLAT-BOTTOMED VESSELS, WITH WHICH INVASIONS OF ENGLAND WERE ATTEMPTED, THE BRITISH TODAY DEPEND CHIEFLY UPON THEIR FLEET.

HOWEVER, THE SHIPS ARE BACKED BY COASTAL DEFENSE BATTERIES AROUND THE WHOLE OF BRITAIN.

TO RESIST INVASION FROM THE AIR SHE HAS HUNDREDS OF FIGHTER PLANES SCATTERED AT NUMEROUS BASES, A THICK NETWORK OF ANTIAIRCRAFT BATTERIES AND A NATION-WIDE AIR RAIDS PRECAUTIONS SYSTEM.

DUFF COOPER TEXT

LONDON,MAY 21-(AP VIA RADIO)--FOLLOWING IS THE TEXT OF THE SPEECH BROADCAST TONIGHT BY ALFRED DUFF COOPER, MINISTER OF INFORMATION:-

LAST WEEK I WARNED YOU TO BE PREPARED FOR BAD NEWS AND ASKED YOU TO MEET IT AS BRAVELY AS OUR TROOPS ARE MEETING THE ATTACKS OF THE ENEMY. WELL, THE NEWS TODAY IS GRAVE. IT IS NO GOOD PRETENDING THAT IT ISN'T.

THERE IS NO CAUSE FOR SERIOUS ALARM, STILL LESS FOR PANIC. IN EMPLOYMENT OF A NEW TECHNIQUE, SMALL BODIES OF THE GERMAN ARMY HAVE SUCCEEDED IN PENETRATING TO GREAT DISTANCES, BUT THEY ARE SMALL BODIES ONLY AND THE SUCCESSES THAT THEY HAVE ACHIEVED INVOLVES THEM IN FEARFUL DANGER.

THE ARMY OF GREAT BRITAIN AND THE FAR GREATER ARMY OF FRANCE ARE STILL THERE. THEY ARE NEITHER IN RETREAT NOR HAVE THEY SUFFERED HEAVY LOSSES. IT IS HARD ENOUGH TO UNDERSTAND WHAT HAS TAKEN PLACE AT A BATTLE AFTER IT IS OVER; IT IS QUITE IMPOSSIBLE TO UNDERSTAND WHAT IS HAPPENING WHILE IT IS STILL GOING ON.

THE FOG OF WAR HANGS OVER THE VAST AREA WHERE THE CONFLICTING FORCES ARE ENGAGED. FLASHES OF NEWS COME OUT OF IT FROM TIME TO TIME, AND THEY ARE SUBSEQUENTLY CONTRADICTED OR CONFIRMED. WE HEARD THAT ONE VANTAGE POINT HAS BEEN GAINED, ANOTHER LOST, ANOTHER REGAINED, AND OUT OF THESE SPARSE SCRAPS OF NEWS IMAGINATION IS INCLINED TO BUILD VAST STRUCTURES OF CONJECTURES.

MAY 22 1940

THREE FACTS ALONE CAN BE DEFINITELY STATED:

FIRST, THAT THE PRESENT OBJECTIVE OF THE ENEMY IS THE CHANNEL PORTS FROM WHICH THEY HOPE TO LAUNCH WAR UPON THIS ISLAND.

SECOND, THAT SMALL PARTS OF THE MECHANIZED TROOPS HAVE SUCCEEDED

30,24-247

30.24-2417

IN ELUDING THEIR OPPONENTS, IN ADVANCING GREAT DISTANCES, AND COMING NEAR TO THEIR OBJECTIVE.

THIRD, THAT THE ARMIES OF FRANCE AND GREAT BRITAIN ARE UNDEFEATED.

IN ENORMOUSLY SUPERIOR NUMBERS THEY (ALLIES) OCCUPY THE BATTLEFIELD AND THE COUNTER-ATTACK, WHEN IT COMES, SHOULD PROVE FORMIDABLE. THE SWAYING FORTUNES OF THE FIGHT MATTER LITTLE; IT IS THE END OF THE BATTLE THAT COUNTS, AND, AS I TOLD YOU LAST WEEK, THE END OF THIS BATTLE, WHATEVER IT MAY BE, CANNOT ENTAIL THE DEFEAT OF GREAT BRITAIN OR FRANCE IN THE WAR.

MEANWHILE, IT IS THE OLD STORY WHICH HAS BEEN TOLD AGAIN AND AGAIN, BUT WHICH, NEVERTHELESS, ALWAYS COMES AS A SURPRISE TO EVERYONE. BY THE UNEXPECTED CHARACTER OF THE ATTACK, THE INITIAL GAINS ARE GREATER THAN WERE ANTICIPATED. IT IS THE STORY OF AUGUST, 1914, AND OF MARCH, 1918, AND LET US HOPE THAT IT WILL FIND THE SAME ENDING AS THOSE STORIES FOUND.

MAY 22 1940

MEANWHILE, IT IS FOR EACH ONE OF US TO PLAY OUR PART. THE BATTLE IS BEING FOUGHT TO SCLOSE TO OUR SHORES THAT EACH AND EVERY ONE OF US IS TAKING PART IN IT; THEREFORE, WE ARE ALL SOLDIERS AND AS SUCH WE MUST ACQUIT OURSELVES.

THE FIRST QUALITY OF A SOLDIER IS COURAGE, THE QUALITY IN WHICH I AM CONFIDENT WE SHALL NOT BE FOUND LACKING.

LET ME REPEAT YOU THE WARNING I GAVE THE OTHER DAY AGAINST THE DANGER OF RUMOR. I EXPERIENCED SUCH A GOOD EXAMPLE OF IT MYSELF THIS AFTERNOON. I WAS TOLD BY A PERFECTLY RELIABLE AND TRUTHFUL REPORTER THAT THE PRIME MINISTER OF FRANCE HAD SAID THAT NOTHING BUT A MIRACLE COULD SAVE HIS COUNTRY.

I COULD HARDLY BELIEVE THAT SO BRAVE A FIGHTER AS MONSIEUR PAUL REYNAUD SAID ANYTHING OF THE SORT, AND INDEED WHEN I CAME TO READ THE FULL ACCOUNT OF WHAT HE HAD SAID, I FOUND THAT HE HAD SAID SOMETHING QUITE DIFFERENT.

HIS MESSAGE WAS ONE OF SUPERB CONFIDENCE. HE FIRMLY ANNOUNCED HIS FAITH THAT NOTHING COULD DEFEAT THE UNITED FORCES OF HIS COUNTRY AND THE BRITISH EMPIRE. AND ADDED, THAT IF TODAY OR SOME SUBSEQUENT DAY, ANY FAINT-HEARTED PERSON WERE TO COME TO HIM AND SAY NOTHING BUT A MIRACLE COULD SAVE FRANCE, HE WOULD FEEL CONFIDENT THAT A MIRACLE COULD BE PERFORMED, BECAUSE HE HAD FAITH IN THE SALVATION OF FRANCE.

MAY 22 1940

I THINK THAT THESE GRAVE EVENTS WILL ACT, INDEED AS THEY HAVE ALREADY ACTED, AS A TONIC TO THE NATION. I FIND WHEREVER I GO, THE CALM SPIRIT OF INFLEXIBLE DETERMINATION.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS THIS AFTERNOON WAS A VERY DIFFERENT ASSEMBLY FROM WHAT IT WAS BEFORE WHITSUN. IT REMINDED ME OF THE WORDS OF MACAULAY: "THEN NONE WERE FOR A PARTY; THEN ALL WERE FOR THE STATE."

OUR OWN PARTY DIFFERENCES, WHICH HAVE SO OFTEN BEEN SO BITTER IN THE PAST AND MAY BE SO IN THE FUTURE, HAVE BEEN LAID ASIDE AS PLAY-THINGS FOR WHICH WE HAVE NO LONGER ANY USE; SOMETHING OF SO MUCH GREATER IMPORTANCE HAS TAKEN PLACE.

THERE IS ONLY ONE SENTIMENT IN THE HOUSE. IT WAS A UNITED HOUSE OF COMMONS, UNITED AS PERHAPS IT NEVER HAS BEEN, THE DANGER IS SO GREAT AND SO CLOSE.

I DO NOT BELIEVE THERE IS ONE MEMBER OF THAT GREAT ASSEMBLY WHO

DOES NOT LOVE HIS COUNTRY MORE THAN ALL BESIDE. WE WERE ALL, I AM SURE, IMPRESSED BY ONE PASSAGE IN THE PRIME MINISTER'S SPEECH LAST SUNDAY. YOU REMEMBER HE SAID: "IF THE BOMBS BEGIN TO FALL ON OUR OWN SOIL, WE WILL HAVE AT LEAST THE GRATIFICATION OF KNOWING THAT FOR EVERY ONE THAT FALLS HERE, THERE WILL BE ONE LESS TO BE HURLED AT OUR TROOPS, TO BE HURLED ON SOLDIERS, AND SAILORS, AND AIRMEN.

IT IS THAT FACT THAT GIVES US THE HIGH PRIVILEGE OF CALLING THEM OUR COMRADES.

YOU REMEMBER THE SPLENDID CLOSE OF HENRY V'S SPEECH BEFORE THE BATTLE OF AGINCOURT, WHEN HE WAS REPROACHING HIS STAFF FOR EXPRESSING THE WISH THAT SOME OF THE IDLE PEOPLE IN ENGLAND COULD BE PRESENT TO ASSIST THEM IN THE COMING BATTLE. HE SAID THAT THE CONTRARY WAS HIS OPINION, THAT THE FEWER MEN, THE GREATER SHARE OF HONOR, AND HE CONCLUDED:

"AND GENTLEMEN IN ENGLAND, NOW A-BED MAY 22 1940
"SHALL THINK THEMSELVES ACCURS'D THEY WERE NOT HERE,
"AND HOLD THEIR MANHOODS CHEAP WHILES ANY SPEAKS
"THAT FOUGHT WITH US UPON SAINT CRISPIN'S DAY."

RQ639PED

THESE THINGS ARE ALL CHANGED IN OUR CENTURY. NEITHER GENTLEMEN NOR LADIES WHO WILL SHORTLY BE GOING TO BED, NEITHER HOLD THEIR MANHOOD OR WOMANHOOD CHEAP, BECAUSE, AS I HAVE SAID, WE ARE ALL ONE, AND ALL ENGAGED IN THE GREAT BATTLE. WE HERE BEHIND THE LINES MUST PLAY OUR PART AS WORTHILY AS THOSE WHO ARE KEEPING WATCH TONIGHT IN THE FRONT LINES, OR THOSE WHO MAY SPRING TO THE ATTACK AT DAWN TOMORROW.

LET THEM FEEL, LET THEM KNOW, THAT BEHIND THEIR STEADY LINES AND STALWART HEARTS, THERE EXISTS THE VAST RESERVE OF A CALM, A FAITHFUL, AND A UNITED PEOPLE.

LONDON, MAY 21-(AP)-ARRAS, THE BIRTHPLACE OF ROBESPIERRE, "IS DEAD AND BURIED" UNDER THE GERMAN ONSLAUGHT IN NORTHERN FRANCE, I WAS TOLD THIS MORNING JUST BEFORE RETURNING TO LONDON WITH OTHER WAR CORRESPONDENTS WHO HAVE BEEN WITH THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE.

"ARRAS AS WE KNEW IT LAST FALL IS DEAD AND BURIED," A BRITISH OFFICER TOLD ME, "ITS BUILDINGS ARE DEMOLISHED; ITS PEOPLE HAVE FLED OR ARE DEAD."

AMIENS, WHICH WHEN I SAW IT FRIDAY, WAS JAMMED WITH PATHETIC REFUGEES FROM FRANCE, BELGIUM AND HOLLAND. NOW IT HAS FELT THE WEIGHT OF MARS' FIST.

A FLYING OFFICER TOLD ME THAT ITS CATHEDRAL HAD BEEN SHELLED AND BOMBED BY GERMANS BEFORE THEY ENTERED THE CITY. HE DID NOT ENOW THE EXTENT OF THE DAMAGE.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON,MAY 21-(AP)-GRIMLY DESCRIBING EVENTS IN EUROPE AS A WORLD DISASTER, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TODAY LAID DOWN THIS TWO-FOLD POLICY TO GOVERN AMERICA'S VAST REARMAMENT PROGRAM.

1. NOT A SINGLE WAR MILLIONAIRE SHOULD BE CREATED IN THE UNITED STATES.

MAY 22 1940

2. LABOR UNIONS SHOULD NOT (AND HE EXPRESSED CONFIDENCE THEY WOULD NOT) TAKE TACTICAL ADVANTAGE OF THE EMERGENCY TO STRIKE FOR SPECIAL WAGES OR PRIVILEGES WITHHELD FROM THE REST OF LABOR.

AT THE SAME TIME, THE PRESIDENT STRUCK OUT AT HIS PRESS CONFERENCE AT GERMANY'S WAR METHODS, ALTHOUGH HE DID NOT MENTION THAT COUNTRY BY NAME. ENEMY PLANES, HE SAID, WERE SWEEPING DOWN THE ROADS OF FRANCE WITH MACHINE GUNS WIDE OPEN, TAKING A DEATH TOLL OF REFUGEES THE LIKE OF WHICH HAS NEVER BEEN SEEN BEFORE.

AS THE PRESIDENT SPOKE, CONGRESS WAS IN A WHIRLWIND OF ACTIVITY PUSHING HIS RECENT DEFENSE RECOMMENDATIONS THROUGH TOWARD PASSAGE.

THE SENATE MADE RAPID PROGRESS WITH A $1,820,841,000 ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL, IN WHICH WERE INCLUDED THE SUMS ASKED BY THE PRESIDENT LAST WEEK FOR THAT BRANCH OF THE SERVICE. MEANWHILE, THE CHAIRMEN OF THE HOUSE AND SENATE NAVAL COMMITTEES INTRODUCED LEGISLATION TO AUTHORIZE A FORCE OF 10,000 PLANES AND 16,000 PILOTS FOR THE NAVAL AIR CORPS.

SUMMING UP THE CAPITAL AND LABOR POLICY WHICH IS TO GUIDE THE DEFENSE PROGRAM, MR.ROOSEVELT SAID THAT THE GOVERNMENT PROPOSES IN NO WAY TO WEAKEN THE SOCIAL GAINS OF THE LAST FEW YEARS. THE WHOLE OBJECTIVE, HE ADDED, WAS TO PREVENT ANYBODY--CAPITAL OR LABOR--FROM GETTING RICH OUT OF WORLD DISASTER.

MAY 22 1940

THE COUNTRY AS A WHOLE IS UNITED ON THE DEFENSE QUESTION, HE ASSERTED, AND AS FAST AS THE NEWS COMES IN FROM THE OTHER SIDE THE MORE UNITED IT IS. HE REMARKED THAT HE PRESUMED THE CORRESPONDENTS IRESENT HAD READ OF WHAT WAS GOING ON:

THREE TO FIVE MILLION WOMEN AND CHILDREN AND A FEW OLD MEN ARE FLEEING SOUTHWARD BY ANY AVAILABLE ROAD ON A 200 MILE FRONT, HE SAID, AND ENEMY AIRPLANES ARE MACHINE-GUNNING THOSE ROADS.

THE COUNTRY, HE CONTINUED, REALIZES SOME OF THE IMPLICATIONS OF THAT DISASTER AND THAT METHOD OF WARFARE. HE DID NOT PROCEED TO SAY WHAT THE IMPLICATIONS WERE, BUT HIS POINT OBVIOUSLY WAS THAT EVENTS SHOWED THE NEED FOR A VAST ARMAMENT PROGRAM.

MR.ROOSEVELT TURNED ASIDE QUERIES ABOUT THE POSSIBILITY OF A COALITION CABINET WHICH WOULD INCLUDE PROMINENT REPUBLICAN FIGURES.

OTHERWISE THE WAR AND DEFENSE NEWS IN WASHINGTON TODAY WAS:

(1) THE HOUSE MILITARY COMMITTEE VOTED UNANIMOUSLY TO REMOVE THE LIMIT OF 6,000 PLANES WHICH PRESENT LAW IMPOSES UPON THE STRENGTH OF THE ARMY AIR CORPS.

(2) THE HOUSE NAVAL COMMITTEE APPROVED LEGISLATION DESIGNED TO SPEED UP THE NAVAL CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM. IT FIRST, HOWEVER, STRUCK OUT A PROVISION FOR RELAXING THE WALSH-HEALEY ACT ESTABLISHING MINIMUM LABOR STANDARDS FOR GOVERNMENT CONTRACTORS. THE BILL INCLUDED PROVISION FOR THE NAVY TO EXPEL ANY CIVILIAN WORKERS SUSPECTED OF SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITY OR INTENT, REGARDLESS OF CIVIL SERVICE STATUS. (SIMILAR PROVISIONS WERE WRITTEN INTO ARMY LEGISLATION ALSO.)

(3) SENATOR PEPPER (D-FLA) INTRODUCED A RESOLUTION WHICH WOULD AUTHORIZE THE PRESIDENT TO SELL PLANES AND AIRCRAFT EQUIPMENT OF THE ARMY TO THE ALLIES, IN ORDER TO SPEED ASSISTANCE TO THEM IN THE PRESENT CRISIS.

MAY 22 1940

(4) THE NAVY ORDERED ALL OF ITS ESTABLISHMENTS TO EXPEDITE THE DEFENSE PROGRAM, BY PUTTING ON ADDITIONAL SHIFTS AND EMPLOYING 15,000 MORE CIVILIAN WORKERS WITHIN THREE MONTHS.

ON THE SUBJECT OF THE HOURS OF WORKERS EMPLOYED ON DEFENSE PRODUCTION, MR.ROOSEVELT SAID HE WOULD LIKE TO SEE THE WORK WEEK STABILIZED AT 40 TO 42 HOURS, WITH JUST AS LITTLE OVER-TIME WORK AS POSSIBLE. RATHER THAN THE LATTER, HE THOUGHT IT ADVISABLE THAT THE UNEMPLOYED BE PUT TO WORK.

THE WHOLE QUESTION CAME UP WHEN A REPORTER ASKED FOR COMMENT ON A RECENT STATEMENT BY JOHN L.LEWIS THAT THE CIO WOULD ENDEAVOR TO ORGANIZE THE WORKERS IN THE AIRCRAFT AND OTHER DEFENSE INDUSTRIES.

MR.ROOSEVELT MERELY REPLIED THAT THAT WOULD BE LEGAL, BUT, AFTER A PAUSE, WENT ON INTO HIS STATEMENT ON BOTH LABOR AND CAPITAL.

NEW YORK,MAY 21-(AP)-STEADY ADVANCES AT A RATE OUT-SPEEDING THE WORLD WAR INVASION HAVE BEEN CLAIMED BY GERMANY, DAY BY DAY, SINCE THE CONFLICT SPREAD TO THE LOW COUNTRIES.

THIS IS THE PACE CLAIMED FOR THE MARCH TO THE SEA:

MAY 10--HITLER'S MECHANIZED COLUMNS BROKE THROUGH THE NETHERLANDS FRONTIER AND RACED ACROSS LUXEMBOURG TOWARD BELGIUM BEFORE DAWN. BY NIGHTFALL DEEP PENETRATION AT ALL POINTS WAS REPORTED, WITH GERMANS HOLDING SOME BRIDGEHEADS ON THE ALBERT CANAL IN BELGIUM AND BATTLING IN BEHIND-THE-LINES POSITIONS IN THE NETHERLANDS, WHERE PARACHUTE TROOPS WERE DROPPED.

MAY 22 1940

MAY 11--BERLIN REPORTED A "SECRET WEAPON" WAS USED IN THE LIGHTNING CAPTURE OF THE STRONGEST FORT OF THE ALBERT CANAL-LIEGE DEFENSE SYSTEM. NAZI TROOPS PUSHED DEEP INTO NORTHERN PROVINCES OF THE NETHERLANDS, REINFORCED PARACHUTE POSITIONS AT ROTTERDAM AND SPARRED TENTATIVELY AT FRANCE'S MAGINOT LINE SOUTH OF LUXEMBOURG.

MAY 12--WITH LUXEMBOURG COMPLETELY OVERRUN, GERMANY STRENGTHENED THE DRIVE INTO BELGIUM, ENCIRCLING THE LIEGE FORTS AND THRUSTING 13 MILES WEST TO WAXEMME. HOLLAND'S GREBBE LINE OF WATER FORTS WAS SHATTERED AS GERMANS ADVANCED ON SECOND DEFENSES BEHIND THE IJSSEL RIVER, A THIRD OF THE WAY TO THE NORTH SEA.

MAY 13--NAZIS HOISTED THE SWASTIKA FLAG OVER HISTORIC LIEGE AND TRIED ANOTHER THRUST AT THE TOP OF THE MAGINOT LINE NEAR THE FRENCH-LUXEMBOURG BORDER. ADVANCE COLUMNS PIERCED TO WITHIN 40 MILES OF BRUSSELS. GERMANS OVERRAN GRONINGEN PROVINCE IN NORTHERN HOLLAND AND REACHED THE ZUIDER ZEE (IJSSEL MEER).

MAY 14--GERMAN LEGIONS BROKE THROUGH THE WOODED ARDENNES MOUNTAINS OF SOUTHEASTERN BELGIUM, CROSSED THE FRENCH FRONTIER AND DROVE TO SEDAN--TEN MILES INTO FRENCH TERRITORY. THE NETHERLANDS ARMY CEASED RESISTANCE TO AVOID "COMPLETE ANNIHILATION." BACKED BY FRENCH AND BRITISH TROOPS, BELGIAN RESISTANCE STIFFENED BUT THE STEADY ENCIRCLEMENT OF LIEGE CONTINUED.

MAY 15--GERMANY'S ADVANCE SPEARHEADED INTO THREE MAIN DRIVES--INTO FRANCE PAST SEDAN, SOUTH FROM THE NETHERLANDS TOWARD ANTWERP, AND NORTH OF NAMUR TOWARD BRUSSELS. TANK UNITS PIERCED THE ALLIED LINE ALONG THE MEUSE RIVER WHICH RUNS NORTH FROM SEDAN TO NAMUR.

MAY 16--GERMANY AIMED FOR THE ENGLISH CHANNEL IN A DRIVE AGAINST THE ALLIED DYLE RIVER LINE WHICH RUNS NORTH AND SOUTH 10 TO 20 MILES EAST OF BRUSSELS. PARIS WAS PLACED IN THE "ARMY ZONE" AS GERMANY'S ADVANCE GUARD DEEPENED THE THRUST INTO FRANCE PAST SEDAN, 130 MILES NORTHEAST OF PARIS.

MAY 17--BRUSSELS FELL AND THE DYLE RIVER DEFENSE LINE CRACKED. GAINING MOMENTUM, THE GERMAN ADVANCE STABBED INTO FRANCE ALMOST TO RETHEL, MORE THAN 30 MILES ACROSS THE FRONTIER. THE GERMANS REPORTED ADVANCES INTO "LITTLE MAGINOT LINE" DEFENSES IN ANOTHER SECTION NEAR AVESNES AND MAUBEUGE IN THE HEADWATERS OF THE SAMBRE RIVER.

MAY 18--GERMANY RAISED HER BATTLE FLAG OVER ANTWERP CITY HALL 57 DAYS AHEAD OF THE 1914 INVASION. THE BATTLE FRONT WAS PUSHED TO GUISE AND LANDRECIES, 90 MILES FROM PARIS, AND DEEPENED INTO THE TRIANGLE FORMED BY THE AISNE AND OISE RIVERS TOWARD PARIS AND THE PORTS ON THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

MAY 22 1940

MAY 19--THE GERMANS MOVED TO ST.QUENTIN, 80 MILES FROM PARIS, AND SPLIT INTO TWO FORKS--ONE HEADED FOR THE FRENCH CAPITAL, THE OTHER FOR THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

MAY 20--CAPTURE OF LAON WAS ANNOUNCED, BRINGING THE INVASION WITHIN 75 MILES OF PARIS. ADVANCE GUARD UNITS THRUST ON TOWARD THE AISNE-OISE CANAL. FROM LANDRECIES AND MAUBEUGE ON THE SOUTH AND POSITIONS WEST OF BRUSSELS TO THE NORTH, GERMANS SOUGHT TO TRAP BRITISH TROOPS IN A BAG BETWEEN VALENCIENNES AND CHARLEROI.

MAY 21--THE PLUNGE IN LAON REGION CARRIED GERMAN TROOPS "WITHIN SIGH OF THE EIFFEL TOWER" AT PARIS 69 MILES AWAY, THEN SMASHED A DEEP WEDGE TO THE WEST THAT WENT 60 MILES THROUGH ARRAS AND AMIENS TO ABBEVILLE, 12 MILES FROM THE ENGLISH CHANNEL. THE MOVE EMPERILED THE POSITION OF 550,000 OR MORE ALLIED TROOPS IN NORTHERN FRANCE AND SOUTHWESTERN BELGIUM.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE GERMAN CLAIM OF HAVING SMASHED THROUGH THE ALLIED FRONT AND REACHED THE VICINITY OF THE ENGLISH CHANNEL AT ABBEVILLE MEANS, IF IT IS SUBSTANTIATED, THAT THE ALLIES ARE IN A PRECARIOUS POSITION.

IT DOESN'T MEAN, HOWEVER, THAT THE ALLIEX

IF IT IS SUBSTANTIATED, THAT THE ALLIES ARE IN A PRECARIOUS POSITION.

IT DOESN'T MEAN, HOWEVER, THAT THE ALLIES HAVE BEEN CRUSHED.

IT IS ALMOST FOLLY TO DISCUSS THIS WHOLLY CONFUSED SITUATION AS IT NOW STANDS. WE NEED MUCH MORE INFORMATION BEFORE WE SHALL BE ABLE TO PASS JUDGMENT, AND FOR THAT REASON WE SHOULD HOLD STEADY UNTIL WE GET THAT INFORMATION.

MAY 22 1940

HOWEVER, THERE CAN BE NO GARM IN SPECULATING ON WHAT THE DEVELOPMENT MAY MEAN, PROVIDED IT IS UNDERSTOOD BETWEEN YOU AND ME THAT IT IS SPECULATION WITHOUT SUFFICIENT DETAILS AT HAND FOR A CONSIDERED OPINION.

THE GERMANS SAY THEY HAVE CRUSHED THE FRENCH NINTH ARMY AND CAPTURED THE GENERAL STAFF WITH THE COMMANDER, GENERAL GIRAUD.

30.24-2425

30.24-2425

IT ISN'T WHOLLY CLEAR JUST WHERE THE NINTH WAS HOLDING AT THE MOMENT OF THE CRASH, BUT IT WOULD SEEM THAT IT HAD BEEN BLOCKING THE ROUTE INTO THE VALLEY OF THE SOMME, NEAR PERONNE, WHICH IS A FAMOUS MILITARY ROUTE TO THE COAST.

THE NAZIS CLAIM TO HAVE SMASHED ON AND CAPTURED AMIENS AND ABBEVILLE. THIS WOULD MEAN THAT THEY HAVE ACHIEVED IN AT LEAST SOME MEASURE WHAT THE KAISER'S FORCES ATTEMPTED IN THE SPRING OF 1918 WHEN THEY ALL BUT WON THE WAR IN THEIR GREAT ATTACK ALONG THE SOMME.

WHAT THE GERMANS DON'T MAKE CLEAR IS THE STRENGTH OF THE FORCES EMPLOYED IN THIS THRUST. WE MUST ASSUME THAT A COMPARATIVELY SMALL MECHANIZED SPEARHEAD HAS BEEN JAMMED THROUGH TO THE COAST, TO BE FOLLOWED BY SUPPORTING TROOPS.

MAY 22 1940

IN ORDER TO MAKE THIS BREAK-THROUGH STICK, THE NAZIS MUST POUR STRONG SUPPORT THROUGH THE GAP IN THE ALLIED LINE, ELSE THEY WILL HAVE MERELY TOSSED SOME MECHANIZED CONTINGENTS OUT INTO THE BLUE TO WANDER ABOUT ON THEIR OWN.

IF IT PROVES THAT THE GERMANS HAVE BROKEN THROUGH IN FORCE, THEN WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

TO MY MIND THE WORST ASPECT OF THE SITUATION WOULD BE THAT THE LARGE ALLIED FORCES IN BELGIUM WOULD BE SEVERED FROM THE FRENCH ARMIES TO THE SOUTH IN FRANCE.

IT IS USELESS TO SPECULATE FURTHER ON WHAT MIGHT HAPPEN TO THE ARMIES IN BELGIUM, SURROUNDED AS THEY WOULD BE ON THREE SIDES BY THE ENEMY. THE POSSIBILITIES ARE PRETTY NASTY. WE CAN AT LEAST SAY THAT IT WOULD TAKE MASTERFUL ALLIED GENERALSHIP TO SAVE A DISASTER.

THE GERMAN BREAK-THROUGH ALSO PRESUMABLY WOULD EASE THE WAY TO PARIS AND WE CAN EXPECT THAT THE NAZI DRIVE TOWARD THE CAPITAL, WHICH HAD LOST SOME OF ITS MOMENTUM, NOW WILL BE INCREASED AGAIN.

IF THE GERMANS ARE ABLE TO GET HOLD OF THE CHANNEL PORTS, ESPECIALLY ON THE NORTHERN FRENCH COAST AT CALAIS, THEY WILL HAVE ACHIEVED THEIR OBJECT OF GETTING BACK UP AGAINST ENGLAND FOR AIR-FORCE OPERATIONS. CALAIS IS ONLY TWENTY MILES FROM ENGLAND'S DOVER, AND EASY STRIKING DISTANCE FROM THE VAST PORT OF LONDON, INTO WHOSE MILES AND MILES OF INFLAMMABLE DOCKS A HUGE SLICE OF THE WORLD'S SHIPPING GOES.

NOW IS THE TIME TO WATCH SIGNOR MUSSOLINI. IF IN HIS MIND THE FUEHRER IS APPROACHING A DECISIVE VICTORY THE ITALIAN CHIEFTAIN MAY DECIDE THAT THIS IS THE ACCEPTED HOUR FOR ITALY'S ENTRANCE INTO THE WAR.

AN ATTACK ALONG THE ITALO-FRENCH BORDER AT THIS CRUCIAL MOMENT WOULD GREATLY INCREASE THE PRECARIOUSNESS OF THE ALLIED POSITION.

IN CLOSING I WANT TO EMPHASIZE AGAIN THAT THIS ARTICLE IS MERELY SPECULATION BASED ON THE UNAMPLIFIED GERMAN CLAIMS AND WITHOUT SUFFICIENT DETAILS TO MAKE A CONSIDERED OPINION POSSIBLE.

I CAN ONLY ADD THAT EVEN IF THE NAZI CLAIMS ARE TRUE, IT DOESN'T MEAN THAT THE ALLIES ARE OUT OF COMMISSION.

THIS IS A SWELL TIME FOR US TO KEEP OUR SHIRTS ON AND NOT GET PANICKY.

PARLIAMENT DRAFTS LABOR AND WEALTH

Both Houses Pass and King Approves a Bill Giving Cabinet Emergency Powers to Speed Arms and Supplies.

MAY 23 1940

LONDON, May 22 (A. P.).—Parliament invested the British Government tonight with dictatorial powers to conscript labor and wealth to strengthen the nation against German invasion.

Within three hours the House of Commons and the House of Lords passed and King George approved a bill giving Winston Churchill's Government unprecedented, sweeping war emergency powers demanded "in view of the grave peril in which the nation stands today."

It armed the Cabinet with administrative weapons similar in efficiency and scope to those of Great Britain's authoritarian enemy.

An order in council, prepared even before the parliamentary process got under way, gave immediate effect to the law. It set up controls under the ministers covering, chiefly, labor, banking, agriculture, transport, mining war industries and export trade industries.

Munitions Board Is Summoned.

The war material and export industries will be given absolute priority and labor will be drafted as required to the more essential industries.

Arthur Greenwood, Laborite Minister Without Portfolio and head of the Productions Council, summoned the munitions board immediately.

Supply Minister Herbert Morrison ordered all ordnance factories to work full time seven days a week until further notice. Most factories now are working two twelve-hour shifts.

Quickly, the powerful Amalgamated Engineers Union agreed to temporary relaxation of its rules to permit extended employment of women in the engineering industry.

At the same time, Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, told the Empire by radio that the situation is "grave—perhaps graver than at any time in the war of 1914-1918," but that does not mean defeat is on the horizon." He declared Britain faced her danger confidently.

Commons, rushing its three readings, approved the Government's demand that it be clothed with widest war-waging powers.

The bill gives the Government absolute control over all wealth, labor and resources. All-powerful production councils will be set up to speed supplies of munitions, ships, aircraft, farm produce and minerals.

Major Clement R. Attlee, Prime Minister Churchill's lieutenant in the House, who called for the virtual "dictatorship," declared he wanted the munitions boards to "get on the job tonight."

The new measure carries forward a swift transition from democracy to semi-dictatorship which began before Great Britain went to war.

Military conscription was introduced hastily in the days just preceding that fateful Sunday, September 3, and since then there have been measures restricting profits, limiting individuals' actions and controlling investments, all paving the way to today's complete subjection of the nation to the one idea of victory.

Major Attlee assured the House that the power conferred by the bill would be great enough so that, if Parliament could not meet because of a German invasion or some other reason, the Cabinet could govern unhampered by lack of legislation.

Great Britain has approached military, economic and financial dictatorship by steady steps since the restless spring of 1939.

The Government overlordship announced today climaxes a swing toward concentrated powers started on March 29, 1939, when Neville Chamberlain, then Prime Minister, doubled the territorial army to 340,000 men, and said that Great Britain would be prepared to send thirty-eight instead of nineteen divisions to the Continent for war. Little more than a month later Mr. Chamberlain discarded this measure and conscription was ordered.

Real Start of Transition.

The real start of transition from democracy to a wartime form of totalitarianism came August 24, 1939, when the King signed the emergency powers defense bill just speeded through Parliament.

That bill enabled the King—actually giving the power to the Prime Minister as head of the Government—to sign into law any measures needed for home defense and specifically to:

1. Take over railroads and transportation facilities.
2. Control food supplies.
3. Effect a system of defense against air raids.

The outbreak of the war brought a host of other changes. Military conscription had been extended by successive calls to all British men from 16 to 36.

Defense regulations ranged from restrictions on carrier pigeons to the operation of lighthouses.

The Admiralty took control of the vast British merchant and shipping fleets.

Censorship was clamped on foreign cables and telephone service between Great Britain and the Continent, as well as across the Atlantic.

Defense Gets Priority.

At first attention was concentrated on defense measures and for a time industrial and economic reorganization failed to keep apace. Within the first month of the war, however, England was divided into districts, each under an engineer, to make sure the full production capacity of the nation was reached.

By that time purchases of food had been limited to a three-week supply and plans for "drastic rationing" were announced.

Now there will be a 100 per cent excess profits tax, and Major Attlee said that there even might be cases where concerns would be closed and others where property would be destroyed.

Rich and Poor Alike.

All munitions factories will immediately be placed under Government control.

Major Attlee told the House that "there should be no distinction between rich and poor and all should be willing to perform services or give up property and those who were recalcitrant came into precisely the same category."

The granting of dictatorial powers to the Government, he said, did not mean that today or tomorrow everybody would be given orders to do this or that, nor did it mean that from tomorrow every form of wealth would be taken, but the power would be exercised whenever it was necessary in the interest of the nation's safety.

Government Will Set Terms.

Major Attlee, Lord Privy Seal and member of the Inner War Cabinet, said that the object of the drastic bill was to make effective the whole resources of the nation "for whatever task may fall upon it."

He called the present situation a crisis for Great Britain demanding extraordinary and immediate measures.

Some establishments, he said, will be controlled outright at once and others later as need arises.

Terms and remuneration, hours of labor and conditions of service, he declared, would be prescribed by the Government.

Every one should continue in his job until ordered to do otherwise, Major Attlee emphasized.

"There must be power to carry on essential services," he said. "Over a wide field, industry will be carried on for the community and not for private purposes."

"Wages and profits will be under Government control."

The House cheered.

Conscription of labor and wealth, Major Attlee continued, "would apply to everybody."

"At this time everything for which we stand is in jeopardy," he declared, appealing to the nation to mobilize all its strength to meet the growing menace of German invasion.

The measure, known as the emergency powers bill, was published simultaneously with his announcement.

It provides an extension of powers which may be exercised by the King under the 1939 emergency powers defense act.

"A great battle is now proceeding," Major Attlee said. "Our men at sea, on land and in the air are fighting with splendid devotion and spirit.

"The Government is convinced that now is the time that we must mobilize to the full the whole resources of this country.

"We must throw all our weight into the struggle.

"It must be clear to all that the next few weeks are critical.

"Our ruthless enemy, who is restrained by no considerations of international law, justice or humanity, is throwing everything into the scale to force a decision.

"We are resolved he shall not succeed.

'Whatever May Come—"

"Whatever may come, we shall meet it as the British people in the past has done.

"It is necessary that the Government should be given complete control over persons and property—not only some persons, but over all persons, rich or poor, employers or worker, man or woman.

"These powers I am asking the House to give, I do not ask for in any spirit of panic. There is no need for panic. But we are asking that in this emergency we should be given the requisite powers that may be needed."

In order to pass the bill through all stages, Major Attlee said it was necessary to move the procedure by resolution without notice and the Government asked Parliament to acquiesce in this procedure in view of the grave peril in which the nation stands today.

"We introduce this not because we are in any doubt of the willingness of the people," he said, "but because in an emergency like this there must be the necessary power in Government hands."

Banks to Be Controlled.

Control of banks will be required, either through a central agency or regional commissioners, Mr. Attlee continued, and production councils to speed munitions, supplies and produce would be set up.

He warned that questions of compensation will be difficult, but said that there will be interim compensation.

"It is not only industrial business that will be under control or may be under control," he continued. "There will have to be control of the finances of the country and of the banks.

"This will be done under the orders of the Government and the competent authorities in each case will be the ministers concerned.

"Broadly speaking, we are taking control in a time of emergency, so that in the national interest we may utilize all the resources for the common weal."

The essential objects of the far-reaching measure, Major Attlee said, were:

1. To eliminate waste in skilled labor.

MAY 23 1940

2. To assure that industry is carried on for the community as a whole and not for private profit.

"I believe in this critical time," he said, "the vast majority of the people of this country willingly will give their services to the country and will do all that is asked.

He dropped a hint that branches of the munitions industry might be taken over by the State.

All sections of the House spoke approvingly of the precedent-shattering measure.

Laborite Hastings Lees-Smith said:

"It is not a time for lengthy discussion, but a time for action, a time for showing that the House of Commons can be a completely efficient instrument for the conduct of war."

Justification of the drastic powers sought, said Sir Percy Harris, a Liberal, was the fact that the danger to Great Britain never was more real or imminent.

William Gallacher, the only Communist member, said that the bill was a deliberate effort on the part of the ruling class to conquer the working class, despite Major Attlee's assurance that "it is essential that every one be satisfied that the rights he had shall remain alive."

Gallacher's words brought immediate condemnation from Laborite David Gilbert Logan, who declared "it is about time that a voice like that of Mr. Gallacher was silenced under emergency powers."

Major Attlee also had declared:

"It is proposed that there should be an addition to the fair wages clause whereby employers who do not at the end of this war restore any customs or conditions set aside for the war will be ineligible to come on the list of Government contractors."

David Kirkwood, a Laborite, objected that the working classes would "be tied hand and foot," but that private property would not.

"I am going to defeat that to the best of my ability," he declared. "And I don't happen to represent Russia, Rome or Jerusalem."

"Nor reason!" interjected Mr. Logan.

Major Attlee said that the production council headed by Mr. Greenwood would include representatives of trade unions and employers and that labor supply committees also would be set up.

"Firms will be grouped for the full utilization of labor and to prevent waste," he said. "There will be compulsory notification of all men stood off (laid off) or on short time."

He said that a "bold and comprehensive scheme of training" would be launched by the Labor Ministry.

BRITISH LABOR AND PROPERTY CONSCRIPTED

By HUGH WAGNON

MAY 23 1940

London, May 22 (AP).—Great Britain, achieving through the methods of democracy the result of virtual dictatorship, tonight placed all her men and everything they own at the command of Prime Minister Winston Churchill in the war with Hitler's legions.

Proud of the democratic machinery which could elevate the Prime Minister to a pinnacle of power as high as Hitler's and yet retain the right to take it back, Parliament rushed into law a far-reaching act enabling the Government to conscript all labor and property.

The Commons pushed the bill through within two hours without a record vote. The King signed it a few minutes later.

Within two hours and 45 minutes the whole job of completing the transition from democracy to virtual dictatorship was completed.

First steps in this momentous transition were taken on Aug. 24 last year when the King was empowered to issue decrees with the effect of law.

Today, Orders in Council, prepared even before the parliamentary process was under way, gave immediate effect to laws setting up controls under ministers covering labor, banking, agriculture, transport, mining, war industries and export trade.

War material and export industries will be given absolute priority and labor will be drafted as required in the more essential industries. Deputy Labor Leader Arthur Greenwood, finest orator in the Commons who is a Minister without portfolio and head of the Productions Council, summoned the Munitions Board immediately.

Controls "Rich and Poor."

The first powers to be enacted under the sweeping Enabling Act, the House was told, would be:

1—Complete government control of persons and property—"not just some persons or some particular class, but all persons, rich or poor, men or women."

2—The Minister of Labor may "direct any person to perform any service required."

3—The Minister of Labor "will be able to prescribe terms of remuneration, hours of labor, and conditions of service."

4—"There will be power to inspect premises and require employers to produce their books. The object is to mobilize the effective resources of the nation for whatever task may come upon us."

5—"Some establishments may be controlled altogether right away; others may be controlled later. They will, in effect, be working on Government account with wages and profits under Government control."

6—Munitions will be controlled immediately.

7—Excess profits tax is at the rate of 100 per cent.

Excess profit, according to a special cable to The News, will be any increased yield above the normal profits of any business averaged over the four years preceding the war.

8—"Other establishments may be ordered to carry on" even at a loss, in which event "they must have adequate remuneration."

9—"There may be cases where firms will have to close down and there may perhaps be destruction of property here and there," with remuneration to be determined.

Churchill's power is greater than Oliver Cromwell's and hardly less absolute than Hitler's. Introduced by bald-headed Major Clement B. Attlee, Churchill's lieutenant in the House, who has defied doctors' to remain at his Commons post, the amendment extends for two years and enlarges powers given the King Aug. 24, 1939.

Attlee assured the Commons that if parliament could not meet because of a German invasion, or some other reason, the Cabinet could govern, unhampered by lack of legislation.

Everything, he emphasized, has been done to subordinate all to victory.

"It must be clear to all," he concluded "that the next few weeks are critical. Our ruthless enemy, restrained by no considerations of international law, justice or humanity, is throwing everything into the scale to force a decision. We are resolved he shall not succeed."

The powerful Amalgamated Engineers Union, swiftly responding to the call, agreed to temporary relaxation of its rules to permit extended employment of women in the engineering industry.

Planes Bomb German Lines.

LONDON, May 22 (A. P.).—The Air Ministry announced tonight that large scale bombing attacks were made on the German main line of communications connecting Namur, Dinant and Gaadmont last night.

MAY 23 1940

Other large formations of British bombers scored many direct hits on bridges, railway junctions and rolling stock in Rhenish Prussia, the ministry said.

Stavanger airdrome, in Norway, also was bombed.

Thirteen British bombers were lost or missing after Tuesday's day and night operations, but the Air Ministry said that at least twenty-four German planes were destroyed or badly damaged by its fighters.

Reasons for Hoping.

British hopes of stemming the German march to the sea and the vital channel ports rose today with reports of new air force success and the slowing down of the intensive German mechanized drive.

The nation was cheered by these reported developments:

The French recapture of Arras.

A widespread attack on targets in the industrial Rhineland area by British bombers.

The reported lessening of the force of the German thrust over soggy fields in northern France.

The arrival of a new contingent of Canadians in England.

The high morale of the British Air Force was indicated in an Air Ministry report that one British pilot had attacked twenty German bombers, damaged two and escaped.

B. E. F. Fights Desperately in Flanders.

Meanwhile the pocketed Allied forces in Flanders and northern France were fighting desperately to keep Germany's legions from winning their way to the Channel for a direct attack on the British Isles.

Some commentators thought that the High Command had decided to fight from this admittedly dangerous position at all costs.

There was nothing to indicate that the British Expeditionary Force, pocketed between the English Channel and the swiftly moving Nazi columns, would elect to undertake a strategic withdrawal.

General Headquarters omitted its customary communique on operations early today.

The Air Ministry announced today: "Dense traffic moving over the enemy communication system again was heavily attacked throughout last night." Large British bomber forces did the work.

"Objectives included railway junctions and yards and bridges over a wide area of Germany radiating eastward from Aachen," the announcement said.

"Similar targets in the immediate rear of the battle area also were heavily bombed, notably roads and bridges over the Meuse in the region of Namur."

Recovering From Black Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the British people, shaken by the "Black Tuesday" news which told of the Germans driving to the estuary of the Somme to form a wedge between the British forces and the main French armies, snapped out of their first shock today. Leaders and the press alike declared that the people were prepared to absorb even worse shocks.

In sizing up the situation, commentators decided that it was not so bad as first appeared, stating that the German advance mechanized columns which pushed westward through France into Amiens, Arras and Abbeville held their positions only lightly. These forces were said to be highly vulnerable to counter-attack.

Even if the Germans should consolidate their positions along the English Channel, British observers said, the Allied main armies still remain intact and the British Navy and air force still pack plenty of punch.

Show Confidence in Weygand.

The military comentator of the London Daily Herald in discussing the chances of success of a German invasion of the British Isles, remarked:

"There have been continental conquerors in the past, but in some strange, indefinable way their magic touch has seemed to cease at the seashore."

The British expressed confidence that Generalissimo Weygand, the new supreme command of the Allied land forces, could be counted upon to take advantage of the first opportunity to deal a blow at the Germans' elongated left flank.

The German successes, however, shook any remaining traces of apathy in this island, which once found much comfort in its channel defenses. Both employers and labor expressed themselves as ready to accept any sacrifices demanded by the Government.

Look to U. S. for Aid.

To remedy the weakest spot in Britain's defense—a lack of fighting and bombing planes—the hustling publisher, Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, appealed to aircraft workers to operate on a seven-day schedule, with shifts around the clock.

His newspaper, the London Daily Express, declared: "The tenacity of our race will be our salvation. For if we can hold on and hold out for the next few weeks and months, ours is the assurance of final victory."

Newspapers also pointed to supplies from the United States as a valuable asset for the Allies.

The London News Chronicle commented: "The great nation of the United States is awakening from its isolation, and help in ever-increasing strength will soon be on its way across the ocean."

Share Western Front Feeling.

German bombs fell on British soil during the night, but there were no casualties reported. A communique indicated that the raiding planes were unloading bombs without aiming at any target when they were beaten back by anti-aircraft fire.

The planes dropped explosives off shore and on land at two places along the southeast coast. Some bombs fell on a village, shattering window panes and awakening inhabitants, but causing no casualties.

One inhabitant related: "The bombs were all dropped within about a minute and a half. I was awakened by terrific explosions and saw searchlights across the sky. Window panes were shattered in the village, but I don't think there has been much damage to property. We feel as though we are on the western front now."

Further air activity along the southeast coast indicated that attacks were being made on shipping. Anti-aircraft fire was heard along the Thames estuary but no alarms were sounded.

The Ministry of Home Security ordered every one to sign his name and address on his identity card and to be ready to show it if called upon at any time. Cards have previously carried simply the name and registration number of the holder.

British Bring Down Own Phantom Bomber

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 22—British anti-aircraft gunners on the east coast last night brought down a "phantom bomber"—a Royal Air Force Hampden, flying empty after its crew and pilot had taken to parachutes.

German gunners had crippled the plane, the Air Ministry said today, and the crew, except for the pilot, bailed out over Germany.

"Single-handed, the pilot nursed his aircraft across the North Sea, fighting every minute of the long journey to maintain height," the account related.

MAY 23 1940

"As he crossed the British coast he was picked up by an anti-aircraft searchlight. He was all in and his aircraft was in no condition to make a safe landing.

Opens Door, Steps Out

"He said, 'Well, thank God, that's England anyway!' and opened the door of his plane and stepped out.

"At that moment anti-aircraft gunners, receiving no recognition signals, opened fire.

"As the pilot floated down in his parachute he thought of 'parashooters'"—a newly esablished civilian force to combat the possible invasion of German parachute troops—"who might be waiting beneath.

"But his luck held. He landed safely and was able to establish his identity."

Nazis Brace Line For Counterattack

MAY 23 1940

By PRESTON GROVER.

Berlin, May 22 (AP).—Groping for the narrow Straits of Dover, short-cut to England, the German armies of Flanders tonight poured men and guns into the battle zone they have cut into France, arming for "the kill" but wary of counterattack.

From several sources came evidence that Germany, in hardening its hold on northern France and the "sack" in which it is trying to hold up to 1,000,000 Allied troops, is also being bolstered against a heavy thrust from the armies now under Gen. Maxime Weygand.

An Allied drive from the south appeared to have started tonight when a French tank thrust was made in the vicinity of Laon. The Germans said it was beaten off, that 10 French tanks were set afire and that 24 surrendered.

At several points farther north, too, the Allied forces which the Germans claim to have trapped also put up stiff battle.

"It may be that our present movements will come to a temporary halt," said Gen. Walther von Reichenau, high commander in the field. "Weygand has ordered every one to stand his ground. That may mean hard fights ahead."

Today the German watchword, by land and air, was "destroy." The major task was to crush whatever French, British and Belgian divisions are in the "sack" of the German advance in Flanders and Picardy; to smash all attempts to break out of the circle; to create chaos amidst reinforcements.

Germans saw in the picture another Cannae, where Hannibal jammed the Romans into a center of encirclement so tightly that they could not even use their weapons in defense. The Nazis did the same thing in Poland—and took 170,000 prisoners of the main Polish army.

Above and around the sack, the German air force performed its correlated work of death today, from the Channel ports almost to the gates of Paris.

Strike Toward Boulogne.

Meanwhile two hooked prongs of the German wedge struck northwest toward the French seaport of Boulogne, on the shoulder of the English Channel, on a line from St. Pol to Montreuil, and, again, southward toward Paris.

The Channel at its narrowest point, in the Dover Straits, is but 22 miles wide. On the other side are the chalk cliffs of England and there, the German press dinned today, the death knell of Britain and her empire will be rung.

Germans said the arm which has struck toward Boulogne, brushing past Abbeville, is 30 miles thick.

On the south, the German blitz columns snaked around or through Soissons, World War battleground some 56 miles north of Paris. Ahead went the bombers, leaving in flames the railway stations at Compiegne and Creil, 40 and 25 miles from the French capital.

On the northwest bombs pounded down again on the quays and shingled beaches of Boulogne, Dieppe, Dunkirk, Ostend—to burn out the British escape toward home by sea.

Advices from the Flanders command of the German army told how its front is being fortified with German reserves of artillery and aircraft of all kinds, and how the fighting men of the Reich are pouring into the lines.

Three lanes deep, they are marching down the highways.

Von Reichenau's right wing was poised to swing in a ponderous sweep on the Channel ports from above.

To German generals pressing from north, east and south, while the air force harries shipping daily along the Channel coast, the closing up of the sack means not only the chance to destroy a million men but also the capture of large supply bases, millions of dollars worth of food and equipment, shells and vitally-needed oil stores.

But the High Command, even today, conceded that the Allies were resisting fiercely.

The French struck a second time in the Valenciennes region—the Germans said they were trying to break out of the German sack.

British tank units hit hard at Arras. But, the Germans said, their grip held fast.

Claim Victory at Arras.

Of the Arras battle (the French said the Allies had recaptured the town), this story was told by DNB, official news agency:

"Under the fierce fire of German weapons on the ground and the destructive attacks of dive bombers, the desperate attempt of the English to break out of encirclement at Arras suffered defeat.

"The greater part of the English tanks were destroyed or burned out under the effects of the German fire and were left standing on the battlefield while the rest of the force retreated."

The day saw German sea activity, too.

Evidently based in the ports of Holland, speedboats were declared to have sunk an auxiliary cruiser while the continuation of air attack on the Channel resulted in the destruction, the High Command said, of a cruiser and eleven merchant and transport ships.

In Norway, the Germans plugged slowly northward to the point where more effective relief can be extended to their beleaguered garrison in Arctic Narvik.

Nazis Rush To Gap In Channel Defense

London, May 22 (AP)—The Germans are using big seaplanes to land parachute troops in the region of Narvik, Norwegian Arctic port besieged by the Allies, Reuters (British news agency) reported from Stockholm today.

[By the Associated Press]

MAY 23 1940

Berlin, May 22—Germany's advancing legions spread northwestward through a gap in the Allied defenses today in the direction of the narrowest neck of the English Channel, while Nazi airmen bombed the ports where British forces might embark.

Another German force swelled out its "bulge" into northern France at the same time, informed circles said, with a swift southwestward drive toward Paris, which may have passed through or around Soissons, World War battlefield only about fifty-six miles northeast of the capital.

MAY 23 1940

Temporary Halt Possible

"It may be that our present movements will come to a temporary halt," Gen. Walter von Reichenau, German commander in the field, acknowledged. "Weygand has ordered every man to stand his ground. That may mean hard fights ahead."

Holding between 500,000 to 1,000,000 Allied troops in what they call a huge sack in Northern France and Belgium, the main German forces now are making their major job the systematic destruction of these divisions.

The Nazi drive toward the Channel was pointed toward St. Pol and Montreuil-Mer, a line toward the Straits of Dover, where only twenty-two miles of water separate the British Isles from France.

Ahead of it roared German warplanes, the high command reported, bombing the water fronts of Ostend, Dunkirk, Boulogne and Dieppe—the chief ports behind imperiled British forces fighting with their backs to the coast.

Montreuil is twenty-five miles north of Abbeville and about ten miles from the English Channel. St. Pol is twenty-five miles northeast of Abbeville, the town at the mouth of the Somme river, twelve miles from the Channel, which German units reached yesterday.

Indications of a battle north of Abbeville pointed to the possibility today that the German spearhead thrust had reached a second point close by the English Channel.

It was thought here that the battle probably was taking place somewhere near Boulogne, northern French port, only thirty miles across the Straits of Dover from the coast of England.

(German sources yesterday indicated 1,550,000 Allied soldiers have been pocketed by the swift-flying Nazi legions, and authoritative quarters indicated that the Germans would deal with these forces before undertaking the next move—presumably direct action against England.

Communique Reports Resistance

Today's high command communique said:

"In Flanders the enemy covering the retreat on the Scheldt river still offers strong resistance. At Valenciennes the attack is under way, coupled with hard fighting against French forces concentrated in this region. Attempts of the opponents to force their way out southward near Artois via Arras have been repelled. (The French high command today announced that Arras had been recaptured.)

"At Arras, Junkers dive-bombers contributed considerably to frustrating an English tank attack.

"During the fighting concluded May 19 in Zeeland (Holland) 16,000 French and 13,000 Dutch troops were captured by a smaller force of Germans.

"The modernized strong forts of Neufchateau which are part of the Liege fortifications have fallen.

"Twelve officers and 500 men fell into our hands.

Claims Success For Air Force

"On May 22 the German air force, with great success, chiefly operated to disturb the enemy retreat. Several heavily used airports were raided with bombs, and runways, hangars, equipment and airplanes on the ground were destroyed.

"The stations of Compiegne and Creil are burning.

"In and outside Belgian and French ports, one cruiser, merchant and transport ships were destroyed and a number of other ships were damaged." Speedboats of the German Navy during this undertaking against French Channel ports sank one enemy auxiliary cruiser.

"Losses of the enemy amounted yesterday to 120 airplanes, of which thirty-five were bagged in air fights, fourteen shot down by anti-aircraft guns and the rest were destroyed on the ground. Ten German planes are missing.

"In the course of the night of May 21-22, enemy airplanes aimlessly dropped bombs in western Germany, which fell mostly upon open fields. Military objectives were not hit.

"Two enemy planes were shot down by anti-aircraft defenses."

MAY 23 1940

Nazi Press Jubilant

A jubilant Nazi press played upon the theme that the Germans had carried the Blitzkrieg to England's door yesterday by driving advance columns past Arras and Amiens to Abbeville.

But prior to any direct action against England, authoritative spokesmen said, the Germans must first close the deep sack they have created with the Belgian towns of Charleroi and Mons and the French town of Maubeuge at the bottom and opening westward toward the Channel.

Bombers Getting Assignment

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt said: "The next few days will decide the fate of the Allied armies trapped in the region between the Somme and Scheldt rivers and the Channel coast. All that is to be done is to solidify and tighten the ring. The remaining task will be carried out by German bombers."

East and south, the German drive toward Paris was said to have reached the region of Reims, eighty miles east and north of the capital.

This would bring the bulge into the French lines to a new southerly point. Previously the Germans had reached a point twelve miles south of Laon, which is thirty miles northwest of Reims, and had occupied Rethel, twenty-five miles northeast of Reims.

Reims was bombarded heavily by the Germans in September, 1914. Americans contributed heavily to a fund for restoration of the famed Reims Cathedral.

MAY 23 1940

The capture of Amiens was described by Germans today as one of the high points of the German operations. A rail center, Amiens remained of great importance throughout the World War as a communications point.

New Optimism Sweeps France

PARIS, May 22 (A. P.).—A new wave of optimism swept over France today as reports reached the capital that the French had recaptured Arras and chased a strong advance force of Germans out of Abbeville, twelve miles from the English Channel.

MAY 23 1940

The Ministry of Information, rallying Frenchmen from the gloom that followed the terrible setbacks of the last few days, announced also that all the bridges across the Somme had been destroyed and that a strong stand had been taken by French troops to halt any southward push.

The first note of optimism was sounded by Gen. Maxime Weygand, the new Allied commander-in-chief, after a visit to the front, and every hour, as the day wore on, his words to Paul Reynaud, the Premier of France, were repeated over the National Radio System.

"I am full of confidence if each man does his duty with a fierce energy."

With all their pressure concentrated in the direction of the English Channel, the Germans were quiet in two sectors where previously they had attempted mass assaults—the Rethel region on the Aisne River and the Montmedy area on the Maginot Line. They even discontinued the artillery fire they had been pouring into the Montmedy area for three or four days.

Meanwhile, contrary to reports, the French Government still sat in Paris.

In announcing that the French had destroyed all the bridges across the Somme, a military spokesman said that the enemy would have to bring up much heavier forces than they seem to have at present if they intend to cross that stream, which is roughly seventy miles north of Paris.

It was the failure of the French to destroy the River Meuse bridges, Premier Reynaud said yesterday, that permitted the Germans to advance so rapidly into France.

The perfect weather which had favored Hitler's Polish campaign and the blitzkrieg which he hurled against the Lowlands twelve days ago was broken by heavy rains last night. The skies were clear again today, although fields and roads over which the heavy tanks and armored cars had to move were soggy.

That break in the weather gave a slight rise to the French optimism, even though tempered by the belief that the Germans may be consolidating their forces for a new and more furious lunge.

New Lines Formed.

As the Germans pushed their double-pronged fighting warfare westward toward the vital Channel ports, the French established a new front along the Somme and Aisne rivers, 200 miles across northern France. With this defense system firmly established, the Allies began their counter-attack to relieve the Allied troops from pressure of the German push. Their first success, announced in a brief communique, was the recapture of Arras. Shortly afterward the Ministry of Information announced the taking of Abbeville.

Chased Out of Town.

The communique telling of the capture of Arras said merely:

"Enemy pressure continued in the direction of the coast, taking the form of raids carried out by small motorized detachments. Arras is now in our hands."

The taking of Abbeville, where German motorcyclists and French had fought doggedly for possession of the railroad station, was announced by the Ministry of Information. A spokesman there said grimly that the Germans had been "chased out" of the town.

Fighting was also going on in the region of Neufchatel-sur-aisne, ten miles directly north of Reims, the Ministry of Information said. Details here were lacking.

Abbeville First Attacked Today.

Premier Reynaud, after his gloomy speech of yesterday, declared today that if France can hold out for one month she will be "three-quarters of the way to victory." And France will hold out, he added.

The Germans asserted yesterday that they had seized Abbeville, Arras and Amiens in their drive to control the important English Channel ports. The French admitted the loss of Arras and Amiens but denied Nazi claims to Abbeville, while conceding that German motorcycle troops were in the Abbeville area. It was not until today that these troops attacked the railway station at Abbeville, twelve miles from the channel, on the Somme estuary.

According to a French military report, one railway employee who tried to swim the Somme, was drowned after being wounded by Nazi machine gun bullets. The victim had just dispatched the last train from Abbeville, the report said, when a German motorcycle trooper rushed into the switching office.

The employee, who was with the Surete National inspector, subdued the German. A few minutes later, other Nazis broke into the office. Two Frenchmen escaped in back of the station, and, running to the Somme, which widens near Abbeville, both plunged into the water.

The Nazis hurriedly set up a machine gun on the river bank and raked the water with bullets, hitting the one Frenchman. The inspector reached the opposite bank and gave the alarm.

Part of the Nazi war technic is to send these motorcyles in swiftly moving fleets far in advance of the tanks, confusing the fighting as they go forward to try to seize strategic points in towns and villages.

They were apparently far ahead of the tanks and infantry today, for a French military spokesman said that neither the French holding the Somme line, nor the British in the northwestern corner of France and in Belgium, had come in contact with the main body of German troops.

The heaviest fighting today was in a fire-scarred triangle north of the Somme, from Amiens to Arras to Abbeville, where German parachutists descended yesterday with blazing torches, and thence eastward to the Cambrai region.

On the Lorraine front the French reported the shelling of three towns in German territory in retaliation for the German shelling of three towns behind the French lines. The names of the towns were not disclosed.

MAY 23 1940

Situation Still Confused.

Arras, which was occupied by motorized German units yesterday, and recaptured by the French today, is roughly sixty miles from the vital Channel port of Calais, the gateway to England.

Amiens, thirty-five miles southeast of Arras and about fifty miles from the Channel, was apparently still in German hands.

Expanding on the recapture of Arras, a War Ministry spokesman said that the German troops which had entered the town consisted only of motorcycle detachments. These, he continued, were dislodged from the station and several other points where they had gained a foothold South of Arras (here seven words were censored) the battle situation remained "very confused."

The announcement of the recapture of Arras heartened the civilian population of Paris, many of whom were already streaming out of the capital to seek safety in the south of France.

Say Nazi Forces Are Still Light.

It was still unknown here how many German troops actually participated in the break-through toward the coast yesterday, although a War Ministry spokesman said that "light elements" of from 3,000 to 4,000 Nazis had participated in the capture of Arras and Amiens.

The confusion in the battle zone he attributed to the fact that Allied and German troops were mingling, as a result of the break-through, in a general melee.

The French declared that they still were holding Cambrai, approximately forty-five miles northeast of Amiens and twenty miles east of Arras.

Fighting was reported in many other sectors far behind the advance positions to which the fast-moving German mechanized columns penetrated yesterday.

The immediate task facing Generalissimo Weygand was to close the breach in the Allied lines through which the Germans were able to sweep westward along the Somme valley, and to close it before the Nazis can rush sufficient re-enforcements through the hole to consolidate their new positions.

The situation was complicated by the speed with which the armored German units fanned out in all directions after their break-through, striking at unexpected places, putting the torch to towns and desolating the countryside.

The Germans were said to be dropping parachute troops and German bombing planes kept up a continual, harassing attack, smashing at Allied lines of communication and troop concentrations.

Say Refugees Were Bombed.

The French declared that the German planes attacked many non-military objectives, bombing defenseless hamlets and strafing refugees on the open highways.

Despite the admitted gravity of the situation, there was no indication of official lack of faith in Generalissimo Weygand's ability to save the nation.

The British Expeditionary Force was said to be bearing the brunt of the fighting in the coastal sector, fighting with rifles and machine guns against the power of Nazi mechanized forces in a last-ditch stand to keep them from gaining a foothold on the Channel.

The fate of Gen. Giraud, commander of the Meuse River sector, who was reported by the Germans yesterday to have been captured, remained uncertain here today. A War Ministry spokesman said he could neither confirm nor deny the report, but it was understood that some members of Gen. Giraud's staff had been taken prisoner.

Reynaud Hopes for Victory If Nation Holds Out a Month

And Asserts Confidently France Will Hold —Weygand Promises Him Victory if Every One Does Duty.

MAY 23 1940

PARIS, May 22 (A. P.).—Premier Reynaud said today that if France can hold out for one month against the relentless pressure of the German Army she will be three-quarters of the way to victory.

"And France will hold for whatever time is necessary!" he predicted, expressing confidence in the nation's men at arms and their new commander, Gen. Maxime Weygand.

The Premier told reporters that he had just seen Weygand and said the new Allied Generalissimo was full of confidence of ultimate victory if each man does his duty.

M. Reynaud cautioned France's civilian population not to become demoralized by the raids of German motorized units, whose audacity, he said, can cost them dear.

The Premier said that the population must remain at its labors if victory is to be achieved.

"Diminution of production is a weakening of the fatherland," he said. "Orders in this sense have been given to the civil and military authorities."

Text of Statement.

The text of his statement follows:

"I have just seen Gen. Weygand, who has come back from the front. The Generalissimo told me: 'I am full of confidence, if every one does his duty with fierce energy.'

"The civil population must not let themselves be panicked by the raids of German motorized troops similar to the cavalry raids of previous times, whose audacity can cost them dearly.

"They must stay at home and at work.

"Any decrease in production is a weakening of the fatherland. Orders have been given in this sense to civil and military authorities.

"I repeat to you that if we hold for one month—and we will hold for whatever time is necessary—we will have traveled three-fourths of the road to victory."

Even the Rumors Better, French Spokesman Says

Paris Finds They Are a Basis for Optimism

PARIS, May 22 (AP).—French spirits rose with new Allied successes today, and a military spokesman declared: "Even the rumors are better today."

He referred particularly to rumors, not immediately confirmed, that Amiens and Sedan had been retaken by the Allies.

TWIN GERMAN DRIVE CHECKED, ALLIES ASSERT

"Our Troops Holding At All Points," Says Paris War Ministry

MAY 23 1940

Churchill Confers With Reynaud And Weygand. French Hopes Rise

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 22—A new 200-mile Allied front along the Somme and Aisne rivers checked at least for the time being tonight the twin German drive on the English Channel and Paris.

The night communique of the French high command reported no fresh developments, except that the battle continued in northern France and Belgium, but the War Ministry spokesman declared:

"Our troops are holding the German push at all points."

Arras And Abbeville Retaken

Against the masses of Allied infantry spread west across the river valleys and north along the coastal plain, the Germans were reported to have sent ahead only light scouting forces during the day. Allied counter-attacks against the German advance guards accounted for retaking of control in Arras and Abbeville.

Although some German scouts were acknowledged to have driven deep into the French lines, the War Ministry spokesman said the main combat remained along the Somme and Aisne rivers and the Escaut (Scheldt), running north into Belgium.

Much of the great battleground was soggy from yesterday's rain and mechanized troops were meeting difficulties.

French Spirits Rise

French spirits rose with new Allied successes and a military spokesman declared:

"Even the rumors are better today."

He referred particularly to rumors—not immediately confirmed — that Amiens and Sedan had been retaken. Already the recapture of strategic Arras and of Abbeville, the westernmost point reached by the Germans, had been officially announced.

The spokesman remarked informally that there had been "hardly any change" along the front in forty-eight hours, but said that Gen. Maxime Weygand, the Allied commander in chief, was "really satisfied."

He added that there had been heavy fighting, with results unknown, during the day between Valenciennes and Cambrai (an area at some points as near as seventy-five miles to the English Channel).

Exploring Parties Rounded Up

Germans continued to send out exploring parties in motorcycles and whippet tanks, some of them crossing the Somme in their movement toward the sea, the spokesman said. But, he remarked, they were quickly rounded up and there was no mass passage over the river.

Some German scouting parties also were said to have progressed west of Arras toward the Channel.

While new hope stirred the French public that the German drive to the Channel and to Paris would be halted ahead of disaster, Winston Churchill, the British Prime Minister, conferred here during the day with Premier Paul Reynaud and General Weygand.

Their talk was not discussed in detail, but many naturally believed that when two forces like Weygand and Churchill met some sort of bold counter-stroke might be expected.

Premier Reynaud, after conferring with Prime Minister Churchill, received United States Ambassador William Bullitt.

Weygand "Full Of Confidence"

Hourly over the national radio was repeated this message from General Weygand, the Allied commander in chief:

"I am full of confidence if each man does his duty with a fierce energy!"

In an effort to present proof that the German drive in northern France had not cut communications between the French army and the Allied forces operating in Belgium, the Ministry of Information declared that Weygand had conferred with the chiefs of the Franco-Belgian commands in the north.

The Somme-Aisne line gave the Allies their first firm positions since the Germans broke through the Meuse front on France's northern frontier last week and took from the rear the fortifications lining the Belgian border.

The line, running from west to east through Amiens, Laon and Rethel roughly seventy-five miles north of Paris, was designed primarily to prevent any new German drive deeper into France.

Line Backs Up British In North

It backed up the British forces who are fighting in the coastal sector of the north of the line in an effort to keep a path open for the Allied units coming back from Belgium and to prevent the Germans from installing their aviation on the English Channel.

The bulk of the German forces were reported in the Cambrai sector seventy-five miles from the Channel, in their thrust west, and in the Neufchatel sector just above the Aisne in their push south.

French military dispatches acknowledged that Rethel was occupied by the Germans, but said they had been unable to cross the Aisne at Rethel or any other point.

Declared In No Way Desperate

This report was published by the semi-official Telefrance Agency, along with a vigorous denial of Italian reports that the Germans already had reached the Channel and cut off the Allied armies in Belgium.

"The situation can in no way be considered desperate," the agency said.

Reporting that the Germans had only 5,000 men at Amiens, Telefrance added: "The weakness of these effectives constituted the risk of the operation, a risk which becomes all the greater now that our armies are completely in place on the positions chosen after the break in the line from Namur to Sedan."

Bridges Of Somme Destroyed

Among the day's declarations by the Ministry of Information was that the bridges of the Somme had been destroyed to bar a further German thrust to the south.

Thus, said a military spokesman, to cross the river the Germans would need to bring up much heavier forces than now seemed at hand. The Germans were described flatly as having been "chased out" of Abbeville, which is but twelve miles from the English Channel.

Of Arras—where twenty-three years ago 132,000 Britons fell before the city was taken on May 5, 1917—a communique said:

"Enemy pressure continued in the direction of the coast, taking the form of raids carried out by small motorized detachments. Arras is now in our hands."

Reynaud Appeals For Morale

French morale was the concern not only of General Weygand but of Premier Reynaud.

If France could but hold out for one more month, he told the people, she would be "three-quarters of the way to victory."

"And," he added, "France will hold for whatever time is necessary.

"The civil population must not let themselves be panicked by the raids of German motorized troops similar to the cavalry raids of previous times, and whose audacity can cost them dearly.

Must Stay At Home And Work

"They must stay at home at work.

"Any decrease in production is a weakening of the fatherland. Orders have been given in this sense to civil and military authorities."

During the day three towns behind the German front—names withheld—were bombarded; in retaliation, the French said, for the bombardment of three towns behind the French front.

German War Hospital Set Up Near Swiss Border

Basel, Switzerland, Thursday, May 23 (AP)—A hospital for German wounded has been established at Konstanz on a German bridgehead on the south side of the Rhine, a circumstance which observers construed as a strong indication the Germans have no intention of invading Switzerland.

This development occurred as German legation spokesmen at Bern gave assurances no invasion is intended.

Filled With Wounded

The hospital, within sight of Swiss territory, was filled with wounded from the western offensive.

A further reassurance to the Swiss was the evident haste of both sides to concentrate tremendous forces of armament and equipment into the one mighty battle now raging in northern France and Belgium.

On both the German and French sides frontier villages which were packed with troops four days ago now are almost deserted.

French bombers, which were flown to Morocco and relieved by British planes after the retreat from Norway, winged back across the Mediterranean and to the Western front.

German battle formations south of Vienna for a possible Balkan drive also were reported being rushed to the western scene of action.

RAF Bombs Aachen Rail Center

U. S. Newsmen Under Fire—No War Objective Hit—One Person Killed

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

AACHEN, Germany, May 22 (AP).—Three British bombing planes attacked this rail center at the juncture of the Belgian, German and Netherlands frontiers early today but failed to hit any military objectives.

There were no immediate reports of civilian casualties.

[One person was killed, the United Press reported, saying the British bombers attacked in successive waves.]

The big planes managed to dive again and again as they dodged the beams of anti-aircraft searchlights and the bombs they loosed dug big holes in the streets.

No damage was done to the railway station.

In an hotel across from the station two other American newspaper correspondents and I were lodged as the bombs were loosed.

We had come here about 1 a. m., tired, bedraggled and dirty from the German front. We were ready to drop into bed when suddenly an air raid alarm was sounded.

The three bombers flew low over the city and were soon caught by the searchlights. For half an hour or so anti-aircraft guns picked away lustily at the invaders. Then the British disappeared.

The sections bombed were immediately roped off and families were removed from all houses near the places where bombs had dropped.

U.S. Reporter Finds Nazis at Channel

U-boats and Speedboats Now Ready to Act, He Reveals

By Louis P. Lochner

WITH THE GERMAN ARMIES ON THE WESTERN FRONT, May 23 (Thursday) (AP).—I have reached the English Channel to find German forces here with the Nazi Swastika flying.

MAY 23 1940

It seems almost unbelieveable that I should find Germany at this Channel.

But the Nazi Swastika waving from the local commander's headquarters leaves no doubt about it.

Crews of U-boats and speedboats are champing to be sent on their errands of destruction.

NAZIS SAY ALLIES USE CIVILIANS AS SCREENS

Fighting From Red Cross Vehicles Also Charged in Berlin

MAY 23 1940

BERLIN, May 22 (AP).—The German High Command accused British and French troops today of using Belgian civilians as shields and charged that other violations of international law were practiced by the Allies. The accusations were made in the presence of German and foreign press representatives. Officers and soldiers were presented as witnesses.

The German command charged that repeating military columns in Belgium were interspersed with civilians in such a way that German airment were forced to halt their firing, in accordance with orders, and suffered losses thereby.

[The Netherland High Command earlier had charged that German troops used Netherland citizens as shields against the Allies.]

Both mobile and stationary Red Cross equipment likewise has been used by the Allies for combat purposes, the Germans charged. This usage, it was contended, included operation of Red Cross vehicles as screens for armored cars.

Watches From the Heights as Batice Gives In to the Nazis.

YPRES MAY SEE BIG FIGHT

Commander Says German Army Knows It Hasn't Yet Met Main Allied Force.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

WITH THE GERMAN ARMIES ON THE WESTERN FRONT, May 22 (A. P.).—A gigantic fort capitulated under our eyes today as we stood on heights between Eupen and Malmedy with a superb commanding view of the whole region.

It later proved to be Batice, last of the great major fortification works around Liege, Belgium.

Artillery, followed by bomb-diving warplanes, made it easy for the infantry to force its entry.

Stukas began their attacks at 3 P. M. and we saw the Nazi swastikas raised atop the main fortification twenty minutes later.

Awaits Hitler's Order.

Meanwhile Col.-Gen. Walther von Reichenau waited in a peaceful old castle today for a telephone call from Adolf Hitler which would send the powerful right wing of the German Army westward against a half million Allied troops in Flanders.

The object would be to drive back toward the English Channel the forces which block a direct Nazi attack on England.

Expressing confidence in the outcome, Gen. von Reichenau, while he waited, checked through his General Staff plan once more.

The west Flanders town of Ypres, which the British Tommy of the first world war called "Wipers," appeared to be one of those to be struck when the newly accumulated fury of the German mechanized forces is released.

Hitler's plan for encirclement of Paris presupposes this strong right wing movement in the southern sweep, and to Gen. von Reichenau was intrusted the job of seeing it through.

30.24-2431

30.24-2431

Against Encircled Troops.

Gen. von Reichenau's challenge will be to the English, French and Belgian troops caught in the German pincer between Abbeville, at the mouth of the Somme, in France, and Antwerp, the big Belgian seaport.

Ypres lies just about half way between these two points, about twenty-five miles in from the English Channel and about eight miles above the French border not far from the industrial city of Lille.

The Germans are aware that they have not yet made contact with the main Allied force, as Gen. von Reichenau disclosed to American newspaper correspondents yesterday.

"Every German soldier knows why he's fighting," Gen. von Reichenau told the correspondents during our call on him. "It is 'to be or not to be' for Germany.

"I have talked to many English and French prisoners in their own language. They do not really know what it is all about. Our men have supreme confidence in our military leadership. Others don't in theirs.

"There can be no doubt of the outcome.

"Have you looked at the faces at the end of days of enormous marches hitherto considered impossible? Have you seen them sullen or grouchy?"

Cites Careful Preparations.

I could not but admit that the good humor of the sunburned young men whom we passed every evening on our way back from the operations area to our little hotel was something that baffled me.

Gen. von Reichenau continued:

"You see, our soldiers all know that war is not child's play, but hard and grim work. They have no illusions. That has been so drilled into them that an indomitable fighting spirit animates them."

The General said that the German losses have been only one-tenth of those of the enemy taken prisoner. Shortly before our visit official figures had been released to the effect that, exclusive of those in Holland, 110,000 prisoners had been taken. According to Gen von Reichenau, then, Germany has lost only about 11,000 men, exlusive of those in Holland since the offensive began in the west on May 10.

Gen. von Reichenau said that this was the result of more careful preparations by the Germans.

"Our vanguards and scout planes," he said, "go day after day on their heroic errand of learning just where the enemy is, how his formations line up and where the weak points are. Only when we are fully ready do we dash forward.

"Another factor is the excellent advance training of our troops."

Whatever else may be needed for waging war, certainly Germany during the seven years of the Nazi regime has provided men and materials in profusion.

For almost a week now on this right wing of Gen. von Reichmau's huge army every avenue of approach to Flanders has been jammed with marching troops and vehicles. It seemed to me as though Germany, Holland and Belgium must be just about drained of men and that all are concentrated in this little area which I am privileged to visit.

Hitler's Blow At England Appears Carefully Planned

First He Intends To Destroy Naval And Air Defenses, German Officers Tell Lochner

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the German Armies on the Western Front, Thursday, May 23—Only after he has satisfied himself on the effective demolition of naval and air ground organization and warships and transports will Adolf Hitler probably attempt an attack on England herself.

Hitler appears definitely to follow his tried tactics of first destroying all naval and air ground organization, then the enemy's airplanes and naval vessels before aiming a decisive blow with his land forces.

Every German officer to whom I have talked here in the operations area will tell you that.

Intends To Demolish Docks

The continuous bombing of Ostend, Dunkerque, Calais and Dieppe is intended to demolish the docks to which British reinforcements might come for their force in Belgium and northern France, and from which the British and their Allies might escape in event of a rout.

The second phase of this strategic plan is a combined attack by speedboats, submarines and air bombers on British warships and transports.

Only when he is sure of these preparatory steps is the Führer likely to aim directly at England herself.

The men of the German armies with which I have traveled for five days accost us at every opportunity to ask what has happened in the English Channel.

Itching To Get To England

They seem to be itching to get over to England.

Meanwhile, an interim effort is being made; it is the smashing of enough Belgian and French airports to prevent continental Allies from bringing effective air-force aid to England in event of her need.

Until then, German divisions are mopping up what was forgotten in their first rush.

A case in point was the Battice fortress, one of the last of Belgium's big fortifications of the mighty Liege Line, which I saw fall yesterday in a twenty-minute attack by artillery, dive bombers and infantry.

Fall Of Battice Described

From a hilltop between Eupen and Malmedy, near the German frontier, I saw the swastika war flag of Germany raised over the battered fort at Battice, where Belgian defenders capitulated after one of the most gallant fights against hopeless odds in the Belgian campaign.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—Battice, ten miles east of Liege, is one of the closest of the Liege ring of fortifications to the German frontier, twenty miles away. Fall of the other forts has been reported successively since German troops took the first May 11, the second day of fighting in the Low Countries.]

Cut Off For More Than Week

Cut off from the rest of their country for more than a week, and responsible to themselves alone and to their patriotic conscience, the garrison of the fort had held out determinedly.

We had decided to take in another sector of Germany's widening Western front yesterday. There were reports of daily bombings of one of the large fortifications that ring Liege—this one commanding roads to Verviers. We approached opposite Battice and climbed to the heights overlooking the fort shortly before 3 P. M. Below, in the panorama of verdant forests and rolling meadows, was the Spa, headquarters of the last German Emperor who fled to refuge in Holland at the end of the World War.

In the far distance large mounds of coke slack, looking like minature volcanoes, indicated Liege itself.

Little more of the Battice fort was discernable than the top of the fortifications, built on the principal of France's Maginot Line fortifications.

Artillery Fire, Then Silence

Within a few minutes artillery fire gave way suddenly to dead silence—whether because the Belgians at last had exhausted their ammunition we could not determine.

From a dizzying height above suddenly swooped down one dive bomber, then another and another.

There was a deafening roar and the next moment this peaceful scenery was marred with smoke smudges such as puff up from the stacks of great steel plants.

Up Goes The Nazi Swastika

No sooner had one cloud thinned than new bombers screamed down and the terrifying spectacle repeated itself.

When the smoke finally cleared there was complete silence. Through strong glasses we saw German infantry climbing into the main fortification. By 3.20 P. M. the Nazi swastika waved from the fallen fort.

Only smaller works of the adjacent fortification system remain to be taken. Officers with our group expressed the belief these now will capitulate automatically.

Meanwhile, roads leading to the front lines are jammed with troops marching up to strengthen Col. Gen. Walther von Reichenau's mighty right wing. The new arrivals might be dubbed a shawl army. Almost every German soldier, on reaching Holland or Belgium, takes the first opportunity to acquire one of the colorful red or red-and-white polka-dot shawls used in the Lowlands as protection against inclement weather. Even non-commissioned officers had them.

RUMANIA CALLS UP 300,000 RESERVES ON SHORT NOTICE

General Mobilization Is Linked to Fear of Russian Invasion.

BUCHAREST, May 22 (A. P.).—Rumania ordered a virtual general mobilization today, in a move which diplomats believed to be linked with fear in Bucharest that Soviet Russia's big army may soon march into Bessarabia.

The General Staff called 300,000 reservists to the colors within the next twenty-four hours, bringing the army to what the staff called "the highest state of preparedness."

Reports to military headquarters here said that Soviet troop concentrations on Rumania's frontier had been heavily re-enforced within the last few days.

King Carol issued a proclamation at 7 P. M. (1 P. M. New York time), calling on the people "to work strenuously for the nation and to hold steadfastly to their patriotic duty."

At the same time he announced cancellation of the celebrations planned for next month, marking the tenth anniversary of his coming to the throne.

Other Uses for Money.

In the present state of world conditions, King Carol said, it was better for Rumania to spend money on guns to defend her frontiers.

Rich in oil—which is badly needed for modern mechanized warfare—Rumania has long been worried over the possibility of a German invasion if the war should spread to southeastern Europe.

All leaves were canceled immediately by the new order, the officers and men being instructed to report back to their units before noon tomorrow.

The order caused great excitement in Bucharest. It will swell the ranks of the army, navy and air force to more than 2,000,000 men in active service—virtually a general mobilization.

To Frontiers at Once.

The only exceptions made were for men working on fortifications or strategic military highways and railways.

Normal train service was ordered reduced immediately so that the railways may carry the reservists to the frontiers.

Calls to the colors in Rumania are made according to colored mobilization cards held by the Reservists. Yellow and red cards were specified in the new order. Nearly all other colors had been summoned since the European war began last September.

Heavy guards which have been posted at the oil fields, railway centers and coastal ports for many months were increased in strength today.

How Italy Aided Nazis.

ROME, May 22 (A. P.).—Italian newspapers pointed out today, on the first anniversary of the Rome-Berlin military pact, that the alliance had served to hold British warships in the Mediterranean and French Army divisions along the Italian frontier while the Nazis were striking at the western Allies.

The papers hinted that Italy had important gains in store as her reward for this aid.

Amid persistent talk of an Italian war move soon, secret activity of Germany and Italy as part of the alliance was indicated in Fascist circles.

The newspaper Il Piccolo, listing known developments under this alliance on its first anniversary, said that "others will be known at a more opportune time."

The German Minister of Communications, Dr. Kleinmann, after meeting with Italian officials at Milan, discussed problems of the Italian-patroled railroad lines running from the Danube through Yugoslavia to Italy. Although a German spokesman said that these talks had nothing to do with relations between Italy and Yugoslavia, they served as one of many indications that the alliance is functioning.

Count Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister, sailed from Brindisi today for an inspection trip in Italian-held Albania, aboard the cruiser Garibaldi, escorted by two destroyers.

He was to arrive tonight at Tirana, Albania's capital.

All the newspapers, unanimously congratulating Italy on the alliance, said it was more solid and more beneficial to both countries than ever.

One paper, exulting over advances of the German army, forecast that Italy would take the Mediterranean island of Malta away from the British.

Il Resto Del Carlino, extremist paper at Bologna, urged the Nazis on against England, saying: "Every bayonet in the back of a fugitive Englishman avenges infamies suffered by humanity."

"Our joy in these days," this paper said, "will be exceeded when we see certain big battleships disappear from our sea and the Italian flag rise victorious on the highest tower of Italian Malta."

The newspapers said that for the aid to Germany, Italians thus far have received mainly assurances of getting German coal; hence the widespread belief that Italy has more important gains yet to be collected.

Rome Incident Is Closed.

LONDON, May 22 (A. P.).—The incident in which British Embassy officials in Rome were molested "has been satisfactorily disposed of between the Italian Minister for foreign Affairs and his Majesty's Ambassador in Rome and is regarded as closed," R. A. Butler, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons today.

It was disclosed on May 12 that Sir Percy Loraine, the British Ambassador to Rome, had asked the Italian Government for an explanation of the assault the day before on members of his staff.

Sir Percy, Mr. Butler indicated, saw the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

British preparedness in the Mediterranean area was emphasized by a transfer scheme put into effect for Gibraltar, the British fortress guarding the western entrance to the Mediterranean. Women and children began to leave for French Morocco under the plan.

An official announcement said that there was "no need for anxiety" over the intentions of Spain, and that Spain had "reiterated her strict neutrality."

Cairo Sees British Planes.

CAIRO, May 22 (A. P.).—Egyptians witnessed a mighty display of air power by British air squadrons over Cairo today.

Wave after wave of Blenheim bombers, fighting ships and reconnaissance planes swept over the capital.

Slovak Police Head Quits.

BRATISLAVA, Slovakia, May 22 (A. P.).—The Magyar-baiting San Mach has resigned from his post as chief of Slovakia's semi-military Hlinka Guards.

It was understood that the Berlin Government—which has a protectorate over Slovakia—advised Mach to quit after the Hungarian Government complained that he was leading anti-Hungarian demonstrations.

RED INVASION IS NOW FEARED BY RUMANIA

Bucharest Orders Virtual Mobilization By Calling 300,000 Reservists

Reich Support Of Plan To Strengthen Bessarabian Frontier Reported

[By the Associated Press]

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, May 22. Yugoslavia and Greece, it was disclosed tonight, have removed their warplanes from military airports lest their air force be destroyed in a sudden outbreak of war as was the Polish air fleet last September.

The two countries are reported to have removed their fighting planes to secret fields amply protected by heavy clumps of trees for camouflage.

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Rumania, May 22—Rumania today called up 300,000 reservists and sent most of them to the Soviet frontier in a virtual general mobilization which reflected fears that the Russian army might move soon on the Rumanian province of Bessarabia.

It was an action which brought this oil-rich kingdom's defenses to what the general staff called "the highest state of preparedness."

Some observers said they saw in it an indication of deterioration of Russia's nine-month-old friendship with Germany. They insisted the Rumanian strengthening of the frontier was carried out with the approval, if not the counsel, of Germany.

Bessarabia was Russian before 1918.

Carol's Proclamation

King Carol followed up his call to the colors with a proclamation demanding that the nation "work strenuously and hold steadfastly to its patriotic duty."

He canceled celebrations scheduled for June 8, commemorating the tenth anniversary of his enthronement, declaring the money would be better spent on guns to defend Rumania's frontiers.

The story behind the reinforcement of the Bessarabian frontier, as told by certain informants here, goes back to the Russo-German agreement made in August, in the last days of an uneasy peace.

Could Have Bessarabia

At that time, they said, the Germans were understood to have told Russia she could have Bessarabia any time.

Successes of the Nazi Blitzkrieg in the West, it was declared, led Russian diplomacy to fear that Germany might renege—might even turn on the Soviet for the fulfillment of Adolph Hitler's dream of a German Ukraine.

Russian diplomats have freely expressed the fear here.

Nazi Troops In Slovakia

Rumanian official quarters point to the large numbers of German troops recently concentrated in Slovakia, expressing belief that they are there to encourage Rumania to resist if Russia moves.

Soviet troop concentrations on the Rumanian border are reported in military quarters to have been heavily reinforced in the last few days.

Rumania's great wealth lies in oil—which is essential to mechanized warfare.

OBSERVES FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF AXIS PACT

Says British Fleet Was Held In Mediterranean Aiding Nazi Invasion

King Vittorio Emanuele Makes Goering His Honorary Cousin

Rome, May 22 (AP)—Telephone communications between Rome and Paris were interrupted this afternoon. Previously those between Rome and London had been broken. There was no immediate explanation.

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 22—Press declarations that Italy's "pact of steel" with Germany had held British warships in the Mediterranean and French soldiers on the Italian frontier while the Nazi war machine smashed through the Low Countries into France highlighted today the celebration of the first anniversary of the Axis military alliance.

It was a celebration held amid mounting indications that Italy might soon enter the war.

King Vittorio Emanuele gave to Marshal Hermann Goering the right to call him cousin—by conferring the highest Italian decoration, the Collar Annunziata on Adolf Hitler's air chief—and the newspapers unanimously felicitated the alliance.

Exults Over Successes

One extremist organ, Il Resto Del Carlino, at Bologna, exulted over German successes, forecast that Italy would take from Britain the Mediterranean island of Malta, and declared: ". . . Every bayonet in the back of a fugitive Englishman avenges infamies suffered by humanity."

By speaking of certain known developments under the alliance and saying that "others will be known at a more opportune time," the newspaper Il Piccolo obliquely suggested that secret activity between the Axis powers already was under way.

An indication of close collaboration was the fact that German Minister of Communications Kleinman discussed with Italian officials the problems of the Italian-patrolled railroad lines running from the Danube through Yugoslavia to Italy.

Prepared For Defense

Many observers were expecting an Italian move in the Mediterranean or the Balkans.

This country was in any case prepared to defend itself on the French frontier behind the new Littorio Line fortifications. These are little known, except that they are built into a rocky ridge of the Alps at an altitude in some places of 8,000 feet.

The line, starting near Genoa and running virtually all the way along the French-German frontier, was built within a year. Defenses against air raids are reported to have been strengthened in the regions around Turin and in industrial centers near the French frontier.

There were rumors—without confirmation—that Premier Mussolini, to whom the world looks for some signal in the European war, might speak next Friday on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of Italy's entrance into the last war.

Ciano Goes To Albania

An Italian move is widely expected—perhaps when and if the Germans attack England directly—but the zone of the action, whether in the Balkans or along the French frontier, is a matter of speculation.

Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister, went to Albania during the day, ostensibly to inspect public works, while further nervousness was reported among the Yugoslavs.

Among the day's press comment was this in Milan's sober Corriere Della Sera:

"Italian non-belligerency has not been contradictory to the terms of the (Axis) pact; it has been an application of them. Now it will have applications of another kind."

King's Brother Escapes Death And Remarks 'Quite a Show'

Bombs Strike Building Where Duke of Gloucester Is Staying in France—No Novelty to Him.

By DREW MIDDLETON.

LONDON, May 22 (A. P.).—The Duke of Gloucester narrowly escaped death in an air raid on a French town on Sunday night. The hotel in which he was staying was hit by two German bombs. A third exploded in the roadway outside. I was a hundred yards away when the bombs exploded, and saw the Duke, unshaken and calm, emerge from the cellar where he had had supper with friends among the cavalry officers.

A short time later he helped get out messages to General Headquarters, working at an improvised desk side by side with a grizzled top sergeant while a burning truck lit the street.

This was the fourth bombing which the soldierly third son of the late King George V has undergone. Once he was wounded in the right hand by a bomb splinter. Now he offers his left hand in greeting. Still "Henry" to old friends, he is popular with all ranks.

The morning after the bombing he told me he was "getting used to it" and he commented:

"The Boche put on quite a show for us, didn't he?"

The Duke is now in London but he expects to join the British Expeditionary Force soon to resume his duties as chief liaison officer between the British and French armies.

SAYS LEOPOLD IS IN BELGIUM

Embassy Denies Story That Government Moved.

WASHINGTON, May 22 (A. P.).—The Belgian embassy said today that it had received information that some departments of the Belgian Government had gone to Le Havre, France, but that King Leopold and most of the Government departments were still in Belgium.

Le Havre was the seat of the Belgian Government from 1914 to 1918.

The embassy said that it had not been instructed to inform the State Department of the move to Le Havre.

In Berlin the radio broadcast a Tokio dispatch saying that it was reported in the Japanese capital that King Leopold and the Belgian Government had taken refuge in Le Havre.

Says Haakon Is In Norway.

LONDON, May 22 (A. P.).—A spokesman for the Norwegian Legation said today that definite assurances had been received that King Haakon, Crown Prince Olav and their Ministers still were in Northern Norway.

A war of passive resistance is going on in German-occupied areas, he said, and added that the Government had no intention of leaving the country.

"Commander-in-Chief Ruge advised me within the last few hours that our army still is carrying on and we are fighting in the Narvik region alongside British, French and Polish troops," the spokesman said.

"Our information is that a war of passive resistance is being carried on in the occupied southern areas.

"Our soldiers are fighting with their Allies, and the civilian population is giving them every assistance possible.

"Not only is our Government functioning in every respect, but the Bank of Norway also is conducting its business. The Norsk Telegram Bureau, the official news agency, is in constant touch with us here.

"The King and the Crown Prince have broadcast from Norway within the last four days."

Threw 'a Kiss' at the Germans

British Scout Tells of Confronting Twelve and Tossing Grenade as Salute.

LONDON, May 22 (A. P.).—A Royal Air Force pilot told today of standing alone in the midst of a burning French town and, for one long moment, confronting the vanguard of German hosts advancing westward toward the sea.

Red eyed and weary from ten days of "hell on land and in the air," the pilot said he had "thrown a kiss at them—a hand grenade—and then escaped with bullets pattering about his feet.

Here's his story:

"In a town that lay directly ahead of their drive to the Channel I was checking to see that nothing had been left behind for Jerry to use. Standing in the street by my car I looked over my shoulder and there they were.

"There were twelve of them walking through the smoke of burning buildings. There were no tanks or armored cars or even planes, although three Junkers 88s had bombed the town to blazes a few minutes before. These fellows walked on steadily out of the smoke into the sunlight.

"I saw their gray uniforms, heavy black boots and flat helmets. They held rifles at their hips like a lot of deer-stalkers.

"There wasn't much that I could do. I couldn't get in my car because it was pointing toward them. I grabbed a grenade off a rack at the wheel and let it fly.

"They hadn't even fired a shot. It got one on the left and bit me in the side of a farm cart and—damned important to me—gave me an exit.

"I legged it up the street to the first turn, dashed down there, climbed through a ruined house and ran across a field beyond.

"Their bullets were knocking the spots out of the ground under my feet and look—one clipped my hair and took off my hat. Finally I ran into some of our chaps in a truck and they took me off."

9 U. S. AMBULANCE DRIVERS MISSING

New Yorkers Among Group of Volunteers.

PARIS, May 22 (A. P.).—Four more young members of Miss Anne Morgan's American Ambulance Unit, operating in the northern war zone, were missing today as officials expressed the belief that five others previously reported missing were dead or German prisoners.

The four reported missing today were last seen driving their cargoes of wounded south of a town now in German hands.

Another driver was reported wounded.

The latest additions to the missing list are Donald Coster of Montreal and New York city, John Clement of Brookline, Mass.; George King of New York city and Gregory Wait of Shelbourne, Vt.

The wounded man is Francis

Hamlin of New York city. His injuries were believed to be slight.

A statement from the American field service headquarters in Paris said: "The missing men were last seen a few miles south of a town which now is in German hands. Two other men, driving south with wounded men, stopped and informed Coster that the city was in flames and under heavy air bombardment. Coster, in charge of the detachment, carried on to accomplish his mission. They have not been seen since."

The four listed officially yesterday as missing were named in press reports as Section Commander Al Raymond of Chicago, Louise Wehrle of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Murray Shipley of Cincinnati, and John Glowacki of Jersey City. Officials of the corps said these men either were dead or captured.

A ninth American, Lawrence A. Jump of Nantucket, Mass., was reported missing on May 16 after his ambulance had been shelled near Sarreguemines.

Germans Intensify Air Activity In Narvik Area

Stockholm, May 22 (AP)—Norwegian sources said tonight the Germans have intensified their air activity in the Narvik sector, dropping thirty-six bombs at Harstad, a British base north of the ore port, killing many civilians, and sinking the Norwegian steamer Sirius near Tromsoe.

MAY 23 1940

The bombing raids occurred soon after it was reported that the Germans had succeeded in establishing a large marine airbase on the Norwegian coast and were using flying boats for attacks over the Narvik area.

Four of the crew of the Sirius were lost and eleven survivors picked up after the vessel was hit.

Major General Fleischer, commander of the Sixth Norwegian division operating at Narvik, was quoted by the Norwegian telegraph agency as saying ousting of the Germans at Narvik probably is a "long and difficult task."

Perhaps the ha[illegible]t-fought battle on the German march from the frontier to Amsterdam unrolled here and along the Grebbe Line, with its water defenses, a few miles to the east.

We walked through this unhappy little community between Arnheim and Utrecht and one building which seemed untouched was the town church, its tower rising high above the smoking, crumbled remains.

The business district of the city of 8,000 was only a heap of brick. Practically every house on the road leading to Grebbe Hill outside the city was a skeleton, with tulips and flowers of spring adding a grotesquely gay touch.

Dutch apparently had been using the emptied brick homes along the road as hideouts in an attempt to hold up the advance, and the German response was swift and terrible.

Kaiser Rejected Offer Of British Protection, German Sources Assert

Rhenen, The Netherlands, May 22 (AP)—Kaiser Wilhelm, German authorities said today, turned down an offer of the British Government to take him and his family to Britain "in protection" when the Nazi army came this way in its march toward Amsterdam.

Ten miles to the west of this little town, where one of the fiercest battles of the occupation of the Netherlands took place, the former German monarch sat in his home at Doorn, and heard again—for the first time since 1918—the roar of battle.

He could not have missed the scarlet glow in the evening sky. Some houses here still were burning today.

When resistance was stilled, the German army units rumbled through the main street of Doorn, pausing to leave a guard at the former Kaiser's gate.

wall," today called upon civilians to work "at war speed" to combat "a more deadly menace than has threatened the peoples of these islands" since the Spanish Armada set out.

The present threat, he said, is such "that there is time for nothing but an intense, concentrated effort of muscle and mind and will. It must begin now."

Calling for "more shells, more guns, more tanks," Morrison said the effort "must leave for the civilian population a sterner way of life than we have been used to."

MAY 23 1940

He added: "A war of the character we are now experiencing makes that inevitable."

The threat, he declared, looms larger than when old Spain under King Philip attempted to "bring us under his yoke."

"We are going to cut down our leisure," he asserted, "cut down our comfort, blot out every private and sectional aim, thinking only of arms for men, arms for victory, and arms for liberty."

Nazi Tanks Dive Off Roads To Dodge British Air Raiders

Bombing Of Enemy Behind Lines In Northern France Described By R. A. F. Airmen

By G. H. P. ANDERSON MAY 23 1940
Associated Press Correspondent

With the British Royal Air Force in France, May 22—German tanks were seen diving from roads in confusion to avoid clusters of bombs dropped today by low-flying Royal Air Force planes in widesperad raids just behind the lines in northern France.

Large formations of Britain's advance air-striking force took part in the raids aimed at shattering German communications and supply lines.

At one point as their planes roared down, the pilots said, they could see a battle on the ground between two German and two Allied tanks. Twenty light tanks were counted along one road near Amiens. They were spattered with machine-gun fire from the planes.

Bombs were poured on military objectives a few miles north of Amiens, occupied yesterday by German advance forces. Light anti-aircraft units were observed north and northeast of Amiens, but there seemed little movement over the roads in this section. (Here four words were censored.)

British aircraft spotted one convoy and bombed the head of the column. Pilots reported direct hits, and it was believed the road was blocked. Another convoy was attacked in a wood (two words censored).

Back from the raid, the bomber crews told of being "lucky enough to find some of the tanks which had broken through" Allied lines.

"One of the pilots," the flyers said, "dropped a bomb right in the middle of three of them. One of the tanks reared up like a horse and fell over backwards.

"Another machine found a convoy of German lorries and let go his load at them. He could actually see the lorries toppling headlong off the road."

Call German Attack Chaotic.

LONDON, May 22 (A. P.).—An Air Ministry bulletin tonight said that the vanguards of the German advance at times presented a picture of "utter chaos" from the air. The bulletin described Tuesday's attacks on the spearhead of the German push in northern France. Bombing of the Nazis often was made impossible because of the streams of refugees overtaken by their rapid advance, it added.

SOVIET STATES HER STAND ON BRITISH PACT

Willing to Negotiate but Bars Any Curb on Her Obligations to Berlin.

OFFERS TO BAR RE-EXPORT

Moscow Reiterates Terms for Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement.

MOSCOW, May 22 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia made it clear today that while she was amenable to undertaking trade negotiations with Great Britain she would not enter into any sort of agreement which might interfere with her commitments to Germany.

This stand, according to Tass, the official Soviet news agency, has been conveyed to Great Britain by the Premier-Foreign Commissar, Vyacheslav Molotov, in a note asserting that Russian trade policy "cannot be subordinated to the aims of any foreign State."

Tass said that the statement replied to a note of May 8, in which the British Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, feeling the way for trade talks with Russia, broached the possibility of "restricting" the delivery of Soviet war materials to Germany.

Wholly a Russian Matter.

"Such questions," Molotov said, "concerning trade between the U. S. S. R. and Germany come wholly and completely under the competence of the Soviet Government and cannot form the subject of discussion during trade negotiations between the U. S. S. R. and Great Britain.

"The Soviet Government notes that the very fact that the British Government has raised for discussion questions coming solely under the competence of the Soviet Government does not testify to the desire of the British Government to conduct trade negotiations with the U. S. S. R."

Further outlining Russian trade policy, Molotov said:

"Being a soverign State, the Soviet Union will carry on its foreign trade both with belligerents and neutrals on the basis of principles of complete equality of parties and reciprocity of obligations."

Would Bar Re-export.

MAY 23 1940

While declaring that Russia could not discuss her relations with Germany with a third party, Molotov gave new assurances that any goods imported from Britain would not be re-exported to the Reich.

In connection with the trade talks with Great Britain, Soviet spokesmen said that London had not given a very "convincing" explanation concerning the detention of two Soviet freighters, the Selenga and Mayakovsky, which were seized several weeks ago in the Far East.

The British had side-stepped the question, it was said, by merely noting that the vessels had been turned over to French jurisdiction. It was indicated that Russia still held Britain responsible despite this action.

Cardinal Hinsley Appeals to Catholics of World.

MAY 23 1940

LONDON, May 22 (A. P.).—Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Archbishop of Westminster and Great Britain's only Cardinal, appealed to Catholics throughout the world today to condemn by word and deed the Nazi invasion of the Low Countries.

In a letter published in the London Times he called on all Catholics "in the name of all we hold sacred" to condemn the invasion "by merciless Nazi hordes."

"The crucial time has come," he wrote, "in the name of reason and of faith, in the cause of humanity and of religion, that the creed of Naxism must be denounced as the arch-enemy of mankind.

"To save the world, a new crusade—'God Wills It'—is necessary unless the fair lands of the earth are to be turned into wastes of blood."

Seek Move To Prevent Invasion Of Ireland

British Conservatives To Ask Churchil To Receive Delegation To Discuss Possibility

London, May 22 (AP)—A committee of Conservative party members decided tonight to ask Prime Minister Winston Churchill to receive a deputation to discuss the possibility of German invasion of Ireland. The problem is considered urgent because of the present of the German legation in Ireland and the activity of the outlawed Irish Republican army.

The question will be raised as to whether Churchil' is satisfied that all necessary measures have been adopted to prevent invasion of England through Ireland, and whether he knows what the attitude of the Eire Government would be in such an emergency.

A Dublin source said the Government of Ireland was determined that its territory not be used as a base for an attack on Britain.

DNB said more than one-fifth of the enemy planes, or 342, had been brought down by anti-aircraft artillery, and explained that rapid movement of air-force bases often delayed full reports so that the high command's communiques did not always give the full extent of the damage to the Allied air forces.

Resigns As Honorary Chairman Of Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation

Philadelphia, May 22 (AP)—Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, of New York, former United States Ambassador to Germany, resigned as honorary chairman of the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation today, asserting he saw Nazi propaganda in its literature.

He objected specifically to use of the term "American-Germans" instead of "German-Americans" in a foundation pamphlet appealing for funds.

Wilbur K. Thomas, executive director of the foundation, whose headquarters are here, promptly denied the organization has links with Nazis. He said its objectives are cultural, its theme Americanization, and its main purpose "the integration of Americans of German descent with the rest of the American people."

SAYS NAZIS SHOT AT QUEEN

Netherlands Minister to U. S. Tells of Fifth Column Work

WASHINGTON, May 22 (AP)—Dr. Alexander Loudon, the Netherlands minister, asserted tonight that Nazi snipers in surrounding houses had fired upon Queen Wilhelmina and her family in their palace gardens and that Nazi authorities had issued orders to "extinguish the House of Orange at any cost."

Commenting on reports that Hollanders had expressed resentment over the Queen's flight to England, the minister said that "fifth Column" agents had spotted every move of the royal family and that it became impossible to protect them in their own country. The move to London was undertaken at the urging of authorities, he said.

"What can a Queen in the hands of the enemy do for her country?" Dr. Loudon remarked. "Ask Mr. Schuschnigg [the former Austrian chancellor].

SAYS BRITAIN GETS OUR PLANES BY AIR

Head of Purchasing Group Here Asserts Some Bombers Are Flying the Atlantic

SENATE GROUP BARS SALES

Pepper's Proposal to Let Allies Have Army and Navy Fighters Is Called 'Intervention'

WASHINGTON, May 22 (AP)—Bombing planes are flying under their own power from American factories to the battle fields of Europe, Arthur B. Purvis, head of the Anglo-French purchasing mission, asserted today.

The flights cannot be made directly from the United States because of the Neutrality Law. In practice, the planes are flown to the Canadian border, hauled across the line, flown again to a base and fueled for the 2,000 miles of Atlantic Ocean between Newfoundland and Ireland.

Mr. Purvis, telling the story of the flights today, gave no details except that some planes already had negotiated the hop and others would follow as soon as built.

Flights had been made so far, said Mr. Purvis, only by heavy bombers. This indicated that the planes were two-motored Lockheed-Hudson and Martin bombers, of which the Allies have bought large quantities. These ships were orginally designed for the American Army.

Experts were doubtful that any pursuit ships had flown the Atlantic, because these craft are built for such speed that they have ranges of only a few hundred miles. The new bombers to be flown, Mr Purvis indicated, were hundreds of new types of Lockheeds, Martins, Boeings and Consolidateds.

Mission Seeks Faster Production

Faster production of these latest types was the goal of Mr. Purvis and his French colleague, Frederic Bloch-Laine, in their visit today to Secretary Morgenthau. Mr. Purvis said the Allies were anxious to be assured of "priorities" of their orders over the huge new purchases to be made by the United States in fulfillment of President Roosevelt's aim of a 50,000-plane fleet.

During the day the Foreign Relations Committee, by a vote of 12 to 1, shelved the proposal of Senator Pepper that the United States sell army and navy planes to the Allies. The single vote was that of the Florida Senator.

Chairman Pittman of Nevada said it was the consensus of the committee members that the legislation would violate international law and would constitute "intervention by the United States" in the European war. He asserted that Senator Pepper agreed with this view, but argued that "Hitler had violated all the rules of international law and that the success of the Allies was of vital importance to us."

The committee acted without waiting for an opinion regarding the proposal from the State Department. Senator Johnson of California, ranking minority member of the committee, agreed that the matter was one in which the committee should exercise its own discretion.

Byrnes Fears Lindbergh Aid To 5th Column

Says Those Who Retard U. S. Defense Effort Are 'Its Fellow Travelers'

WASHINGTON, May 22 (AP).—Striking back at Col. Charles A. Lindbergh for his criticism of Roosevelt administration foreign policy, Senator James F. Byrnes, Democrat, of South Carolina, asserted tonight that Col. Lindbergh was "no more qualified" to speak on the subject than "Wrong-Way Corrigan or any other aviator who may fly the Atlantic Ocean."

He added that "fifth columns are already active in America" and that "those who consciously or unconsciously retard the efforts of this government to provide for the defense of the American people are the fifth column's most effective fellow travelers."

Senator Byrnes's address, prepared for delivery over the Columbia Broadcasting System, was considered the Administration forces' official reply to the speech in which Col. Lindbergh called last Sunday for an end to "hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion," decried what he considered meddling in Europe and urged a "definite policy" of defense.

Senator Byrnes said President Roosevelt had a "definite policy of defense already formulated" and had stated it "time and again."

The Senator said that "Mr. Lindbergh" (nowhere in the manuscript of the speech did the title "Colonel" appear) had accepted a decoration from Hitler. He went on to inquire:

"When Mr. Lindbergh says, 'no one wishes to attack us,' is he authorized to speak for Hitler or Goering? Can the American people, in the light of recent history, accept the assurance of this young gentleman that if we do not ask for war it will not come to us?"

Challenges Talk of Safety

Senator Byrnes, chairman of the Senate Naval Appropriations Subcommittee, took sharp issue with Col. Lindbergh's statement that foreign air forces do not have bombing planes capable of crossing the ocean and returning, and criticized the flyer's views on policy as well.

"When Mr. Lindbergh states that 'regardless of which side wins this war, there is no reason, aside from our own actions, to prevent a continuation of peaceful relationships between America and the countries of Europe,'" Senator Byrnes said, "I shudder to think of the kind of America Mr. Lindbergh is willing to accept.

Mr. Lindbergh seems not concerned with the flagrant violations of the rights of peaceful little nations, the cruel and bitter persecution of God-fearing men, women and children, because of their religion, race or political opinions; the burning of books, the bombing of helpless women and children fleeing in terror from their homes; the parachute spies and the torch troops. To Mr. Lindbergh all these seem to be only little trifling, insignificant incidents to an age-old struggle for power.

"But to me these vile, barbaric deeds represent an attack against everything that we hold dear, an attack against international good faith, against religion, against learning, against political freedom, against civilization itself. . . .

"Mr. Lindbergh may tell us to 'stop this hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion,' but I thank God that America has at last been aroused to the dangers that beset her in a world menaced by brute force and strident ambition and is grimly determined to arm in self-defense.

"Since last September he (Col. Lindbergh) has taken it upon himself to speak thrice to the American people upon what their attitude should be toward the conflict now raging in Europe," Senator Byrnes said. "When his first speech was delivered, the question of the arms embarbo was uppermost in the minds of Americans. Mr. Lindbergh failed to state in so many words where he stood. But few who heard his speech could doubt that its net effort was to give great comfort to those opposing the shipment of planes even under the cash and carry clause to the Allies, fighting in defense of their national existence.

"The following month Mr. Lindbergh addressed the American public a second time. He pleaded that 'for the benefit of Western civilization we should continue our embargo on offensive weapons.' He wanted to forbid the sale for cash and delivery in this country of bombing planes to Britain and France while they would lie unpitied beneath the bombs of German planes.

Charges Barrier to Defense

"Mr. Lindbergh very cleverly tried to make the American people believe that you could distinguish between offensive and defensive planes. All military experts agreed that such a distinction was wholly untenable—and that again the net effect of Mr. Lindberg's distinction was to urge the American people to deny the Allies means of defense and deny the United States the increased productive capacity that would contribute to our own defense.

"Last Sunday the once shy and reticent Mr. Lindbergh again thought that the American people were in need of his advice, this time about what he professed to call "the air defense of the United States."

"President Roosevelt had recommended appropriations for national defense which were extremely conservative in light of the recommendations of his military experts and in light of the shocking and ominous developments abroad which have threatened with destruction the most inoffensive neutral nations. Even Mr. Lindbergh, at the end of his hysterical protest against other people becoming hysterical about our national defense program, admitted that 'we need a greater air force, a greater Army, and a greater Navy,' and nowhere indicated in what respects the President's program is defective.

"Yet Mr. Lindbergh spoke as if the United States was somehow being rushed into an air-defense program before a definite policy of defense had been formulated. But the President has stated that policy of hemisphere defense time and time again during the last two years—it is a definite policy of defense already formulated.

Liner Roosevelt Off Today for Galway; Belligerents Warned Not to Molest It

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The government decided tonight to send the liner President Roosevelt to Ireland to bring home Americans and gave notice to Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland and Norway that it should not be molested.

The ship will sail Thursday night from New York for Galway.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, telegraphed American envoys at London, Paris, Berlin, Brussels, The Hague and Oslo to inform the governments to which they are accredited that "the government of the United States expects this vessel to make its eastward and its westward voyages without interruption or molestation by the air, naval and military forces of any belligerent."

The envoys were instructed to say that the vessel will carry no cargoes either eastward or westward and on the westward voyage will carry only American citizens and their families.

Secretary Hull said the vessel will "carry the American flag prominently displayed and will proceed fully lighted at night. The vessel is unarmed and moving without convoy."

Earlier the State Department had issued a blanket warning to Americans in the whole Near Eastern area of Europe to come home.

The State Department revealed today that instructions to this effect had gone out on May 16 to diplomatic and consular representatives in Greece, Rumania, Hungary, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Turkey, Syria, Irak, Palestine, Tunis, Egypt and Tangiers.

The Americans listed in the countries to which warnings were sent totaled 17,955 on Jan. 1.

American consular officers in Ireland, it was also reported, were making a survey to learn how many Americans there wanted to leave. As of Jan. 1, Americans in Ireland totaled 1,960.

Secretary Hull said the State Department had not heard directly from Ambassador John Cudahy in Belgium for nearly a week and had not been able to take up with him the question of the location of the American Embassy in that invaded land.

The Army assigned today Lieut. Col. Early E. W. Duncan, of the Air [illegible] as the first full-time military attache at Athens in two decades. Col. Duncan, now on duty at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, was directed to sail on June 15 by way of Genoa, Italy.

The Army also assigned Maj. Charles E. Loucks, of the Canada warfare service, to Paris as Assistant Military Attache with additional duty as an assistant for London. He was ordered to sail on May 25 via Genoa.

Britain Places Refugees Under Alien Restrictions

Move Seen Necessary as Possible Fifth Columnists

LONDON, May 22 (AP).—In a new move to combat "fifth column" activities, the government ordered all war refugees today to comply with restrictions placed on enemy aliens. The refugees thus will be prevented from traveling without police permits and are forbidden to possess firearms, explosives, automobiles, cameras or detailed maps.

Scotland Yard operatives are scanning all incoming refugees to weed out any possible "fifth columnists." A score of Dutch and Belgian refugees brought to England on British ships were interned today as possible "fifth columnists" on information from the Continent.

Great Britain's acute consciousness of the dangers from within were indicated in a series of questions to be asked in Parliament next week. Members have announced that they will seek information on these subjects:

Whether the country is not open to invasion from Eire (Ireland).

Whether pro-German Britons should not be interned, especially members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army and members of Sir Oswald Mosley's Fascist party.

Whether there should not be systematic household searches for suspicious persons, rifle practice for local defense volunteers and guns for the island's policemen.

And on the question of transferring war prisoners to the colonies or dominions.

LONDON, MAY 22-(AP)-THE DEATH PENALTY FOR "FIFTH COLUMN" TREACHERY WAS PROVIDED IN A BILL PASSED TONIGHT BY THE BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE MEASURE PROVIDES THAT "IF WITH INTENT TO HELP THE ENEMY ANY PERSON DOES OR ATTEMPTS OR CONSPIRES WITH ANY OTHER PERSON TO DO ANY ACT WHICH IS DESIGNED OR LIKELY TO GIVE ASSISTANCE TO NAVAL, MILITARY OR AIR OPERATIONS OF THE ENEMY, TO IMPEDE SUCH OPERATIONS OF HIS MAJESTY'S FORCES, OR TO ENDANGER LIFE X X X HE SHALL ON CONVICTION SUFFER DEATH."

MAY 23 1940

THE MINISTER FOR HOME SECURITY, SIR JOHN ANDERSON, PROPOSING THE BILL SAID "THIS IS THE MOMENT IF EVER THERE WAS ONE FOR SWIFT AND DRASTIC ACTION. THE GRIM REALITIES OF OUR PRESENT SITUATION PROVIDE JUSTIFICATION WITHOUT ANY FURTHER ARGUMENT."

ATTORNEY GENERAL SIR DONALD SOMERVELL SAID PARACHUTISTS COMING DOWN IN PLAINCLOTHES AS PART OF AN ATTACKING FORCE WOULD BE DEALT WITH "IN THE SAME WAY AS PEOPLE WHO ATTACKED THIS COUNTRY IN UNIFORM WITH THE ADDED DISADVANTAGE OF NOT HAVING THE PRIVILEGES ATTACHING IN INTERNATIONAL LAW TO UNIFORMED SOLDIERS".

ANY ENEMY WHO CAME DOWN IN PLAINCLOTHES, NOT AS PART OF AN ATTACK AND NOT ARMED, BUT SIMPLY HOPING HE MIGHT BE ABLE TO COMMIT ESPIONAGE WOULD BE DEALTH WITH UNDER THE NEW BILL, THE ATTORNEY GENERAL SAID.

The Day's War Communiques

The official communiques issued today by the warring Powers are presented below:

PARIS

The French High Command issued the following communique:

"Enemy pressure continued in the direction of the coast, taking the form of raids carried out by small motorized detachments. Arras is now in our hands.

"In Lorraine, since the enemy had bombarded three towns behind our front, we retaliated on three towns behind the German front."

BERLIN

The German High Command issued the following communique:

"The break-through of German troops toward the Channel coast yesterday also was widened northwestward in the direction of St. Pol and Montreuil-Mer.

"Quays of the port facilities of Ostend, Dunkirk, Calais, Boulogne and Dieppe again were successfully raided by the German air force.

"In Flanders the enemy covering the retreat on the Scheldt River still offers strong resistance. At Valenciennes, the attack is under way, coupled with hard fighting against French forces concentrated in this region. Attempts of the opponents to force their way out southward near Artois via Arras have been repelled.

"At Arras, Junkers dive-bombers contributed considerably to frustrating an English tank attack.

"During the fighting concluded May 19 in Zeeland (in Holland), 16,000 French and 13,000 Dutch troops were captured by a smaller force of Germans.

"The modernized strong forts of Neufchateau which are part of the Liege fortifications have fallen.

"Twelve officers and 500 men fell into our hands.

"On May 22 the German Air Force, with great success, chiefly operated to disturb the enemy retreat. Several heavily used airports were raided with bombs, and runways, hangars, equipment and airplanes on the ground were destroyed.

"The stations of Compiegne and Creil are burning.

"In and outside Belgian and French ports, one cruiser, merchant and transport ships were destroyed and a number of other ships were damaged. Speedboats of the German navy during this undertaking against French Channel ports sunk one enemy auxiliary cruiser.

"Losses of the enemy amounted yesterday to 120 airplanes, of which thirty-five were bagged in air fights, fourteen were shot down by anti-aircraft guns and the rest were destroyed on the ground. Ten German planes are missing.

"As previously reported in a special announcement, fighting units of the air force on May 20 attacked parts of the British fleet operating at Narvik. One battleship and one heavy cruiser sustained severe bomb hits.

"Two additional warships and three merchantmen were damaged by bombs. During another attack on May 21, one destroyer and one transport were severely hit.

"In the sea region of Bergen, five smaller Norwegian naval vessels were safeguarded by our own naval forces and taken over by the German navy.

"The fight of the Narvik group against a far superior enemy force is continuing.

"Mountain troops, attacking from Trondheim northward, took Mo and Storforshei, 400 kilometers (about 250 miles) north of Trondheim. These troops captured numerous Norwegians and English operating there. The latter, who had embarked from England as early as May 7, first went to Narvik, then shifted to Mo.

30.24-2437

"In the course of the night of May 21-22, enemy airplanes aimlessly dropped bombs in western Germany which fell mostly upon open fields. Military objectives were not hit.

"Two enemy planes were shot down by anti-aircraft defenses."

LONDON.

The text of the Air Ministry's communique said:

"Working in relays throughout yesterday strong forces of R. A. F. bombers harassed the spearhead of the German armored columns in their movement toward the channel ports. Troop concentrations, tanks, supply columns and mechanized units were bombed and machine-gunned. Roads and railways were attacked with high explosive. Considerable damage was inflicted on the enemy wherever he was located.

"During last night large-scale bombing attacks were made on the enemy's main lines of communication through the Namur, Dinant and Aachen areas. Many bridges were blown up or rendered useless, and severe damage was done to marshalling yards and rail transports.

"Simultaneously, other large formations of bombers were dispatched to carry out operations on military objectives and key points in Rhenish Prussia. Here many direct hits were registered on bridges, railway junctions and rolling stock.

"Stavanger aerodrome was again bombed last night. A large fire was seen burning as our aircraft left.

"Of the very large force of aircraft engaged in both the day and night bombing operations five have failed to return.

"All day yesterday our fighter aircraft carried out protective patrols for our bombers over battle areas in Belgium and in the north of France. Many engagements were fought and at least twenty-four enemy aircraft were destroyed or seriously damaged. Eight of our fighters are missing."

LONDON - 2ND ADD AIR MINISTRY X X X IT ADDED.

THE COMMUNIQUE SAID:

"YESTERDAY RENEWED ATTACKS WERE MADE BY RELAYS OF BOMBER AIRCRAFT ON SPEARHEADS OF THE GERMAN THRUST TOWARD CHANNEL PORTS.

"FROM THE AIR, THE HEAD OF THE GERMAN ADVANCE PRESENTED AT TIMES A PICTURE OF UTTER CHAOS.

"OFTEN, BOMBING WAS MADE IMPOSSIBLE BECAUSE OF THE DIFFICULTY OF IDENTIFYING ENEMY COLUMNS AMONG STREAMS OF REFUGEES OVERTAKEN BY THE ENEMY'S RAPID ADVANCE.

"ON ONE ENEMY ROAD RECONNOITERED AT A HEIGHT OF 1,000 FEET SOME 40 OR 50 GREEN-PAINTED GERMAN LORRIES WERE SEEN TO BE HOPELESSLY INTERMINGLED WITH PEDESTRIANS, AMBULANCES, CIVILIAN CARS, TRADESMEN'S VANS AND BICYCLES.

"A FEW MILES AWAY A ROAD AND BRIDGE OVER A RIVER WAS PACKED WITH CIVILIAN TRANSPORT, MAKING ITS PRECARIOUS WAY AROUND GAPING BOMB HOLES ALMOST IN THE CENTER OF THE CARRIAGEWAY.

"AT OTHER POINTS ALONG THE LINE OF ADVANCE WHERE ENEMY TROOP COLUMNS HAD DRAWN AHEAD OF CIVILIAN TRAFFIC, BOMBING OBJECTIVES WERE CLEARLY DEFINED. A CONVOY OF ARMORED LORRIES THREE MILES LONG WAS BOMBED BY TWO LOW-FLYING BLENHEIMS AND FIRES WERE SEEN TO BREAK OUT AMONG THE VEHICLES IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE ATTACK.

"ANOTHER BLENHEIM, ATTACKING A MOVING CONVOY OF LORRIES IN THE SAME AREA, OVERSHOT ITS TARGET BUT SAW ITS BOMBS REGISTER A DIRECT HIT ON AN ENEMY TANK STANDING IN A FIELD CLOSE BY.

"FAST MOVING COLUMNS OF LIGHT, ARMORED FIGHTING VEHICLES, ESCORTED BY A STRONG FORCE OF MOTORCYCLE COMBINATIONS, WERE INTERCEPTED ON A MAIN ROAD NORTH OF ABBEVILLE AND SUCCESSFULLY ATTACKED.

"MANY DIRECT HITS WERE OBSERVED ON CLOSELY-PACKED VEHICLES AND EXPLOSIONS WERE SEEN TO BREAK OUT.

"ANOTHER COLUMN OF ARMORED VEHICLES PARTIALLY HIDDEN IN A WOOD NEARER TO ABBEVILLE WAS HEAVILY BOMBED BY A FORMATION OF 11 BLENHEIMS.

"MORE THAN 150 BOMBS WERE DROPPED ON THIS ONE TARGET ALONE AND SALVOS WERE SEEN TO FALL ALL CLOSE TO EACH SIDE OF THE COLUMN ON THE ROAD AND IN THE WOOD.

"MAIN ROADS AND RAILWAY LINES AT STRATEGIC POINTS ALSO WERE BOMBED WITH THE OBJECT OF IMPEDING THE DISPATCH OF SUPPLIES AND REINFORCEMENTS TO THE ENEMY'S ADVANCED POSITIONS.

MAY 22 1940

"THROUGHOUT THE DAY, OPPOSITION WAS ENCOUNTERED FROM ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERIES AND POM-POM GUNS OPERATING FROM MOBILE PLATFORMS AND FROM RIFLES OF TROOP CONCENTRATIONS IN WOODS AND BESIDE ROADS."

BY DREW MIDDLETON

LONDON, MAY 22-(AP)-BY SHARP COUNTER ATTACKS ON LAND AND IN THE AIR THE ALLIES TONIGHT HAD STALLED THE GERMAN EFFORT TO COMPLETE A LINE FROM ABBEVILLE TO THE ENGLISH CHANNEL AND THUS TO PEN THE BRITISH ARMY IN THE NARROW COASTAL PLAIN.

ARRAS AND ABBEVILLE WERE RETAKEN.

IT WAS ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT FEATURES OF A VAST AERIAL OPERATION OF LAST NIGHT IN WHICH ONE OF THE BIGGEST R.A.F. RAIDING FORCES EVER USED IN A SINGLE EFFORT BLUDGEONED GERMANY'S ADVANCING COLUMNS AND COMMUNICATION LINES ALL THE WAY FROM RHENISH PRUSSIA TO SOUTHERN BELGIUM AND WESTERN FRANCE.

THE THREE-FOLD OBJECT OF THE [illegible] ATTACK WAS TO DESTROY ROADS AND BRIDGES ACROSS THE MEUSE AT NAMUR AND DINANT AND DERAIL TRAINS ON LINES WEST OF THE RHINE AND DESTROY OR DAMAGE RAILWAY CENTERS AND JUNCTION YARDS WEST OF THE RHINE.

OTHER BOMBERS INTERCEPTED FAST MOVING COLUMNS OF GERMAN LIGHT ARMORED CARS ESCORTED BY MOTORCYCLE TROOPS ON THE MAIN ROAD NORTH OF ABBEVILLE, ATTACKING SUCCESSFULLY. ONE FORMATION OF ELEVEN [illegible] PLANES, THE AIR MINISTRY SAID, BOMBED A PARKED COLUMN OF TANKS AND ARMORED CARS IN A WOOD NEAR ABBEVILLE AND DROPPED 150 BOMBS.

[illegible]

BRITISH PLANES LOST OR MISSING WERE REKONED AT 13, IN CONTRAST TO 24 GERMAN [illegible] PLANES WHICH THEY SHOT DOWN OR SERIOUSLY DAMAGED.

THE SUDDEN COUNTER ATTACKS ON ARRAS AND ABBEVILLE WERE REGARDED HERE AS PART OF A GENERAL ALLIED PLAN. THE FIRST POINT OF THIS PLAN, IT WAS UNDERSTOOD, WAS TO RELIEVE THE TERRIBLE GERMAN PRESSURE AT THE POINT OF THE GERMAN THRUST TOWARDS THE SEA. THE SECOND, OBSERVERS BELIEVED, WAS TO LAUNCH A LARGE SCALE COUNTER-ATTACK FROM NORTH AND SOUTH AGAINST THE BASE OF THE SALIENT, CHOKING OFF TROOP SUPPLIES BY AERIAL BOMBARDMENT.

THE TACTICS OF THE LAST FEW DAYS OF BENDING BEFORE THE GERMAN ADVANCE BUT NEVER ALLOWING A BREAK THROUGH OF LARGE MASSES OF INFANTRY TOWARD THE SEA WOULD GIVE THE FRENCH TIME TO REFORM THE SHATTERED BELGIAN ARMY AND THEIR OWN SEVERELY HAMMERED DIVISIONS.

THE ALLIED STRATEGY WAS NECESSARILY MORE LIMITED THAN THAT OF THE GERMANS WIDE PLAN, ACCORDING TO BRITISH OFFICERS, CALLS FOR LIGHT DIVISIONS TO KEEP THE BRITISH BODY IN THE NORTH WHILE THE GERMAN AIR FORCE SYSTEMATICALLY BOMBS CHANNEL PORTS AND DEPOTS. AT THE SAME TIME, ACCORDING TO THIS BRITISH-INSPIRED STRATEGY, THE MAIN BODY OF THE GERMAN ARMY WOULD SWING SOUTH TO ENGAGE THE FRENCH FIELD ARMIES WHICH ARE STILL VIRTUALLY INTACT.

IF THE FRENCH SHOULD BE WHIPPED, GERMANY COULD THEN DEAL WITH BRITAIN AS MILITARY MASTER OF THE EUROPEAN CONTINENT, OFFERING BRITAIN THE HOICE OF BATTLE AGAINST TREMENDOUS ODDS AIR AND INVASION AND AN ARMISTICE.

MAY 23 1940

DESPITE REPORTS IN LONDON THAT THE GERMANS HAVE LOST A QUARTER OF A MILLION MEN IN THE FIGHTING IN FLANDERS, NEUTRAL OBSERVERS BELIEVE THEIR BATTLE CASUALTIES HAVEN'T EXCEEDED 100,000 KILLED, WOUNDED AND MISSING.

THESE OBSERVERS POINT OUT THAT THE GERMANS HAVE NEVER USED MORE THAN TEN DIVISIONS IN A SINGLE ENGAGEMENT AND THAT THE ACTIONS

30.24-2439

AGAINST THE BRITISH AT LOUVAIN AND IN THE ARRAS AND CAMBRAI AREAS, FURIOUS THOUGH THEY WERE, FOUND THE NAZIS PROBABLY LIMITED TO ONE DIVISION IN EACH INSTANCE.

THERE ARE NO OFFICIAL ESTIMATES HERE OF THE BRITISH AND FRENCH CASUALTIES, BUT IT IS BELIEVED THE BRITISH LOSSES DID NOT EXCEED 45,000 AT THE END OF YESTERDAY'S FIGHTING.

THE FIGHTING AT ARRAS AND AMIENS WAS SO INTENSIVE BECAUSE OF 1940
THE STRATEGICAL IMPORTANCE OF THESE RAILROAD AND MOTOR ROAD JUNCTIONS TO THE GERMANS IF THEY ATTEMPT TO SUPPLY THE IR ADVANCING ARMY. THE MODERN ARMY CAN HARDLY LIVE OFF THE COUNTRY AS ARMIES ONCE DID, AND THAT IS PARTICULARLY TRUE IN AN AREA OF EUROPE ALREADY PICKED CLEAN BY NINE MONTHS OF WAR AND BY THOUSANDS OF REFUGEES.

ROTTERDAM, MAY 22-(AP)-ROTTERDAM, PROUD HOME OF THE DUTCH MERCHANT FLEET, IS ONLY A SCAR OF A CITY--ITS MAIN BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL DISTRICT A PILE OF BRICKS AND MORTAR SERVING AS HEADSTONES FOR HUNDREDS DEAD.

MAY 23 1940

MJ539PED

THE HISTORIC HARBOR, THE SMOKE OF WAR RISING ABOVE IT, IS A SILENT TESTIMONIAL TO THE AWFUL DESTRUCTION WHICH GERMAN STUKAS (DIVE BOMBERS) WORK WHEN THE WORD IS GIVEN.

BLOCK AFTER BLOCK OF PILED BRICKS, ACRES OF DESOLATION BROKEN HERE AND THERE BY OCCASIONAL BLACKENED WALLS OR TWISTED WEBS OF GIRDERS, SHOW HOW HEAVY A HAND WAS LAID ON THE LAND OF TULIPS AND WOODEN SHOES.

AUTHORITATIVE GERMAN SOURCES SAY THE DISTRICT HAD BEEN LARGELY EMPTIED OF CIVILIANS BEFORE THE TERRIFYING STUKAS BEGAN DIVING, AND IT WAS DETERMINED OFFICIALLY THAT THERE WERE ONLY 354 CASUALTIES. SOME OTHER UNOFFICIAL ESTIMATES HAVE RANGED AS HIGH AS 10,000.

SOME OF THE BIGGEST BANKS ARE NOTHING BUT HEAPS OF MORTAR AND TWISTED GIRDERS. OLD FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS, HISTORIC BUSINESS HOUSES, LIE IN DUST. THE STATELY LINER STATENDAM, GRIMY AND SMOKE-STAINED, SMOULDERS AT ITS WHARF.

HOW MANY BODIES ARE BURIED UNDER THE RUINED DISTRICT IS A QUESTION ON WHICH THERE IS WIDE DISAGREEMENT.

GERMAN OFFICIALS SAID THE DEVASTATING RAID LASTED ONLY SEVEN AND ONE-HALF MINUTES FROM THE FIRST BOMB TO THE LAST.

THE RAID CAME AFTER THE GERMAN ARMY HAD GIVEN THE DUTCH COMMANDER THREE HOURS TO CEASE RESISTANCE.

THE PLANES ALREADY WERE UNDER WAY WHEN THE DUTCH COMMANDER DECIDED TO CAPITULATE, A SHORT TIME AFTER THE DEADLINE PASSED, AND THE BOMBS WERE RAINED DOWN BEFORE THE PLANES COULD BE STOPPED, THE GERMAN COMMANDER EXPLAINED.

THE NAZI COMMANDER MAINTAINED THE CITY LOST ITS STATUS AS AN "OPEN CITY" WHEN THE NETHERLANDS ARMY RESISTED SEIZURE.

ROTTERDAM BECAME A BATTLEFIELD THE FIRST DAY OF THE GERMAN WESTERN OFFENSIVE. PARACHUTE TROOPS WERE LANDED TO HOLD THE BRIDGE OVER THE MEUSE RIVER IN THE CENTER OF THE CITY AND WERE ASSISTED, MANY NETHERLANDERS SAY, BY GERMAN "FIFTH COLUMN" MEMBERS ALREADY IN THE CITY.

MAY 23 1940

DUTCH RESISTANCE INSTANTLY STOPPED AFTER THE BOMBING. THEIR OWN ARTILLERY FIRE CAUSED MUCH DAMAGE ON THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE RIVER MEUSE WHERE THE GERMANS WERE CONCENTRATED.

THE FRONT RAN THROUGH THE CENTER OF THE CITY.

IT IS PROBABLE ONE OF THE DUTCHMEN'S OWN SHELLS FIRED THE 28,000-TON LINER STATENDAM WHICH WAS STILL BELCHING SMOKE FROM THE HULK TODAY AS A PARTY OF FOREIGN JOURNALISTS VIEWED THE RUINS. THE LINER AFFORDED A PROTECTION TO THE GERMANS BEHIND IT.

THE GERMANS SAY NETHERLANDS ARTILLERY ALSO CAUSED MUCH OF THE DAMAGE ON THE NORTH SIDE OF THE RIVER, WHERE THE DUTCH DEFENDERS WERE GATHERED.

ONE AIR FORCE OFFICER ESTIMATED THE DEAD UNDER THE WRECKAGE AT 30.24-2441

30.24-2441

"SEVERAL THOUSAND."

GERMAN OFFICERS SAID THE INVADING ARMY TOOK THE VIEW THE DUTCH COMMANDER, WAS TRYING TO GAIN TIME TO PERMIT REINFORCEMENTS TO ARRIVE AND THAT THEY COULD NOT HOLD OFF THEIR ULTIMATUM.

IN THE COURSE OF THE FIGHTING HUGE GERMAN TRANSPORTS ATTEMPTED TO LAND AT THE AIRPORT BETWEEN ROTTERDAM AND THE HAGUE, A FEW MILES AWAY. FIGHTING ALREADY WAS IN PROGRESS AT THE AIRPORT AND THE TRANSPORTS CARRYING TROOPS TRIED TO LAND ON A ROAD.

CROSS WINDS CAUSED 15 OF THE CRAFT TO CRASH IN LANDING. MOST OF THE 15 WERE DESTROYED. A SMALLER BOMBER ALSO CRASHED.

WRECKAGE OF THE PLANES WAS STREWN ON BOTH SIDES OF THE ROAD FOR ABOUT A MILE.

GERMAN OFFICIALS SAID MUCH DAMAGE WAS CAUSED IN ROTTERDAM BY THE FAILURE OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT TO ACT PROMPTLY. IT WAS ADMITTED THAT THIS WAS DIFFICULT BECAUSE OF MOUNTAINOUS PILES OF DEBRIS IN THE STREETS.

THE AREA WIPED OUT PROBABLY IS A SQUARE MILE IN ALL. IT EXTENDS FROM THE NORTH BANK OF THE NEW MEUSE ALONG THE MAIN STREET AND WESTWARD OUT AS FAR AS THE POSTOFFICE AND TOWN HALL. NEITHER OF THESE BUILDINGS WAS DESTROYED ALTHOUGH BOTH WERE DAMAGED.

TWO CHURCHES WERE IN THE AREA.

MJ739PED

BURNED BUSSES AND STREET CARS STILL STAND IN THE STREETS.

NETHERLANDS TROOPS, WHO ARE PRISONERS OF WAR BUT ARE MOSTLY FREE AND RESPONSIBLE ONLY TO THEIR COMMANDER, MARCHED THROUGH THE STREETS WHILE WE WERE THERE. OFFICIALS SAID THERE HAD BEEN NO DIFFICULTY SINCE THE CAPITULATION OF THE CITY MAY 14.

THE APPEARANCE OF ROTTERDAM LEAVES NO DOUBT THAT GERMAN DIVE-BOMBERS ARE TERRIBLE INSTRUMENTS OF DESTRUCTION.

OFFICERS SAID THAT IN THE INCREDIBLE BRIEF RAID THE STUKAS SCREAMED DOWN TOWARD THE HEART OF THE CITY FROM A GREAT HEIGHT TO ABOUT 1,200 FEET TO UNLOAD THEIR BOMBS, SWERVED, AND CLIMBED UP AGAIN.

THE PLACID DUTCH ARE DAZED BY THE SWIFTNESS WITH WHICH THEY WERE PLUNGED INTO SORROW, DESTRUCTION AND CAPITULATION.

SOME EXPRESSED BITTERNESS THAT MORE BRITISH HELP WAS NOT FORTH-COMING--GERMAN OFFICERS SAY ONLY 700 BRITISH TROOPS WERE LANDED IN HOLLAND.

LIFE IS RETURNING SLOWLY TO WHATEVER DEGREE OF NORMALCY POSSIBLE, ALTHOUGH THE COUNTRY STILL IS VIRTUALLY CUT OFF FROM THE REST OF THE WORLD, PARTLY BECAUSE OF BLOWN UP RAILWAY BRIDGES AND DISRUPTED TELE-GRAPH COMMUNICATIONS.

BUILDINGS IN THE MAIN BUSINESS SECTION WERE GUARDED BY DUTCH REFLEMEN AND ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS ON THE ROOFS, HE SAIDK WHILE STREETS AROUND THE CITY HALL WERE BARRICADED WITH PAVING STONES AND SANDBAGS.

THE DAMAGED SHIPS, HE SAID, LAY OFF NORTH ISLAND WHERE THEY WERE EXCELLENT PROTECTION FOR THE GERMANS, AND AS A RESULT SUFFERED FROM THE DUTCH SHELLING.

STAGED BY COMMUNISTS AND SYMPATHIZERS, THE DEMONSTRATION LASTED HALF AN HOUR BEFORE 200 POLICE AND 50 MOUNTED OFFICERS SUCCEEDED IN BREAKING IT UP.

THE DEMONSTRANTS SHOUTED "NO SIR, THE YANKS ARE NOT COMING," "LET GOD SAVE THE KING," WE WANT PEACE," AND "KEEP AMERICA OUT OF WAR."

TRAFFIC WAS SNARLED AND PEDESTRIANS FOUND IT ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE TO USE THE SIDEWALKS.

UNDATED GERMAN LOSSES

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GERMANY HAS LOST ABOUT 11,000 MEN IN THE BLITZKRIEG ON THE BELGIAN AND FRENCH FRONTS, A HIGH GERMAN COMMANDER HAS INDICATED.

NO FIGURES WERE GIVEN FOR THE CAMPAIGN IN THE NETHERLANDS.

IN THE FIRST AUTHORITATIVE STATEMENT OF LOSSES SINCE THE WESTERN INVASION BEGAN MAY 10, COL.GEN WALTHER VON REICHENAU TODAY TOLD LOUIS P.LOCHNER, ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT WITH THE GERMAN ARMIES, THAT THE GERMANS HAD LOST ONLY ONE-TENTH OF THE NUMBER OF ALLIED TROOPS TAKEN PRISONER.

OFFICIAL GERMAN SOURCES STATED TENT, EXCLUSIVE OF THOSE IN HOLLAND, 110,000 PRISONERS HAD BEEN TAKEN BY ADOLF HITLER'S LEGIONS IN THE WEST.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

VERY GUARDEDLY, I SUGGEST THAT THE BRIGHTEST SPOT IN THIS MORNING'S NEWS FOR ALLIED SYMPATHIZERS IS THE FRENCH ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE RECAPTURE OF THE CITY OF ARRAS, LYING IN THE HEART OF THE GERMAN DRIVE FOR THE COAST.

IT ISN'T THAT POSSESSION OF THIS PLACE MATTERS SO GREATLY STRATEGICALLY. BUT FOR [redacted] HOURS THE WORLD HAS BEEN WAITING TO LEARN WHETHER THE ALLIED POWER TO COUNTERATTACK HAD BEEN SHATTERED IN THE HAMMERING AND HORRORS OF THE OFFENSIVE.

THE FRENCH ANNOUNCE THAT THE RECAPTURE OF ARRAS WAS ACHIEVED IN A COUNTERATTACK TO RELIEVE PRESSURE ON THE HARRASSED ALLIED TROOPS IN BELGIUM. THAT GIVES THE ALLIED PEOPLES FRESH HOPE THAT SUFFICIENT RESISTANCE REMAINS FOR THE GREAT COUNTERATTACKS WHICH MUST BE HURLED AGAINST THE GERMANS IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE IF THE BLITZKRIEG IS TO BE HALTED.

THE NEW ALLIED COMMANDER IN CHIEF, GENERAL WEYGAND, HAS VISITED THE FRONT TODAY TO MAKE PREPARATIONS FOR A COUNTER-ASSAULT.

THE GERMANS APPARENTLY WERE CONCENTRATING THEIR EFFORTS ON THEIR DRIVE TO THE COAST, IN PREPARATION FOR THE "BLOOD BATH" WHICH BERLIN LONG HAS BEEN PROMISING ENGLAND. THAT IS THE HITLERIAN AMBITION OF THE MOMENT.

MAY 23 1940

THUS FAR I HAVEN'T ONCE USED THE WORD "DESPERATE" IN CONNECTION WITH THIS SITUATION, SO FAR AS I RECALL. I HAVE DELIBERATELY AVOIDED THE WORD BECAUSE TO MANY MINDS IT CONNOTES UTTER DESPAIR.

THE POSITION OF THE ALLIES IS INDEED CRITICAL, BUT DARK AS IT IS THIS IS NOT THE MOMENT FOR DESPAIR. THE ALLIES ARE NOT BEATEN YET, AND THEY ARE NOT LIKELY TO BE BEATEN IF THEY STAND OFF THIS FIERCE BLITZKRIEG.

IT IS GOING TO TAKE A NEAR MIRACLE FOR THE ALLIES TO TURN THE TRICK, BUT THE POSITION ISN'T HOPELESS, AS SO MANY SEEM TO THINK.

AS I HAVE SAID SEVERAL TIMES BEFORE, HITLER MAY WIN THE WAR IN THIS BLITZKRIEG, BUT IT'S NOW OR NEVER. IF HE DOESN'T WIN NOW--IF THE ALLIES CAN STAND HIM OFF--THERE WILL BE AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT STORY. FRENCH PREMIER RAYNAUD SAID THIS MORNING:

"IF WE HOLD A MONTH--AND WE WILL HOLD A MONTH--WE WILL HAVE GONE THREE-FOURTHS OF THE WAY TO VICTORY."

THAT SUMS THE POSITION UP VERY ACCURATELY.

LET'S TRY TO GET A REALISTIC LOOK AT THE SITUATION AS IT IS AT THE MOMENT. THE GERMANS HAVE GOT THROUGH TO THE COAST BUT THEY HAVEN'T GOT THROUGH IN FORCE YET.

THE NAZI CONTINGENTS WHICH HAVE CAPTURED THESE ADVANCED POSITIONS ARE SMALL MECHANIZED UNITS, SUPPORTED BY THE AIR-FORCE. THE GERMANS STILL HAVE TO POUR STRONG FORCES ACROSS NORTHERN FRANCE IN ORDER TO CONSOLIDATE THOSE POSITIONS.

NEW YORK, MAY 22-(AP)-A PARIS DISPATCH TO THE NEW YORK DAILY NEWS SAYS THAT MME.MAGDA LUPESCU, ONE-TIME SWEETHEART OF KING CAROL OF RUMANIA, HAS ARRIVED IN SOUTHERN FRANCE ON HER WAY TO THE UNITED STATES.

MAY 23 1940

LUPESCU WAS REPORTED BY THE PAPER TO HAVE REMAINED ALOOF FROM A NAZI OFFER TO INDUCE CAROL TO PLACE HIS KINGDOM UNDER "GERMAN PROTECTION."

THE OPPOSITION SENATOR SAID THAT THE RAPID DEVELOPMENTS IN THE CONFLICT HAD CAUGHT THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT UNAWARES AND THAT IF HIS STUDY OF ITS PROGRAM WAS RIGHT, IT WOULD BE 1941 OR 1942 BEFORE MANPOWER AND MATERIALS OF WAR COULD BE FLOWING SUFFICIENTLY TO THE ALLIES.

WASHINGTON, MAY 22-(AP)-SECRETARY HULL'S TRADE AGREEMENTS WITH THE NETHERLANDS AND BELGIUM, OVERRUN BY THE NAZI ARMY, WILL BE PERMITTED TO STAND WITHOUT CANCELLATION AGAINST THE TIME WHEN AND IF BOTH COUNTRIES ONCE MORE ARE INDEPENDENT.

A DECISION TO THIS EFFECT HAS BEEN REACHED AMONG GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS, WELL-INFORMED SOURCES SAID TODAY.

THEY POINTED OUT THAT THE TRADE SITUATION WITH REGARD TO THE LOW COUNTRIES WAS DIFFERENT FROM THAT OF CZECHO-SLOVAKIA WHEN SHE WAS ABSORBED BY GERMANY AND PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SUSPENDED THE CZECH TRADE AGREEMENT.

THE LATTER WAS SUSPENDED TO PREVENT GERMANY FROM EXPORTING TO THE UNITED STATES CZECH PRODUCTS, OR EVEN GERMAN PRODUCTS UNDER THE GUISE OF CZECH GOODS, AND ENJOYING THE TARIFF REDUCTIONS UNDER THE TRADE AGREEMENT.

BUT, WITH THE ALLIED BLOCKADE STILL IN EFFECT, OFFICIALS DO NOT ENVISION ANY DUTCH OR BELGIAN EXPORTS TO THE UNITED STATES OR AMERICAN EXPORTS TO THE LOW COUNTRIES.

CONSEQUENTLY, THEY FEEL THAT THE TWO TRADE AGREEMENTS CAN BE LEFT IN EFFECT WITHOUT GIVING GERMANY ANY ADVANTAGE. GERMANY IS NOT ENTITLED TO THE TARIFF REDUCTIONS UNDER TRADE AGREEMENTS GRANTED TO OTHER COUNTRIES BECAUSE OF THE PRESIDENT'S FINDING THAT THE REICH DISCRIMINATED AGAINST AMERICAN GOODS.

THE NETHERLANDS AND BELGIUM HAVE BEEN AMONG THE UNITED STATES' BEST CUSTOMERS. TOTAL TRADE, IMPORT AND EXPORT, BETWEEN THEM AND THE UNITED STATES AMOUNTED TO $252,600,000 IN 1939. THIS DOES NOT INCLUDE TRADE WITH THE DUTCH EAST INDIES, TOTALING $128,500,000, AND WITH THE DUTCH POSSESSIONS IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

SOME OF THE PRODUCTS COMING FROM AND GOING TO THE NETHERLANDS EAST AND WEST INDIES ARE EMBRACED IN THE TRADE PACT.

FROM A POLITICAL VIEWPOINT, OFFICIALS BELIEVE THAT THE AGREEMENTS SHOULD NOT BE CANCELLED. THEY ARGUE THAT THEIR CONTINUANCE IS, IN EFFECT, AN ENCOURAGEMENT TO THE LOW COUNTRIES AS INDICATING THE UNITED STATES' BELIEF THAT AT SOME TIME HOLLAND AND BELGIUM WILL BE FREE AGAIN.

SAN FRANCISCO, MAY 22-(AP)-THE BRITISH AND FRENCH EMPIRES WILL SPEND NEARLY 19 BILLION DOLLARS THIS YEAR TO DEFEAT HITLER'S ARMIES, SIR LOUIS BEALE, A MEMBER OF THE ALLIED PURCHASING BOARD, SAID TODAY.

SIR LOUIS, IN CHARGE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS FOR THE ANGLO-FRENCH BOARD, TOLD THE COMMONWEALTH CLUB $1,500,000,000 WOULD BE SPENT IN

THE UNITED STATES, TWO-THIRDS OF IT FOR AIRPLANES.

IN ADDITION TO A ROUND BILLION OF ORDERS ALREADY PLACED, CONTRACTS FOR ANOTHER HALF BILLION ARE BEING NEGOTIATED, HE SAID ADDING THAT PROMPT DELIVERY HAD LED TO REPEAT ORDERS.

HOWEVER, HE URGED STILL MORE SPEED TO SUPPORT "THE LAST BULWARK OF FREEDOM IN EUROPE".

BRITAIN, SPENDING 10 BILLION DOLLARS ON THE WAR THIS YEAR, LOOKS FORWARD TO A LONG, BITTER CONTEST AND PLANS TO SPEND 13 BILLION NEAR YEAR AND 16 BILLION IN 1942, HE ADDED.

BOULOGNE AND CALAIS ENDANGERED; BRITISH ARMY PENNED UP IN BELGIUM

Invaders Penetrate Allied Lines at Coast Through Break in Weygand's Forces and Retake Abbeville—Launch Aisne Drive at Attigny.

By the Associated Press.

German shock troops waged a fierce battle today in the area along the English Channel near Boulogne, France, in an effort to cut off the Allied forces which have been fighting in Belgium. Alfred Duff Cooper said tonight that even Calais might be endangered.

This news was followed tonight by word from Paris that a strong counter-attack had carried to the outskirts of Amiens.

Abbeville, which was recaptured by the French yesterday, was in Nazi hands again today, and Winston Churchill, British Prime Minister, told the House of Commons that British communications were seriously endangered.

Mr. Churchill emphasized that the threat of a Nazi invasion was apparently becoming hourly more grave, and simultaneously Clement R. Attlee, deputy leader in the House of Commons, disclosed that the governments of both Great Britain and Ireland were apprehensively "alive to the possibilities" of an invasion through Ireland.

Hitting at possible fifth column activities, the police invaded the headquarters of the British Fascist leader Sir Oswald Mosley, and arrested him among others. The arrest also of Capt. Archibald H. M. Ramsay, Conservative member of Parliament, was announced in Commons.

Authorized German sources said that it was "quite probable" that Boulogne—which lies only twenty-six miles across the channel from Folkestone, England—has been captured by hard-driving Nazi armored legions. The Germans claimed to have from 500,000 to 1,000,000 Allied troops pocketed in Belgium and northern France. The Germans admitted, however, that the real battle against England could not begin until the strategic Allied pocket in northern France and Belgian—extending from Abbeville to Ostend—has been crushed. Meanwhile they launched a new attack late today against the French at Attigny on the Aisne.

"Abbeville, at the mouth of the Somme, twelve miles from the English Channel, was reached by the Germans on Tuesday, but French reports yesterday said that the Nazi advance guard had been driven out.

"It is too early yet to say what the result of this coastal fighting may be," he said, "but it evidently carries with it implications of a serious character."

Mr. Churchill repeated former Prime Minister Chamberlain's pledge that Great Britain would never make a separate peace with Germany. In a written reply to a question as to whether he renewed the pledge to conclude

Battle Is Raging at Boulogne

LONDON, May 23 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill, in a two-minute war report, told the House of Commons today that there is heavy fighting in the English Channel coastal area of Boulogne, that Abbeville is in German hands and that British communications are endangered.

Tonight Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, told the St. George's Conservative Club that "even Calais may now be in danger," that the Allies were fighting against great odds at Boulogne, but that the situation was not desperate.

no peace, except in agreement with France, he answered one word: "Yes."

Shortest War Statement to House.

It was Mr. Churchill's shortest parliamentary war statement on record.

While the House listened intently, the Prime Minister said that German mechanized forces which had made their way through the breach of the French lines had penetrated into the Allied rear in Belgium "and are now attempting to derange their communications."

He appended this note, however—that the Allied command, headed by Gen. Maxime Weygand, "is conducting operations involving all the Allied armies with a view to restoring and reconstituting their combined front."

Text of Premier's Statement.

The text of Mr. Churchill's statement follows:

"The German armored forces which made their way through the breach in the French Army have penetrated into the rear of the Allied army in Belgium and are now attempting to derange their communications. Abbeville is in enemy hands and heavy fighting is proceeding around and in Boulogne.

"It is too early yet to say what the result of this coastal fighting may be, but it evidently carries with it implications of a serious character. Meanwhile Gen. Weygand, who is in command, is conducting operations involving all the Allied armies with a view to restoring and reconstituting their combined front."

Meanwhile the British Army fought for its life today on the western front as the nation devoted itself to the war as its sole job.

A British Expeditionary Force communique told of fierce fighting in the Arras sector in France, with the British successfully maintaining their positions.

The Germans, however, forced a gap in the British lines near Audenarde, Belgium, about fifteen miles west of Brussels, and Nazi tanks and motorized units poured through at that point to endanger British communications.

Royal Air Force fighters and bombers attacked German columns and communications while British ground defenses on the front shot down German bombers and scouting planes "in numbers," it was said.

"There is a gap between the two (Allied) armies," a British spokesman declared, referring to a German thrust which a British communique earlier had said reached the neighborhood of the English Channel coast between the British and French forces.

The German High Command's report that port installations both at Dover, England, and Dunkirk, France, had been "effectually bombed" met a quick flat denial in London by the Air Ministry.

The military spokesman here, however, was unable to say whether the channel ports could be used by the Allies. He said he was certain they had "not been bombed to blazes."

"German armored forces are cruising behind (the lines), cutting telephone communications and attacking strategic points," he said.

He cautioned the press against sounding "a note of intense optimism" over the Allied counter-attack in the Cambrai area yesterday.

"The situation is grave; you only have to look at the map to see that British communications are in danger," he said.

Success Near Arras.

A British counter-attack yesterday between Arras and Douai, fifteen miles north, netted 400 German prisoners, 300 German dead and the destruction of a number of tanks, he said.

This counter-attack was only a small part of the picture, the spokesman said. He described the situation as "extremely obscure," saying that it is "impossible to know with any certainly what is going on."

The Air Ministry said that British bombers rained explosives on enemy communications in the Sedan area and in southern Belgium. Attacks also were made in Germany on railways carrying military traffic toward the battlefield.

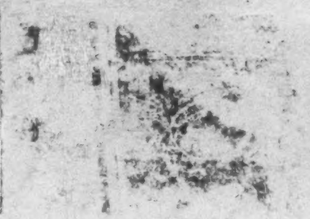
The British counter-attack between Arras and Douai appeared to have checked the Nazi motorized columns in that sector. If the British are able to drive still farther into the Nazi columns, they might be able to cut off the spear-Allied positions along the Scheldt head of the German offensive north of the Somme toward the sea.

B. E. F. Admits Break Through.

A communique of the British Expeditionary Force said that, although the Germans had been repulsed in many attacks against the River, they had succeeded in forcing a crossing near Audenarde, which is thirty-two miles due west of Brussels. Hitherto the German-Allied line had run along the river.

The B. E. F. said that the gap in the Allied positions was between Arras and Bapaume, twelve miles to the south.

The communique also said that there had been "fierce fighting" in this sector, with the British holding the northern flank.



STRONG NAVAL FORCES PATROL CHANNEL, ALERT FOR SURPRISE INVASION

Air-Raid Alarms And Frequent Gunfire Mark New Nazi Feint At Eastern England—Mosley Seized In Roundup Of Fifth-Column Suspects

[By the Associated Press]

London, Friday, May 24 — Strong British naval forces patrolled the English Channel and troops were rushed to south-coast towns during the night as precautions against a surprise German invasion across the Channel.

At one point holiday-makers were cleared from a pier which heavily armed naval units occupied immediately. Troops began erecting sand-bagged machine-gun posts on the promenade.

Nazi Air Feint At East Coast

Meantime, residents of three Kent towns spent an anxious hour listening to air-raid warnings and to frequent gunfire in a new Nazi air feint at Britain's east coast.

"Even Calais may now be in danger," Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, tonight told the St. George Conservative Club. He said the Allies were fighting against great odds at Boulogne. The situation, however, is not desperate, he added.

the historic stands against Napoleon and the Spanish Armada.

Across the English Channel the ports shook with the thunder of German guns. The German army stands where it never stood before.

To the west, the Government admitted it was "alive to the possibilities" of an invasion of Britain through Ireland.

Sir Oswald Mosley Seized

In a campaign to clear away all possible fifth-column danger at home, the Government today seized Sir Oswald Mosley, would-be Führer of England and brother-in-law of the Hon. Unity Freeman-Mitford, the statuesque blond English girl who was wounded in Germany during her frustrated pursuit of Naziism and Hitler.

The aristocratic member of Parliament and leader of the British Union of Fascists was arrested by Scotland Yard detectives in widespread raids aimed at fifth columnists as the German force stood almost within a parachute drop of England.

Other leaders of Sir Oswald's once black-shirted party were seized by the Government which now, by democratic transition to wartime dictatorship, has life-or-death power over its subjects.

Linked To "Lord Haw Haw"

Just before his arrest Sir Oswald had been linked in a House of Lords debate with "Lord Haw Haw," the radio announcer who nightly twits the British with his Oxonian-accented broadcasts from a German station.

"How do we know that this man (Lord Haw Haw) is not receiving information from his friends in British Fascist groups?" demanded Lord Elibank. . . . "Sir Oswald Mosley has a great deal to answer for. . . ."

Sister Of Unity.

Lady Mosley is a sister of Miss Freeman-Mitford, who shared a mutual admiration as the "perfect Nordic type" with Adolf Hitler before her return some time ago to England—still dazed from the unexplained gunshot wound.

A conservative M. P., Capt. Archibald H. M. Ramsay, anti-Semitic president of the so-called "Right Club," and others were imprisoned on suspicion of action "prejudicial to the security of the state."

Extending to the left, Scotland Yard swept in John Beckett, former M. P., organizer of demonstrations for "no more war" and secretary of the British People's Party.

Newspapers and street conversations alike reflected a feeling of tensity and frustration not evident since the Germans swept toward Paris in the World War.

A tendency to accept a theory that the Government is gravely worried and might be announcing less than it knows marked the gloom for the average citizen.

The most immediate threat appeared to be across the Channel, where German officers on the hills above Boulogne trained their glasses on the white cliffs of England.

Churchill Is Grave

Earlier today when the peril of the hour attained the highest pitch in English history, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, somber and grave, told a silent House of Commons that hope for Britain's cornered army rests with the counter-attack that Gen. Maxime Weygand, Allied chief, is preparing with French divisions along the Aisne river.

"It is too early yet to say what the results of this coastal fighting may be," said Churchill in the shortest message he has yet given on the war situation, "but it evidently carries with it implications of a serious character."

He detailed briefly the German gains across the Channel, said British communications were threatened, that heavy fighting was going on at Boulogne, only twenty-six miles from Folkestone, England, and that Abbeville, France, was in enemy hands.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—It was at Boulogne that Napoleon's Grand Armee spent thirteen months waiting for the French fleet to clear the Channel of English sails.]

As in the dark hours of 1915, Britain cast uneasy eyes upon Ireland.

Clement R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal and spokesman for Churchill in Commons, assured members that all phases of the Irish situation had been considered.

Ireland Guards Ports

From Dublin came word that nominally neutral Eire, having called up all its reserves, is guarding all ports and watching foreign shipping from armed trawlers and torpedo boats.

Parachute invasion and general defense coördination were the subject of Irish conferences.

Ireland's Deputy Prime Minister, Sean O'Kelley, warned that the Government would not let anyone "try to take advantage of the disunity of our people to exploit this country for the advantage of some other country."

The fifth-column defense drive included expulsion of 167 members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army from Britain.

Viscount Craigavon, Premier of Ulster, Northern Ireland, arrived from Belfast at the urgent summons of Prime Minister Churchill. His arrival led to the belief that Northern Ireland's defense against a possible invasion by German parachute troops would be discussed.

Developments of the day included Churchill's statement that Britain never would conclude a separate peace with Germany. Neville Chamberlain originally made such a pledge when he was Prime Minister.

Cause In U. S. Helped

Addressing the English Speaking Union, Duff Cooper said events of the last few weeks have "done more for the cause of the Allies in the United States than eight months of propaganda."

He declared that "danger is a test of friendship and this country is in a fearful danger today."

"We can leave it to the people of that great country (the United States) to decide for themselves what line they should take and when in the affairs of the civilized world," he added.

The Air Ministy said there is "no truth whatever" in the German high command communique which said Dover had been bombed.

British arms factories went on a seven-day week.

Innumerable drastic decrees went into effect under the Emergency Powers Act passed swiftly yesterday. Every citizen and all he owns is in effect at the Government's disposal.

Britain Faces Dual Threat Of Invasion; Mosley Is Arrested

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 23—Faced with the twofold invasion threat from the Channel and Ireland, the task before Britain tonight was incomparably greater than

MOSLEY SEIZED IN BRITISH DRIVE ON 5TH COLUMN

Two of English Fascist's Aids Also Arrested—Headquarters Raided.

AN M. P. IS PUT IN PRISON

Fear Expressed of Invasion Through Eire but Irish Say They'd Stop It.

LONDON, May 23 (A. P.).—Great Britain's war-time Scotland Yard seized Sir Oswald Mosley and other leading members of his Fascist British Union tonight in a far-reaching swoop designed to stamp out fifth column elements within the United Kingdom.

The offices of Mosley's organization near the Houses of Parliament were raided, and the leaders were arrested there, at their homes, and elsewhere. Five detectives lay in wait outside Sir Oswald's apartment, surrounded him when he emerged, and took him to New Scotland Yard.

Earlier, a Conservative Member of Parliament, Capt. Archibald H. M. Ramsay, and a number of other persons had been imprisoned on suspicion of behavior "prejudicial to the security of the State," and Parliament had enacted a death penalty for treachery.

Other Prisoners.

Besides Sir Oswald, arrested leaders of the British Union were identified by the Home Office as A. Raven Thomson, M. Francis-Hawkins, F. E. Burdett, Capt. U. A. Hick, C. F. Watts, H. McKechnie, G. Bruning and Mrs. Dacre-Fox.

The announcement referred to Home Secretary Sir John Anderson's statement in the House of Commons that the arrests were not based on the opinion or propaganda by those held, but are due to "danger that organizations might be used in the execution of acts prejudicial to the security of the State."

After Sir Oswald was taken away from his town apartment, a party of officers entered and conducted a search.

They also entered a house which he owns overlooking the Thames and took a number of documents.

Lady Mosley, who with her sister, Unity Freeman-Mitford, were friends of Adolf Hitler before the war, had left the Thames house for Denham a short time earlier, neighbors said. Lady Mosley also has been active in British union work.

She and Miss Freeman-Mitford, who is suffering from a bullet wound received in Munich last August, are daughters of Lord Redesdale.

The Home Office and its striking arm, Scotland Yard, acted within the scope of sweeping, virtually dictatorial powers which Parliament granted yesterday to Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Talk With Irish Leader.

Mr. Churchill summoned to London Viscount Craigavon, Prime Minister of Ulster, leading to belief that Northern Ireland's defenses against invasion by German parachute troops would be discussed.

One hundred and sixty-seven members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army were expelled from Britain.

In addition to the British Union leaders and Capt. Ramsay, who is president of the Right Club, the Home Office said that those arrested included John Beckett, former Labor Member of Parliament. Mr. Beckett is secretary of the British Peoples party and has organized frequent no-more-war demonstrations.

Mosley and 'Lord Haw Haw.'

Just before Sir Oswald was arrested his name had been linked with that of "Lord Haw Haw," Germany's English language radio announcer, in a House of Lords debate.

Lord Elibank asserted that he was advised that "Lord Haw Haw" formerly was Mosley's right hand man.

"How do we know that this man is not receiving information from his friends in British Fascist groups?" he asked. "Sir Oswald Mosley has a great deal to answer for, and many people would like to see him in a place where he could do less harm than he is doing today."

"Lord Haw Haw," so nicknamed by English newspapers because of his exaggerated Oxonian accent, is generally supposed in Great Britain to be a traitorous Englishman who was in Germany before the war started and stayed on to take the broadcasting job.

Since the war Sir Oswald has refrained from anything suggestive of open pro-enemy activity, but has conducted a constant campaign for British isolationism. Even before the start of hostilities he altered the name of his organization from British Union of Fascists to British Union.

Meanwhile, Major Clement R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons that the governments of Britain and Eire both are alive to the possibilities of an invasion of Britain through Ireland.

Major Attlee, who speaks in the House for Prime Minister Churchill said he could make no statement relating to Britain's own defensive measures and added:

"There can be no question of the British Government giving orders to the Government of Eire, but all proper consultations have taken place."

I. R. A. Activity Recalled.

A committee of members of the Conservative party said that the problem was considered urgent because of activities of the outlawed Irish Republican Army and the presence in Ireland of the German legation.

A Dublin spokesman said last night that the Government of Ireland was determined to prevent any use of its territory as a base for attack on Great Britain. Coastal defenses have been strengthened and the army is at full strength. Reservists released last year have been recalled.

[Warning that Eire will not let anybody come in there was sounded today in an address by Sean O'Kelly, Deputy Prime Minister.

[We will not let anybody come here and try to take advantage of the disunity of our people to exploit this country for the advantage of some other country," he said. He added that he hoped that "the completion of our great national ideal (unity and independence of all Ireland) would be achieved without any outside interference whatever except such aid as the Governments asks in the name of the people."]

Sir Henry Morris Jones, Conservative member, said he was not satisfied with Attlee's reply and would raise the question again.

Ramsay an Anti- Semite.

Capt. Ramsay, a member of a well known military family, long had been regarded as a Fascist, particularly on the score of anti-Semitism.

He was educated for the Army at Eton and Sandhurst, the British West Point.

He fought in the world war with the Coldstream Guards in France and was severely wounded in 1916. He was invalided from the Army in 1919 after service at the War Office and with a British war mission to Paris.

He has four sons. His wife is the former Ismay Lucretia Mary, daughter of the fourteenth Viscount Gormanston. Their residence is at Kellie Castle, Arbroath, Angus, Scotland.

He is vice-chairman of the Cavendish Land Company.

Fifth Column Safeguards.

His arrest followed closely on the issuing of regulations under the emergency legislation passed yesterday empowering the Home Secretary to intern or arrest any one suspected of being active in an organization subject to foreign influence or control or who has "sympathies with the system of Government of any power with which his Majesty is at war."

That the British were in no mood for anti-war agitation was indicated in a Parliamentary by-election in Middleton and Prestwich in which F. Haslam, a candidate of Sir Oswald Moseley's party on a Stop-the-War platform, polled only 418 votes against the 32,036 votes cast for the Conservative candidate, Lieut. Ernest E. Gates.

Refugees Watched.

The Home Secretary assured the House that steps have been taken to safeguard England from the entry of fifth columnists as refugees.

He said that special measures have been taken to increase the arms available to police for their protection.

Ordinarily, British police carry only a truncheon, with no firearms except in emergencies.

He said that it was against the public interest to disclose beforehand any steps against communist and Fascist societies.

Sir John also announced the expulsion of 167 members of the outlawed Irish Republic Army under the act, to prevent violence.

He said that it was against the public interest to disclose beforehand any steps against communist and fascist societies.

Others Detained.

Sir John said that the names of a number of other persons ordered detained would be announced as soon as they were arrested.

Replying to a question, the Home Secretary said: "This is a precautionary measure and Capt. Ramsay, like others who have been taken into detention, will have his right to make representations."

Sir John said that those arrested were not detained because of their opinions or propaganda activities but because of the danger of act "prejudicial to the security of th State."

Further questions drew the statement that Capt. Ramsay was arrested last night before the Home Secretary's Powers were broadened by today's order in council.

Many Germans in Eire.

Disturbed by the fact that there are many German diplomats and newspaper men in Dublin and by reports that there is considerable Nazi agitation throughout Eire, a group of Conservative members of the British Parliament is on the way to Dublin to confer with Prime Minister De Valera, according to a report received today by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

"The large number of German diplomats and German newspaper men stationed in Dublin is causing considerable alarm in England," Edward R. Murrow, C. B. S. correspondent, reported in a direct broadcast from London today.

"Members of the British Parliament are disturbed by reports of underground Nazi agitation in Eire," he said, "but thus far have refrained from revealing concern in view of Prime Minister De Valera's difficulties with the Irish Republican Army. A deputation of British Parliament Conservatives are to visit the Prime Minister to ask for protection of England's 'back door.'"

"The House of Commons," Murrow continued, "is to raise the Irish issue this afternoon. Lord Craighaven, North Ireland Premier, is in Londay today talking with Winston Churchill."

Mrs. Guinness' younger sister is the well-known Unity Freeman Mitford, she who returned to England a few months ago after suffering a mysterious gunshot wound at Munich shortly before the war's outbreak.

It was the second marriage for Sir Oswald. His first wife, Lady Cynthia Blanche Curzon, was a daughter of the late Marquis Curzon of Kedleston and a granddaughter of the late Levi Z. Leiter, of Chicago. She died in 1933.

Sir Oswald, 43, and a World War aviator with a slightly disabled leg, is the sixth baronet of a line created in 1781. His straight, unwavering gaze and commanding voice once whipped thousands of uniformed and ununiformed followers into line for Fascist and Hitlerian ideas.

Elected To Parliament In '18

After the war he declared he would be sitting in Cabinet meetings within ten years. He started by getting elected to Parliament in 1918 when only 22, but never advanced beyond the back bench, except in the second Ramsay MacDonald Cabinet, when he was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

First a Conservative, then a Liberal and then a Laborite, Mosley cut loose from all "Parliamentary corruption" as he called it, and started out on an independent line in 1931.

He preached a violent form of anti-Semitism, an element which caused all sorts of riots when he attempted to hold demonstrations in London's East End.

As Britain drifted into war with Germany, his influence waned.

Last July, before the outbreak of war, he announced his own four-point program for "peace in our time and our children's time."

He proposed to let Hitler alone in eastern Europe and "then we can meet around the conference table."

In subsequent speeches after the start of the war Mosley advocated peace with Hitler. A hostile crowd stoned his car after one of these speeches.

Mosley's Background

[By the Associated Press]

Fiery, black-haired Sir Oswald Mosley long has been an object of British suspicion and the target of many a brick, real and verbal, in his campaign to be "Führer" of England.

In 1937, while addressing his British Union (the party seldom used its full name, British Union of Fascists) a brick knocked him out, but he rebounded a year later with the belated announcement of his marriage to blond, Nazi-admiring Mrs. Diana Guinness.

Announcing the marriage had taken place two years before and that a son had been born to him, he denied the ceremony had been held in Munich or Berlin with Adolf Hitler as an official witness.

Wife Sister Of Unity Mitford

He outfitted his followers with black shirts and marching boots—outfits which he sold them—and at his meetings the Hitler marching tune, "Horst Wessel," with new words, was sung.

Used Hitler Salute

He rode a big black horse and gave the Hitler salute.

He boasted of 500 branches of his party in all parts of the United Kingdom.

But Parliament, shaking its collective head at his antics, passed an act banning political uniforms. Police frequently canceled permits for his parades. He found little financial support, and his own fortune, somewhere more than a million dollars, was not enough to sweep him into power.

"HOW DO WE KNOW THAT THIS MAN IS NOT RECEIVING INFORMATION FROM HIS FRIENDS IN BRITISH FASCIST GROUPS....SIR OSWALD MOSLEY HAS A GREAT DEAL TO ANSWER FOR, AND MANY PEOPLE WOULD LIKE TO SEE HIM IN A PLACE WHERE HE COULD DO LESS HARM THAN HE IS DOING TODAY."

SIR OSWALD'S "BRITISH UNION" HEADQUARTERS WERE RAIDED TODAY AND A MAN AND WOMAN ARRESTED, BUT THERE WAS NO INDICATION AS TO HIS WHEREABOUTS AT THE TIME.

("LORD HAW HAW", SO NICKNAMED BY ENGLISH NEWSPAPERS BECAUSE OF HIS EXAGGERATED OXONIAN ACCENT, IS GENERALLY SUPPOSED IN BRITAIN TO BE A TRAITOROUS ENGLISHMAN WHO WAS IN GERMANY BEFORE THE WAR STARTED AND STAYED ON TO TAKE THE BROADCASTING JOB.

(SINCE THE WAR SIR OSWALD MOSLEY HAS REFRAINED FROM ANYTHING SUGGESTIVE OF OPEN PRO-ENEMY ACTI ITY, BUT HAS CONDUCTED A CONSTANT CAMPAIGN FOR BRITISH ISOLATIONISM. EVEN BEFORE THE START OF HOSTILITIES HE ALTERED THE NAME OF HIS ORGANIZATION FROM "BRITISH UNION OF FASCISTS" TO MERE "BRITISH UNION.")

French Reach Edge of Amiens

PARIS, May 23 (A. P.).—The French armies, in a counter-attack tonight, cracked the German salient which had extended to the English Channel and reported that they had reached the suburbs of their first objective—Amiens.

MAY 23 1940

The French were pushed back, however, in their effort to break the Nazi salient along the Somme River.

Amiens previously had been taken by the Germans in their drive across northern France to the sea.

Effecting what foreign military experts called a "miracle of reorganization," the French fought with new fury to reunite their northern and central armies and chop off the long, sharp spearhead which the Germans have driven through northern France to the sea.

Pocketed with their British and Belgian allies, the northern French Army, using tanks, planes, motorized units and artillery, engaged the Germans in a bitter seesaw battle between Cambrai and Valenciennes, twenty-five miles apart.

Late today the German Army launched a new attack in the Attigny sector on the Aisne River. The attack is in the southeastern corner of the German gouge into France, in a sector comparatively quiet for the last few days.

Attigny is ten miles east of Rethel, near the point where the main Maginot Line joins its northwestern extension, now pierced. It is 115 miles northeast of Paris.

The sector in which the attack is being waged is on the south side of the Aisne, where the main French forces have taken their stand since the Germans broke through their northern defenses in the battle of the Meuse.

Between Cambrai and Valenciennes, at the base of their long southern salient, which extends northwest to the Abbeville coastal region, the Germans attacked to make tighter and smaller the sack in which they are holding the Allied forces of Flanders (estimated by the Germans at 500,000 to 1,000,000 men).

The battle jockeyed back and forth along the Scheldt River, with temporary advantages for both sides. At one point the French, a military spokesman said, fought their way down to the outskirts of Cambrai, territory from which they had been pushed earlier in the week by Nazi armored columns volleying west.

South of the salient, moving from their stabilized line along the Laon River, other French forces were en route north, fighting their way from the St. Quentin neighborhood toward the Cambrai battlefield.

A halt in withdrawals of the French, British and Belgian troops from their lines in Belgium, north and west from this main battleground, was implied in military reports, according to the authoritative newspaper Le Temps.

The extreme left wing of the Allied armies, which swung into Belgium on the day of the German invasion, has taken up positions in the rear of the Scheldt and Scarpe rivers and the troops face south and southeast against the German forces which are swinging on the channel.

MAY 23 1940

Cabinet to Remain in Paris.

A decision to maintain the Government's administrative base in Paris was reached at a meeting of the inner War Cabinet. That body also ordered industry to continue its function in the Paris area and put a curb on the movement of civilians from the city without army orders.

The northern battlefield was described here as being divided into these three zones:

1. A stabilizing line along the Aisne River extending westward from Rethel, about 100 miles northeast of Paris, to an indefinite point.

2. The strongly consolidated line on the Somme River, whose southern bank, the French said, was strongly defended from Ham to Abbeville, an airline distance of about sixty miles.

3. A jagged line of confused positions extending northward from the Somme area and culminating in the Cambrai-Valenciennes battlefield.

In the last zone, German units are pushing in between independent French groups, while French scouting parties zig-zag between German advance guards. This confused area includes St. Quentin, Laon and Peronne.

French troops were en route north from the St. Quentin neighborhood toward the Cambrai battle zone.

The Germans continue to hold Amiens, seventy miles north of Paris.

The Germans attacked in force along the battle line, running north and northeast of Cambrai along the Escaut (Scheldt) River to Valenciennes, but the French stood their ground.

In addition to the advance to Cambrai, the High Command reported particularly violent artillery fire at Attigny, ten miles east of Rethel on the main line of Allied resistance; at Longuyon, ten miles southwest of Longwy, near the junction of the French, Belgian and Luxemburg borders, and north of the Nied River, which runs through the main Maginot Line fortifications west of Saarbruecken.

The gunfire in these three sectors may be the forerunner of a German attack, the spokesman said, but activity in these regions at present is confined to the artillery.

Report 1,000 Planes Downed.

The military spokesman estimated the Allied aerial forces had brought down "at least 1,000" German planes since May 10. (Here twenty-seven words were censored.)

The operations in the Cambrai region, the spokesman emphasized, resulted from the withdrawal yesterday by French troops from the northwestern outskirts after German attacks. Later in the day, however, the French units counter-attacked and "won back even more than we had lost," the spokesman said.

The activity was described as "the biggest part" of "a great battle now in progress along the Escaut (Scheldt) River north of the city."

German penetrations in scattered areas between Arras and the Somme, the spokesman explained, were purely local and resulted in failure to establish consolidated positions.

Small units of motor cyclists, he said, pushed ahead of their own bases and between French groups where there has been no continuous line formed.

But French detachments engaged these Nazi units in skrmishes, often forcing them to retreat with losses, he added.

The French Government, in a communique issued after a meeting of the inner war cabinet, did not explain what was meant when it said that administrative functions of the Government would not be moved from Paris, but the Ministers themselves have remained here up to the present and there was no statement that they planned to leave. Only those administrative services which left at the start of the war will remain away. It never has been officially disclosed which services these are, but the ministries themselves have retained their places in Paris.

Approaching Allied Forces.

One French army, said to be moving north from the region of St. Quentin was reported only thirty-five miles short of establishing touch with the British, French, Belgian and Dutch units withdrawing from advanced positions in Belgium. The French forces in this operation appeared to be trying for a sword stroke to sever the light German scouting forces to the west of the Escaut (Scheldt) River.

These authorities placed the total German man-power in the region north of Nazi-occupied Amiens and west of the Cambrai-Valenciennes line at not more than 50,000. These were said to be principally fast-moving motorcycle and tank squadrons, now regarded as vulnerable to swift-striking mopping-up operations.

Refugees Block Highways.

Hedge-hopping French war planes successfully joined Great Britain's Royal Air Force in strafing and bombing these units, it was said. Enemy tanks were described as blasted over on their backs, motor trucks blown into ditches and motorcycle troopers running for cover like ants.

These operations were hampered, however, by the streams of refugees fleeing southward. It was estimated that there were 3,000,000 refugees crowding the French highways.

FRENCH, BRITISH RALLY TO DENT NAZI CHANNEL SALIENT IN TWO PLACES

One Jaw Of Pincers Reaches Amiens, Other Closing On Cambrai—Thin German Line Threatened—Pitched Battle Raging

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 23—In a double counter-offensive on the Somme and Flanders fronts, the Allies rallied tonight against the Nazi march to the sea, denting on top and bottom the German salient which extends across France like a pistol leveled at Britain.

The central forces, in a furious push northward on the Somme, reported they had reached their first objective—German-held Amiens.

The northern army, meanwhile, had fought its way southward to the outskirts of Cambrai in Flanders fields.

Nazi Salient Imperiled

The German salient, jutting west to the Channel, thus seemed to be threatened by an Allied pincer movement from north and south.

MAY 23 1940

Only a thin line of German armored columns extended between the northern and central Allied forces through the hole broken between Flanders and the Somme.

The French military spokesman acknowledged, however, that through this hole additional German units had filtered today in the direction of the sea.

Pitched Battle Raging

On the northern side of the salient, in Flanders, a pitched battle raged tonight, with the Germans lashing back savagely at the Allied offensive.

Of the details of the fierce struggle on the southern side, little could be learned beyond the fact that the Germans had been pushed back at Amiens.

Amiens earlier had been reported held by only 5,000 Germans.

The Nazis, striving to divert pressure from their spearhead, attacked during the afternoon in the Attigny sector to the east, but tonight's communique declared this assault already had failed.

Third Scene Of Battle

This was the third great scene of battle—an offensive loosed by the Germans in the southeastern corner of their gouge into France, near where the Maginot Line is hinged to the lighter, northwesterly fortifications.

The French thrust against Amiens, which has been held by light German forces, was aimed at the southern side of the spearhead made by earlier German successes. This spearhead lances to the sea, menacing the Dover Straits ports of Boulogne and Calais.

The easterly German attack on the Aisne was to the south of the point where the Maginot Line joins its now-pierced northwestern section, and was an action to cut behind that mighty fortification.

Allies Seek To Weld Forces

The action about Cambrai and Valenciennes—a twenty-five-mile line roaring with flame—was the first taken by the Allies in an effort to bring two isolated forces together.

The German assault on the Aisne was preceded by the thunder of heavy artillery. It was in this area—about one hundred miles northeast of Paris on the south side of the river—where the French took their stand after the Germans struck through their northern defenses in the battle of the Meuse.

New Front Described

Here was the new and enlarged front as it was described tonight by the War Ministry's spokesman:

It ran from Belgium south along the Scheldt river to Valenciennes. From there it turned southwest to Cambrai and west toward Arras and then southwest, cutting the Arras-Bapaume highway.

Then it dropped across the German wedge to the Somme river and ran east along the Somme and Aisne to Montmedy, really a second front.

Northern Battle Roars On

The northern battle of Flanders—on ground where men fell by the tragic thousands a generation ago—roared on for a priceless stake—mastery of the English Channel.

The Allied forces there—part of a great body said by the Germans to aggregate from 500,000 to 1,000,000 which had been surrounded in the ring made by the earlier German advances—struggled on in sight of the Scheldt river.

Still another French force was moving up from the south to try to join them. This force left its stabilized line in the region of Laon and was fighting its way from the region of St. Quentin, scarcely twenty-five miles away. Liaison would pinch off the Nazi spearhead near its base.

Where Flanders fields run into Belgium the Nazis hurled great tanks and dive bombers in several attacks across the Scheldt. They were reported first to have pierced the British lines at Audenarde, but later Belgian advices said the lines had been closed again and the Nazis repulsed.

The Allied army on the Cambrai-Valenciennes sector had the advantage of numbers and some of the picked units of the French, British and Belgian forces. Too, the weather added to the difficulties of the Germans in maintaining their long communications lines, but the Nazis still held the upper hand in the air.

Decisive Factor

And that was the decisive factor in the battle of the Meuse—the battle which opened France to invasion.

From Valenciennes to Cambrai the lines swirled in the confusion of a wide-open war of movement over the plains which in the World War were the scene of fixed trench fighting. Military experts said the outcome depended upon the ability of the rival commands to follow and anticipate its extreme vagaries.

Military circles declared that fighting was going "satisfactorily" on the whole."

To Keep Base In Paris

The Government decided to maintain its administrative base in Paris, thus suggesting a feeling of confidence, and also ordered industry to continue to function in the Paris area. The movement of civilians from the city was restricted.

The Admiralty announced the loss of a submarine, a torpedo boat and a supply ship in operations off the Dutch and Belgian coasts. But to offset this the military spokesman declared "at least 1,000" German planes had been shot down since May 10.

Nazis Hint Boulogne Is Taken, With Invasion of England Due

But Berlin Asserts Pocket in Belgium and France First Must Be Cleared of Allied Troops Now Trapped.

BERLIN, May 23 (A. P.).—Authorized German sources, although declining to affirm or deny reports that the Reich's armies had taken Boulogne, French seaport on the English Channel, added: "It is quite probable."

Boulogne is on the lower end of the Strait of Dover, twenty-six miles by sea from Folkestone, England. It is some forty-five miles northwest of Abbeville, which a German Army spearhead has engulfed.

The Boulogne-Folkestone channel route had been the only one regularly available to civilian traffic between France and England since the start of the war.

Since reaching Abbeville Tuesday, the German southern spearhead has been groping for Boulogne, while the drive of the main German columns to divide and destroy Allied armies in northern France and Belgium has produced other evidence of an imminent assault on England herself.

Bloody Losses Reported.

"The real battle is constantly being brought closer to Britain," said DNB, the official German news agency, "but before it can begin the pocket in the north of France and the Belgian coastal area must be completely occupied by German troops.

"In view of the strong forces encircled here, it will not be done without heavy fighting."

DNB's report from the front said that the Allies had "small successes" yesterday, but that the Germans, with support from the air, had driven the French back with "bloody losses."

"These frustrated attacks, after earlier successes on the part of the enemy, have weakened the enemy's will to resist in the final showdown," asserted DNB.

The Germans acknowledged that the Allies—particularly the French—were making repeated attempts to break through the German wedge reaching to the Channel coast, these particularly in the Cambrai sector.

Nazis Watch French Efforts.

Military observers were watching closely to see whether the French would launch drives simultaneously in the Cambrai sector on the north of the German salient and LaFere on the south in an attempt to cut through.

Adolf Hitler's power-diving Stuka bombers and darting speedboats collaborated in a smash at Channel communications to provide the most visible signs of the offensive.

German land forces, meanwhile, crashed southward across the Scheldt River in the relentless closing of a vise of men and machines on more than half a million Allied soldiers cut off from the main French forces to the south.

The Nazi Air Force reported that it had heavily bombed the Channel ports of Dover, England, and Dunkirk, France, and severely damaged three transports, one tanker and a destroyer in the Channel.

Nazi Naval Forces Active.

[At London today the British Air Ministry said that there was "no truth whatever" to the assertion of the German High Command that the port installations at Dover had been bombed. Early today, however, heavy gunfire and loud detonations, believed to be bomb explosions, were heard along the southeast English coast, apparently coming from the direction of Calais or Dunkirk, France. The firing lasted for two hours.]

Germany's wasplike naval forces—a swarm of swiftly stabbing speed boats, apparently carrying torpedoes—were credited, on the other hand, with sinking an Allied destroyer off Dunkirk.

The German High Command said that the attack over the Scheldt River was "slowly winning ground against heavy enemy resistance."

In close collaboration with the vise-like movement of the German forces afoot or in rolling armor, the Nazi airmen were specifically stated to have smashed an Allied effort to break through in the Cambrai sector—path of the German sweep toward the English Channel, which divides the Allies.

"Air force attacks centered mainly on rear connections of the enemy as well as retreat movements and troop concentrations in Flanders and at Artois," said the regular communique of the High Command. "Three transports and one tanker, with a total tonnage of around 20,000, and one destroyer were heavily damaged by the armed reconnaissance of the channel coast."

At its narrowest point the channel is twenty-two miles wide.

Report British Troops Embarking.

Berlin spokesmen asserted that British troops, entrapped by the swift mechanized thrust to the Channel region through north France, were falling back to the shore and were "embarking at several French coastal points."

The High Command reported that the Allies lost nine planes and acknowledged that five German planes were missing. Despite the sweeping assaults of the German aerial armada, the High Command noted: "Air force activity on both sides was limited on account of the weather."

Along the south edge of the expanding German bulge toward the west, between the Somme and the Meuse rivers, the German High Command declared, "The enemy is on the defensive."

The High Command also told of progress made by the advance force aimed at Calais in Artois, the region around Arras, but gave no further details.

The High Command again accused the Allies of "planless air attacks against non-military objectives," saying that the Dutch towns of Nijmwegen and Walwyk had been attacked by the British and "numerous" civilians killed.

As pictured by informed German spokesmen the likeliest plan of the High Command seems to be to bite off as many chunks as possible within the huge rectangular sector bounding an estimated 550,000 British, French and Belgian troops in the northern part of the western front. This, said authorized spokesmen, would avoid unnecessary bloodshed and split into fragments any concentration of energies of the Allies.

The encirclement was authoritatively said to be nearly complete—apparently lacking only man power to plaster the chinks now held by mechanized forces.

The widening of the German-held corridor through northwestern France was the aim of the drive at Calais and Boulogne. In the Lafere region southward a German spearhead appears to be aimed at Compiegne, some forty miles northeast of Paris. The capture of this point would wipe out one of the bitterest of Germany's world war memories, for it was in a forest near that city that the Armistice was signed.

Admit Fierce Opposition.

Land forces were said to have followed up the attack by dive bombers to smash the Allied attempt to break through at Cambrai. The Allies had resorted to a tank attack—the type of assault which has characterized most of the German blitzkrieg advances.

The ill-defined stab toward Calais was said to be strongly supported by German troops moving south through Flanders over the Scheldt River in hte face of fierce opposition.

The High Command's report of the attacks on Dover and Dunkirk was taken as another bit of evidence that an offensive against England was drawing near. Increasing activity of German speed boats in the channel gave weight to this possibility.

These attempts were made principally in the Valenciennes sector, it was said here. The German High Command reported that the Nazi pincer-grip held fast in the face of these sharp counter-thrusts.

The widening of the German army's corridor through north France continued toward the Channel south of Boulogne, just thirty miles across the Strait of Dover from the English coast, the Germans said.

Pause Is Admitted.

In the face of stiffened Allied resistance, and expecting a counter-offensive under the direction of Generalissimo Maxime Weygand, the Germans paused for the moment at least in their push toward Paris and turned to the problem in the north.

They poured more men and machines into their southern pincer jaw to be ready for the expected counter-offensive, and strove to bring the northern jaw down hard to press in on the trapped Allied forces of between 500,000 and 1,000,000 men.

With the lull in major maneuvers the Germans turned to cleaning up operations in the north, in conjunction with the closing of the pincer jaws, and brought up re-enforcements to consolidate their position.

Depend Upon Flawlessness.

With armored divisions freed from work in north Belgium, they were expected to be moved quickly by an eventual renewal of the drive on Paris.

The feeding, provisioning and supplying of munitions and fuel to the fast-moving German Army in the west creates a problem requiring the most careful planning day in and day out to assure an airtight faultlessness upon which success hangs.

The German official news agency, DNB, declared today that at the beginning of the western offensive on May 10 the troops were provisioned for six full days. There are 1,700 men in each division whose sole duty is to look after an unterrupted flow to the front of all necessary food supplies and fuel for soldiers, their war machinery, motor vehicles and horses, the report said.

In the first days of the offensive, trucks were used exclusively in supplying the front lines. Meanwhile, however, railroad lines have been repaired, permitting to a large extent the use of railways from the Hinterland, according to DNB.

Unidentified "special vehicles"—not airplanes—are being used, DNB said, wherever rail or truck is not fast enough.

To illustrate the vastness of the task, the report said:

"Supposing one division to consist of 20,000 men, there must be a corresponding number of warm meals at hand daily, besides the same number of bread rations, fresh meat and vegetables, cigarettes and chocolate, besides innumerable tons of oats, hay and straw for horses and tremendous quantities of fuel and munitions."

The Texts of the Day's War Communiques

French

PARIS, May 23 (AP)—Tonight's communique of the French High Command follows:

Very numerous combats have taken place at various points in the northern region.

Our advanced elements have reached the suburbs of Amiens.

An enemy attack preceded by intense artillery preparation failed south of Sedan.

The artillery duel extended from Longwy to the Moselle.

Intense activity of our bombing aircraft by day and night.

During the evening of May 22 our fighters drove back four squadrons of enemy bombers, each consisting of a score of machines that were endeavoring to carry out dive-bombing attacks on our battlefront.

At least eight enemy planes were brought down during the fight. All our planes returned.

An earlier communiqué stated:

In the north the battle continued with the greatest violence.

It is confirmed that we have driven to the outskirts of Cambrai.

Artillery combat has become violent at various points of the front, particularly in the regions of Attigny, Longuyon and to the north of the Nied River.

German

BERLIN, May 23 (AP)—The German High Command issued the following communiqué today:

In Flanders our attack over the Scheldt is slowly winning ground against heavy enemy resistance. Near Valenciennes the fight still is in progress. The forest region of Mormal, southeast of Valenciennes, where the French forces attempted to flee, has been mopped up.

Yesterday also attempts of enemy armored forces to break through near Cambrai were thrown back by the army air force with enemy losses. In Western Artois German troops advanced their wedge northward in the direction of Calais.

On the entire Southern Front, from the Somme to the Meuse, the enemy is on the defensive. In the fortifications of Liége, two of the most modern works of Battice surrendered with twenty officers and 650 men to our troops. On the southern fronts, Namur still holds some emplacements.

Air-force attacks centered mainly on rear connections of the enemy as well as retreat movements and troop concentrations in Flanders and Artois. Three transports and one tanker, with a total tonnage of around 20,000, and one destroyer were heavily damaged by the armed reconnaissance of the channel coast.

The harbor facilities at Dunkerque and Dover were effectually bombed. German speed boats sank an enemy destroyer off Dunkerque.

Air-force activity on both sides was limited on account of the weather. The enemy lost nine planes and five German planes are missing.

A heavy cruiser was severely hit on the prow off Narvik. One 3,000-ton transport was sunk and another heavily damaged.

A tent camp and munition dump were fired, supply columns scattered and landing facilities successfully attacked.

Last night also the enemy continued planless air attacks against non-military objectives. In the Netherlands the towns of Mijmegen and Walwyk were attacked by British planes and numerous civilians killed.

According to additional reports received, the number of enemy airplanes shot down by anti-aircraft between May 10 and May 15, as previously stated in a special bulletin, amounts to 342.

British

LONDON, May 23 (AP)—The communique of the British Expeditionary Force today stated:

The Germans have attacked the Escaut [Scheldt] position at many places without success except near Audenarde, where they forced a crossing.

In the Arras sector there has been fierce fighting and we have successfully maintained our positions on this flank of the gap between Arras and Bapaume.

Through this gap the enemy have succeeded in passing armored elements followed by motorized units which have succeeded in reaching the neighborhood of the coast.

Steps are being taken to guard vital points against these detachments.

There has been much air activity over Northeast France and German bombers and reconnaissance aircraft are being shot down in numbers by anti-aircraft artillery and small arms fire.

The following Air Ministry communiqué was issued this morning:

Tanks, armored vehicles and troop concentrations forming the vanguard of the enemy's advance toward the French Channel ports were again heavily bombed yesterday by strong forces of Blenheim aircraft.

For more than six hours, until gathering dusk made recognition of troop movement impossible, relays of aircraft kept up an almost continuous assault with bombs and machine guns, causing damage and confusion over a wide area.

Among the first targets successfully attacked in the afternoon was a column of lorries and armored fighting vehicles caught on the move. Direct hits on lorries were secured by six Blenheims attacking individually in quick succession, and bombs were seen to burst on the roads amongst the column over a distance of 600 yards.

As each aircraft approached to bomb, it was subjected to a barrage of well-aimed pom-pom fire from about thirty guns which formed a part of the column. Having released their bombs, the Blenheims then turned their attention to the gun crews, attacking them with machine-gun fire.

Another force of Blenheims, carrying out an offensive patrol in formation, broke formation to deliver individual attacks on a number of targets.

One aircraft registered a direct hit on a group of army lorries, another missing a group of vehicles by such a narrow margin that damage from bomb splinters was almost certainly caused, whilst three more aircraft obtained hits on supply lorries on a road and on several tanks standing in an adjoining field.

Along another road, closely packed columns of lorries and armored cars were seen traveling at about forty-five miles an hour, and a successful attack was made on a concentration of fifteen to twenty tanks bunched together just off the main road.

Later arrivals in this area found lorries and cars hit by earlier bombing attacks blazing by the roadside and came under heavy fire from machine guns which had been set up on tripod mountings along the main roads.

Other bombers attacking main roads secured direct hits on an important road junction and on the northern end of an important bridge.

Shortly after 9 o'clock in the evening, under a darkening sky, a final sortie was made against the headquarters of the enemy's armored division by a force of Blenheims especially detailed for this task.

Close on to 100 high-explosive bombs were dropped in the course of this concentrated attack and most of the bombs were seen to explode well within the target area.

A second Air Ministry communiqué stated:

All day yesterday Blenheim battle and Lysander aircraft continued to harass enemy movements in fighting areas in the northeast of France and Belgium.

Enemy tank columns and motorized units were attacked and many hits made on them. Concentrations of troops were repeatedly bombed and machine-gunned and thrown into disorder.

Five of our airmen failed to return.

Last night a strong force of heavy and medium bomber aircraft went out to attack objectives behind the front. In Southern Belgium and the Meuse [river] sector much damage was done to road and rail junctions.

The railway junction at Charleroi [Belgium] was damaged. Bridges in the Namur region sustained direct hits. Troop concentrations were heavily bombed in the area north of the Aisne [river].

At Binche, the railway bridges and sidings were hit. At Gendern two supply trains were bombed. They exploded and caught fire. North of Aachen two other goods trains were hit.

Returning from these raids one aircraft saved its last bomb for a direct hit on a runway of The Hague Airdrome.

Another aircraft penetrated into Germany as far east as Leipzig and bombed an important power station near Roeths. From these extensive night operations all our aircraft returned.

Fighter aircraft also was extremely active in yesterday's operations, carrying out continual sorties over battlefronts.

They had another successful day. In the course of many encounters, over forty enemy aircraft were destroyed or seriously damaged. Six of our fighters are missing.

Operations have been continued throughout today with undiminished intensity.

A third Air Ministry communiqué added:

Trains were derailed and set on fire, tracks were demolished and the enemy's road and rail communications over a wide area were interrupted in the course of last night's extensive operations by aircraft of the bomber command.

Remote objectives attacked included railway junctions, marshalling yards, troop convoys and road and rail bridges in many parts of Northwestern Germany, and similar targets in the occupied territory of Belgium immediately behind the battle area.

At Geldern, a German town near the Dutch frontier, four heavy bombs from a Hampden [bomber] scored direct hits on an ammunition train. This immediately blew up with an explosion which rocked the aircraft high above.

"We were about 2,000 feet up when we first saw the train standing in a yard," said the navigator and bomb-aimer of this aircraft. "We made a level attack. * * * The whole train just went sky high. * * *"

The crew of another Hampden flying above a main railway line ten miles east of Liege sighted two supply trains standing still. The bomber pilot said: "* * * did first of six runs over the longest train. Our first bomb landed on the right bank of the line. The second was a direct hit on the rear truck * * *. I then decided to drop two bombs together. Both of them went crashing through the center of the train and there was a terrific blast of smoke and flame. The flare showed wreckage lying all over the place."

Another aircraft crew * * * made a short detour to visit The Hague airdrome and dropped a few heavy bombs which exploded on the main runway. In the rear of the Belgian battlefield three Wellington heavy bombers reported a number of direct hits * * * on the Namur-Gembloux main road. * * * An important railway crossing and road bridge at Givet were damaged, and five direct hits were scored on a railway marshaling yard.

Farther south another section of the large raiding force successfully attacked an enemy mechanized column * * * between Valenciennes and Dinant. * * *

Center of Rotterdam in Ruins; Thousands of Bodies in Debris

American Correspondent Quotes Germans as Saying Surrender Came Too Late —Havoc Wrought in 7 Minutes.

By LYNN HEINZERLING.

RHENEN, The Netherlands, May 23 (A. P.).—Ruins in proud Rotterdam and the crumbled works of "strong points" in the Dutch defenses tell the story of the shattering impact of Germany's mechanized army and the devastation rained from the skies by the Nazi stukas (dive bombers).

I have just completed a three-day tour of the Netherlands battle-front, in which I have seen the destruction of modern war.

The nerve center of Rotterdam—a square mile of which once was the business and financial district of Holland's most prosperous seaport—is a mass of debris, heaps of bricks and mortar and twisted beams and girders.

Two miles east of here stands what was the southern strong point of the Grebbe defense line—a wooded hill which overlooks the approaches to Rhenen. It was one of the best Dutch defensive positions I saw on the entire tour.

Thousands Slain in Rotterdam.

Now the woods are littered with the equipment of war, pock-marked with shell holes and ripped by machine-gun fire. Along the road there is evidence of a hard battle—hastily dug holes, smashed equipment, discarded arms. Searchlights set in hillside bunkers that were meant to light up night operations were shattered by German gunfire.

In addition to tank barriers, the Dutch had constructed machine gun nests on each side of the road so that they could keep up a cross fire. But the overwhelming German forces swept through the line and on to Rotterdam and the sea after bitter fighting.

No one can agree on how many bodies may be buried beneath the Rotterdam ruins. The German authorities say the business area was cleared of civilians before the Stukas began their deadly work. But one air force officer estimated that there must be "several thousand" dead.

[The Dutch legation at Paris announced on Sunday that more than 100,000 were dead in Rotterdam.]

Says It Took 7 Minutes 30 Seconds.

The Stukas, say the Germans, completed their work in seven and a half minutes, from first bomb to last. The Dutch commander had received a three-hour ultimatum. Shortly after the deadline had been reached he capitulated. But by then the Germans, fearing that he was holding out in hope of re-enforcements had already started the bombers on their way, and it was too late to stop them, they said.

The official toll of wounded is set at 354, while unofficial casualty lists run as high as 10,000. One of the buildings ruined was the American Consulate. The consul, John H. Lord, got out before the building was hit.

The 28,000-ton liner Statendam, one of the largest in the Dutch merchant fleet, is still smouldering in the harbor. She lay alongside Noordereiland (North Island) in the center of the Nieuwe Maas (New Meuse) River.

Chances are that she may have been set afire by a Dutch shell, for it was on Noordereiland that the German positions were centered, and the Nazi forces used the Statendam as an effective barricade.

Germans Lost Heavily Too.

By no means all of the casualties were Dutch, however. German troop transport planes, seeking to land at an airport a few miles outside the city in the direction of The Hague, found fighting already in progress there. The planes, trying emergency landings on a road nearby, were caught by cross-currents of wind, and fifteen of them cracked up.

In a clearing on top of the fortified hill north of here I saw some of the graves marked by 450 wooden crosses, with trench helmets hung on them. They were about evenly divided between Dutch helmets and German.

There were barbed wire pits and shell holes on all sides. The litter of the equipment of the fallen lay on the ground around the clearing.

Knew All About Flood Idea.

A German officer stood at one end of the line of crosses and told a handful of correspondents:

"The Dutch army fought bravely and the German soldier would be the last to reflect on the honor of a soldier who had fought in such a manner."

The Grebbe fortifications extended from this hill north to Amersfort and on to the Zuider Zee. To the north of the hill the Dutch had many more fortifications, as well as one of the areas where they had thought that flooding the land would hold up the German advance.

There, too, the Germans broke through on their great surge to the west.

Ex-Kaiser Saws Wood.

"We knew all about the plan to flood the land and our technical men knew it would not stop us," the German officer said.

The Dutch, meanwhile, seem to be taking the occupation philosophically. A few are bitter over the lack of British help—the Germans say only 700 British troops landed in Holland—but otherwise they are seeking to return to normal after an invasion that left them stunned by its speed.

Nor has the occupation appeared to have had much effect on the life of the former Kaiser Wilhelm. The eighty-one-year-old wood-chopper is still at nearby Doorn. The German authorities say he declined a British Government invitation to remove him and his family "in protection" to England, his enemy of 1914-18.

Nazi Flag Over Channel Port; Troops Hope to Attack England

U. S. Reporter Tells of Surprise at Sight of German Banner Right on Coast—Says Belgians Accept Fact Calmly.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

WITH THE GERMAN ARMIES ON THE WESTERN FRONT, May 23 (A. P.).—I have reached the English Channel to find German forces here and the Nazi swastika flying.

It seems almost unbelievable that I should find Germany at this channel. But the Nazi swastika waving from the local commander's headquarters leaves no doubt about it.

[Mr. Lochner, chief of the Associated Press bureau in Berlin, is in the fifth day of a tour with the German forces on personal invitation of Hitler. He did not specify the point at which he reached the English Channel today, but apparently it was some place in Belgium. Technically the eastern limit of the channel runs between England and France, but Belgian ports are popularly considered to be on the channel.]

The crews of U-boats and speedboats are champing to be sent on their errands of destruction.

Here as elsewhere the roads of approach are jammed with infantry, more infantry and still more infantry, and with artillery ever more formidable, backed by an air force equipped to the last fine detail.

All are awaiting Adolf Hitler's final command to go to England.

Everywhere one hears soldiers singing the "Engelland" song.

The young men realized that such a venture would be no picnic.

"Maybe fifty of each one hundred ships will be sunk by the British," one infantryman from Saxony said to me in his quaint dialect.

"But why shouldn't I be lucky and be on one of the ships that gets over? And if not—well, that just cannot be helped."

Belgians Mix With Germans.

Another lad from Mecklenburg rubbed his hands and declared: "Oh, boy! Won't it be great to march on to London?"

Just when Hitler will push the button, however, nobody could predict.

Meanwhile the opposition forces have restored life in this sector of the front to normal as they have done everywhere else.

The Belgians go about their work as usual. Cafes and restaurants are open, with Germans and Belgians mingling freely. Shops are open and goods are sold for either Belgian or German currency, at the rate of 10 francs to the mark.

[Before the German invasion the Belgian franc was valued at 3.3 cents; the nominal rate on the Reichs—mark is 40 cents.]

Hitler Won't Be Hurried.

In spite of the enthusiasm for such an adventure, Hitler is not likely, however, to attempt to attack England herself until he has paved the way to his own satisfaction with a tried and trusted program of these main points:

30,24-2455

30.24-2455

1. Destruction of all British naval, air and ground organization by air raiding; 2. Similar destruction of airplanes and vessels; and 3. Combined attack by speedboats, submarines and air bombers on British transports and warships.

Not until Der Fuehrer feels that this has been done adequately is he likely to aim a decisive blow with land forces.

Continuous bombing of the Belgian Channel port of Ostend and the French ports of Dunkirk, Calais and Dieppe is in line with this in the continental fighting, the intention being to demolish docks to which British reinforcements might come and from which British and Allied troops might escape in the event of a rout.

Smashing Airports

Another thing the Germans are doing now is to try to smash enough Belgian and French airports to prevent the Continental Allies from bringing effective air aid to England in the event she needs it during any German attack on the British Isles.

The men of the armies with which I have been traveling for five days frequently ask me what has happened in the Channel. They seem to be itching to get over to England.

But the German leaders are dealing first with the situation at hand and, in addition to pushing forward the right wing and mopping up, are preparing for a possible counter-offensive from the Allies.

The Battice fortress, one of Belgium's last big fortifications of the Liege Line, fell yesterday in one of these mopping-up operations. I saw it taken after a twenty-minute artillery, air and infantry attack of clocklike precision.

Other such positions seemed destined to follow with the same efficiency.

This precision baffles the observer again and again. When two days ago we stood on the heights of Renaix to see the Allied troops retire, our escort told us that at 3:30 P. M. the crossing of the Scheldt Canal would begin. At 3:15 on the road directly below us motor trucks carrying huge pontoons were rattling by. They were hurrying to get into action, as always, at the appointed hour.

Channel Drive Coming, Nazi General Reveals

Küchlen Lets It Be Known His North Army Is Aiming At Ostend—Reichenau's Southern Force Pushing To Calais

MAY 23 1940

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
[Associated Press Correspondent]

With the German Western Armies, Friday, May 24—Gen. Georg von Küchlen, commander in chief of the German army in the Antwerp sector, said today his force was aiming, via Ghent and Bruges, at Ostend, Belgian port directly across from England.

At the same time Gen. Walther von Reichenau is pushing toward Calais and Dunkerque, two French ports opposite England, one of Küchlen's adjutants explained.

Although a hot battle was raging only a few miles away, General Küchlen found time to receive me.

"A stern battle is on at Ghent," he said simply.

Cutting Way To Sea

"But we are cutting our way to the sea and expect to be there shortly. Our enemies are resisting bravely."

"In addition we have inundations and other difficulties of terrain to contend with," Küchlen added.

"Nevertheless the odds are greatly in our favor. Our task of the moment is to get the Ghent canal in our hands. That will happen shortly."

Only thirty minutes—as a plane flies—separated me today from England. I stood at an airport facing England across the water (location not revealable) for the first time since entering the Western zone of operations. Stukas and heavy bombers were roaring over our heads constantly.

Reserved For Fighters

Our particular airport had neither heavy bombers nor Stukas. It was reserved for Messerschmitt pursuit planes, of which twenty-seven fringed the airfield, artfully camouflaged by twigs and the tops of trees. The commander of this squadron is Herman Handrick, winner of the 1936 Olympic decathlon.

Even as we greeted Handrick, eight of his Messerschmitts took to the air and were out of sight in a jiffy.

"These eight planes have started to assist in the land fight," Handrick explained.

"Each plane has either four machine guns or two machine guns and two cannon. They have orders to swoop down on marching enemy columns."

Naval Officers Seen

For the first time since moving about in the operations area we have seen naval officers darting back and forth in speedy cars.

News correspondents touring the front were told today that Antwerp, the important Belgian seaport and commercial center, surrendered to German forces in a typical coup d'etat in which the garrisons of two fortifications were surprised and overpowered.

Antwerp's burgomaster thereupon regarded further bloodshed as useless, and ceremoniously handed the city's keys over to the German commander three days ago.

Antwerp on the whole is but little damaged, but time bombs blew up even after the Germans had moved into what was Antwerp's pride, the Scheldt tunnel, an engineering marvel leading under the Scheldt river. In other words, it was the Hudson tunnel of Belgium.

A big bridge across the Scheldt was dynamited by the Belgians before they retreated.

To construct an emergency pontoon bridge the Germans had to take account of the fact that two changes of the tide and ebb daily made the difference 15 feet. This presented an engineering problem of the first magnitude.

It was solved by a clever device of windlasses at both ends, which first wind supports of the pontoons at either end up and down as the water rises or falls.

The feat was all the more remarkable because it had to be accomplished in the midst of shell fire of the enemy. German army engineers regard this as an unprecedented achievement.

Allied Bomber Appears

Our travels on the front were delayed for hours tonight when the military road over which we were motoring was the object of an attempted bombing.

Our cars were forced to take cover while the bomber crisscrossed the road in an attempt to locate it, and then dropped parachute flares right to our left.

Immediately, however, German searchlights caught him and anti-aircraft guns boomed.

Without dropping bombs, he disappeared. Later we heard bombs had been dropped at Aachen, in Germany, near the Belgian frontier, but without any damage being done.

The air activity, however, meant that all cars on the crowded military road had to drive in complete darkness at a snail's pace.

Popular Song Hits England

BERLIN, May 23 (AP)—German soldiers waiting at the English Channel for the command to invade England and the folks back at home are singing the German sailors' song, the words of which, in free translation, follow:

Today a song we'll sing,
We'll drink the cool sweet wine
And let our glasses clink
For orders came to part.

CHORUS

Give me your hand, your dear white hand,
Farewell, my sweetest love,
Farewell, my sweet, farewell;
Farewell, for we sail, farewell for we sail,
For we sail 'gainst England.

VERSE

Our flag, see it wave from the mast,
Of Germany's strength it speaks,
We want to halt at last
The Englishman's sneering laugh.
(Chorus)

VERSE

Should tidings come of my fall,
Of my sleep in ocean's floods,
Don't weep over me at all,
For the fatherland flows my blood.
(Chorus)

The song was written by the German author and poet Hermann Loens, who was killed Sept. 26, 1914, at Reims, France, during the World War.

THE GERMANS SAY THAT THESE LITTLE CRAFT SANK A BRITISH DESTROYER IN THE NORTH SEA AT THE START OF THE ACTION AGAINST THE NETHERLAND AND BELGIUM.

"THE SCENE OF THESE SUCCESSFUL ACTIONS WAS ALSO THE SCENE OF THE FIRST SPEEDBOAT ACTIONS IN THE HISTORY OF NAVAL WARFARE," SAID A GERMAN RADIO ACCOUNT OF THE OPERATIONS.

"GERMANS AS WELL AS THE BRITISH DECIDED TO USE SPEEDBOATS IN THESE WATERS DURING THE WORLD WAR, SINCE CONDITIONS ARE PARTICULARLY FAVORABLE FOR THESE CRAFT.

DNB ADDED THAT THE FRENCH HAD HAD "SMALL LOCAL SUCCESSES" THERE YESTERDAY BUT, WITH SUPPORT FROM THE AIR, THE GERMANS DROVE THEM

(THE ALLIES HAVE ANNOUNCED NO ALL-INCLUSIVE CASUALTY TOTALS FOR THE TWO-WEEK CAMPAIGN IN WESTERN EUROPE.)

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND DECLARED THAT GENERALLY THE ALLIES WERE ON THE DEFENSIVE ALONG THE ENTIRE SOUTHERN FRONT, BETWEEN THE SOMME AND MEUSE RIVERS.

WHILE THE ARMORED UNITS MOVE FORWARD ALONG THE CHANNEL COAST TOWARD CALAIS, TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THE NATURAL PROTECTION AFFORDED BY THE COAST, GERMAN MILITARY EXPERTS SAID, IT IS LIKELY THAT THE REMAINDER OF THE "ENCIRCLEMENT FRONT" WILL REMAIN MORE OR LESS AT A STANDSTILL, SO FAR AS THE GERMANS ARE CONCERNED.

250 Book Passage on U. S. Ship

100 More Americans Are in Ireland Now Awaiting Arrival of Liner Roosevelt.

LONDON, May 23 (A. P.).—More than 250 of an estimated 3,000 Americans living in Great Britain already have booked passage home on the United States liner President Roosevelt, which is expected at Galway, Ireland, on May 30. At least 100 more are in Ireland now awaiting the ship's arrival.

A United States embassy spokesman said today that altogether about 700 had indicated that they would be ready to leave for home by the time the Roosevelt arrives.

There has been no great rush for passage yet, he said, but he expected that a good many probably will plan to sail now that a ship is coming.

The spokesman declined to confirm a report that Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy's seventeen-year-old daughter, Rosemary, the only member of the Ambassador's family now in London, planned to leave on the Roosevelt.

Americans from the Continent are not expected to go to Ireland for passage on the liner. Most of them who wish to return home will sail from Genoa, Italy, or French ports.

Impressed into refugee service once more, this time to go to Ireland to evacuate Americans from France and Great Britain, the United States liner President Roosevelt will sail tomorrow afternoon from her Chelsea pier, line officials announced today.

To protect the ship against the warships and aircraft of the belligerent Powers the State Department has served notice of the ship's peaceful mission on Great Britain, France, Belgium, Germany, Holland and Norway.

Members of the crew of the liner will receive extra war risk compensation of $40 a month each in addition to their regular pay, the National Maritime Union disclosed this afternoon, following conferences with the heads of the line.

The ship will carry about 300 men in the deck, engine and steward's departments. Officers are also slated to receive increases in proportion. The normal crew is 227. Cots will be set up in alleys, public rooms and even in the swimming pool, it was revealed.

The Roosevelt, which brought home thousands of American tourists at the outbreak of the war, has a normal passenger capacity of 443 and 153 additional passengers were crowded in on cots, bringing the total carrying capacity to 596.

The United States liner docked before noon today after her run home from Bermuda and immediately the management of the lines started to put her into shape for her return to refugee work. It was assumed that on its coming trips she would carry about the same number as she did in evacuating Americans in the opening days of the war.

The Acadia of the Eastern Steamship Lines, chartered by the United States Line, will replace the Roosevelt on the next three runs to Bermuda on May 28 at 3 P. M., on June 1 and June 8. It is expected that the liner would finish her refugee work in time to resume her Bermuda schedule on June 15.

According to present plans, the State Department has ordered the liner to go to Galway, Ireland, where her arrival is expected about May 30. The department has issued a blanket warning to Americans to quit Europe. There were 17,955 Americans there on January 1.

The 3,500 Americans in England particularly have been urged to go to Ireland but few have complied as yet. Eire is in the zone forbidden to American ships except for the purpose of removing endangered nationals. The Roosevelt will carry no freight either way.

Capt. James E. Roberts will command the vessel. Last September the United States Lines, given a similar refugee assignment, had to charter five ships from other lines to augment its fleet.

IL DUCE PUTS ARMS PLANTS UNDER CABINET

Reported To Have Conferred With Supreme Defense Council

Press Assails French 130,000 Students Offer To Fight Allies

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 23—Indications that Italy would enter the war piled up today as Premier Mussolini put war manufactures under a Cabinet division and was reliably reported to have conferred with his Supreme Defense Council.

This eve of the anniversary of Italy's declaration of war on the side of the Allies twenty-five years ago—tomorrow the flags will fly and wreaths will be laid on the war monuments—found the people going through air-raid drills from Rome to Trieste, and the press thundering against Britain and France.

The newspapers cried out about Italy's "imprisonment" in the Mediterranean and Italians accused the French authorities in Morocco of "renewing hateful persecutions" of Italians living in the protectorate.

Students Volunteer

Some 130,000 university students sent Mussolini a message volunteering to take up arms against Britain and France.

Their offer was saluted by the press as showing that "the whole Italian people is anxious for liberation from the foreigners who hold the gates to the Mediterranean"—Gibraltar, Suez, the Dardanelles.

The question was not whether Italy was going to war, but where and when.

Some thought it might be in the Balkans, where Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister, visited Albania's frontier with Yugoslavia. Others believed Italy, as well as the Allies and Germany, wants to keep the Balkans a neutral source of supplies.

May Try Egypt

A section of foreign opinion thought the Italians might try to gain control of Egypt, with the Suez Canal and the fertile Nile Valley, and also help Spain regain Gibraltar. This was merely conjecture, however, based on a "liberation" campaign which might involve other territories and islands controlled by the British and French.

During the day the authorities announced a civilian mobilization law would be published next week after being rushed through the Fascist Chamber and Senate. It provides that women and girls from 14 to 60 and boys and men from 14 to 90 not engaged in military service could be drafted under "war discipline" for work in public utilities, Government offices and factories essential to the "life, defense and resistance of the nation."

Situation Tense

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, reported from French North Africa that the situation was "tense," and dispatches from Djibouti said many British subjects had left French Somaliland which, with its port and railroad to Ethiopia, is one of Italy's "aspirations."

One report was that the Germans were trying to get Italian support for an attack on France from the east, perhaps through Switzerland. According to this rumor, Mussolini was supposed to have refused to join such a tactic.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that Germany's effort to supply Italy's coal needs by rail—about 1,000,000 tons a month—was tying up traffic between the two countries.

Makes Triumphal Tour

Ciano's visit to Albania took on added meaning tonight when it was learned that he made a triumphal tour of the country to arouse enthusiasm for Italy. As Scutari, Ciano viewed a parade in which 10,000 Albanians participated. Carts loaded with native products were inspected by the Minister. He drew cheers with an announcement that the King of Italy had honored two Albanians, making them Ministers of State with specific portfolios.

A Japanese mission today assured Mussolini of increasing Japanese sympathy and cooperation.

The Supreme Defense Council meeting produced no announcement, but political circles heard that thirty sections of the civilian mobilization law would be applied.

Greece Calls More Troops

SKOLPJE, Yugoslavia, May 23 (AP).—Yugoslav military quarters said today they were advised several additional classes of reserves had been called up by Greece. The number was not known here and authorities forbade mention of military subjects during telephone calls to Athens.

Norway have come back across the Mediterranean to the western front, these reports said.

Swiss Report Borders Stripped

Say French and Germans Have Both Rushed Their Troops Off to Belgium.

BASLE, May 23 (A. P.).—Germany and France, apparently putting all the strength they can spare into the battle in the west, have withdrawn almost all their motorized veteran divisions from the Swiss frontier in an effort to concentrate tremendous forces of armament and equipment in the one mighty battle now raging in north France and Belgium.

Villages on both the German and French sides of the border, which were packed with troops only four days ago, are now empty.

The Swiss nevertheless are retaining their elaborate defense preparations.

A few weary and worn units of the French and German armies came to the Swiss frontier regions from the battlefronts for a rest.

Advices reaching Switzerland indicated also that the Nazis and the Allies had withdrawn many protecting troops which had checkmated each other in the West Wall-Maginot Line regions.

The hospital ships were set afire, they said, along with the unidentified French town.

"We received warning of the air raid and were told to take wounded soldiers off our hospital ships," a surviving seaman said.

"As we carried the men ashore on stretchers, the Nazi planes swooped down and gave us a withering hail of machine-gun fire.

"Women and children and Belgian refugees were mowed down as they waited in long queues to board cargo ships which were to take them out of the danger zone. The planes swooped low, just missing the roof tops.

"Dead women with children in their arms were lying on the quayside. We helped refugees with their few belongings to tramp to the outlying districts fourteen miles away. Six hours later we returned and found the port ablaze."

Swarms of Planes.

STOCKHOLM, May 23 (A. P.).—German warplanes swarmed over the region around Narvik again today, seeking both Allied troops and shipping in the continued struggle in the Far North.

An attack on Harstad, northwest of Narvik, may have been a blow at what the Germans thought might be the Allied headquarters.

Reports reaching here said that the decisive struggle for possession of the Narvik sector may not be fought until next week, pending the establishment of Polish units comprised of picked men who have had training in the Carpathian Mountains.

The Germans, meanwhile, made every effort to rush in additional men and supplies via parachute to re-enforce their troops now ringed in a line between Bjornfell and Hunddalen, near the Swedish frontier.

Belgium and Germany Get Their Envoys Back

Reshuffling Process at Swiss Border Takes Nearly a Week

BERNE, Switzerland, May 23 (AP).—After a week of negotiations in which usually inviolable diplomats were shuffled about in a "you-take-this-one, we'll-take-that-one" style Germany and Belgium finally exchanged envoys and attaches tonight.

Members of the diplomatic corps have been living for nearly a week in sleeping cars near the Swiss frontier while their governments argued about three missing Germans and two missing Belgians. Under tonight's agreement one Belgian was left behind to make it an even deal.

The exchange was made through Switzerland. The German party of 200 included Count Vicco Karl Alexander von Bulow-Schwante, who had been Ambassador to Belgium. The Belgian party of about ninety included Vicomte Jacques Davignon, who had been Ambassador to Germany.

NAVAL BILL PASSES SENATE IN RUSH BY VOTE OF 78 TO 0

WASHINGTON, May 23 (A. P.).—The Senate approved the $1,473,756,728 navy appropriations bill today, hastening the administration's extraordinary national defense program far toward final congressional action.

The roll call vote was unanimous, 78 to 0.

Approval came with a speed like that with which the army's share of the program was swept through the Senate yesterday.

30.24-2461

A total of 2,970 airplanes, 2,500 of which would be training ships to fill the needs of an expanding training program, would be provided under terms of the navy bill. Counting out a relatively small number of replacements, most of these would augment the navy's present air fleet of 1,800 existing planes and 933 being built.

Proposed aviation expenditures of $326,000,000 would include $45,000,000 also for development of airplane shore facilities.

The fleet would get $65,000,000 in emergency funds for the expedition of ship building, $35,000,000 for armor and ammunition and $6,000,000 for modernization of the battleships New York, Texas and Arkansas. These amounts would be in addition to $259,000,000 in regular appropriations to speed the work on two battleships, an aircraft carrier, two cruisers, eight destroyers, four submarines and five auxiliary ships.

Increases Navy's Personnel.

Emergency funds also would make possible the expansion of the navy's enlisted personnel from 145,000 to 170,000 and the Marine Corps personnel from 25,000 to 34,000.

In addition, President Roosevelt would be given $34,000,000 in cash and a like amount in contract authority to be spent at his personal direction in plugging up any cracks that may develop in the defense armor as the program goes along.

The measure, carrying $472,776,000 in emergency funds inserted by the Senate after President Roosevelt asked immediate expansion of the defense program, now goes to the House for expected speedy action on amendments. There it joins the $1,823,254,624 army appropriations measure, passed 74 to 0 yesterday by the Senate.

In approving the navy measure, the Senate voted for cash appropriations of $1,302,265,038 and contract authority for future expenditures of $171,491,690.

Indications appeared today that the House would vote next week on the emergency defense funds already partially approved by the Senate.

The Naval Bureau of Aeronautics submitted to Congress a plan for speeding up the navy's pilot training program to turn out 9,600 flyers a year.

Roper Asks U.S. Credit for Allies In Canada Talk

Former Secretary and Envoy Would Rush Supplies and Amend Neutrality Laws

TORONTO, May 23 (AP).—Daniel C. Roper, former United States Secretary of Commerce and former Minister to Canada, voiced dissatisfaction today "with our American situation in respect to credits for the Allies." Supplies of all kinds, he said, should be conveyed to the Allies by the United States in every possible way, by barter or otherwise.

Addressing the first International Credit Men's Congress, Roper said: "Our neutrality law unintentionally misrepresents our national purposes and embarrasses the operation of our domestic ideals.

"Both the neutrality law and the Johnson act (which prohibits the extension of United States credits to defaulting debtor nations) should be amended to meet our responsibilities in the present-day crisis. All essential supplies should be exempted from the 'cash-and-carry' restrictions."

Roper asserted that the idea of a League of Nations again would be in the minds of peace-makers when the war ended, and said the United States must "assume proper responsibilities in this connection."

"I believe that, had the terms of the Versailles peace treaty been less drastic and had the United States joined the League of Nations promptly, we would never have heard of Hitler and the present war would have been avoided," he said.

For post-war relations between the United States and Canada, he proposed a principle of "economic union with political federalism and co-operation."

The immediate adoption of measures to protect and defend "the American nations" was recommended in a resolution adopted at the closing session of the Credit Men's Congress.

The resolution read:

"Under present world conditions, inadequate defense is an invitation to attack or encroachments from abroad, while a strong defense is the best guaranty against such encroachments.

"As business men and believers in democracy and the right of human beings to enjoy liberty and freedom from aggression, this credit congress favors immediate adoption of policies to protect and defend the American nations."

Almost 2,000 business men from the United States attended the convention, organized by Canadian and United States credit men's organizations.

"As this pitiful stream of refugees poured through the railroad station the wounded were sent to the first-aid room, where the wives of two French generals now at the front were directing the Red Cross aid. These women were washing the bleeding and blistered feet of French and Belgian peasants."

NAZI ARMORED DIVISION HEADQUARTERS AND STRIKING MILITARY OBJECTIVES AS DEEP AS LEIPZIG IN GERMANY.

OTHER BRITISH PILOTS BACK FROM A DAY AND NIGHT OF WAR OVERHEAD TOLD OF SMASHING COMMUNICATIONS LINES AND BLOWING A GERMAN AMMUNITION TRAIN AND TWO SUPPLY TRAINS OFF THEIR TRACKS.

MEANWHILE, RESIDENTS OF THREE KENT TOWNS SPENT AN ANXIOUS HOUR LISTENING TO AIR RAID WARNINGS AND TO FREQUENT GUNFIRE IN A NEW NAZI AIR FEINT AT BRITAIN'S EAST COAST.

THREE SUCCESSIVE COMMUNIQUES DESCRIBED SUCCESSES OF DARING ROYAL AIR FORCE RAIDS. THE BRITISH CLAIMED DAMAGE OR DESTRUCTION OF MORE THAN 40 GERMAN WARPLANES AND SAID FIVE OF THEIR OWN FAILED TO RETURN.

AIR MARSHAL JOUBERT DE LA FERTE SAID IN A RADIO BROADCAST THAT ALLIED "BOMBER LOSSES HAVE BEEN MADE UP" AND ALTHOUGH A NUMBER OF FIGHTER PLANES HAVE BEEN LOST "THE LOSSES IN TRAINED PILOTS WAS NOT SEVERE AND ALSO HAD BEEN MADE UP."

HE ADDED THAT IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE FOR GERMANS TO "GO ON PRODUCING TRAINED CREWS AT THE RATE AT WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN LOST IN RECENT FIGHTING."

WHILE BOMBERS POUNDED AND STRAFED GERMAN RESERVES AND TANK COLUMNS MOVING UP THROUGH BELGIUM AND NORTHERN FRANCE, AT LEAST ONE FLIGHT WAS REPORTED TO HAVE PIERCED TO THE HEART OF GERMANY. IT STRUCK AT A POWER STATION NEAR LIEPZIG--300 MILES FROM GERMANY'S WESTERN FRONTIER AND ALMOST DIRECTLY SOUTH OF BERLIN.

MILITARY OBJECTIVES NORTH OF AACHEN, JUST INSIDE THE GERMAN FRONTIER FROM NORTHEASTERN BELGIUM, AND FACTORIES AND FURNACES AT INDUSTRIAL SAARBURG, JUST ACROSS THE FRONTIER FROM LUXEMBOURG, ALSO WERE BOMBED.

RETURNING PILOTS WERE QUOTED AS TELLING OF BITTER AIR FIGHTING OVER THE GROUND BATTLELINE, WRECKING RAIL AND ROAD BRIDGES VITAL TO GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS, BLASTING LORRIES AND TANKS, DROPPING "CLOSE ON TO 100 HIGH EXPLOSIVE BOMBS" ON A NAZI ARMORED DIVISION HEADQUARTERS.

THE RAIDS STARTED LATE YESTERDAY, AND CONTINUED LAST NIGHT AND TODAY.

WITH THE BRITISH ROYAL AIR FORCE IN FRANCE, MAY 23-(AP)-DIRECT HITS ON FACTORIES AND BLAST FURNACES IN GERMANY WERE REPORTED TONIGHT BY ROYAL AIR FORCE BOMBER CREWS BACK FROM NEW RAIDS DEEP BEHIND THE BATTLELINES.

RAIDS LAST NIGHT AND TODAY WERE AIMED AT SUPPLY SOURCES AND COMMUNICATION LINES OVER WHICH NAZI RESERVES ARE MOVING UP TO HELP CONSOLIDATE POSITIONS SEIZED BY FAST-STRIKING ADVANCE UNITS.

MOST TARGETS WERE IN THE ARDENNES MOUNTAIN SECTION OF SOUTHEASTERN BELGIUM, THROUGH WHICH GERMANY AIMED ITS FIRST THRUSTS INTO FRANCE, AND IN THE CITY OF SAARBURG, JUST ACROSS THE GERMAN FRONTIER FROM OCCUPIED LUXEMBOURG.

ALTHOUGH VISIBILITY WAS BAD, CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE WAS REPORTED ON IMPORTANT ROADS AND RAILWAY JUNCTIONS. PILOTS TOLD OF FINDING ONE TOWN ALREADY ABLAZE AS ROYAL AIR FORCE BOMBERS ROARED DOWN TO ATTACK. BOMB CLUSTERS WERE DROPPED ON A GERMAN FOOD SUPPLY STATION. (HERE 17 WORDS WERE CENSORED)

PROCEEDING EAST OVER LUXEMBOURG AND INTO GERMANY, OTHER RAF BOMBERS, ATTACKING MILITARY OBJECTIVES IN INDUSTRIAL SAARBURG, REPORTED SCORING DIRECT HITS.

AN ANEMY AIRDROME WAS DETECTED BY LIGHTS GLEAMING FROM HANGARS, BUT THE LIGHTS WERE EXTINGUISHED QUICKLY AS THE PLANES DIVED TO BOMB.

(ADVANCE)--WASHINGTON, MAY 23-(AP)-AMERICAN DIPLOMACY IN BELGIUM WILL SEEK AGAIN, AS IN 1914-1917, TO SOFTEN THE IMPACT OF THE GERMAN OCCUPATION ON THE LOCAL POPULATION.

AMBASSADOR JOHN CUDAHY AND HIS STAFF OF 12 OFFICIALS EXPECT TO REMAIN IN BRUSSELS IN THE HOPE OF IMPROVING THE LOT OF THE BELGIANS. THEY ARE HOPEFUL THAT THE GERMAN AUTHORITIES WILL RECOGNIZE THEIR DIPLOMATIC STATUS AS WAS DONE IN 1914-1917 WHEN BRAND WHITLOCK WAS AMERICAN MINISTER TO BELGIUM.

IT IS ALSO HOPED THAT THE SAME SUFFERANCE MAY BE EXTENDED TO THE AMERICAN MINISTER TO HOLLAND, GEORGE A.GORDON, WHO LIKEWISE HAS REMAINED AT HIS POST.

IT IS EVIDENT FROM WHAT ALWAYS HAS HAPPENED IN A COUNTRY OCCUPIED BY FOREIGN TROOPS THAT DIFFICULTIES ARE BOUND TO OCCUR BETWEEN THE CIVILIAN POPULATION AND THE MILITARY OCCUPANTS.

30.24-2469

FROM 1914 TO 1917 BRAND WHITLOCK AND HIS STAFF MADE NUMEROUS SUCCESSFUL EFFORTS TO IMPROVE THE LOT OF THE CIVILIAN POPULATION.

THE PAPERS OF FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE ROBERT LANSING SHOW THAT BRAND WHITLOCK ALSO MADE STRENUOUS EFFORTS TO AVERT THE EXECUTION OF THE BRITISH NURSE EDITH CAVELL.

WHEN GERMANY INVADED BELGIUM IN THE WORLD WAR, THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT MOVED TO ANTWERP, ON AUGUST 17, 1914, AND LATER TO LE HAVRE,FRANCE. WHITLOCK STAYED ON IN BRUSSELS, CALLED ON EACH NEW GERMAN MILITARY COMMANDER AS HE ARRIVED AND WAS RECEIVED AS THE DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVE OF THE UNITED STATES. HE WAS THUS IN CONSTANT CONTACT WITH THE GERMAN AUTHORITIES.

IN 1914 MINISTER WHITLOCK WAS ABLE TO PREVENT THE SHELLING OF BRUSSELS BY PERSUADING THE BURGOMASTER NOT TO DEFEND THE CIVILIAN CITY. BY A NOTE OF JANUARY 23, 1915, THE BELGIAN MINISTER IN WASHINGTON EXPRESSED THE GRATIFICATION OF HIS GOVERNMENT THAT THE AMERICAN LEGATION HAD REMAINED IN BRUSSELS.

THE GERMAN COMMAND IN BELGIUM PERMITTED WHITLOCK AND OTHER NEUTRAL DIPLOMATS TO SEND DIPLOMATIC DISPATCHES IN CODE, AND PERMITTED LEGATION SECRETARIES TO MOVE ABOUT THE COUNTRY ON LEGATION BUSINESS.

RELATIONS BETWEEN THE LEGATION AND THE GERMAN AUTHORITIES CONTINUED REASONABLY GOOD UNTIL THE UNITED STATES SEVERED DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH GERMANY IN FEBRUARY, 1917. GERMANY THEN REFUSED TO CONTINUE TO RECOGNIZE WHITLOCK'S DIPLOMATIC STATUS. HE LEFT BELGIUM APRIL 3, 1917, AND WENT TO LE HAVRE.

THIS CHALLENGE COMPELS THE UNITED STATES TO TAKE TWO-FOLD ACTION--DRASTICALLY ARM ITSELF AT ONCE AND MAKE UP ITS NATIONAL MIND AS TO "WHAT WE ARE WILLING TO FIGHT FOR," HE SAID IN A BROADCAST (NBC-945PMEST).

FIRST LEAD THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

PERSISTENT WARNINGS BY BRITISH OFFICIALS THIS MORNING OF THE GRAVITY OF THE ALLIED POSITION TO MY MIND WAS INSPIRED BY TWO VERY SERIOUS POSITIONS:

1. INCREASE IN THE DANGER THAT THE GREAT ALLIED ARMY IN BELGIUM MAY BE CRUSHED IN THE GERMAN ENCIRCLING MOVEMENT.

2. THREAT OF AN IMMINENT ATTEMPT BY THE NAZIS TO INVADE ENGLAND.

FIRST AN AUTHORITATIVE SPOKESMAN IN LONDON ANNOUNCED THAT THE SITUATION WAS "EXTREMELY GRAVE." THEN DUFF COOPER, MINISTER OF INFORMATION, DECLARED IN AN ADDRESS THAT "THIS COUNTRY IS IN FEARFUL DANGER."

LATER PREMIER WINSTON CHURCHILL ISSUED A STATEMENT RECORDING THAT GERMAN ARMORED FORCES HAD PENETRATED TO THE REAR OF THE ALLIED ARMY IN BELGIUM AND "ARE NOW ATTEMPTING TO DERANGE THEIR COMMUNICATIONS."

"ABBEVILLE IS IN ENEMY HANDS," HE CONTINUED," AND HEAVY FIGHTING IS PROCEEDING AROUND AND IN BOULOGNE. (BOTH THESE PLACES ARE ON THE COAST OPPOSITE ENGLAND). IT IS TOO EARLY YET TO SAY WHAT THE RESULT OF THE COASTAL FIGHTING MAY BE BUT IT EVIDENTLY CARRIES WITH IT IMPLICATIONS OF A SERIOUS CHARACTER."

I HAVE NO DOUBT THAT BY "IMPLICATIONS OF A SERIOUS CHARACTER" CHURCHILL REFERS TO THE CERTAINTY THAT HITLER INTENDS TO TRY TO INVADE ENGLAND AT THE EARLIEST POSSIBLE MOMENT, IF THE FIGHTING ON THE CONTINENT DEVELOPS IN HIS FAVOR. A DIRECT BLOW AT THE BITTERLY HATED BRITISH HAS BECOME A FIXED PURPOSE WITH HIM.

POSSESSION OF ABBEVILLE IS OF STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE FOR CONTROL OF THE COAST. BOULOGNE IS ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL FRENCH PORTS FOR CROSS-

30.24-2471

CHANNEL TRAFFIC. IT LIES ON THE STRAITS OF DOVER, NOT FAR FROM CALAIS, ANOTHER VITAL PORT FOR FRANCO-BRITISH COMMUNICATION AT ABOUT THE NARROWEST PART OF THE ENGLISH CHANNEL, ONLY A BIT MORE THAN A SCORE OF MILES WIDE.

MEANTIME GERMAN SPEED BOATS AND SUBMARINES WERE AWAITING HITLER'S ORDER TO RACE ACROSS THE CHANNEL. NAZI BOMBERS WERE STRAFING CHANNEL SHIPPING AND HARBORS, AND ATTEMPTING TO DISRUPT BRITISH COMMUNICATION WITH THE CONTINENT.

THE ALLIED POSITION THIS MORNING, ETC. FIRST PGH PREV.

DB1220PED

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE ALLIED POSITION THIS MORNING REMAINED GRAVE, ESPECIALL FOR THE GREAT ARMY WHICH IS PARTLY SURROUNDED BY GERMANS IN BELGIUM.

TRUE, THE GREAT BLITZKRIEG AS A WHOLE HAS SLOWED DOWN SOMEWHAT, ALTHOUGH HEAVY FIGHTING WAS PROCEEDING AT SEVERAL POINTS, AND THIS EASED THE STRAIN ON THE ALLIES.

THE FACT THAT THE ALLIED TROOPS HAVE BEEN MAKING COUNTER-ATTACKS AT VARIOUS PLACES HAS CAUSED A RISE OF SPIRITS IN LONDON AND PARIS.

HOWEVER, JUST AS YESTERDAY I CAUTIONED THAT IT WASN'T A MOMENT OF DESPAIR FOR THE ALLIES--THAT THEY WEREN'T BEATEN--SO NOW I BEG YOU NOT TO BE OVER OPTIMISTIC.

WE MUST REGARD THIS AS A RESPITE IN A BATTLE WHICH WILL BE RESUMED SHORTLY WITH ALL ITS FORMER FEROCITY.

THE FRENCH THIS MORNING WERE ENGAGED IN A FIERCE COUNTER-OFFENSIVE IN THE CAMBRAI SECTOR ON THE SCHELDT (ESCAUT) RIVER.

THIS REGION MARKS ABOUT THE CENTER OF THE GERMAN WESTWARD THRUST AND IS AT THE POINT WHERE THE NAZIS SHOT OUT THEIR MECHANIZED UNITS IN A RACE TO THE CHANNEL PORTS. THIS MECHANIZED THRUST STICKS OUT LIKE A THIN SPEAR FROM THE MAIN GERMAN LINE AND REPRESENTS AN EFFORT CARRIED OUT BY COMPARATIVELY FEW FORCES.

THE FRENCH NOW ARE ATTACKING THE BASE OF THIS SPEAR IN AN EFFORT TO SEVER IT AND REACH THEIR BELEAGUERED COMRADES IN BELGIUM. THE ALLIED TROOPS IN BELGIUM, MAINLY BRITISH AND BELGIAN, MEANTIME ARE MAKING A GALLANT ASSAULT SOUTHWARD, TO TRY TO REACH THE FORCES WORKING NORTH.

SHOULD THIS OPERATION BE SUCCESSFUL IT WOULD SAVE THE ALLIES IN BELGIUM--TOTALING BETWEEN HALF A MILLION AND A MILLION--FROM THE SERIOUS DANGER OF BEING UTTERLY SMASHED.

IT ALSO WOULD LEAVE THE MECHANIZED GERMAN UNITS ALONG THE COAST PRETTY MUCH UP IN THE AIR.

DETAILS OF THE FIGHTING IN BELGIUM DURING THE PAST DAYS OF TERROR ARE FEW, BUT WE KNOW ENOUGH TO SAY THAT THE DEFENSE WHICH THE ENGLISH AND BELGIANS HAVE BEEN MAKING THERE REPRESENTS AN EPIC.

OFFICIAL WORD FROM LONDON IS THAT THE GERMANS FINALLY HAVE SUCCEEDED IN CROSSING THE SCHELDT RIVER, 32 MILES WEST OF BRUSSELS AND RACED ON CLOSE TO THE COAST. THIS WOULD RENDER THE ALLIED POSITION THERE MUCH MORE GRAVE.

THE SLOWING DOWN OF THE OFFENSIVE IS A VERY NATURAL THING AND DOESN'T REPRESENT WEAKNESS ON THE PART OF THE GERMANS. THERE ARE SEVERAL REASONS FOR IT. THEY MUST CONSOLIDATE THE GROUND WHICH THEY ALREADY HAVE OVERRUN, GIVE THEIR TROOPS A BREATHING SPELL, BRING UP

FRESH REINFORCEMENTS, AND IT IS VITAL TO MOVE FORWARD FURTHER SUPPLIES, ESPECIALLY THAT ALL IMPORTANT OIL AND GASOLINE UPON WHICH ALL THEIR MECHANIZED EFFORTS DEPEND.

THIS IS THE JUNCTURE AT WHICH WE MIGHT EXPECT ALLIED GENERALISSIMO WEYGAND TO STRIKE WITH A POWERFUL COUNTER-ATTACK, AND IT IS REPORTED THAT HE IS GETTING SET FOR SUCH A GREAT EFFORT.

WHILE IT IS TOO SOON TO JUDGE FROM THE FEW FACTS AT HAND, IT IS POSSIBLE THAT THE FIERCE FIGHTING NOW PROCEEDING IN THE CAMBRAI SECTOR WHICH I MENTIONED ABOVE MAY SWELL INTO ANOTHER GREAT ENGAGEMENT. THE GERMANS ARE STRIKING BACK HEAVILY AND ARE BOMBING ALLIED COMMUNICATIONS LEADING TO THE CAMBRAI SECTOR.

MEANTIME THE GERMAN AIRFORCE HAS BEEN ATTEMPTING TO STRAF CHANNEL PORTS WITH THE IDEA OF PREVENTING REINFORCEMENTS FROM REACHING THE ALLIED TROOPS IN BELGIUM AND STOPPING ANY POSSIBLE EFFORT TO RESCUE THESE TROOPS BY WATER.

LOUIS LOCHNER, ASSOCIATED PRESS CHIEF OF BUREAU IN BERLIN WHO IS AT THE FRONT WITH THE GERMANS, REPORTED THIS MORNING THAT HE HAD REACHED THE ENGLISH CHANNEL. FROM THERE HE REPORTS THAT "CREWS OF U-BOATS AND SPEED-BOATS ARE CHAMPING TO BE SENT ON THEIR ERRANDS OF DESTRUCTION."

MAY 23 1940

THAT IS TO SAY, THEY ARE SET FOR HERR HITLER'S ATTACK ON ENGLAND.

THE INTENSITY OF HITLER'S DRIVE, THE GAMBLES HE IS MAKING, AND THE EVIDENCE THAT HE IS THROWING INTO THIS BLITZKRIEG EVERYTHING HE HAS, IMPELS ME TO TELL YOU A LITTLE STORY.

THE NAZI CAPTURE OF PERONNE, SIGN-POST FOR MANY ARMIES WHICH HAVE SOUGHT TO INVADE FRANCE BY WAY OF THE VALLEY OF THE SOMME, SENT MY MIND TUMBLING BACK TO A CURIOUS INCIDENT WHICH I ENCOUNTERED THERE IN SEPTEMBER OF 1918, JUST AFTER THE BRITISH DROVE THE KAISER'S FORCES OUT. THIS WAS ONLY A COUPLE OF MONTHS BEFORE THE GERMANS SUCCUMBED TO THE ECONOMIC STRANGULATION IMPOSED BY THE ALLIED BLOCKADE.

OLD PERONNE HAD BEEN REDUCED TO POWDERED BRICK BY THE CONSTANT HAMMERING OF GREAT SHELLS AND BOMBS. I WAS STROLLING ACROSS THE NOW STILLED SPACE WHICH HAD BEEN THE GREAT PUBLIC SQUARE WHEN I WAS ASTONISHED TO SEE A CHILD'S CLAY MARBLE LYING AMONG THE DEBRIS.

I PICKED THE PELLET UP, AND I KNOW MY THROAT TIGHTENED WITH THE THOUGHT OF THE ONCE PROUD OWNER:-"POOR LITTLE CHAP."

THEN I SAW ANOTHER MARBLE, AND STILL ANOTHER. IN SHORT, TO MY AMAZEMENT THEY WERE SCATTERED ALL OVER THE PLACE.

IT IMMEDIATELY BECAME OBVIOUS THAT IT WASN'T MARBLES WHICH I HAD FOUND. I GATHERED A HANDFUL AND CARRIED THEM BACK TO BRITISH GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, TO WHICH I WAS ATTACHED, WITH THE SUGGESTION THAT THESE WERE CONCRETE SHRAPNEL BULLETS WHICH WERE BEING USED BY THE GERMANS BECAUSE THEY HAD RUN SHORT OF STEEL AND ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES, DUE TO THE ALLIED BLOCKADE.

THAT'S WHAT MY "MARBLES" WERE--CONCRETE SHRAPNEL BULLETS--AND I BELIEVE SOME OF THEM ARE NOW IN THE WAR MUSEUM IN LONDON.

MAYBE I SHOULDN'T HAVE WASTED YOUR TIME FOR THIS SMALL TALE, BUT IT HAS KEPT RUNNING THROUGH MY HEAD THAT IF HITLER DOESN'T WIN THIS BLITZGRIEG NOW IT LIKELY WILL BE A SIMILAR SHORTAGE OF STEEL, AND OIL AND FOOD AND WHAT NOT, WHICH WILL COST HIM THE WAR, JUST AS IT DID THE KAISER, IF THE ECONOMIC EXPERTS ARE RIGHT IN THEIR ESTIMATES.

DER FUEHRER KNOWS THAT FULL WELL, AND WHEN HIS WAR MACHINE DASHED

30.24-2473

30.24-2473

THROUGH PERONNE, OVER THE SPOT WHERE MY LITTLE "MARBLES" LAY TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO, IT WAS RACING AGAINST TIME.

THOSE MARBLES KEEP SAYING TO ME THAT IT'S NOW OR NEVER FOR HITLER. THEY OFFER THEMSELVES IN PROOF THAT HE CAN'T STAND A LONG WAR. IT MUST BE A SUCCESSFUL BLITZKRIEG--OR NOTHING.

Nazis Claim Tournai and Ghent

BERLIN, May 24 (A. P.).—Germany's legions in rolling armor have crashed through Scheldt River fortifications into Tournai and Ghent, Belgium, and have approached the "gates of Calais," vital French channel port, authoritative sources declared today.

Engulfing the French town of St. Omer in their path, fast-moving German armored cars were said to have approached Calais this forenoon. Calais lies only twenty-two miles across the English Channel from the chalk cliffs of Dover.

MAY 25 1940

It is assumed that St. Omer, less than twenty miles southeast of Calais, was taken last night or early this morning.

The Calais drive gave shape to the German aim of set-

Germans Claim New Victories.

BERN, Switzerland, May 24 (A. P.).—German diplomatic sources said today they had been informed by Berlin officials that German motorized columns captured Montreuil, French town near the English Channel, occupied the channel port of La Touquet. Arras, French city in the Cambrai battle zone, also has been recaptured by Nazi troops after heavy fighting through the night, t'ese Germans said.

ting the stage for an attack on England. It also forged a new link in the chain of fire and steel which Germany is drawing tighter around 500,000 to 1,000,000 Allied soldiers trapped in Flanders.

The power of the penetration of the Scheldt River defenses was typified by the German High Command, which said that "divisions" had broken the line, their momentum carrying them on westward to the Lys River and perhaps across it.

MAY 25 1940

In smashes beyond the tangled lines of battle, the German air force reported that it had sunk six loaded transports in the English Channel and scored heavy bomb hits on several warships, including a large war vessel—"probably a cruiser."

A German announcement that Loretto Heights, northwest of Arras, had been captured indicated that a German spearhead was threatening the strongest point of the encircled area, the French industrial city of Lille, twenty-five miles northeast of Arras.

Authorized sources found in reports of transport movements from England to France a hint that the British, instead of withdrawing from the isolated area actually were rushing re-enforcements across the channel into the threatened zone.

Fighting in Streets of Ghent.

The German High Command declared that heavy attack forces, having broken through on the Scheldt River line, reached the western embankment of the Lys River, indicating that the Lys also had been crossed.

This crossing, however, may have been at Ghent, where the Scheldt and Lys join. Authorized spokesmen said that German and Allied forces were fighting in the streets of historic Ghent, an important communications center, thirty miles northwest of Brussels, the fallen Belgian capital.

The High Command's daily communique did not mention Ghent, but said that Tournai, on the Scheldt, about thirty-five miles southwest of Ghent, had been taken.

"The region of northern France and Belgium wherein the enemy armies are encircled was yesterday further tightened by the successful attacks of German troops on all sides," said the High Command.

"In Flanders German divisions broke through the fortified Scheldt position and advanced as far as the western embankment of the Lys."

The French fortress of Maubeuge, which had been passed by the German sweep across the middle of the Little Maginot Line, fronting on Belgium, also was taken—the occupation completed yesterday with the capture of the last fortified works.

In the Artois region, north of the narrow neck of the German corridor to the channel coast, German troops were said to have stormed and conquered Loretto Heights. These stand northwest of Arras. They were hotly contested in the world war.

Formidable German armored forces which had been advancing betwen Arras and the sea to the north were said to be nearing the French channel ports.

"A weak enemy advance from the south toward Amiens (on the flank of the German spearhead to the channel) was repelled," said the High Command.

The Germans asserted that yesterday's air losses for the Allies on the western front totaled forty-nine planes—shot down in flight or destroyed on the ground—against sixteen German planes listed as missing. A toll of fifty-six Allied tanks was announced in one day of fighting Wednesday.

Drive On for Calais.

Meanwhile, informed German spokesmen said that German Army units were today within close reach of Calais, the channel port which is only twenty-two miles from England. They described the progress made by the army in the last twenty-four hours as very considerable.

In their attempt to cut off and encircle the Allied force in northern France and Belgium, the Germans in the south have driven a salient through a twenty-five-mile gap in the Allied lines. Now they are pushing northward in the coastal regions to entrap this Allied force.

In northern Belgium, they say, they are driving down out of the Antwerp sector toward the Belgian seaport of Ostend, while at the same time pressing forward on a line drawn southward along the River Scheldt.

Informed spokesmen were extremely hopeful that, with the Germans reaching French coastal points, "the encirclement then will be nearly airtight, in which case a destructive battle may occur earlier than was expected."

The British Royal Air Force, they said contemptuously, conducted another series of "prestige flights" over the Aachen, Dusseldorf and Munster regions last night. They added that bombs were dropped on non-military targets but that there were no reports yet as to possible damage or casualties.

The American military attache at Berlin, Col. Peyton, and his two assistants went to the bombed regions to make a personal investigation of the German charges of aimless British night raids.

Germans Reported Smashing Toward 'Gates Of Calais'

By Preston Grover

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 24—In a fast, savage offensive on the final outposts that stand between England and France, the Germans declared tonight they were smashing toward the "gates of Calais" and fighting the Allies hand-to-hand in the streets of Ghent.

While Nazi divisions drove westward in Belgium toward the English Channel, others pulled at the western end of the great net in which half a million to a million Allied troops are enmeshed in northern France and Belgium.

MAY 25 1940

At Outskirts Of Calais

A moving line of steel, which started northward from the Somme, pushed to a depth of more than thirty miles to reach the outskirts of Calais—gateway to England just twenty-two miles across the Channel from the chalk cliffs of Dover.

The other German advance, westward across Belgium, smashed through the Scheldt river fortifications into Tornai and Ghent to draw tighter the net about the entrapped British, French and Belgian troops.

It was not clear here whether Boulogne itself was in German hands, since it appeared that the German advance had skirted the town to the east. In any case, however, it appeared cut off.

Infantry Breaks Through

Furious infantry activity synchronized with the march of the mechanized cavalry.

The high command declared foot soldiers had broken through to the west bank of the River Lys just southwest of Ghent, where that river merges with the Scheldt.

It was in the old city itself—declared by the German command to be hemmed on three sides—that the Allies offered the greatest resistance.

The whole offensive, which though confused, seemed to be operating fanwise toward the coast and was intended primarily to find bases and prepare the ground for the great assault which the Nazis have placed at the top of the list of their objectives—the ultimate attack on England.

Allied Equipment Sought

But there appeared another and subsidiary purpose—to seize much of the excellent motorized equipment hurried by the Allies into Belgium and northern France in their earlier fruitless effort to halt the German wings.

Indication arose, as the battle for the coastal country raged, that Britain, instead of seeking to withdraw from France, actually was pouring reinforcements across the Channel.

Against this British campaign the Germans were active in the air, and their speedboats were darting about in the Channel zone.

The air force reported it had sunk six loaded transports in the Channel and had loosed heavy bombs on several warships, including a large vessel which "probably was a cruiser."

Heights Captured

The Germans announced the capture of Loretto Heights, northwest of Arras, with an indication that an effort was being made to drive into the strongest point of the encircled Allied area—the industrial city of Lille.

Other successes claimed were the capture of the French fortress of Maubeuge and the fall to German arms of Tournai, about thirty-five miles to the southwest of Ghent.

On the Southern front in the region of the Somme—where Allied and German forces had been locked yesterday in a furious struggle—the Germans declared there was "no special events" other than a "weak" enemy advance toward Amiens. This, they added, was repelled.

The Allies were declared to have lost fifty-six or more tanks there.

Berlin, Saturday, May 25—The German armies smashing to the English Channel were reported early today to have reached the coast at some points south of Calais. The exact location of these points was not disclosed immediately.

French Still Cling to Boulogne

PARIS, May 24 (A. P.).—A War Ministry spokesman announced tonight that French troops are holding the English Channel port of Boulogne against attacks by German armored columns.

Other German light units have pushed northward and are fighting in the Calais region, the spokesman added. Boulogne is twenty-six miles from England; Calais, twenty-two, across the Strait of Dover.

[Earlier in the day a British spokesman had said that Boulogne had fallen to the Germans.]

Text of Night Communique

MAY 25 1940

Tonight's communique of the French High Command said:

"The violent combats which have been developing for several days in the north, notably in the regions of Cambrai and Arras and which have extended to the region of St. Omer and Boulogne, have not yet permitted re-establishment up to the present of the continuity of our lines.

30-24-2475

"South of Sedan the German attack reported this morning was conducted by important forces.

"Our counter-attack was clearly successful.

"Very lively operations by our reconnaissance and bombing aviation continued to harass the enemy rear.

"Our pursuit aviation, while continuing its covering action, has attacked successfully with its guns armored and motorized enemy elements."

The Allied armies caught German armored columns in an artillery crossfire in a new effort to cut the Reich Army's corridor to the sea and turn the tide of the battle for mastery of the English Channel.

Masses of Allied infantry also weighed down on the German salient, pressing south from Flanders fields in the Cambrai region and north from the Somme River in a pincers movement designed to break off the spearhead which has twisted west to the channel coast.

This turn in the campaign brought into full play for the first time the two branches of the service in which the Allies claim superiority.

30-mile Corridor Separates Armies.

A corridor thirty miles wide separates the central French Army on the Somme from the northern Allied armies of French, British and Belgian troops in Flanders. Through that gap German mechanized forces are pushing northwest to the sea.

On both sides of the corridor the Allies today installed artillery batteries which ranged from the famous French "75s" to the heaviest pieces which could be hauled up. Their fire raked the German columns constantly, while Allied planes—defying acknowledged German air superiority—ventured over the German salient to bomb and machine-gun roads and troop concentrations.

Some Allied mechanized forces lurked just outside the corridor, lying in wait for German motorcyclists and advance guards and challenging the heavy German tanks to frequent skirmishes.

While the northern Allied army, originally in Belgium, fought southward in the Cambrai-Valenciennes region above the German corridor, French forces of the Somme were fighting northward to attempt to effect a junction at a point which remains a military secret.

French Loosing Rhine.

From Basle, Switzerland, came word that French Army engineers had blown up scores of locks on the Rhine-Rhone Canal today, flooding hundreds of square miles of territory on the French side of the Rhine.

The canal runs from Strasbourg to Basle, and the locks formed a vital part of the Maginot Line defenses. The release of the water may affect the level of the Rhine between the Maginot Line and the German West Wall forts from Suningue, where the canal begins, to Strasbourg, where that section of the waterway again empies into the Rhine.

The main locks and gates and canal entrance near Suningue were left partly standing, enabling the French still partly to control the water level.

Weygand Back in Paris.

The reason for destroying the locks was not immediately apparent. Some observers believed it was done to strengthen the Maginot defenses in this sector and to enable thousands of troops to leave for action in northwestern France.

In Paris, Gen. Maxime Weygand, fresh from the front, conferred with Premier Reynaud and Vice-Premier Marshal Petain. M. Reynaud maintained Anglo-French diplomatic liaison by conferring with the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell.

The German columns driving to the channel have discarded the flame-throwing tanks which they used to cut through the fortifications of the Meuse River in northern France last week, military reports said today. Instead, they are using tanks equipped with machine guns. The flame-throwers had a range of only seventy yards.

[Paul Archinard, the National Broadcasting Company's representative in Paris, said in a broadcast today that 5,000 German troops of mechanized units were reported isolated in Amiens and that other mechanized forces had stalled from lack of fuel. Although French military authorities were unable to confirm the report of the isolated forces at Amiens, Mr. Archinard said, they told of numerous motorized units stalled in the Flanders region and added that Allied forces were busy mopping them up.]

A military spokesman said that there was little change since yesterday in the fighting in the Valenciennes-Cambrai-Arras area, where the French, English and Belgian troops were said to have repulsed German attacks and then to have counter-attacked. The positions were said to have remained relatively the same overnight after yesterday's gains.

Fight Rages in the Argonne.

The Somme River positions, it was stated officially, had been held firmly after a series of small French victories reducing the German bridgeheads on the southern bank.

The French push into the southern sections of Amiens yesterday was maintained, the French spokesman said. French action was said to have thrown back German outposts and to have established strong French positions from which German units were being mopped up.

The Germans met with "little or no success" in fighting farther eastward south of Sedan near Attigny on the Aisne River, he reported.

The Nazi command, it was said, launched an attack with "perhaps a division" of troops after a tremendous artillery preparation had blasted the French positions and brought replies from the French batteries. The Germans used no tanks, the spokesman said.

In the wooded Argonne region several infiltrations of German soldiers managed to pass through the French lines, he added, but these men were being rounded up.

Meanwhile today the French High Command reported that the French troops who pushed into the suburbs of Amiens last night were "firmly holding the conquered positions."

Artillery duels at the extreme eastern end of the active front extending across north France, in the vicinity of Longwy, were described as having calmed down "without direct results."

'Holding Conquered Positions.'

Meanwhile today the French High Command reported that the French troops who pushed into the suburbs of Amiens last night were "firmly holding the conquered positions."

German attacks south of Sedan, further to the east, which met strong French resistance yesterday, were likewise reported repulsed "in spite of the means used" by the Germans.

The communique, tersely worded, failed to identify the positions mentioned.

Along with this brief official word came reports from the front that the German and French armies were clashing in extremely heavy fighting along the Scheldt River in northern France and far into Belgium.

Although the bitterest fighting appeared to be along this strategic river, the opposing war machines were locked in battle from the region of the English Channel eastward to the Luxemburg frontier, a distance of 300 miles as the bird flies, but much further over the twisted routes of war.

Strive to Unite Forces.

The French launched violent counter-attacks with the apparent immediate objective of joining their main body of troops with the Allied forces encircled in Belgium. Ultimately, the mastery of the English Channel was at stake.

The French were greatly concerned about the continued passing of swift-moving German units through the gap in the Allied lines southwest of Cambrai through which the Germans penetrated almost to the Channel proper.

The Scheldt River fighting was believed to involve large masses of regular French infantry.

The larger battle lines formed a pincer, with the lower jaw stretching from Abbeville, at the mouth of the Somme, just twelve miles from the Channel, eastward along the Somme to Peronne, then southeastward across the Oise to the Aisne, and eastward along the Aisne and on to Longuyon, on the Maginot Line twenty miles southwest of Longwy, near the junction of the French, Belgian and Luxemburg frontiers.

Still a War of Maneuver.

The northern jaw lay to the east from Abbeville north of the Somme to the Cambrai sector, upper end of the gap, and then north along the Scheldt to Valenciennes, at the Belgian border, and up into Belgium to Ghent. The line continues still further northward, but fighting appeared to extend only to this point.

It was still a war of maneuver with the opposing elements trying to cut each other off, but the extent of the area over which increasingly large units were locked made yesterday one of the most violent days of the war.

The French appeared to be trying to advance north from Cambrai to effect the liaison with the Allies in Belgium and at the same time to isolate German motorcyclists and parachutists and tank crews pillaging at their rear.

French Declared Holding Boulogne Against Nazi

Paris, May 24 (AP)—French troops, standing doggedly at the extreme western rim of the republic in a great and bloody showdown, were declared officially tonight to be holding the English Channel port of Boulogne against the Nazi rush to the sea.

Just to the northeast, in the equally vital region of Calais, other Allied forces closed desperately with German light units.

The last Allied word on Boulogne tonight was by a French War Ministry spokesman, who announced French troops still were holding the city against the German armored columns.

Never Claimed Boulogne

The Germans never had directly claimed the capture of Boulogne, saying, rather, that German armored columns had brushed past it on the way to Calais. However, at one point earlier in the day a London announcement assumed the city had fallen.

Capture of Boulogne is not essential to the advance of armored columns on Calais.

The critical struggle tonight was to bar the German legions from footholds necessary to spring across the Channel at England. For, across only twenty miles of water from Calais and twenty-six miles from Boulogne, lies England.

Allies Use Heavy Guns.

While fighting raged within sight of the Strait of Dover, the main Allied forces—separated by a corridor thirty miles wide through which the German mechanized forces pushed toward the sea—brought out their greatest weapon, heavy artillery, in an effort to cut down the long, thin German line by crossfire.

On both sides of that corridor they set up batteries and, with the famous French 75s, raked the German columns. At the same time aircraft bombed and machine-gunned roads and troop concentrations.

The Germans, meanwhile, sought with columns of tanks to clean out the last scattered resistance in the corridor itself. Flame throwers with a seventy-yard range, which the Nazis had used against Meuse fortifications, were discarded for machine guns.

Some Allied forces remained in the corridor, lying in wait for whatever foe they could tackle.

New Machines Used.

In the fighting along the Somme, in the Valenciennes-Cambrai sector, the Germans were reported using strange new machines—bombs which, when exploding, set off sirens, and parachute torches—in an effort to create terror and chaos.

On the home front, an official note put "French and foreign public opinion" on guard against wild rumors said to have been distributed by German agents of internal disorders in France.

The note to the press particularly denied reports that the Government had left Paris and that riots were breaking out in the capial. The city was calm tonight.

French Blow Up Locks On Rhine-Rhone Canal

Basel, Switzerland, May 24 (AP)—French army engineers blew up scores of locks on the Rhine-Rhone Canal today, flooding hundreds of square miles of territory on the French side of the Rhine.

The canal runs from Strasbourg to Basel, and the locks formed a vital part of the Maginot Line defenses. The release of the water may affect the level of the Rhine between the Maginot Line and the German West Wall forts from Suningue, where the canal begins, to Strasbourg, where that section of the waterway again empties into the Rhine.

The main locks and gates and canal entrance near Suningue were left partly standing, enabling the French still partly to control the water level.

The reason for destroying the locks was not immediately apparent. Some observers believe it was done to strengthen the Maginot defenses in this sector and to enable thousands of troops to leave for action in northwestern France.

TO INVESTIGATE REFUGEES

France Plans Inquiry Into Flood Since War Outbreak

Paris, May 24 (AP)—France decided tonight to investigate the hundreds of thousands of Belgian, Dutch and Luxembourg refugees who have poured into the country. All foreigners entering France since May 6 were ordered to report to police for permission to remain.

After May 31, all refugees will be interned unless they have complied with this rule.

Nazi Terror Weapons

Paris, May 24 (AP)—Strange and frightening machines—bombs which set off screeching sirens when they explode, incendiary bombs and parachuted torches—are being used by the German army on the Allied rear, a French army spokesman said today.

The purpose of these methods, he said, was to create terrifying confusion.

British Admit Boulogne's Fall

LONDON, May 24 (A. P.).—Boulogne, France's strategic seaport twenty minutes by air from London, has fallen to the German spearhead on the English Channel coast, persons in authority here acknowledged today.

"The Germans took possession of Boulogne last night," they said.

MAY 25 1940

(At the time of this admission the Germans had not even claimed Boulogne, saying, rather, that their channel vanguard had passed the city, heading for Calais to the northeast.)

Prime Minister Winston Churchill told Parliament yesterday that severe fighting was raging around and in Boulogne and that the fighting, a threat to British communications, had "implications of a serious character." Today came word of the German seizure of the city.

A spokesman said that virtually all of the British troops at Boulogne "got away." He indicated that the Germans were able to seize the town because of their stronger forces.

He added, however, that he had no knowledge of the size of the German force.

Boulogne, the point farthest west of the German sweep through the Low Countries and France in the fifteen-day real war, is only twenty-six miles by boat from Folkestone, 105 miles by water from London and about eighty miles by air.

MAY 25 1940

Mechanized Troops Believed Captors.

Boulogne was seized apparently by German mechanized columns working north along the channel coast from Abbeville, France, which was reached last Tuesday.

The British authority who announced Boulogne's fall said that other points reached by German mechanized detachments were not being disclosed because such disclosures might be the first news of the actions to reach the German command itself.

Presumably the German conquerors would try to push twenty miles across a hump in the French coastline to attack Calais.

The advance on Calais, coupled with a German thrust pointed through Ghent, Belgium, would practically seal the ring thrown about a half-million to a million Allied troops on the plains of Flanders and northern France, forcing either a surrender, a break-through against the German wedge to the coast or destruction of the entrapped troops.

Ghent lies about eighty miles east of Calais.

Cupled with word that Boulogne had fallen came a British Air Ministry announcement that at least twenty German planes were shot down and twenty-[illegible] more damaged by far-flung British aerial stabs yesterday at both enemy communications along the fighting front and in Germany itself.

The loss of eight British planes and forced landings for four others were acknowledged.

Coast Defenses Strengthened.

Confronted by the German successes on the French coast, only twenty-two miles from the chalk cliffs of England at the nearest point, Great Britain strengthened coastal defenses against the zero hour of a German crossing to smash at her key ports.

She worked quickly, while awaiting the outcome of the battle between the Allied and German armies for mastery of the strategic Belgian and French coastal positions.

The British felt certain that the next blow would fall directly upon England if the Nazi mechanized columns were able to drive home their wedge between the Allied forces and thus consolidate footholds along the coast.

Fleet Is on the Channel.

With powerful British naval units patroling the Channel and strong detachments of troops taking up positions in south coast towns all during the night, the first defense activity of the day occurred in the southeast early today when the anti-aircraft guns went into action as German planes appeared over the coast.

The German flyers bombed the East Dudgeon Lightship, fifty miles off the Lincolnshire coast, during the night. Details were not available immediately.

A coastal lifeboard aiding one bombed vessel off the southeast coast altered her course to approach a large steamship with a heavy list which came limping up.

Meanwhile the Air Ministry said that the Royal Air Force early yesterday carried out its most deadly series of raids against Germany since the start of the war. They said the British planes dropped 100 bombs on the headquarters of a German tank division, blew up an ammunition train at the German town of Geldern, near the Netherlands frontier; shattered roads and railway tracks along the supply lines of the German offensive and ranged into the heart of Germany as far as Leipzig, 300 miles from Germany's western border.

Airports in Ireland.

Great Britain was also on guard today against possible invasion by way of Ireland, where the Dublin government, nominally neutral, strove for general defense co-ordination.

Britain is considering airdrome sites in Northern Ireland, Capt. Harold H. Balfour, Under-Secretary of State for Air, revealed in a written reply to a question raised in the House of Commons this morning.

At the same time King George VI prepared to broadcast an Empire Day measure of inspiration to his peoples at 9 P. M. (4 P. M. New York time). This Empire Day—Queen Victoria's birthday—marked the gravest crisis in the history of the British commonwealth of nations.

In two weeks the flying German columns had advanced 200 miles to the French channel port of Boulogne, at England's doorstep. Boulagne is twenty-six miles from Folkestone and only eighty-five air miles from London.

The London Times underscored the gravity of Britain's position in an editorial calling for the immediate apointment of a director of defense to co-ordinate the home forces in the event England becomes a decisive battleground for the first time since the year 1066.

To counter the threatened blitzkrieg invasion, whether it is launched with parachute troops or with forces rushed across the narrow channel in speedboats, England has formidable home defenses.

The British believe that the divisions which have been training quietly and have been deployed in strategic centers could, with the help of the home defense battalions made up of ex-service men, the Dominion troops already here and the newly organized local defense volunteers, destroy any force the Nazi would be able to throw upon this island.

BRITAIN GIRDS FOR INVASION; ACTS IN SECRET

King George Sounds Warning Against "Descent Of Darkness"

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 24—An explosion of uncertain origin tonight damaged a hall at Bellshill, Lanarkshire county, Scotland, used as a meeting place by members of the local Communist party. There were no casualties.

Police began an immediate investigation.

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 24—England rolled up the barricades of modern war tonight from her ancient Channel ports to the Irish Sea, forewarned on this bleak Empire Day by King George VI himself that defeat and invasion by Nazi Germany would bring "the descent of darkness" upon the ruins of Britain's kind of world.

The narrow old roads from the Channel's high chalk cliffs inland, which haven't felt the stamp of an invader's boots for nearly ten centuries, were guarded closely behind a secret massing of heavy naval, air and land forces in strategic spots.

Real road barricades stood ready at vital spots and motorists in the pastoral green of rural England were stopped and made to show identity cards.

Whitehall Protected

The heart of governmental London—Whitehall—sprouted machine guns and armed guards. On gun stood at the head of Downing Street, where Prime Minister Winston Churchill lives. Another was planted near the Foreign Office. Army guards at public buildings were increased.

Strengthening of the English Channel defenses, begun months ago, proceeded with the greatest possible concaelment because of both the fifth-column danger and because the coast line daily is being scouted by German planes, to the rumbling accompaniment of anti-aircraft guns.

Fifth Column Watched

As for internal dangers on the east coast, British leaders said they believed the fifth-column roundup and the imposition of a curfew and other restrictions on aliens had put matters well in hand.

On the other side of the "tight little isle" the precautions were just as secret and presumably as intense. Asked today about defense against invasion from the Irish Sea, one spokesman snapped:

"We aren't fools!"

Exchange Information

It is known that the British have been exchanging information with Ireland (Eire) on the subject, and today, in the northern Irish counties of Ulster, part of the United Kingdom, the Royal Irish Constabulary rounded up seventy-six members of the banned Irish Republican Army and interned them for the duration—just in case they might help invasion by working from within.

Britain is considering putting airdromes in Ulster, the Government told Parliament today.

King George spoke to his people around the world on an Empire Day which dawned with official admission that the German army now controls Boulogne, twenty-six miles across the Channel, and is threatening Calais, even closer.

The young sovereign, to use his own words, spoke plainly and closed proudly with:

"Keep your hearts proud and your resolve unshaken! . . . With God's help we shall not fail!"

Implementing the new "dictatorship bill" which gives the state control over all persons and property, an order in council was prepared to empower ministers of departments using war supplies to tell manufacturers what they will make, what price they will get, what labor they will employ and what hours that labor will work.

A special mission to neutral Spain was announced, to be handled by Sir Samuel Hoare, veteran Cabinet minister, as Ambassador to Madrid.

Moreover, Britain was reported reliably to be planning to send another trade mission to Moscow to straighten out the difficulties in the way of a trade agreement. Russia has rebuffed British efforts to have the Soviet Union curtail the goods she promised Germany.

London, May 25—Vibrations from tremendous explosions, the thunder of gunfire and flames shooting skyward across the English Channel led to the belief early today that British warships had gone into action.

The red glare of the flames cast an eerie glow on the surface of the sea.

George VI Sees World Plot

British Monarch Accuses Nazis of Scheming to Subjugate Nations by Force.

LONDON, May 24 (A. P.).—On a black Empire Day, with England threatened by the first invasion since 1066, King George VI today accused Nazi Germany of "a long-planned scheme to subjugate by force the nations of the world."

MAY 25 1940

The King, in a personal broadcast, called on his peoples to "keep your resolve unshaken."

Speaking gravely, King George told the far-flung Empire that a "decisive struggle is upon us."

"The issue is now plain: It is an issue of life or death for us all," he declared.

"Defeat will not mean some brief eclipse from which we shall emerge with strength renewed—it will mean the destruction of our world as we have known it and the descent of darkness upon its ruins."

Text of King's Address.

The text of King George's Empire Day address follows:

One year ago today I spoke to the peoples of the Empire from Winnipeg in the heart of Canada. We were at peace.

On the Empire Day I spoke of the ideals of fredom, justice and peace upon which our commonwealth of free peoples is founded. Clouds were gathering, but I held fast to the hope that those ideals might achieve fuller and richer development without suffering the grevious onslaught of war.

But it was not to be. The evil which we strove unceasingly and with all honesty of purpose to avert fell upon us. In this our conscience is clear. For there is now revealed without possibility of mistake a long-planned scheme to subjugate by force the nations of the world against which all our efforts for peace were doomed to break.

The decisive struggle is now upon us. I am going to speak plainly o you, for in this hour of trial I know that you would not have me do otherwise.

Conquest of the World.

Let no one be mistaken; it is no mere territorial conquest that our enemies are seeking. It is the overthrow, complete and final, of this empire and of everything for which it stands, and after that the conquest of the world. And if their will prevails, they will bring to its accomplishment all the hatred and cruelty which they have already displayed. It was not easy for us to believe that designs so evil could find a place in the uhman mind.

But the time for doubt is long past. To all of us in this empire, to all men of vision and goodwill throughout the world, the issue is now plain: it is the issue of life or death for us all. Defeat will not mean some brief eclipse from which we shall emerge with strength renewed—itwil mean destruction of our orld as we have known it and the descent of darkness upon it ruins.

I speak to you today with a new vision of this empire before my eyes. Now that it has come into conflict and sharp comparison with the evil system which is attempting its destruction, its full significance appears in a brighter and more certain light. There is a word which our enemies use against us—imperialism. By it they mean the spirit of domination and the lust of conquest. We free peoples of the empire cast that word back in their teeth. It is they who have these evil aspirations. Our object has always been peace: Peace in which our institutions may be developed, the conditiou of our peoples, and the problems of Government solved in the spirit of good will. This peace they have taken from us and they are seeking to destroy all that we have striven to maintain. Against our honesty is set dishonor, against our faithfulness is set treachery, against our justice brute force.

Perfect Unity of Purpose.

There in clear and unmistakeable opposition lie the forces that now confront one another. The great uprising of the peoples throughout the Empire shows without doubt which will prevail. They have risen in just wrath against a thing which they detest and despise. Nothing can shake their resolution. In perfect unity of purpose they will defend their lives and all that makes life worth living.

et no one think that my confidence is dimmed when I tell you how perilouz is the ordeal which we are facing. On the contrary it shines in my heart as brightly as it shines in yours. But confidence alone is not enough. It must be armed with courage and resolution, with endurance and self-sacrifice.

These are the high qualities that the men of the homeland and the men from overseas in an unending stream are bringing to the struggle on land and sea and in the air.

Day of National Prayer.

At this moment our thoughts turn to our fighting men and to those who love them, mothers, wives and sweethearts at home. Beside them stand soldiers of our old ally, France, and with them Poland and Norway, Belgium and Holland, peoples upon whose peaceful lands has fallen all the horror of treacherous and unprovoked aggression.

At this fateful hour we turn, as our fathers before us have turned in all times of trial, to God the most high. Here in the old country I have asked that Sunday next should be observed as a day of national prayer. It may be possible for many of our brethern across the seas to join their prayers with ours. Let us with one heart and soul humbly but confidently commit our cause to God and ask His air that we may valiantly defend the right as it is given to us to see it.

So now, peoples of the empire, men and women in all quarters of the globe, I say to you: Put into task, whatever it may be, all the courage and puruose of which you are capable. Keep your hearts proud and your resolve unshaken. Let us go forward to that task as one man, a smile on our lips and our heads held high, and with God's help we shall not fail.

King Called Instrument Of British Propagandists

Berlin, Saturday, May 25 (AP)—King George VI has become the instrument of British propagandists, DNB said today in commenting on the monarch's Empire Day address.

The news agency said the impression in political circles was that "the King now is in the service of typical British propaganda methods, which are characterized by slander and hypocracy."

"The speech which was given George to read contains a large measure of lies and slanders with which the English plutocracy for years long has poisoned German-English relations," it continued.

DNB denied the charge that Germany started aggression against England and asserted that Adolf Hitler as late as last October made peace proposals.

Claim 1500 Nazi Planes.

LONDON, May 24 (A. P.).—Germany has lost over 1,500 aircraft since the invasion of the Low Countires two weeks ago, the British Air Ministry reported today in a communique telling of fresh British aerial attacks at German forces fighting in France and Belgium.

The Air Ministry said that British fighters had shot down or seriously damaged at least eighty German aircraft since yesterday morning.

Ten British fighter planes are missing but some of the pilots may yet return, the Ministry added. Six bombers failed to return from yesterday's widespread raids.

Reporting continued "spectacular victories" over the Germans, the Air Ministry said repeated bombing attacks were made yesterday on enemy columns in the vicinity of Arras and Boulogne, France, and bomb sorties were made into the German Rhineland.

Berlin, May 24 (AP)—An official announcement tonight said 2,400 Allied planes had been destroyed since May 10.

British Seize World War Spy

Von Rintelen, Famous Saboteur, Arrested in Fifth Column Roundup.

LONDON, May 24 (A. P.).—Capt. Franz von Rintelen, noted for German espionage activities in the world war and in recent years a resident of England, was detained today in England's drive against fifth column activities.

In the world war, Capt. Von Rintelen was one of the chief German spies in the United States. He came to England in 1926 and has called himself a "conscientious objector" to Nazism in Germany. He had been allowed freedom of movement here.

At the time of his appearance before the English Aliens Court last October, Capt. Von Rintelen offered Britain "all my experience, energy and capabilities in the ensuing struggle for the defense of her liberties."

He was captured aboard a ship off Ramsgate in 1915 and returned to the United States, where he was convicted of sabotaging munitions ships. He was released from prison late in 1920.

MAY 25 1940

Trial a Sensation.

At his trial, a twenty-three day sensation in May, 1917, he was described as having used vast sums of money from Germany for placing sabotage agents in American war industries from April to August, 1915.

In the time of Cant. Von Rintelen's imprisonment, the United States repeatedly refused demands by Germany that he be released in prisoner exchanges. When he was set free he sailed at once for Germany, where he remained until his appearance in England. He said he would not remain in Germany under Nazi rule.

Capt. Von Rintelen, a self-styled fugitive from Nazism, told newspaper men yesterday that German invasion of Great Britain was "impossible," although he considered the British "lethargic" to the war's dangers. He hinted at that time that he was engaged in secret work for the British Government.

Five More Fascists Seized.

Pressing their roundup of suspected fifth columnists, the police arrested five more members of Sir Oswald Mosley's Fascistic British Union today. Meanwhile the Home Office forbade a Communist party meeting scheduled for Sunday in Trafalgar Square.

More than forty suspects have been taken into custody.

Three members of Sir Oswald's organization were taken from their homes here as a result of information gleaned in yesterday's roundup, which caught Sir Oswald himself. Two others were arrested in Manchester.

Four other men identified as soapbox orators for the union were sent to jail in north London for from one to three months for "insulting words and behavior."

Mosley and eight of his lieutenants are in Brixton Jail awaiting removal to internment camps.

The police disclosed that a $2,400-a-year official of the Ministry of Health, who was arrested last night, had a secret tie-up with the Fascists.

Mosley's Friends Defiant.

Members of the Union had responded defiantly to the arrest of their leader by scattering propaganda leaflets on the Thames Embankment and the Strand. One set of leaflets, labeled "Labor-Communist Double Cross," blamed "Labor and communist leaders" for Great Britain's "present mess" and demanded that the nation accept Sir Oswald's isolation policy.

Yesterday's raids sent to jail seven other Fascists, as well as one member of Parliament, the anti-Semitic Capt. Archibald Ramsay, and John Becket, a former M. P., secretary of the British Peoples party and a one-time Mosley henchman.

The names of all of the suspects taken into custody, including six women, were not disclosed.

The British public was urged today to help police in detecting fifth columnists who have been aiding Germany by plastering walls with posters telling of a "new British broadcasting station."

The posters, put up at night, were said "apparently to call attention to German broadcasts."

76 I. R. A. Men Arrested.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, May 24 (A. P.).—Seventy-six members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army were arrested in overnight raids by police of Northern Ireland, it was announced today.

Many arrests also were reported in Eire.

Among the prisoners was a German, seized in Dublin as the owner of a secret radio transmitter.

Later the police in Dublin testified in criminal court that they had found an open parachute of an unusual type, a radio transmitter and documents of military character concerning Irish defense in a raid on the home of Stephen Held, a naturalized Irishman.

They also said that they found $20,000 in American money, a military cap and a German Air Force badge in the house.

He was remanded to jail.

Fears have already been expressed in England that the Germans, perhaps with the connivance of rebellious Irishmen, might try to utilize the island for an attack on England.

The police who made the raids were accompanied by soldiers in armored cars as they searched the six northern counties, hauling many of the suspects from bed.

A man, arrested last week, was described as an adjutant-general of the rebel army and reportedly carried documents ordering the I. R. A. to be ready for action between May 8 and 24.

Wait for 'the Signal.'

I. R. A. members, according to these documents, were warned to go about as quietly as possible and to wait for "the signal."

The authorities in northern Ireland said that Sean Russell, chief of staff of the I. R. A., and an Irish-American named Joseph P. McGarritty, both of whom are regarded as dangerous, were believed to be in Hamburg, Germany.

Military police in armored cars operating along the Limerick-Tipperary border recently rounded up I. R. A. scouts and later found a body of them engaged in military drill. Forty armed men were captured near the main electric power station on the Shannon River.

The raids followed a statement by Viscount Craigavon, Premier of Ulster, in London last night that Northern Ireland was taking precautions similar to those taken in England.

Eighteen members of the I. R. A. were arrested in Belfast, twelve in Londonderry, six at Armagh and four in Newry. They will be interned for the duration of the war, it was announced.

Lord Craigavon returned from London and said that conscription was "a matter for the authorities on the other side"—meaning in England—"but in the meantime we are going to have a big recruiting drive."

Auto Fired At In Ulster

Belfast, Northern Ireland, May 24 (AP). A patrol of special constables in County Antrim fired on an automobile, wounding three occupants, last night when it failed to respond promptly to their challenge. The wounded were taken to an Antrim hospital where their condition was said to be "not serious."

The Day's War

Communiques

French

PARIS, May 24 (AP)—Tonight's communique of the French High Command said:

The violent combats that have been developing for several days in the north, notably in the regions of Cambrai and Arras and which have extended to the region of St. Omer and Boulogne, have not yet permitted re-establishment, up to the present, of the continuity of our lines.

South of Sedan the German attack reported this morning was conducted by important forces.

Our counter-attack was clearly successful.

MAY 25 1940

Very lively operations by our reconnaissance and bombing aviation continued to harass the enemy rear.

Our pursuit aviation, while continuing its covering action, has attacked successfully with its guns armored and motorized enemy elements.

This morning's communiqué stated:

In the northern region the enemy is endeavoring to increase his pressure.

On the line of the Somme our troops are firmly holding conquered positions.

To the south of Sedan the enemy has pursued his attacks without making any appreciable progress in spite of the means used.

British

LONDON, May 24 (AP)—The British Air Ministry communiqué, issued this morning, follows:

The Air Ministry announces that R. A. F. fighter aircraft were continuously engaged throughout yesterday on patrol and escort duties over the battle area.

Preliminary reports show that over a score of enemy aircraft were shot down, including a number of Messerschmitt fighters, and at least twenty-five seriously damaged.

Eight of our aircraft are reported as shot down or missing. Four others made forced landings.

Large forces of our bomber aircraft have again heavily attacked enemy communications both in the neighborhood of the fighting front and in Germany.

A later Air Ministry communiqué stated:

Intense air activity on an increased scale continued yesterday, last night and today over the fighting fronts in France and Belgium.

Repeated day bombing attacks were made by the Royal Air Force bombers on enemy columns in the neighborhood of Arras and Boulogne.

Strong sorties were made during the night on the enemy's lines of communication in Northeast France, Southern Belgium and the Rhineland.

In Northeast France, among the targets hit by our heavy bombers were military objectives at Bavay and Hirson, where fires were started. Hits were also obtained on the railway junction at La Capelle.

At Givet on the Meuse [river] a marshaling yard and a large column of transports were severely damaged. The railway junction at Beaumont was hit and rolling stock set on fire. The junction at Gembloux was also successfully attacked and an explosion was seen among a convoy of lorries near by.

After bombing at Charleroi another explosion occurred.

In the Rhineland our heavy bombers attacked enemy communications at Emmerich, Cologne, Coblenz and elsewhere. From these widespread bombing operations six of our aircraft have not returned.

Our fighters continued to win spectacular victories against the forces of the enemy. From reports so far received they have shot down or seriously damaged at lease eighty enemy aircraft since yesterday morning.

Ten of our fighters are missing but some of the pilots may yet return.

At least 500 aircraft have been lost by the enemy in France and Belgium during the last week, making a total of over 1,500 enemy aircraft lost since the invasion of the Low Countries.

German

BERLIN, May 24 (AP)—The communique of the German High Command follows:

The region of Northern France and Belgium in which the enemy armies are encircled was further tightened by successful attacks of German troops on all sides.

In Flanders, German divisions broke through the fortified Scheldt [River] position and advanced as far as the western embankment of the Lys [River].

Tournai was taken. The French fortress at Maubeuge, lying behind the front, is in German hands after the capture of the last fortified works.

Strong German armored forces, which are advancing between Arras and the sea northward yesterday neared the French Channel ports.

A weak enemy advance from the south toward Amiens was repelled. Otherwise there were no special events on the southern front.

Strong units of the air force supported the army's fight against enemy armies encircled in the Belgian and French region. On the southern front also the air force raided traffic facilities, transport movements and troop concentrations.

During armed reconnaissance of the coast a large war vessel, which probably was a cruiser, and destroyers were hit by heavy bombs off Boulogne. Our airplanes encountered strong anti-aircraft defense.

Furthermore, we succeeded in sinking six loaded transports.

Additional information received revealed that, during desperate enemy attempts to break through southward on May 21 and 22, fifty-six enemy tanks were destroyed by other means.

Yesterday's air losses total forty-nine planes, of which twenty-five were shot down in air fights, eight by anti-aircraft guns and the rest were destroyed on the ground.

MAY 25 1940

Sixteen German planes are missing.

At Narvik the air force successfully raided compact ground targets such as tent encampments, mule columns, troop concentrations and debarkations.

One enemy chaser was shot down.

One cruiser and one transport were damaged by bomb hits.

Last night the opponent again made flights over Western and Southwestern Germany, repeating aimless bomb dropping on non-military targets.

NAZI GENERAL TELLS AIM OF BELGIAN DRIVE

Von Kuechlen Asserts His Army Will Arrive at Ostend Shortly.

SAYS ODDS FAVOR GERMANS

Commander in Antwerp Sector Reveals 'Stern Battle' for Ghent on Way.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

WITH THE GERMAN WESTERN ARMIES, May 24 (A. P.)—Georg von Kuechlen, commander of the German Army driving at the Belgian coast port of Ostend, by way of Ghent and Bruges, declared today that "the odds are greatly in our favor."

While his forces were engaging the Allies in a severe battle only a few miles away, Gen. Von Kuechlen told me: "Our enemies are resisting bravely. But we are cutting our way to the sea and expect to be there shortly.

"We have inundations and other difficulties of terrain to contend with. Nevertheless, the odds are greatly in our favor."

His immediate objective, he continued, was to get control of the Ghent Canal.

Stern Battle on at Ghent.

"That will happen shortly," he said, and added: "A stern battle is on at Ghent."

[Presumably the canal referred to is that running from Ghent to Bruges and from there to the sea at Ostend, which is sixty-five miles distant from the southwest coast of England.]

One of Gen. Von Kuechlen's adjutants disclosed that, simultaneously with this drive, another German army under Gen. Walther von Reichenau is striving to reach the French channel ports of Calais and Dunkirk.

The army we are with, the forces in the Antwerp sector, is well supported by the air arm. We see Stukas (dive-bombers) and heavy bombers roaring overhead in an almost unbroken stream. Today, for the first time since entering the western zone of operations, I stood on an airport facing England—location not revealable—only thirty minutes from Britain as a Messerschmitt flies.

Naval Officers in Evidence.

This field was reserved for Messerschmitts. We saw twenty-seven of these swift fighters, hidden by a camouflage of branches or by being pushed back into the woods fringing the field.

But in addition to air force and army officers, we have also seen naval officers hastening back and forth in this area.

The Messerschmitt Squadron we visited was commanded by Herman Handrick, pentathlon champion in the 1936 Olympic games at Berlin.

As eight of his squadron took to the air, he said:

"As we haven't seen the enemy in the air for the past eight days, I am free to assist the army in its push into Ghent from the North. Those eight planes have started to assist in the land fight.

"Each plane has either four machine guns or two machine guns and two cannon. They have orders to swoop down on marching enemy columns."

If Looks Could Kill: Belgians Eye Foes

Lochner

MAY 25 1940

With the German Western Armies, May 24 (AP)—Hatred . . . death . . . disaster-numbed people groping their way back to a semblance of their old life: These are flashes in the picture seen on German-conquered Belgian soil.

In no Belgian community through which we have crossed this week in the tour behind the front with the German forces have I noticed more hatred in people's eyes than in Aerschot, ten miles northeast of Louvain.

They Glare From Their Ruins

In fact I often have been surprised how quickly the local population and the occupation army made friends.

I travel every day in a first lieutenant's car.

I suppose the population takes me for German.

If looks could have killed, I would be a corpse today in Aerschot.

They left out of consideration the fact that the German army had the most modern equipment in the world.

Hearse Carries The Living

There was one odd spectacle: Two elegant hearses moved along the road, filled with living women and children and their scanty belongings.

Every house on one street through which we drove had crepe on front doors.

Just outside of Malines we saw five graves marked by steel helmets.

As we came closer we discovered they were the peculiarly-shaped helmets of German parachute jumpers.

At another little Belgian village saw life and death in strange juxtaposition.

Life-And-Death Shuffle

A man was planting vegetables in the garden behind his house. Right under the veranda, in front, a Belgian soldier had been buried. The helmet on the burial place was bullet-ridden and blood-stained.

At Antwerp, for the first time in the operations area, we saw long queues of refugees at the "bureau for the scattered."

These were the unfortunates who became separated from their families during the headlong flight of the civilian population.

A systematic effort is being made by the German occupation administration to reunite families.

Bureaus similar to the one seen in Antwerp soon are to be established in many places.

This place had the ill fate of being the scene of one of the most violent tank fights.

Get between two groups of tanks and little is left of your town.

Similar Fate At Malines

Hundreds of citizens were standing around pitifully at the market place, where vegetables just had arrived and the looks we were given were those of hate.

We passed on to Malines.

This city, too, had been shelled. Its fortifications constituted the outer belt of Antwerp's forts and the Belgians appeared to have thought it would be sufficient to modernize them.

Seizure Of Belgian Archives Is Credited To Parachutist

Diplomatic Secrets In German Hands 20 Minutes After Brussels Capitulated, Lochner Is Told

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

MAY 25 1940

With the German Army, May 24—The story of how a parachute corps officer rushed straight to the Belgian Foreign Office when Brussels fell and seized archives which "will make the world prick up its ears," was told to me today by an authentic German military source.

Among the parachute jumpers who landed in the vicinity of Brussels, I was told, was an officer who in peacetime served in Adolf Hitler's Chancellery as a liaison man to the Foreign Office. He also was an assistant chief of protocol.

Nazis Prize Diplomatic Booty

As soon as the Belgian capital surrendered he rushed into the city with the first troops and headed for the Belgian Foreign Office.

Thus, twenty minutes after Brussels capitulated, the secret archives of the Belgian Government were in German hands.

I was not surprised. The Polish and Norwegian campaigns showed that the Germans consider diplomatic booty quite as important as booty of materials.

[Editor's Note—In Berlin a spokesman declared it was "not impossible" that revelations of Belgian and Dutch connivance in Allied war plans would be published in a manner similar to those allegations made following the German invasions of Poland and Norway.]

—o—

Narrowing The Pocket

Today the German army put in one of the hardest days of its offensive, drawing narrower and narrower the pocket into which they have maneuvered the combined British-Belgian-French northern army.

The bulk of the German force is only twenty miles from the Belgian coast.

The German drive is relentless. Whoever we encountered today was determined to win—convinced of victory.

—o—

Sticklers For Orders

"Orders is orders" for a certainty in this army of Adolf Hitler's.

When anybody has been assigned a task he tries to carry it out, come what may.

As we passed through a village forty miles from Ghent we tried as usual to dart in and out among the slowly moving columns. At one turn of the road a heavy-set major accosted us, his hand at his revolver.

"We are here as the supreme commander's guest," said my escort, "and we must travel along this road for awhile."

The Major Wasn't Impressed

This formula hitherto had worked wonders.

But the major wasn't impressed at all.

"My regiment must reach Ghent before dawn," he bellowed. "I won't have anybody interfere with that task and I'll shoot down anybody who tries to use this road."

We managed suddenly to find this particular road quite unnecessary for getting to our telephone connection.

—o—

Young And Old Mixed

In this army reservists and recruits are mixed.

General von Kuchler's aide de camp explained to me that "the one decisive moment in a soldier's life arrives when he receives his baptism of fire. Most young men are shaken when they meet the enemy in action the first time.

"From the first day of the war we mixed men who already had served twenty-five years ago with the young generation of today. The experiment had astounding success. The old veterans maintained such composure as hell broke loose that the young fellows soon rallied and regained their confidence.

"Now we practically never send untried regiments to the front. Each troop is liberally interspersed with veterans."

—o—

Long Marches, Little Sleep

Marching thirty miles a day is nothing unusual for Hitler's army. Neither is getting along without regular sleep.

As we halted today in the little Belgian village of St. Trond a young air force infantryman rushed up to our chauffeur, an old buddy of his.

"How are things?" asked my chauffeur.

"Just fine—only we shouldn't mind a little more sleep," replied the infantryman. "We haven't had any real sleep for three days. It always has been marching, marching, marching."

—o—

They Go Prepared

Every regiment carries with it from home everything it needs and never relies upon finding something en route by borrowing from the next regiment.

Equipment includes huge numbers of pontoon and rubber boats, telephone apparatus of every description and complete tents, should other quarters be unavailable.

There are ambulance cars, first-aid personnel—nothing seems to be forgotten.

Nazi Plan More Exposes

BERLIN, May 24 (AP).—Authorized sources said today disclosures of Dutch and Belgian "connivance" in Allied war plans against Germany might be published soon. The allegations, it was said, will be similar to documentary material published in the cases of Poland and Norway.

Nazis Minimize Losses Of Holland in Invasion

Dead and Wounded Total Only About 2,000, Berlin Says

BERLIN, May 24 (AP).—The official German news agency, D. N. B., reported tonight it had "authoritative information" that the Dutch Army lost fewer than 2,000 in dead and wounded and that only a few hundred persons lost their lives in air raids on Rotterdam.

The agency charged that the Dutch government, "through its propaganda agency operated in London, "was trying to tell the world that the Netherlands lost 100,000 soldiers and 100,000 civilians in Rotterdam.

"From informed quarters D. N. B. learns that these figures are fantastic," the agency said. "Due to the swiftness of action, the Netherlands Army emerged from the war with slight losses. No conclusive figures are at hand, but it is certain the loss in dead was less than 2,000."

Most civilians, the agency said, had largely been evacuated from Rotterdam, where, it claimed, conditions now were approaching normal, with schools reopened there Monday.

ALLIED TALKS WITH ROME ALREADY BEGUN

Italy Placed In "Particularly Favorable Position," Paris Says

Concessions Reported "Too Late"—Liners Defer Sailing Dates

MAY 25 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 24—France and Great Britain have opened negotiations with Rome for relaxation of the Allied blockade in the Mediterranean.

The Allies have taken "quite important measures" already, it was said in diplomatic quarters today, and these already have placed Italy in a "particularly favorable situation" under the blockade.

At the same time it was disclosed that Louis Renault, the "Henry Ford" of France, has been charged by the armaments committee with a "mission abroad."

Conference Held

The nature of the mission was not made known immediately, but it is known that Renault conferred this morning with Premier Reynaud, Vice-Premier Petain and Raoul Dautry, Minister of Armament.

Negotiations with Italy have been going on for several weeks, with the Allies seeking a formula which would keep supplies from Germany but would not unduly bother Italian importers and exporters.

A special British envoy has gone to Rome to iron out difficulties with Italian authorities.

French diplomatic sources said the conversations now going on in Rome showed "an understanding and desire on both sides to arrive quickly at the establishment of a satisfactory regime."

New sailing dates for the Rex and Augustus were announced as June 12, and for the Neptunia, June 21. However, reports were widespread that the new dates meant little.

Naval experts said some time ago that merchant ships would be needed for troop transport in the event of war. As war signs multiplied in Italy, naval reservists were called to the colors.

With Italy observing the twenty-fifth anniversary of her entrance into the world war, unofficial observers said that the French had secretly offered Italy special rights in Tunisia, credit facilities through the Suez Canal and a free port at Djibuti, in French Somaliland. Djibuti is the only railroad outlet to Italy's Ethiopian empire.

Great Britain has been negotiating for an arrangement to lift the Allied blockade in the Mediterranean for Italy.

Mussolini, however, was quoted as saying that the concessions are "too little and too late."

Talk About 'Eve of Our War.'

Twenty-five years from the day Italy declared war on the Austro-Hungarian empire, the country found herself today on the brink of

Il Duce Rejects Allied Offers

Mussolini Quoted as Calling Concessions Too Late—Three Sailings Are Canceled.

ROME, May 24 (A. P.).—Futile offers on the part of the Allies of concessions to Premier Mussolini in the hope of keeping Italy non-belligerent were reported today in Italian quarters.

MAY 25 1940

[A dispatch tonight from Paris said that France and Great Britain have opened negotiations with Rome for relaxation of the Allied blockade in the Mediterranean. The Allies have taken "quite important measures" already, it was said in Paris and these already have placed Italy in a "particularly favorable situation" under the blockade.]

Sailings Are 'Postponed.'

Sailings of three Italian liners—Rex, Augustus and Neptunia—all scheduled to leave Italy by June 1, were postponed today.

The Rex was to have sailed from Genoa on May 29 and the Augustus from Trieste on May 27, both for New York. The Neptunia was scheduled to sail on June 1 from Genoa for South America.

participation in a second great war, but this time ready to fight on the opposite side.

Some Italians more than half expected Premier Mussolini to celebrate today's anniversary by announcing that Italy is finally ready to strike for the attainment of her long-heralded territorial aspirations.

Meanwhile today members of the Fascist University Youth Organization, who assembled in Turin for a series of sports contests, were told that the games were taking place "on the eve of our war." In a message Guido Pallotta, vice-secretary of the organization, declared:

"From Turin we will leave for the last war of liberation which will break the chains still imposed on the country, will open the gates of Gibraltar and Suez, and will again name the Mediterranean Our Sea."

To the ancient Romans the Mediterranean was "Mare Nostrum"—"Our Sea"—and Fascist Italy has adopted the term.

It was recalled that the sailings of Italian liners were postponed at the outbreak of the war last September until it became apparent that Italy was not entering the conflict immediately.

Hundreds of Americans fleeing the possible war zone planned to leave on the Rex and if she fails to sail were expected to seek passage on the United States liner Manhattan.

Still, however, there were no surface indications of the exact time or place of Italy's leap. Most gueses were that it would be against France or Yugoslavia, against both of whom Italy has filed territorial claims.

Italians have clamored for Corsica, the French island off Italy's west coast, and for French possessions in Africa. Claims against Yogoslavia, less emphasized, chiefly concern Dalmatia, the section of that country along the Adriatic north of Italy's newly acquired Albania.

Say Italians Are Persecuted.

Italy, linked by a "pact of steel" to Germany, against whom she fought in the world war, today faced her former allies, France and Great Britain, with bitter accusations that they had cheated her of her share of the spoils in the last conflict.

The Italian explanation was that Italy last time fought not the Austro-Hungarian and German peoples but their regimes. Now, according to the Italians, it is the English and French who are trying to "starve" Italy and Germany into submission.

Reports from French Morocco that Italians there are being persecuted kept alive the hostility which recent youthful demonstrations here have shown for both Great Britain and France. About 130,000 University students have sent Premier Mussolini a message volunteering to take up arms against the western Allies, and the entire Italian press saluted their offer to help "free" Italy from what they describe as confinement to the Mediterranean.

Alliance One Year Old.

With the world war almost ten months old, Italy on May 24, 1915, declared war on Austria-Hungary. It was not until August 27, 1916, that she declared war on Germany. With these declarations Rome ended the Triple Alliance signed by the three Powers in 1882, which for more than thirty years had governed European relations.

Germany's argument in 1914 was that she was bound by the alliance to protect Austria-Hungary against the attack of Imperial Russia, but Italy denied that Austria-Hungary was attacked. Instead, she said, Austria-Hungary was the aggressor and Italy herself was endangered by Austro-Hungarian designs in the Balkans. Although Austria-Hungary and Germany tried to satisfy Italian Adriatic demands, Italy went to war against them.

This time Rome and Berlin are bound by a military alliance which was a year old just two days ago. Italy's participation in the European hostilities appeared to most Italians to be imminent.

What appeared in September to be a simple position of non-belligerency was reflected today in the light of enhanced German prestige on the western front as co-ordinated Italo-German strategy. Newspapers reprinted German press comment to the effect that Italy's non-belligerency was very much part of a pre-conceived plan formulated by Der Fuehrer and Il Duce.

The Italian attitude obviously kept France worried over the possibility of a thrust from the east, and the English were menaced by possible Mediterranean trouble at a time when they were already hard-pressed in seas nearer home.

Furthermore, Italy is furnishing agricultural workers to man German farms while Germans are fighting on the western front. Two more trainloads have just left Trento and Rieti for Germany.

At the close of Italy's participation in the last war it was said that women tore the uniforms from the returning combatants. Today uniforms are the order of the day. A crowning evidence of this changed attitude came yesterday with an order permitting mothers decorated for producing large numbers of children to wear ribbons like decorated soldiers.

The new developments in Italian foreign policy differing markedly from the situation on May 24, 1915, are emphasized today.

Under the noses of nervous Yugoslav and Greek military men, the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, was winding up a triumphal tour of Albania, the crown of which has been place on the head of Italy's King and Emperor. In Naples Terencio Toci, president of the Superior Council of Fascist Guilds of Albania, declared at a dinner in his honor last night that Albania desired to become the vanguard of "an Eastern Roman Empire." He placed the Albanian people at the disposal of King Victor Emanuel.

Second, the loose Italo-German-Japanese Entente, which is in the form of the anti-Comintern pact, was being freshened by the heaping of honors on a visiting Japanese mission.

Internally Italy bore little resemblance to the Italy of twenty-five years ago, when communist, anarchist and Socialist parties fought with the Monarchists and Republicans. The Fascist party today, with Mussolini at the head, rules without opposition.

Conte di Savoia to Sail

Italo Verrando, general manager of the Italian Line in the United States, after communicating by radio telephone with his home office in Genoa last night, reported here that the Rex would sail from Genoa on June 12, instead of on May 29 as had been scheduled. He said this postponement was because of an unavoidable decrease in passenger traffic from Italy to this country, rather than war conditions, and insisted that the Conte di Savoia would sail today from New York at noon, as scheduled, for Naples and Genoa. The Augustus will clear for New York on June 10 instead of on May 27, he reported through a representative of his line here.

Concessions By Allies Reported "Too Late"

Rome, May 24 (AP)—Sailings of three Italian liners—possibly needed for troop transport—were postponed tonight as reports circulated in Italy that Allied concessions intended to keep Italy out of the war had come "too late."

Today was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Italy's entry into the World War on the side of the Allies. Now she is linked to Germany by a "pact of steel," and all signs point to her entry into the war soon against the Allies.

MAY 25 1940

The official announcements of the postponement said it was purely a routine matter. New dates were booked, but reports were widespread that these meant little.

Rex Involved

Two of the liners were the Rex and the Augustus, scheduled originally to leave Genoa and Trieste May 29 and May 27, respectively. Both are booked now for departure June 6.

The Neptunia, scheduled to leave Genoa June 1 for South America, is listed to go June 21 instead.

The civil mobilization law which gives the Government wide powers in wartime went into effect tonight.

It gives the Government power to mobilize all citizens over the age of 14 and to requisition virtually any materials or services anywhere in the nation.

Reservists Recalled

The news of the delay in liner sailings coincided with announcement that naval [illegible] who recently [illegible] recalled

Naval experts said some time ago that liners would be needed for troop transport in the event of war.

As for the reported last-minute concessions which Mussolini was quoted unofficially as having termed "too late and too little," Italians said the French had offered Italy special rights in Tunis, credit facilities at Suez Canal and free port privileges at Jibuti, French Somaliland, only rail outlet from Italy's Ethiopian empire.

War Signs Multiply

The British were understood to have held out the promise of exempting Italy from its naval blockade if Italy will remain non-belligerent.

War signs multiplied. Outstanding were:

A speech by Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister, who told Albanian laborers he would report to Mussolini that "if you have done very fine things with pick and shovel, you are ready to do even finer things with muskets."

War veterans' organizations, students and other Fascist groups adopted resolutions announcing their readiness to fight.

Newspapers clamored for intervention in the war.

Additional army classes were reported called to the colors.

QUEEN EXPLAINS WHAT MADE HER LEAVE HOLLAND

Asserts Germans Intended Making Her Captive and a Hostage.

SAYS SHE CAN STILL LEAD

Would Have Been Powerless as a Prisoner, She Tells Reporters.

MAY 25 1940

LONDON, May 24 (AP).—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands told newspaper men today that she left her invaded kingdom because the Germans were determined to capture her and hold her as a hostage.

"I decided that it was my duty to fustrate attempts of the enemy to take possession of my person as soon as it became apparent these attempts could not be definitely checked," the Queen said.

She came to London on May 13, a fugitive.

"From the very beginning of hostilities the enemy has done everything in his power to capture me.

"Apparently he considered my person as a promising hostage with which to paralyze every resistance of my people in the Netherlands and overseas territories."

The monarch asserted that her dynasty has led every struggle for freedom of the Netherlands and added: "As heir to our tradition, I have this duty to go wherever the Netherlands continue their fight for liberty.

Powerless as Captive.

"In the hands of the enemy I would have been powerless. As a captive of oppression I could not have been a rallying point nor an inspiration for my unhappy people.

"No Dutchman could have looked to his Queen for hope and resurrection if she had been the prisoner of the enemy.

"I have deemed it my duty to choose the active leadership of a continued struggle at the head of my Government. This struggle is being waged by Dutchmen who have escaped from the now occupied territory and recruited abroad at the side of the Allies; also by the Dutch fleet its proud traditions, which has been able to join Allied fleets almost unscathed.

"It is my task to give leadership and confidence to these forces and Hollanders in overseas territories who are willing and keen to make any sacrifices for the liberation of the motherland.

"It is my task also freely to carry on the constitutional leadership of those 65,000,000 native inhabitants of our Empire whose allegiance to the Crown has been so forcefully demonstrated in these fateful days. These I consider the great duties which I have now to assume.

"Assisted by my Government, I shall try to acquit myself of this task. 'I Shall Maintain' is the motto of my dynasty. That tradition which I could not worthily nor effectively carry on as a captive of the enemy I shall forever cherish and hold high."

Flight Was Criticized.

There has been criticism of the Queen in some quarters for leaving her country when it was under attack and some Hollanders have been so bitter as to say that they no longer wished to be ruled by her or the royal house which she represents.

Wilhelmina Says Escape Leaves Her Free To Fight

Netherlands Queen Tells Newspapermen That As Prisoner She Would Be Powerless

MAY 25 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 24—Queen Wilhelmina said today she fled from the Netherlands to maintain her "active leadership" of 65,000,000 citizens of the Dutch Empire instead of becoming a prisoner of war by remaining at home.

"I have deemed it my duty," she said.

The Queen, tired but spirited, explained her position in an interview with correspondents.

She pointed out that of the Dutch Empire's population, the colonies embrace nearly 60,000,000. The Netherlands proper has a population of approximately 8,000,000.

Joined Allied Fleet

"The Dutch fleet, with its proud traditions, has been able to join the Allied fleets almost unscathed," she said.

"This struggle is being waged by Dutchmen who have escaped from the non-occupied territory and recruited abroad at the side of the Allies. It is my task to give leadership and confidence to these forces and Hollanders in overseas territories who are willing and keen to make any sacrifices for the liberation of the motherland."

"From the beginning," the 59-year-old sovereign said, "the enemy has done everything in his power to capture me.

"In the hands of the enemy I would have been powerless. As a captive of oppression I could not have been the rallying point nor an inspiration for my unhappy people."

Ruling From London

The Queen and other members of the royal family arrived in England last week shortly before her homeland fell to German invaders. The Netherlands Government is functioning temporarily in London.

"I shall maintain," is the motto of my (House of Orange) dynasty," she said. "That tradition which I could not worthily nor effectively carry on as a captive of the enemy, I shall forever cherish and hold high."

Fleet Activities Eyed Anxiously By Dutch Indies

Island Officials Tighten Up Defenses and Try to Keep Trade Flowing Normally

By CHARLES H. KLINE

BATAVIA, Java, May 24 (AP).—Movements of the United States and Japanese fleets in the Pacific interest residents of the Dutch East Indies, who, since Germany overran the Netherlands, have manned their land, sea and air defenses and interned five thousand "fifth column" suspects.

MAY 25 1940

The East Indies authorities lost no time in clearing for action when the Germans invaded Holland. They rounded up suspects, impounded property amounting to almost $100,000,000 and seized eighteen ships. Ten of the vessels are going out under the British flag.

The Dutch are attempting to follow a calm middle course in trade dealings with their new war allies and with their trade-conscious Japanese neighbors. The native population is outwardly loyal.

[Both the United States and Japan have announced that they want the status quo maintained in the Dutch East Indies. Dutch officials also have made it clear they would reject any offer of protection by a foreign power. At the start of the invasion of Holland, Dutch Foreign Minister Eelco N. van Kleffens said that by far the greater part of the Dutch Navy was in the East Indies and that the colonial air forces included latest type American-made bombers and 100 fighting planes.]

Theoretically the islands are abundantly able to feed vital raw materials both to the Allies and to Japan if the production machinery is adjusted. Both Japanese and United States imports from the East Indies should rise as a consequence of the loss of European trade outlets.

Japanese and Dutch officials already are carrying on trade talks.

Queen Appeals for Unity

LONDON, May 24 (AP).—Queen Wilhelmina, Holland's refugee ruler, appealed to her subjects in the Dutch East Indies today to "set all differences aside" and rally around their "constitutional authority and aid him in his heavy task." (The executive authority of the East Indies is Governor General A. W. L. Tjarda van Starkenborgh Stachouwer.)

Queen Wilhelmina called upon the East Indies in a broadcast to remember that the "existence and salvation of the kingdom is at stake." There was no other reference in the broadcast to "differences."

British Flyers Harry Germans In Night Raids

Tanks, Armored Cars Hit; Whole Squadrons Reply to Calls for Volunteers

By G. H. P. Anderson

WITH THE ROYAL AIR FORCE IN FRANCE, May 24 (AP).—When commanding officers ask for volunteers for special raids by British pilots these nights, whole squadrons appear for duty and names have to be drawn out of a hat.

There is no rest for German tanks and armored-car units now in the shell-torn woods of France and Belgium. Night after night the tanks are ferreted out and attacked with full force by British bombers.

Convoys, some moving, some resting, are showered with bombs and machine-gun fire. At one village, a serpentine German column with armored vehicles closely grouped was the victim of many direct hits.

In another attack upon a German column, an anti-aircraft battery was silenced. To the southwest of this action huge fires told the R. A. F. its thrust the night before at an ammunition dump had reached its mark. Trains, searchlight batteries and supply depots are among the targets sought by the night bombers.

Another crew of British in France is made up of men of the Auxiliary Military Pioneer Corps. At one crossroad in France about twenty of these huskies—they are professional road builders—reported taking time out from their work to capture German advance scouts. The road men use pick handles as weapons.

The scouts appear on motorcycles. They carry machine guns, but usually are so surprised by being pounced upon from behind hedges that they are helpless. Twelve such scouts were captured in one day recently by the road crew.

Britain Lists 12 Warships Lost, 2 Slightly Damaged

Nazi Report Putting Figure at 137 Called 'Fantastic'

LONDON, May 24 (AP).—British naval losses since April 9 were two capital ships slightly damaged, one cruiser which struck an uncharted rock and seven destroyers and four submarines sunk, naval sources said today.

[The capital ships apparently were the battleship Rodney, 33,000 tons, reported damaged by a bomb, and the battle cruiser Renown, 32,000 tons, hit by shellfire off Norway. The 9,550-ton cruiser Effingham was reported lost after running onto a rock off the Norwegian coast last Monday.]

Nazi 'Chutists Destroyed By Troops Halted for Rest

Allies Turn Out From Tavern for House-to-House Fight

LONDON, May 24 (AP).—A small band of British and French soldiers was reported tonight to have destroyed German parachute attackers who, armed with submachine guns, dropped on a small French village behind the western front. The British were said to have been armed only with rifles.

The Air Ministry announced that sixteen members of the ground staff of a Royal Air Force squadron had stopped to rest at the village, weary from seventeen hours on the road, when German bombers came roaring over the rooftops at dusk. The bombers flew around until night fell, and then dropped parachutists.

The R. A. F. men, joined by a few French soldiers resting at a near-by estaminet (tavern), set out in search of the Nazi machine-gunners, the Air Ministry said, and there followed a house-to-house fight through the village.

"By daybreak every parachutist was dead," said the Air Ministry announcement.

London Appoints Hoare Ambassador to Madrid

He Will Go There Next Week on 'Special Mission'

Attacking the organization of British local defense volunteers—"parashooters"—he urged that the whole plan be scrapped. "There is widespread uneasiness that once again we are trusting to ancient weapons to guard against a modern menace," he said.

BELGIAN ART FAILS TO REACH SAFETY

30 Truckloads Sent From Brussels Missing.

PARIS, May 24 (A. P.).—Thirty truckloads of art treasures including paintings by Rubens, Rembrandt and Van Dyck are missing, it was disclosed today, after having been spirited out of Brussels during the German invasion.

They were taken from the Brussels Museum and placed in trucks which set out for France over the bombed and refugee-tangled roads of Belgium.

They departed before the fall of the Belgian capital a week ago today, but have not been heard from since.

Among the canvases removed were Jordaen's "King Drinking," Bernard van Orley's "Job," Jan Vermeer's views of Delft, the elder Brueghel's "Fall of Icarus" and Roger de la Pasture's famous impression of Laurent Froimont.

Masterpieces of the Louvre and other Paris galleries were transferred to safer areas in France at the start of the war.

The Brussels Museum, formally called the Royal Gallery of Painting and Sculpture, contained more than 700 paintings, the majority of them from the Flemish and Dutch schools.

The collection of the early Netherlands school was regarded as one of the most important in existence, and all the chief masters were represented by characteristic works.

DANES TACKLE NEW CONDITIONS

Seek Drastic Revision of Economic Life.

FOREIGN TRADE CUT IN HALF

Agriculture Is Virtually Normal Under Nazi Occupation.

COPENHAGEN, May 24 (A. P.)—With her old foreign markets gone, Denmark is reorienting her foreign economy to fit that of Germany and at the same time drastically rearranging her home economy to meet the sudden unemployment resulting from the Nazi occupation.

The Danish export and import business has been cut roughly in half. While certain industries have been curtailed sharply because they lack the raw materials which England formerly supplied. These have been replaced by Germany to a certain extent, but not sufficiently to keep a number of industries going at their normal, pre-invasion rate.

The solidity of Denmark's agricultural economy evidently was affected least of all, as Germany proved an eager market for food products.

Parliament Goes to Work.

Parliament has introduced a series of important new measures to safeguard other industries by sharing work and to promote investment by lowering the interest rate and guaranteeing bank loans.

The motto which may be put over the new chapter in Danish national life is: "Share the burden and the benefit of the community."

This has always been a guiding principle in Denmark's policy under the new conditions, it is a vital necessity.

On April 9 Denmark was cut off from her markets in Great Britain and France. When Belgium and the Netherlands became theaters of war on May 10 these countries also disappeared as customers for the time being, at least.

Foreign Trade Cut in Half.

Exact figures for the resulting economic losses are not known, but it is estimated that 50 per cent of Denmark's total annual imports of 1,700,000,000 kroner and a similar share of her exports of 1,600,000,000 kroner defended on these countries.

[The Danish krone no longer is listed on foreign exchange. It was valued around 20 cents.]

The economic possibilities are limited, although not to a degree corresponding to these figures. Germany has been able to take the place of Great Britain as a buyer of Danish agricultural products and a seller of coal, fertilizer and many other goods.

Agriculture Virtually Normal.

Denmark's principal agricultural problem is to supply feed for her large herds of dairy cattle, her pigs and her poultry. The increased slaughtering necessary because of the shortage of feed that normally came from England has been aggravated by damage done to pasture lands by the severe winter.

German-Danish commissions are working out a basis of exchange of these products as well as chemicals. Potatoes cannot be used for feed this year, since they are needed by the people.

Thus it has been possible to keep the Danish agricultural life running at virtually normal speed. Other trades, especially industrial, have been unable to keep up normal employment.

Stocks of several kinds of raw materials are running low and strict economy has been introduced to maintain a skeleton service in vital manufactures. Mounting unemployment in several industrial trades has been the result.

Vast Program of Control.

—In order to prevent an abnormal rise in prices and remedy the effects of unemployment, the Danish Government introduced in Parliament a number of measures which the Government hoped would apportion the burden and benefit the life of the community in the fairest manner.

The new laws cancel the previous policy of adjusting wages and salaries four times a year according to a statistically computed price index. Prices rose when wages were raised, and wages were raised again when prices went up.

This infinite spiral now will be stopped.

New laws not only regulate wages and salaries but also try to "share the work." In the industries where the greatest number of workers are employed, they must let their unemployed comrades take their places for a time.

Those giving over their jobs will be given certain remuneration from an unemployment fund being created partly by Government contribution and partly by a tax, payable by all job-holders, including clerks.

A special law will forbid improper price-raising and another will limit shareholders' profits to 5 per cent plus two-thirds of the average earnings above 5 per cent during the last three years.

Finally a credit fund of 100,000,000 kroner—a sort of Reconstruction Finance Corporation—will be established to counteract possible losses of old or new bank loans.

Denmark's money situation is indicated by the fact that the National Bank several days ago lowered the discount rate from 5½ to 4½ per cent.

BLACKOUT LIFTED OVER ALL SWEDEN

War Tension Eases Greatly —Nazi Plane Fired On.

GOTHENBURG, Sweden, May 24 (A. P.).—The blackout was lifted from all Sweden, effective today, amid an easing of the alarms provoked by the European war. The blackout of the entire country was ordered on May 12, after Germany's invasion of the Netherlands and Belgium, for an indefinite period.

Fresh incidents, nevertheless, continued to emphasize the nearness of the conflict swirling in western Europe. Several German planes were seen over Swedish territory yesterday near the Norwegian border and one drew the fire of the Swedish neutrality guard as it dropped down to about 300 feet. The trespasser was not hit.

Also yesterday a British bomber attacked a German steamship outside the Danish town of Helsingor across the narrow Oresund from the Swedish town of Halsingborg. The German anti-aircraft batteries went into action, but the outcome of the battle could not be determined from here. One dud from the German batteries landed in Halsingborg.

British Actors Who Stay In U. S. for War Assailed

Seymour Hicks Asks if They'll Be Jailed on Return

LONDON, May 24 (AP).—Britons "gallantly facing the footlights in New York and great American cities" were criticized today by Sir Seymour Hicks, British actor-producer, in a letter distributed to the press.

Sir Seymour asked what would be the position of British subjects of military age who "deliberately are staying away from England for the duration . . . when Britain wins the war?" He said it should be explained "quite plainly when they arrive in England on Armistice Day whether they are to be fined, imprisoned, or welcomed with open arms as charming prodigal sons."

Sir Seymour said he was concerned mainly with the future of "those of my own profession who at present are making a new film in Hollywood called 'Gone With the Wind Up.'"

Olivier Calls Absurd Charges He And Others Avoid Returning Home

New York, May 24 (AP)—British actors on Broadway vigorously resented a London actor-producer's intimation that they were afraid to fight for their country.

"Our Government has told us to stay where we are until called and any charge that we are deliberately avoiding returning home until the war is over is absurd," said Laurence Olivier, starring with Vivien Leigh in "Romeo and Juliet."

MAY 25 1940

This was his and others' reply to Sir Seymour Hicks, who earlier today in London criticized Britons "gallantly facing the footlights" in New York and "deliberately staying away for the duration."

Several British actors here declared they were registered for military service with their Government, but had been discouraged from returning home until needed.

Playwright Noel Coward, however, said he was returning home shortly to resume active service for his country. He already has served with the British forces in France.

Six Truckloads of Their Equipment Seized.

MONTREAL, May 24 (A. P.).—In swift overnight raids believed to be a prelude to a national drive against fifth columnists, the police seized six truckloads of swastikas, photographic equipment, cards and maps in the homes and offices here of suspected members of the National Unity party, the Canadian Fascist organization.

MAY 25 1940

The raids were executed under Defense of Canada Regulations.

There were no arrests here, but H. R. Gagnon, Superintendent of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, said that some prosecutions undoubtedly would follow an investigation.

Fifth-Column Drive In Montreal Directed At Canadian Fascists

Montreal, Saturday, May 25 (AP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police in a continuation of their drive against fifth columnists swept across Montreal last night and early today raiding homes of persons suspected of subversive activities.

MAY 25 1940

The raids were directed particularly against persons suspected of being leaders, organizers or mere members of the National Unity Party, Canadian Fascist organization.

Eight homes were raided, and literature was seized in about half of them. On the previous night thirteen homes and offices were raided.

Quintuplets Hear King Broadcast To Empire

Pose In Nurses' Uniforms For Posters To Be Used In $5,000,000 Red Cross Campaign

Callander, Ont., May 24 (AP)—The Dionne quintuplets today listened to King George's broadcast to the British Empire and blew kisses toward their radio as he spoke.

They remember the King well because a year ago when he was in Canada they journeyed to Toronto for an audience. They know about the war and realize Canada is in it. Hitler they call "that wicked man."

They contributed $1,000 to the Canadian Red Cross and then posed in nurses' uniforms for a poster that will be used in the Red Cross campaign for $5,000,000.

The five little sisters will celebrate their sixth birthday next Tuesday. Mass will be celebrated for them in their own nursery for the first time. Soon they will begin instructions for their first communion.

MAY 25 1940

Soon also they will start the regular Ontario school course and will study English. They speak French except for a few English phrases.

Intelligence tests show the famous quints are a year ahead of their age.

Germans Barred In Auto Plant

WINDSOR, Ont., May 24 (CP).—Chrysler Corporation of Canada posted notices today throughout the company plant here ruling that only the French and English languages will be permitted on the premises. The action followed agitation by employees this week against employment of Germans.

Three German employees, who have not been naturalized, obtained leave of absence until they can produce evidence of citizenship. All employees have been asked to fill out a questionnaire giving detailed evidence of their citizenship and residence. When the protest from the employees was first received, company officials referred the matter to government officials in Ottawa.

More Orders Received For American Aircraft

Anglo-French Board Says Purchases At $100,000,000 in Last Ten Days

New York, May 24 (AP)—The Anglo-French Purchasing Board today said orders for $100,000,000 of additional aircraft and equipment had been placed with American manufacturers in the last ten days, raising to $820,000,000 the value of aircraft and accessories ordered to date.

The board also announced the Belgian Government was cooperating in purchases here and that arrangements were being made for the board to buy planes for Norway and the Netherlands.

MAY 25 1940

Responsible sources said 6,100 planes had been purchased since August 6, including 3,100 by Great Britain and 3,000 by France, and that negotiations were under way for 4,000 more. Of these, more than 2,300 combat and training planes had been delivered, it was asserted.

REFUGEE SHIP SAILS; F.B.I. CHECKS CREW

MAY 25 1940

In London 700 Americans Join Rush to Eire as Liner, With Room for 671, Sets Out

NEW YORK—MAY 24 (TIMES)

The United States liner President Roosevelt sailed yesterday afternoon for Galway, Ireland, to bring home Americans who have gone there from France and Great Britain.

The ship ordinarily can accommodate 433 passengers, and extra cots have been placed in the cabins and in the public rooms for 238 more, so that she will be able to accommodate a total of 671. Extra lifeboats and lifebelts are being taken.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were present at the signing on of the crew of 255, besides United States Shipping Commissioners, to make sure "that every one on board was a bona fide American seaman." The one partial exception was a baker of English birth who had taken out his first naturalization papers for United States citizenship. The crew included six women.

Joseph E. Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, who was on board when the crew signed articles, said, "We are sure that the crew of this ship, who are all members of this union, will give their best for a safe completion of this work."

The check-up of the crew continued even after the liner had left the pier and she was followed by a Coast Guard tug to take off the government officials down the bay.

The President Roosevelt, which is commanded by Captain James E. Roberts, carried no passengers for the eastward voyage and no cargo.

Officers of the ship said that special searchlights would be rigged at night to illuminate the American flags painted on her sides and also on the upper deck so that no mistake as to her identity could possibly be made by belligerents, all of whom have been notified by the State Department of the purpose of the President Roosevelt's voyage.

The ship is due to arrive at Galway on June 1 but officials of the United States Lines could not say when she would leave that port for New York.

This will be the Roosevelt's second voyage for war refugees. Early last Fall the liner brought back 596.

700 Americans Going to Eire.

LONDON, May 24 (A. P.).—Seven hundred Americans, eager to leave England and escape the dangers of Nazi invasion, have applied for visas and exit permits to Eire in the last twenty-four hours, embassy officials said today.

In the face of the growing danger, embassy officials said they expected nearly half of the 5,400 American citizens in the British Isles to leave for home.

MAY 25 1940

The United States liner President Roosevelt, scheduled to sail from New York today for Galway, will have accommodations for only 600 even if all available space is taken.

There are about 2,000 Americans in London, 1,500 elsewhere in the United Kingdom and about 1,900 in Ireland.

Officials said there was "practically no chance" for Americans on the Continent to go home by way of Britain, since the channel steamship and air services have been discontinued.

Vote Unlimited Air Corps to U.S. Army

MAY 25 1940

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP).—By a vote of 391 to 1, the House today approved an unlimited expansion of the Army Air Corps a few hours after President Roosevelt had announced a broad plan for training 50,000 pilots to man the cockpits of the nation's future fighting planes.

Meanwhile, the Senate naval committee imposed a top of 10,000 planes upon the Navy's air strength, in recommending passage of a measure authorizing the expenditure of an estimated $2,200,000,000 for the Naval Air Corps and its bases ashore.

The maximum was fixed, it was said, so that the Navy would have to ask Congress for approval when the time comes to exceed that number of fighting ships.

The Army Air Corps bill, which now goes to the Senate, would suspend the Army Air Corps' present legal maximum of 6,000 planes until June 30, 1941.

It also would permit the Army to train an average of 8,500 pilots annually, as compared with 2,500 at present, and allow 6,000 Air Corps reserve officers to be on active duty simultaneously. In addition, the legislation would permit the Army to discharge "Fifth Column" suspects among its civilian employes regardless of Civil Service restrictions.

The Senate Naval Committee acted on the Naval bill after Rear Admiral Towers, chief of the Naval Air Corps, had said the United States has "far and away the best Naval Air Force in the world." However, Senator Byrd (D-Va.) had interpreted figures presented earlier by Towers as indicating the Navy had no more than 500 up-to-the-minute planes.

Vote Down Gag

Chairman Walsh (D.-Mass.) suggested that the earlier testimony be suppressed because it presented "a very bad picture" for national defense, but the committee rejected the suggestion.

The bill authorizes the Navy to increase its roster of pilots to 16,000, besides boosting its air strength to 10,000 planes. Walsh told reporters it was estimated that an outlay of $1,200,000,000 would be needed to attain this two-fold goal, which the Navy hopes to reach in four years.

In addition to revealing his program for training pilots, Mr. Roosevelt disclosed an expectation that the Governors of the 48 States, meeting at Duluth early in June, would get actively behind the defense program.

Island Defense

During the afternoon, Mr. Roosevelt received Admiral Leahy, retired, former chief of Naval operations and now Governor of Puerto Rico, who told reporters as he left that the air bases under construction there will make it extremely hazardous for any foreign power to invade the United States, or Central or northern South America. They will be completed in two years, he said, but could be hurried.

Mr. Roosevelt described his pilot-training program at his regular Friday press conference. In the year beginning July 1, it is contemplated that three months of basic training be given to 50,000 prospective pilots through the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Graduates of the course will not in all cases be ready for combat operations, he said, but can be incorporated in the air reserves.

The factories now devoted to the manufacture of light planes figure they can produce, without expanding their floor space, a maximum of 15,000 machines a year.

Ten flying students to a plane is a modest number. At some commercial airports as many as thirty students use one plane in the course of a week.

The biggest factory in the group, that of the Piper Aircraft Corporation at Lock Haven, Pa., can produce 6,000 planes a year as soon as the demand requires it, William D. Strohmeier, plant representative said today.

Another heavy producer, the Aeronautical Corporation of America, next month will move from its Cincinnati plant into larger quarters at Middletown, Ohio.

[illegible]0-odd persons trained to fly at Government expense during the college year now ending all made their first solo flights in little planes of from fifty to sixty-five horsepower that cruise at less than a hundred miles an hour.

That the pilots of light planes may well become the army's and navy's major reservoir for men selected for advanced training in more powerful machines is given emphasis by the fact that Germany's great air force is made up almost wholly of men introduced to flying in gliders and "power gliders"—planes of low horsepower.

Some instructors contend that the type of plane a person learns to fly in is immaterial, in that he spends his first fifty hours in the air, anyway, "learning to look at the ground" and acquiring what is known among pilots as "air sense."

Flivver Training For 15,000 Pilots

By Devon Francis

[Associated Press Aviation Editor]

New York May 24—The United States can train 150,000 men annually in the rudiments of flying on the output of American "flivverplane" factories alone if the Government turns to the expanded use of such aircraft to buttress its reservoir of pilots for the national defense.

In addition to the plants mentioned, at least a dozen others could be marshalled for the mass production of planes of low power and slightly heavier horsepower.

ALIEN CONTROL BILL IN SENATE

It Would Let Only Citizens Possess Arms.

JACKSON ATTACKED IN HOUSE

Attorney-General Called Chief Foreign Agent Coddler.

WASHINGTON, May 24 (A. P.).—Senator Bridges, Republican, of New Hampshire, proposed today that Congress forbid aliens to carry, own, buy or sell any implement of war, and Senator Reynolds, Democrat, of North Carolina, asked for a $50,000 Senate investigation of "fifth column" threats to national defense.

MAY 25 1940

Their proposals, together with an attack by Representative Thomas, Republican, of New Jersey, on Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson, followed a junction of forces between Congress and Government agencies to uncover and destroy subversive activities.

Mr. Bridges's bill would provide deportation and a fine of up to $10,000 for violations. Mr. Reynolds offered a resolution to set up a three-man inquiry.

Representative Thomas, asserting in a statement that Mr. Jackson had been a chief coddler of foreign agents, said:

"One of the best ways and one of the quickest ways to drive the fifth column out into the open and ultimately to destroy it is to take the Federal Bureau of Investigation away from the Department of Justice."

Representative Dies of Texas said he had unconfirmed reports from Mexico, which he found hard to believe, that under German direction a number of camouflaged air bases had been built just south of the Rio Grande River.

The chairman of the House committee investigating un-Americanism told reporters that he had been unable to verify or disprove the reports because his committee's agents could not be sent outside the country.

Mr. Dies added that he had verification of reports of a heavy influx of both communists and Nazis into Mexico, some of it from the United States. The purpose he said, is to establish a propaganda base in the southern republic and to prevent United States assistance in the European war.

Observers Deny Reports Of Camouflaged Bases

Military Men Discount Statement Of Dies Regarding Nazi Activities In Mexico

Mexico City, May 24 (AP)—Foreign military observers said tonight that no camouflaged air bases—military or civil—had been constructed on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande under German supervision.

Commenting on the statement of Representative Dies (Dem., Texas) that he had unconfirmed reports of such bases, one well-informed intelligence official said:

"I have made frequent survey flights over northern Mexico and have never seen, on any of these trips, any area that might conceal a field from which a modern warplane could operate."

Another observer said that German-directed construction firms had built several small airports in the interior of Chiapas, Yucatan and Quintana Roo States, in tropical southeastern Mexico, but that they were not camouflaged.

One Already Named

The hospital organization plans have been detailed to the point where one New York institution's prospective unit already is designated as "Evacuation Hospital No. 7"—meaning, in World War terms, a unit for service within five to ten miles of a combat area.

The purpose of this "paper" organization, similar in principle to the Government's confidential "M-Day" plans which are locked in the safes of key industrial plants, is to have individuals ready to fill the important posts and have vital talent, such as surgeons, prepared to rush into organized service with a minimum of delay if the "emergency" materializes.

A typical hospital unit would have a basic personnel of about forty persons—twenty surgeons, seven medical service physicians, two dentistry service physicians, an X-ray man, a laboratory man; commanding officer, executive officer and quartermaster from the regular army, and six men from the army's administrative reserve, including a chaplain—supplemented by a staff of enlisted men and nurses.

Canvassing Staffs

The hospital with which the surgeon-general has communicated are now canvassing their staffs to find out how many are army reserve officers, who would be interested in service in such units, and how many are physically fit (including whether they fall within the tentative age limits of 23 and 55 years.

Preparations have even reached the point where the hospitals are making arrangements for getting replacements for their regular operating staffs if the field units have to go out.

The Government was understood to have begun thinking about the problem as long as a year ago, and to have actually started the organization operations about the first of the year. Major General Magee's first general letter to the hospitals went out March twenty-fifth.

Hospitals Asked

The New York institutions include the Medical Center, the Roosevelt, St. Luke's, the Postgraduate, the New York, and the Presbyterian.

The army's tactical plans for medical service in the field are understood to include a departure from the World War system of a few large base hospitals far behind the lines, and instead to have more and smaller units close to the front.

Two In Baltimore

Two hospital units for service with the United States Army in the event of war already are being organized in Baltimore. The Johns Hopkins hospital has undertaken to organize one of thirty-two base hospitals being planned by the War Department.

The University of Maryland hospital has agreed to organize a smaller surgical hospital, for duty behind the front lines. However, the University of Maryland group will ask for permission to organize a base hospital or evacuation hospital if war becomes imminent.

Surgeon General Magee Asks Major Institutions To Prepare For "National Emergency"

New York May 24—The Government is organizing the nation's major hospitals for field service in this country or abroad—similar to the work in Europe during the World War—in case of a "national emergency."

Surgeon-General James Magee, of the United States Army, has asked the country's largest hospitals—at least six of them in New York city—to organize staffs for model units for such service.

21 American Republics Protest Ship Scuttling

Address King George and Hitler on Neutral Zone Incident

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP).—The twenty-one American republics told Great Britain and Germany today that they regarded as a violation of this hemisphere's neutrality zone the scuttling of the German ship Hanover when intercepted by a British warship near the Dominican Republic. The incident took place last March 9.

MAY 25 1940

The protest was sent on behalf of the republics by the President of Panama to King George VI and Chancellor Adolf Hitler. It said:

"This incident is considered by the governments of the twenty-one American republics to be a violation of the inherent right asserted on behalf of those republics in the declaration of Panama (setting up the neutrality zone) which was communicated to the governments of Great Britain, France and Germany on Oct. 4, 1939.

"At the same time that the American republics have authorized me to express their regret at the failure of the belligerent governments to observe the terms of the declaration, they reiterate the principle therein set forth and reserve all their rights in the premises."

Today's was the third protest to be addressed by the American republics to belligerent governments. The first was on the naval battle off the coast of Uruguay which led to the scuttling of the German pocket battleship Graf von Spee. The second arose from the scuttling of the German freighter Wakama off the coast of Brazil after being overhauled by a British warship.

Cudahy and Staff Safe; No Word From Gordon

Berlin, However, Reports U. S. Diplomats Are All Right

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP).—In the first message received from him in eight days, Ambassador John Cudahy told the State Department today that all members of the American and other diplomatic and consular establishments in Brussels were safe.

Mr. Cudahy's telegram was forwarded through the German Foreign Office.

The Department is still without direct word from the American Legation at The Hague. The last telegram from Minister George A. Gordon came on May 15.

The German Foreign Office, however, assured Alexander C. Kirk, American Charge d'Affaires at Berlin, today that all diplomatic and consular officers at Brussels and The Hague were safe.

A State Department official said no word had come indicating that any Americans, whether officials or private citizens, suffered casualties. In the absence of such word, the official said, the Department must presume that Americans had come through the German invasion of Belgium and Holland unharmed.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, the seventy-year-old American Minister to Norway, is carrying on her diplomatic duties in Stockholm, Sweden, after the war-time flight from her legation.

American relations with the Norwegian government are still maintained through her, although King Haakon VII is reported to be in northern Norway, and the government is scattered.

Mrs Harriman has no diplomatic staff with her, only Miss Lindgren, her private secretary and maid. She has the use of the American Legation staff in Stockholm.

Alexander Weddell, Ambassador to Spain, called on President Roosevelt today to say good by before hastening back to Madrid.

Mr. Weddell, who had planned to stay here until mid-July, said he would catch a trans-Atlantic clipper on June 1. He added that it was entirely his own idea to cut short his leave.

War Wounds, Cleaner Now, Infections Fewer

British Journals Suggest High Speed Missiles Explain It

CHICAGO, May 24 (AP).—British and French medical journals received here recently report that wounds suffered by Allied troops are cleaner and inections fewer than in the World War, Dean Irving S. Cutter, of Northwestern University Medical School, said today.

Summarizing the journals' statements, Dr. Cutter said:

"It is reported that the wounds from German missiles are cleaner and go clear through the body, carrying fewer particles of tissue with them. Perhaps the velocity of the missiles is greater, and they sterilize themselves by friction oin the air and the heat of the discharge.

"Far fewer infections are being reported than in the last war, although the physicians making these reports qualify their statements by saying that it is perhaps too early to draw any definite conclusions. It is suggested that perhaps wounded men were less fatigued had more resistant power."

Liner Is Taking 511 Mules and Horses to War

Cabins Now Stalls, Ship Sails After Stallion Quells Mules' Sit-Down Strikes

NEW YORK—MAY 24—(TAIL)

The Belgian-flag liner Ville de Liege, formerly the United States liner American Trader and still operated by the United States Line, slipped out of the Port of New York last night on a war-time emergency mission with her superstructure, including boatdeck and aft well deck, disfigured by makeshift timber housings not unlike Biblical woodcuts of Noah's Ark. Racing out of the harbor with her dipped-out cabins converted into box stalls, she was a seagoing nightmare of dissonance from kicking hooves together with the protesting brays and whinnies of 511 prime mules and horses—all drafted for Allied service in Europe.

Pepper Moves for Aid To Allies 'Short of War'

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 24—Declaring that Germany had violated the Kellogg-Briand Treaty to outlaw war, Senator Pepper, Democrat of Florida, introduced today a resolution to authorize the President "to give aid short of war" to the Allies.

Such aid, Mr. Pepper said, would include the sale of United States aircraft, ships, artillery and other war supplies to Great Britain, France, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, "and such other countries as may be subject to unprovoked military aggression by Germany in violation of the Kellogg pact or of the rules of international law."

Mr. Pepper proposed earlier this week that the President be empowered to sell Army and Navy planes to the Allies, but his resolution was shelved by a 12-to-1 vote of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Strong Feeling Against Lindbergh Now Reported

Memphis, Tenn., May 24 (AP)—A mem of the French Chamber of Deputies in a letter to Victor Gourbey, a relative here, asserted that sentiment is strong in France to expel Col. Charles A. Lindbergh from the Legion of Honor.

The writer of the letter said the French considered Lindbergh's attitude anti-Allied.

The aviator received the French Legion of Honor medal aftr his historic tansatlantc flight to Paris in 1927.

Fears Irish Revolt In Event Of Invasion

New York, May 24 (AP)—Oliver St. John Gogarty, former member of the Irish Free State Senate, today envisaged a bloody revolution in Ireland should Nazi parachute troops invade the Emerald Isle and use it as a base against England.

"The appearance of one parachutist in Ireland would split the country in two," said the poet, physician and aviator in an interview.

He asserted the Irish Republican Army would shelter the Nazis and Prime Minister Eamon de Valera would be unable to hold the country in check. Should disorder break out, he continued, Ulstermen of the six northern counties [illegible] loyal to the British crown would march in to subdue the "I. R. A. outrages."

Fifth Column For 700 Years

Ireland, Gogarty said, has been "a fifth column for 700 years in regard to England," but added that the I. R. A. was a "fifth column in the modern sense of the word" and a "very serious problem for the Government."

Although the "vast majority of Irish people" somewhat reluctantly "are pro-British" in the present European conflict," he said, the Irish nation "is ripe for revolution."

Discussing German military successes against Britain, Gogarty smiled and said: "Although we'd like to be doing something of the kind ourselves, we hate like the devil to see any mere stranger or outsider doing it."

Dutch Seamen Seek News of Families

WASHINGTON, May 24 (A. P.).—The American Red Cross, through agents abroad, sought today for news of the welfare of the families of 900 Dutch seamen now at Hoboken, N. J., and for the whereabouts of four American ambulance drivers missing somewhere at the front.

The Red Cross described the Dutch seamen as nearly frantic for word from their families, most of whom lived in the path of Germany's blitzkrieg across the Netherlands.

The missing ambulance drivers were listed as Albert Raymond of Chicago, Louis Wehrle of Berne, Ind., Murray Shipley of Cincinnati and Jan Glowacki of Jersey City.

U. S. Has Accurate Bomb Sight.

CAMP BEAUREGARD, La., May 24 (A. P.).—A miracle bomb sight, army officers believe, has given American bombers more deadly accuracy than any other battle plane today.

The device is a closely guarded military secret and has been observed in action by officers at the army maneuvers in western Louisiana, where the air force has concentrated 200 planes, including 116 bombers, in a huge demonstration to co-ordinate its work wth ground troops.

One officer said the sight used in the heavy bombers is so precise that a plane three miles up could almost drop its eggs in a barrel or knock your hat off.

The explanation was that the heavy American bomber, flying on a level keel, sights and drops its cargo from a height so great as to be out of reach of anti-aircraft fire.

Officers reported that a bomber flying at 14,000 feet scored five direct hits out of six bombs dropped on the outline of a battleship at Fort Benning, Ga.

Mrs. Herbert Climpson's Death Reported Caused "By Enemy Action" In War

Minneapolis, May 24 (AP)—Mrs. Herbert Climpson, wife of the deputy director of Salvation Army war services in France, was reported "killed by enemy action" in a letter received by Brigadier Thomas H. Leach, northern territory Salvation Army divisional secretary, in Minneapolis today.

The letter said Mrs. Climpson was believed killed while carrying refreshments to troops as they came out of action.

Belgians Join Allies' Buying Mission Here

Dutch and Norwegians Also Likely to Pool Interests, Greatly Increasing Assets

N.Y.-(MAY 24-(TAIL)

Belgian authorities are working in co-operation with other Allied agents in the United States in purchasing fighting planes and other war supplies, it was announced yesterday at the offices of the Anglo-French Purchasing Commission, 15 Broad Street.

Members of the commission said that the Netherlands and probably Norway would join the board soon. They added: "It means that the Allies are all in this thing together." During the last week, they said, contracts for $100,000,000 worth of warplanes had been placed in the United States, bringing the total to date to "more than $750,000,000." Additional orders are being placed as fast as possible, they revealed.

Although members of the commission did not mention the number of planes purchased, it was learned from authoritative sources in the aviation industry that 6,100 warplanes have been ordered here by the Allies, of which 3,000, mostly pursuit planes, were for France and 3,100, mostly bombers, were for England. About 2,300 planes have been delivered to the Allies already.

Speed Called Remarkable

Members of the commission described as "really remarkable" the speed with which the orders had been filled by American aircraft manufacturers, and said the number of warplanes obtainable here had been "a pleasant surprise." The entire aviation industry has been "most co-operative," the agents said, and in many cases orders are being delivered ahead of schedule.

A spokesman for the board emphasized that the fact that some planes are being flown from Canada to England should not be taken to mean that surface transportation was failing or that American-built planes were piling up in this country. He said that statements made in Washington by members of the commission regarding delivery flights across the Atlantic had pointed this out, but that the point apparently had been missed by correspondents.

"The statements didn't say that planes won't be flown across and they didn't say that planes haven't been flown across, but they did say that surface transportation of planes was not a problem," the commission's spokesman here said.

More Funds Available

From government reports it was learned that the addition of the Belgians and the Dutch to the purchasing commission would increase considerably the funds available to the hard-pressed Allies for purchasing war materials. The following table shows Belgian and Dutch gold and assets here which could be utilized in this country:

	Belgium	The Netherlands
Total gold..	$609,000,000	$690,000,000
Short term credits ..	166,200,000	205,000,000

lives in the United States have been working night and day since the invasion of their country to make connections with firms which have been doing business with their government on war orders. DUBLIN, MAY 24-(AP)-SOLDIERS AND POLICE TONIGHT STARTED A HUNT FOR A GERMAN "MYSTERY MAN" WHOM THEY BELIEVED HAD DROPPED INTO DUBLIN BY PARACHUTE, AND HELD AN IRISHMAN ALLEGED TO HAVE SHELTERED HIM.

A GUARD WAS SET TO PREVENT ARMS AND AMMUNITION IN IRELAND (EIRE) FALLING INTO UNLAWFUL HANDS.

AN ORDER WAS ISSUED TO COMPEL A DECLARATION OF POSSESSION OF ALL ARMS IN IRISH PORTS OR TERRITORIAL WATERS. AIRDROME AND COASTAL GUARDS WERE STRENGTHENED.

THE SEARCH FOR THE MYSTERY PARACHUTIST STARTED AFTER POLICE TESTIFIED IN CRIMINAL COURT THAT THEY HAD FOUND AN OPEN PARACHUTE OF UNUSUAL TYPE, A RADIO TRANSMITTER AND DOCUMENTS OF MILITARY CHARACTER CONCERNING IRISH DEFENSES IN A RAID ON THE HOME OF STEPHEN HELD, A NATURALIZED IRISHMAN. THEY ALSO REPORTED FINDING $20,000 IN AMERICAN MONEY, A MILITARY CAP AND A MODERN GERMAN AIRFORCE BADGE IN THE HOUSE.

HELD WAS TAKEN BACK TO JAIL UNDER MILITARY REGULATIONS.

DESPITE THIS HUNT, AUTHORITIES SAID THEY WERE "NOT INCLINED" TO ADMIT THE EXISTENCE IN IRELAND OF ANY WIDESPREAD "FIFTH COLUMN" PLOT INVOLVING GERMAN RESIDENTS. THEY EMPHASIZED THERE WERE ONLY 200 (CORRECT) GERMANS IN IRELAND AND MOST OF THEM HAD LIVED THERE FOR MANY YEARS.

MAY 25 1940

THE PROSECUTION SAID HELD RELATED THAT A STRANGE MAN CAME TO HIS HOUSE LAST SUNDAY NIGHT AND INTRODUCED HIMSELF AS HENRICH BRANDY, REQUESTING LODGING.

HELD SAID THE MAN WAS GIVEN A BED IN THE STUDY WHERE THE ARTICLES WERE FOUND.

THE CHARGES AGAINST HELD INCLUDED AIDING AND ABETTING A MAN UNKNOWN, IN A MANNER LIKELY TO PREJUDICE PUBLIC SAFETY.

APPLICATION FOR BAIL WAS REFUSED.

UTRECHT, THE NETHERLANDS, MARCH 24-(AP)-A TOUR OF HOLLAND'S WATERLINE BATTLEFIELDS SHOWS HOW INADEQUATELY THIS PICTURESQUE LAND WAS PREPARED TO COPE WILH SKY TROOPS, MOTORIZED WAR MACHINES AND THE CLOCKWORK PRECISION OF THE GERMAN ARMY.

MAY 25 1940

THE COUNTRY IS DOTTED WITH THE SORRY WRECKAGE OF DYNAMITED BRIDGES PART OF ITS LAND REMAINS UNDER WATER. BUT STILL, THERE WERE GERMANS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY WITHIN FIVE DAYS AND THE DUTCH SOLDIERS BECAME TECHNICAL PRISONERS OF WAR.

HUNDREDS OF BRIDGES WERE BLOWN UP--SOME OF THEM TREMENDOUS STRUCTURES--BUT THE GERMAN COMMAND EXPECTED THAT. IT KNEW JUST HOW MANY PONTOON BRIDGES WERE NEEDED TO REPLACE THOSE DESTROYED AND HAD EXACTLY THE RIGHT AMOUNT OF MATERIAL FOR THE JOB.

PARACHUTE TROOPS WERE LANDED FAR AHEAD OF ADVANCING COLUMNS TO PROTECT THE MORE IMPORTANT BRIDGES AND HOLD THEM UNTIL HELP ARRIVED. IN THIS WAY THE STRATEGIC BRIDGES AT DODRECHT, ROTTERDAM AND TWO TREMENDOUS STRUCTURES OVER A MILE LONG AT MOERDIJK WERE SAVED TO SPEED THE INVASION.

IN THE PEEL LINE FORTIFICATIONS OF SOUTHERN HOLLAND, FLOODING, MILES OF BARBED WIRE AND LINES OF SMALL CONCRETE BUNKERS WERE THE OBSTRUCTIONS WITH WHICH THE DUTCH HOPED TO HALT THE GERMAN ADVANCE.

I SAW A GERMAN OFFICER PEER INTO DUGOUTS MLACED TO COMMAND THE ROAD WITH MACHINE GUN FIRE.

"RIDICULOUS!" HE SNORTED.

MEN IN THE LITTLE VILLAGES IN THE REGION OF TILBURG BLEW UP BRIDGES, THEN COUNTED ON TROOPS IN SMALL TRENCHES AT THE OUTSKIRTS OF THEIR TOWNS TO HOLD UP THE ADVANCE.

TREES WERE DYNAMITED TO BLOCK ROADS, BUT THE GERMANS SAID THIS WAS NOT EXPERTLY DONE.

MAY 25 1940

HEAVY GERMAN ARTILLERY IS MOVING OVER THE ROADS NOW IN ENDLESS PROCESSION TOWARD THE WEST.

ROTTERDAM, WRECKED BY AIR RAIDS, SUFFERED THE MOST SPECTACULAR DAMAGE. THE SMALLER CITIES OF RHENEN AND PAGENINGEN ALSO SUFFERED WITH WHOLE SECTIONS WIPED OU

THE GERMANS SAID THEY FOUND THE DUTCH USING OLD GERMAN CANNON MADE IN 1896 AND DISCARDED AS OBSOLETE BY THE GERMAN ARMY YEARS AGO. THE CANNON DIDN'T EVEN HAVE THE SHIELDS OF MODERN GUNS.

THE DEFENSES ON THE GREBBE LINE, BETWEEN AMERSFOORT AND RHENEN, WERE LESS OBSOLETE BUT INADEQUATE TO HOLD A MODERN ARMY FOR LONG WITHOUT EXTENSIVE HELP. AND THE GERMANS SAID THE FRENCH SENT TO HOLLAND GOT NO FARTHER NORTH THAN TILBURG, ONLY A FEW MILES NORTH OF THE BELGIAN BORDER.

A GERMAN OFFICER SAID THAT AT ONE PLACE THE DUTCH BUNKERS WERE PLACED ALONG THE BANK OF A CANAL AT INTERVALS OF PRECISELY 100 METERS. THUS, HE REMAKRSD, IT WAS POSSIBLE TO TRAIN ARTILLERY ON ONE, THEN WITH THE USE OF MATHEMATICS PICK THEM OFF RIGHT DOWN THE CANAL.

MAY 25 1940

THE THIRD LINE FORTIFICATIONS KNOWN IN HOLLAND AS THE "NEW" OR "MAIN" WATER LINE, EXTENDEJ FROM A POINT EAST OF AMSTERDAM SOUTH OVER UTRECHT AND INCLUDED ROTTERDAM.

ROTTERDAM, INVADED BY SOLDIERS FROM THE AIR, REINFORCED BY THOSE WHO CROSSED THE HOLLANDSCHE DIEP, FELL WHEN UTRECHT DID.

THE FINE ROADS BUILT BY THE DUTCH ALONG THEIR CANALS WERE OF TREMENDOUS BENEFIT TO THE MOTORIZED GERMAN ARMY. THE GERMANS HAVE COMMANDEERED MANY DUTCH TRUCKS, ARMY AND PRIVATE, TO ASSIST IN COMMUNICATIONS.

BECAUSE MANY BRIDGES ARE OUT THERE IS NO RAIL COMMUNICATION AT PRESENT.

OSLO, MAY 24-(AP)-THE FIRST STORY OF THE 23 DAY DEFENSE OF HEGRA FORTRESS, IN MID-NORWAY, BY VOLUNTEERS ARMED WITH GUNS OF THE NAPOLEONIC ERA, WAS TOLD TODAY.

SUB-LIEUTENANT HELLANDSOE SKIEN, ONE OF THE DEFENDERS JUST RELEASED FROM IMPRISONMENT, SAID THE RESISTANCE WAS SO ASTOUNDING THAT THE GERMAN COMMANDER IN TRONDHEIM AFTER THE FORT'S CAPITULATION ISSUED AN OFFICIAL TRIBUTE.

THE GERMAN TRIBUTE, THE WITNESS REPORTED, SAID:

"THE CREW ON FORTRESS HEGRA HAVING DEFENDED THEMSELVES BRAVELY FOR 23 DAYS, NOW HAVE HOISTED THE WHITE FLAG.

"GERMAN SOLDIERS GIVE CREDIT FOR THE GALLANT RESISTANCE, AND CONSIDER THE TENACIOUS DEFENSE AS PROOF OF FINE MILITARY QUALITY.

"CAPITULATION WAS DUE TO FOOD SHORTAGE. ONLY ONE DAY'S RATION WAS LEFT. THE WATERPIPES WERE DESTROYED BY ARTILLERY FIRE 19 DAYS BEFORE THE CAPITULATION. THE LIGHTING PLANT HAD BEEN OUT 18 DAYS. THE CREW HAD TO MELT SNOW TO GET WATER.

"THE FORTRESS HAD NO COMMUNICATION WITH ANY NORWEGIAN UNITS DURING THE ENTIRE SIEGE."

LIEUT.SKIEN SAID THE FORTRESS WAS MANNED BY 190 MEN, INCLUDING 14 OFFICERS.

AMMUNITION, HE SAID, WAS ABUNDANT. THE GUNS WERE TWO OF 7.5 CENTIMETERS, FOUR OF 10.5, FOUR OF 8.4, AND 15 MACHINE GUNS, "ONLY FIVE OF THEM WORKABLE." THERE WERE NO ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS.

THE FORTRESS, HE SAID, WAS UNOCCUPIED WHEN THE INVASION STARTED "NONE OF US EVER HAD SEEN IT BEFORE," HE DECLARED.

"WE WERE QUARTERED IN A TUNNEL AND WE LITERALLY SLEPT IN WATER AS THE TUNNEL DRIPPED CONSTANTLY."

"THE GERMANS FIRST ATTACKED WITH INFANTRY, WHICH WE REPULSED. A SUBSEQUENT PATROL WAS DESTROYED EXCEPT FOR ONE GERMAN WHO WAS TAKEN PRISONER.

"THE GERMANS THEN BEGAN ARTILLERY FIRE AND AIRPLANE BOMBING. EVERY FOOT WITHIN THE FORTRESS AREA WAS COVERED BY BOMB HITS. ARTILLERY DUELS OFTEN WERE AT ONLY 1,000 OR 1,500 METERS (750 TO 1,100 FEET APPROXIMATELY).

"WE HAD TWO DOCTORS BUT ONLY BANDAGES AND MORPHINE, NO OTHER MEDICINES.

"FINALLY WE HAD SO MANY WOUNDED THAT WE MADE ARRANGEMENTS WITH THE GERMANS TO GIVE THEM THEIR WOUNDED SOLDIERS IF THEY WOULD LET US SEND OUR WOUNDED THROUGH THE SIEGE LINES TO HOSPITALS. THEY CONSENTED.

"FOOD SHORTAGE WAS ONE OF THE CHIEF REASONS FOR CAPITULATION.

"MANY OF OUR MEN GOT PNEUMONIA. DURING THE ENTIRE PERIOD NO ONE HAD HIS CLOTHES OFF."

GERMAN OFFICERS WERE AUTHORITY FOR THE STATEMENT THAT SOME OF THE GUNS WERE RELICS OF NAPOLEONIC DAYS.

HEGRA FORTRESS SURRENDERED MAY 4.

VON RINTELEN -- FOLLOW LONDON, FIFTH COLUMN

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS DASH

CAPTAIN FRANZ VON RINTELEN, GERMANY'S WORLD WAR SPY-MASTER IN THE UNITED STATES, ANNOUNCED IN 1935 HE WAS "THROUGH" WITH THE FATHERLAND FOR WHICH HE SERVED A TERM OF NEARLY FOUR YEARS IN AMERICAN PRISONS.

HIS REASON: "I CAME TO BE A CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTOR TO NAZIISM, AS I BELIEVE IN WESTERN AND CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION."

VON RINTELEN HAD BEEN IN HIS NATIVE GERMANY BUT LITTLE SINCE NATIONAL SOCIALISM SPRANG TO POWER. HE QUIT HIS HOMELAND IN 1926 FOR RESIDENCE IN FRANCE. LATER HE MOVED TO ENGLAND, WHERE HE ANNOUNCED IN 1935 HE HAD RETURNED HIS GERMAN PASSPORT TO BERLIN AUTHORITIES AND INFORMED THEM HE WAS DONE WITH GERMANY "FOR GOOD."

FOR THE MOST PART HE HAS LIVED QUIETLY, COMING TO PUBLIC ATTENTION AT TIMES WITH HIS WRITING OR SPEECHES ON SECRET SERVICE. THE MIDDLE-AGED FORMER CAPTAIN OF THE IMPERIAL GERMAN HIGH SEAS FLET SEVERAL TIMES VOLUNTEERED HIS SERVICES TO BRITAIN -- IN SECRET SERVICE OR THE ARMY. HE WAS REFUSED.

CALLED BEFORE ALIEN COURT LAST OCTOBER, HE OFFERED AGAIN "ALL MY EXPERIENCE, ENERGY AND CAPABILITIES," AND WAS GRANTED FREEDOM OF MOVEMENT IN ENGLAND.

FROM APRIL TO AUGUST, 1915, HE WAS IN THE UNITED STATES, A BRIGHT FIGURE IN SOCIETY UNDER AN ASSORTMENT OF ALIASES. THAT, THE GOVERNMENT CHARGED, WAS WHEN HE POURED A VAST FORTUNE FROM GERMANY INTO BRIBERY AND THE PLACING OF GERMAN AGENTS IN VITAL MUNITIONS CENTERS. HE FLED, WAS TAKEN FROM SHIP OFF RAMSGATE, AND RETURNED TO THE UNITED STATES TO STAND TRIAL FOR 23 DAYS.

HE WAS CONVICTED OF SABOTAGE OF MUNITIONS AND SHIPS AND KEPT IN PRISON DESPITE GERMAN DEMANDS THAT HE BE RELEASED IN PRISONER EXCHANGES.

VON RINTELEN RETURNED TO GERMANY WHEN HE WAS SET FREE LATE IN 1920, BUT, AS HE SAID LATER:

"MY MARRIAGE WAS ON THE ROCKS AND HAD BEEN DISSOLVED AND THE GERMAN FOREIGN OFFICE WAS PRESSING ME TO MAKE A STATEMENT ON THE SABOTAGE TRIALS IN THE UNITED STATES WHICH WAS INCOMPATIBLE WITH MY CONSCIENCE AND MY INNER CONVICTIONS. I THOUGHT A CHANGE OF AIR WOULD BE FINE."

ITALY, BELIEVED READY TO ENTER THE WAR AT GERMANY'S SIDE IS ARMED TO THE HILT, BUT THE EXACT EXTENT OF HER ARMS IS A GUARDED SECRET OF THE FASCIST REGIME.

IT IS KNOWN THAT SHE HAS MORE THAN 1,000,000, PERHAPS 1,500,000 MEN, UNDER ARMS. SINCE SEPTEMBER ITALY'S MILITARY POWER HAS BEEN INCREASED BY THREE NEW ARMY CORPS, 20 NEW DIVISIONS AND 20 ADDITIONAL REGIMENTS OF DIVISIONAL ARTILLERY.

NEWSPAPERS HAVE PUBLISHED PHOTOGRAPHS OF BIG GUNS, WARSHIPS AND FLEETS OF FIGHTING PLANES AS SAMPLES OF ITALIAN ARMED MIGHT.

ITALY'S NEW BUDGET CALLS FOR 17,000,000,000 LIRE (ABOUT $863,000,000) FOR ARMS. SHE HAS POURED 130,000,000,000 LIRE (ABOUT $6,600,000,000) INTO HER WAR MACHINE IN THE PAST 17 YEARS.

HER FOURTH NEW 25,000-TON BATTLESHIP, THE ROMA, DESCRIBED AS UNEQUALLED IN ANY OTHER NAVY, IS READY FOR LAUNCHING.

TWO SISTER SHIPS, THE LITTORIO AND VITTORIO VENETO ALREADY ARE IN SERVICE AND A THIRD, THE IMPERO, IS UNDER CONSTRUCTION. TWO OLD BATTLESHIPS HAVE BEEN MODERNIZED AND ARE READY TO ENTER SERVICE WITH TWO PREVIOUSLY MODERNIZED BATTLESHIPS.

AT THE BEGINNING OF THE EUROPEAN WAR ITALY'S NAVAL TONNAGE WAS 717,920 TONS COMPARED TO BRITAIN'S 2,079,863 AND FRANCE'S 1,755,570.

AT THAT TIME THE UNITED STATES WAR DEPARTMENT, NOTING AIR FORCE STRENGTH WAS DIFFICULT TO MEASURE, AND USING 10 AS AN INDEX, RATED GERMANY 10, ITALY 6, GREAT BRITAIN 5 AND FRANCE 2.

A LATER TABULATION GAVE ITALY 8,000 WARPLANES OF WHICH 2,160 ARE FIRST LINE, COMPARED TO 3,300 FIRST LINE PLANES FOR GREAT BRITAIN AND 2,700 FOR FRANCE.

SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR ITALY HAS ADDED EXTENSIVELY TO HER STOCK OF NEW AIRPLANES, GUNS AND TANKS. HUGE STORES OF WAR SUPPLIES HAVE BEEN ACCUMULATED INCLUDING OIL --- A BADLY NEEDED COMMODITY ON WHICH SHE WAS CAUGHT SHORT WHEN WAR BROKE OUT.

ALONG HER WESTERN ALPINE FRONTIER FACING FRANCE ITALY HAS BUILT A LINE OF FORTIFICATIONS KNOWN AS THE LITTORIO LINE. IN RECENT WEEKS IT HAS BEEN GREATLY REINFORCED.

IN ADDITION TO HER FOUR NEW BATTLESHIPS AND A SWARM OF SWIFT NEW TORPEDO BOATS, ITALY'S NAVY CONSISTS OF:

FOUR BATTLESHIPS; 7 HEAVY CRUISERS, 15 LIGHT CRUISERS 62 DESTROYERS, 87 SUBMARINES AND ONE AIRCRAFT TENDER FOR FLYING BOATS.

DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS, WHICH HAS GROWN OUT OF THE ALLIED COUNTER-ATTACK IN THE SOMME REGION, HAS DEVELOPED FAR ENOUGH SO WE CAN SEE THAT THE OUTCOME OF THE BLITZKRIEG LIKELY DEPENDS UPON IT.

A BLITZKRIEG IS NO STRONGER THAN ANY OF ITS COMPONENT PARTS.

IT IS FAR TOO SOON FOR US TO BE ABLE TO FORECAST THE END OF THIS FIERCE AND BLOODY PHASE OF THE GERMAN INVASION, BUT ALLIED REPORTS THIS MORNING INDICATED THAT THEY WERE DOING WELL.

IF THE ALLIES SUFFERED DISORGANIZATION AND LOWERED RESISTANCE IN THE FIRST GRIM DAYS OF THE NAZI ONSLAUGHT, THOSE DEFICIENCIES APPEARED TO HAVE BEEN REPAIRED IN MARKED DEGREE.

FIGHTING WAS PROCEEDING TODAY ALL ALONG THE GREAT LINE OF INVASION, BUT THERE ARE ONLY TWO MAIN ENGAGEMENTS WITH WHICH WE NEED CONCERN OURSELVES, AND WE SHALL SAVE OURSELVES CONFUSION IF WE STICK TO THESE. THEY ARE:

1. THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS, IN WHICH THE ALLIES ARE TRYING TO CLOSE THE GAP WHICH SEPARATES THE FORCES IN BELGIUM AND EXTREME NORTHERN FRANCE FROM THEIR COLLEAGUES TO THE SOUTH.

2. THE CONFLICT FOR MASTERY OF THE CHANNEL PORTS.

LET'S LOOK AT THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS FIRST. WHAT IS HAPPENING IS THIS:

THERE IS A GAP TWENTY-FIVE MILES WIDE IN THE ALLIED DEFENSIVE LINE IN THE GENERAL REGION OF ARRAS AND BAPAUME. IT IS THROUGH THIS GAP THAT THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN POURING MECHANIZED UNITS WHICH HAVE RACED TO THE COAST.

THE GERMANS HAVEN'T BROKEN THROUGH HERE IN FORCE. THE MOTORCYCLE, TANK AND ARMORED CAR UNITS WHICH HAVE PASSED THROUGH DON'T COMPRISE MANY MEN, BUT THEY ARE FAST AND THEY ARE POWERFUL.

HOWEVER, THIS GAP HAS SEPARATED THE ALLIED FORCES AND GRAVELY ENDANGERED THE BRITISH, BELGIANS AND FRENCH ARMIES IN BELGIUM AND JUST INSIDE THE FRENCH BORDER. THESE NORTHERN ALLIES ARE IN A NET WHICH STILL AFFORDS SOME OPENINGS BUT HAS BEEN DRAWING CLOSER.

THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS IS ESSENTIALLY FOR TWO PURPOSES. ONE IS TO CLOSE THIS GAP, REUNITE THE ALLIED LINE AND THUS SAVE THE GREAT ARMY OF THE NORTH.

THE OTHER IS TO PREVENT THE GERMANS FROM POURING REINFORCEMENTS THROUGH THAT GAP TO THE COAST, AND AT THE SAME TIME THE ALLIES HOPE TO CUT OFF THOSE NAZI MECHANIZED UNITS WHICH ALREADY HAVE GONE THROUGH

MAY 25 1940

REPORTS THIS MORNING INDICATE THAT BOTH THE NORTHERN AND THE SOUTHERN ALLIES HAD BEEN MAKING SOME PROGRESS AND WERE FIGHTING WELL.

IN THE CHANNEL FIGHTING THE GERMANS HAVE CAPTURED ABBEVILLE, WHERE THE SOMME EMPTIES INTO THE SEA.

LONDON THIS MORNING ANNOUNCED THAT THE GREAT PORT OF BOULOGNE ALSO HAD FALLEN TO THE NAZIS--A GRIEVOUS BLOW TO THE ALLIES AS IT IS ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL PORTS OF COMMUNICATION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND THE CONTINENT.

MEANTIME GERMANS FORCES WERE TURNING THE ALLIED LEFT WING IN NORTHERN BELGIUM AND PUSHING FOR THE PORTS OF OSTEND, DUNKERQUE AND CALAIS.

YOU CAN SEE THAT THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS AND THE FIGHTING FOR THE CHANNEL PORTS ARE IN A LARGE MEASURE INTERDEPENDENT.

IF THE NAZIS GET THE REST OF THE CHANNEL PORTS AND ARE ABLE TO CONSOLIDATE THEIR POSITIONS IN FORCE, THE INVASION OF ENGLAND--HITLER'S GREAT AMBITION--WILL BE AT HAND.

WE SHALL SEE THE FIRST GREAT BATTLE OF HISTORY BETWEEN WARSHIPS AND AIRPLANES IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

WE SHALL GET THE SHOWDOWN FOR WHICH WE HAVE WAITED SO LONG TO LEARN WHETHER AIRPLANES CAN SMASH THE BRITISH NAVY.

SIGNS MULTIPLY THAT THIS BLITZKRIEG IS HITLER'S SUPREME GAMBLE. HE IS POURING INTO THIS TITANIC OFFENSIVE EVERY RESOURCE WHICH HE HAS WITH THE IDEA OF GETTING A QUICK DECISION, BECAUSE HE CAN'T STAND A LONG WAR.

VIRTUALLY EVERY THRUST HE MAKES IS IN THE SUPERLATIVE DEGREE OF DARING. HE HAS TAKEN THE LAST WORD IN BLITZKRIEG METHODS AS EVOLVED BY OTHERS AND HAS MULTIPLIED BY TEN.

EVERY ONCE IN A BLUE MOON SOME DARING ADVENTURER, WHO IS WILLING TO RISK EVERYTHING HE POSSESSES, BREAKS THE BANK AT MONTE CARLO. HE SUCCEEDS BY SHEER AUDACITY WHERE SCORES OF THOUSANDS FAIL.

HERR HITLER IS OUT TO BREAK THE BANK AT MONTE CARLO. HE HAS MADE IT CLEAR THAT HE BELIEVES HE IS DIVINELY ORDAINED TO CARRY OUT HIS PROGRAM FOR THE FATHERLAND. HIS DISCIPLES FURTHER MAINTAIN THAT HE IS ORDAINED TO CORRECT THE FAULTS OF ALL EUROPE AND EVEN OF THE WHOLE WORLD.

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND FOLLOWS HIM BLINDLY AS HE GIVES HIS ORDERS THE TROOPS ARE IMBUED WITH HIS UTTER FAITH IN HIMSELF. SUICIDE SQUA OF PARACHUTE TROOPS WILLINGLY LAUNCH THEMSELVES OUT INTO THE UNKNOWN, AND SUICIDE MECHANIZED SQUADS GO TEARING OFF INTO THE BLUE TO DO OR DIE, FAR SEPARATED FROM THE MAIN BODY OF NAZI TROOPS.

BECAUSE THIS IS A HUGE GAMBLE WHICH MUST COME OFF NOW OR NEVER, HITLER IS FREE TO DESTROY INDUSTRIAL PLANTS AND OTHER VALUABLE PROPERTY BEHIND THE ALLIED LINES. WHY NOT? IT DEPRIVES THE ALLIES OF IMMEDIATE SUPPORT, AND HE WON'T NEED THESE PLANTS TO HELP HIM WIN THE WAR. HE WILL HAVE WON OR LOST IN THE NEXT FEW WEEKS ON WHAT RESOURCES HE ALREADY HAS.

BA7.

EVERY MOVE IN THE GERMAN DRIVE AND THE RUTHLESSNESS WITH WHICH THE FUEHRER IS TOSSING HIS SUPPLIES AND MANPOWER ONTO THE GREEN BAIZE BESPEAKS SPEED.

SPEED--THAT'S WHAT COUNTS. HE'S BURNING UP HIS GAS AND OTHER VITAL SUPPLIES AS IN A BLAST FURNACE. WHY NOT? NOTHING WILL MATTER AFTER THAT'S GONE. IT'S VICTORY NOW, OR NEVER.

NAZIS PLAN TO SPRING TRAP

READY TO WIPE OUT 1,100,000, BERLIN SAYS

Storming Of Paris, Maginot Line Or England In Few Days Forecast

Germans Assert "Secret Weapon" Will Be Put Into Play Soon

[Copyright by New York Times]

Berlin, May 25—The battle in which the Germans are trying to wipe out 1,000,000 Allied troops pocketed between Abbeville and Ghent increased in fury today.

It was reported here that German military authorities, moved by humanitarian reasons, contemplate an appeal to the Allies within this sack to herd some 5,000,000 civilians, similarly trapped, into a separate sector from which military operations could be kept by mutual agreement.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 25—Germany has trapped and is ready to destroy the entire attack army of France, an authorized source declared tonight.

The decisive land military operations in the Netherlands, Belgium and northern France, he continued, have been accomplished by just one-third of Germany's 5,000,000 first-line troops.

Maginot Line, Paris Or England

At present, he went on, the Reich has sixty-five per cent. of her army still unengaged and will be ready in a few days to take Paris, storm the main Maginot Line or invade England.

Backed up against the English Channel coast within the area which the Germans have encircled in the last two weeks are 500,000 French, 400,000 Belgians and 200,000 English, this spokesman declared.

Since it can be considered, he went on, that France's attack army is gone, all she has left is 120 divisions of first-line troops to defend Paris, hold the Maginot Line and to protect her southeastern flank against a possible attack by Italy from across the Alps.

Experts Affirm Figures

The figures on Allied troops caught by Germany's encirclement movement were affirmed here by military experts who calculated that Germany had used approximately 83 of her 250 divisions of first-line troops in the speedy operations by which she has absorbed all of Holland, most of Belgium and a slice of France in about two weeks.

An authoritative source estimated that one-fourth of France's first-line force is trapped by the Nazi encirclement. These troops, he said, are the cream of the French army, with the best equipment, including mechanized weapons, available in the Allied armies.

Operations Outlined

He went on to outline the nature of the operations and predicted an early cleanup of the trapped Allies.

Already, he recounted, the German drive which penetrated northward to Calais has turned eastward to try to blast a way through north of the Lille fortifications.

From Arras, in turn, a drive has been launched to sweep east and north of Lille, French industrial town within the curve of her frontier with Belgium.

This joint maneuver will bring encirclement within encirclement, which, he estimated, would cut off the bulk of British and French troops—perhaps 700,000 men—who will be "sponged up."

Further to the north a loop will be drawn outwards to Ghent to absorb the bulk of Belgium, he declared, and after that, the remainder of the trapped Allied force would be crowded up against the Channel coast and captured.

Thus Belgium, like Cæsar's Gaul, would be divided into three parts, enabling the Germans to carry out the age-old military maneuver—divide and destroy.

Then "The Secret Weapon"

After mopping up the trapped Allied forces, it was continued, Germany will resort to her much-discussed "secret weapon" and in operations on an "exciting scale" will bring about "great things."

The statement on the Nazi secret weapon came from a source whose information heretofore has been wellnigh official.

As to this secret weapon, the spokesman declared, it is more important than tanks, gas, or the famed 42-centimeter howitzer proved to be in the World War.

"On the authority of the high command of the armed forces, I say this weapon exists," he said.

Still "Entirely Secret"

"It still is entirely secret. It is not gas, nor a speedboat, nor parachute troops, nor a glider, nor a flame thrower, nor troops landed from planes.

"Adolf Hitler knew he could win with this new weapon. In a few days you will see great things because that weapon is in general operation."

He declined to say whether it had been used so far in this war. It was reported widely that some secret device was used in the Nazi capture of fort Eben Emael above Liege early in the German drive into Belgium.

Some doubt was cast on this report when a film of the capture of the fortress disclosed it had been blasted to pieces by air bombs and the heaviest artillery.

Reasons For Prediction

This spokesman asserted a German victory was "inevitable" for these reasons:

1. The first northern Allied army is gone because it cannot retreat.
2. German morale is high because of constant German successes, superior weapons and air force.
3. The Maginot Line no longer is a problem since Germany already is in a position to get behind it.
4. The "new weapon."

Three Possible Courses

As soon as the encircled area is cleaned up, he continued, the German army will have one-third of its forces freed from this task to join the balance of the army with three possible courses:

1. To attack southward and envelop Paris and the French army.
2. To turn east and drive behind the Maginot Line.
3. To attack Great Britain.

The spokesman declined to say which course was scheduled first.

During the day's operations Germany tightened her ring of steel around the Allied armies in Flanders' flatlands.

Dive-bombing Stukas attacked the English Channel ports of Dieppe, Ostend, Dunkerque and Blankenberghe to block the landing of British reinforcements. The French attempt to slash through to their beleaguered allies was described here as "weak."

England Or Paris Next?

At his battlefront headquarters Adolf Hitler was believed nearing another decision—whether to hurl his Blitzkreig at once into England, or carry the war south to Paris.

German battle maps pictured the noose around the British as tightened by two-thirds within forty-eight hours, with these new gains:

1. Advance patrols from the thrust up the English Channel entered Calais, twenty-two miles from England, and battled with Allied defenders in the streets.
2. Troops that broke the Scheldt river defense line smashed on East over the Lys river—Belgium's last natural barrier.
3. Spearheads from the northeast and southeast menaced industrial Lille—fortified since 1030—which changed hands three times in the opening months of the World War. The advance from the southeast drove over part of Vimy Ridge.

Fall Of Calais Not Claimed

Calais, although not yet claimed as fallen, was reported rendered useless for British landing operations. Throughout the World War the Allies doggedly held Calais as the principal avenue for landing men and arms from Britain.

Some patrols were said to have circled Calais toward Gravelines, the next port northeast.

Military spokesmen added that the German Air Force was "capable of cutting off every possibility of retreat" from the last avenues of escape—Dunkerque, Ostend and Zeebrugge.

Unofficial reports of prisoners captured mentioned tens of thousands. Tanks and planes were said to have been destroyed by the hundreds.

Behind French lines Germany's bombers blasted at troop concentrations and communication lines in a triangle formed by Paris, Rouen and Dieppe along the base and Amiens at the top.

This was described as a move to prevent France from improving her defense positions to the south and to weaken any concentration for a thrust at Germany's extended flank to the sea.

American Reporter Finds No Air Aid for Armies.

GERMAN OFFICERS 'AMAZED'

Say Record Massing of Men Met No Interference.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

AACHEN, Germany (At the Border Near the Front), May 25 (A. P.).—During six days with the German army in the war zone I have witnessed probably the greatest massing of troops in history, carried out—to the expressed amazement of the Germans—with almost no interference from the enemy air force, as far as foreign correspondents could see.

Every German officer will tell you that the Nazi army's fast progress was made possible only by perfect co-operation of the air force. I wondered where the similar co-operation by the Allied air force was, but I found no answer.

[The British Air Ministry said yesterday that 1,500 German planes had been destroyed in the two weeks since the invasion of the Low Countries and reported continued assaults on the enemy communications and troops. Mr. Lochner, chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Berlin, toured the front with two other American newspapermen.]

Various Questions Raised.

Our six days in the operations zone left great questions.

Why, throughout this time, did we never see an Allied plane during the daytime?

Why were single bombers that we heard but never saw in the early hours of Friday and an air raid on Aachen last Wednesday morning the only evidences to use of the existence of the Allied airplane fleet?

During my stay on the front I traveled about 1,200 miles and went up and down more than 100 main roads. All were jammed. Imagine the confusion among horses alone, not to speak of men, which one bomber attack on such a street would have caused

We kept straining our eyes for Allied planes and saw none.

Staff officers told us that German scouting planes located every enemy contingent. These scouters knew who was who in each approaching column.

They also knew where bridges which had to be crossed were without trees offering shelter or where else they were especially vulnerable.

With this knowledge the German Air Force appeared so supreme that attack on the massed roads by the Allies seemed inadvisable. But we wondered why at least no effort was made to drop bombs on strategic bridges or military highways.

German Generals Amazed.

Not only I as a disinterested bystander was puzzled, but German officers implied that they could not understand it.

Gen. Georg von Kuechlen, commander-in-chief of the German Army in the Antwerp sector, and Gen. Walther von Reichenau, commanding the army pushing toward the French ports opposite England, were amazed at the absence of air activity.

Allied air activity also seemed missing at the battlefront, although I can give only one personal impression.

As we watched the struggle for possession of the Scheldt Canal near Tournai from the heights of Renaix, we clearly saw German scouting planes.

Officers accompanying us explained that these planes aided the artillery by wirelessing their observation. We saw no armed scouters.

German officers professed to be puzzled by the seeming lack of cooperation between the Allied air force and the Allied armies and by what they called aimless dropping of bombs at night on western German cities.

German officers assured me that they were keeping exact tabs on these bombings, all of which they claimed hit civilians and non-military objects.

Sank Cruiser, Assert Nazis

BERLIN, May 25 (AP).—The German radio announced today that Nazi planes had badly damaged and set afire a British aircraft carrier off the Norwegian coast and had sunk one cruiser and two supply ships.

In addition, the announcement said, an enemy battleship, which had been damaged earlier by two bomb hits, was struck again three times and put out of commission.

Another cruiser, two supply ships and a tanker were reported damaged.

The official news agency announced that anti-aircraft gun fire had sunk a French destroyer in the English channel.

REPLY TO KING—'Miserable Hypocrite'

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 25—Dr. Otto Dietrich, Adolf Hitler's own press chief, today replied to the Empire Day broadcast of King George VI with the warning, "German arms will, George of England, give the reply that is due you."

Addressing the King as "You miserable hypocrite," Dietrich answered charges of German aggression in a half-page article carried by the German press under the red-ink caption, "Reply To A King."

He declared England was responsible for the war and its horrors.

"Your address, George of England, was not royal but pitiable," the Nazi press chief said.

"If You Were A Man"——

"If you were a man then, now, in the hour of decision as a challenger who must face his fate on the battlefield, you should have acknowledged the reasons which cause England to unleash this war, instead of hiding hypocritically behind moral principles which you have no right whatever to invoke."

Dietrich's answer to the British monarch's charges that Germany started the war were assertions that England incited Poland against Germany, England unscrupulously sacrificed Norway, Holland and Belgium; England declared war on Germany, and England, not Germany, therefore, must bear the responsibility for the war.

Sees "England Unmasked"

"That is the truth," said Dietrich, emphasizing that before the start of the conflict Germany was ready "for the sake of peace to recognize France's borders."

Dietrich charged that "England unmasked herself completely" with "the King's mean and unknightly words about an opponent with whom England is crossing rapiers for death and life."

DNB, official German news agency, in its comment on the King's address said political circles felt "the King now is in the service of typical British propaganda methods which are characterized by slander and hypocrisy."

WEYGAND OUSTS 15 GENERALS, REVAMPS HIS HIGH COMMAND

MAY 26 1940

PARIS, May 25 (AP).—The French War Ministry announced a shakeup of the French High Command tonight.

Fifteen generals were relieved of their posts.

The identity of the generals involved was not immediately disclosed.

The War Ministry communique said:

PREPARES FOR DECISIVE STRUGGLE FOR CHANNEL

Commanders Figuring In Rout From Meuse Front Replaced—Nazis Pour Heavy Tanks And Infantry Through Breach Toward Coast

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 25—Gen. Maxime Weygand tonight summarily dismissed fifteen generals who figured in the French rout from the Meuse front and injected fresh blood into his Allied high command for the decisive phase of the battle for the English Channel.

A War Ministry communique published under the heading of "penalties" said the fifteen commanders of full armies, corps, divisions and other army services had been removed from their posts. Their names were not announced.

New Men Chosen By Weygand

Their commands already have been taken over by new men chosen by General Weygand in his flying trips to the front to lead the campaign against the German corridor to the sea.

Seven infantry colonels were promoted to be major generals to fill the places of those ousted. Promoted are Henri Martin, Jean Besse, Andre Durand, Charles Mast, Charles de Gaulle, Gustave Mesny and Louis Buisson.

Nazi Units Pour Through Breach

The Nazis poured masses of heavy tanks and infantry through their breach between the northern Allied forces and the central French army in an effort to tighten their hold on the English Channel coast.

On the northern side of the corridor the Germans occupied Vimy Ridge and other crests northwest of Arras, making contact with the new British-Belgian positions, and pressed their attacks on the Dover Straits port of Calais.

On the southern side of the German salient French operations along the Somme river were reported continuing "with success."

the high command.

"Effective today 15 generals have been relieved of their commands, among them commanders of armies and army corps, several commanders of divisions and directors of services of large units."

The changes were the outgrowth of the Germans' break through the Meuse front on France's northern frontier.

French Report Heavy Nazi Losses

The night high command communique said the situation in the north "has undergone no important change." It added that the French were inflicting heavy losses on the enemy "in all encounters" and that between the Aisne and Meuse rivers the Allies held domination over the Germans.

The Germans, gambling for all-or-nothing in the battle for the English Channel coast, rushed their heaviest tanks and motorized infantry through their narrow corridor to the sea to support lighter advance units.

Squeezing Corridor's Neck

Allied counter-attacks were frequent and intense and French military spokesmen asserted these had squeezed the corridor's neck from yesterday's thirty or thirty-five miles to twenty.

The twenty-mile-wide bottleneck in the salient was described as bounded by the Bapaume and Peronne sectors. These two towns themselves are only thirteen miles apart, but their sectors cover considerable surrounding area, apparently accounting for the seven-mile differential.

An early decision was indicated as the struggle developed on two main fronts, with the northern Allied forces in Flanders and the central French army on the Somme continuing their campaign to form a junction and cut off the German salient.

Between the main Allied forces, their advance guards struck again and again into the German spearhead thrust westward to the sea and pointed toward the British Isles.

Advance Units Harass Germans

The Allied advance units harassed the German line of communication.

The outcome of the Flanders battle depends on the Allied effort to close the breach and pocket the Germans on the coast.

The gap between the northern and central Allied armies, originally described as extending from the Somme to Arras, now is bounded by the Peronne and Bapaume sectors.

The northern Allied force consists of French, British and Belgian (here one word was censored) troops holding a 170-mile line starting (here another word was censored) somewhere in Belgium and circling south and west through Valenciennes, Cambrai, Bapaume and St. Omer to the sea.

On Winner-Take-All Basis

The central French army maintained a 200-mile front on the Somme and Aisne rivers across northern France. (Here four lines were censored.)

[illegible]ermans fought on a winner-take-all basis along the Channel coast, running the risk of complete disaster if they should fail to consolidate their corridor position.

Until now the light mechanized German forces and infantry had formed the spearhead. The movement of heavy forces from the rear indicated the crucial struggle was near.

Holding Small Channel Ports

The Germans were reported holding a line of small Channel ports, including Le Touquet and Paris Plage, French summer resorts.

Both the British and French air forces were active in the Channel conflict. The French shifted to a new technique of air fighting, equipping pursuit planes with cannon to blast away at German armored columns. Heretofore French pursuits had carried only machine guns.

"The use of aviation to destroy tanks," wrote the military expert of Le Temps, "has long been sought in France. It seems that success has now been obtained."

The British air forces continued their tenacious campaign in France against the German air superiority.

Congratulates R. A. F.

Gen. Alphonse J. Georges, one of the Allied commanders, telegraphed thanks and congratulations to the Royal Air Force for "the magnificent effort you have made."

Through the German corridor to the sea, Nazi artillery followed armored cars and motorcycle troops. Above Allied war planes roared.

Every turn of the German wheels westward to the sea is proving costly to them, a French spokesman declared.

Grim Confidence In Paris

An atmosphere of grim confidence prevailed in Paris. "The initiative is no longer entirely in German hands," commented Le Temps.

The military analyst of Le Journal General Duval, discussing the position of Nazi troops which have reached the coastal plain, argued that this sector is less important than that along the Scheldt river.

"That," he wrote, "is where the battle will be decided, and not at Boulogne."

L'Epoque said:

"We would prefer a France that was in ruins and a cemetery to a France whose riches would be stolen by the enemy and whose living inhabitants would be no more than slaves."

Day's Other Developments

Developments of the day included:

The Simplon-Orient express, one of Europe's finest trains running from Paris to Italy through Switzerland, was withdrawn from service. The Min[illegible]istry P[illegible]der was for economy and was te[illegible]ary.

Premier Reynaud cautioned the French people against false orders being circulated by telephone and handbill by German agents. He warned also against propaganda intended to divide France and Britain.

Police said tonight the Paris mop-up eastern flank against a possible attack by Italy from across the Alps.

Experts Affirm Figures

Nazis Confuse French By Phone, Handbills

PARIS, May 25 (AP).—Premier Paul Reynaud cautioned the French people today to beware of false orders, which, he said, German agents were spreading by telephone and by handbills with signatures of French officials—sometimes even his own.

Warnings also were issued against alleged German propaganda efforts to divide France and Great Britain.

French Question 60,000 In Spy Roundup, Jail 500

334 Foreigners Are Interned, Many Will Be Expelled

PARIS, May 25 (AP).—Police said tonight the Paris mop-up of suspected spies had resulted in arrest of more than 500 persons, including 334 foreigners, who were sent to concentration camps.

Sixty thousand persons were questioned within the last week. Streets, hotels and cafes were searched.

Tonight the military commander of Paris announced that all persons, foreign or French, whose activities appeared suspicious would be expelled. Any who return could be sentenced to twenty years of penal servitude.

French Cannon Planes Loosed On Nazi Tanks

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 25—German heavy tanks and motorized infantry streamed seaward tonight through the twenty-mile neck of the Nazi salient to the Channel coast in an all-or-nothing gamble against desperate French attempts to slice the salient and turn the tables of entrapment on the Germans.

The truck-borne infantry and the big tanks followed in the tracks of lighter units, motorcycle machine-gunners and armored cars.

The Germans were said to be running the risk of disaster as complete as that facing Allied armies trapped in Flanders unless the Nazis consolidate their corridor positions sufficiently to prevent an Allied break-through north of the Somme.

Air Cannon Blast Tanks

The French air force also lunged against the moving armored columns, attacking them with aerial cannon as well as bombs and machine-guns.

The military expert of Le Temps, Paris newspaper, said the plane-borne cannon were good weapons against tanks.

"The use of aviation to destroy tanks has long been sought in France," he wrote, "it seems that success has now been obtained."

French Claim Success

French troops in the Channel coast region, according to a military spokesman, were fighting off the German advance guards and were said to have checked the Nazi advance in the St. Omer region.

The Peronne-Bapaume breach yesterday was thirty to thirty-five miles wide, but the French, determined to save their comrades from the Nazi pincer movement, declared they had reduced it.

In the St. Omer region, the French military spokesman said, the shifting warfare consisted mainly of a series of localized combats, while the "battle of Flanders" went on in full course in the Cambrai-Valenciennes sector. St. Omer is twenty-two miles southeast of the Channel port of Calais.

Other Battles Rage On

The military spokesman said fighting also continued in the regions of Abbeville, on the Somme river twelve miles from the Channel, and at Boulogne, Channel port south of Calais.

The whole front is "without change," he said.

The Germans, he continued, have failed to make a direct attack on Calais, and he described the situation at Boulogne as "uncertain."

The French spokesman said German detachments had appeared in a number of the Channel towns in the Boulogne area, but were small in number and lacked the support of heavier German units, which were far behind them.

British and Belgian troops withdrew slightly into Belgium without being hampered by German attacks, he said.

The separation of the small Allied units from the northern Allied army was accompanied by destruction of communications which prevented the Germans from further advance, he added.

While the morning communique of the high command reported consolidation of positions on the Somme and the taking of "a certain number of prisoners," the chief objective of the French army was to bite through the German salient driven toward the Channel just north of the Somme.

"Hundreds Of Prisoners"

The War Office spokesman said "hundreds of prisoners" were taken in local successes, mopping-up operations where Nazi troops had established bridgeheads south of Amiens.

He said the irregular, jagged French line from Valenciennes through Cambrai, Arras and St. Omer to Boulogne remained unchanged, while the breach in the Peronne-Bapaume area still was not closed.

But he reported that Allied troops were moving in a pincer advance intended to trap the fast-moving German armored units which have streaked through this corridor toward the Channel and at the same time to establish connection between the main French force on the Somme and the Allied armies pinned inside the German ring in Flanders and Belgium.

The war of movement continued throughout the north and northwest, the spokesman said, with detachments moving in between enemy groups, while isolated units fought against opposing advance guards.

South of Sedan, where fighting is progressing favorably in the wooded section, the spokesman said the French had recovered all ground lost to the Germans. He described engagements in this region as "very hot," and said new artillery bombardments began this morning.

Premier Reynaud warned the French people today to beware of false orders which, he said, German agents are spreading by telephone and handbills with signatures of French officials—sometimes even his own.

Warnings also were issued against alleged German propaganda efforts to divide France and Britain.

The Simplon-Orient express, one of Europe's crack trains, running from Paris through Switzerland to Italy, has been canceled as an "economy measure," the Ministry of Public Works announced today. It said this action was only temporary.

The Corridor Battle

Dispatches from the front indicated that the French, aided by concentrated artillery fire, were attacking heavily on both sides of the breach near Peronne and had succeeded in closing in for a distance of some ten miles.

While the main body of the French tried to drive north from the Somme and cut the German "bottleneck," Allied troops withdrawing from Belgium were said to be hammering at the Nazi right flank in the vicinity of Cambrai. Heavy fighting was reported in the outskirts of Cambrai, which is about twenty-two miles north of the Somme.

Corridor A Maelstrom

Additional Nazi armored cars and motor cycles were reported roaring through the narrowing "corridor"; although massed Allied artillery turned the lane into a veritable no man's land, Allied planes constantly shuttled back and forth overhead, bombing and strafing the German columns.

In northern Belgium another battle was surging along the banks of the Scheldt river as the Germans tried to crack the left wing of the French army that marched to Belgium's assistance when that country was invaded fifteen days ago.

The fighting here appeared to be a war of maneuver, with the Allied troops making a gradual withdrawal that was said to be proceeding according to plan (twenty-three words censored here). British, Belgians and remnants of the Dutch army were reported to be engaged.

At the other end of the front, near the juncture of the French, Luxembourg and Belgian borders, the Germans launched a series of terrific attacks, preceded by heavy artillery barrages, but the French said the assaults were repulsed.

Discussing the position of the Nazi troops which have reached the coastal plain, General Duval, military analyst of Le Journal, said: "It seems that the role of these mechanized formations is finished." Duval attached more importance to the operations along the Scheldt, where, he said, "masses of German infantry" were attacking. "That is where the battle will be decided, and not at Boulogne," he declared.

Jean Tripier, French Minister to Luxembourg, and the staff of the legation arrived in Paris by train today from Germany by way of Switzerland. Also on the train were Joseph Bech, Luxembourg's Foreign and Home Affairs Minister, and other Government leaders.

About 200,000 Belgian refugees have passed through Paris on their way to shelter in designated areas of France and more are still coming, Belgian authorities said today. Officials are checking identity papers to prevent the entry of spies.

The newspaper Le Temps advocated work for the refugees on farms and in factories, where manpower has been depleted by the call to arms.

The French press reported today that a Mrs. Climpson, wife of the Salvation Army's director of recreation centers with the British Expeditionary Force, had been killed in a German air raid near Arras.

French Fight to Cut Nazi Margin

WITH THE ADVANCED FRENCH AIR ARMY, Somewhere in Northern France, May 24 (AP) (Delayed in Transit) — German bombing squadrons in massed formations of thirty and forty planes rained bombs on French airports in North Central France today in an effort to halt the French pilots' desperate campaign to cut down Germany's admitted numerical superiority in war planes.

The heaviest raids, in which hundreds of bombs were dropped, came during the early morning and just before and after noon.

They were directed at the airports supporting the land armies locked in the battle for supremacy in Northern France.

Pilots in the squadrons based on these fields are almost literally doing the work of three men. (Twenty-two words were censored here.) Then they return to their bases, reload and are off again immediately.

French air officers said today the initial Nazi advantage in the air was being cut down, but they added that even the experience and daring of the French pilots had not been able to keep the Germans from raiding into the heart of France.

While we talked on the well-camouflaged field, fast fighter patrols swept into the air to meet another bombing raid on a neighboring field.

The heavy crunch of bombs followed one another in rapid succession until the German bombers were beaten off by the French planes which dived with machine guns and cannon firing.

Throughout the Northern air army zone officers told of heavy German bombardments but with only material damage.

French Concede Nazi Gain

PARIS, May 25 (AP).—A War Ministry spokesman tonight acknowledged that the German Army, continuing its push through the northern France corridor to the sea, had reached the new British-Belgian line in the northwest and occupied Vimy Ridge, northwest of Arras. The ridge was a German-Canadian World War battlefield.

Two attacks were launched by the Germans against the northern Allied forces in Belgium, the results of which were not known.

The spokesman said the situation at Boulogne was "confused" at 6 p. m., with the French and German forces fighting in that sector, but at the same hour the French still held Calais, against which the Germans were pushing. The Germans occupied a "certain number of points" in the St. Omer sector, the spokesman added, and the battle continued there, with German armored units reaching that point.

Salvation Army Man's Wife Killed in Raid

PARIS, May 25 (AP).—The French press reported today that a Mrs. Climpson, wife of the Salvation Army's director of recreation centers with the British Expeditionary Force, had been killed in a German air raid near Arras.

Belgian Refugees Set At 200,000 by Paris

PARIS, May 25 (AP).—About two hundred thousand Belgian refugees have passed through Paris on the way to shelter in designated areas of France, and more are still arriving, Belgian authorities said today. Officials are checking identity papers to prevent entry of spies.

The newspaper "Le Temps" advocated work for the refugees on farms and in factories, where French man power has been depleted by the call to arms.

Dressmakers Of Paris Hold Fast Despite War

Will Remain Until Government Demands They Leave; Orders "Very Encouraging"

Paris, May 25 (AP)—Paris dressmakers decided today to keep their doors open as usual despite the heavy fighting in northern France.

Lucien Lelong, president of the Dressmakers' Syndical Chamber, said the group had voted to remain in the capital as long as the Government gave no order to the contrary.

The decision, which involves all the leading houses, was based, Lelong said, on the need to keep the workers employed and the "very encouraging" number of orders recently received from abroad.

Nazi Planes Raid England

LONDON, May 25 (A. P.).—German warplanes bombed a section of the North Riding (county sub-division) of Yorkshire, some 175 miles north of London, and wounded at least eight civilians last night, the Government disclosed today.

Three of the injured persons suffered wounds so severe that they were taken to a hospital.

The ten-minute raid was made by one plane, apparently aiming at a steel plant which was slightly damaged by a bomb. Another bomb struck a side of the North Riding Communal Air Raid Shelter but caused no damage. Most of the bombs fell harmlessly in open spaces.

Another German raider was driven off the northeast coast by British fighter planes.

In Essex, the county east of London, a German plane dropped one bomb, as a result of which one girl was injured.

Coming at a moment when Great Britain is mustering all her powers of defense against a possible Nazi blitzkrieg in the British Isles, the attack was directed also against East Anglia, but bombs dropped in this part of southeastern England caused no casualties.

All these stabs by Nazi bombers were regarded as forerunners of a mass attack that, with mechanized German columns occupying the channel port of Boulogne and pushing north to Calais, may be expected shortly.

British military spokesmen, asserting that the position of the Allied armies in France was "very grave," declared today that "a co-ordinated Allied effort can still retrieve the situation."

"It should be remembered that the form of warfare employed by the Germans has its weaknesses as well as its strength," these spokesmen said. "There is no reason for loss of confidence."

Meanwhile today Prime Minister Churchill, in a letter to the Trades Union Executive Council, meeting here, said that "the gravity of the situation deepens hour by hour," continuing:

"The country's needs are imperative, inescapable and imperious, and we shall pay dearly if we fail to meet them. We can meet them now as the Government is founded upon a new unity of national purpose and with the creative energies of a people awakened to the magnitude of the task.

30.24-2499

"We have the fullest confidence in the readiness of organized workers to accept the obligations arising out of the demands which the State is compelled to make upon their endurance and their capacity for sacrifice.

"The gravity of the situation deepens hour by hour and we are all called upon to make a supreme effort to defend the country to preserve our liberties and to win the war."

The conference indorsed the conscription of labor and property, and in a message to the fighting forces said: "We are unitedly resolved that all our industrial resources shall be used to the full to provide arms and the munitions you need."

While imposing a firm ban on details of the fighting in France where the British Expeditionary Force was struggling in "a very grave and very confused" position, the British Government permitted this information to reach the public:

British military spokesmen said that the French High Command had requested secrecy in regard to the location of fighting until a battle had been decided, and that the ban on news was likely to continue indefinitely.

British self-denial of news is a contribution toward the winning of this battle, a War Office spokesman said.

The registration of twenty-seven-year-old men began today as munitions, aircraft and other industries started the seven-day work week with assurances that the wartime dictatorial powers given the Government on Wednesday would not mean a loss to the workers of their "hard-won liberties."

120 Nazi Planes in Three Days.

No authoritative information was made public in London as to whether the navy was bombarding the channel ports.

Shortly before noon, southeast English coastal towns heard a steady cannonading from across the channel.

There were reports also that observers in those towns had seen flashes of machine-gun fire in the skies, indicating that Royal Air Force fliers were attacking German planes over the channel.

An Air Ministry communique said today that British planes had destroyed or seriously damaged forty German bombers and fighting planes over the French and Belgian battlefronts yesterday, while losing ten of their own ships, and that British airmen had accounted for 120 German planes in the last three days.

The communique said that thirty-one of the enemy planes had burst into flames or crashed on landing and that the rest had been put out of action.

Labor Minister Ernest Bevin tonight established a labor supply board to administer broad powers to mobilize the industrial man power of Britain under the recent emergency act giving the Government power to conscript labor and wealth.

12 Nazi Planes Felled.

A communique issued tonight described R. A. F. bombings of German transport columns, troop concentrations, rail junctions and bridges in large-scale operations over the war zone.

Twelve German planes were shot down in a patrol of the battle areas, and German communications lines were disorganized over a wide area, the communique said. Many fires were started.

German motorized units were attacked on coastal roads near Boulogne by bombers "in almost continuous offensive patrols," the Ministry said.

Earlier another bombing of oil storage tanks in German-held Rotterdam was announced by the Air Ministry. It said the bombs started two fires.

BOYS FROM 18 TO 19½ TO FILL GAPS IN RANKS

Will Be Shifted To Service Units On Reaching Conscription Age

Pressure Put On Labor. Factories Hum As Empire Prays Today

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 25—Britain, jarred into militancy from its centuries-old groove of ease and empire, called tonight upon its peace-born generation, boys of 18 to 19½, to fill the gaps in home-defense forces against the danger of invasion.

The War Office asked for volunteers from the age groups just under the conscrpition range after German bombs thumped on English soil over a 200-mile stretch of coast and while German guns echoed from just across the Channel.

Recruits gathered by tonight's call will have to enlist for the duration of the war in home-defense battalions. When they reach the conscription age of 20, however, they will be transferred to training units for service in the field army, wherever it may be. Now it is fighting with the French and Belgians in Flanders.

Distinct From "Parashoots"

The volunteers from home-defense battalions are distinct from the thousands who are enlisting as "parashoots" to defend Britain against parachute invaders.

The leaders of Britain's new dictatorial system, who have pledged the nation to fight to the last gun, the last sovereign and the last man, also turned intense pressure upon organized labor.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a letter to the Trades Union Executive Council, demanded a "supreme effort" by workers to defend the country and win the war, telling them the gravity of the situation "deepens hour by hour."

The conference indorsed the nation's conscription of labor and property and promised the army the work would be forthcoming to make "the arms and munitions you need."

Supply Board Set Up

The Labor Ministry set up a supply board to mobilize industrial manpower under the totalitarian law, adopted this week, conscripting men and what they own.

The change from a nation of quiet green fields and peaceful towns becomes complete on Sunday, when Britain works and prays. For the first time since the World War, factories will hum on full schedule while churchgoers, at the express command of their King, implore God for a victorious peace.

That will be the first real effect of the totalitarian legislation of last week which uprooted tradition and put every Briton and all he owns at the command of the endangered state.

Precautions Against Invasion

More visible and audible are the precautions against invasion, the calling up of the two-millionth man, scores of arrests which have resulted from the Government's drive against columnists, harsh censorship which takes away the news of the mighty battle of Flanders, and calls from the nation's leadership for "confidence."

Today military men described the situation on the Channel edge of the Continent as "very grave and very confused" but held out hope that a joint Allied action would beat back Germany's iron cavalry and rip apart the base of the Reichswehr salient which stretches across northern France to the Straits of Dover.

With ammunition and airplane factories working throughout the week end with the greatest activity of the war 326,259 more men were called to arms to aid the hard-pressed Expeditionary Force and fill the of the navy and Royal Air Force.

2,000,000 Mark Passed

This registration of 27-year-olds pushed the number of men under mobilization past the 2,000,000 mark.

Early morning German bombings from the North Riding (district) of Yorkshire to East Anglia and Essex covered more than 200 miles of English east coast, injuring eleven civilians and awakening the nation fully to awareness it is bearing the weight of war.

While the Yorkshire bombings were believed aimed at steel factories, the raids further south were considered intended to shake the English morale, but there was no sign of the loss of quiet confidence that is the hall-mark of the Briton.

Undisturbed By Cencorship

In fact, the appeals for confidence seemed needless. Deprived by a new censorship edict of even the names of places where his army is fighting, the man-in-the-street accepted the situation with the view, "there's a big battle on at last and the French are going to give 'em what-for. When it comes, the news will be good."

"Local defense volunteers" flocked from towns and farms by the thousands to give their spare time as "parashoots" against German parachutists.

By nightfall it was estimated nearly 400,000 had registered, 20,00 of them in the important London area. The men selected will be equippped with uniforms and rifles by tomorrow night. It has been suggested they also be equipped with sub-machine guns.

Barricades appeared beside lonely roads leading from the coast to London. Anti-aircraft guns and machine-guns were mounted in fields near cross-roads and power stations; Government buildings and arsenals were patrolled by infantrymen in steel helmets, carrying rifles.

London assumed the appearance of a beleaguered city as sandbagged machine-gun emplacements were completed at strategic points and even more guards posted at public buildings.

The "fifth column" roundup, which has reached into Parliament and the so-called upper classes, continued. More than sixty persons have been arrested in Britain, among them Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader; Capt. Archibald H. M. Ramsay, Rightist member of the House of Commons, and Capt. Franz von Rintelen, World War German spy and saboteur in the United States.

Over 200 I. R. A. Men Interned

The number of Irish Republican Army men interned in Ireland for duration of the war is believed to exceed 200.

A special constabulary force is be raised in Ulster to supplement Royal Irish Constabulary and deal with I. R. A. members, who may act in conjunction with parachutists.

On Britain's side of the ledger were accounts of the prowess of R. A. F. planes flying constantly over the Flanders plains to harry German communications and bomb Nazi tank columns.

Fighter pilots claimed forty German planes had been put out of action yesterday, bringing German losses in the last seventy-two hours to more than 120. Ten R. A. F. planes were lost Friday.

The navy's air force coordinated its work with the R. A. F. to stop marauding tanks ranging behind Allied lines. It claimed three of these had been set afire and that enemy oil depots at Rotterdam had been bombed and enemy torpedo boats sunk.

Witness Tells of Panic in Boulogne As Fighting Raged Amid Refugees

Briton Who Escaped on Destroyer Says Port Was Thronged With Civilians When the Germans Stormed Their Way In

LONDON, May 25 (AP)—A Briton, who witnessed this week's fighting at Boulogne, told tonight of being taken aboard a British destroyer while its guns thundered parting defiance to German troops swarming into the French city.

The witness, Frederick Brinjes, a business man, said the ancient, sunny city across the Channel had become a shell-rocked, bomb-spattered trap for thousands of refugees.

He told of spending two nights at the maritime station at Boulogne, where thousands of hysterical men, women and children waited to get out of the city.

Lack Water And Facilities

They were without water. There were no sanitary facilities. Machine-gun bullets rattled in the streets.

"There must have been many killed," he said. "I don't know how many. I know there were hundreds wounded and I saw many going mad."

Brinjes reached Boulogne Wednesday afternoon.

"The street to the station was black with people," he said. "It took me two hours to fight my way through the crowd."

"Every time a bomb went off the women would scream," Brinjes related. "No one tried to stop them."

Many soldiers who had fought in local engagements in the previous several days were in the station, he said, and British and French destroyers were moored near by.

"The heavy bombing and low-raking fire from planes started at dusk Wednesday and continued all night," Brinjes said. "Not much damage was done to the station but a number of people were cut by flying glass."

Soldiers Distributed Food

British soldiers distributed food.

"I've got a can of bully beef in my pocket here now," Brinjes exclaimed. "I was going to eat it for dinner Thursday night, but there was no appear. At the moment I got aboard the destroyer it was still firing. We made a top-speed dash across the Channel."

Among the spectacles was a "dog fight" between planes above the harbor. Two enemy planes fell into the sea in flames.

By Thursday afternoon, he recalled the German troops had penetrated the town and captured guns on a hill near the Continental Hotel.

Destroyers Opened Fire

"At 7 that night," he continued, "three destroyers alongside the jetty opened fire on German gun emplacements on the hill.

"The noise was terrific. The German fire was far from accurate, but one destroyer finally was struck amidships. I learned later it reached a British port safely.

"The remaining two destroyers put the German guns out of action. Many buildings along the sea front including the Hotel de Folkestone were shelled. The hotel was the first German headquarters.

Women Taken Aboard Warships

"During the shelling other destroyers were taking aboard women, children and injured soldiers.

"Many of the refugees were wounded by machine-gun fire as they dashed about fifty yards to the destroyers.

"By 9 o'clock the Germans were coming toward the station. The British and French were fighting back, firing from under railway carriages and from behind sandbag defenses. German tanks began to appear.

"At the moment I got aboard the destroyer it was still firing. We made a top-speed dash across the Channel. No sea journey ever seemed so good to me."

Alarm in East Kent

LONDON, Sunday, May 25 (AP)—German war planes were believed to have dropped bombs off the southeast coast of England early this morning, but no damage was reported.

In East Kent residents hurried into shelters and basements during an air-raid alarm that was in effect for 105 minutes.

British fighter planes were seen flying out to sea and anti-aircraft guns were heard.

Searchlights then picked out German planes flying off the coast and anti-aircraft guns blazed away at them for several minutes.

The port of Dover, in Kent, is only twenty-two miles across the English Channel from Calais, where heavy fighting is in progress.

The Saturday morning bombings by German aircraft in a range from the northern district of Yorkshire to East Anglia and Essex covered more than 200 miles of the east coast of Britain. The attacks awakened the nation fully to awareness of the weight of war.

While the Yorkshire bombings were believed aimed at steel factories, the raids further south were considered intended to shatter the British morale.

A British bomber crashed and burned on a cricket field in a midland town last night, killing three occupants. The plane was thought to have struck a barrage balloon.

British Outline Rules To Save Paper Supply

Conservation Program Does Not Apply To Production For Export Purposes

London, May 25 (AP)—The British Government took these steps today to conserve the supply of paper:

Forbade issuance of new periodicals.

Ordered newspapers to stop using broad sheets on which street vendors display the headlines in large "box-car" type.

Restricted use of wrapping paper as packing material.

Prohibited manufacture of such paper goods as napkins, tablecloths, plates and confetti.

The order, however, doesn't apply to production for export.

Berlin reported heavy fighting in the streets of Calais today, while Nazi bombers raided four harbors where the British appeared to be trying to land re-enforcements to help the Allies break out of the Flanders trap the Nazis were closing on them.

The Germans said that their powerful forces, driving steadily toward the English Channel, have put the Allied armies in northern France and Belgium—500,000 to 1,000,000 men—in peril of annihilation.

The High Command stated that the Belgian-French-British armies in Flanders had been completely encircled yesterday. Authorized German sources said that the lightning stabs of Adolf Hitler's blitzkrieg legions had reduced the area of the Flanders battlefield by two-thirds in forty-eight hours and that the locked-in Allies would be "wiped out" within a week.

Captured in the steady German advance, the High Command said, were the important English Channel port of Boulogne and the Belgian cities of Ghent and Courtrai.

German planes, winging across the channel, bombed northern Yorkshire, 175 miles from London, wounding at least eight civilians. Nazi warplanes also dropped bombs over southeast Anglia, Essex and the northeast coast of England, but no casualties were reported.

In the Battle of Flanders, the French asserted that they had narrowed from thirty to twenty miles the gap in their lines north of the Somme, through which German armored units have been streaking toward the channel. Paris announced that fifteen French generals had been removed in a shake-up of its High Command.

Germans Ring Allied Armies

BERLIN, May 25 (A. P.).—German and Allied troops fought today in the streets of Calais, just twenty-two miles from England, while Adolf Hitler's dive bombers rained destruction on four channel harbors where the British apparently are attempting to land re-enforcements to break the trap around Allied armies in Flanders.

The German High Command announced that it had drawn a solid ring around the Belgian Army, the main body of the British Expeditionary Force and parts of France's First, Seventh and Ninth armies. The trapped troops were estimated to number between 500,000 and 1,000,000 men.

Dive bombers dropped explosives on harbors at Dieppe and Dunkirk, France, and Ostend and Blankenberghe, Belgium. The last port is a famous sea resort.

Calais Called Useless Base.

Military authorities said that although Calais had not fallen, it had been rendered useless as a base for British landing operations. They also said more cities actually had been captured by the Germans than the High Command had announced, but that they were being kept secret for military reasons.

One military source said there was "not a possibility" of the Allied armies breaking out of the German circle.

A hint that the British Isles might be in for "great surprises in the way of new weapons" when and if the Germans assault England was given by an authorized military source.

At his battle front headquarters, Adolf Hitler was believed nearing another decision—whether to hurl his blitzkreig at once into England, or carry the war south to Paris.

Authoritative German spokesmen said that the Reich's armies had reduced the Flanders battlefield by two-thirds in the last forty-eight hours and predicted the encompassed units would be "wiped out" within a week.

Prisoners and Booty Claimed.

The army command said that "weak" Allied attacks intended to relieve these forces had been thrown back.

It was stated an increasing number of Allied prisoners was being engulfed in Flanders and "the amount of booty cannot be estimated."

Tens of thousands of prisoners have been taken, unofficial German commentators said tonight, adding that hundreds of Allied tanks and planes had been destroyed.

German losses remained a mystery. Officials said they would not be published until the war's end, although families of the fallen are being notified.

The report of fighting in Calais itself came after the High Command merely had said the port city was encompassed by the Germans.

The High Command declared that the Lys River, Belgium's last natural line of defense, had been crossed; Ghent and Courtrai, Belgium, captured; the French channel port of Boulogne wrested from land and naval forces, and nearby Calais encircled.

Vimy Ridge, death-hallowed battleground of Canadian and German forces in the world war, was reported captured in the general action along the southern edge of the German salient to the sea, where the Germans said that they had beaten back "weak enemy relief attacks."

"Vimy Ridge between Lillers and St. Omer up to Gravelines is in German possession," said the daily High Command communique.

The capture of Boulogne and the threat on Calais advanced the danger of direct attack on England, for they lie only twenty-six and twenty-two miles, respectively, from the Folkstone-Dover coast.

Germans have said, however, that the occupation of the navigating area of southwestern Belgium and northwestern France—the sack of territory upon which the Nazis are pulling the drawstring—is a necessary prelude to any jump-off toward the English shore.

"The ring around the Belgian Army, units of the First, Seventh and Ninth French armies and the main body of the English Expeditionary Force was considerably increased and thereby definitely closed," said the High Command's review of yesterday's operations.

The ring—it now might be called a garrote—was tightened on its eastern front by the capture of Ghent and Courtrai and crossing of the Lys River, a sequel to an earlier smash of Nazi divisions across the Scheldt, which in one section parallels the north-south Lys River line.

Nazi Air Force Active.

The capture of Courtrai on the Lys brought a barb of the German envelopment front fifteen miles northeast of the French industrial city of Lille, just inside the French border. Lille's peacetime population was more than 100,000 and it was a center of war industries. Lille changed hands three times in 1914.

Between Roubaix and Valenciennes, another sector of the envelopment front, southeast of Lille, German troops attacked French border fortifications, the High Command said.

To the south, between Valenciennes and Vimy, it was said that "the attack on both sides of Doubai is progressing in a northwestern direction."

South of Sedan, near the hinge of the big and little Maginot lines, sector of the first German penetration into France, German troops "in recent days wrenched an important hillside strong point from the enemy after stout fighting and kept it despite heavy counter-attacks."

The German Air Force lashed at Allied lines threatening the two sides of its salient to the channel which forms the lower jaw of the trap and crashed bombs into Belgian and French channel ports.

"Destroying or heavily damaging one destroyer and seven merchant ships or transports with a total tonnage of roughly 70,000."

"An additional destroyer, as previously reported, was sunk by anti-aircraft artillery," said the communique.

Destroyer Called French.

This destroyer had been identified by DNB, the official German news agency, as French and the scene of the sinking as the English Channel.

German airmen were said to have scored bomb hits on troop and tank concentrations, marching columns, rail lines, airports, anti-aircraft positions inland and artillery positions, quays, shipyards, docks, moles and gasoline storage tanks in Belgian and French channel ports.

The High Command acknowledged only seven planes missing in yesterday's operations as against an Allied total of eighty-four—twenty-seven shot down in air fighting, fourteen by anti-aircraft fire and the remainder destroyed on the ground.

Attack on England Forecast.

German air force bases along the channel coast, authorized spokesmen declared, are expected to provide a stranglehold on England as soon as encirclement is completed.

The air force, they said, will cut off the possibility of the British retreat from the iron wall established by the Nazi land forces.

The German troops engaged in the march on Calais were inspired by the belief that their swiftly moving assault was laying the groundwork for the long-awaited attack on Great Britain.

Military authorities refused to discuss any such prospect, but in some quarters it was predicted that this phase in the development of the war might become apparent within the next week. Before any large-scale operation can be aimed directly at England, however, these spokesmen pointed out, it would be highly desirable, if not absolutely necessary, first to eliminate the Allied troops trapped by the Germans in the triangular cauldron bounded on one side by the sea and on the two other sides by German armies.

Roughly they drew the land sides of this triangle from Calais southeastward for eighty miles to Cambrai, and from there almost due north to a point on the coast north of the ancient Belgian city of Ghent.

It was admitted that the Allied troops in what the Germans called the "sack" were putting up stubborn resistance, especially in the regions of Arras and Cambrai.

But the Germans, who placed the center of Allied concentration in the sack at the strongly fortified industrial city of Lille, insisted that they had frustrated all attempts on the part of the Allies in this area to fight southward and effect a junction with the main French Army along the Somme.

[The French said that the gap between the two forces had been reduced to twenty miles by dents driven into the Nazi salient near Peronne, on the south, and Bapaume, on the north.]

All Emphasis on England.

Public attention in Germany, meanwhile, was being focused more and more on England as the chief enemy. Thus a German air attack on two British cruisers off the Norwegian ore port of Narvik and the Nazi assumption that these vessels were a total loss was reported jubilantly over the radio last night.

Today, in addition, Adolf Hitler's own press chief, Dr. Otto Dietrich, replied to the charges of German aggression made yesterday by King George VI. Addressing him as "you miserable hypocrite," Dietrich issued the warning that "German arms will, George of England, give the reply that is due you."

Further emphasis on England as the chief objective was given by the morning papers which played up a new type of small speedboat, which carries two torpedo tubes on the foredeck and is regarded as a naval novelty of unsuspected possibilities. They said that these little craft, carrying crews of only nineteen men, presented a grave danger to even the largest warship—and by implication, to the transports with which England is reported to be sending fresh troops into France.

Yet another hint of the thrust against England was contained in repeated assertions by military authorities that Allied—and particularly British—air bombing of non-military objects would, at the proper moment, be effectively avenged.

Calls England Guilty.

In his comment on the Empire Day broadcast of King George, Dietrich replied to the charges of German aggression in a half-page article carried by the German press under the red-ink caption of "Reply to a King."

Dietrich flatly asserted that England was responsible for the war and its horrors.

"Your address, George of England, was not royal, but pitiable," the Nazi press chief said.

"If you were a man then, now, in the hour of decision as a challenger who must face his fate on the battlefield, you should have acknowledged the reasons which caused England to unleash this war, instead of hiding hypocritically behind moral principles which you have no right whatever to invoke."

Dietrich's answer was composed of assertions that England incited Poland against Germany; that England unscrupulously sacrificed Norway, Holland and Belgium; that England declared war on Germany, and that England, not Germany, must therefore bear the responsibility for the war.

"That is the truth," said Dietrich, emphasizing that before the start of the conflict Germany was ready "for the sake of peace to recognize France's borders."

Dietrich declared that "England unmasked herself completely" with "the King's mean and unknightly words about an opponent with whom England is crossing rapiers for death and life."

FEAR ABOUT IRELAND GROWS

Finding of Used Parachute in Dublin Causes Concern.

LONDON, May 25 (A. P.).—Scotland Yard, which has seized sixty Fascists in two days, was expected today to make other arrests this week end in an intensified drive against suspected fifth columnists.

Of the stop-the-war agitators already under arrest forty-two were seized in London and the others in the provinces.

United States embassy officials said they could make no comment whatever on a report that a member of the embassy staff had been arrested.

Coinciding with the Scotland Yard roundup, authorities in northern Ireland arrested seventy-six members of the Irish Republican Army under the special powers act.

With Capt. Franz von Rintelen, a voluntary exile from Germany, who was imprisoned in the United States for sabotage during the last war, among the latest in the Scotland Yard bag, Britons also cast anxious eyes toward Eire, fearing a possible German attack through the back door.

Parachutist Hunted.

The Dublin police hunted a German mystery man believed to have been dropped there by parachute, but the authorities doubted the existence of any widespread fifth column plot involving German residents in Ireland, of whom they said there were only 200.

Concern was expressed here, however, following the disclosure that the police in a raid on a house in Dublin found $20,000 in American money, a used parachute, modern German Air Force badge, radio transmitting set, printing press, secret code and maps of airdromes and highways of military value.

The house belonged to Stephen Held, a naturalized Irishman, who was held in jail under military regulations.

An explosion of uncertain origin last night damaged a hall at Bellshill, Lanarkshire county, Scotland, used as a meeting place by members of the local Communist party. There were no casualties.

The police began an immediate investigation.

Hull Refuses Comment.

British Wreck '40 Nazi Planes In Day'

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 25—The Air Ministry, in two communiques today reported Britain's planes had harassed German concentrations and destroyed or seriously damaged forty German bombers and fighter planes over the French and Belgian battle fronts yesterday. The British lost only ten planes, the Ministry reported.

The communique said thirty-one German planes were seen to "burst into flames or crash on landing" and nine more were put out of action. The Ministry said this brought enemy losses at the hands of the British to 120 planes in the last three days.

Two Air Arms Cooperate

The first communique said:

"Yesterday a number of shore-based aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm cooperated with medium bombers of the Royal Air Force in a series of harassing attacks on enemy concentrations near the Channel coast.

"In the course of one attack by naval aircraft on enemy armored vehicles, at least three enemy tanks were set on fire and others put out of action.

Heavy Bombers Active

"Enemy oil depots at Rotterdam were attacked again this morning by aircraft of the Royal Air Force coastal command, and an enemy motor torpedo boat was bombed and sunk off the Dutch coast.

"Heavy bombers of the Royal Air Force were active throughout the night."

The second communique said:

"The Royal Air Force fighter pilots are putting out of action more than forty German raiders a day. Yesterday Spitfires, Hurricanes and Defiants destroyed or seriously damaged another forty German bombers and fighters over the French and Belgian battlefronts with only a quarter of that number of casualties to themselves. This brings their total victories for the past three days to more than 120.

One Squadron Claims 18

"Thirty-one of yesterday's forty were seen to break in the air, burst into flames or crash on landing. The other nine were put out of action.

"One squadron of Spitfires accounted for eighteen enemy aircraft. This was the squadron which as already announced sent up eleven fighters and shot down eleven Germans in one engagement. Another Spitfire squadron accounted for thirteen enemy aircraft.

"Enemy aircraft of seven different types were destroyed. Our fighters fought successfully against Heinkel 111's, Dornier 17's, Junkers 87 and Junkers 88 bombers, Messerschmitt 109 and 110 fighters, the army cooperation Henschel 126's and even a Condor.

Hedgehops Over Fields

"The day's fighting began and ended with the destruction of a Henschel 126. The first Henschel was attacked by Spitfires early in the morning and was seen to break up in the air and burst into flames southeast of Calais. The last was trying to escape and hedgehopped over fields before it crashed in flames near the same place.

"When the Hurricane squadron attacked a formation of thirty Heinkel and Dornier bombers between Calais and Dunkirk their protecting Messerschmitt 100's held off from the fight. The Hurricanes first shot down five and probably seven of the bombers at 11,000 feet. Then they climbed to 22,000 feet and put three of the Messerschmitts out of action.

Squadron Rests Two Hours

"Eleven Spitfire pilots who shot down eleven enemy aircraft were also attacking bombers protected by Messerschmitts. In addition to the eleven, they seriously damaged three others. Two hours later, after a rest at their base, they again went into action, this time shooting down four Messerschmitt 109's.

"Another Spitfire squadron spread their successes over the D-6. They shot down a Henschel near Calais at breakfast time, a Condor near Ostend before lunch, a Dornier 17 and a Junkers 88 a little later, another Dornier 17 and two more Junker 88's at teatime and two Messerschmitts before dinner."

FORTS ON RHINE IN DUEL OF GUNS

French Artillery Hammers 'Gibraltar' at Istein.

BASLE, May 25 (A. P.).—A five-hour artillery battle between the French Maginot fortifications and Germany's "Gibraltar of the Rhine" at Istein shattered the comparative silence of the Rhine River from early today.

French guns in the forts at Filgensburg, seven miles west of Basle, began hammering the Istein Rock, which, like Gibraltar, is pierced with firing galleries and is regarded as one of the Reich's greatest fortresses.

The thundering of the big guns against the rock, which towers 300 feet above the Rhine Rapids, awoke thousands of Basle's citizens. From their rooftops they could see the flash of the French guns. After half an hour the Germans began returning the fire.

The Istein fort, dismantled after Versailles and rebuilt under Adolf Hitler with the most modern equipment, stands where the Black Forest Mountains join the rock formations of the Jura across the Rhine.

The German and French positions there are keys to the entire lower Rhine Valley. The possession is essential to a French invasion of Baden or a German invasion of lower Alsace.

Communiques

German

Berlin, May 25 (AP)—"The ring around the Belgian army, units of the First, Seventh and Ninth French armies and the main body of the English Expeditionary Force yesterday was considerably increased and thereby definitely closed.

"In the east of this ring Ghent and Courtrai were taken. The Lys river was crossed during the attack.

"Between Roubaix and Valenciennes German troops are attacking French border fortifications. In the south, between Valenciennes and Vimy the attack on both sides of Douai is progressing in a northwestern direction. The heights of Vimy were taken.

Boulogne Taken, Calais Circled

"After hard fighting with the enemy land and naval forces, Boulogne was taken. Calais is encompassed by German troops.

"Vimy Ridge between Lillers and St. Omer up to Gravelines is in German possession. The number of prisoners is increasing steadily, while the amount of booty cannot be estimated.

"German fighting planes and pursuit units in Belgium and north France successfully attacked troop concentrations and columns as well as anti-aircraft positions. They bombed quays, gasoline tanks, shipyards, docks, artillery positions and moles in Belgian and French Channel ports.

Naval Successes Recited

"In the course of this action we succeeded in destroying or damaging one destroyer and seven merchant ships or transports with a total tonnage of roughly 20,000.

"An additional destroyer, as previously reported, was sunk by anti-aircraft artillery.

"At several points on the southern front weak enemy relief attacks were repelled. South of Sedan, German troops in recent days wrenched an important hillside strong point from the enemy after stout fighting and kept it despite heavy counter-attacks.

"During recent days of fighting in the Maubeuge region the commander of an infantry regiment, Colonel Ordan, and First Lieutenant Langenstrass, of an engineer battalion, distinguished themselves by special bravery.

"At the southern front the air force was very effective, raiding rail lines, airports, marching columns and tank concentrations.

In The Narvik Region

"In the Narvik (Norway) region German fighting units continued raids against sea targets and successfully supported ground fighting.

"As previously reported in a special announcement, two cruisers were so seriously hit May 23 that they can be regarded as a total loss.

"Also a battleship and one cruiser or destroyer were severely damaged. During a repetition of this raid yesterday the battleship, which already had been damaged, sustained three additional severe hits aft and was stopped dead without further defense. One airplane carrier which was fired can be regarded as lost.

Reinforcements At Narvik

"Further, the cruisers were hit amidship, a transport and two supply ships were sunk and another two damaged and a large tanker beached with a heavy list after being hit. We succeeded in reinforcing fighting troops at Narvik by parachuting mountain chasseur units.

"The enemy's total air losses yesterday were eighty-four planes, of which twenty-seven were shot down in air fights, fourteen by anti-aircraft fire and the rest were destroyed on the ground. Seven German planes are missing."

French

Paris, May 25 (AP)—"In the north the situation has undergone no important change. Our troops are fighting with an energy and a determination which are inflicting heavy losses on the Germans in all encounters.

"Between the Aisne and the Meuse activity is still great and during recent days we have dominated the enemy."

The morning communique said:

"Yesterday evening we consolidated our positions on the Somme and during these operations we took a certain number of prisoners.

"During the night nothing to report as to the whole front."

London, May 25 (AP)—"The Royal Air Force fighter pilots are putting out of action more than forty German raiders a day. Yesterday Spitfires, Hurricanes and Defiants destroyed or seriously damaged another forty German bombers and fighters over the French and Belgian battle fronts with only a quarter of that number of casualties to themselves. This brings their total victories for the past three days to more than 120.

"Thirty-one of yesterday's forty were seen to break in the air, burst into flames or crash on landing. The other nine were put out of action.

One Squadron Gets 18

"One squadron of Spitfires accounted for eighteen enemy aircraft. This was the squadron which as already announced sent up eleven fighters and shot down eleven Germans in one engagement. Another Spitfire squadron accounted for thirteen enemy aircraft.

"Enemy aircraft of seven different types were destroyed. Our fighters fought successfully against Heinkel 111's, Dornier 17's, Junkers 87 and Junkers 88 bombers, Messerschmitt 109 and 110 fighters, the army cooperation Henschel 126's and even a Condor.

"The day's fighting began and ended with the destruction of a Henschel 126. The first Henschel was attacked by Spitfires early in the morning and was seen to break up in the air and burst into flames southeast of Calais. The last was trying to escape and hedgehopped over fields before it crashed in flames near the same place.

Between Calais And Dunkerque

"When the Hurricane squadron attacked a formation of thirty Heinkel and Dornier bombers between Calais and Dunkerque their protecting Messerschmitt 100's held off from the fight. The Hurricanes first shot down five and probably seven of the bombers at 11,000 feet. Then they climbed to 22,000 feet and put three of the Messerschmitts out of action.

"Eleven Spitfire pilots who shot down eleven enemy aircraft were also attacking bombers protected by Messerschmitts. In addition to the eleven they seriously damaged three others. Two hours later, after a rest at their base, they again went into action, this time shooting down four Messerschmitt 109's.

"Another Spitfire squadron spread their successes over the D-6. They shot down a Henschel near Calais at breakfast time, a Condor near Ostend before lunch, a Dornier 17 and a Junkers 88 a little later, another Dornier 17 and two more Junker 88's at teatime and two Messerschmitts before dinner."

BERN, SWITZERLAND, MAY 25-(AP)-SWIFT-MOVING GERMAN LIGHT MOTORIZED UNITS WHICH BROKE THROUGH THE ALLIED LINES BETWEEN GHENT AND LILLE HAVE ENTERED THE OUTSKIRTS OF ST. OMER, MIDWAY BETWEEN LILLE AND THE CHANNEL PORT OF CALAIS, ACCORDING TO BERLIN DISPATCHES REACHING THE GERMAN LEGATION HERE TODAY.

THESE DISPATCHES SAID LESS THAN 25 AIRLINE MILES SEPARATE ST. OMER FROM GERMAN FORCES OPERATING NEAR THE FRENCH COAST IN THE REGION BETWEEN MONTREUIL AND BOULOGNE.

IF THE GERMANS COULD CONSOLIDATE THESE TWO POSITIONS, IT WAS POINTED OUT, THEY WOULD BE ABLE TO CUT OFF FROM THE CHANNEL PORTS LARGE FORCES OF BRITISH, FRENCH AND BELGIAN TROOPS FIGHTING IN THE GREAT NORTHERN POCKET.

MAY 26 1940

HOWEVER, THE GERMAN DISPATCHES INDICATED THE ADVANCE TO ST.OMER WAS ONLY A STAB BY MOTORIZED UNITS AND THAT, WHILE IT POINTED TO A SERIOUS BREAK IN THE ALLIED FRONT NEAR YPRES, THESE NAZI FORCES MIGHT NOT BE ABLE TO CONSOLIDATE THEIR POSITION.

NORSE OFFICER TELLS OF SIEGE

Says Volunteers Held Hegra Fortress for 23 Days.

GUNS CALLED NAPOLEONIC

Garrison Held Out 19 Days After Waterpipes Were Smashed.

OSLO, May 25 (A. P.).—The first story of the twenty-three day defense of Hegra fortress, in mid-Norway, by volunteers armed with guns which Germans stated belonged to the Napoleonic era, was told today.

Sub-Lieut. Hellandsoe Skien, one of the defenders just released from imprisonment, said the resistance was so astounding that the German commander in Trondheim after the fort's capitulation on May 4, issued an official tribute.

The German tribute, the witness reported, said:

"The crew on fortress Hegra, having defended themselves bravely for twenty-three days, now have hoisted the white flag.

"German soldiers give credit for the gallant resistance, and consider the tenacious defense as proof of fine military quality.

Nineteen Days Without Water.

"Capitulation was due to food shortage. Only one day's ration was left. The waterpipes were destroyed by artillery fire nineteen days before the capitulation. The lighting plant had been out eighteen days. The crew had to melt snow to get water.

Lieut. Skien said the fortress was manned by 190 men, including fourteen officers.

Ammunition, he said, was abundant. The guns were two 75 millimeters, four of 105, four of 84 and 15 machine guns, "only five of them workable." There were no anti-aircraft guns.

The fortress, he said, was unoccupied when the invasion started.

"None of us ever had seen it before," he declared.

Slept in Water.

"We were quartered in a tunnel and we literally slept in water, as the tunnel dripped constantly.

"The Germans first attacked with infantry, which we repulsed. A subsequent patrol was destroyed except for one German who was taken prisoner.

"The Germans then began artillery fire and airplane bombing. Every foot within the fortress area was covered by bomb hits. Artillery duels often were at only 1,000 or 1,500 meters.

"We had two doctors, but only bandages and morphine—no other medicines.

"Finally we had so many wounded that we made arrangements with the Germans to give them their wounded soldiers if they would let us send our wounded through the siege lines to hospitals. They sented.

"Food shortage was one of the chief reasons for capitulation.

"Many of our men got pneumonia. During the entire period no one had his clothes off."

SWEDEN'S STRENGTH IS LIMITED AND SHE MUST MOVE CAUTIOUSLY, BUT AT THE SAME TIME, HE SAID, "WE MUST CONSTANTLY BE PREPARED TO SEE VIOLENCE RISE UP IN FRONT OF US AND TRY TO FORCE US TO LEAVE OUR ROAD OF LIBERTY AND INDEPENDENCE.

STOCKHOLM, MAY 25-(AP)-SWEDEN, SPURRED BY THE FATE OF HER NEIGHBORS, HAS COMPLETED A CONTEMPLATED 10-YEAR DEFENSIVE PROGRAM IN LESS THAN FOUR YEARS, A SPOKESMAN SAID.

A SIGN OF LESSENED SWEDISH TENSION WAS SEEN, HOWEVER, IN THE "GOOD RESULTS" REPORTED FROM THE MEETING YESTERDAY BETWEEN GENERAL NICKOLAUS VON FALKENHORST, COMMANDER OF GERMAN FORCES IN NORWAY, AND LIEUT. GEN. OLAF THORNELL, CHIEF OF SWEDISH DEFENSE FORCES.

NEVERTHELESS, THE SWEDISH NEWS AGENCY CONTINUED REPORTING GERMAN PLANES, MOST OF THEM APPARENTLY TRANSPORTS, FLYING LOW OVER SWEDISH SOIL, AND SWEDISH ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERIES REPEATEDLY IN ACTION AGAINST THEM.

CAPTAIN EJNAR FORS BERGSTROM, WRITER ON MILITARY AFFAIRS NOW SERVIN AS PRESS OFFICER TO FOREIGN NEWSPAPERMEN, IN OUTLINING HIS COUNTRY'S DEFENSES SAID:

"WE WANT PEACE AND SHALL ATTACK NOBODY. BUT WE MEAN TO DEFEND OURSELVES AGAINST WHOMSOEVER IT MIGHT BE."

NO ONE WILL SAY WHAT SWEDEN'S ARMED STRENGTH IS TODAY. ITS PEACE-TIME FORCE IN 1936 WAS FIXED AT FOUR ARMY UNITS TOTALING 19 REGIMENTS. BUT CAPT.BERGSTROM TOLD US:

"SWEDISH SOLDIERS ARE STATIONED AT ALL IMPORTANT POINTS X X X THE NAVY IS COMPLETELY MANNED, THE AIR FORCE IS IN A STATE OF PERFECT READINESS, AND IN ADDITION THE ANTI-AIRCRAFT DEFENSES HAVE PROVED EFFICIENTLY VIGILANT.

"BEHIND THE FRONT, THE WAR INDUSTRY IS WORKING AT FULL SPEED AND OUR ECONOMIC LIFE HAS BEEN REORGANIZED THOROUGHLY IN VIEW OF A POSSIBLE COMPLETE BLOCKADE."

LATEST REPORTS ON THE FIGHTING IN NORWAY HAVE REPORTED SUCCESSES FOR THE ALLIES:

ARRIVAL OF POLISH MOUNTAIN-TRAINED TROOPS TO SUPPORT THE FRENCH "BLUE DEVILS" AND NORWEGIAN FORCES BELEAGUERING THE GERMANS AT NARVIK; CAPTURE OF LILLEBALLAK AND KOBBEFJELD, IN THE LOFOTEN ISLANDS OFF NARVIK, BY NORWEGIAN TROOPS, AND AN ENGAGEMENT IN WHICH A SMALL BRITISH FORCE LOST ONLY ONE MAN WHILE 70 MEN OF A NUMERICALLY STRONGER GERMAN DETACHMENT WERE KILLED.

"THE SWEDISH PEOPLE TODAY ARE A PEOPLE IN ARMS," CAPT.BERGSTROM SAID IN A LECTURE TO NEWSPAPERMEN, "BUT SWEDEN IS PREPARED FOR DEFENSE AND DEFENSE ONLY."

WITHOUT GIVING FIGURES, HE SAID NEW PLANES, SHIPS, GUNS AND AUTOMATIC ARMS CONSTANTLY WERE SWELLING THE COUNTRY'S MILITARY RESOURCES. HE EMPHASIZED THE MOBILITY OF THE INFANTRY, WHICH RAPIDLY IS BECOMING MECHANIZED, AND THE MECHANIZED CAVALRY WHICH, "WITH MODERNIZED ARTILLERY AND MODERN SHIPS, DESTROYERS AND SUBMARINES FORMS A REAL FACTOR OF POWER IN THIS PART OF THE WORLD."

CAPT.BERGSTROM ADDED THAT THE COASTAL ARTILLERY ALSO HAD BEEN REINFORCED CONSIDERABLY, AND THAT THE AIR FORCE IS GROWING FAR MORE RAPIDLY THAN WAS FORESEEN IN 1936, WHEN PROVISION WAS MADE FOR ONLY 260 WARPLANES.

MAY 26 1940

FUNDS REQUESTED TODAY FOR THE ARMY ALONE INCLUDED 116,000,000 KRONOR (ABOUT $27,500,000) FOR EQUIPMENT AND 18,000,000 KRONOR (ABOUT $4,267,000) FOR A COMMISSARIAT TO PERMIT ADDITION OF 400 NEW OFFICERS AND 300 NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS TO THE REGULAR ARMY.

THIS REPRESENTS A CONSIDERABLE INCREASE FOR A NATION WHICH HAD A PEACETIME FRAMEWORK OF 2,073 OFFICERS AND 1,341 NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

THE 1936 DEFENSE PROGRAM CALLED FOR AN ANNUAL EXPENDITURE OF 148,000,000 KRONOR (ABOUT $35,100,000). THIS WAS RAISED TO 200,000,000 KRONOR ($47,420,000) THE FOLLOWING YEAR, WAS INCREASED FURTHER IN 1938 AND 1939, AND NOW HAS REACHED AN ESTIMATED 280,000,000 KRONOR A MONTH.

On War Footing, Italians Renew Cry for Corsica

Newspaper Prints Red Map, Rebel Leader Says Time Is Near to Oust French

ROME, May 25 (AP).—In spoken and printed word and picture, the name of Corsica, French Mediterranean island, flashed before Italian eyes tonight against a background of exciting rumor.

Italy's preparations for war gained in momentum, but how or when Fascism would act remained a matter of guesswork. The fact that westbound Italian shipping, including sailing of the flagship Rex, had halted until at least June 6 made that date a focus of speculation.

Foreign observers professed to see in the Corsica outburst a sign that Italy, if she went to war at all, would move first in the western Mediterranean. The French have held Corsica since 1768, and Napoleon came to France from there. But the island, 114 miles long and separated only by the narrow Strait of Bonifacio from Italian Sardinia, is Italian by history, geography and tongue.

A manifesto issued in Rome by Petru Giovacchini, leader of the Corsican Irredentists, called on Corsicans to "arise—the moment of redemption is near." Giovacchini, a half-Italian fugitive from the island, has been agitating for Corsica's return to Italy.

A map of Corsica, printed in bright red, was spread across the front page of the newspaper "Il Tevere." Posters screaming "Viva Italian Corsica" were plastered on the walls of Rome.

There were rumors, among others, that Italians in Malta, Great Britain's Mediterranean naval base, might send a delegation here to ask Premier Benito Mussolini for "protection" against the "persecution" which the Italian press insists Maltese now endure.

Minister of Agriculture Giuseppe Tassinari told an irrigation convention in Bologna that Italians were "impatiently awaiting" Mussolini's command to "break the prison which is holding them" in the Mediterranean.

The Universities of Naples, Bologna and Catania sent messages to Il Duce, telling him their students had their eyes on him for the first sign "to mark the way of glory for the imperial eagle, which is about to spread its wings."

So many Italian reservists have been called up individually that foreign observers believed the armed forces already were on a war footing, with general mobilization perhaps unnecessary. The government, however, is armed with facilities to mobilize even civilians, including women and children, for offices and workshops, and only Mussolini's word is needed to start the nation on the march.

The American Embassy, according to usually reliable sources, is prepared to take charge of the French and British diplomatic establishments in case of war.

Publication of an Italian law governing commodities ordered all holders of more than 450 pounds of wool or 650 pounds of cotton for industrial or commercial use to register it within fifteen days.

Vatican Speeds Completion Of Its Air-Raid Shelters

Offers Refuge To Diplomats Accredited To Holy See. Acts In Belief Italy Will Enter War

[By the Associated Press]

Vatican City, May 25—Papal authorities today recognized the possibility of Italian entrance into the war by offering refuge to diplomats accredited to the Holy See and speeding completion of Vatican City's air-raid shelters.

Prelates indicated Pope Pius XII is convinced Italy is going to war but that he refuses to leave Vatican City or consider using the air-raid shelter provided especially for him.

The offer of refuge was made by Luigi Cardinal Maglione, Papal Secretary of State. The diplomats, who ordinarily live outside the Vatican City were asked by letter to say whether they would return to their countries or take up residence in Vatican City in event Italy dropped her non-belligerency.

Bombing of Vatican City—slightly less than 109 acres at the edge of Rome—is considered highly improbable in ecclesiastical circles, even if Rome itself is bombed.

But scrupulous concern for safety of the city's inhabitants, numbering about 1,000, caused building of shelters, since it might be difficult for bombers to distinguish the papal city, particularly at night during blackouts.

Two immense shelters, one for ecclesiastical inhabitants and the other for laity, were prepared. About half the population is ecclesiastical.

Shelter In Basement

The shelter for the ecclesiastics is in the basement of a six-story residence for priests, the floors of which would be expected to break the fall of bombs.

The shelter for laymen is in a Renaissance tower built by Pope Nicholas V. Its stone walls are thirty feet thick. The tower, nearly 500 years old, is a veritable fortress.

The ground floor, eighty feet in diameter, serves as the shelter. Above, there is a steel-reinforced throne room where the Vatican funds are kept.

Provisions to seal the shelter against gas attack and install air conditioning are being made.

Once Housed Guard

The tower once housed the Vatican's military guard and has been used to store benches and wooden barriers needed for ceremonies at St. Peter's.

The Pope's shelter is under the courtyard of the holy office. It could be reached by elevator from his third-floor apartment in the papal palace with only a few yards to walk.

The refuge was built despite the fact that the Pontiff told intimates he would not use it.

The Vatican library is prepared to keep precious books and art treasures in a steel-armored room on the ground floor of a wing off Belvedere courtyard.

Experts say nothing can be done to protect the Sistine and Pauline chapels with their famous Michelangelo frescoes; the Vatican museum, picture gallery and St. Peter's.

VATICAN OFFERS REFUGE TO ENVOYS IF ITALY JOINS WAR

Proffer of Living Quarters Is Made to Diplomats Sent to Holy See.

VATICAN CITY, May 25 (A. P.).—Cardinal Maglione, the Papal Secretary of State, today offered quarters in the Vatican City to diplomats accredited to the Holy See who thought their countries might become involved in war with Italy. The diplomats ordinarily live outside the Vatican City, in Rome or its environs.

Cardinal Maglione asked them by letter to advise him whether they would return to their native lands or accept the proferred residence here. Only the chiefs of diplomatic missions and the secretary of each would be permitted to stay in the Vatican, the letter said.

Corsican Sees 'Redemption' Near.

ROME, May 25 (A. P.).—Petru Giovacchini, chief of Corsica's Irredentists, issued a manifesto today to "Corsican brothers living under oppression" in that French insular department, saying, "the moment of redemption is near."

Irredentists—a term generally applied to minority groups eager for return of themselves and their territory to the mother country—were originally an Italian party formed about 1878 to secure incorporation into Italy of region Italian in speech and race, but subject to other governments.

As far as Corsica is concerned, the Irredentist movement is based on the claim that the island, fourth largest in the Mediterranean, is rightfully Italy's geographically, historically and linguistically. The population is about 323,000.

Italy Geared for War.

Geared for war, her entire resources subject to conscription under a new civil mobilization order, Italy is ready today for Premier Mussolini to press the button that could plunge her into the European conflict as an ally of Germany.

Among the ominous indications, topped by passage of the civil mobilization decree were:

1. Reports that additional classes of army and naval reserves had been called to the colors.
2. Postponement of the sailings of three big trans-Atlantic liners—which might possibly serve as troop transports.
3. Intensified blackout preparations.
4. Rumors that Il Duce had rejected Allied concessions—including relaxation of the Mediterranean blockade — offered in the hope of keeping Italy on the sidelines.
5. Increasingly bitter press attacks on the Allies and new anti-Allied street demonstrations.

Many foreigners, including English residents, quietly prepared to leave the country. Those who had booked passage on Italian vessels now tied to their docks hastened to book passage on American vessels.

The new civil mobilization decree was hastily rushed through the Senate last night, a full week ahead of schedule.

Complaints about the treatment of Italians in French Morocco were published in the Italian press.

The three transatlantic liners whose departures were postponed were the Rex, Augustus and Neptunia. New dates for sailings were set, and officials said the postponements were merely a matter of routine, but the action was regarded in foreign circles as highly significant.

The Rex and Augustus, originally scheduled to have sailed from Genoa and Trieste on May 29 and May 27, respectively, now are booked for departure June 6.

The Neptunia, which was to have left Genoa June 1 for South America, is listed to go June 21 instead.

Nazi 'Chutist Tactics In Holland Revealed

[Two of the prime factors which brought about the abrupt capitulation of the Dutch Army were the operations of German parachute troops and the Nazi forces' ability to bring reinforcements from the south to troops landed in Rotterdam on the first day of the invasion. In the following dispatch from the Netherlands, Lynn Heinzerling, a member of the Associated Press' Berlin staff, tells for the first time how these two factors dove-tailed—how the parachute troops held the important Dutch bridges over which the reinforcements had to come.]

By Lynn Heinzerling

Utrecht, the Netherlands, May 25 (AP)—The pioneer parachute troops are the romantic mystery men of the German Army, especially since they caused such havoc in Holland, and they also are silent men.

Especially are they reluctant to talk about the weapons they carry on their descents from the sky.

I talked to three of a group which dropped down and held two tremendous bridges—at Moerdijk over Hollandisch Diep and south of Dordrecht—and while they seemed fond of their jobs, they were quiet about their methods.

Held Bridges Three Days

The parachutists seized control of the bridges from the Dutch, they said, and held them against all attacks for three days and nights until land troops reached them.

"We flew over high," said one who had received the Iron Cross for his exploit. "We jumped from a low altitude—we wouldn't be in the air so long—probably about 300 meters. There was a bad wind and some of the boys landed in the river."

Dug Into Shallow Holes

The trooper, a short, freckled lad of about 22 from Hanover, said they immediately dug into shallow holes around the bridge and resisted all efforts to dislodge them. Their object was to prevent the Dutch from blowing up two bridges each about a mile long—one a railroad bridge and the other on a highway.

He and his two companions, obviously proud of their success, declined to say what weapons they used or whether they relied wholly on the light machine guns which were dropped in separate 'chutes.

Bombed By British Planes

The Hanover boy said two British planes bombed them. Craters in the soft earth around the bridge showed where the bombs had fallen. One day, he added, three British ships came up the river with troops, but were sunk before they reached the bridge—how, was not explained.

The sky troops landed on the first day of the invasion and they boasted that by noon they had taken all bunkers occupied by the Dutch near the bridge. Artillery fire then was directed upon them.

Thirteen Fresh Graves

A little distance from the Moerdijk bridge, a small group of men in civilian clothes was clustered around thirteen fresh graves marked with wooden crosses. Dutch helmets lay on each grave.

Two German soldiers walked up. They took off their caps, stood silently for a minute, then walked away after one of the onlookers whispered to them.

A little man with a shovel was there too. He was not digging a new grave. He was taking home the body of his son.

tion rained from the skies and thousands of soldiers swept over the flat countryside. For five days the Dutch army fought, while the populace shuddered and jumped nervously as the wail of air raid sirens recurrently broke on the air.

Today, except in a few places like Rotterdam, where the full force of the war struck, people were going about their business as usual. The streets were filled with the customary crowds—people strolling, chatting, sunning themselves as they sipped drinks on the terraces of cafes.

Theaters and bars are open.

There are many reminders of war, but one is impressed by the relaxation of tension which had been felt in varying degrees for many months before Germany struck.

The blackout still is in effect in all cities. However, the Germans have pushed the clocks ahead an hour and forty minutes to conform with Berlin summer time and this means daylight until 10:30 P. M.

Numerous German soldiers are seen on the streets and in restaurants, but Dutch soldiers, permitted to go about freely, are more in evidence. Frequently they are seen exchanging salutes or walking with the Germans.

Warplanes which fly overhead now excite only mild curiosity.

Fewer guards are on the streets than before the war. No disorders have been reported since the hostilities ceased.

Demobilization of the Dutch army is expected soon.

The German military command is the supreme authority in Holland. However, local governments are permitted to function in collaboration with the Germans.

The Dutch penal law still is in force, except in special cases punishable by German law, such as violence against German soldiers, which is punishable by death.

All citizens are required to turn in firearms.

Sabotage is penalized heavily, particularly damage to agricultural products which comprise valuable booty for the Nazis.

Blackout Still Effective, But Germans Move Clocks Ahead

By MAX HARRELSON

Amsterdam, May 25—So far as possible in a country which endured five days of punishing warfare, Holland is recovering from the immediate effects of the war.

In another light she is perhaps closer to normal than any other country in Europe.

The Germans came suddenly and swiftly, more than two weeks ago, and for five days the Dutch fought and the populace shuddered and prayed.

Today, save in a few places like Rotterdam, where the greatest force of the war struck, the country outwardly has returned to normal. The customary crowds fill the streets—strolling in the pleasant sunshine or sitting in front of cafes sipping drinks. Theaters and bars are open.

Nazis Move Clocks Ahead

The blackout still is effective, but the Germans moved the clocks ahead an hour and forty minutes to conform with Berlin summer time and the day now lasts until 10.30 P. M.

Walking in the streets or sitting in restaurants are numerous German soldiers. Dutch soldiers, too, move freely about and frequently are seen saluting their recent foes or fraternizing with them.

But the impressive thing is the end of the long wait, so that warplanes flying overhead now excite only the mildest curiosity.

No Disorders Reported

No disorders have been reported since the war ended abruptly, and yet there are fewer guards on the streets. The German military is the supreme authority, although local governments still function in collaboration with the Nazis.

When the Dutch phase of the war ended, all citizens were ordered to turn in firearms. They were warned against sabotage, particularly to agricultural crops, highy valuable booty to the conquerors. Generally, however, the Dutch penal law is in force, save in special cases, such as violence against German citizens—an act punishable by death.

There are penalties also for persons detected listening to non-German broadcasts or who circulate reports from such broadcasts. The Dutch radio now operates under German supervision.

Carry News DNB Furnishes

Dutch newspapers still publish, but they carry mostly foreign news provided by DNB, official German news agency.

Some restrictions have been placed on purchases, but so far no food or clothing cards have been issued. Purchases of soap and shoes are limited.

Private automobiles are banned, and while there have been no official measures taken against Jews, many business firms have discharged all Jewish employes—either on their own accord or on instructions. Some Jews still operate shops and Jewish suicides, which followed capitulation, appear to have stopped.

Communist Paper Says Battle Is Hidden By "Screen Of Friendship"

Moscow, May 25 (AP)—The newspaper Pravda, organ of the Communist party, declared today that behind "a screen of friendship" a bitter rivalry for world trade markets is under way between Great Britain and the United States.

Pravda mentioned United States gains in Latin-American trade since Britain declared war. Discussing the possibility of America entering the war, Pravda said the United States lacked trained army and naval reserves.

Despite its wealth of raw materials, the paper continued, the United States must import rubber, lead, nickel and other materials; therefore the Netherlands' East Indies are "objects of platonic longings of the United States."

Out For Foes Of Trotsky

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, May 25—Police, under direct orders of President Cardenas, tried today to pick up the trail of the men who tried to kill Leon Trotsky, while conservative politicians declared the attack was "conclusive" proof of a Nazi-Communist "fifth column" in Mexico.

MAY 26 1940

Some Federal deputies said they feared that the pre-dawn raid yesterday by more than twenty machine-gunners, riflemen, incendiarists and kidnappers might have been the prelude to a "reign of terror."

A Communist leader called it "a plot of reactionary domestic and foreign interests to discredit Mexico."

Escaped By Ruse

Trotsky, who escaped by feigning death—although only scratched by shattered glass and flying splinters in the midst of a machine-gun crossfire into his bedroom—had charged that "Joseph Stalin was directly responsible."

The attempted assassination turned into a kidnapping when the gunmen and incendiary bomb throwers fled, apparently believing they had killed the one-time War Commissar of Soviet Russia. They took with them one of Trotsky's secretary-bodyguards, Weldon Harte, 25, of New York.

His fate is not known and his father, Jesse Harte, was reported en route from New York to Mexico City by plane.

Examination of Trotsky's bomb-torn garden and bullet-peppered bedroom, where he and his wife huddled on the floor to escape death, was said to have produced no tangible clue to the identity of the raiders.

MAY 28 1940

New York, ... 25 (AP)—At least half a million German soldiers have been "lost" during the last ten days, a German-language short-wave broadcast from London said today. The announcer, heard here by NBC, said the estimate was made in Paris. The broadcast said authoritative English circles claim that the German division from Frankfort-on-the-Oder, which recently effected the various attacks on the Aisne, had been repulsed with the loss of half the men.

Italian Liner Leaves N. Y. For Naples

New York, May 25 (AP)—The Italian liner Conte di Savoia sailed on schedule at noon today for Genoa and Naples with 160 passengers. Her next scheduled westbound voyage has been postponed to June 24 from June 12. The Rex, whose next trip to this country also was postponed, is scheduled to sail on June 12 instead.

Refugees in Open Boats Cross English Channel

Norman Davis Reports Plight of Fleeing Throngs

WASHINGTON, May 25 (AP).—Reports that some refugees from the battle zone were crossing the turbulent English Channel in open boats were received today by Red Cross headquarters.

Norman H. Davis, national chairman, said that the refugees were reaching the English coast "in most pitiable condition," having "in many instances arrived in small open boats after harrowing trips across the Channel."

The Red Cross cabled $100,000 to the British organization today, Mr. Davis said, to aid in caring for the "great numbers" of Dutch and Belgian refugees arriving in England.

Hospital Unit Going To Front

Glen Ridge, N. J., May 25 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Fishwick said today they had received word from their son, Dr. Dwight B. Fishwick, that the American-Scandinavian field hospital unit led by him would soon leave Sweden for the Western front to assist the Allies.

America, Biggest Merchant Ship, Nearly Finished, But Has No Place To Go

New York, May 25 (AP)—The $17,000,000 liner America, the biggest merchant ship ever built in this country, may be laid up before her maiden voyage because of war developments.

The symbol of a projected American merchant marine "comeback," now in the final stages of outfitting at Newport News, Va., was planned originally for the transatlantic service to England and France, but the Neutrality Act precluded that.

Then her projected run was shifted to Italy, but yesterday the postponement of the liner Rex's next scheduled sailing indicated that imminent in-

NEW YORK, MAY 25-(AP)-THE UNITED STATES LINER PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT POINTED HER NOSE TOWARD IRELAND TODAY ON A WAR-TIME ERRAND OF STATE, AFTER A TWO-HOUR DELAY WHILE FEDERAL AGENTS CAREFULLY CHECKED EACH OFFICER AND CREWMAN.

MAY 26 1940

UNDER SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS FROM THE STATE DEPARTMENT, WHICH AUTHORIZED THE TRIP THROUGH WATERS NORMALLY CLOSED TO AMERICAN SHIPS UNDER THE NEUTRALITY ACT, THE 13,869-TON VESSEL WAS EQUIPPED TO BRING HOME UP TO 1,100 AMERICAN NATIONALS FROM GALWAY, IRELAND.

HER SIDES WERE EMBLAZONED WITH PAINTED AMERICAN FLAGS, LIGHTED BY GLARING SEARCHLIGHTS AT NIGHT; SHE WAS INSTRUCTED, TOO, TO RUN BRIGHTLY LIGHTED THROUGH DARKNESS. BELLIGERENT NATIONS WERE ADVISED OF HER MISSION.

FBI MEN QUESTIONED AND CHECKED THE 255 CREW MWMBERS EVEN AS THE SHIP PROCEEDED DOWN THE BAY YESTERDAY, LEAVING HER JUST AS SHE PUT TO SEA. A SPOKESMAN SAID THIS WAS DONE TO "MAKE SURE EVERY ONE ON BOARD WAS A BONA FIDE AMERICAN SEAMAN." THE LINER CARRIED NO MAIL OR CARGO AND WAS A "CLEAR" SHIP SO FAR AS WARRING POWERS MIGHT BE CONCERNED.

THE RAIDS WERE AGAINST PERSONS SUSPECTED OF BEING LEADERS, ORGANIZER EMBERS OF THE NATIONAL UNITY PARTY, CANADIAN FASCIST ORGANIZ.

EIGHT HOMES WERE RAIDED, AND LITERATURE WAS SEIZED IN ABOUT HALF OF THEM. ON THE PREVIOUS NIGHT 13 HOMES AND OFFICES WERE SIMILARLY RAIDED.

SEVEN HUNDRED AMERICANS APPLIED FOR VISAS AND EXIT PERMITS TO IRELAND FROM LONDON, EMBASSY OFFICIALS REPORTED. IT WAS EXPECTED HALF OF THE 5,400 AMERICANS IN THE BRITISH ISLES WOULD SEEK TO LEAVE FOR HOME, THESE OFFICIALS ADDED.

ALIEN REGISTRY BILL IN SENATE

MAY 26 1940

Measure Now Requires All to Be Fingerprinted.

MUST REPORT AT POST OFFICES

Georgia Is Revoking Foreigners' Business Licenses June 1.

WASHINGTON, May 25 (A. P.). Legislation requiring registration and fingerprinting of all aliens in the United States was approved today by a Senate judiciary sub-committee.

Senator Connally of Texas said the requirement was added to a comprehensive bill already passed by the House and designed to protect our armed forces from subversive activities and our people from fifth columns or similar groups.

Senator Danaher of Connecticut, Republican member of the sub-committee, said the broad bill was a necessary part of the general national defense program.

The House bill merely provided for fingerprinting of all immigrants entering or visiting the United States, but Senators agreed to expand this to require registration and fingerprinting of all aliens already in this country at post offices.

Another section of the legislation would fix penalties of ten years in prison and $10,000 fine for any subversive attempts upon the armed forces of the United States.

The bill also tightens up numerous provisions for deportation of aliens.

Governor Issues Order.

ATLANTA, May 25 (A. P.).—In an unprecedented move aimed at fifth columnists, Gov. E. D. Rivers directed today that the business, occupational and professional licenses of all Georgia aliens be canceled on June 1.

In giving oral instruction to Revenue Commissioner T. Grady Head to revoke the licenses, the Governor made no mention of any exceptions, but after a conference with Head he announced aliens who had applied for citizenship by June 1 would be exempted.

The Revenue Department was unable to say at once how many persons would be affected, or to estimate the value of the businesses involved. Georgia does not have as large an alien population as many Northern States, but unofficial guesses were that at least several hundred persons would lose their licenses.

The Governor said he was relying largely on the broad powers given the Revenue Commissioner under the licensing laws to make his instructions effective. He added that as far as he knew no such action ever had been taken by the government of a State before.

This step was the most drastic of several taken by Gov. Rivers this week. Included in these was a proclamation requesting that all aliens register with police units and be fingerprinted. This proclamation brought a threat of court action from the American Civil Liberties Union.

The licenses affected by the order are the usual State licenses required of most business and professional men and some types of workmen. In the past the fact that a license applicant was an alien had no bearing, per se, on his application.

In rallying State forces against possible saboteurs and spies, Gov. Rivers has made frequent use of the much-employed term "fifth columnists' and he did so again today in discussing his order with reporters.

Counter-spy Drive Here.

More than 12,000 property owners, renting agents, tenants and even janitors will institute a counter-espionage system against fifth columnists in this city as a result of a resolution unanimously passed today by the executive committee of the Taxpayers Union of the City of New York, 300 East Eighty-ninth street.

"The resolution, offered by Robert Raff, an executive director of the union, provides that we shall notify all our members to inform us of any unusual activities, secret meetings or suspicious gatherings in any of our buildings," said Joseph Goldsmith, president of the organization. "We shall inform the FBI of any such activities immediately."

"These spies must be somewhere," Mr. Goldsmith added, 'and if we watch for them we can drive them out of their holes. I think that this movement will be taken up by other groups of taxpayers and property owners, and soon this country will be a very dangerous place for such subversive elements."

Mr. Goldsmith said that members of his organization and their friends would watch for any suspicious late meetings or suspicious actions of any kind in stores, cellars or private apartments. Members who see or hear of such activities should report them to the union headquarters and the information will be relayed at once to the FBI.

The Dissenter

WASHINGTON, May 25 (UP). —Rep. Marcantonio (A.-L., N. Y.), the only member of the House to vote against the bill to lift all restrictions on the number of airplanes the army may acquire, said he felt the measure was "similar to the preparation of 1916—step toward launching us into a war we should keep out of."

"We are adequately prepared for a defensive war," he said. "This is preparation for an offensive war. I am ready to fight for my country in the event of an invasion but not for an offensive war in which we have no business."

The bill passed 381 to 1.

MAY 26 1940

WASHINGTON, MAY 25-(AP)-ROUSED BY SUCCESSIVE RUMORS THAT "FIFTH COLUMNS" ARE FORMING IN THE AMERICAS, CONGRESSIONAL LEADERS PREDICTED TODAY THAT LEGISLATION TO REPEL ANY BACK-DOOR INVADERS WOULD BE HASTENED INTO LAW BEFORE ADJOURNMENT.

AS FAST AND THICK AS THE "FIFTH COLUMN" REPORTS, CAME NEW PROPOSALS FOR ANTI-SUBVERSION LEGISLATION, WHILE OTHERS THAT HAD BEEN STALLED ON THE ROAD TO ENACTMENT PICKED UP MOMENTUM AGAIN.

IN THE SENATE--

A JUDICIARY SUBCOMMITTEE STARTED HEARINGS TODAY ON HOUSE-APPROVED LEGISLATION TO OUTLAW EFFORTS TO TAMPER WITH MILITARY DISCIPLINE, TO REQUIRE DEPORTATION OF LAW-BREAKING ALIENS, AND TO REQUIRE FINGERPRINTING OF ALL INCOMING ALIEN.

THE IMMIGRATION COMMITTEE APPROVED A HOUSE BILL TO REQUIRE THE DEPORTATION OF ALIENS WHO ADVOCATE CHANGES IN THE AMERICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

A SENATE INVESTIGATION OF SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES WHICH AFFECT THE NATIONAL DEFENSE WAS PROPOSED BY SENATOR REYNOLDS (D-NC), WHO ALSO SUBMITTED A RESOLUTION CALLING ON ALL GOVERNMENT AGENCIES TO REPORT TO THE SENATE ON ALIENS THEY EMPLOY.

SENATOR STEWART (D-TENN) PROPOSED A "PERMANENT ALIEN REGISTRATION COMMISSION".

CHAIRMAN SHEPPARD (D-TEX) SAID THE SENATE MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE WOULD HOLD HEARINGS SOON ON LEGISLATION TO SET UP A "NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL DEFENSE CORPS" OF PRIVATE CITIZENS WHO WOULD COOPERATE WITH THE GOVERNMENT IN LOCATING "FIFTH COLUMNISTS."

IN THE HOUSE--

A BILL CONTAINING AUTHORITY FOR THE SECRETARY OF WAR TO PURGE

30.24-2511

30.24-2511

THE ARMY'S CIVILIAN PERSONNEL OF "FIFTH COLUMN" SUSPECTS REGARDLESS OF CIVIL SERVICE RESTRICTIONS WAS PASSED YESTERDAY AND SENT TO THE SENATE.

THE COMMITTEE ON UNAMERICAN ACTIVITIES REQUESTED ANOTHER $100,000 TO INVESTIGATE LEADS WHICH, CHAIRMAN DIES (D-TEX) SAID, "ARE COMING IN FASTER THAN WE CAN HANDLE THEM."

DIES SAID THE COMMITTEE WAS TRYING TO CONFIRM REPORTS THAT GERMANS HAVE DIRECTED THE ESTABLISHMENT OF CAMOUFLAGED AIR BASES JUST SOUTH OF THE RIO GRANDE.

MAY 26 1940

ON THE OTHER HAND, DIES SAID HE HAD VERIFIED REPORTS THAT COMMUNISTS AND GERMANS--MANY OF THEM NAZIS WITH MILITARY TRAINING--HAVE BEEN STREAMING INTO MEXICO IN AN EFFORT TO ESTABLISH MEXICAN PROPAGANDA BASES, SOME GOING FROM THE UNITED STATES.

WHILE DIES SAID THE REPORTS WERE "HARD FOR ME TO BELIEVE," FOREIGN MILITARY OBSERVERS IN MEXICO CITY DECLARED THAT NO SUCH HIDDEN AIR FIELDS EXISTED BELOW THE BORDER. ONE OFFICER SAID HE HAD MADE FREQUENT SURVEY FLIGHTS OVER NORTHERN MEXICO AND HAD FOUND NO SUITABLE LANDING AREA FOR MODERN PLANES.

President Plans Arms Council

He Will Name Emergency Co-ordination Group to Expedite Defense.

WASHINGTON, May 25 (A. P.).—The White House announced today that President Roosevelt is planning to name a national defense emergency co-ordination group composed of both private individuals and governmental officials. Stephen Early, press secretary, said that the plan was in the preparedness stage and that the President had not yet decided on the men who will be brought in to represent industry, finance, agriculture, transportation, communications, labor and consumers.

Asked about the President's plans, Mr. Early said:

"The President told me this morning to tell you that he at present has a plan for a national defense emergency co-ordination group, which group, as he has previously told you, will be composed of officials now in the Government and experts outside the Government.

"The latter will be invited to come in, not to supersede any one in the Government, but to work with them.

"The plan at present is not definite. The President knows the manner in which he wants to approach the problem, but he has not decided the details or the names or titles."

Topic for Speech.

With the revelation that the plans were under study and so near completion as to warrant official disclosing, there was immediate speculation as to whether the co-ordination program might not provide one of the main topics of the President's radio address to the nation tomorrow night. Mr. Roosevelt kept his calendar for today and tomorrow clear of appointments so that he would have full time to prepare the speech, which the White House said earlier would be a "factual" report on defense.

Another aspect of the defense program was pressed toward the operations stage at a conference on civilian pilot training among Col. Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher and sponsor of "Plattsburgs of the Air," and military officers and leaders in the aircraft industry. The conference was called to develop plans discussed by Col. Knox and Mr. Roosevelt earlier this week and described by the President yesterday as designed to give primary pilot training to 50,000 persons a year.

The plan which the President is considering, Mr. Early said, will be flexible "and at all times very elastic."

Flexible Plans.

"The President is being very careful to have the plan flexible," he added, "so that it may be exercised effectively in the light of very rapidly changing conditions.

"For example, it is his present intention to call into the Government experts in transportation, communication, finance, industry, agriculture and labor, and consumers, so that all groups that go to make up the pattern of American life will be represented."

The President is particularly anxious to avoid "any upsetting of American life," the press secretary declared.

In other words, he continued, the President does not want the price level to soar, desires to give producers a reasonable profit and opposes "unreasonably high prices for foodstuffs and other necessities of life."

Housing Problem.

The housing problem also enters the picture, Mr. Early said, since Mr. Roosevelt wants to "prevent so far as possible the highs and lows that prevailed during the world war from occurring again."

By bringing in leaders from the various economic fields, the President expects, Mr. Early said, to develop a "co-ordination of Government and American life as a whole and as it divides itself through representatives he desires to select from particular fields."

Various people in and out of the Government are studying the question for him, the Secretary added, and the study itself has to be well co-ordinated. Many suggestions also were reported to be arriving in the mails and by telegraph.

Col. Knox Is Busy.

At the aviation conference Col. Knox was empowered to appoint a committee to confer with the "army, navy, air corps and other governmental departments to determine how best to co-ordinate, from the civilian point of view, support of the President's program for national defense."

Col. Knox appointed Gen. Malin Craig, retired, former Army Chief of Staff, to be chairman of the special committee. He also named these members: Major-Gen. Frank R. McCoy, retired; Col. William J. Donovan, New York lawyer, and Lewis Douglas, former Director of the Budget. The committee will begin its conferences as soon as possible, Col. Knox said.

He declined to discuss what steps would be taken toward pilot training, explaining that "whatever he [Mr. Roosevelt] wants, we are going to help him get."

Col. Knox said that he was "simply overwhelmed" by the response to his original announcement of an "air Plattsburg." Asked if help had been offered from all political parties, he said that "this has nothing to do with parties; it is just straight Americanism."

Organizations represented at the conference included the Citizens' Military Training Camp Association, Air Reserve Association, National Aeronautical Association, Gliders Association of America, Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, Air Youth of America, Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce and the Soaring Society of America.

MAY 28 1940

WASHINGTON, MAY 25--SURVEYS OF AMERICA'S POTENTIAL DEFENSE MATERIAL FIND IN THE CIVILIAN CONSERVATION CORPS 2,400,000 MEN, TWO THIRDS TRAINED, AND 50,000 PIECES OF AUTOMOTIVE EQUIPMENT.

STUDENTS OF CCC WORK DURING THE LAST SEVEN YEARS SAY THAT IT HAS TURNED OUT 2,100,000 AND NOW HAS 300,000 MEN WHO HAVE EXPERIENCED, UNDER ARMY OFFICERS, EVERY IMPORTANT PHASE OF MILITARY TRAINING EXCEPT DRILL IN THE MANUAL OF ARMS AND TARGET PRACTICE.

THEY HAVE TAKEN THE OATH AND BEEN TAUGHT THE DUTIES OF THE CITIZEN. THEY HAVE LEARNED MILITARY DISCIPLINE AND COURTESY. THEY UNDERSTAND CAMP RULES AND REGIMENTED LIVING, WITH REGULAR PERIODS FOR MESS, SLEEP, DRILL, STUDY, TRAINING AND PLAY. THEY HAVE BEEN TAUGHT THE CARE OF EQUIPMENT, CLOTHES, QUARTERS, GROUNDS, PERSONAL HYGIENE, SANITATION AND FIRST AID.

ONE MEMORANDUM, SURVEYING THE POSSIBILITIES OF ADAPTING THE CCC ENROLLEES TO NATIONAL DEFENSE NEEDS, SAYS:

MAY 26 1940

"IF MILITARY TRAINING IS TO BE GIVEN THE CCC, IT SHOULD BE TIED INTO THE DAILY FIELD WORK AS MUCH IF NOT MORE THAN THAT OF THE CAMP. THIS IS BECAUSE BY AND LARGE MOST OF THE DAILY CONSERVATION WORK OF THE CORPS IS ESSENTIALLY THE TYPE OF WORK DONE BY ARMY ENGINEER TROOPS.

"IF MILITARY T

AINING FOR THE CCC IS ADOPTED, IT SHOULD BE WITH THE AIM OF TRAINING THE ENROLLEES FOR MILITARY ENGINEERING WORK; THUS WOULD THE ENROLLEES BE ABLE TO MAKE THEIR GREATEST CONTRIBUTION TO NATIONAL DEFENSE. SUCH PRE-TRAINED ENROLLEES WOULD FIT INTO ARMY BATTALIONS OF SANITARY, ROAD AND FORESTRY ENGINEER TROOPS."

THIS MEMORANDUM POINTS OUT THAT THE TYPE OF WORK CCC MEN HAVE BEEN DOING EQUIPS THEM PARTICULARLY FOR THE SERVICE AN ENGINEER CORPS RENDERS, BUILDING BRIDGES, ROADS, TELEPHONE LINES.

ODDLY ENOUGH, WHERE ANY MENTION OF THE POSSIBILITY OF USING OR CONVERTING THE CCC INTO AN ARMY TRAINING UNIT WOULD AROUSE SHARP PROTESTS A YEAR OR SO AGO, OFFICIALS NOW SPEAK OPENLY OF ITS POSSIBILITIES. ONE OFFICIAL WHO MENTIONED SUCH A POSSIBILITY ABOVE A WHISPER A YEAR OR SO AGO DREW A SHARP REPRIMAND.

EVEN NOW, IT IS SPOKEN OF ONLY AS A POTENTIAL UNIT FROM WHICH TO DRAW PARTIALLY TRAINED MAN POWER. NO DIRECT AND IMMEDIATE CONVERSION OF THE CCC INTO A MILITARY UNIT IS SPOKEN OF. OFFICIALS SIMPLY SPEAK OF THE POSSIBILITIES HELD BY THE CORPS AND OF THE USE THAT MIGHT BE MADE OF IT IN A NATIONAL EMERGENCY.

AND, JUST AS THEIR FIGURES OF POTENTIAL MAN-POWER TO BE DRAWN FROM THE CCC INCLUDE ALL PAST ENROLLEES, AS WELL AS THOSE NOW ENROLLED, SO DO THEY THINK OF HOW THOSE TWO MILLION MEN WHO HAVE NOW PASSED ON INTO CIVILIAN LIFE MIGHT BE MUSTERED BACK, VOLUNTARILY THROUGH THE TIES THAT WERE ENGENDERED DURING THEIR CCC TRAINING.

THE WAR EMERGENCY HAS NOT WIPED OUT THE LIKELIHOOD THAT THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM COMMITTEE, WHEN IT MEETS NEXT MONTH IN PHILADELPHIA, WILL HAVE A REAL DISPUTE ON ITS HANDS, THOUGH THE FOUNDATION FOR THE ARGUMENT MAY BE CHANGED.

MAY 26 1940

ONE SURE SIGN OF THE FORTHCOMING BATTLE IS THE FACT THAT ALF M. LANDON OF KANSAS IS SAID BY STAUNCH REPUBLICANS WITH WHOM HE CONFERRED WHILE IN WASHINGTON THIS WEEK TO BE DETERMINED NOT TO BE PUSHED INTO THE CHAIRMANSHIP OF THE RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE.

30.24-2513

THIS MAY BE TAKEN AS A CERTAIN INDICATION THAT LANDON DESIRES TO HOLD HIMSELF FREE TO FIGHT FOR HIS IDEA OF A LIBERAL PLATFORM. IF HE WERE CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE, HIS HANDS WOULD BE TIED TO THE GAVEL. HIS MOUTH WOULD BE STUFFED WITH DECISIONS. HE COULD NOT SPEAK HIS OWN VIEWS.

A89WX

BUT, SO RAPIDLY AND SO OFTEN DOES THE SITUATION CHANGE WITH THE CABLES FROM ABROAD, THAT THE FIGHT WHICH COMES IN PHILADELPHIA IN MID-JUNE MAY NOT BE OVER THE CHARACTER OF THE PLATFORM.

IT MAY BE OVER THE MEASURE OF ISOLATION THAT AMERICA SHALL PRACTICE. OR OVER ANY ONE OF A HALF DOZEN PROBLEMS THAT CAN ARISE OUT OF THE WAR AND ITS OUTCOME.

WASHINGTON, MAY 25-(AP)-UNCLE SAM HAS BEEN OFFERED A LOT OF NOVEL DEFENSE SUGGESTIONS SINCE "TOTAL" WAR STRUCK EUROPE.

HERE ARE A FEW OF THE IDEAS RECOMMENDED TO THE SENATE MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE:

MAY 26 1940

A MACHINE TO SPRAY THE ENEMY WITH LIQUID CEMENT, WHICH WOULD HARDEN, IMMOBILIZING THE TROOPS.

A PARACHUTE BOMB TO BE SHOT INTO THE MIDST ATTACKING PLANES. THE HOVERING PLANES WOULD COLLIDE WITH THE BOMBS, DETONATING THEM, THUS CAUSING "HORRIBLE SLAUGHTER TO THE ATTACKER."

A "MAGIC GREASE" WHICH, WHEN POURED DOWN A CANNON BARREL, WOULI INCREASE VELOCITY AND RANGE 20 TIMES.

Cities Offer U. S. Sites In Defense Program

Vie for Arms and Plane Plants and Military Posts

WASHINGTON, May 25 (AP).—Scores of cities and towns are already vying for the arms and airplane plants, air training centers and military posts contemplated in the Administration's vast preparedness program.

Ultimate decisions on locations are expected to be made either by the Treasury or the prospective new council of national defense. In the World War such decisions were in the hands of the War Industries Board.

Delegations and individuals seeking munitions plants have been referred to Maj. Leo J. Dillon, of the Army's Ordnance Department, and those interested in aircraft plants or aviation training facilties to Maj. M. R. Wood, of the Army Air Corps.

Mass Meeting Calls On Congress To Lift Neutrality Laws

MAY 26 1940

Two Students Shouted Down, Dragged Out By Police

[By the Associated Press]

Louisville, May 25 — A group of "pro-Allies" Louisville citizens tonight asked Congress in a resolution to lift neutrality restrictions and give immediate aid to the Allies.

Efforts of two University of Louisville students to offer a resolution not to send an American expeditionary force to Europe "no matter if the Allies get whipped" was shouted down by the crowd and the students dragged from the meeting by police.

They were released after being questioned.

The Louisville War Memorial Auditorium, which seats 2,300 persons, was filled and police said several hundred persons were turned away.

W. B. Belknap Speaker

William B. Belknap, former State legislator, who acted as chairman of the meeting called by twenty-one civic and industrial leaders, told the audience he believed "you express the sentiment of a large section of the American people."

Belknap said the meeting was "not to urge anyone to go to war but to urge that we give aid to the Allies."

Lewis J. Gorin, Jr., Louisville attorney who, while a student at Princeton University in 1936, announced the formation of the "veterans of future wars" and demanded "anticipatory" bonuses immediately, addressed "the young men of America" in saying "it is up to us to make it safe for those things we hold dear."

He said events of the last few weeks had proved "a neutral nation can and will be invaded if it is not strong enough to protect itself."

"Stop Pussyfooting"

Mrs. Shackelford Miller, Sr., mother of former Mayor Neville Miller who now heads the National Association of Broadcasters, drew cheers from the crowd when she said "the time has come to stop pussyfooting."

Mrs. Miller said she was speaking as "a Kentucky woman, a mother and a grandmother and a pro-Allies," and charged that Adolf Hitler "has caused every woman in Europe to suffer."

She criticized a radio address of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and said the "hysteria sweeping this country is not war hysteria, but peace hysteria."

Mrs. Miller added that the "best chance we have of keeping out of war is to give help to the Allies."

Upstate Methodists Urge Saving Democracy Here.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., May 25 (A. P.).—The Northern New York Conference of the Methodist Church today called upon the United States to preserve democracy within its own borders and, at the same time, "remain out of the present conflicts in Europe and in the Far East." It adopted without change the report of the Committee on World Peace, identical with that of the Committee on the State of the Church, approved at the general conference at Atlantic City for May 3.

MAY 26 1940

The conference blocked an amendment which would have demanded the arrest and deportation of all aliens advocating the overthrow of the American system of government and the disbanding of all organizations "intent on breaking up the American way of living."

The delegates turned down a proposed brotherhood plan under which contributions of high-salaried ministers to aid those in lower income groups would be increased.

THE WAR HAS BROUGHT THESE WORDS INTO GENERAL USE:

BLITZKRIEG--THE TECHNIQUE OF "LIGHTNING WAR" PREFERRED BY GERMANY. PROGRESS IN TANK CONSTRUCTION AND MASSED MOTOR TRANSPORT HELPED MAKE IT POSSIBLE. USED BY ITALY IN ETHIOPIA, BUT THE WORD DID NOT GET INTO WIDE CIRCULATION UNTIL THE POLISH CAMPAIGN BY GERMANY.

PARASHOOTIST--ONE WHO ARMS. TO REPEL PARACHUTE INVADERS. GREW OUT OF THE ORGANIZATION OF VOLUNTEERS IN ENGLAND TO GUARD AGAINST GERMAN INFLUX FROM THE SKY.

STUKAS--DIVE BOMBERS. THE GERMAN STUKA BOMBER WAS USED WITH GREAT SUCCESS IN A DIVING TECHNIQUE. THE WORD IS NOW USED TO DESCRIBE ALL DIVE BOMBERS.

PANZER TROOPS--"ARMORED" SOLDIERS. A SPECIALIZED TERM THAT HAS NOW ATTAINED BROADER MEANING. NOW USED TO DESCRIBE MOTORIZED AND OTHER FAST-MOVING ARMORED TROOPS.

FIFTH COLUMN--THE LOYAL FORCE WITHIN THE ENEMY CITADEL, OR THE SPIES, TRAITORS AND ALIEN ELEMENT, DEPENDING ON VIEWPOINT. WHEN GENERAL FRANCO MARCHED ON MADRID HE HAD FOUR COLUMNS. HIS SYMPATHIZER WITHIN THE CAPITAL WERE TERMED "THE FIFTH COLUMN." SINCE THEN USE OF THE TERM HAS SPREAD. GERMANY PERFECTED THE DEVICE FOR USE IN NORWAY.

LATIN AMERICAN (AMS BUDGET)

BY ANDRUE BERDING

WASHINGTON,MAY 25-(AP)-"FIFTH COLUMN" ACTIVITIES IN LATIN AMERICA, WIDELY EXPECTED TO MULTIPLY MANY TIMES IN CASE OF A GERMAN VICTORY IN EUROPE, ARE OCCUPYING THE CLOSE ATTENTION OF OFFICIALS IN SEVERAL GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS.

THE OFFICIALS DO NOT ATTEMPT TO HIDE THEIR CONVICTION THAT IF AD HITLER WINS IN EUROPE HIS PREOCCUPATION IN THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE WIL NOT BE, AT LEAST AT FIRST, ANY DIRECT MILITARY THREAT TO THESE SHORES, BUT RATHER GERMAN POLITICAL ACTIVITIES WITHIN THE 20 LATIN AMERICAN REPUBLICS AND THE UNITED STATES.

SUCH ACTIVITIES, THEY FEEL, WILL BE AIDED BY ITALIAN FASCIST INFLUENCES IN LATIN AMERICA, JUST AS ITALY IS AIDING GERMANY IN EUROPE NOW BY DISTRACTING A CONSIDERABLE PORTION OF THE FRENCH LAND AND BRITISH SEA FORCES FROM THE MAIN FIELD OF BATTLE.

VARIOUS METHODS FOR SOLVING THE QUESTION OF GERMAN PENETRATION IN LATIN AMERICA ARE BEING ACTIVELY CONSIDERED. THEY HINGE LARGELY AROUND THE VIEW THAT THIS IS A PROBLEM FOR ALL OF PAN AMERICA, NOT MERELY THE UNITED STATES, AND THAT THE MOST EFFECTIVE RESULTS CAN BE ACHIEVED THROUGH JOINT EFFORT OF ALL THE REPUBLICS.

OFFICIALS BELIEVE THAT, TO AVOID THE FEELING THAT THE UNITED STATES IS ENGAGING IN "YANKEE IMPERIALISM" IN COMBATTING GERMAN INFLUENCE IN LATIN AMERICA, SHE SHOULD HAVE THE ASSISTANCE OF THE OTHER AMERICAN REPUBLICS. IF ANY REPUBLIC FEELS IT IS UNABLE OF ITS OWN EFFORTS TO COMBAT THE GERMAN ACTIVITIES, IT SHOULD RECEIVE A SPECIES OF PAN AMERICAN ASSISTANCE RATHER THAN UNITED STATES ASSISTANCE ALONE.

MAY 26 1940

REPORTS ARE CONSTANTLY REACHING THE CAPITAL OF ACTIVE NAZI INFLUENCE IN LATIN AMERICA. IN URUGUAY A GOVERNMENT COMMITTEE HAS JUST REPORTED THAT GERMAN PROPAGANDA IS BEING SPREAD THERE IN A HIGHLY ORGANIZED FORM. MEXICO ALSO ENGAGED THE ATTENTION OF OFFICIALS HERE AS THE RESULT OF REPORTS THAT NAZI EFFORTS ARE STIRRING UP TROUBLE THERE.

THE GERMAN INFLUENCE IN SOME LATIN AMERICAN REPUBLICS IS PARTLY BASED ON THEIR LARGE GERMAN POPULATIONS. IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO SAY NOW MANY GERMANS ARE LIVING IN LATIN AMERICA, BECAUSE IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO SAY EXACTLY WHAT IS A GERMAN--IS HE ONE WHO CAME TO THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE IN THE LAST FEW YEARS, OR ONE OF THE SECOND GENERATION, THE THIRD OR THE FOURTH?

30.24-2515

GERMAN POPULATIONS ARE STRONG IN ARGENTINA, SOUTHERN CHILE, BRAZIL, MEXICO AND GUATEMALA. PERHAPS THE TOTAL NUMBER OF GERMANS IN LATIN AMERICA IS SOMEWHERE BETWEEN 3,000,000 AND 5,000,000. THEY HAVE BEEN MUCH LESS ASSIMILATED THAN THE ITALIANS WHO, BEING LATINS, MORE CLOSELY RESEMBLE THE SPANISH AND PORTUGUESE STOCK.

PRIOR TO THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR IN SEPTEMBER SOME OF THE LATIN AMERICAN REPUBLICS HAD FASCIST OR NAZI PARTIES WHICH WERE IN FRIENDLY CORRESPONDENCE WITH, IF NOT UNDER THE DOMINATION OF, THE GERMAN NAZI OR THE ITALIAN FASCIST PARTIES. THE STATE DEPARTMENT HAS NOT FORGOTTEN THE ABORTIVE ATTEMPT OF THE INTEGRALISTAS IN BRAZIL TO TAKE POSSESSION OF THE GOVERNMENT AND SET UP A FASCIST DICTATORSHIP.

SINCE THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR THESE PARTIES HAVE DECREASED IN OPEN INFLUENCE, BUT THEIR MEMBERS STILL REMAIN. REPORTS REACHING HERE INDICATE THAT THEY ARE PROPAGATING A DEFEATIST CURRENT OF THOUGHT TO CONVINCE THE LOCAL POPULATIONS THAT A GERMAN VICTORY IS INEVITABLE AND AN ALLIED COLLAPSE AND BREAKUP CERTAIN.

THE FRENCH RUSHED UP THEIR FAMOUS FAST-FIRING 75'S IN A FURIOUS ASSAULT ON THE BOTTLENECK OF THE SALIENT TO THE SEA-- THE NARROW LINK BETWEEN PERRONE AND CAMBRAI. THEY DENTED THE LINE, THEN CLAIMED TO HAVE SQUEEZED IT DOWN TO A BARE 20 MILES.

SURPRISES EXPECTED IF WEYGANG'S

"MYSTERY" ARMY GOES

INTO WAR

MAY 26 1940

--

MAKES RAPID PROGRESS WITH ARMY OF WHITES, BROWNS AND BLACKS

--

BELIEVED HE WILL GO INTO ACTION

IF WAR SPREADS TO BALKANS (1000)

--

BY EDWARD KENNEDY

(ADVANCE) BEIRUT, (CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-IF GENERAL MAXIME WEYGAND'S NEAR EASTERN ARMY GOES INTO ACTION--AND ALMOST EVERYONE HERE BELIEVES IT WILL BEFORE THE WAR IS OVER--THE WORLD MAY SEE SOMETHING NEW IN THE WAY OF A FIGHTING MACHINE.

ITS BAPTISM UNDER FIRE WILL TEST THE WORK OF A 73-YEAR-OLD VETERAN ARMY ORGANIZER WHO SOME PEOPLE BELIEVE MAY PROVE THE FOREMOST MILITARY GENIUS OF THIS WAR.

HIS IS A "MYSTERY" ARMY BECAUSE IT IS DIFFICULT TO KNOW WHAT IT CONTAINS. THE ARMY IS A WHITE, BROWN AND BLACK ONE. THE MEN RANGE

FROM GERMANIC BLONDES OF THE FOREIGN LEGION TO THE EBONY-SKINNED GIANTS OF THE SENEGALESE TROOPS. ALGERIANS, MADAGASCANS AND MOROCCANS OFFER ALMOST AS MANY SHADES OF BROWN AS THERE ARE DIFFERENT UNIFORMS. THERE ARE ALSO MANY FRENCH, BUT THE PROPORTION OF EACH IS LIKEWISE A SECRET.

IF WAR SPREADS TO THE BALKANS, THE ARMY UNDOUBTEDLY WILL BE THROWN INTO ACTION THERE, AND IT IS ON THAT FRONT THAT MANY BELIEVE THE OUTCOME OF THE CONFLICT WILL BE DETERMINED.

THE GENERAL HAS HIS HIGHLY-MECHANIZED AND WELL ORGANIZED FORCES SPREAD ALL OVER SYRIA, DRILLING, EXPERIMENTING WITH NEW DEVICES OF WAR AND TESTING NEW BATTLE TACTICS.

MAY 26 1940

PERHAPS NO MAN IN THE WORLD TODAY HAS HAD THE EXPERIENCE OF WEYGAND IN MILITARY ORGANIZATION. WHEN THE FIRST WORLD WAR STARTED HE WAS A LIEUTENANT COLONEL OF CAVALRY, WHO HAD ASTONISHED HIS SUPERIORS BY HIS SKILL IN MANEUVRES AND WON THE CONGRATULATIONS OF MARSHAL JOFFRE FOR HIS BRILLIANCE AT THE SCHOOL OF HIGH MILITARY STUDIES IN 1913.

A FEW DAYS AFTER THAT WAR STARTED, MARSHAL FOCH MADE HIM HIS CHIEF OF STAFF. REMAINING IN THIS POST THROUGHOUT THE WAR, WEYGAND BORE THE BRUNT OF COUNTLESS DETAILS BEHIND THE LINES, ALWAYS ORGANIZING, ALWAYS PREPARING FOR THE NEXT MOVE.

IN 1920, WHEN THE POLES WERE FALLING BACK BEFORE A RED RUSSIAN INVASION, THEY APPEALED TO WEYGAND TO TAKE COMMAND. HE DID SO, SPEEDILY MADE BATTLE PLANS, FLUNG THE POLISH ARMY AGAINST THE RUSSIANS AND ROUTED THEM. THE TASK REQUIRED EXACTLY ONE MONTH.

IN THE YEARS THAT FOLLOWED HE DEVOTED HIMSELF TO THE STUDY AND TEACHING OF WAR SCIENCE AND BECAME COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE FRENCH ARMY IN 1930.

THIS IS THE EXPERIENCE THAT WEYGAND BROUGHT TO SYRIA WHEN HE WAS CALLED OUT OF RETIREMENT LATE LAST AUGUST AND GIVEN COMMAND OF THE EASTERN ARMY WITH THE TITLE OF COMMANDER OF THE THEATER OF OPERATIONS IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN.

OUT OF THESE YEARS OF EXPERIENCE HAVE COME SOME NEW AND DEFINITE IDEAS OF WHAT A MODERN ARMY SHOULD BE, THE GENERAL'S AIDES SAY, AND HE HAS PUT THEM INTO THE ARMY HE HAS CREATED HERE. WHEN IT GOES INTO ACTION THERE MAY BE SOME SURPRISES.

IT NUMBERS NO MORE THAN 200,000 MEN TODAY, BUT IT HAS A FRAMEWORK OF COMMISSIONED AND NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS SUFFICIENT FOR A MUCH BIGGER FORCE.

MAY 26 1940

ITS PLANS OF OPERATION ARE CO-ORDINATED WITH THOSE OF THE BRITISH FORCES IN PALESTINE AND EGYPT AND OF THE TURKISH ARMY. WEYGAND IS EXPECTED TO BE NAMED SUPREME COMMANDER OF ALL THREE IF THEY GO INTO ACTION TOGETHER.

SYRIA IS NOT NEW TO WEAYGAND, FOR HE SERVED AS HIGH COMMISSIONER HERE IN 1923. WHEN HE ARRIVED THAT TIME, HE FOUND A STATE OF NEAR-ANARCHY, DUE CHIEFLY TO FRENCH MALADMINISTRATION. REVOLT WAS EVERY-WHERE AND BANDITS AND MURDERERS ROVED THE LAND.

HE BEGAN HIS TERM BY HANGING 26 PERSONS. HE PICKED ONLY MEN ACCUSED OF TWO OR MORE MURDERS, SO THERE WOULD BE LITTLE CHANCE OF HANGING AN INNOCENT MAN.

DISORDER ENDED AND WHEN HE SHOWED THAT HIS SEVERITY WAS TEMPERED BY JUSTICE, HE SOON WON THE RESPECT AND SUPPORT OF SYRIANS. LEFTISTS AT HOME WERE AGAINST HIM, HOWEVER, AND WHEN THEY CAME TO POWER THE

30.24-2379

30.24-2379

FOLLOWING YEAR, HE WAS RECALLED.

HIS ARRIVAL IN BEIRUT AT THE START OF THE PRESENT WAR WAS WELCOMED BY SYRIANS. WITH THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR, EVEN THE SEMBLANCE OF SELF-GOVERNMENT WHICH THEY HAD WAS TAKEN FROM THEM. THE PARLIAMENTS OF SYRIA AND LEBANON WERE DISSOLVED AND THE CABINETS OF THE TWO STATES WERE PERMITTED TO FUNCTION ONLY IN AN ADMINISTRATIVE CAPACITY UNDER THE GUIDANCE OF FRENCH "ADVISERS."

BUT IN SYRIA, PREVIOUSLY SO TURBULENT, THERE HAS BEEN PRACTICALLY NO AGITATION AGAINST THE FRENCH SINCE THAT TIME.

THE CONFIDENCE OF THE PEOPLE IN WEYGAND AND HIS SKILLFUL HANDLING OF LOCAL PROBLEMS IS UNDOUBTEDLY THE CHIEF EREASON.

BEFORE THE WAR, RIVALRY BETWEEN THE FRENCH AND BRITISH IN THE NEAR EAST HAD CAUSED A NUMBER OF SORE SPOTS. ONE WAS THE PRESENCE OF THE GRAND MUFTI OF JERUSALEM IN SYRIA WHO, UNDER FRENCH PROTECTION, HAD DIRECTED THE ARAB CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE JEWS IN PALESTINE.

WEYGAND COULD NOT LET THIS CONTINUE. NOR COULD HE DELIVER THE GRAND MUFTI TO THE BRITISH WITHOUT AROUSING THE ARABS. SO HE PERMITTED HIM TO "ESCAPE" INTO IRAK

MAY 26 1940

(ADVANCE FOR AMS OF SUNDAY, MAY 26)

(ADVANCE) BEIRUT--FIRST ADD WEYGAND'S "MYSTERY" ARMY X X X INTO IRAK.

A LEBANESE COMPLAINED THAT AN ENCAMPMENT OF SENEGALESE TROOPS NEXT TO HIM MADE HIS HOME UNINHABITABLE.

WEYGAND GOT INTO HIS CAR, INSPECT THE SITUATION AND FOUND THE MAN'S CLAIM JUSTIFIED. HE ADDED THE HOME TO THE CAMP SITE AND HAD THE OWNER INDEMNIFIED.

HE HAS GIVEN HIS ATTENTION TO COUNTLESS OTHER MINOR MATTERS IN THE LIFE OF SYRIA, BUT HE DREW THE LINE WHEN HE AS ASKED TO PASS ON THE VALIDITY OF A DIVORCE OBTAINED BY A FRENCHMAN FROM HIS MARONITE WIFE.

"I HAVE MORE TO DO," HE SAID TESTILY, "THAN GO INTO THE LOCAL LOVE AFFAIRS."

WHEN THE GENERAL'S CAR DRAWS UP TO THE NEW STUCCO BUILDING WHICH HOUSES THE GENERAL STAFF, A GUARD OF SPAHIS PRESENTS ARMS AND A FANFARE IS BLOWN. THE SAME HAPPENS WHEN HE LEAVES FOR HIS HOME, A FEW BLOCKS AWAY.

MAY 26 1940

IN FRONT OF THE HOME THERE IS A GUARD OF CIRCASSIANS. HE LIVES WITH THREE FELLOW OFFICERS.

THE GENERAL RISES AT SEVEN AND USUALLY TAKES A SHORT WALK ALONG THE SHORE, HIS CAR FOLLOWING HIM A LITTLE DISTANCE BEHIND. IN THE EVENING HE TAKES A STROLL ON A CATWALK ON THE ROOF OF HIS HOME.

AS AN OLD CAVALRYMAN HE IS FOND OF HORSES, BUT GAVE UP RIDING AFTER AN OPERATION IN WHICH ONE KIDNEY WAS TAKEN OUT A FEW YEARS AGO.

HE GOES TO BED EARLY, USUALLY READING BEFORE HE FALLS ASLEEP. HE RECENTLY COMPLETED A FRENCH TRANSLATION OF "GONE WITH THE WIND."

BORN IN BRUSSELS OF A DISTINGUISHED BELGIAN FATHER OF GERMAN ORIGIN AND A FRENCH MOTHER, GENERAL WEYGAND HAS A PHLEGMATISM WHICH IS RATHER UN-FRENCH IN CHARACTER. IT IS, PERHAPS, THIS CALMNESS, COUPLED WITH FRENCH INTELLIGENCE, WHICH HAS MADE HIM A GOOD ORGANIZER OF FRENCHMEN.

GENERAL WEYGAND IS MARRIED AND HAS TWO SONS, BOTH OFFICERS. HE

WILL NOT PERMIT HIS WIFE TO COME TO SYRIA, SINCE HE HAS RULED THAT HIS OFFICERS' WIVES SHOULD STAY HOME IN FRANCE. NOR WILL HE PERMIT HIS SONS TO COME HERE. THEY ARE SERVING ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

TEUTONS ACTING AS OVERLORDS

WITH "LOYAL" POLES

IN MINOR ROLES (1200)

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER

(ADVANCE) KRAKOW, POLAND--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)- IT DID NOT TAKE MANY MONTHS FOR THE GERMAN ADMINISTRATION TO MAKE THE POLES OF THE KRAKOW AREA REALIZE THAT THE REICH IS MASTER OF THE POLISH SITUATION.

I VISITED THE NEW CAPITAL OF THE "GENERAL GOVERNMENT," MEANING THOSE SECTIONS OF THE FORMER POLISH STATE AS HAVE NOT BEEN INCORPORATED IN GERMANY OR SOVIET RUSSIA, SEVEN MONTHS AFTER IT FELL INTO GERMAN HANDS. IT WAS THE FIRST VISIT PERMITTED ANY AMERICAN NEWSMAN.

(THE "GENERAL GOVERNMENT" IS THAT SOUTH-CENTRAL SECTION OF POLAND, ABOUT ONE-THIRD THE SIZE OF THE COMPLETE POLAND BEFORE IT WAS TAKEN OVER BY THE NAZIS, WHICH HAS KRAKOW AS ITS CENTER AND CAPITOL. IT IS WHAT IS LEFT OF THE PARTS OF POLAND THAT HAVE NOT BEEN INCORPORATED INTO EITHER THE REICH OR SOVIET RUSSIA. IT IS STILL REFERRED TO AS "POLAND" BY THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT.)

ALREADY THE LOWER ADMINISTRATION WAS FUNCTIONING TO THE SATISFACTION OF THE GERMAN OVERLORDS--WITH POLES THROUGHOUT IN CHARGE.

POLISH POLICE, POLISH MAYORS FOR THE SMALLER CITIES, POLISH MAGISTRATES METING OUT JUSTICE ACCORDING TO POLISH LAW (BUT SEPARATE COURTS, WITH GERMAN JUDGES, FOR GERMANS), POLISH POSTAL ADMINISTRATION, POLISH RAILWAY PERSONNEL--SUCH WAS THE ADMINISTRATIVE SET-UP.

MAY 27 1940

THE TRAINS WERE RUNNING WITHOUT MILITARY PROTECTION. APPARENTLY NO POLE DARED TRY TO COMMIT ANY ACT AGAINST TRAINS OR THEIR PERSSONEL OR THE TRAVELING PUBLIC. DEPUTY GOVERNOR-GENERAL ARTHUR SEYSS-INQUART, I RECALLED, HAD TOLD ME IN BERLIN IN JANUARY THAT GERMAN JUSTICE IN THE OCCUPIED AREA WAS STERN, AND THAT A VAST CLEANING-UP PROCESS OF CRIMINAL ELEMENTS HAD TAKEN PLACE.

WHATEVER THE METHODS MAY HAVE BEEN FOR IMPRESSING THE POLES WITH GERMAN AUTHORITY, THEY OBVIOUSLY WERE EFFECTIVE.

DRIVING ALONG THE COUNTRY SIDE IN THE KRAKOW AREA, I OFTEN MET POLES IN UNIFORM SITTING ON HORSE-DRAWN VEHICLES, OR WORKING OUT IN THE FIELDS.

"THEY ARE DISARMED FORMER POLISH SOLDIERS AND QUITE HARMLESS," MY GERMAN GUIDE SAID. "MANY OF THEM HAD NO OTHER CLOTHES EXCEPT THEIR UNIFORMS, SO WE LET THEM KEEP THEM.

30.24-2521

30.24-2521

"OFFICERS, OF COURSE, STILL ARE TREATED AS PRISONERS OF WAR,JO BUT THE COMMON SOLDIER WHO WANTED NOTHING MORE THAN TO RETURN TO HIS FARM WAS READILY DISCHARGED. HE IS FREE TO MOVE ABOUT AT WILL."

SOME 400,000 DISCHARGED AND DISARMED POLISH SOLDIERS, I WAS TOLD, ARE BACK HOME AGAIN, WHILE SOME 300,000 ARE STILL PRISONERS IN GERMANY.

GEMANS AND POLES D

MAY 27 1940

GERMANS AND POLES DON'T MIX MORE THAN IS NECESSARY. THE HOTEL TO WHICH I WAS ASSIGNED BORE A SIGN, "FOR GERMAN GUESTS ONLY." THE GERMAN AUTHORITIES HAD TO ARRANGE FOR PERMISSION FOR ME TO STOP THERE; ELSE THE HOTEL MANAGER COULD NOT HAVE ACCEPTED ME AS GUEST.

THE 3,000 GERMAN OFFICIALS WHO HOLD THE TOP POSITIONS IN THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT, IN SO FAR AS THEY RESIDE IN THE NEW CAPITAL, KRAKOW, HAVE THEIR OWN CASINO OR CLUB IN WHICH TO SPEND THEIR EVENINGS. THE BEAUTIFUL, ARTISTIC OFFICIAL RESIDENCE OF THE MAYOR OF KRAKOW HAS BEEN TAKEN OVER FOR THIS PURPOSE.

HERE I FOUND THE GERMAN OFFICIALS TAKING THEIR EVENING MEALS, LISTENING TO THE GERMAN BROADCASTS, PLAYING PING-PONG, CARDS AND OTHER GAMES, OR CHATTING TOGETHER IN GROUPS.

FURTHER EVIDENCE THAT THE GERMANS CONSIDER THEMSELVES THE OVERLORDS OF THE POLES WAS FOUND IN THE PRESENCE OF HITLER PORTRAITS AND HITLER BUSTS IN THE PUBLIC BUILDINGS. THE SPACIOUS CENTRAL BUILDING OF THE SCHOOL OF MINES OF KRAKOW, FOR INSTANCE, NOW THE MAIN ADMINISTRATIVE BUILDING OF THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT, IS FEATURED BY A LARGE HITLER BUST LOOKING DOWN UPON YOU FROM THE HEAD OF THE IMPOSING STAIRCASE AS YOU ENTER.

ANOTHER LIKENESS FREQUENTLY FOUND SIDE BY SIDE WITH ADOLF HITLER'S IS THAT OF GOVERNOR-GENERAL HANNS FRANK.

FRANK, A ROBUST MAN OF 40 YEARS, HAS HAD A METEORIC CAREER SINCE NAZI ACCESSION TO POWER. HITLER'S ATTORNEY IN HIS MANY LEGAL FIGHTS WITH THE REPUBLICAN REGIME OF PRE-1933 DAYS, HE WAS IMMEDIATELY PLACED IN CHARGE OF RE-VAMPING GERMAN JUSTICE TO MEET NAZI IDEOLOGY. HE CREATED THE FAMOUS SLOGAN, "WHATEVER BENEFITS THE NATIONAL-SOCIALIST STATE, IS RIGHT."

MAY 27 1940

HIS BIG REWARD FOR FAITHFUL SERVICES CAME, HOWEVER, WHEN HITLER APPOINTED HIM GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF POLAND, RESPONSIBLE ONLY TO THE FUHRER HIMSELF. THAT WAS ON SEPTEMBER 27, 1939.

FRANK SUB-DIVIDED THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT INTO FOUR LARGE ADMINISTRATIVE DISTRICTS, CENTERING AT KRAKOW, RADOM, WARSAW, AND LUBLIN RESPECTIVELY. IN EACH OF THESE FOUR DISTRICTS, A GERMAN APPOINTEE OF HIS HOLDS SUPREME AUTHORITY.

MY GENERAL IMPRESSION WAS THAT THE GERMANS HAVE COME TO STAY --BARRING DEFEAT--AND THAT THE TOP ADMINISTRATIVE POSITIONS WILL REMAIN IN GERMAN HANDS.

FRANK INSISTS THAT THE "GENERAL GOVERNMENT" WILL EMERGE AS THE "NATIONAL HOME OF THE POLES," JUST AS THEY SAY PALESTINE IS THE NATIONAL HOME OF THE JEWS. IT IS BOUND HOWEVER, TO BE SOME SORT OF VASSAL OF GERMANY'S ASSUMING THAT GERMANY WINS OR AT LEAST HOLDS HER OWN IN THE WORLD WAR.

THE MILITARY IS ENTIRELY GERMAN. THE HITLER "SS" GUARDS KEEP SHARP CONTROL OF THE POPULATION TO NIP SUBVERSIVE EFFORTS IN THE BUD.

DURING MY TWO DAYS SPENT HERE THE GERMAN TRAFFIC POLICE WERE JUST TEACHING POLISH "COPS" HOW TO DIRECT THE CONSTANT FLOW OF VEHICLES AND PEDESTRIANS. OF PEDESTRIANS THERE WERE PLENTY: THE POLES SEEM TO SPEND MUCH OF THEIR LIFE ON THE STREETS. OF VEHICLES, HORSE-DRAWN FAR OUTNUMBERED THE MOTORIZED. POLAND, I WAS TOLD, HAS FEWER AUTOMOBILES COMPARED TO HER POPULATION THAN ANY OTHER COUNTRY IN EUROPE.

IN FACT, THE GERMAN ADMINISTRATION SEEMS TO TAKE IT FOR GRANTED THAT SUCH CARS AS TRAVEL THE ROADS THESE DAYS MUST BE GERMAN, FOR ALL TRAFFIC SIGNS PUT UP BY THE NAZI AUTHORITIES ARE IN GERMAN ONLY.

THE STREETS ARE RAPIDLY BEING IDENTIFIED BY SIGNS IN BOTH THE GERMAN AND THE POLISH LANGUAGES. AT THE RAILWAY STATION, THE TRAIN ANNOUNCER SPEAKS GERMAN FIRST, THEN REPEATS THE ANNOUNCEMENT IN POLISH.

MAY 27 1940

IN THE CITY'S STREET CARS THERE ARE SIGNS TO THE EFFECT THAT GENTILES MUST SIT ON THE RIGHT SIDE AND JEWS ON THE LEFT.

BUT HOW DISTINGUISH THE TWO? HERE, TOO, THE GERMAN ADMINISTRATION HAS FOUND A WAY: EVERY JEW MUST WEAR A WHITE ARM BAND WITH THE STAR OF DAVID IMPRINTED UPON IT IN BLUE. AS THIS CITY OF 250,000 INHABITANTS HAS 70,000 JEWS, ONE CANNOT GO VERY FAR WITHOUT RUNNING INTO ARM BANDS.

I ASKED ONE GERMAN OFFICIAL WHY, IF POLAND HAS NO RACIAL LAWS LIKE THOSE OBTAINING IN GERMANY, IT WAS NECESSARY TO MARK THE JEWS WITH ARMBANDS.

"WELL," HE REPLIED JOKINGLY, "HOW DO OUR 3000 GERMAN OFFICIALS KNOW WHETHER A PRETTY GIRL THAT THEY MEET HERE IS JEWISH OR GENTILE? OUR GERMAN OFFICIALS MIGHT TRANSGRESS OUR NURNBERG RACIAL LAWS WITHOUT KNOWING IT."

IN THE REALM OF BUSINESS, TOO, THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN JEW AND GENTILE HAS COME ALMOST AUTOMATICALLY WITH THE SEIZURE OF POLAND BY GERMANY. JEWISH SHOPS ARE MARKED BY THE STAR OF DAVID; GENTILE STORES USUALLY HAVE A PLACARD, "ARYAN UNDERTAKING."

THEN THERE IS A THIRD GROUP OF COMMERCIAL ESTABLISHMENTS WHICH ARE RUN BY GERMAN "TRUSTEES." SO FAR AS I COULD LEARN, MOST OF THE LARGER JEWISH BUSINESSES HAVE BEEN TAKEN OVER BY THESE TRUSTEES. THE SAME THING APPLIES, HOWEVER, TO ALL STORES, FACTORIES, AND OTHER BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS WHOSE POLISH OWNERS FLED WHEN THE GERMANS CAPTURED KRAKOW.

MAY 27 1940

I ASKED HITLER'S "CITY PRESIDENT," A SUABIAN MAYOR TRANSFERRED HERE FOR THE TIME BEING, WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IN CASE SUCH AN OWNER CAME BACK TO KRAKOW FROM ABROAD.

"IF THERE'S NOTHING IN THE RECORDS AGAINST HIM," THIS GERMAN OFFICIAL REPLIED, "I SUPPOSE WE SHALL TURN THE BUSINESS BACK TO HIM."

I TRIED TO DO SOME SHOPPING SOON AFTER MY ARRIVAL IN THE CITY. I SOON GAVE IT UP: EVERYWHERE I WAS ASKED FOR MY RATION CARD. OF COURSE I HAD NONE. BUT THE QUESTION SEEMED AWFULLY FAMILIAR AFTER EIGHT MONTHS OF SOJOURN IN WAR-WAGING GERMANY!

ON THE HUGE MARKET-PLACE BEFORE FAMED ST.MARY'S CHURCH THERE WAS THE FAMILIAR SPECTACLE OF HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE STANDING ABOUT AND GOSSIPING. THE PURCHASES WERE BY NO MEANS PROPORTIONATE TO THE

30.24-2523

NUMBER OF PEOPLE STANDING ABOUT. BUT THAT HAS ALWAYS BEEN THUS AS LONG AS I CAN REMEMBER VISITING POLISH CITIES.

AT VARIOUS PLACES ON THE MARKET SQUARE, PLACARDS WERE POSTED INDICATING TOP PRICES FOR VARIOUS COMMODITIES WHICH MAY NOT BE EXCEEDED. THUS, DAIRY BUTTER MUST NOT COST MORE THAN FOUR ZLOTYS (EIGHTY CENTS) PER KILOGRAM (2.2 POUNDS). A HEN MAY NOT COST MORE THAN HALF A DOLLAR; EGGS NOT MORE THAN TWO-AND-HALF CENTS APIECE. AND SO ON.

I ENTERED THE CHURCH. WHAT STRUCK ME PARTICULARLY WAS THE FACT THAT MOST OF THE WORSHIPERS--AND THERE WERE MANY OF THEM--WERE YOUNG PEOPLE, BOYS AND GIRLS IN THEIR UPPER 'TEENS. I COULD NOT HELP BUT WONDER HOW MANY OF THEM HAD FATHERS IN GERMAN CAPTIVITY, WHILE THEIR MOTHERS PROBABLY VOLUNTEERED AS FARM HANDS FOR WORK IN GERMANY.

MAY 27 1940

BY ROBERT ST JOHN

(ADVANCE) BUCHAREST--(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)--ODD THINGS HAPPEN EVERY DAY IN A COUNTRY WHICH IS ON THE EDGE OF WAR HOLDING ITS BREATH FOR FEAR OF WHAT TOMORROW MAY BRING.

THERE IS, FOR EXAMPLE, THE STORY OF THE DISAPPEARANCE OF PILOTS AT THE IRON GATE ON THE DANUBE -- THE RIVER WHICH GERMANY USES FOR TRANSPORTING SO MANY THOUSAND TONS OF SUPPLIES INTO THE REICH FROM SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE.

THE IRON GATE IS A SPOT WHERE THE RIVER NARROWS DOWN AND FLOWS BETWEEN HIGH CLIFFS. TREACHEROUS RAPIDS AND DANGEROUS SHOALS MAKE IT THE MOST HAZARDOUS COUPLE OF MILES ANYWHERE BETWEEN THE BLACK SEA AND THE BLACK FOREST OF GERMANY.

WHEN TUGS AND BARGES REACH THIS POINT THEY ARE TURNED OVER TO SPECIAL IRON GATE PILOTS WHO ALONE KNOW HOW TO GUIDE RIVER CRAFT THROUGH THE DANGER ZONE.

MAY 27 1940

TO QUALIFY FOR THE JOB, MEN ARE REQUIRED TO UNDERGO YEARS OF APPRENTICESHIP AND PASS RIGID EXAMINATIONS.

WHEN THE DANUBE THAWED AND GERMAN TUGS STARTED HEADING NORTH AGAIN THIS SPRING, IT WAS DISCOVERED THAT MANY OF THE REGULAR IRON GATE PILOTS WERE MISSING. THE REPORT SOON SPREAD THAT THEY HAD SIGNED THREE-YEAR CONTRACTS (WAGES PAID IN ADVANCE) TO GO ELSEWHERE.

GERMANS CHARGED THAT THE MEN HAD BEEN HIRED BY BRITISH AND FRENCH INTERESTS, WHO WISHED TO DO ANYTHING POSSIBLE TO SLOW DOWN GERMAN RIVER TRANSPORTATION.

TO REMEDY THE SITUATION, A PLAN IS REPORTED UNDER CONSIDERATION WHEREBY A NUMBER OF APPRENTICES WILL SOON BE GIVEN THE STANDING OF PILOTS.

BATCHES OF LETTERS SENT OFF MONTHS AGO BY RUMANIANS TO RELATIVES IN GERMAN-OCCUPIED POLAND HAVE RECENTLY BEEN RETURNED, UNDELIVERED.

WHILE HITLER'S NO. 1 ECONOMIC ENVOY, DR.KARL CLODIUS, WAS HERE RECENTLY ARGUING ABOUT MORE RUMANIAN GASOLINE FOR GERMANY'S WAR MACHINES, THE RUMANIAN GOVERNMENT MADE A CONCESSION TO HIM -- IT AGREED TO LIFT THE BAN ON THE EXPORT OF HORSESHOES TO GERMANY.

--- THREE EM DASH ---

THE PET OF THE AMERICAN COLONY IN RUMANIA THESE DAYS IS A PIGEON AFFECTIONATELY NICKNAMED "MATILDA".

THE BIRD BELONGS TO AN AMERICAN GIRL WHO USES IT IN HER ACT IN A NIGHT CLUB WHERE SHE IS EMPLOYED. SHE CLAIMS THAT DURING THE FIRST EIGHT MONTHS OF THE WAR ON HER ROAMINGS AROUND EUROPE HER "MATILDA" HAS BEEN "ARRESTED" BY POLICE AND GOVERNMENT AGENTS IN SIX COUNTRIES ON THE SUSPICION THAT HER PURPOSE IN LIFE IS TO CARRY SPY MESSAGES TO SECRET POLICE IN ONE OR ANOTHER OF THE BELLIGERENT COUNTRIES.

SO FAR, HOWEVER, MATILDA HAS BEEN ABLE EACH TIME TO PROVE THAT SHE IS MERELY AN INNOCENT NIGHT CLUB PIGEON.

--- THREE EM DASH ---

DESPITE A DOZEN NEW SIGNS THAT WAR MIGHT SOON SLOP OVER INTO RUMANIA, THE AMERICAN COLONY TOOK NEW HEART RECENTLY WHEN NEWS LEAKED OUT THAT FREDERICK HIBBARD OF DENISON, TEXAS, HAD BOUGHT SOME OLD BOHEMIAN GLASS.

HIBBARD IS FIRST SECRETARY OF THE AMERICAN LEGATION AND AN AVID COLLECTOR OF ANTIQUES. DURING LONG YEARS IN THE DIPLOMATIC SERVICE HE HAS ACCUMULATED AN ALMOST PRICELESS COLLECTION OF RARITIES IN VARIOUS FAR CORNERS OF THE WORLD.

SECRETARY HIBBARD CALMLY BOUGHT A DOZEN RARE BOHEMIAN GLASSES --DELICATE, PAPER-THIN GLASSES RECENTLY.

AND AMERICANS PROMPTLY REASONED THIS WAY:

"IF FRED HIBBARD'S BUYING THINGS LIKE THAT, HE CAN'T BE WORRIED ABOUT WHAT'S GOING TO HAPPEN DOWN HERE. MAYBE WE'RE TOO JITTERY AFTER ALL. MAYBE WAR ISN'T COMING TO RUMANIA. FRED HIBBARD OUGHT TO KNOW BETTER THAN WE."

MAY 27 1940

HIBBARD HIMSELF CALLED IT "MY GESTURE OF CONFIDENCE."

THE COUNT IS A HANDSOME YOUNG GERMAN JOURNALIST, WHO SPENDS MUCH OF HIS TIME IN THE COMPANY OF THE LOCAL GESTAPO CHIEF AND OTHER GERMAN OFFICIALS. THERE IS NO QUESTION ABOUT HIS WAR SYMPATHIES.

HIS WIFE, A BRIDE OF ONLY A FEW MONTHS, MAKES NO SECRET OF THE FACT THAT SHE IS A PATRIOTIC NORWEGIAN.

WHEN THEY APPEAR IN PUBLIC TOGETHER SOMEONE INEVITABLY ASKS:

"HOW DO YOU SUPPOSE THEY'RE GETTING ALONG NOW THAT THE NORWEGIANS AND THE GERMANS ARE AT EACH OTHER'S THROATS?"

NO ONE KNOWS, BUT THEIR FRIENDS SAY THEY HAVE STOPPED DISCUSSING THE WAR WHEN THEY ARE TOGETHER.

--- THREE EM DASH ---

MAY 27 1940

AS LONG AS ALL WAS QUIET ALONG THE WESTERN FRONT AND THE WAR WAS MERELY A MATTER OF BLOCKADES, AND SPORADIC SEA AND AIR BATTLES, GERMAN, FRENCH AND BRITISH JOURNALISTS AND BUSINESS MEN MIXED FREELY IN THE HOTEL LOBBIES, THE RESTAURANTS AND THE OTHER MEETING PLACES OF BUCHAREST.

BUT THE SCANDINAVIAN CAMPAIGN BROUGHT A SUDDEN END TO ALL SEMBLANCE OF COMARADERIES.

AT 7 O'CLOCK EACH EVENING 50 OR 60 FOREIGN NEWSPAPER MEN MEET IN THE OFFICE OF THE MINISTRY OF PROPAGANDA FOR A PRESS CONFERENCE. BEFORE NAZI TROOPS LANDED IN NORWAY, THE GERMANS MINGLED FREELY HERE. BUT NOW THEY GATHER IN A TIGHT LITTLE KNOT IN ONE CORNER OF THE ROOM; THE FRENCH AND BRITISH IN ANOTHER. BETWEEN THEM WANDER A FEW SWISS, AMERICAN AND ITALIAN REPORTERS.

IT HAD ALWAYS BEEN THE CUSTOM FOR THE PROPAGANDA CHIEF TO MAKE ALL HIS ANNOUNCEMENTS IN FRENCH -- A LANGUAGE UNDERSTOOD BY ALL -- BUT AS SOON AS THE SCANDINAVIAN PHASE OF THE WAR INTENSIFIED NATIONAL DIFFERENCES, HE ADOPTED A NEW SYSTEM.

NOW HE FIRST ADDRESSES THE GERMAN NEWSPAPER MEN IN THEIR OWN LANGUAGE, AND THEN TALKS TO THE OTHERS IN FRENCE.

LANGUAGE, AND THEN TALKS TO THE OTHERS IN FRENCH.

--- THREE EM DASH ---

WITH BRITISH AND GERMAN SOLDIERS FIGHTING A LIFE AND DEATH BATTLE IN NORWAY AND WAR FEELINGS RUNNING HIGHER AMONG FOREIGNERS, BUCHAREST'S LARGEST HOTEL DECIDED THAT THE TIME HAD COME FOR SEGREGATION.

THE FIRST STEP WAS TO PICK A SUAVE, DISTINGUISHED-LOOKING MAN WHO SPEAKS HALF A DOZEN LANGUAGES FOR THE JOB OF ASSIGNING HOTEL ROOMS TO NEW GUESTS. WITH GREAT CARE HE HAS BEEN ATTEMPTING TO PUT ALL THE GERMANS ON ONE FLOOR, ALL FRENCHMEN AND ENGLISHMEN ON ANOTHER, ALL ITALIANS ON A THIRD, WITH AMERICANS SCATTERED ANYWHERE.

THEN THE HEADWAITER IN THE DININGROOM WAS GIVEN HIS ORDERS--HE MUST KEEP GERMANS ON ONE SIDE OF THE ROOM; PEOPLE WITH ALLIED SYMPATHIES ON THE OTHER.

THE SYSTEM HAS AVOIDED MUCH EMBARRASSMENT, EXCEPT THAT ONE DAY RECENTLY THE HEADWAITER TOOK AN HOUR OFF, AND AN ASSISTANT UNWITTINGLY ESCORTED THE BRITISH NAVAL ATTACHE TO THE GERMAN SIDE OF THE ROOM AND PLACED HIM AT THE VERY NEXT TABLE TO THE HEAD OF THE LOCAL GESTAPO.

THE TWO MEN ATE THEIR DINNER IN EMBARRASSED SILENCE, WHILE MORE THAN A HUNDRED OTHER GUESTS GRINNED OVER THE MISTAKE.

--- THREE EM DASH ---

ONE LATE-RISER WHO LIVES IN BUCHAREST'S MOST INTERNATIONALLY POPULATED HOTELS CLAIMS HE CAN FIGURE OUT WHAT THE TENOR OF THE OVERNIGHT WAR NEWS IS WITHOUT CONSULTING RADIO OR NEWSPAPER.

"I COME DOWN FROM MY ROOM AND SPEND FIVE MINUTES WANDERING SLOWLY AROUND THE LOBBY," HE EXPLAINS. "I STUDY THE FACES OF THE GERMANS FIRST, THEN OF THE BRITISH AND FRENCH. I CAN TELL BY THEIR COMPLACENT SMILES OR BY THEIR WORRIED FROWNS WHETHER THE GERMANS HAVE TAKEN A NEW TOWN, OR THE ALLIES HAVE WON ANOTHER NAVAL BATTLE."

HE HAS ALSO OBSERVED THAT THE MORNING AFTER A BIG SUCCESS BY ONE SIDE, VERY FEW OF THE OTHER SIDE'S NATIONALS LOITER AROUND THE LOBBY.

MILITARY MEN TURN TO SCIENTISTS
FOR DEFENSE MEANS WHEN NEW WEAPONS DEVELOP (1200)

BY HOWARD W.BLAKESLEE
ASSOCIATED PRESS SCIENCE EDITOR

(ADVANCE)...NEW YORK, MAY 25--THERE ARE EIGHT SCIENTIFIC WORDS THAT CAN WIN WARS.

THEY ARE, EQUILIBRIUM CONSTANTS, THERMODYNAMICS, SPECIFIC HEATS, ENERGY LEVELS AND ENTROPY. THEY DESCRIBE THE ACTIONS OF FIVE LAWS OF NATURE, WITHOUT WHOSE USE THERE WOULD BE NEITHER ATTACK NOR DEFENSE ARMAMENTS OF MECHANIZED WAR.

SOLDIERS NEVER HEAR OF THE WORDS, TECHNICIANS WHO MAKE THE FIGHTING MACHINES SELDOM EVEN KNOW THEM, BUT NEVERTHELESS IT CAN BE SHOWN THAT THEY ARE VITAL IN THE PRESENT WAR, AND THAT IN THE UNITED STATES THEY WILL BE MAJOR FACTORS IN DEFENSE.

EQUILIBRIUM CONSTANTS ARE THE RULES OF BALANCE IN CHEMICAL ENERGIES. THERMODYNAMICS ARE THE LAWS OF HEAT ENERGY. SPECIFIC HEAT IS THE QUANTITY OF HEAT REQUIRED TO RAISE A SUBSTANCE ONE DEGREE IN TEMPERATURE. ENERGY LEVELS ARE ENERGIES LOCKED WITHIN ATOMS. ENTROPY IS A MATHEMATICAL TERM WITHOUT A SIMPLE DEFINITION, BUT IT DEALS WITH THE WAY ENERGY SCATTERS IF LEFT TO ITSELF.

THESE WERE THE TERMS, WRITTEN MOSTLY IN SYMBOLS ON A BLACKBOARD, AT A PETROLEUM SYMPOSIUM IN APRIL, WHICH LED FUEL EXPERTS TO PREDICT SPEEDY AMERICAN WORLD LEADERSHIP IN AVIATION.

THE SPEAKERS WERE A GROUP OF COLLEGE PROFESSORS GATHERED AT CINCINNATI FROM COAST TO COAST. IT WAS NOT SUPPOSED TO BE AN EXCITING MEETING. BEFORE IT MET, DR.PER K.FROLICH, WHO AS CHAIRMAN OF THE PETROLEUM DIVISION OF THE AMERICAN CHEMICAL SOCIETY, SPONSORED THE SYMPOSIUM, SAID:

"IT IS LIKELY TO BE OVER THE HEADS OF MOST OF US PRACTICAL CHEMISTS."

DR.FROLICH IS DIRECTOR OF THE CHEMISTRY RESEARCH LABORATORY OF THE 30.24-2527

STANDARD OIL DEVELOPMENT CO. THE SYMPOSIUM DREW A LARGE CROWD, ONE OF THE BEST IN YEARS. THE AUDIENCE APPEARED FASCINATED.

INQUIRY REVEALED WHY. THESE PRACTICAL PETROLEUM CHEMISTS WERE LEARNING HOW TO DERIVE THE PRINCIPLES OF NEW GASOLINE POWER FROM THE PROFESSORIAL FORMULAE. AS A RESULT THEY HAD IN THEIR LABORATORIES NEW BRANDS OF GASOLINE YIELDING ALMOST DOUBLE THE POWER OF PRESENT FILLING STATION HIGH TEST GASES.

A FEW CLAIMED EITHER TO HAVE SEEN THE TEST MACHINES OR PAPER DESIGNS OF AVIATION ENGINES SMALLER THAN ANYTHING NOW FLYING YET MUCH MORE POWERFUL. THEY TALKED OF LITTLE ENGINES DEVELOPING 3500 HORSE-POWER. THE BIGGEST ENGINE TODAY RATES ABOUT 2000 HORSEPOWER.

THE PHYSICAL PRINCIPLES WHICH SHOWED THE WAY TO GREATER FUEL POWER, ARE ALSO NECESSARY IN DESIGN OF THE NEW ENGINES TO FIT THE FUELS. THE PHYSICAL LAWS DO NOT MAKE ENGINE BLUEPRINTS. BUT THEY ARE APPLIED IN MANY WAYS, SUCH AS FINDING THE NEW ALLOYS TO STAND THE EXTRA HEAT AND STRAINS.

(ADVANCE)...NEW YORK-1ST ADD SCIENTISTS BY BLAKESLEE X X X AND STRAINS.

MAY 26 1940

AFTER ENGINE DESIGN OVERTAKES THE POWER FUELS, THE CYCLE OF PROGRESS WILL START OVER AGAIN.

AVIATION HAPPENS TO BE ONLY ONE SPECTACULAR SIDE OF APPLICATION OF THESE LAWS OF SCIENCE. AT THE SYMPOSIUM ONE OF THE AUTHORITIES QUOTED WAS PROFESSOR ARISTIDE VON GROSSE, OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY.

HE RECENTLY LEFT THE UNIVERSAL OIL PRODUCTS COMPANY OF CHICAGO FOR COLUMBIA, EXCHANGING PRACTICAL WORK FOR WHAT MOST PEOPLE WOULD CALL ABSTRACT THEORIES. BUT IT WAS ONE OF THESE ABSTRACT THEORIES OF HIS, BEFORE HE LEFT THE OIL COMPANY, WHICH DEVELOPED INTO A NEW METHOD OF CHEAPLY CONVERTING GASOLINE INTO TOLUOL, AND SO INTO T.N.T.

THIS SINGLE DISCOVERY, IF NEED BE, CAN PRODUCE ENOUGH TOLUOL FROM THE TEXAS OIL FIELDS ALONE, TO SUPPLY THE ENTIRE WORLD WITH T.N.T.

VON GROSSE IS NOT INTERESTED IN MAKING EXPLOSIVES. NEITHER ARE THE SCIENTISTS WHO, A LITTLE MORE THAN A YEAR AGO, WORKING WITH THE SAME LAWS OF ENERGY, MADE POSSIBLE A NEW SOURCE OF DYNAMITE FROM THE RAW MATERIALS IN WASTE NATURAL GAS.

THIS GROUP, HEADED BY PROF.H.B.HAAS, OF PURDUE UNIVERSITY, WERE LOOKING FOR MEANS TO CONSERVE NATIONAL RESOURCES. WHAT THEY DISCOVER-ED HAS INDUSTRIAL PEACETIME USES WORTH BILLIONS OF DOLLARS. THE PROCESS EVEN SUPPLIES NEW SOURCES FOR MECINES. THE DYNAMITE WAS A BYPRODUCT, SMALL BY COMPARISON.

MAY 26 1940

ANOTHER AMERICAN SCIENTIST WHO WORKS WITH THE ENERGY LAWS HAS PRODUCED A FORM OF DYNAMITE FROM CORN. STILL ANOTHER MADE A NEW GAS, WHICH CAN BE EXPLODED BY THE HEAT OF A MAN'S HAND.

THESE ARE, PERHAPS, ONLY SCIENTIFIC TOYS. BUT THEY SHOW WHAT THE EIGHT WORDS CAN ACCOMPLISH. THE WORDS ARE PART, TOO, OF ALL THE PRACTICAL MUNITIONS IMPROVEMENTS.

THE EIGHT WORDS WILL HELP, ALSO, TO PRODUCE THE RAW MATERIALS WHICH THE UNITED STATES WILL NEED FOR DEFENSE.

TAKE MANGANESE AS AN EXAMPLE. THIS METAL IS ESSENTIAL IN STEEL

THAT IS TO BE ROLLED AND SHAPED FOR MOST EVERYTHING FROM ARMOR PLATE, TO LOCOMOTIVES AND BRIDGES. ONLY BRITTLE STEEL IS MADE WITHOUT MANGANESE. THE UNITED STATES DEPOSITS OF MANGANESE ARE LOW GRADE; AND THE NATION'S STEEL MILLS HAVE RELIED ON IMPORTS, LARGELY FROM RUSSIA.

NOW DR.COLIN G.FINK, OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, PREDICTS THAT AMERICA'S LOW GRADE MANGANESE DEPOSITS CAN BE WORKED.

IT WILL BE DONE, HE SAYS, THROUGH USING THE METHODS OF ELECTRO-CHEMISTRY, MADE MORE ECONOMICAL BY THE FACT THAT SOME OF THE MANGANESE DEPOSITS ARE LOCATED NEAR HYDROELECTRIC POWER PROJECTS.

ELECTROCHEMISTRY IS ONE OF THE MOST DIRECT APPLICATIONS OF THE LAWS OF ENERGY. DR.FINK THINKS THIS BRANCH OF SCIENCE WILL INCREASE THE HOME OUTPUT OF OTHER ESSENTIAL MINERALS.

THE MINERALS OF THE SEA, DISSOLVED IN THE SALT WATERS, WERE UNLOCKED FOR INDUSTRIAL USE BY AMERICAN APPLICATIONS OF THE EIGHT WORDS. MANGANESE FOR AIRPLANE ALLOYS IS ONE OF THESE SALT WATER MINERALS.

MAY 26 1940

THE SAME WORDS ARE BEHIND GERMANY'S FORMULAE FOR MAKING GASOLINE FROM COAL, EDIBLE SUGAR FROM WOOD AND MORE RECENTLY ESSENTIAL FATS FROM COAL AND SHALE. EXCEPT, PERHAPS, GASOLINE, THESE PROCESSES ARE TOO EXPENSIVE TO BE USEFUL FOR MORE THAN THE MOMENTS OF EMERGENCY WHEN A NATION IS SPENDING ITS LAST BIT OF RESOURCES.

THE UNITED STATES ARMY POSSESSES A CHEMICAL WHICH CAN BE IMPREGNATED IN CLOTHING TO PROTECT AGAINST MUSTARD GAS, WHOSE LIQUID DROPLETS BURN THE SAME AS FIRE. WHAT THE CHEMICAL MAY BE IS A SECRET. WHEN, TWO YEARS AGO PROF.RALPH H.BULLARD, OF HOBART COLLEGE, NEW YORK, PUBLISHED DISCOVERY OF A CHEMICAL WHICH WOULD NEUTRALIZE MUSTARD ON CLOTHING, U.S. CHEMICAL WARFARE OFFICERS SAID THAT THEIR BRANCH OF THE SERVICE HAD POSSESSED FOR 15 YEARS A CHEMICAL WHICH WOULD DO JUST THAT.

OTHER NATIONS ARE BELIEVED TO POSSESS SIMILAR ANTI-MUSTARD AGENTS, AND ALL OF THEM COME FROM CHEMISTRY WHICH IN TURN DERIVES MUCH OF ITS PROGRESS FROM THE EIGHT WORDS.

THERE ARE OTHER PHYSICAL LAWS AND PRINCIPLES WHICH MAY BE VITAL IN ARMAMENT-MAKING. ONE IS MAGNETISM. THIS, ALREADY HAS APPEARED IN THE GERMANS' MAGNETIC MINE.

THERE ARE SIX U.S. PATENTS FOR MAGNETIC MINES, FOR AS MANY DIFFERENT TYPES. FOUR OF THESE INVENTORS ARE AMERICANS, THREE FROM THE ATLANTIC SEABOARD AND THE FOURTH FROM KANSAS. THE OTHER TWO ARE RESPECTIVELY A CITIZEN OF THE ARGENTINE AND AN ENGLISHMAN.

IT IS TO THE SCIENTISTS AND THEIR FUNDAMENTAL LAWS THAT THE MILITARY MEN HAVE TO APPEAL FIRST FOR MEANS OF DEFENSE WHEN A NEW WEAPON SHOWS UP.

MAY 26 1940

THUS, THE PRINCIPLE BEHIND THE CABLE LOOPED AROUND A SHIP AS PROTECTION AGAINST MAGNETIC MINES IS CREDITED TO ONE OF THE GREAT AMERICAN SCIENTISTS. THIS MAN IS AN EXPECT IN THE LAWS OF MAGNETISM.

A STORY OF THE GAS MASK IS ANOTHER EXAMPLE. IT IS TOLD BY A SCIENTIST, CAPT.J.B.S.HALDANE, OF THE BRITISH ARMY IN THE WORLD WAR. AFTER THE FIRST GERMAN GAS ATTACK, HIS FATHER, WHO WAS A SCIENTIST, WAS SENT TO FRANCE TO DEVISE A MASK.

THE ARMY, HOWEVER, DID NOT ACCEPT SCIENTIST HALDANE'S MASK. THEY SELECTED ANOTHER. AFTER FURTHER LIVES HAD BEEN LOST WITH AN INEFFICIENT MASK, THE ARMY ADOPTED THE ONE ORIGINALLY PROPOSED BY THE ELDER HALDANE.

(ADVANCE) SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-ALLIED OCCUPATION OF THE DUTCH WEST INDIES AS A "PROTECTIVE MEASURE" BRINGS EUROPE'S WAR RIGHT UP TO THE FRONT DOORSTEP OF THE UNITED STATES.

LESS THAN 500 MILES OF OPEN SEA SEPARATE THESE NETHERLANDS POSSESSIONS FROM PUERTO RICO, THE "GIBRALTAR" OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.

THAT SEA, THE CARIBBEAN, IS AMERICA'S MEDITERRANEAN. ITS "SUEZ" IS THE PANAMA CANAL. PUERTO RICO GUARDS THE EASTERN ENTRANCE AND SERVES AS A BASE FOR GIANT LAND AND SEA PLANES WHICH NOW COMPRISE THE AMERICAN NEUTRALITY PATROL BUT WHICH IN CASE OF WAR OVER HERE WILL OPERATE AS A "FLYING MAGINOT LINE."

IN WARTIME, THIS FLYING CIRCLE WILL HOLD 1,000 MILES OFF THE COAST. NOW ITS DAILY RADIUS IS 500 MILES FROM HERE. SO THE DUTCH WEST INDIES, JUST OFF VENEZUELA, ALREADY LIE WITHIN ITS RANGE--ONLY TWO HOURS DISTANT BY AIR.

WHEN THE NETHERLANDS DECLARED WAR ON GERMANY AFTER THE NAZI INVASION, THE NETHERLANDS WEST INDIES FOLLOWED SUIT. ALLIED TROOPS MOVED IN TO PREVENT POSSIBLE SABOTAGE OF THE ISLANDS' VITAL OIL REFINERIES. MARTIAL LAW WAS DECLARED. SINCE THEN TANKS AND GUNS HAVE ROLLED OFF ALLIED WARSHIPS, STANDING BY IN THE HARBORS, IN READINESS FOR ANY "BLITZKRIEG."

NO GERMAN THREAT HAS APPEARED YET. BUT ONE REASON FOR THE FORTIFICATION OF PUERTO RICO WAS TO PREVENT ANY OFFENSIVE FROM DEVELOPING IN OR NEAR THE CARIBBEAN. AND THE POLICY HERE THUS FAR HAS BEEN NOT TO WAIT FOR THREATS BUT TO ANTICIPATE THEM.

(ADVANCE FOR AMS OF SUNDAY MAY 26)

(ADVANCE) SAN JUAN--FIRST ADD WAR BROUGHT CLOSER TO AMERICA'S "GIBRALTAR." X X X THE SECOND.

SUGAR FOR INSTANCE. MORE THAN HALF THE ISLAND'S PEOPLE DEPEND ON SUGAR FOR THEIR LIVELIHOOD. BUT THE UNITED STATES SUGAR QUOTA SYSTEM, WHICH TREATS THE ISLAND AS A FOREIGN MARKET (ALTHOUGH IT IS AMERICAN TERRITORY AND ITS PEOPLE AMERICAN CITIZENS) CUTS PUERTO RICAN SUGAR PRODUCTION TO BETWEEN AND A THIRD AND A HALF OF CAPACITY. THAT MEANS HUNDREDS OF LOST JOBS FOR HUNGRY ISLANDERS.

ADDED TO THE DISCONTENT OVER SUGAR IS THE EFFECT OF THE WAGE-HOUR LAW ON PUERTO RICO'S NEEDLEWORK INDUSTRY, WHICH NORMALLY EMPLOYS 70,000 PERSONS. FACTORIES SHUT DOWN RATHER THAN PAY THE PRESCRIBED WAGE MINIMA, WHICH FACTORY OWNERS SAID WERE TOO HIGH.

TO COVER DEVELOPMENTS, THE FOLLOWING MAY BE INSERTED AFTER THIRD FROM LAST GRAPH, SAN JUAN "WAR ON OUR DOORSTEP" (MOVED FRIDAY NIGHT) XXX IN POLITICS.

THE TANGLE THAT RESULTS IS ILLUSTRATED BY THE CASE OF SANCHO BONET, FORMER TREASURER OF THE ISLAND. HE QUIT HIY JOB A FEW MONTHS AGO AFTER HE SAID HE HAD BEEN THREATENED WITH DEATH IF HE DID NOT DO SO. IRKED BY THIS APPARENT INTIMIDATION OF AN OFFICE-HOLDER IN WHOM HE HAD CONFIDENCE, GOV.WILLIWM LEAHY REFUSED TO ACCEPT THE DICTATES OF THE CURRENTLY DOMINANT POLITICAL PARTIES IN NAMING A SUCCESSOR. THE POLITICAL LEADERS, RAFAEL MARTINEZ NADAL AND BOLIVAR PAGAN, RETALIAT-ED WITH A STATEMENT THIS WEEK ACCUSING THE GOVERNOR OF "UN-AMERICAN" TACTICS IN NAMING A NEW TREASURER "WITHOUT THE ADVICE OR CONSENT OF THE (INSULAR) SENATE."

THE STATEMENT WAS ISSUED IN WASHINGTON WHILE LEAHY WAS EN ROUTE TO THIS COUNTRY. THE APPOINTMENTS AGAINST WHICH IT COMPLAINED WERE TYPI-CAL OF THE GOVERNOR, WHO SPEAKS STRAIGHT XXX ETC., PICKING UP SECOND TO LAST GRAPH.

(ADVANCE) SAN JUAN--SECOND ADD WAR BROUGHT CLOSER TO AMERICA'S "GIBRALTAR." X X X WERE TOO HIGH.

AS NEEDLEWORK EXPORTS HAVE INCREASED SINCE THE LAW WENT INTO EFFECT, THE ASSUMPTION IS THAT NEEDLEWORK NOW IS DONE AT THE WORKERS' HOMES WHERE ENFORCEMENT OF WAGE RATES IS VIRTUALLY IMPOSSIBLE. ISLANDERS SAY THE BENEFITS TO LABOR WHICH THE LAW INTENDED WILL NOT BE REALIZED UNLESS THE LAW IS AMENDED TO PERMIT PUERTO RICO TO SET WAGE LIMITS FITTED TO ITS PECULIAR ECONOMIC SET-UP.

THEN THERE IS THE COASTWISE LAW, WHICH PREVENTS INTER-AMERICAN TRADE FROM BEING CARRIED ON OTHER THAN AMERICAN SHIPS. ITS EFFECT IS TO GIVE ONE SHIPPING CONCERN A VIRTUAL MONOPOLY IN PASSENGER AND FREIGHT TRAFFIC BETWEEN HERE AND THE MAINLAND. PUERTO RICANS COMPLAIN IT KEEPS RATES TOO HIGH.

ALL THESE COMPLAINTS ADD UP TO A CHRONIC FEELING, EXPRESSED IN VARIOUS WAYS, THAT PUERTO RICO "DOESN'T REALLY BELONG" TO THE AMERICAN FAMILY WHICH CLAIMS IT. THIS FEELING WOULD BE GREATLY ASSUAGED, HOWEVER, IF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AGENCIES SUCCEEDED IN DEVELOPING NEW CROPS TO REPLACE RUINED COFFEE AND TAKE UP THE SLACK OF EMPLOYMENT LEFT BY THE SUGAR QUOTAS.

COFFEE, ONCE THE MAINSTAY OF THE ISLAND'S ECONOMY, IS APPARENTLY DOOMED. LOW YIELD PER ACRE MAKES PRODUCTION COST TOO HIGH FOR COMPETITION--12 TO 15 CENTS A POUND COMPARED TO 6 AND 7 CENTS FOR COFFEE FROM BRAZIL.

WHATEVER REPLACES IT MUST REQUIRE INTENSIVE HAND CULTIVATION AND MUST PAY A HIGH RETURN PER ACRE. FOR THERE ARE TOO MANY HANDS HERE AND TOO FEW ACRES.

30.24-2531

VANILLA IS ONE SUBSTITUTE NOW AN OBJECT OF EXPERIMENT. IT GROWS ON COFFEE LAND. IT IS CULTIVATED BY HAND. IF IT CAN BE GROWN SUCCESSFULLY, IT CAN BE EXPECTED TO YIELD $750 PER ACRE PER YEAR, 10 TIMES THE INCOME FROM THE SAME AMOUNT OF COFFEE LAND.

A DISEASE WHICH ROTS THE ROOTS OF THE VANILLA VINE IS ALL THAT STANDS BETWEEN VANILLA AND EN EMPLOYMENT BOOM IN PUERTO RICO.

ERADICATION OF THE ROT WIL COST MONEY. SO FAR THE MONEY HAS COME FROM PUERTO RICO'S OMNIBUS WORK RELIEF AGENCY, THE PUERTO RICO RECONSTRUCTION CORPORATION. BUT THE PRRA'S PENDING APPROPRIATION HAS JUST BEEN CUT IN HALF BY CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.

NO ONE KNOWS YET WHAT THAT CUT WILL MEAN TO THE PRRA'S WORK IN DEVELOPING OTHER NEW HIGH-PAY CROPS STILL IN THE EXPERIMENTAL STAGE. MOST IMPORTANT OF THESE ARE THE SOURCES OF PERFUME FIXITIVES, WHICH HAVE THE ADVANTAGE OF TARIFF PROTECTION.

MAY 26 1940

ONE SUCH IS YLANG-YLANG OIL, PRODUCED FROM A FLOWER OF A TREE WHICH HAS BEEN GROWN IN PUERTO RICAN DOORYARDS FOR CENTURIES. ANOTHER IS VETIVER ROOT, WHICH HOUSEWIVES HERE DRY AND HANG UP IN THEIR CLOTHES CLOSETS IN THE MISTAKEN BELIEF IT CHASES AWAY COCKROACHES. A THIRD IS LEMON GRASS WHICH PRODUCES--VIOLET PERFUME.

AMBRETTE, WHENCE COMES BENEDICTINE, AND CITRONELA, BASE FOR PREPARATIONS TO FIGHT THE COMMON COLD, ARE STILL OTHER POSSIBILITIES.

DEVELOPMENT OF EACH OF THESE TO THE POINT OF PROFITABLE PRODUCTION HAS ITS OWN INDIVIDUAL DIFFICULTIES, BUT BACK OF ALL IS THE NEED FOR PROCESSING. OILS MUST BE EXTRACTED. THAT MEANS NEW METHODS, NEW MACHINERY. AND THE ISLANDERS HESITATE TO CO-OPERATE BECAUSE THEY MISTRUST NEW MACHINES.

THIS IS TRUE TO SUCH AN EXTENT THAT THE MISTRUST HAS BECOME AN IDIOM OF THE LANGUAGE. WHEN A GIRL THINKS A BOY HAS TOO SMOOTH A LINE OF TALK, SHE TELLS HIM "CORRIENDA LA MAQUINA" WHICH IS SPANISH FOR "YOU ARE TRYNG TO RUNTHE MACHINE." IN OTHER WORDS, "YOU ARE TRYING TO FOOL ME."

SUGARCANE FIELD VEHICLES HAVE RUBBER TIRES LIKE THOSE ON AMERICAN AUTO TRUCKS. BUT THE VEHICLES ARE STILL TWO WHEELED CARTS, DRAWN BY OXEN, IN SPITE OF THE ECONOMIES THAT WOULD ACCRUE FROM USE OF TRACTORS. TWO-THIRDS OF THE LABOR USED IN SUGAR PRODUCTION COULD BE ELIMINATED THROUGH USE OF MACHINERY, AND WAGES UNDER THIS MORE EFFICIENT SYSTEM COULD BE RAISED FROM THEIR PRESENT $1.20 LEVEL TO $3 AND $3.75 A DAY. THAT WOULD LEAVE NO PLACE FOR THOSE WHOSE JOBS WOULD BE DESTROYED. SO THE PRESENT SYSTEM CONTINUES AND THE STANDARD OF LIVING STAYS DOWN.

MAY 26 1940

PUERTO RICANS DO NOT PUT THE ENTIRE BLAME FOR THE SITUATION ON THE UNITED STATES. MANY FEEL THAT PART OF THE TROUBLE IS DUE TO THE DISREGARD OF WEALTHY INDUSTRIALISTS AND LANDHOLDERS FOR THE SOCIAL PROBLEMS OF THE LESS FORTUNATE. NOR ARE ALL PUERTO RICANS SITTING DOWN AND WAITING FOR THE UNITED STATES TO IMPROVE CONDITIONS. SOME HAVE TAKEN THE LEAD TOWARD BETTER THINGS THEMSELVES.

THE PORTO RICO IRON WORKS IN PONCE, FOR EXAMPLE, HAD ITS OWN MINIMUM WAGE LAW AND 8-HOUR DAY BEFORE UNITED STATES LAWS ENFORCED THOSE IDEAS. A CO-OPERATIVE MEDICAL SERVICE WATCHES OVER THE HEALTH OF ITS 150 EMPLOYES, AND ENABLES THE WORKERS TO BUY THEIR OWN HOMES ON THE INSTALLMENT PLAN AT NO MORE COST THAN RENT.

THE INSULAR GOVERNMENT PASSED A MINIMUM WAGE LAW FOR WOMEN IN 1919.

TODAY IT HAS THE ONLY AMERICAN WAGE-HOUR LAW THAT APPLIES TO FARM AS WELL AS FACTORY WORKERS. IT ALSO BOASTS A CHILD LABOR LAW, AND ONE OF THE FINEST INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENT COMPENSATION SYSTEMS IN THE WORLD.

JOBLESS RELIEF AS IT IS KNOWN IN THE UNITED STATES IS UNKNOWN HERE, HOWEVER; THE UNITED STATES HAS PROVIDED NONE. NOR DOES UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION EXTEND TO THE ISLAND. NOT EVEN DEPENDENT CHILDREN ARE GIVEN AID. THE HOUSING ADMINISTRATION IS SO SET UP THAT IT STIMULATED BUILDING OF LESS THAN A HALF DOZEN NEW HOMES. LOW COST HOUSING HAS BEEN CARRIED OUT BY THE PRRA, BUT NOT FAST ENOUGH TO KEEP UP WITH THE GROWTH OF SLUMS.

A VISITOR HERE WHO ALSO HAS VISITED THE TENNESSEE VALLEY IN THE UNITED STATES IS IMPRESSED WITH THE SIMILARITY OF THE PROBLEMS OF THE PEOPLE OF THE TENNESSEE AND THE PEOPLE OF PUERTO RICO. SO IT IS NOT SURPRISING THAT THERE IS AMOVE AFOOT FOR A PUERTO RICAN "TVA." AT THE PRESENT TIME, THE TVA'S PROGRAM IS PARALLELED IN MANY RESPECTS BY THE PRRA: RESETTLEMENT OF WORKERS FROM MARGINAL LANDS, TERRACING OF ERODED FIELDS, CO-OPERATIVE OWNERSHIP OF SUGAR MILLS, LOANS OF SEEDS AND FARM ANIMALS, REFORESTATION, CONSTRUCTION OF ROADS, AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

MAY 26 1940

POLITICAL MANEUVERING HAS DELAYED THE PRRA AS IT HAS EVERY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT MOVE TO HELP THE ISLAND. LOCAL POLITICAL LEADERS WANT THE HELP BUT RESENT THE "INTERFERENCE" OF ACCOMPANYING CONTROLS. BUSINESSMEN AND CIVIC LEADERS BLAME POLITICAL CORRUPTION FOR THE LACK OF CO-OPERATION. POLITICIANS BLAME THE BUSINESSMEN AND CIVIC LEADERS FOR FAILING TO TAKE THEIR SHARE OF RESPONSIBILITY IN POLITICS.

SIGNIFICANTLY, NEITHER BLAMES THE PRESENT GOVERNOR OF THE ISLAND, WILLIAM LEAHY, WHO SPEAKS STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER AND ACTS THE SAME WAY--A CONTRAST TO LATIN ROUNDABOUT METHODS. HE FAVORS LIBERALIZATION OF THE SUGAR AND WAGE-HOUR LAWS. HE IS DUE SOON TO TALK TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IN WASHINGTON.

AS ONE NAVY MAN (HE'S FORMER CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS) TO ANOTHER NAVY MAN (PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS FORMER ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY) HE MAY FOCUS WHITE HOUSE ATTENTION ON THE WEAKNESSES WHICH CONCEIVABLY COULD PRODUCE A "FIFTH COLUMN" IN THE "GIBRALTAR" AMERICA DEPENDS ON AS HER FIRST LINE OF HEMISPHERE DEFENSE.

FRENCH EXTEND GAINS ON SOMME BUT ADMIT CAPTURE OF BOULOGNE

German Infantry "Mowed Down" Between Aisne And Meuse—Allied Garrison In Channel Port Battles To Bitter End

MAY 28 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, Monday, May 27—French refugees, fleeing German bombs, arrived in two fishing smacks at St. Peter-le-Port, capital of Guernsey Island, in the English Channel, last night. They told of an escape from a large French port while it was being bombed.

MAY 27 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 26—The official French communique tonight said:

"Fighting is still violent on the Somme (river), where we have accentuated our advance, and on the Southern front.

30.24-2533

30.24-2533

"The enemy, who accumulated important forces in the Boulogne region in recent days, succeeded in taking the city after a bitter fight which was carried on in the streets.

Enemy Losses Very High

"In the latest combats which have taken place between the Aisne (river) and the Meuse (river) it is confirmed from prisoners that losses inflicted on the enemy by our artillery fire and automatic arms are very high.

"During the action we have found entire sections of German infantry mowed down on the spot.

"Our pursuit planes and anti-aircraft defenses, going into action violently against enemy formations which came to attack some of our fields, dispersed them, inflicting heavy losses."

The Morning Communique

MAY 27 1940

The morning communique said:

"The enemy launched several attacks on our Northern front. These attacks failed.

"Local actions which we started on the Somme front turned to our advantage and we seized new crossing points on the river. Between the Aisne and the Meuse artillery on both sides was very active.

"A strong enemy attack was repulsed in the Montmedy region."

Loss Of City A Heavy Blow

The loss of Boulogne was a heavy blow. The city, a British base in the World War, was an important port for traffic between France and England. Its 60,000 inhabitants thrive on the fishing industry.

The Allied forces are attempting to close the twenty-mile bottleneck, bounded by the Bapaume and Peronne sectors, through which the Germans rushed to the sea. The military picture drawn here by authorities indicated that the general position of the lines running from Belgium to northern France had not changed materially in the last day.

The army zone commanded by military authorities was extended by decree to include eight departments of northern and central France. A previous decree already included the territory from the battlefields to Paris. The new zone took in important French seaports, including Le Havre and Cherbourg.

Nazis Fail To Gain Ground

The Germans have failed to gain new ground for forty-eight hours in the fighting in the interior, the War Ministry spokesman told his press conference.

The Nazis launched two strong attacks against Valenciennes and the sector around that important industrial city near the Belgian border this morning in their campaign to destroy the northern Allied armies but were reported repulsed.

The battle in that area is continuing tonight.

The French armies on the south side of the corridor to the sea continued their mopping-up campaign along the Somme, taking a bridgehead (here twenty-one words were censored).

German air activity was concentrated principally against the northern Allied forces while Allied planes replied with bombings of armored columns running the gantlet between the French, British and Belgian units in Flanders and the central French armies.

The stonewall defense against heavy and repeated German attacks was said by the spokesman to have given Generalissimo Maxime Weygand much satisfaction. He described the generalissimo as "confident and full of hope" as a result of the operations.

The steady resistance to Germany came shortly after Weygand took the sensational step of dismissing summarily fifteen generals who figured in the French rout from the Meuse front and put new blood into the Allied high command.

General Duval, military commentator of the newspaper Le Journal, wrote today that the situation in the Flanders battle is of first importance.

"The Germans have brought together a large part of their forces and are pushing energetically toward the coast seeking to surround our armies," he said. "The latter are resisting with superb stubbornness. All the withdrawals which they have carried out have always been voluntary and the Germans have not yet achieved any notable advantage."

FALL OF CALAIS REPORTED BY GERMAN ARMY

English Naval Bases Now In Range Of Nazi Guns, Berlin Says

Sinking Of British Aircraft Carrier In Norway Also Claimed

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 26—Calais still remains in possession of the Allies despite German claims of its capture, authorized British sources declared tonight.

MAY 27 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 26—Calais, French seaport, twenty-two miles across the Strait of Dover from the English shore, has fallen to the German spearhead through northern France, the high command announced tonight.

Calais, at the narrowest neck of the Channel, is eight minutes by bomber from the English coast—a potential springboard for invasion of England.

As the Nazis pushed their offensive in the battle for the Channel and authorized German sources underscored the possibilities of an offensive directly against England, a special radio broadcast announced the sinking of a British aircraft carrier.

Taken After Hard Fight

Calais was taken after hard fighting, the high command said. The strategically important harbor had been encircled since Saturday, Germans said. The attackers had pushed on along the coast as far as Gravelines, twelve miles east of Calais.

Military spokesmen already had said Calais was useless as a base for the Allies after the Germans had succeeded in working around it.

In taking the port, the Germans adopted the tactics they used in securing the fall of Namur and Liege, by going around stoutly resisting points and holding them in a pinchers until their resistance collapsed.

Within Range Of Britain

German writers already had pointed out that capture of the town puts Germany's long-range guns within shooting distance of British naval bases.

The communique announcing capture of Calais said nothing regarding the booty taken, although the German spokesmen have declared they expected to find valuable stores there.

The brief communique said:

"Calais fell into German hands today following hard fighting after our troops had continued their advance to Gravelines."

Pushing Farther North

The forces at Gravelines were deemed certain here to be pushing farther north, toward Dunkerque, last French port of importance remaining in Allied hands in the enclosed sector.

By seizing all the ports, the Germans thus hoped to capture or destroy the Allied army trapped between the northern and southern German pinchers.

The unidentified aircraft carrier was said to have been sunk off Harstad, in the Narvik region of far northern Norway, as a result of bomb hits Friday and Saturday.

Nazi flyers, finishing off the job started Friday, hit the carrier with three more bombs, including one of the "heaviest caliber," yesterday and sent it to the bottom, the broadcaster announced.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—Britain started the war with six aircraft carriers and had at least five others nearing completion. She has acknowledged the loss of one, H. M. S. Courageous, torpedoed and sunk last September 17.]

Nazis Bombing Airports

The German air force has begun to pick off England's airports—a usually significant guide post in the Nazi blitzkrieg technique—while ground forces are reported closing in for the kill on encircled Allied armies in Belgium and northern France.

Today's communique said the battle area was being methodically reduced with Stukas (dive-bombers) spreading death among the imperiled Allies and that bombs had been dropped with "good effect" on numerous airports in eastern and southeastern England Friday night.

Whether that meant that the long-expected assault on England was about to begin or that Germany merely was trying to cripple British air activity on the continent was a question which, of course, was unanswered.

"Great Surprises" Ahead

An authorized military source said last night, however, that "great surprises" were in store in the way of new weapons and intimated they were designed to be effective in a German attack on the British Isles.

Commenting that the fighting in the last two weeks was "only an introduction to settlement with England," DNB declared "the far-reaching arm of the German air force has now slammed down across the Channel," and "it can be assumed that it will not stop at these first attacks."

An authorized source disclosed also that the economic war against England was being stepped up and, at the same time, warnings to neutral ships to stay out of British convoys were repeated.

MAY 27 1940

Worse Plight Expected

The plight of the surrounded Allied forces is bound soon to get worse because all roads to the south and east have been cut and supplies must reach them through bomb-harried Channel ports, authorized sources said.

Two German columns, one northeast of Lille and the other to the southwest, have approached within eighteen miles of each other and can be expected to draw the string on a small circle within the larger German iron ring, they said.

This would isolate Allied troops within the area bounded by Lille, Valenciennes, Cambrai and Lens from larger forces farther northwest.

"Tough Opposition"

The possibility that the Allies yet might be able to hold the English Channel coast in the battle in Flanders and Artois was not even considered here, although the high command admitted the Germans were meeting "tough opposition" at certain places.

A German spokesman estimated that a million British, French and Belgian troops have been caught in the German encirclement and are scheduled for prison camps or death within the next few days.

The bombing of a transport in Dunkerque harbor raised the question whether the British still were hoping to stave off defeat by landing more troops or whether a retreat from their perilous position has started.

Powder Dump Fired

Firing of a powder magazine and marine depot at Dunkerque, a French Channel port, during raids there and at Ostend and Zeebrugge also was reported.

Credited also to the Nazi air fleet were 59 downed Allied warplanes yesterday against 11 German losses, damage to a battleship and cruiser at Narvik, Norway's Nazi-held iron ore port, and air blows on two 5,000-ton mechantmen, two smaller merchant ships and a warship off Calais.

Last week was "the most fateful" of the war because it "brought Germany a good piece nearer to fulfillment of its deepest hopes . . . and pressed England nearer to the abyss," declared the Boersen Zeitung in a special military review.

Allies Separated

The writer said the Nazi thrust to the Channel coast had separated France from England and divided British leadership from French leadership.

When the northern Allied army is defeated, he said, "England and France will fight each for herself for bare life without being able to bring any essential help to the other."

Newspapers generally boasted today that Germany had seized Britain's blockade weapon and had turned it against her in a "catastrophical" manner.

Reinforcement "Assured"

"Reinforcement of our forces, seen in the widest sense, is assured," said the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, "while England, cut off from all Scandinavia, Holland, Belgium and a great part of France, will have to suffer under a scarcity of all important materials of food and war.

"How long Britain will endure that is a question which, since the British are very obstinate, is very difficult to answer.

"In any case, we are sitting on the long arm of the lever. Through the admirable audacity and planning of our war leadership in all spheres the result scarcely can be doubtful."

Nazi Generals Reported Cocksure Of Victory

MAY 27 1940

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the Western German Armies, May 26—The progress of the German offensive has imbued army leaders with a buoyancy of spirit and a confidence which make it difficult for an observer to realize a bitterly fighting Allied army is not far away.

German army leaders are so cocksure of victory that questions which a few months ago would have been shunted aside as bearing on important military information are discussed today with utmost frankness.

When we entered staff headquarters no effort was made to hide highly significant maps. One commanding general had an enormous map indicating not only how the pincer movement was to work against the Allied forces in northwestern France and Belgium but beyond that how troops were to move in the offensive on England.

He did not bother to remove it as we entered his private workroom. Nobody seems to care any longer whether the enemy knows the German plans.

This feeling of confidence in their arms has been nourished by the rich material booty obtained in Holland and Belgium. One thousand bales of American wool were seized on a dock in Antwerp, and this was but one find.

Large gasoline reserves were another, together with other raw materials.

Dill Replaces Ironside As British Staff Chief

Latter To Take Charge Of Home Defense—Shakeup Ordered In Move To "Revitalize" High Command

MAY 27 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 26—Great Britain shook up the Imperial general staff today in a sudden move to "revitalize" it, unleashed a four-hour aerial Blitzkrieg of her own upon Germany's vaunted air force and acknowledged the loss of a destroyer and a minesweeping trawler in the grim give-and-take struggle with the Nazis.

After the prolonged air battle over the French coast between Calais and Dunkerque in which British pilots said the sky was filled with aircraft, the Royal Air Force said twenty German bombers and fighters were shot down and twenty others put out of action at a cost to the British of only five planes.

War Brought Closer Home

Developments of this action-crammed Sunday which brought the war even closer home to this invasion-threatened island included these:

MAY 27 1940

Lieut. Gen. Sir John Greer Dill, 58, was named commander of the Imperial general staff, replacing Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, 60, who was given command of the home force, which will defend Britain against any invasion.

The Admiralty announced the loss of the destroyer Wessex, 1,100 tons, in an enemy air attack off the coast of France, and the sinking of the minesweeping trawler Charles Boyes, 270-ton converted fishing boat, by a German mine. Six men were lost on the Wessex and fifteen on the trawler. The Wessex was the twelfth destroyer lost by Britain in the war.

German Troops Bombed

The Air Ministry reported bombing German troops and communications in France and Belgium yesterday and last night. It placed the enemy's losses in those combats at sixty aircraft shot down or seriously damaged while the British lost eighteen bombers and fighters.

Military authorities said British soldiers, fighting "magnificently" with their allies, were holding the Germans at bay at Calais, twenty-two miles across the Channel from Dover, and the British general headquarters said the courage of the troops on the Continent had not been impaired by events of the last few days when the Nazi steamroller ground its way to the Channel.

Follows French Shakeup

The shift in the Imperial general staff came exactly a week after Generalissimo Maurice Gustave Gamelin was deposed as head of the Allied forces and twenty-four hours after the dismissal of fifteen French generals by the new generalissimo, Maxime Weygand.

General Dill, an Irishman once described as "one of the most able soldiers in the whole British army," has a reputation for energy and quick decisions. Only last month he was appointed vice-chief of the Imperial general staff to "relieve the strain" on General Ironside.

The appointments were said to represent by far the most important alterations in the direction of Britain's military strategy since the war started. Informed sources predicted other changes would follow among the high-ranking officers, one being Sir Cyril L. N. Newall, chief air marshal.

To Lead Home Forces

General Ironside, 60, replaces the retiring Gen. Sir Walter Kirke as commander in chief of the home forces, a post now considered of responsibility comparable to that of Lord Gort, commander in chief of the British field forces in France.

Ironside will be responsible for all measures against possible invasion by sea or by air.

One well-informed London source said the changes were brought about by "the development of the military situation and the necessity of placing the defense of Britain against possible invasion in the strongest possible hands."

Military circles described the change as "proof of the very great importance which the Government attaches to perfecting by every means in their power the strength of Britain's home defenses.

"In appointing General Ironside to this post the Government has chosen a commander who possesses exceptional gifts of energy and drive, and who has deservedly a great reputation for these qualities abroad," they said.

"General Dill, who, it will be recalled, recently became vice-chief of the general staff, is the obvious successor to General Ironside, and his appointment will cause general satisfaction at home and abroad."

While thousands of Britons offered prayers against the German legions and, with the clatter of Britain's war industry disturbing the Sunday calm for the first time, military circles said the Allied troops still are holding Calais, Channel port on the French side, twenty-two miles from Dover.

Fighting "Magnificently"

These sources said the British Expeditionary Force is fighting "magnificently" at the side of French troops at Calais and has repulsed all enemy attacks on that important port.

The Air Ministry reported its aviators yesterday successfully attacked "pontoon and road bridges along the Belgian battlefront and mechanized columns on the road leading to Boulogne."

British bombs demolished a main road bridge across the River Lys, in Belgium, through which the enemy reinforcements were being brought to the battlefield.

"Large bodies of troops massing in a town in the German rear of the battlefield were heavily bombed," the Ministry reported.

In a battle off the French coast this morning, the Air Ministry said, at least eight enemy fighters and two bombers were brought down by the Royal Air Force. One R. A. F. fighting plane failed to return.

Trawler Sunk

The Admiralty announced that the mine-sweeping trawler Charles Boyes, a 270-ton converted fishing boat, had sunk after hitting a German mine, with the probable loss of her commanding officer, one officer and thirteen seamen.

Dowager Queen Mary, born 73 years ago today, celebrated the anniversary quietly in the west country village where she has been living since the war started.

She went to the village church to join the nation in prayer. Yesterday she received a big pile of congratulatory letters.

The woman who interrupted Cardinal Hinsley's sermon was about 30 years old. His Eminence had just said: "There can be no peace," when the woman shouted, "Peace!"

Woman Struggles

The cardinal repeated: "There can be no peace until . . ." and two men in the congregation lifted the woman, who began to struggle, from her seat and handed her over to an usher.

"Murderers!" she screamed. "My house is a house of prayer. Ye have made it into a . . ."

The usher led her away. The cardinal's sermon was being broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation which quickly shut it off and substituted phonograph records for the clamor.

Lord Frederick Cambridge, 33, first cousin of King George VI, was listed today as missing in action in northern France. He is the second son of Queen Mary's oldest brother, the late Marquess of Cambridge, and had been serving as a captain in the Coldstream Guards.

Wounded Sent To Austria

A Reuters dispatch from Paris reported between 60,000 and 70,000 wounded German soldiers have been sent from the Western front to the former Austrian provinces of Carinthia and Styria.

According to reliable information received in Paris from the Austrian frontier, the dispatch said, all schools and hotels in the two provinces have been emptied and equipped as emergency hospitals.

More wounded British soldiers arrived home today, but the Ministry of Information held battle news to a minimum with this statement:

"No one in this country would wish to buy news at the price of a single British, French or Belgian life. We must all wait patiently and confidently till news can be given us with safety."

Agitators Watched

In addition to the publicly known Fascist sympathizers, suspicion and investigation in Britain was quietly centered today on agitators in the war factories, whose grumblnig and whispering have singled them out as pacifist organizers, on naturalized Germans who might feel "the call of blood" and on political refugees.

During the week end, political circles revived talk of the return of David Lloyd George to the Government service, though there were widely different ideas as to what capacity.

New British Chief Of Staff Known For Quick Decisions

General Dill Described Also As Man Of Energy And Master Military Strategist

MAY 27 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 26—The new British Imperial staff commander—an exponent of tank and bomber warfare—is said once to have had a price of $2,000 on his head.

For the rebellious Arab chieftain who offered the prize, $2,000 was probably a lot of money, so he wasn't under-estimating the value of Lieut. Gen. Sir John Greer Dill, then supreme commander of the British military forces in Palestine, Dill's reputation for energy and quick decisions had preceded him to the Near East in 1936.

The story may be apocryphal, but in any case it's told still in British army circles and it served to illustrate the character of the man chosen today to replace Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside as head of Britain's army and her chief strategist.

Born Christmas Day

He's an Ulsterman, born fifty-eight years ago on Christmas Day to John Dill, of Belfast, and his wife, Jane. His army career has been successful from its beginning.

He studied at Cheltenham College and at Sandhurst and entered the army in 1901. While serving against the Boers in South Africa he won the Queen's medal with five clasps.

A tall, well-built man, with trim mustache and smiling eyes, he became a captain in 1911, a major in 1914. He served in the World War and was decorated with the distinguished service order for bravery.

Became Colonel In 1920

He became a colonel in 1920, a major general in 1930, and a lieutenant general in April, 1936. After the World War he commanded the Second Infantry brigade, had two years as army instructor at the Imperial Defense College, and was later commander of the staff college at Camberley.

He also served one year in India as principal staff officer at Quetta.

In the general staff talks with France and Belgium, which followed Germany's remilitarization of the Rhineland in March, 1936, he was one of Britain's representatives, and under Defense Minister Sir Thomas Inskip he was active in drawing up plans for British rearmament.

Described As Brilliant

Fellow officers have described him as one of the most brilliant men in the British Army and a master strategist. For a time he was director general of military operations and intelligence, serving in that capacity from 1934 to 1936 when he resigned to take supreme command in Palestine. He remained there for one year.

He later commanded Britain's huge infantry base at Aldershot, and last October went to France as commander of the First Corps of the British Expeditionary force. Last month he was appointed vice-chief of the Imperial General Staff to "relieve the strain" on General Ironside. Upon the appointment he moved from France to London.

British Destroyer Lost

LONDON, May 26 (AP).—The Admiralty announced today the loss of the British destroyer Wessex in an enemy air attack. The Admiralty said six of the crew had been killed and fifteen wounded. With other naval units, the Wessex had been engaged in operations off the French coast.

One of the "W" class, the Wessex served in the World War. Completed March 5, 1918, the 1,100-ton vessel had a normal complement of 134 men and was capable of 34 knots. She carried four four-inch and two two-inch guns and six twenty-one-inch torpedo tubes.

The German report of sinking of an aircraft carrier off Norway by Nazi bombs was denied in informed circles here.

Paris Press Sees Allies Holding All Along Line

Situation in Flanders Called of Primary Importance

PARIS, May 26 (AP).—Gen. Duval, military commentator of the newspaper "Le Journal," wrote today that the situation in the Flanders battle was of first importance.

"The Germans have brought together there a large part of their forces and are pushing energetically toward the coast, seeking to surround our armies," he said. "The latter are resisting with superb stubbornness. All the withdrawals which they have carried out have always been voluntary and the Germans have not yet achieved any notable advantage."

Charles Morice, commentator for the newspaper "Le Petit Parisien," said the "immense front is divided into six parts: Flanders, Picardy, Somme, Aisne, Argonne and the Maginot line."

MAY 27 1940

"The formidable battle is developing more and more," he said. "Continually reinforced, the Germans are throwing unit after unit into the melee. No matter what the power of these attacks may be, the Allies are holding well everywhere and in several places have taken the initiative."

DEFENSE MOVES ARE EXPECTED DURING WEEK

Blackouts In Prospect With Some Form Of Martial Law

MAY 27 1940

De Valera Warns Of Menace As Police Round Up Treason Suspects

[By the Associated Press]

Dublin, May 26—Ireland suddenly awakened to the dangerous possibilities of invasion and treachery within, is expected to order extraordinary defense measures before the week is out, including a blackout.

Discussion of Europe's troubles until now have been academic in this capital that has seen so much blood spilled.

Premier Eamon De Valera sounded the death knell to complacency Saturday night, when he said in a speech:

"There is danger over this country, particularly today, and there is but one safeguard—to be prepared to defend the liberties we won against anyone who might try to invade them."

Calls For Volunteers

He called today for more volunteers to help police run down "any indication of treachery" and asked for more men to join the colors.

Other defense measures expected are a form of martial law and an enlarged force to guard the east and west shores.

Application of the blackout would be notable, for the Irish detest it—more because Britain once requested it than because of its inconvenience.

The "danger" to which Premier De Valera referred to, politically minded citizens say, includes such incidents as the recent finding of parachutes, foreign currency and codes and ciphers in houses known to harbor elements so anti-British that they might become pro-German.

Wife Of Poet Held

Mrs. Iseult Stuart, wife of an Irish novelist and poet, was charged in military court yesterday with assisting a German parachutist who still is at large. Mrs. Stuart's husband is believed to be in Germany.

Another arrested was Stephen C. Held, in whose house was found a parachute, German air-force badge and documents about harbors, bridges and airdromes.

"Unfortunately," De Valera told constituents at Galway today, "there is a very small group which appears to be meditating treason."

Country In War Zone

He asked for the "whole country to stand behind the Government in its defense efforts as one man."

"We really are within the war zone," he said.

"It is necessary to get thousands of young men to see that liberties won in the past should not be lost through negligence."

De Valera declared Ireland's defense forces should be put on a war footing.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, May 26 (AP)—Six gunmen identified as members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army raided a Belfast dance hall last night and forced the dancers to stand still while one of the men made a speech.

"The I. R. A. is not finished yet," he said. "It takes more than a few arrests to break up our ranks."

NEGOTIATIONS IN CONTRAST TO WAR SPIRIT

Mussolini Checks Preparations And Greets Militant Youths

MAY 27 1940

Il Duce Accompanied By Nazi Ambassador To Gymnastic Exhibit

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 26—The possibility of an agreement between Italy and Britain over the vexatious question of contraband control in the Mediterranean struck a faint note of peace today amid Italy's intensified preparations for war.

The disclosure in British circles that negotiations to soothe Italian irritation over the Allied blockade showed promise of success contrasted, however, with Premier Mussolini's conferences with his military chiefs and spectacular demonstrations in il Duce's presence to whip up popular war spirit.

Raise Cry For War

Il Duce stood impassive before them and made no comment other than a few words of appreciation for their athletic display when the youths raised great banners bearing such words as, "War! War!" and "Duce, We Want To March!"

Machine guns and light artillery fire set up a deafening din which caused some astonished spectators to believe war was at the very gates of Rome.

The demonstration by 10,000 youths started as Mussolini began to congratulate them on their gymnastic exhibition in Mussolini Forum. Mussolini was accompanied by Hans-Georg Viktor von Mackensen, German Ambassador, and members of a Japanese mission which has been in Rome several days.

No Italian Comment

No comment was available in authoritative Italian circles on statements of the British Ministry of Economic Welfare that Italian authorities had made proposals in the contraband control controversy which were regarded as "affording a very satisfactory basis" for an agreement.

British circles indicated optimism, describing the situation as "satisfactory." These sources said negotiations over contraband control which were begun here by Sir Wilfrid Greene are continuing, as well as trade talks.

Informed Italian circles interpreted the fact that the liner Rex was permitted to pass Gibraltar without inspection on its last voyage, the first time since the war began, was evidence that Britain was prepared to waive her high-seas control for milder methods.

Italians Not Told

The immunity of the Rex from contraband control has not yet been revealed to the Italian public, and some informed Italians insisted any Allied concessions were doomed to failure because of what they termed their shoddiness and insufficiency.

Two weeks of psychological preparations for war reached their apparent climax at the gymnastic exposition.

Directly afterward, Mussolini conferred with army chiefs, directors of mobilization and arms producers. Orders were issued to expand Italian production of artillery and to conserve the nation's gasoline supplies by suspending civilian motor traffic after June 1.

Renewed Conservation

The gasoline conservation measure was the same as that put into effect last September, but later modified to permit private vehicles to operate on gas rations.

Meanwhile Premier Benito Mussolini held conferences today with military chiefs and arms producers on problems of military preparations. Among those present were Marshal Rudolfo Graziani and Under Secretary for War Gen. Ubaldo Soddu. Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of staff, was not present.

Il Duce's conference was with Marshal Graziani, General Soddu, Gens. Camillo Grossi and Alfredo Guzzoni; General Bergia, commander of the Army Corps; Gen. Angelo Rossi, assistant chief of staff for anti-aircraft defense, and Lieut. Col. Piacentini, attached to the mobilization office of the War Ministry.

An Italian newspaper dispatch from North Africa today told of extensive war preparations in Tunisia, French African possession, which is one of Italy's Mediterranean "aspirations." The dispatch said all civilian motor traffic had been halted between midnight and 5 A. M. with the naval base at Bizerte blacked out nightly, and new trenches and anti-air-raid shelters being excavated in Tunis.

Barricades Erected

Sandbag barricades were being erected around public buildings, it said. The homes of many Italian residents searched, sporting good stores' stocks of small arms and ammunition confiscated and anti-aircraft guns and lookouts posted on the highest buildings.

Virginio Gayda, writing in Il Voce d'Italia, estimated that Italy's uncertain attitude toward the war was keeping 1,200,000 French and British troops inactive near the Italian frontiers in Africa.

As a consequence, he said, the French could not hope to repeat the last war's "Miracle of the Marne" when Italy's declaration of neutrality enabled France to hurl into the breach forces withdrawn from the Italian frontier.

The effect of this, Gayda said, was that Germany now was able "to move an army coresponding to a population of 80,000,000 against an army representing a population of scarcely 40,000,000."

Objectives Listed

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of "Il Telegrafo," of Leghorn, a newspaper owned by Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, gave further evidence in his weekly broadcast to the armed forces that when Italy moves it will be against the Mediterranean objectives already labeled "legitimate aspirations." These include Tunisia, Corsica, Malta, Gibraltar and Suez.

MAY 27 1940

"There can be no doubt," he said, "that as Germany shattered the iron ring, so we, under Mussolini's guidance, will shatter the iron ring with which they wanted us shut up in the Mediterranean. For every blow that Hitler gives up there, we will give a corresponding blow in our natural field of action."

Count Ciano returned to Rome today after his Albanian tour, during which he received pledges of Albanian support in any Italian war effort.

Liners to End Asia Runs

SINGAPORE, May 26 (AP).—The Singapore oce of the Italian Lloyd Triestino Steamship Company announced today that the liners Conte Verde and Conte Rosso would be taken of the Genoa-Shanghai run when they have completed their present voyages.

The Conte Verde is due at Singapore May 29, outward bound from Genoa, while the Conte Rosso is homeward bound somewhere in the Indian Ocean.

CONTRABAND AGREEMENT

British-Italian Conference End Called "Satisfactory"

London, May 26 (AP)—The British Ministry of Economic Warfare announced today that proposals by Italian authorities on Allied contraband control—one of the sorest points in the British-Italian relations—were regarded as "affording a very satisfactory" basis for an greement.

Sir Wilfrid Greene, who has been conferring in Italy, is returning to London tonight. It was said British and Italian representatives in Rome are engaged in working out details of a contraband agreement.

Americans Try In Vain to Quit Holland for U.S.

Several Hundred, Unhurt by Battles, Stranded; Envoy Gets No Word From Capital

BERLIN, May 26 (AP).—Several hundred Americans in Holland have been seeking vainly a way to get home ever since war swept over the Netherlands. A check by the American Minister at the Hague, George A. Gordon, showed that none of them was injured in the five days of fighting which preceded the Dutch surrender.

This correspondent was one of the first Americans to leave Holland after the German occupation, having received a visa and military permission to travel to Berlin.

Mr. Gordon on Wednesday said that he had received no message from the State Department since May 14 and that Germans had explained that communication lines were very limited. Thus he was in the dark as to what arrangements could be made for removing Americans from the Netherlands.

The Minister planned to remain at The Hague as long as possible. The legation has taken over the diplomatic and consular affairs of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Canada, Egypt and South Africa. Scores of British, French and Belgians failed in attempts to flee before the German occupation. Plans have been discussed for obtaining a special train to take the Americans out after the Netherlands rail lines have been repaired, but nothing definite has developed. The train would be routed through Germany and Switzerland to an Italian port.

Americans impatient to leave read posters on the doors of the American legation at The Hague or on the consulate in Amsterdam twice a day or inquire by telephone. The only answer is to keep in touch.

The consulate at Rotterdam was destroyed in the German bombing but the staff had taken refugee and most of the work is done in The Hague.

Because of the destruction of bridges in eastern Holland, it was necessary to travel by automobile to the border when this correspondent and others left Amsterdam. Under German military edicts, no private automobiles or taxis are permitted to operate without special permission. After obtaining a military permit for an automobile and to buy gasoline, it was easy—except for the detours. Through towns and villages across Holland, there was little evidence of military activity. Life was going on almost normally.

Trouble came however, at the Ijssel River, where bridge after bridge had been blown up by the Netherlands defense forces as they retreated to the Grebbe defense line. It was necessary to detour seventy-five miles to find a small ferry to take us across. The frontier was crossed between Oldenzaal, Holland, and Bentheim, Germany, where a German customs officer cursorily inspected luggage and supplied food stamps for the train trip to Berlin.

British Flyers Skim Ground To Strafe German Convoys

R. A. F. Reports Throwing Enemy Supply Lines Into Confusion In Series Of Daylight Raids

By GEOFFREY ANDERSON
Associate Press Correspondent

MAY 27 1940

With the Royal Air Force in France, May 26—Royal Air Force pilots of the advance air-striking force who returned from attacks on German transport columns said today they dived as low as 200 feet from the ground to bomb and machine-gun the Nazi convoys.

They said they had seen considerable confusion in the enemy supply lines which are feeding troops and material into the breach separating the northern Allied army from the French forces along the Somme.

These R. A. F. attacks, the pilots believe, have caused widespread damage. At one point bombs were dropped along the length of a convoy of twelve trucks, which broke up in confusion. Other trucks were attacked while parked in fields near the road, and infantry columns were bombed.

Although these raids were made in daylight and under intense enemy anti-aircraft fire, all the R. A. F. machines returned safely.

British Hurricanes which patrolled throughout the day reported little enemy air activity, but one fighter said he had managed to shoot down a twin-engined German machine.

"I saw one member of the crew bail out," he said. "Then another parachute fell from the plane, but there was nobody attached to it. I don't know what happened to the other man."

During last night's attacks heavy and medium bombs were dropped on several villages which were set afire, on an important road, a rail and river junction, an ammunition siding and on woods and roads where enemy troops were hiding. Only one plane failed to return.

The red glow of flames lit up a railway yard and ammunition sidings behind the German lines after the largest formation of battle bombers yet used in a night raid hurled hundreds of high explosive and incendiary bombs on their target early yesterday.

All these aircraft returned safely.

Some of the planes attacked a moving train, dropping heavy bombs from a low altitude.

Some seemed to burst only 10 yards from the engine. The train stopped and its occupants fled in confusion. Sweeping around in the sky and diving again, the bombers raked the train with machine-gun fire.

In a daylight encounter between 12 Hurricanes and 50 German aircraft, at least 1 and probably 3 Messerschmitts were shot down.

Nazi Rail Center Wiped Out In Heavy Artillery Exchange

Germans Retaliate By Pounding French Branch Line; Alsatian Villages Believed Fired

MAY 27 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, May 26—Heavy artillery of the French Maginot Line literally pulverized the important rail junction at Weil, Germany, just north of the Swiss frontier at Basel, in seven hours of intensive shelling this afternoon.

Guns of Germany's Rhineland Gibraltar at Istein replied by pounding the French branch line connecting Maginot river forts with the strategic Burgundian Gate, a gap between the Jura and the Vosges mountains before Belfort.

It was apparent that the German artillery scored hits somewhere along the line, for thick clouds of black smoke rose from a point behind the village of Wentzwiller.

It was believed the shells may have fired some of the little Alsatian villages vacated soon after the war started.

There was no doubt about the French hits, however, for they could be seen from here.

It was apparent the Weil rail junction, which links two important German Rhine lines—one from Karlsruhe by way of Fribourg southward along the river, and the other from Konstanz via Schopheim and Lorrach westward along the Rhine—was smashed beyond hope of repair for some time.

Two freight cars standing on a Weil siding vanished like magic and flying debris pattered down like rain. The roar of shells echoed across the river and through the hills.

Other French shells made a ruin of the Weil station and pocked the web of tracks between Weil and Haltingen.

EMPIRE JOINS KING IN PLEA FOR DIVINE AID

Britain Spends Grim Sabbath Praying And Working For Victory

MAY 27 1940

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 26—It was a grim Sunday for Britain—a Sunday of prayer and work, for while the faithful bowed in supplication from Land's End to John O'Groats, in cities, industrial towns and hidden hamlets, the factories turning out war materials were going at full blast, working a seven-day week for the first time since 1918.

Only one jarring note was sounded on this national day of prayer—a woman, shouting "Peace!" interrupted the sermon of Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Catholic prelate, in Westminster Cathedral. She was ejected.

King Leads Prayer

In gloomy Westminster Abbey, filled with memorials to men who had overcome other challenges to Britain's existence, King George led the prayer he had requested throughout the empire. Queen Elizabeth and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands accompanied him, and Prime Minister Churchill and many members of the Cabinet and their wives were in the congregation.

"The centuries rebuke the fears and calm the anxieties of the hour," said the Archbishop of Canterbury. "Here in the stillness of this church, moved by all the memories which surround us, we commit ourselves and our cause to God."

It was in the ancient abbey, where many of England's sovereigns lie buried, and where the nation's unknown warrior of the World War lies entombed, that the archbishop crowned King George only three years ago.

Dangers Stressed

"We have been called to take our place in a mighty conflict against the powers of evil and we ask God's strength that we may be found worthy of that high calling," the archbishop said after telling his vast congregation that the present dangers besetting the nation were the darkest in its history.

The last national day of prayer was on August 6, 1918, three months before the armistice proclaimed an Allied victory.

The King, perhaps to acknowledge the immediate and tremendous importance to Britain of her air force, wore the pale-blue uniform of a marshal of the Royal Air Force, the highest R. A. F. rank. He carried a gas mask on his shoulder.

Prime Minister Churchill; his predecessor, Neville Chamberlain; Major Clement R. Attlee, Lord Halifax and Arthur Greenwood—all members of Churchill's recently formed Cabinet—occupied choir stalls. Sir Dudley Pound,, first sea lord, and Sir Cyril Newall, air chief, and the Belgian and French Ambassadors attended.

Prayers were offered for the wounded, for all who are fighting, for Britain's allies, and for the countries conquered by Germany.

India Prays for Allied Cause

BOMBAY, May 26 (AP).—Prayers in churches, mosques and temples were offered throughout India today for the success of the Allies. The Marquess of Linlithgow, Viceroy of India, in a broadcast, urged India to give unstinted support to Great Britain, France and the other nations fighting Germany.

Paris Prays for Victory At St. Genevieve's Tomb

Pilgrimage for Patron Saint Among Largest Since 1918

PARIS, May 26 (AP).—People of Paris made a pilgrimage today to Mount Saint-Genevieve, in the heart of the capital, to pray for victory at the tomb of the city's patron saint.

Thousands of men, women and children plodded up the hill behind the Pantheon and attended outdoor services in front of the Church of Saint-Etienne du Mont, where St. Genevieve is buried.

The pilgrimage, held annually in honor of the saint, who gave Paris her protection against the invasion by the Huns in the fifth century, was one of the most extensive since the World War.

Nancy, Despite Bombs, Marks Memorial Day

NANCY, May 26 (AP).—In spite of repeated German aerial bombings of Nancy, the city government did not forget American Memorial Day today.

It chose the Sunday preceding the May 30 holiday, hung a large American flag from the balcony of the City Hall and decorated with flowers and French and American flags the tomb of Lieut. Richard Banks, first American World War soldier buried in Nancy's post-war cemetery.

Cooper Warns French Against Separate Peace

LONDON, May 26 (AP).—Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, broadcasting in French, warned the French people tonight against being "beguiled" into accepting a German peace.

"Germany," he said, "has never kept the terms of any peace treaty."

He declared that "everything is at stake. . . . United, we are bound to conquer, separted we might be destroyed. All Germany's efforts now are centered upon effecting a separation."

60,000 Nazi Wounded Are Reported in Austria

Dispatch Says Schools and Hotels Become Hospitals

LONDON, May 26 (AP).—Between 60,000 and 70,000 wounded German soldiers have been sent from the western front to the former Austrian provinces of Carinthia and Styria, it was reported today in a Reuters (British) news agency dispatch from Paris.

MAY 27 1940

Reliable information in Paris from the Austrian frontier, according to the dispatch, said all schools and hotels in the two provinces had been emptied and were being equipped as emergency hospitals.

Paris, May 26 (AP)—Nazi "noise terror" is a new weapon against Allied troops but, it is said, the Allies are getting used to it.

BRITAIN IS WOOING JAPAN, REDS CLAIM

Army Paper Says 'Flirtation' Is Over Situation In Pacific

Asserts It Would End If U. S. Joined Allies In War

MAY 27 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, May 26—The army newspaper Red Star declared today that Great Britain and Japan were "flirting" over the situation in the Pacific, but that this would end if the United States joined the Allies in the war.

"At a price of 'concession' of the Dutch East Indies," the newspaper said, "England has been and will continue to be interested in the existence of an imperialistic Japan strong enough to oppose the United States and good enough to carry on a policy of anti-Soviet adventures agreeable to the English bourgeoise. . . .

"Anti-Japan Position"

"This very British-Japanese contact induces the United States to assume a more decisive anti-Japanese position, increasing its pressure over the Pacific."

The Red Star said the United States could not conceal its discontent with the actions of Britain, such as the occupation of Iceland and the Dutch West Indies.

"It is obvious that these 'victories' of British arms are directed not against Germany but against the United States," it declared.

American Rearmament

Contending that American rearmament indicates the United States' readiness to participate in the war, the newspaper said that Britain, as a result, was compelled "at any price urgently to buy American help."

"Therefore," it reasoned, "the status quo in the East Indies will end and 'order' in the Pacific will be guarded not by a British-Japanese but by a British-American fleet."

French

PARIS, May 26 (AP)—The High Command issued the following communiqué tonight:

Fighting is still violent on the Somme [River], where we have accentuated our advance, and on the Southern Front.

The enemy, who accumulated important forces in the Boulogne region in recent days, succeeded in taking the city after a bitter fight that was carried on in the streets.

In the latest combats that have taken place between the Aisne [River] and the Meuse [River] it is confirmed from prisoners that losses inflicted on the enemy by our artillery fire and automatic arms are very high.

During the action we have found entire sections of German infantry mowed down on the spot.

Our pursuit planes and anti-aircraft defenses, going into action violently against enemy formations which came to attack some of our fields, dispersed them, inflicting heavy losses.

The High Command's morning communiqué follows:

The enemy launched several attacks on our Northern Front. These attacks failed.

Local actions that we started on the Somme front turned to our advantage and we seized new crossing points on the river. Between the Aisne and the Meuse artillery on both sides was very active.

A strong enemy attack was repulsed in the Montmedy region.

German

BERLIN, May 26 (AP)—Following is the text of today's German High Command communiqué:

We continued a concentric attack on the entire front against hemmed-in enemy armies in Flanders and Artois, continually narrowing the battleground. The enemy still offers at different times fierce opposition.

In order to break the enemy more quickly, the air force is taking part at many places in ground fighting.

On the Belgian-French coast, the air force dropped new bombs on harbor facilities of Zeebrugge, Ostend and Dunkerque. A powder magazine and marine depot in Ostend were set afire by bomb hits and a transport was badly damaged.

During the night of May 24-25 the air force attacked numerous airports in East and Southeast England with bombs with good effect.

Two great merchant ships, each of 5,000 tons, two smaller merchant ships and one warship were hit in the sea area off Calais.

On the southern front, no particular events. The air force continues its attacks against rail lines, artillery positions and troop concentrations, particularly in forests.

Losses of the enemy May 25 were, in all, fifty-nine airplanes, nineteen of them shot down in air battles and seventeen by anti-aircraft artillery. The rest were destroyed on the ground.

Eleven German planes are missing.

A great battleship as well as a cruiser received one heavy hit each in the Narvik district. Fire was observed.

A later communiqué stated:

British

LONDON, May 26 (AP)—The communiqué issued by the Air Ministry tonight stated:

Another ammunition and petrol dump was blown up by one of the bombers engaged in operations over the Rhineland and in the rear of the battlefield of Belgium and France during the night of Saturday and Sunday.

The attack was made in the early morning, the attacking aircraft making several runs over the target. Bombs were dropped, and from the explosions that followed it was evident that most of the bombs had found their mark.

MAY 27 1940

Before the raider departed the whole wood was well ablaze.

A hundred miles away from this target another bomber arrived over a bridge just as German troops were crossing. Direct hits were scored with the first salvo of bombs, the bridge almost breaking in two.

The pilot then came down low and gave his gunner a chance to disorganize that part of the column which had been missed in the first assault.

A third aircraft successfully attacked another bridge and later did considerable damage to a railway junction.

In other target areas in the rear of the German army a troop train and goods [freight] train were derailed. The troop train received the first direct hit, and within a few minutes flames spread from the engine to the rear guard's van.

The goods train was stationary near a railway siding which was set on fire by bombs which fell alongside and fires were also started in the goods yard.

In Germany, attacks were made on two airdromes and on a convoy of 12 motor vehicles, which was machine-gunned from a height of 100 feet after the rear of the convoy had been thrown into confusion by a direct hit by a heavy bomb.

An earlier communiqué stated:

Between 5:30 and 9:30 this morning, Royal Air Force squadrons shot down twenty German bombers and fighters and put another twenty out of action.

There were only five British losses in these four hours of fierce fighting.

A continuous air battle was fought over the French coast between Calais and Dunkerque. Pilots reported that the sky was filled with aircraft. A squadron leader spoke of encountering large masses of Messerschmitt 109s.

One formation of JU 88s [Junkers] was trying to bomb ships when a Spitfire squadron approached. Five Messerschmitt 110 twin-engined fighters protecting the bombers were put out of action and one of the bombers was destroyed.

This brought the squadron's bag of enemy aircraft since Friday morning to thirty-two.

Twenty Messerschmitt 110s were surprised 17,000 feet above Calais approaching from the sun. British fighters broke up defensive circles which the Nazi fighters tried to form.

The Messerschmitts twisted and turned in the air in their efforts to manoeuvre into a more favorable position but the British fighters put five of them out of action.

An hour and a half later the same squadron destroyed five more Messerschmitts, damaged another five and brought down an army cooperation aircraft.

The fight, starting at 10,000 feet, ended low over the French fields with Junkers 87 dive bombers hedge-hopping in all directions as they tried to escape from the attacking Spitfires. Before their protecting Messerschmitts could arrive, the Spitfires shot down five and damaged three more.

Another communiqué added:

The targets successfully attacked in the Rhineland included railway junctions, sidings and marshaling yards. Many important objectives on the enemy's lines of communication were also bombed. Dumps were exploded and supply depots set on fire. Two of our bombers were lost in these operations.

Medium bombers operating from both Britain and France again made successful attacks by day and by night on enemy armored vehicles, ammunition dumps and artillery. Four of these aircraft are missing.

Fighter activity was less intense yesterday owing to weather conditions, but some twenty enemy aircraft were shot down with loss of four British fighters.

Today over forty enemy aircraft have been destroyed or seriously damaged while seven of our fighters are missing.

Four of our fighters, reported missing on Thursday, have since returned safely to their airdromes in France.

Reconnaissance aircraft of the coastal command found oil tanks at Rotterdam still burning this morning after the recent bombing attack. They took the opportunity to bomb several more and set them on fire.

The Air Ministry also issued the following communiqué:

Pontoon and road bridges along the Belgian battlefront and mechanized columns of the road leading to Boulogne were among the many targets successfully attacked yesterday in a series of daylight raids carried out by bombers over a wide area.

In the morning a long column of supply lorries [trucks] was located on a main road near Boulogne and it was continuously attacked for fifteen minutes by a strong force of bombers.

Nearly 200 bombs were dropped in the course of this assault and, having released their heavier bombs from a height, raiders attacking individually dived from 5,000 feet to within 50 feet of the column to scatter their smaller bombs along the line of vehicles.

At the height of this raid, six enemy fighters of the Messerschmitt 109 type appeared out of the sun and, selecting two of our bombers, attacked them simultaneously, opening fire at 200 yards' range.

The British bombers replied vigorously with their rear guns and one of the Messerschmitts, caught by a well-aimed burst of fire, turned over and crashed.

Another section of bombers fighting its way out to sea over French territory was closely pressed by a Messerschmitt 109 which came under close range of one of our bombers.

Pieces of the Messerschmitt fell away and, with its engine on fire, the enemy fighter broke off the engagement.

Bridges over the river Lys across which enemy reinforcements were being brought to the Belgian battlefield were the chief objectives of the afternoon raid. A main road bridge at one point was hit by four heavy and numerous smaller bombs, its demolition being confirmed by the following section of bombers.

In addition, the northern entrance to the bridge was effectively blocked by houses which collapsed across the roadway after direct hits.

Two pontoon bridges which the enemy had thrown across the river to replace main bridges previously demolished were also attacked.

One was wrecked and the other badly damaged and the approach to it blocked by fallen buildings and bomb craters.

Large bodies of troops massing in a town in the German rear of the battlefield were heavily bombed in the late afternoon.

Another Air Ministry communiqué follows:

Yesterday evening and during the night, successful bombing attacks were carried out in Northern France, Belgium and Western Germany against enemy forces, their communications and supply depots.

Our fighters have been continuously active and have had further successes. Two of our squadrons patroling the French coast early this morning encountered large formations of enemy bombers with strong fighter escorts.

At least eight enemy fighters and two bombers are known to have been shot down. One of our fighters failed to return.

Text of President Roosevelt's Radio Address on the Nation's Defense Problems

WASHINGTON, May 26 (AP).—The text of President Roosevelt's radio report to the nation on the defense program follows:

At this moment of sadness throughout most of the world, I want to talk with you about a number of subjects that directly affect the future of the United States. We are shocked by the almost incredible stories that come to us of what is happening at this moment to the civilian populations of Norway and Holland and Belgium and Luxemburg and France.

I think it is right on this Sabbath evening that I should say a word in behalf of women and children and old men who need help—immediate help in their present distress—help from us across the seas, from us who are still free to give it.

Tonight over the once peaceful roads of Belgium and France, millions are now moving, running from their homes to escape bombs and shells and fire, without shelter and almost wholly without food. They stumble on; knowing not where the end of the road will be. I remind you of these people because each one of you that is listening to me tonight has a way of helping them. The American Red Cross, which represents each of us, is rushing food, clothing and medical supplies to these destitute millions. Please—I beg you—give according to your means to your nearest Red Cross chapter, give as generously as you can. I ask this in the name of our common humanity.

Time to Open Eyes

Let us sit down again, together, you and I, to consider our own pressing problems that confront us.

There are many among us who in the past closed their eyes to events abroad because they believed in utter good faith what some of their fellow Americans told them—that what was taking place in Europe was none of our business; that no matter what happened over there, the United States could always pursue its peaceful and unique course in the world.

There are many among us who closed their eyes from lack of interest or lack of knowledge; honestly and sincerely thinking that the many miles of salt water made the American hemisphere so remote that the people of North, Central and South America could go on living in the midst of their vast resources without reference to, or danger from, other continents of the world.

There are some among us who were persuaded by minority groups that we could maintain our physical safety by retiring within our continental boundaries—the Atlantic on the east, the Pacific on the west, Canada on the north and Mexico on the south. I illustrated the futility—the impossibility—of that idea in my message to the Congress last week. Obviously, a defense policy based on that is merely to invite future attack.

Illusions Shattered

And, finally, there are a few among us who have deliberately and consciously closed their eyes because they were determined to be opposed to their government's foreign policy, to be partisan, and to believe that anything that the government did was wholly wrong.

To those who have closed their eyes for any of these many reasons, to those who would not admit the possibility of the approaching storm—to all of them the past two weeks have meant the shattering of many illusions.

They have lost the illusion that we are remote and isolated and, therefore, secure against the dangers from which no other land is free.

In some quarters, with this rude awakening has come fear bordering on panic. It is said that we are defenseless. It is whispered by some that only by abandoning our freedom, our ideals, our way of life, can we build our defenses adequately, can we match the strength of the aggressors.

I did not share those illusions. I do not share these fears.

We are now more realistic. But let us not be calamity-howlers and discount our strength. Let us have done with both fears and illusions. On this Sabbath evening, in our homes in the midst of our American families, let us calmly consider what we have done and what we must do.

"Facts" About Defense

In the past two or three weeks all kinds of stories have been handed out to the American public about our lack of preparedness. It has even been charged that the money we have spent on our military and naval forces during the last few years has gone down the rat hole. I think it is a matter of fairness to the nation that you hear the facts.

We have spent large sums of money on the national defense. This money has been used to make our Army and Navy today the largest, the best equipped, and the best trained peace-time military establishment in the history of this country.

Let me tell you just a few of the many things accomplished during the past few years. I do not propose to go into every detail. It is a known fact, however, that in 1933, when this Administration came into office, the United States Navy had fallen in standing among the navies of the world, in power of ships and in efficiency, to a relatively low ebb. The relative fighting power of the Navy had been greatly diminished by failure to replace ships and equipment which had become out-of-date.

215 New Warships

Between 1933 and 1940—seven fiscal years—your government will have spent $1,487,000,000 more than it spent on the Navy during the seven years before 1933.

What did we get for this money?

The fighting personnel of the Navy rose from 79,000 to 145,000.

During this period 215 ships for the fighting fleet have been laid down or commissioned, practically seven times the number in the preceding similar period.

Of these we have commissioned twelve cruisers, sixty-three destroyers, twenty-six submarines, three aircraft carriers, two gunboats, seven auxiliaries and many smaller craft. Among the many ships now being built and paid for are eight new battleships.

Ship construction costs millions of dollars—more in the United States than anywhere else in the world; but it is a fact that we cannot have adequate naval defense for all American waters without ships—ships that sail the surface of the ocean, ships that move under the surface and ships that move through the air. And, speaking of airplanes that work with the Navy, in 1933 we had 1,127 useful aircraft, and today we have 2,892 on hand and on order. Nearly all of the 1933 planes have been replaced by new planes because they became obsolete or worn out.

Stronger Than in World War

The Navy is far stronger today than at any peace-time period in the whole long history of the nation. In hitting power and in efficiency, I would even make the assertion that it is stronger today than it was during the World War.

The Army of the United States in 1933 consisted of 122,000 enlisted men. In 1940 that has been practically doubled. The Army of 1933 had been given few new implements of war since 1919, and had been compelled to draw on old reserve stocks left over from the World War.

The net result of all this was that our Army by 1933 had very greatly declined in its ratio of strength with the armies of Europe and the Far East.

That was the situation I found.

Since then great changes have taken place.

Between 1933 and 1940—seven fiscal years—your government will have spent $1,292,000,000 more than it spent on the Army the previous seven years.

Modern Army Equipment

What did we get for this money?

The personnel of the Army has been almost doubled. And by the end of this year every existing unit of the present regular Army will be equipped with its complete requirements of modern weapons. Existing units of the National Guard will also be largely equipped with similar items.

Here are some striking examples taken from a large number:

Since 1933 we have actually purchased 5,640 airplanes, including the most modern type of long-range bombers and fast pursuit planes, though, of course, many of these which were delivered four, five, six or seven years ago have worn out through use and been scrapped.

These planes cost money—a lot of it. For example, one modern four-engine long-range bombing plane costs $350,000; one modern interceptor pursuit plane costs $133,000; one medium bomber costs $160,000.

In 1933 we had only 355 anti-aircraft guns. We now have more than 1,700 modern anti-aircraft guns of all types on hand or on order. And you ought to know that a three-inch anti-aircraft gun costs $40,000 without any of the fire-control equipment that goes with it.

More Guns, Tanks, Pilots

In 1933 there were only twenty-four modern infantry mortars in the entire army. We now have on hand and on order more than 1,600.

In 1933 we had only forty-eight modern tanks and armored cars; today we have on hand and on order 1,700. Each one of our heavier tanks costs $46,000.

There are many other items in which our progress since 1933 has been rapid. And the great proportion of this advance has been during the last two years.

In 1933 we had 1,263 Army pilots. Today the Army alone has more than 3,200 of the best fighting flyers in the world, who last year flew more than one million hours in combat training. This does not include the hundreds of splendid pilots in the National Guard and organized reserves.

Within the last year the productive capacity of the aviation industry to produce military planes has been tremendously increased. This capacity today, however, is still inadequate. But the government, working with industry, is determined to increase this capacity to meet our needs. We intend to harness the efficient machinery of these manufacturers to the government's program of being able to get 50,000 planes a year.

Air Co-operation

One additional word about aircraft. Recent wars, including the current war in Europe, have demonstrated beyond doubt that fighting efficiency depends on unity of control.

In sea operations the airplane is just as much an integral part of unity of operations as are the submarine, the destroyer and the battleship; and in land warfare the airplane is just as much a part of military operations as are the tank corps, the engineers, the artillery or the infantry itself. Therefore, the air forces should be part of the Aarmy and Navy.

At my request the Congress is voting the largest appropriation ever asked by the Army or the Navy in peace time; and the equipment and training provided by them will be in addition to the figures I have given you.

The world situation may so change that it will be necessary to re-appraise our program at any time. In such case I am confident that the Congress and the Chief Executive will work in harmony as a team—as they are doing today.

I will not hesitate at any moment to ask for additional funds when they are required.

Obsolescence a Factor

In this era of swift, mechanized warfare we all have to remember that what is modern today and up to date, what is efficient and practical, becomes obsolete and outworn tomorrow.

Even while the production line turns out airplanes, new ones are being designed on the drafting table.

Even as a cruiser slides down the ways plans for improvement, plans for increased efficiency in the next model are taking shape in the blueprints of designers.

Every day's fighting in Europe, on land, on sea and in the air, discloses constant changes in methods of warfare. We are constantly improving and redesigning, testing new weapons and seekin gto produce in accordance with the latest that the brains of science conceive.

We are calling upon the resources, the efficiency and the ingenuity of American manufacturers of war material of all kinds—airplanes, tanks, guns, ships and all the hundreds of products that go into this material. The government of the United States itself manufactures few of the implements of war. Private industry will continue to be the source of most of this materiel, and private industry will have to be speeded up to produce it at the rate and efficiency called for by the needs of the times.

U. S. to Aid With Capital

I know that private business cannot be expected to make all capital investment required for expansions of plants and factories and personnel which this program calls for at once. It would be unfair to expect industrial corporations to do this, when there is a chance that a change in international affairs may stop future orders.

MAY 27 1940

Therefore, the government of the United States stands ready to advance the necessary money to help provide for the enlargement of factories, the establishment of new plants, the employment of thousands of necessary workers, the development of new sources of supply for the hundreds of raw materials required, the development of quick mass transportation of supplies. The details of this are now being worked out in Washington, day and night.

We are calling on men now engaged in private industry to help us in carrying out this program, and you will hear more of this in the next few days.

This does not mean that the men we call upon will be engaged in the actual production of this material. That will still have to be carried on in the plants and factories throughout the land. Private industry will have the responsibility of providing the best, speediest and most efficient mass production of which it is capable. The functions of the business men whose assistance we are calling upon will be to coordinate this program—to see to it that all of the plants continue to operate at maximum speed and efficiency.

Must Increase Facilities

Patriotic Americans of proven merit and of unquestioned ability in their special fields are coming to Washington to help the government with their training, experience and capability.

It is our purpose not only to speed up production but to increase the total facilities of the nation in such a way that they can be further enlarged to meet emergencies of the future.

But as this program proceeds there are several things we must continue to watch and safeguard, things which are just as important to the sound defense of a nation as physical armament itself. While our Navy and our airplanes and our guns may be our first lines of defense, it is still clear that way down at the bottom, underlying them all, giving them their strength, sustenance and power, are the spirit and morale of a free people.

For that reason we must make sure, in all that we do, that there be no breakdown or cancellation of any of the great social gains which we have made in these past years. We have carried on an offensive on a broad front against social and economic inequalities and abuses which had made our society weak. That offensive should not now be broken down by the pincers movement of those who would use the present needs of physical military defense to destroy it.

Opposes Longer Hours

There is nothing in our present emergency to justify making the workers of our nation toil for longer hours than now limited by statute. As more orders come in and as more work has to be done, tens of thousands of people who are now unemployed will receive employment.

There is nothing in our present emergency to justify a lowering of the standards of employment. Minimum wages should not be reduced. It is my hope, indeed, that the new speed-up of production will cause many businesses which now pay below the minimum standards to bring their wages up.

There is nothing in our present emergency to justify a breaking down of old-age pensions or unemployment insurance. I would rather see the systems extended to other groups who donot now enjoy them.

There is nothing in our present emergency to justify a retreat from any of our social objectives—conservation of resources, assistance to agriculture, housing and help to the underprivileged.

30.24-2541

30.24-2541

Minority Agitation

Conversely, however, I am sure that responsible leaders will not permit some specialized group, which represents a minority of the total employees of a plant or industry, to break up the continuity of employment of the majority of the employees. The policy and the laws providing for collective bargaining are still in force. And labor will be adequately represented in Washington in this defense program.

Also our present emergency and a common sense of decency make it imperative that no new group of war millionaires come into being in this nation as a result of the struggles abroad. The American people will not relish the idea of any American citizen growing rich and fat in an emergency of blood and slaughter and human suffering.

And, finally, this emergency demands that the consumers of America be protected so that our general cost of living can be maintained at a reasonable level. We ought to avoid the spiral processes of the World War. The soundest policy is for every employer in the country to help give useful employment to the millions who are unemployed. By giving to those millions an increased purchasing power the prosperity of the whole country will rise to a much higher level.

New Threats From Within

Today's threat to our national security is not a matter of military weapons alone. We know of new methods of attack.

The Trojan horse. The fifth column that betrays a nation unprepared for treachery.

Spies, saboteurs and traitors are the actor in this new strategy. With all of these we must deal vigorously.

But there is na added technique for weakening a nation at its very roots, for disrupting the entire pattern of life of a people. It is important that we understand it.

The method is simple. First, discord. A group—not too large—that may be sectional or racial or political—is encouraged to exploit their prejudices through false slogans on these groups is to create confusion of counsel, public indecision, political paralysis and eventually, a state of panic.

Sound national policies come to be viewed with a new and unreasoning skepticism, not through the clever schemes of foreign agents.

New Subversive Forces

As a result of these techniques, armament programs may be dangerously delayed. Singleness of national purpose may be undermined. Men can lose confidence in each other, and therefore in the efficiency of their own united action. Faith and courage yield to doubt and fear. The unity of the state is so sapped that its strength is destroyed.

All this is no idle dream. It has happened time after time, in nation after nation, during the last two years. Fortunately, American men and women are not easy dupes. Campaigns of group hatred or class struggle have never made much headway among us, and are not making headway now. But new forces are being unleashed, deliberately planned propagandas to divide and weaken us in the face of danger as other nations have been weakened before.

These dividing forces are undiluted poison. They must not be allowed to spread in the New World as they have in the Old. Our moral and mental defenses must be raised as never before against those who would cast a smoke screen across our vision.

The development of our defense program makes it essential that each and every one of us feel that we have some contribution to make toward the security of our country.

Build and Rebuild Defense

At this time, when the world—and the world includes our own American hemisphere—is threatened by forces of destruction, it is my resolve and yours to build up our armed defenses.

We shall build them to whatever heights the future may require.

We shall rebuild them swiftly, as the methods of warfare swiftly change.

For more than three centuries we have been building on this continent a free society, a society in which the promise of the human spirit may find fulfillment. Commingled here are the blood and genius of all the peoples of the world who have sought this promise.

We have built well. We are continuing our free efforts to bring the blessings of a free society, of a free and productive economic system, to every family in the land. This is the promise of America.

It is this that we must continue to build—this that we must continue to defend.

Americans Pray

It is the task of our generation. But we build and defend not for our generation alone. We defend the foundations laid by our fathers. We build a life for generations yet unborn. We defend and we build a way of life, not for America alone, but for all mankind. Ours is a high duty, a noble task.

Day and night I pray for the restoration of peace in this mad world of ours. It is not necessary that I, the President, ask the American people to pray in behalf of such a cause—I know you are praying with me.

I am certain that out of the hearts of every man, woman and child in this land, in every waking minute, a supplication goes up to Almighty God; that all of us beg that suffering and starving, that death and destruction may end—and that peace may return to the world. In common affection for all mankind, your prayers join with mine—that God will heal the wounds and the hearts of humanity.

U.S. and Ecuador Confer On Canal Zone Defense

Military Talks Point to Joint Safeguards Against Attack

WASHINGTON, May 26 (AP).—Cooperation between the United States and Ecuador on measures to safeguard the Panama Canal was indicated today by disclosure that military and naval officers of the two countries had just concluded a series of conferences.

State Department officials said an Army officer and a naval officer had been sent to Ecuador at the request of that government. The conferences were described as "a part of the general Western Hemisphere defense picture."

Dispatches from Guayaquil reported the officers had submitted a memorandum on methods of unifying Ecuadorean land, sea and air forces, which was said to involve reinforcing both the South American country and the outlying Galapagos Islands with planes, pilots, instructors and fast naval craft.

The islands are situated in the Pacific, less than a thousand miles from the canal, and proposals are pending in Congress now for their acquisition by the United States.

Officials noted that, although legal authorization exists for advising governments of other American nations, there is no act to permit the transfer of United States aircraft, ships or weapons to other countries unless they have been declared to be surplus.

THOSE 65,000,000 NATIVE INHABITANTS OF OUR EMPIRE . . ."

(WHAT, IF ANY, CIRCULATION THIS STATEMENT RECEIVED IN THE NETHERLANDS IS NOT KNOWN.)

IT IS DIFFICULT FOR THE OUTSIDER TO UNDERSTAND THE INTENSITY OF FEELING ON THE QUESTION UNLESS HE IS FAMILIAR WITH THE EXTRAORDINARY POSITION HELD BY THE QUEEN.

DURING HER 41-YEAR REIGN SHE NOT ONLY HAD MAINTAINED HER POSITION AS ONE OF THE FEW MONARCHS WHO ACTUALLY RULE BUT SHE ALSO HAD BECOME MORE OR LESS THE SPIRITUAL AND MORAL LEADER OF THE NATION.

MANY HAD SO CLOSELY IDENTIFIED HER WITH THE STATE THAT THEY COULD NOT IMAGINE HOLLAND WITHOUT WILHELMINA.

TYPICAL REACTION TO HER FLIGHT WAS THAT OF A PROMINENT DUTCHMAN I KNOW. BEFORE THE NEWS WAS ANNOUNCED IN HOLLAND, HE HEARD IT IN A BRITISH BROADCAST.

MAY 27 1940

HE SAT STUNNED FOR A MOMENT, THEN SHOOK HIS HEAD SADLY. HIS ONLY COMMENT WAS, "IT'S A SHAME BEFORE GOD." I NEVER SAW A MAN MORE PROFOUNDLY MOVED BY A NEWS ANNOUNCEMENT AND HE WAS A MAN WHO HAD BEEN IN THE MIDST OF BIG EVENTS FOR YEARS.

MANY DUTCHMEN REFUSED TO BELIEVE THE QUEEN HAD LEFT THE COUNTRY UNTIL IT WAS CONFIRMED OFFICIALLY.

THEN THEY KNEW THERE WAS NO HOPE OF CONTINUED RESISTANCE FOR, IF THE HIGH COMMAND HAD NOT ALREADY DECIDED ON CAPITULATION, IT WOULD HAVE BEEN NECESSARY ANYWAY BECAUSE OF THE PEOPLE'S BROKEN SPIRIT.

MANY BELIEVE THE QUEEN SHOULD HAVE STAYED AND SHARED THE FATE OF HER KINGDOM, WHATEVER THAT MIGHT BE. THE GENERAL CONTENTION IS THAT THE GOVERNMENT COULD HAVE FLED, IF NECESSARY, BUT THAT THERE WAS NO REASON FOR THE QUEEN TO LEAVE.

SOME EVEN SUGGESTED SHE MIGHT HAVE ABDICATED AND LET JULIANA RULE THE EMPIRE FROM LONDON OR SOME OTHER PLACE.

MAY 27 1940

NEWSPAPERS MADE NO COMMENT ON THE QUEEN'S DEPARTURE BUT ONE SAW SIGNS OF THE POPULAR REACTION IMMEDIATELY.

ONE OF THESE WAS THE ERASURE OF THE WORDS, "LONG LIVE THE QUEEN!" FROM THE BOTTOM OF THE SURRENDER PROCLAMATION WHICH WAS POSTED THROUGH HOLLAND.

I SAW DOZENS OF THESE POSTERS ON WHICH THE WORD "QUEEN" HAD BEEN MARKED THROUGH WITH A RED PENCIL AND THE WORD "HOLLAND" WRITTEN BENEATH.

THE LAST TIME ANY HIGH OFFICIAL OF THE NETHERLANDS REFERRED TO QUEEN WILHELMINA OFFICIALLY WAS IN THE BROADCAST BY THE BURGOMEISTER OF THE HAGUE SEVERAL DAYS AFTER THE GERMANS TOOK OVER THE COUNTRY. HE SPOKE OF HER AS "OUR RESPECTED QUEEN" BUT HIS SPEECH WAS NOT PRINTED IN THE NEWSPAPERS.

MAY 27 1940

CALAIS, NEAREST TO ENGLAND OF ANY CITY ON THE EUROPEAN CONTINENT--22 MILES BY BOAT AND EIGHT MINUTES BY BOMBER--SERVED THE BRITISH AS A WORLD WAR BASE AGAINST GERMANY BUT NOW IT MAY SERVE THE GERMANS AS A SPRINGBOARD FOR ATTACK ON ENGLAND.

WAR IS AN OLD STORY TO THIS FORTIFIED SEAPORT AND MANUFACTURING TOWN WHOSE POPULATION IN PEACETIME NUMBERED ABOUT 68,000.

CALAIS FIGURED PROMINENTLY IN THE EARLY STRUGGLES BETWEEN ENGLAND AND FRANCE. FOR MORE THAN 200 YEARS, OVERLAPPING INTO THE 14TH AND 16TH CENTURIES, CALAIS WAS IN BRITISH HANDS. IT CAME AGAIN INTO BRITISH HANDS IN THE WORLD WAR, AFTER THE FAILURE OF THE GERMANS TO REACH THE CHANNEL PORTS, BUT THEN THE BRITISH AND FRENCH WERE ALLIES, AS NOW.

MAY 27 1940

CALAIS WAS IMPORTANT TO THE BRITISH WORLD WAR CAMPAIGN AS A PORT OF ENTRY FOR SUPPLIES SHIPPED ACROSS THE NARROW CHANNEL. IT WAS BOMBED OFTEN AND HEAVILY IN THE LAST TWO YEARS OF THE WAR.

THE TOWN IS DIVIDED INTO TWO MAIN PARTS--OLD CALAIS AND A NEW SECTION CALLED ST.PIERRE WHICH WAS THE CENTER OF THE CITY'S INDUSTRIES BEFORE THE SHADOW OF GERMAN INVASION FELL ACROSS THE TOWN.

THE LEADING INDUSTRY WAS LACE MAKING. OTHER PRODUCTS RANGED FROM ARTIFICIAL ICE AND HOSIERY TO TELEPHONE CABLES AND SILK TULLE. FISHING ALSO PROVIDED A LIVELIHOOD FOR MANY OF THE INHABITANTS.

RAMPARTS SURROUND THE CITY, INCLUDING SEVEN FORTS AND BATTERIES WITH A STRONGLY FORTIFIED CITADEL. THE NEIGHBORING COUNTRYSIDE IS FLAT AND ADAPTABLE TO FLOOD DEFENSE AS AN EMERGENCY MEASURE.

Invaders Suffer Heavy Losses in Ypres Thrust--British Launch Counter-attacks --French Narrow Corridor.

By the Associated Press.

Generalissimo Maxime Weygand's French troops desperately striving to amputate the German corridor to the English Channel reported today that they had captured "several villages and other points" south of the German salient on the Somme River, while Nazi legions poured through a new breach in the Lys River front in Flanders.

MAY 27 1940

The French reported that the Germans were paying a terrific price as they pushed back French troops and drove almost to the famous world war battle sector of Ypres.

British Tommies, fighting with French tanks, were reported to have successfully counter-attacked in Flanders, at least holding their lines while their French comrades-in-arms retired to new positions west of the river Scheldt.

The Lys, on which lie Ghent and Courtrai, already claimed by the Germans, is the last important barrier between the Nazis and the English Channel ports of Ostend and Zeebrugge.

German warplanes and swift-striking torpedo boats quickened the tempo of the Nazi drive for control of the channel. The water front at Dunkirk, north of Calais, was reported in flames after German bombing attacks.

The German High Command declared that Nazi troops had captured Calais, but dispatches from London indicated that Great Britain and her Allies were battling savagely on land and sea today to save the port from the Nazi invaders.

Germans Seek to Split Enemy

MAY 28 1940

BERLIN, May 27 (A. P.).—German forces, lunging through the Allies' line in Flanders almost to Ypres, added a length today to the steel wall with which they are trying to split the Allied armies in northern France and Belgium.

Both sides were fighting to pocket large units of the opposing army. The action, on a scattered, complicated battlefield, involved bombed cities, sunken ships, millions of men and the fastest, hard-hitting weapons either army could put into battle.

The German goal was control of the English Channel coast, on which they already have a foothold at Boulogne and claim another at Calais. Whether England or Paris would be the next Nazi objective could only be conjectured.

It is noted, however, that Germany—in this campaign, as well as in Poland and Norway—has not departed from the solid military policy of destroying the enemy's army as the best way of conquering.

On this basis some observers argue that not England—for which domination of the channel coast would be a springboard—but the French Army, standing between the Germans and Paris, must face the next blows of the Reich's military fists.

Ship Lanes Are Bombed.

The Germans have been making efforts to soften resistance against either an advance on Paris or a direct invasion of England.

British ship communications with France have been bombed constantly, with the High Command reporting a heavy toll on transports and supply ships.

Having bottled up about 1,000,000 British, French and Belgian soldiers holding that line on the coastal plains of Flanders and Artois, the Nazis were trying to break up the defense by splitting the trapped Allied forces.

Two German thrusts, one wheeling eastward from the coast and the other pushing northwestward from Arras, were reported tonight progressing rapidly toward a meeting north of Lille.

One was said to have penetrated northeast of Lens, north of Vimy Ridge, and the other to have advanced close to Ypres, on the opposite side of the gap which the Nazis are attempting to close.

Plan Also to Split Belgians.

Authoritative sources said this maneuver was aimed at cutting off the bulk of British and French troops in the sector, leaving the Belgians to be taken in two small pieces by a smash through westward from Ghent.

It was authoritatively estimated that about 700,000 British and French troops were in the Lille trap.

Evidence that the Allies were countering with a similar pincer movement to chop off the German spearheads through Flanders and Artois appeared in today's communique of the German High Command.

The French, the communique indicated, were attempting to separate the Germans on the coast from the main Nazi army by attacks from the south. But it declared that strong Nazi resistance was holding apart both prongs of the Allied pincer.

German war reports have made repeated reference recently to driving back Allied tank attacks at points all the way from Rheims westward to Amiens. They also have mentioned heavy German air activity as far south as Paris, breaking up Allied troop concentrations, bombing airports and similar attacks behind the lines evidently aimed at hampering Allied attempts to launch an attack.

What Communique Claims.

But whether the Allies are planning a move to rescue their men and equipment inside the German pocket seems not to concern the Nazis. They are proceeding methodically to break up the encircled area into smaller pieces to make capture or destruction easier and more certain.

"Today's communique, stressing air and naval achievements, reported these blows:

A British destroyer sunk in Ostend harbor and an Allied submarine sunk off Helder, former Dutch naval base, by torpedo motor boats which the German Navy has brought into increasing use along the channel coast.

The water front of Dunkirk was set aflame by air raiders "to frustrate attempts of the English to bring parts of their encircled troops across the channel to England."

Destruction of seventy-three Allied warplanes, including thirty-two shot down in air fights and fifteen by anti-aircraft fire, to fifteen German planes "missing."

The communique also indicated heavy tank fighting on both sides.

In a recent Allied attack south of Sedan, it said, five of eleven heavy tanks were incapacitated by German anti-tank defenses and the others damaged "so seriously that their attack foundered."

A German tank, target of several Allied warships at Boulogne, was said to have returned the fire and set a destroyer aflame.

"Furthermore," the communique said, describing air attacks, "we succeeded in sinking by bomb hits one merchant ship of 8,000 tons, besides hitting with heavy bomb, with apparent fires and explosion effects, one large warship and two cruisers, as well as one transport of 18,000 tons."

German Version

MAY 28 1940

[By The Associated Press]

Berlin, May 27—Sudden blows by swarms of warplanes and high-speed torpedo boats paced Nazi attempts today to score a quick knockout in the battle for the English Channel.

While German ground forces broke deeply through the Flanders battle line almost to Ypres in a "squeeze" to split the encircled Allied forces in Belgium and northern France, the high command said, warplanes left the waterfront of Dunkirk in flames and the mosquito-like torpedo boats stung the Allies in raids along the Channel coast.

The high command credited the speedboats with a daring feat in entering Ostend harbor where, it said, one of them sank a British destroyer. Another was said to have sunk an Allied submarine off Helder, once a Dutch naval base.

Two German Objectives Seen.

The German forces evidently had two objectives:

1. To dominate the whole French coast of the English Channel—potential springboard for a direct assault on England.

2. To cut in two the trapped Allied armies before clamping down the stranglehold which they are confident will mean death or surrender for some 1,000,000 French, Belgian and British soldiers in the battle of Flanders and Artois.

Both sides appeared to be pouring all their available resources into the battle. Among extraordinary results was the high command's report that guns of a German tank had set fire to an Allied destroyer in the Channel port of Boulogne.

British Retreat Declared Prevented

Nazis expected their troops in the northern fighting area from St. Omer eastward, and from Courtrai northwestward near Ypres, to quickly close the narrow opening of the sack in which the Allies are caught, and boasted that "We are now in a position to determine the temper of the war."

The new gains, it was said, have further hemmed in Allied troops in the Artois region.

With the German army reported pushing north from Calais to threaten the Channel ports of Gravelines and Dunkirk, the high command stressed the air force as the Nazi trail blazer. (The Allies said they still held Calais.)

Air attack, it said, frustrated British attempts to withdraw parts of their encircled forces by water and left the water front of Dunkirk aflame.

"Bloody Losses" Declared Inflicted

"The severity of the attacks was most effectively centered upon the region wherein the enemy armies are trapped," the communique said.

"German troops attacked northeast of Lens and later attacked, with bloody losses for the enemy, counter-attacks by French colonial troops."

Heavy tank fighting was indicated. On the southern front the high command reported, five of eleven Allied tanks were incapacitated and the others so badly damaged that their attack foundered.

"To frustrate attempts of the English to bring parts of their encircled troops across the Channel to England," the communique said, "the air force again raided those ports on the Belgian-French Channel coast which are still in enemy hands. The port facilities of Dunkirk are burning. No special events on the southern front.

"In recent fights south of Sedan, Lieutenant Müller, of the anti-tank detachment of one infantry regiment, incapacitated five of eleven heavy enemy tanks and damaged the others so seriously that their attack foundered.

MAY 28 1940

"The raids of the air force were also concentrated against airports in the vicinity of Paris, against traffic facilities south of Reims and against enemy troop movements. On one airport alone twenty enemy planes were destroyed. Enemy losses yesterday amounted to seventy-three planes, of which thirty-two were shot down in air fights, fifteen by anti-aircraft guns and the rest destroyed on the ground.

"Fifteen of our own planes are missing.

"On the Narvik battlefields, mountain chasers were again landed yesterday by parachutes. An enemy airplane carrier, which on May 24 already was heavily struck by a bomb in Ofotfjord near Narvik, was sunk May 25 off Harstad after having been hit anew by three bombs, one of which was of the heaviest caliber as already anonunced.

"Furthermore we succeeded in sinking by bomb hits one merchant ship of 8,000 tons, besides hitting with heavy bombs, with apparent fires and explosion effects, one large warship and two cruisers, as well as one transport of 18,000 tons.

"Several airplanes were destroyed on the ground on an attack on an airport at Barduvos. The enemy, during the course of the night of May 26-27, continued aimless raids against non-military targets in western Germany without causing great damage."

Trying To Cut Trapped Allied Army In Two

Seizure of Gravelines and Dunkirk, regarded here as certain, was expected to seal the fate of a million or more Allied troops trapped in Belgium and northern France and pave the way for a direct assault upon England.

In an effort to cut these Allied forces in two, one German column was reported advancing in a northerly direction from the vicinity of Lille to meet a column fighting south from Courtrai, Belgium.

The spearheads of these forces were said to be less than eighteen miles apart. If they met, they would form a ring around the French and British troops in the area bounded by Lille, Valenciennes, Cambrai and Lens.

Results Claimed in Air.

In the air, the communique said, Nazi flyers achieved these results yesterday at a loss of only fifteen German planes against seventy-three Allied craft destroyed:

1. Sank a merchant ship of 8,000 tons and caused explosions with bomb hits on one large warship, two cruisers and an 18,000-ton transport.

2. Raided airports and the vicinity of Paris, traffic facilities south of Reims and Allied troop movements.

3. Dropped more parachutists to re-enforce the beleaguered Nazi garrison at Narvik, Norway's arctic iron-ore port.

In an effort to cut the trapped Allied forces in two, one German column was reported advancing in a northerly direction from the vicinity of Lille to meet another Nazi force fighting southward from Courtrai, Belgium. The spearheads of these forces were said to be less than eighteen miles apart.

If they meet, they would form an iron ring around French and British troops fighting in the area bounded by Lille, Valenciennes, Cambrai and Lens. The announcement of the capture of Calais, only twenty-two miles from the chalk cliffs of Dover, England, was accompanied by reports of new German successes elsewhere on land, sea and in the air.

Military commentators said that continued smashing aerial attacks delivered at the Belgian channel ports had cut off the last avenue of escape for the Allied armies of the north. These forces, they declared, have only two choices—surrender or a hopeless fight to complete destruction.

So intent were all commentators, however, on the imminent possibility of an assault upon England that the task of mopping up the beleaguered Allied troops in Belgium was a matter of secondary consideration. The army itself, confident that it can accomplish anything that Adolf Hitler commands, was said to be eager for the order sending it across the English Channel.

Germans spoke lightly of the technical difficulties which an assault upon England might entail.

"For this German army the Channel is merely a brook," said Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter this morning.

Speedboats Active.

Informed quarters contended that Germany's powerful air force, her submarines and her fleet of little torpedo speedboats would be ample to protect Nazi landings in the British Isles. There were reports of increasing activity by the speedboat fleet, said to be disrupting water communications between England and France.

It was said on all sides that Hitler's army had accomplished in two weeks what Kaiser Wilhelm's troops had been unable to do in four years. Morale reached a new high and confidence appeared to know no bounds.

Commentators insisted that to a degree not apparent on the surface England and France already had been cut off from each other and that from now on they would have to fight separately, each relying on her own resources.

Supplies Move Up.

Germans said that possession of the channel ports gave them important bases from which they can conduct harassing operations which soon virtually will end communications between the Allied countries. It was predicted here that air connections between London and Paris soon would be almost completely wiped out.

The Germans took particular pride in the smooth functioning of the supply service which has been maintaining the Nazi columns on their drive to the coast. French and British predictions that the German offensive would collapse because of inability to keep fast-moving mechanized units with fuel were recalled with derision.

Todt Is Praised.

Hailed as the hero of this communications coup was Fritz Todt, builder of the Siegfried Line and the Reich's great automobile highways. Thousands of rail and road builders, directed by Todt, have followed the army.

Bridges have been restored within a few hours after their destruction by the enemy and rails ripped up by bombs have been replaced with almost magical speed, Germans asserted.

The German air force apparently has been able—at least up to now—to protect the supply columns streaming over Todt's roads, with the result, it was said, that gasoline has been coming up as fast as motors can burn it. Supplies also have been augmented considerably, it was said, by booty captured from the enemy.

BRITISH CAPITAL FEARS NAZIS ARE WIDENING GAP BETWEEN ALLIED ARMIES

Position Of Force In Flanders Believed Becoming More Critical Despite Violent Counter-Attacks Against Nazis—Italian Threat Eyed

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 27—British forces in Flanders were described in informed quarters tonight as facing a situation of increasing gravity, despite violent counter-attacks against massive German forces pressing for a grip on the entire seacoast of northern France and Belgium.

While official statements said the British had gone to the relief of Belgian and French forces on their flanks about thirty miles southeast of Calais and had stood off the Germans, the general picture showed the Allied armies hemmed in a narrowing corner.

Nazi Corridor Wider

The Germans appeared to be slowly broadening their wedge of steel between the French army south of the Somme and the Allied forces north of that salient in Flanders.

With the salient broadening, it appeared the position of the British Expeditionary Force was becoming more critical with each passing day.

Whether the gap between the Allies could be closed remained to be seen, but every hour it stayed open made the Germans on the coast stronger, and the position of the hemmed-in Allies more untenable.

The Royal Air Force sought to relieve the pressure by heavy bombing raids.

Hospital Ships Bombed

The German air forces, meanwhile, were centering attacks on shipping, including hospital ships, and inflicting serious loss of life, authoritative British sources said.

While the furious Channel fight proceeded, Britain kept an eye on the Mediterranean threat. The day was one of incessant battle, with fighting in the streets of Calais, whose fate was still in doubt tonight, while Nazi and British planes twisted, dived and thundered overhead, and British naval guns pounded away at the Nazi columns. At the end of the day the British War Office reported the British front "remains intact."

The Royal Air Force, a communique said, flew far behind the front, battering German communications and airdromes and troop concentrations in the rear of Arras. Allied anti-aircraft guns raked the clouds for enemy planes and brought down a "number" of them.

Twenty-eight German planes were reported destroyed or seriously damaged in twenty-four hours during one of the most farflung raids yet staged by the Royal Air Force. Five British craft were missing.

Traffic Disorganized

Road, rail and river traffic was disorganized over a wide area from the Rhineland to the French frontier, the Air Ministry reported, in raids which lasted throughout last night and today.

The Air Ministry added that 150 high-explosive and incendiary bombs were rained on airports at Brussels and Charleroi, the latter a German-held French town on the Belgian border.

Flames were said to have leaped skyward after attacks on Antwerp, Flushing and Venlo, on the Dutch-German border.

In other attacks, the Air Ministry asserted, a bridge on Belgium's main rail line was believed destroyed, a direct hit scored on the railroad tracks south of Aachen (Aix-La-Chapelle) in Germany, an important rail junction in Belgium wrecked, and a convoy of twenty-four vehicles blasted to pieces.

Telegraph Service Cut Off

The War Office announced temporary cancellation of telegraph service and a ban on all mail weighing more than two ounces to the British Expeditionary Force because of "heavy military traffic."

The public waited patiently for news of battles in Flanders and for the holding of the Channel ports.

The fighting across the Channel was brought a little closer to home by the arrival of two more ships of wounded. Three vessels reached a south of England port yesterday with wounded men, and reported that fourteen had died en route. Other wounded soldiers were landed in the west of England yesterday.

Home Precautions Taken

At home the Government took new precautions against the menace of a fifth column. More than 3,000 German and Austrian women were rounded up in London for internment on the Isle of Man for the duration of the war. Scores of pacifists, war grumblers, soapbox orators and suspected members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army were arrested.

Britain's own defense against parachute troops or invading infantry continued steadily, with depots passing out rifles, ammunition and uniforms to the new home guard force.

Continuing the reorganization of the high command started yesterday, Lieut. Gen. R. H. Haining, general officer in charge of the Western command, was named vice-chief of the Imperial general staff.

Maj. Gen. B. C. T. Paget, commander of the Eighteenth Division, who led the British withdrawal from southern Norway, was appointed chief of the general staff of the home forces.

To Serve Under Dill

Haining will be under Gen. Sir John Greer Dill, who yesterday succeeded Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside. Paget will be under Sir Edmund, who now commands the home forces.

Gen. Sir Henry E. Jackson was appointed to Haining's old job.

British and French squadrons in the Mediterranean kept their decks cleared for action, and the Government ordered curfews on the two great fortresses of Gibraltar and Malta. Everyone except soldiers and sailors in uniform was ordered indoors between 11.30 P. M. and 5.30 A. M. on Gibraltar and between 11 P. M. and 5 A. M. on Malta.

Curfew In Malta

In Malta the curfew was termed necessary to guard against parachutists. Additional protection on the island was given by an assembly of volunteer force of rural sportsmen.

Tension still grew over Italian antagonism toward Britain, but the Foreign Office and the Ministry of Economic Warfare hoped a solution of the Anglo-Italian economic quarrel could be found in a plan whereby Italian ships would carry only cargoes which have been navicerted (described in the manifest as approval by the British).

Semi-official sources at the London Foreign Office said the British in Italy were "the same as in any other danger spot." They were warned, when they asked, to go home "in view of the anxious situation."

Neutral diplomatic circles disagreed with this interpretation that "things are just as they were." These sources declared the Anglo-Italian situation was getting steadily worse and believed the entrance of Italy into the war hinged on the success or failure of Allied arms in the next three days.

"A Matter Of Hours"

One neutral charge d'affaires said Italy's entrance into war on Germany's side is a "matter of hours." Uneasiness was evident among the Italians here.

The Government's general view had been described in informed quarters as similar to that of the Chamberlain Government's: The Allies do not wish to fight Italy, but are prepared for war on two fronts if it comes.

Meanwhile, Britain called her men aged 28 and 29 for military service under a plan to put British war machinery into high gear.

The 28-year-olds are to be registered June 15 and the 29-year-olds a week later, it was announced officially.

The new registration was expected to add 600,000 men to the armed forces and raise Britain's army to the 3,000,000 mark.

Informed sources here said the decision to register two classes within a week resulted from the Government's desire to have available a sufficient number of men to meet any call.

Moves To Woo Warsaw

On the diplomatic front, the Government moved to improve relations with Soviet Russia by sending Sir Stafford Cripps, Laborite member of Parliament, to Moscow on an economic mission.

Soviet circles in London said the Russian Ambassador talked over Cripps' mission to Moscow at a conference yesterday with Lord Halifax, Foreign Secretary, and that improved relations between the two countries now seemed "quite favorable." Cripps will attempt to break a longstanding stalemate in Soviet-British negotiations for a trade treaty.

British Intern Alien Women

MAY 28 1940

Police Dragnet Catches Hundreds in Sudden Anti-fifth Column Raids

LONDON, May 27 (A.P.).—The Home Secretary ordered today internment on the Isle of Man of all German and Austrian women who previously had been under police restrictions. Under the decree, all enemy alien women between the age of 16 and 60, who have previously been in B category, will be interned as men already have been.

It was explained that the women can, if they wish, take children under 16 with them.

Approximately 3,000 German and Austrian men and women now interned sought immigration permits to go to the United States.

A gigantic police dragnet swept hundreds of women into custody in the early morning while censorship veiled the raids.

The great roundup started at 7:30 A. M. (2:30 A. M., New York time). Police cars, with more than 1,000 detectives, sped to the women's homes, waited while they packed their luggage, and took them to headquarters.

Decision Is Sudden.

The roundup followed a sudden decision of Sir John Anderson, Minister for Home Security, to intern the alien women without re-examination by alien tribunals. Most of them were taken from the thickly populated areas of South London.

Enemy alien women previously had been under minor restrictions only. These forbade possession of automobiles or cameras as well as traveling more than five miles from home. Special police permission was required for changes of address.

Sir John's decision followed widespread criticism in the press, which said that enemy alien women should be regarded as potentially as dangerous as men.

On May 16 Sir John interned an estimated 3,000 German and Austrian men between the ages of 16 and 60, who previously had been in category B. Four days earlier male enemy aliens of the same age had been detained in the eastern half of the country and along the southern coast.

The Minister told the House of Commons on May 23 that he had not ordered the wholesale detention of women enemy aliens but that individuals had been imprisoned when there was cause for suspicion.

It was estimated today that more than 6,000 aliens have now been detained. Many of those rounded up are domestic servants. It was stated there were still thousands of aliens in the country in category C, exempt from any restrictions.

Ironside Heads Defense.

With the battle for the channel ports brought so close that flashes of gunfire on the Continent could be seen from England's southeast coast, Great Britain intrusted her home defenses to Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside and placed Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Greer Dill in the empire's highest military post as chief of the Imperial General Staff.

These changes in the army High Command, made as Germany's mechanized columns extended their gains in their struggle for a springboard for a direct assault on England, reflected urgent action for strengthening Britain's resistance to the threatened invasion.

The great preparedness drive extended to other sectors of the home front.

While the empire joined King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in a national day of prayer, and armament plants worked at full speed throughout the week end, Scotland Yard rounded up another score of British Fascists in a drive against fifth columnists.

Including their leader, Sir Oswald Mosley, about seventy now are confined in Brixton jail.

The police also swooped down on the orators in Hyde Park yesterday and arrested Ted Bramley, leader of the London Communist party, and a number of other agitators for stopping the war.

Ten men were held today for hearings on charges of conspiracy against the State by allegedly sending physically unfit men before medical boards to impersonate men called for war service.

Orator Is Sentenced.

Donald Patrick O'Byrne, 23, was arrested in the Croydon district of South London today for shouting, "When the Germans get here, they'll show you how to run Croydon." He was sentenced to a week in prison.

O'Byrne was selling copies of Sir Oswald Mosley's Fascist newspaper, Action. Police said that they found a revolver, ammunition and Fascist and German literature in his apartment.

The Government at the same time announced a new list of fifteen southeast coast towns as evacuation areas and prepared to move children to safer places. Among them were Dover, only twenty-two miles across the channel from Calais, and Folkestone, twenty-six miles from German-held Boulogne.

Meanwhile Eire, striving to maintain neutrality and hold recent gains in a 600-year fight for independence, prepared to counter any invasion or blow at England by placing the army virtually on a war basis. Army reservists and volunteers are being called.

More speed in training Britain's reserve man power was demanded by Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, which said that 750,000 conscripts have not yet been summoned to training stations, and that thousands of conscript age have not been registered.

"It seems that the whole system of training needs to be overhauled," said the Standard.

The War Office gave only a meager account of the actual fighting for the channel ports, but a London spokesman denied the German assertion that they have taken Calais.

British Back Up Belgians.

A communique said that British troops went to the assistance of their Belgian allies when the Germans launched a strong offensive against the left flank of the Allied armies pinioned in northern France and Belgium. It disclosed that British tanks were in action against Nazi mechanized forces.

A series of communiques from the Air Ministry were more detailed. The most important of these described a four-hour battle over the French coast between Calais and Dunkerque yesterday morning in which twenty German planes were reported shot down and twenty more put out of action, against a loss of only five British planes.

Other week-end engagements, the communique said, accounted for sixty Nazi bombers and fighting planes either brought down or damaged, while Royal Air Force bombers renewed their raids on the Rhineland and the German rear lines, destroying a gasoline and ammunition dump, bombing German supply lines, important bridges, roads and railways.

Losses at Sea.

At sea, Britain acknowledged the loss of two naval vessels, the 1,100-ton destroyer Wessex, the victim of Nazi air attacks off the French coast, and the 270-ton mine-sweeping trawler Charles Boyes, which struck a German mine. The Wessex, which lost six men and had fifteen wounded, was the fourth British destroyer put out of action by bombs and the twelfth destroyer lost in the war.

Though Big Bill Ironside relinquished his post to Devil Dill, fifty-eight-year-old Irishman, who has been described as "one of the most able soldiers in the whole British Army" and who won fame by crushing the Arab revolt in Palestine, Britishers asserted that this in no way was a reflection on Gen. Ironside's ability to head the General Staff. His new post is regarded as equal in importance to that of Gen. Viscount Gort, Commander-in-Chief of the British Expeditionary Force in France.

The press approved the High Command changes, announced after French Premier Paul Reynaud flew here to consult with Prime Minister Winston Churchill and other members of the War Cabinet. It was predicted in well-informed circles that other shifts among high officers might be made.

The Daily Express, raising the question "has Ironside gone up or down," commented:

"Gen. Ironside has moved out of the supreme job in the army—but for this reason:

"He is given a position of such importance that only the man from the top could have been intrusted with it.

"Gen. Dill has the highest abilities for his new task. In the opinion of some, he is, in certain respects, our best soldier.

"The public may be assured that Mr. Churchill's confidence in both men is well founded."

The Express added that Gen. Ironside, the man who revitalized the Gibraltar defenses, "must now turn the whole British islands into another Rock of Gibraltar."

The Daily Mail said:

"These two great soldiers now are in their right places, in positions where their eminent abilities can be used to the best service of the nation."

New Chief of Staff.

In supplanting Gen. Ironside, who succeeds sixty-three-year-old Gen. Sir Walter Kirke as anti-invasion chief, Gen. Dill moves up from the post of Vice-Chief of the Imperial General Staff, a position to which he was named last month to "relieve the strain" on Gen. Ironside.

The new chief, an Ulsterman born on Christmas Day, entered the army in 1901, became a captain in 1911, a major in 1914, and in the world war the Distinguished Service Order for bravery. He became a colonel in 1920, a major-general ten years later and a lieutenant-general in April, 1936.

Later, he commanded the infantry base at Aldershot and went to France last October as commander of the First Corps, B. E. F.

In the first national day of prayer since August 6, 1918, the King and Queen, together with Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and Prime Minister Churchill, attended services at Westminster Abbey, where they heard the Archbishop of Canterbury say:

"The centuries rebuke the fears and calm the anxieties of the hour. Here, in the stillness of this church, moved by all the memories which surround us, we commit ourselves and our cause to God."

After describing the dangers facing the nation as the darkest in its history, the Primate continued:

"We have been called to take our place in a mighty conflict against the powers of evil and we ask God's strength that we may be found worthy of that high calling."

The day's services were marred by only one incident. A woman shouting "Peace!" interrupted the broadcast of Arthur Cardinal Hinsley's sermon in Westminster Cathedral (Roman Catholic).

Screaming "Murderers!" she was ushered away. The British Broadcasting Corporation told the public that the incident resulted from the woman's "overwhelming religious emotion" and had no political significance.

GERMAN ALL-OR-NOTHING DRIVE SHOVES FOE BACK IN DEFENSE OF CHANNEL

MAY 28 1940

Invaders Cross Last Water Barrier To Coast, Widen Corridor, Advance At Valenciennes. French Recapture Somme Villages

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, Tuesday, May 28—Premier Reynaud's Cabinet reviewed the military and political situation in a session lasting until after midnight and then announced the Premier would broadcast an address to the nation at 8.30 A. M. this (Tuesday) morning (2.30 A. M., E.S.T.).

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 27—Sledge-hammer blows from a revitalized German offensive, rivaling the violence of Imperial Germany's World War assaults on Verdun, forced the Allies to fall back and take their stand today on a new line defending the English Channel.

To offset somewhat the Nazi gains in the north, where at numerous points they crossed the River Lys, last water barrier on the way to the Channel, the French central army in the Somme sector, south of the Nazi salient to the sea, hammered the Germans back to regain several villages.

Nazis Drive For Quick Decision

The Germans put everything available into the campaign to crush the French, British and Belgian forces in the Battle of Flanders. They threw wave upon wave of infantry, a thundering artillery bombardment as well as their dive bombers and armored columns into their drive for a quick decision over the Allies.

The Battle of Flanders raged overnight into the first major night operations of this war while the Allies withdrew from their Scheldt river positions in the Valenciennes sector to a prepared line farther west toward the Channel.

Allies Hold On New Front

The struggle raged with undiminished fury throughout today, with the Allies reported checking the Germans on their new front.

The French high command's night communique said British troops counter-attacked on the northern front (here five words were censored) while the French persisted in their cleanup on the Somme.

To the east, the Germans launched fresh attacks in the Argonne Forest, famed World War battlefield, where their objective in that sector, east of the Aisne river, appeared to be to outflank the French front established on the Aisne to defend Paris. The French communique said the attack broke against firm French positions.

Belgian Sector Battered

In the Flanders battle the Germans hurled forces against three sides of the northern armies. On the north flank they battered the sector held by Belgian troops on the Lys in a thrust toward Menin, on the French-Belgian border north of the important industrial town of Lille.

Some small German gains—at the cost of "enormous losses"—were acknowledged there by the Allies.

On the east flank the Germans smashed the point of the Allied front held by the French. This area juts out in the Valenciennes sector. The retreat was ordered there to straighten out the Allied line.

Nazis Push Toward Calais

On the English Channel, Nazi forces pushed up through Boulogne toward Calais, twenty-two miles from the Channel-washed shores of Britain, in an effort to cut the Allies off from the sea. The French early today claimed they still held Calais, but the city's fate could not be determined here tonight.

The severity of the combat was not disguised in military dispatches, which report seemingly unending streams of German troops rolling over the Allied lines in an effort to submerge the northern armies under a sea of gray-clad Nazi infantrymen.

Heretofore the Germans had confined their principal thrusts to daylight operations, but their current big push went on through yesterday, last night and today without slackening.

Battle Still Raging

A War Ministry spokesman tonight said the Germans concentrated most attacks during the day against the Belgians along a twenty-five-mile front in the Menin sector. The battle raged on there tonight.

With the Lys crossed, the Germans were in an improved position tonight to move toward Ostend and Zeebrugge on the Channel. The fate of Calais was not known here.

Allied hopes rested on the theory that the defense would tighten like a coiled spring under the impact of the attack.

Into the breach the Germans hurled infantry, artillery, dive bombers and armored columns.

Nazi Wedge Widened

The success of the attack was particularly evident in the way it widened the wedge between the northern Allied armies and the central French armies from Bapaume to Arras.

Until the admission tonight that the River Lys had been crossed, it had appeared that the Allied retreat was largely a strategic move into prepared positions, and that the might and precision of the French military engine was beginning to stop the rout.

The first withdrawal took place Sunday under cover of the initial major night operations in the Battle of Flanders.

Severity Of Combat Admitted

No attempt was made by the Allies to disguise the severity of the combat. Military dispatches said wave upon wave of German troops were rolling forward.

Until Sunday night the Germans confined themselves to major operations by daylight. Then the push became constant.

French general headquarters appeared calm and confident as to the eventual decision. It was pointed out that the war of movement has now changed to one of position, in which the French excelled in the World War.

Nazis Disregard Losses

A French military commentator declared the Germans have weakened themselves by throwing men and material into the fight without regard for losses.

Commenting on the appearance of German infantry in large numbers after many days of reliance upon motorized units, one French commentator said:

"They will find the wet clay ground of Flanders, studded everywhere with rugged vegetation and criss-crossed by canals, an unpropitious battlefield."

The famous French 75's are coming to the fore again. Their use against German infantry brought reports that complete companies were wiped out in some engagements, and that dazed German soldiers came wandering into the French lines.

Belgium To Continue Fight

Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium, meanwhile, announced in a broadcast over the French radio that his refugee Cabinet decided unanimously today to continue the fight, come what may.

He said Belgium's minimum peace conditions were independence, respect for the rights and the dignity of the country (ten words censored).

Aside from the German offensive, however, the problem that has been occupying most of France's attention is the prospect of Italy's entering the war.

The newspaper Le Temps devoted its front page to a leading editorial on Italy and a dispatch from Rome reporting that "the hour for a decision is approaching."

Commander-in-Chief Weygand attended the Cabinet meeting and gave a report.

REYNAUD TO ADDRESS FRENCH PUBLIC TODAY

Cabinet Reviews Situation—Italy's Stand Studied

PARIS, Tuesday, May 28 (AP)—Premier Paul Reynaud's Cabinet reviewed the military and political situation in a session lasting until after midnight and then announced the Premier would broadcast an address to the nation at 8:30 A. M. [3:30 A. M. today in New York.]

No information was forthcoming from the session held behind closed doors except that the general situation had been discussed and that the Premier would broadcast to the country.

Aside from the German offensive, however, the problem that has been occupying most of France's attention is the prospect of Italy's entering the war. The newspaper Temps devoted its front page to a leading editorial on Italy and a dispatch from Rome reporting that "the hour for a decision is approaching."

French Gain on Somme Front

PARIS, May 27 (A. P.)—The French, driving to cut off the German corridor to the English Channel, reported today that they had occupied "several villages and other points" on the Somme south of the German salient.

A War Ministry spokesman admitted, however, that the Germans had made progress in Flanders north of their salient, and had succeeded in crossing the Lys River at several points.

The fate of Calais, on the channel, still was in doubt, as darkness descended over a far-flung, bloody battlefield in which the Germans were reported to be throwing all their arms, including infantry, tanks and planes.

Hurdling Last Natural Barrier.

By crossing the Lys, the Germans were hurdling the last natural obstacle standing between their Flanders armies and the channel ports of Ostend and Zeebrugge.

They already had claimed possession of Ghent and Courtrai on this river, and the French admitted this morning that they had been forced to withdraw just to the north of the German salient in northern France in order to keep from being caught in a smaller bag which the Germans were trying to draw inside the bigger sack, extending all the way from Valenciennes in northern France to near Ostend, on the Belgian coast.

Rivals Verdun Fighting.

This withdrawal was carried out under the violence of a Nazi assault which rivaled the worst of Verdun in the world war. The French said they took up new prepared positions.

As Adolf Hitler speeded his campaign to crush the French, British and Belgian forces in Flanders, his commanders threw into the drive for a quick decision infantry and artillery, as well as the new dive bombers and armored columns.

The French High Command declared that the Germans had attacked "without regard to losses" and added that the "situation is not unfavorable" for the Allies.

Nazis Rush Troops to Boulogne.

The Nazis unleashed long lines of gray-clad infantry and hundreds of tanks, guns and bombing and fighting planes on the Allied positions which stand between them and the few English Channel ports remaining in Allied hands.

To the south, masses of Nazi troops and war supplies continued to pour through the twenty-mile German corridor between Bapaume and Peronne. They were rushed to the sector north of Boulogne, whose stoutly defended citadel finally fell today before the invaders. Heavy fighting was reported in that channel area.

could not concentrate on their operations in northern France.

Allies Hold Line.

The Allied lines in the north were said to extend from a point north of Ostend southward to Courtrai, thence along the west bank of the

It appeared as though the Germans were attempting to cut the Allied army of the north in two by hammering through their lines to make connections with their forces in northwestern France. If the Germans are successful in making connections, they will have succeeded in encircling the Allied troops fighting between Cambrai and the Belgian border. The other half of the Allied army of the north will be backed up against the channel.

Enormous Losses Reported.

The French High Command said that the Allies were standing their ground in the Menin region in fighting "of extreme violence." The German losses in infantry, tanks and planes were described as "enormous."

A War Ministry spokesman said that the Allied withdrawal in the Valenciennes sector was because the positions there were "too far out in front." Before retiring, he said, the Allied troops beat off two German attacks.

At present, a military commentator emphasized, Allied troops are engaged in "a great defensive battle," the results of which are undetermined, but he declared that the Germans' complete disregard for losses in men and material has weakened their hand.

British Troops Withdrawn.

British troops who assisted in defending Bologne were said to be withdrawing northward along the coast toward Calais, which the French asserted they held despite a German announcement to the contrary. In an effort to strengthen the forces along the channel, tired after seventeen days' continuous fighting, the Germans were reported to be rushing fresh troops from the Swiss border and the West Wall through the narrow gap in the Allied lines north of the Somme.

The French declared that the corridor was being raked by Allied artillery and bombed without rest, and that the Germans were paying a terrific price to keep open the breach.

Though slowly withdrawing from Belgium, military spokesmen said, these forces were giving the Germans so much trouble that they Scheldt River toward Cambrai. From Cambrai the line turns northwest through Arras and St. Omer to strike the coast between Boulogne and Calais.

Gen. Maxime Weygand, the Allied Commander-in-Chief, was reported to have flown over the northern armies yesterday to study their position and to have landed to confer with their leaders. Military sources said that these troops were being kept well supplied through Zeebrugge and channel ports farther south.

They also minimized the danger that the Allied forces in Belgium might be attacked from the rear by German troops, separating them from the French armies along the Somme. Motorized troops who have played a large part in the Nazi drive to the channel would find the "wet clay ground of Flanders, studded everywhere with rugged vegetation and criss-crossed by canals, an unpropitious battlefield," one commentator said.

30.24-2551

Second Flight Over Front.

The flying trip which Gen. Weygand made to the army of the north duplicated a similar inspection tour on May 21. On that occasion it was reported that he and his aid-de-camp were fired upon by German anti-aircraft guns as they flew over the Nazi lines in a powerful bomber.

Three German Messerschmitt fighters also were said to have attacked the plane, only to be driven off by six French Moranes.

South of the Somme and along the front extending westward to Montmedy and the Luxemburg border the French were said to be holding everywhere. At several points, according to the High Command, they took the initiative along the Somme, establishing new bridgeheads on the northern bank and narrowing the Peronne-Bapaume corridor—now something less than twenty miles wide.

Farther east, between the Aisne and the Meuse Rivers, the deadly accuracy of the famous French seventy-fives was reported to have taken a tremendous toll as German infantry attempted unsuccessfully to pierce the Allied lines. Stunned German soldiers wandering into the French positions were said to have confirmed reports that complete companies of Nazi foot troops were wiped out.

Bodies Piled Up.

The French said that bodies of Germans were piled high between the lines. Another German assault in the Montmedy sector also was reported repulsed with severe losses for the attackers.

French military men gave high praise to the Belgians for the part they have been playing in the fighting in the north. At Courtrai, it was said, the Belgians first gave ground under heavy German attacks and surrendered their foothold on the banks of the Lys.

A subsequent Belgian counter-attack, which the French War Ministry described as exceptionally courageous, was said to have recovered the lost ground. South of Courtrai, heavy fighting was reported in the Valenciennes sector, where the War Ministry said that the Nazis had suffered considerable losses in repeated attacks "on a very long front."

Reviewing the general military situation, Gen. Duval, writing in Le Journal, said that it appeared that "the first rush of the enemy has almost come to an end."

"Our soldiers," he wrote, "have maintained under fire all the traditions of valor and discipline of our army. Good blood will tell."

FRENCH SHELL ISTEIN

German Gibraltar of Rhine Heavily Bombarded Again.

BASLE, May 27 (A. P.).—French guns systematically shelled the German railroad and forts below Baden, just north of the Swiss frontier, for the third successive day today, with only sporadic replies from the German West Wall batteries.

The major part of the French fire seemed to be directed against the six forts in and around the rock of Istein, towering above the Rhine rapids and the big Kembs Dam.

[By the Associated Press]

Basel, Switzerland, Tuesday, May 28.—The great French forts along the Rhine north of Basel shelled Germany's West Wall forts and railroads across the river this morning for the fourth successive day.

ALLIED CLEAVAGE IS SEEN BY NAZIS

Duff Cooper Speech Viewed as Token of Split.

BERLIN, May 27 (A. P.).—Nazi sources declared today that they regarded Alfred Duff Cooper's message to the French people as an admission that a cleavage already exists between France and England.

"Why was there an appeal by an Englishman to the French people at this time if there is not something fishy about relations between the two?" authorized sources asked.

"As a matter of fact, England and France already are separated in that no more British troops are landing or fighting on French soil outside those caught in the great German pincer movement and who have as their only alternatives to get away on ships to England, surrender or die."

LONDON, May 27 (A. P.).—Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, broadcasting in French, warned the French people last night against being "beguiled" in accepting a German peace.

"Germany," he said, "has never kept the terms of any peace treaty."

"Everything is at stake," he declared. "United we are bound to conquer, separated we might be destroyed. All Germany's efforts now are centered upon effecting a separation."

British Southeast Port Prepares for Invasion

Town Opposite Calais Will Send Children Inland

A SOUTHEASTERN PORT OF ENGLAND, May 27 (AP).—Residents of this coast town registered their children today for transfer to a safer area, as the fate of Calais, a bare twenty-two miles across the English Channel from Dover, hung in the balance.

The people in this important port thought the Allies and the Germans must now be fighting for Calais hand-to-hand. (Germany has reported the capture of Calais, but the French said its fate was in doubt.) They have been following the battle by the rumble of heavy artillery and naval guns and the glare of big fires on the French coast at night. However, the rumble stopped yesterday morning and has not started again, and the fires are dying down.

Artillerymen in powerful coastal forts and in warships off shore watched for an attempted invasion of England from the sea. Troops in machine-gun nests and at anti-aircraft guns guarded against attack from the air. Red-capped military police questioned all strangers and watched for an enemy move from within. Reconnaissance planes patrolled the coast and the sea.

Men of all forces said they were ready to meet the most serious threat of invasion of England since the days of Napoleon.

Reich's Morale Soars On News From Calais

BERLIN, May 27 (AP).—A wave of elation swept through the Reich today with the announcement of the capture of Calais. It was said on all sides that Hitler's army had accomplished in two weeks what Kaiser Wilhelm's troops had been unable to do in four years.

Kirk Leaves Berlin Again for Vacation

BERLIN, May 27 (A. P.).—For the second time Alexander C. Kirk, American Charge d'Affaires in Berlin, left for a vacation today.

He left for Rome and embassy officials said it was uncertain whether he would sail for the United States.

He departed on May 10, but returned hastily when the Germans invaded Holland and Belgium.

CURFEW IS DECREED FOR MALTA AND GIBRALTAR ZONES

Britons Who Call at Rome Embassy Are Advised to Leave Italy.

LONDON, May 27 (A. P.).—British and French squadrons in the Mediterranean kept their decks cleared for action, tonight, and the Government ordered curfews on the two great fortresses of Gibraltar and Malta. Every one except soldiers and sailors in uniform was ordered indoors between 11:30 P. M. and 5:30 A. M. on Gibraltar and between 11 P. M. and 5 A. M. on Malta.

In Malta the curfew was termed necessary to guard against parachutists. Additional protection on the island was given by an assembly of volunteer force of rural sportsmen.

Tension still grew over Italian antagonism toward Britain but the Foreign Office and the Ministry of Economic Warfare hoped a solution of the Anglo-Italian economic quarrel could be found in a plan whereby Italian ships would carry only cargoes which have been navicerted (described in the manifest as approval by the British).

See Situation Getting Worse.

Semi-official sources at the London Foreign Office said the British in Italy were "the same as in any other danger spot," being warned, when they asked advice, to go home "in view of the anxious situation."

In neutral diplomatic circles there was disagreement with the British interpretation that "things are just as they were." These sources declared the Anglo-Italian situation was getting steadily worse and believed the entrance of Italy into the war hinged on the success or failure of Allied arms in the next three days.

One neutral Charge d'Affaires said that Italy's entrance into the war on Germany's side was a matter of hours," Uneasiness was evident among the Italians here.

Egypt in New Defense Step.

CAIRO, Egypt, May 27 (A. P.).—The Egyptian Government acted today to form a national guard to assist regular police in an emergency and called for volunteers.

Britons Advised to Go.

ROME, May 27 (A. P.).—British nationals who called at the British embassy for advice about leaving Italy were told today they had better go unless they had urgent reasons for remaining, especially if they had families in this country.

The British embassy has not circularized its advice to the British colony as United States diplomatic officials have done previously.

Meanwhile Italy appeared today to be speeding along the road to war despite British hopes of mollifying Italian bitterness against the Allied blockade. The British asserted that Italy had proposed "a very satisfactory basis" for a contraband agreement, but this brought no immediate sign of relaxation of preparations of the Italian military machine or dimming of the popular spirit for intervention.

Most Italians believed that any relaxation of the contraband control would fall far short of meeting Fascist "aspirations" for territorial and other concessions so long as the British held Gibraltar and the Suez Canal, the two gateways to the Mediterranean which Italians call Mare Nostrum ("our sea").

Americans Going Home.

At Naples, the United States liner Manhattan began taking aboard the first of about 2,000 Americans who will sail aboard her for New York—many in the belief that she may be the last American passenger ship to enter the Mediterranean area until the war is over. About 500 others were unable to get passage on the crowded ship.

Coming eastward, she was stopped only about fourteen minutes at Gibraltar, British contraband control station. Sailors said that the captain protested that the Italian liner Rex had been allowed to pass without halting on her last voyage and asked if the contraband control were discriminating against American ships.

British newspaper correspondents said that they had been instructed from home to be prepared to leave. The week-old ban preventing the Vatican City newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, from appearing on Roman news stands was lifted, but an informed source said that the newspaper had agreed to exclude war comment from its columns and to confine its war coverage to official bulletins.

Other Developments.

In the atmosphere of intense preparations for war, these developments occurred yesterday:

1. Premier Mussolini conferred with army chiefs, directors of mobilization and arms producers; subsequently, orders were issued to expand the production of artillery and to conserve the nation's gasoline supplies by suspending civilian motor traffic on June 1.

2. Banners bearing the words "war, war!" and "Duce, we want to march" were raised before the Premier in Mussolini Forum at the end of a gymnastic exhibition by 10,000 Fascist youths. Mussolini watched impassively.

3. Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano returned from a tour of Albania—conquered and annexed by Italy in April, 1939—in which he received pledges of Albanian support in any Italian war effort.

Contraband Control.

The British announcement that Italy had proposed "a very satisfactory basis" for a contraband agreement came as Sir Wilfrid Greene, British economic expert, left Rome after conducting negotiations regarding the contraband control and trade questions.

Foreign observers said that they were puzzled by the announcement because they had been given to understand that Mussolini had rejected both the English and French offers as being "too little and too late."

The British were reported to have been ready, in effect, to lift the contraband control to permit large supplies of raw materials to reach Italy in return for an Italian promise to prevent them from reaching Germany.

Meanwhile the city's walls were plastered with fresh posters calling for Italian intervention in the war.

Garibaldi Reconciled.

Gen. Achille Starace, chief of the General Staff of the Fascist Militia, issued an order today to university students, assuring them that they had shown themselves "worthy of the high honor of bearing arms for the Fascist revolution."

"May there live again in your hearts," he said, "the boldness of your comrades who fought against the enemies of Fascism and Italy, together with your still unsatisfied anxiety to liberate the Fascist empire from its arrogant oppressors and make it again master of its sea."

Premier Mussolini received a telegram from Giuseppe Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian patriot of the nineteenth century, offering his best wishes "as you are preparing to forge a new destiny for greater Italy." Garibaldi recently swore allegiance to the Fascist regime after years of estrangement spent in America.

Egyptians Are Warned To Shun Nazi Radio

ALEXANDRIA, May 27 (A. P.).—The Egyptian Gazette gave some editorial advice to its readers today on the subject of radio broadcasts.

"Every minute you spend listening to enemy broadcasts is a minute spent in the service of Hitler," it said, and added that listening is "treasonable in effect, if not intent."

GIBRALTAR, May 27 (A. P.).—Officials announced tonight that, starting tomorrow, a curfew would prohibit any one except soldiers and sailors in uniform to be out of doors between 11:30 P. M. and 5:30 A. M. without written permits.

Malta Orders Curfew.

MALTA, May 27 (A. P.). — The Governor of this strategic British naval base ordered curfew today from 11 P. M. to 5 A. M., effective tonight, as a d[illegible] precaution against parachute invasion. The public was warned that violators of the curfew would risk being shot. The warnings emphasized the death penalty for treachery. Americans have been advised to leave Malta at the earliest possible moment.

AMERICANS STORM ROME SHIP OFFICES

Hundreds Seek Passage As War Fever Continues To Flame

London Newspaper Correspondents Also Warned To Be Ready To Go

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 27—With war fever flaming throughout pro-German Italy, the British Embassy tonight advised inquiring nationals to return home unless they had urgent reasons for remaining.

Embassy officials made it clear they had not issued a general notice to British citizens in Italy. They said they were telling persons who asked for advice that it was better to leave the country now, especially if they had families. British newspaper correspondents also said their employers advised them to be prepared to leave.

Meanwhile, hundreds of Americans stormed shipping offices and sought passage home in belated response to the advice of United States diplomatic officials that they leave as soon as possible.

Many Board Manhattar.

The United States liner Manhattan began taking on board at Naples the first of about 2,000 Americans who will sail for New York. She will leave Genoa June 1.

About 500 others were unable to get passnge and waited for the United States liner President Harrison, expected to sail from Genoa June 2.

Another chance—pessimists said it was a slim one—remained in the liner Washington. She is expected to sail from Italy June 15, but the belief was expressed that the Washington might not be able to complete her next eastward voyage to Italy before this country became a belligerent.

A passenger on the Manhattan said the liner halted off the Azores on the afternoon of May 23 at a time when Italy's war preparations were accentuated.

The vessel resumed her voyage, but changed course slightly to keep within sight of the Portuguese coast for several hours before finally entering the Mediterranean.

The Manhattan was stopped only about fourteen minutes at the British contraband control station at Gibraltar. Crewmen said the captain protested because his ship was halted and the Italian liner Rex was allowed to proceed without stopping.

One Of The Sore Spots

The contraband-control issue between Britain and Italy is one of the sore spots which has caused Italian war sentiments to rise and Italians today ignored British hints of a possible agreement in the dispute.

However, most Italians expressed belief that any relaxation of the contraband control would fall short of meeting Fascist aspirations for territory and other concessions as long as Britain held a firm hand on Gibraltar and the Suez Canal, the two gateways to the Mediterranean.

Previous speeches by Premier Mussolini proclaiming Italian rights to the Mediterranean—Italians call it mare nostrum (our sea)—were scattered among news columns along with messages and proclamations from many individuals and organizations tending to show Italians are yearning to leap into the fray.

Gen. Giuseppe Garibaldi, grandson of the Italian patriot, who recently returned to Italy after sixteen years, sent a message of exhortation to Mussolini "from the shadow of the great tomb" of his grandfather.

Garibaldi recently was converted to Fascism after years of aloofness.

Newspapers clamored with more insistence for "freedom" in the Mediterranean.

The Rome newspaper Il Tevere published a full-page map showing how Italian warplanes and ships could overcome British and French forces in a triangle formed by Alexandria, Haifa and Cyprus.

The blocking of the Suez Canal by sinking a steamer in it would cut the Allies off from reinforcements and supplies, it said, while an immediate Italian air attack from Sicilian, Libyan and Dodecanese bases would "overthrow" French and English air forces in Egypt, Palestine and Syria.

Manhattan Reaches Naples

NAPLES, Italy, May 27 (AP)—The United States liner Manhattan arrived here today, her return passage already booked to overflowing by 2,000 home-going Americans. Many believed it might be the last American passenger ship to enter the Mediterranean area until the war is over.

If Italy should enter the European conflict, it was pointed out, United States neutrality regulations would close the Mediterranean to American shipping and block Naples and Genoa from Northern and Central European passage routes.

Among those planning to embark on the Manhattan is Mrs. Myron C. Taylor, wife of President Roosevelt's personal envoy to the Vatican.

Five hundred applicants were unable to obtain passage because the liner is booked to capacity. Americans jammed shipping offices.

The Manhattan, which arrived here with 160 passengers, took 200 aboard before going to Genoa, her last Italian port of call. She will embark 1,700 more there and sail for New York Saturday.

IRISH IN ARMS, AND LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

Police Seek Fifth Columnists And Outlawed I. R. A. Members

Nazi Invasion Of Low Countries Reawakens Erin To Danger

[By the Associated Press]

Dublin, May 27—Determined to maintain defensive neutrality, Ireland sped its army toward war-time strength tonight and sent scores of police looking for Fifth Columnists and members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

"Every man" has been urged to rally to the colors—conscription is a word that isn't even whispered here—against the possibility that Ireland might be used as a base for an attack on England.

The army, mobilized in September, has been alert to the vulnerability of the Emerald Isle, but the prolonged stalemate on the old western front brought relaxation of the tension and reserves had been returned to civilian life.

Ireland Reawakened

Then came the fast-breaking developments of the German invasion of the Low Countries, reawakening Ireland to the possibility of danger.

Explosions of the past week, the reported landing of a mysterious Nazi parachute man in Dublin and week-end speeches by Premier Eamon de Valera in which he demanded that Irishmen rid themselves of their apathy brought home still more effectively Erin's peril.

Emphasis has been placed on the training of troops in regaining control of airdromes that might be captured by surprise parachuters.

The question most frequently heard in this city of 500,000 population is: "Can the state keep off foreign powers who are aided by disaffected local elements?"

Saw German Victory

When the stalemate persisted on the old western front, some Irishmen discussed with calm cheerfulness the possibility of a German victory. Now they speculate gloomily about the future—"if worst comes to worst."

Ireland's means of defense are not considerable. Its entire twenty-s: counties have a population of 3,000,000, including women and children.

But its military machine, such as it it, is well organized and it is a force to be relied upon to offer stubborn resistance to any invader.

One military expert expressed belief that no power could undertake other than a limited excursion against Ireland. And this, he pointed out, would be far from enough to overcome Irish resistance.

The army has infantry, artillery and mechanized cavalry ready for immediate duty. The reserve is drawn from regular troops who have seryed their active-duty period, and a volunteer force corresponding to the United States National Guard. The latter numbers close to 20,000; the number of regulars mustered is a military secret.

During the civil war of the early '20s more than 70,000 men were engaged. The World War of 1914-18 saw Ireland, including the six counties of northern Ireland (Ulster), furnish 300,000 men for the fields of Flanders. Of this number 10,000 were killed, more than 50,000 wounded.

IRELAND PREPARES TO REPEL INVASION

Wartime Restrictions May Be Imposed.

DUBLIN, May 27 (A. P.).—Ireland prepared to accept wartime restrictions today to defend the island against possible invasion. Premier Eamon de Valera's declaration in a speech yesterday at Galway that "we are in the war zone" was believed to be the forerunner to such defense measures as a blackout and, perhaps, semi-martial law.

Reports of plots by the outlawed Irish Republican Army and increasing apprehension that Germany might attempt to use Ireland as a base for operations against England prompted the Government to increase the armed forces. I. R. A. activity also was reported in Northern Ireland.

I. R. A. men visited Belfast dance halls on Saturday night in a campaign to get recruits for their organization. Premier de Valera, in a speech on Saturday night, said:

"There is danger over this country, particularly today, and there is but one safeguard—to be prepared to defend the liberties we won against any one who might try to invade them." Urging "the whole country to stand behind the Government in its defense efforts as one man," Mr. de Valera called for men to join the army and volunteers to aid the police in tracking "any indication of treachery."

Britain Names Haining General Staff Vice-Chief

He Will Serve Under Dill; Paget Will Assist Ironside

LONDON, May 27 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. R. H. Haining was named vice-chief of the Imperial General Staff today under Gen. John Greer Dill in the reorganization of the British high command.

Maj. Gen. B. C. T. Paget, commander of the 18th Division, was appointed chief of the General Staff of the Home Forces with the acting rank of lieutenant general. Gen. Paget led the successful British withdrawal from Norway. He will be under Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, who was shifted from chief of the Imperial General Staff to general officer commanding the home forces. Gen. Haining had been general officer in charge of the Western Command. Gen. Sir Henry E. Jackson was appointed to Gen. Haining's old job.

Today's changes were in line with the move to revitalize the British Army under Prime Minister Winston Churchill's new war drive.

Sir Edward Grigg, Under-Secretary of the War Office, announced in a radio broadcast tonight that 400,000 volunteers had been "raised and organized" to fight German parachutists if they attempted to land in Britain.

Sir Edward said a large proportion of these volunteers, who responded to the appeal of War Secretary Anthony Eden twelve days ago, had already been armed.

Sir Edward said the "paraspotters" would give valuable aid to the regular troops by "manning a wide range of posts and reporting quickly on any landings they observe."

Emphasizing that regular troops were "ready to tackle enemy landings from the air," he said "the volunteers are only a part of our new system of defense."

Newly organized defense volunteers sprang to their posts ready for action when air raid sirens sounded in the Orkney Islands late last night. "The raiders passed" signal was given twenty minutes later, however, with no enemy aircraft having been seen or heard.

Eighty per cent of the volunteer force in the Orkneys, where Britain's Scapa Flow naval base is situated, is composed of ex-service men. Two-thirds of them have kept in training at rifle clubs. They keep their arms and ammunition at home.

DE LA BAUME FRANCE'S NEW ENVOY TO SPAIN

International Trade Expert Succeeds Petain

Paris Will Work With Franco Against Separatists

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 27—The appointment of one of France's best known international commercial experts as Ambassador to Spain drew attention tonight to the steps the Allied powers are making to forge closer trade ties with the government of Francisco Franco.

The post was given to Robert Renom de la Baume, who in 1933 was vice-director of International Commerical Relations for the French Government and since 1937 has been vice-director of Political and Commercial Affairs at the Foreign Office.

Succeeds Marshal Petain

De la Baume succeeds Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, who was called to the Vice-Premiership in France's military crisis. The appointment was one of a series of important diplomatic changes announced today by the Government of Paul Reynaud.

The appointment of de la Baume closely follows Britain's appointment of Sir Samuel Hoare, former Cabinet Minister, as Ambassador to Spain.

Conversations for the further development of trade and commercial relations between Spain and France have been going on recently.

France To Cooperate

It was announced Saturday that France would cooperate with the Franco Government by taking steps to prevent separationist conspiracies by Basque and Catalan separatists who are refugees in France.

Other appointments included the switching of Marcel Peyrouton, veteran diplomat and former resident general of Tunisia and Morocco, from Buenos Aires to Bucharest and the appointment of Adrien Thierry, Ambassador to Rumania, in his place.

Vladimir Lefevre d'Ormesson, editorial writer for the Righest newspaper, Figaro, was appointed Ambassador to the Vatican, replacing Francois Charles-Roux, who recently was named Secretary-General of Foreign Service.

FRANCE NAMES ENVOYS

De La Baume to Succeed Petain at Madrid.

PARIS, May 27 (A. P.).—Renom de la Baume, vice-director of political and commercial affairs at the French Foreign Office, was named Ambassador to Madrid today in a series of diplomatic changes foreshadowed when Premier Reynaud shook up his government ten days ago. M. de la Baume succeeds Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, who became Vice-Premier in the shake-up.

Other changes included the appointment of Adrien Thierry, at present Ambassador to Rumania, as Ambassador to Argentina. Ambassador Peyrouton, at Buenos Aires, takes M. Thierry's place at Bucharest.

Vladimir Lefevre d'Ormesson goes to the Vatican as France's envoy.

BRITISH TRADE ENVOY LEAVES ON RUSSIAN TRIP

Sir Stafford Cripps Goes Without Waiting for End of Formalities.

SEEKS ECONOMIC AGREEMENT

Indications Grow That Nations May Soon Be on Much Better Terms.

LONDON, May 27 (A. P.).—Sir Stafford Cripps, Laborite Member of Parliament and a recent visitor to Moscow, is en route to the Soviet Russian capital on an economic mission.

The Soviet Union was reported today to have welcomed a British proposal to send Sir Stafford, and in Russian circles here it was said that chances for improved relations between the two countries now seemed quite favorable.

Sir Stafford, however, did not wait for the Foreign Office to complete formalities of protocol and already has begun the first leg of his journey to Moscow.

He was there earlier this year, going by the "back door" on a flight from Chungking, China, and was said to have conferred with Joseph Stalin.

Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky talked over with the Foreign Secretary, Lord Halifax, yesterday the proposal that Sir Stafford go to Moscow in connection with negotiations for a trade agreement.

Power of Decision.

It was understood the Russians desired that Sir Stafford should be empowered to make decisions and take actions regarding details of such an agreement.

Observers saw in the fact that Russia has not increased her demands in connection with proposed trade negotiations, an indication that the two countries may be able to get together.

There was a feeling, however, that Russia would be more likely to enter into new relations with Britain if the British ordered their Ambassador back to Moscow soon.

The Ambassador, Sir William Seeds, left Moscow in January and has not returned.

Preliminary talks between Russia and Great Britain were said, however, to be progressing now in a very friendly fashion, with a likelihood that all minor points of difference would soon be disposed of.

In Foreign Office circles it was said that a reply from Moscow regarding the British proposal to make Sir Stafford a special envoy were not unfavorable, but that certain formalities must be arranged before he could assume the post.

Pravda Accuses Bankers.

MOSCOW, May 27 (A. P.).—Pravda, Communist party newspaper, said today that American bankers were ready to lead the United States into war for the sake of profits.

"They are not satisfied with war orders, gold which flows like a broad river from England and France. . . . They want a prey," said an article entitled "War Fever in the United States."

"They are ready to become the heirs of all the belligerents. Voices for the annexation of islands in the Caribbean, belonging to France and England, and also mentioning the question of Greenland and the Dutch Indies are becoming more and more frequent.

"The American cannon kings fear to see the end of war . . . but the American people don't want war."

British-French Wells to Supply Oil to Germany

Rumania to Collect Part of Royalty From Alien Firms in 'Gas,' Sell It to Nazis

BUCHAREST, May 27 (AP).—An agreement which eventually will put gasoline produced with British and French capital into German tanks, trucks and planes on the western front was reported today to have been reached by Rumania and foreign oil companies.

British and French companies produce 70 per cent of all oil brought from the ground in Rumania, and their output, it is estimated, totaled about 2,800,000 tons for export in 1940. This leaves only 1,200,000 tons for export in the hands of Rumanian, Italian, American and other companies, much of which already has been contracted for by countries other than Germany.

Some larger British companies had contracts to ship oil to Germany which did not expire until last Dec. 31. Under Rumanian pressure, they lived up to those contracts. But since Jan. 1 no British or French oil has been sent from Rumania to Germany.

Rumania promised last December to ship 1,600,000 tons of oil each year to Germany, or slightly more than 130,000 tons a month. This agreement cannot be fulfilled without dipping into the British-French production.

Rumania's oil commissioner, who has power to expropriate the wells if he considers it necessary, devised a scheme to collect in oil instead of cash the 11 per cent royalty which all foreign companies must pay to the government. All foreign companies agreed to pay future royalties in oil, but the British and French balked when the commissioner made this order retroactive to last Oct. 1. They finally agreed to turn over to the government for eventual export to Germany about 45 per cent of the retroactive royalties in oil.

The commissioner's order also provides that this crude oil must be refined by the oil companies.

Turkish Officials Work On Final War Plans

Nation Pledged To Enter Conflict On Allies' Side If Italians Attack In Mediterranean

Ankara, Turkey, May 27 (AP)—The Turkish general staff and members of the War and Interior Ministries worked tonight on the final phases of Turkey's plans for use in case of war.

Should the conflict spread to Turkey—and this nation is treaty-bound to enter the war on the Allied side if the Allies are attacked by Italy in the Mediterranean—a state of emergency would be decreed simultaneously with general mobilization.

Blanket powers to issue such decrees were conferred months ago on the Government by the National Assembly. Authorities denied a "state of emergency" had been declared, as reported in an Exchange Telegraph (British) dispatch to London.

Nazis Predict Attack on Liner

Say Allies Plan to Blame Germany for Attempt on the President Roosevelt.

BERLIN, May 27 (A. P.).—A warning has been sent to the United States embassy repeatedly in the past two days that the Allies either plan or already have carried out a criminal attempt on the American liner President Roosevelt, Nazi spokesmen disclosed today. The President Roosevelt is en route to Ireland to bring Americans home.

The Germans said that the warnings had been addressed to Alexander C. Kirk, Charge d'Affaires of the United States embassy.

The Embassy announced that it had received no communications whatever respecting the President Roosevelt except formal message acknowledging a United States note advising the German Government of the ship's sailing.

Officials said that the note to Germany and other belligerents saying that the ship was sailing to pick up refugees was dated May 23 and was answered the next day by the Reich, which said merely that it had been referred to proper authorities.

Read It in the Papers.

They said that they had read in German papers that Germany soon would make public evidence of her efforts to inform America of an alleged British plan to sink the President Roosevelt but that, to the best of their knowledge, nothing of such a nature had been delivered to the Embassy.

"Evidence keeps accumulating more and more and hour by hour," they said, "that some sort of manipulation is planned regarding the refugee ship in the hope thereby of drawing the United States into the war.

"We hope within a few days, possibly tomorrow, to lay before you concrete facts on just how we warned the American embassy."

"You will then realize with what extreme care and earnestness we pointed out all the circumstances confirming our suspicion of a planned attempt on the S. S. President Roosevelt."

Lay Trick to British.

DNB, the official German news agency, asserted today that the liner may be subjected to attack by the British in a trick to involve the United States in war.

The charge was contained in a dispatch from Boston, where, it was said, this information was obtained "on good authority."

[German naval authorities last October told President Roosevelt that they had learned that the British intended to sink the liner Iroquois and blame Germany. The ship reached New York without incident.]

At the same time the authoritative commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland, while saying that the German Navy was taking special precautions to assure the President Roosevelt a safe crossing, warned the world against "another Athenia incident."

Since the sinking of the British liner Athenia with the loss of 112 lives on the opening day of the war, Germans have contended that this was a British maneuver to arouse the United States against Germany.

Britain Calls Idea Insane.

LONDON, May 27 (A. P.).—A Foreign Office spokesman said today that no sane man could accept the warning given in Berlin that the Allies planned an attack on the President Roosevelt.

"In the past," he said, "it has been the German policy to accuse the Allies of doing exactly what the Germans themselves have in mind.

"This story is similar to those which asserted that the British sank the Athenia and Admiral Raeder's warning about the Iroquois."

Washington's Precautions.

WASHINGTON, May 27 (A. P.).—The State Department said today that every precaution had been taken for the safety of the liner President Roosevelt.

These precautions will be continued, a spokesman said, adding that the department had not received official word of a German warning that the Allies had plotted a criminal attempt on the liner.

Both Great Britain and Germany have replied favorably to telegrams from Secretary Hull asking that the President Roosevelt be not molested.

The department official said that the German warning had not been communicated to the President Roosevelt's captain. He said the captain and crew were already advised to take every precaution, and that the ship was thoroughly searched and crew men questioned before she left New York last Friday.

The ship is to be searched again before leaving Galway, Ireland. The sinking of the British liner Athenia last September, with the loss of twenty-eight American lives, seemed to officials to make precautions advisable.

No Word in Boston.

BOSTON, May 27 (A. P.).—A German spokesman said today that the German consulate in Boston had no knowledge of a report carried by DNB, the official German news agency, that the United States liner President Roosevelt, on its way to bring back Americans from Ireland "might be subjected to attack by the British in a trick to involve the United States in war."

Informed of a Berlin dispatch saying that DNB reported from Boston that it had learned on "good authority" that the liner might undergo attack, the spokesman said:

"We have no knowledge of that information here."

He said he spoke for the consulate in the absence of the consul, Dr. Herbert Scholz, who was out of the city.

Line Not Notified.

Officials of the United States Lines said today they had not been officially informed of the Berlin report that safety of the liner President Roosevelt was threatened, and that they did not plan to radio the master of the ship concerning the report.

A spokesman said:

"It is inevitable that rumors will fly in connection with a voyage such as the Roosevelt is making. This is the first time, however, the reports have appeared while a ship was eastbound. Before, rumor has followed departure of the vessel for the United States."

Officers Reserve Rolls, Closed in November, Reopened

LONDON, May 27 (AP).—Great Britain called up men aged twenty-eight and twenty-nine for military service tonight under a plan to put British war machinery into high gear. The twenty-eight-year-olds are to be registered on June 15 and the twenty-nine-year-olds a week later, it was announced. The new registration was expected to add 600,000 men to the armed forces and raise Britain's Army to the 3,000,000 mark.

Informed sources here said the decision to register two classes within a week resulted from the government's desire to have available a sufficient number of men to meet any call.

British Army Reopens Reserve Officers' List

LONDON, May 27 (A. P.).—The War Office announced today that the emergency officers' reserve, closed in November, 1939, because the number of applicants at that time was overwhelming, will be reopened on a "limited basis."

The reserve is open to men with army experience who have been or are likely to become good officers.

AMERICANS MISSING

Eight Ambulance Drivers in French Army Disappear.

PARIS, May 27 (A. P.).—Officials of American volunteer organizations appealed today to the International Red Cross to help them find eight of their American men reported missing during German bombardments. Nothing has been heard from the men since they were placed on the "disappeared" list a week ago.

Erwin H. Watts of New York, a driver with an American ambulance unit in northern France, was reported today to have been injured slightly by a collapsible wall while rescuing a baby in a German air bombardment. The child was unhurt.

Watts, the son of the late Ridley Watts, New York banker, was expected to rejoin his unit after a few days.

The American Volunteer Ambulance Organization and the American Field Service each registered four missing, as follows:

Al Raymond, Chicago; Louis Wehrle, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Murray Shipley, Cincinnati, and John Glowacki, Jersey City, of the American Volunteer Ambulance unit, and Donald Coster, Montreal and New York city; John Clement, Brookline, Mass.; George King, New York city, and Gregory Wait, Shelburne, Vt., of the American Field Service.

13 British Soldiers Swim Out To Sea To Escape Nazi Bullets

London, May 27 (AP)—A British officer and twelve men picked up at sea from a drifting boat were brought to an English port tonight by a hospital ship.

Hard pressed by advancing German troops and by machine-gun fire from planes attacking a French seaport Saturday, the officer and his men raced to the beach and swam a quarter mile to a drifting boat. In the boat they found a Dutchman dead from machine-gun fire.

To hide from the planes, the soldiers lay in the bottom of the boat as it drifted seaward. Machine-gun fire had disabled the motor.

They suffered from cold and hunger for twenty-four hours before sighting the hospital ship.

ENVOY SEES 'JUNGLE LAW'

U. S. Minister in Dublin Finds Historical Parallels

DUBLIN, May 27 (AP)—United States Minister David Gray said in a speech today that "jungle law has broken loose in Europe" and that some persons believe European civilization is on the verge of disappearance.

Mr. Gray said there were some parallels between the collapse of classical civilization 1,500 years ago and the present situation.

He pointed to the Philippines and their prospective independence as an example of the way a groundwork could be laid in the Western Hemisphere for "a group of cooperating nations equal in sovereignty and dignity."

NAZIS APPROVE TALK

Say U. S. Defense Plan Isn't Because of Germany.

BERLIN, May 27 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt's fireside talk last night was regarded by authorized German spokesmen today as having touched on the United States' own business.

Germany never has been a threat in the Western Hemisphere, these persons said, and if America feels she needs better defenses it cannot be because of any German designs.

They declared that Germany respected the slogan "America for Americans," but also expected America to respect the slogan "Europe for the Europeans."

The President's reference to the "fifth column" was described as either a tactical move in domestic politics or a result of the President's reception of alarmist news from Europe.

'Germans'll Show You,' He Yells: British Tell Him

Vender of Mosley's Paper Is Sentenced to Week

LONDON, May 27 (AP).—Donald Patrick O'Byrne, twenty-three years old, was arrested in the Croydon district of South London today for shouting: "When the Germans get here they'll show you how to run Croydon!" He was sentenced to a week in prison.

O'Byrne was selling copies of Sir Oswald Mosley's Fascist newspaper "Action." Police said they found a revolver, ammunition and Fascist and German literature in his apartment.

Refugee Bus Operators Commended By France

Government Pays Formal Tribute For Bravery Shown Under Enemy Fire

A communique declared "they accomplished their task fully, with sacrifice, the spirit of discipline and splendid technical ability. The Government thanks them in the name of the nation."

Under emergency mobilization the drivers worked day and night with little sleep, often under fire from airplanes.

SHIPS BRING HOME BRITISH WOUNDED

War Office Casualty Lists Running Far Behind.

LONDON, May 27 (A. P.).—Two hospital ships arrived at a south of England port today with an undisclosed number of wounded from the British Expeditionary Force in France.

Three hospital ships brought several hundred wounded to the same port yesterday and reported that fourteen had died en route. Earlier yesterday an unrevealed number of wounded were landed in the west of England.

War Office casualty lists for the B. E. F. are apparently running far behind. Yesterday's the first issued since Germany struck on the western front more than two weeks ago, listed ten killed, seventeen wounded, two taken prisoner, 163 missing and thirty-eight who died.

With these casualties, the total officially announced for the army, exclusive of the Air Force, produced these figures for the whole war: Killed or fatally wounded, thirty-five; wounded, 122; taken prisoner, twenty eight; missing, 203; died 2,038.

His wife will return to the United States on the President Roosevelt, now en route to Galway, and will leave here for Ireland on Wednesday.

P.).—A sharp increase in shipments of tin was authorized today by the International Tin Committee, which fixed the export quota of tin-producing nations at 100 per cent of standard tonnages for the third quarter of 1940. The quota in the current three months is 80 per cent; in the first three months of the year it was 120 per cent.

The committee recommended the signatory governments permit exports on this basis before July 1, subject to subsequent adjustment.

Quotas in the four quarters of last year were respectively 45, 40, 120 and 100 per cent.

Queen's Flight Angers Dutch

Netherlanders Say She Should Have Stayed to Face Nazi Invasion With Them.

MAY 28 1940

By J. REILLY O'SULLIVAN.

Mr. O'Sullivan was chief of the Associated Press bureau at Amsterdam at the time of the German invasion. Now in Berlin, he gives one segment of the Dutch reaction to Queen Wilhelmina's flight in the following dispatch:

BERLIN, May 27 (A. P.).—Their traditional faith in their Queen considerably shaken by her flight to England, Dutchmen have adopted a new greeting since the German occupation of the Netherlands: "We are still living."

They say this a bit ruefully and with a note of apprehension as to the future, but it is characteristic of the average Dutchman to bear adversity philosophically.

One owner of a chain of movie theaters in Rotterdam, for instance, refused to be downhearted. Though his home as well as his five theaters were destroyed by German bombs, he told me:

"I hope to get along somehow."

Queen Criticized.

But the Dutch are far less philosophical over the fact that fifty-nine-year-old Queen Wilmelmina fled before the Dutch Army capitulated to the invaders. Many feel that, after forty-one years as their ruler, she should have stayed behind to share her country's fate.

She should have done this, they say, even if the Government was forced to flee the country. Some even say that it would have been far better for her to remain in Holland, but to abdicate and allow Crown Princess Juliana to rule the empire from abroad.

This sentiment has more than merely oral expression. The posters proclaiming the surrender to Germany ended with the words "Long Live the Queen!" but time and again I came across posters on which the words "The Queen" had been crossed out and "Holland" written in.

Americans Are Stranded.

When I left Holland, George A. Gordon, United States Minister at The Hague, was seeking means to get several hundred Americans out of the country. Up to May 22, he had had no word from the State Department in eight days. He had been able to ascertain, however, that none of the Americans in Holland was injured during the five days' fighting.

In Rotterdam, which suffered most from the German attack, people were being rescued from air-raid shelters in the basements of wrecked buildings four days after the last bombardment. Several children were born in Rotterdam air-raid shelters, while at Tilburg, in South Holland, a woman with a two-day old baby spent four days in a shelter.

Mr. Gordon, when I left, was planning to stay at The Hague as long as possible. The American legation was handling the affairs of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Canada and South Africa.

Second Hohenzollern Killed In Battle

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 27—The death of Prince Wilhelm of Prussia from a wound while fighting in Flanders was announced today.

He was the oldest son of former Crown Prince Freidrich Wilhelm and the second Hohenzollern victim of the European war. The other member of the House of Hohenzollern to die was Prince Oscar, cousin of Prince Wilhelm. Oscar fell on the Polish front.

Wounded On May 23

Wilhelm suffered a heavy abdominal wound in Flanders on May 23. He was hurried to a military hospital near Brussels, where he died yesterday morning after being decorated with the Iron Cross, first class.

Wilhelm was born July 4, 1906, in Marmor Palace. He was married June 3, 1933, to Dorothea von Salviati, descendant of an Italian family which emigrated from northern Italy to Prussia during the reign of Frederick the Great. He met her at Bonn, during his student days of 1927-29, and they were married in Bonn.

They had two daughters—Princess Felicitas, born at Bonn June 7, 1934, and Princess Christa, born at the castle of Klein-Obisch October 31, 1936.

Prince Wilhelm was a first lieutenant commanding a company of infantry.

The Prince's body reached Cologne today en route to Potsdam, near Berlin, for burial.

MAY 28 1940

DA-H

Was Stahlhelm Leader

Until virtual dissolution of the Stahlhelm, an organization of World War veterans, in March, 1934, Prince Wilhelm occasionally figured in the news as a Stahlhelm battalion commander.

Since then he and his wife had devoted themselves almost exclusively to managing the Hohenzollern estate at Sternalitz, in German Upper Silesia.

Wilhelm was heart and soul a soldier. In the family tradition, he began his military career at the age of 10 and held the rank of lieutenant when the imperial army was disbanded after the World War.

Under the republic no Hohenzollern was wanted in the Reichswehr. This feeling was so strong that there was violent protest against his mere attendance at the Reichswehr's autumn maneuvers in 1926.

In 1927 the few existing monarchist organs reported his attendance at Bonn University, which his father and grandfather had attended, and that he joined the same feudal fraternity of which they had been members.

Two years later he enrolled at the University of Königsberg in order to become better acquainted with East Prussian life.

Kaiser And His Marriage

During his adolescence, the Prince was brought up by his mother, Crown Princess Cecelie, since his father, the Crown Prince, spent the first years after the war in exile on the Island of Wieringen, in the Netherlands.

After meeting Signorina Salviati, an ardent Nazi, at Bonn, Prince Wilhelm in 1932 visited his grandfather, the former Kaiser, at Doorn to confess his love and to see what could be done about the house laws of the Hohenzollern dynasty which stipulated automatic loss of the right of primogeniture for the oldest son in event of marriage to someone of unequal birth.

Kaiser's Statement

The former Kaiser exacted the pledge that the young Prince would, come what may, consult his grandfather again before making any decisive move. It was a considerable surprise to the family, then, when Prince Wilhelm announced his engagement on April 20, 1933. On the day of his marriage, the former Kaiser issued the following statement:

"Prince Wilhelm of Prussia on reaching majority renounced all rights derived from primogeniture in the event of his entering upon a marriage that runs counter to the house law of the royal family. This eventuality has become a reality by the marriage to Dorothea von Salviati."

Prince Louis Ferdinand, it was stated, therefore acceded to all the rights of primogeniture.

Time healed the breach between Prince Wilhelm and his parents. There was no word of reconciliation with the ex-Kaiser.

Weygand Tells Of Maginot Battle

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 27—Gen. Maxime Weygand, generalissimo of Allied armies, in an extraordinary radio appeal last night pleaded with the people of the Allied countries, "to hold out just one month," according to a Paris broadcast up here by N. B. C.

General Weygand did not speak in person. His petition, read over Paris Mondial, the French Government short-wave station, said:

"In a month France will be on the march to victory. Tonight we feel that this one month might well be cut down to a fortnight. Yet, in any case the military situation is improving faster and better than anyone could have imagined earlier in the week.

"The Allies are going through a period of holding the Germans at any cost and readjusting their troops and their lines in the situation forced by the great German break-through. Gigantic work has been done in this direction, and the French, all of them, with their commander-in-chief, are convinced that they and their Allies will not have to wait long for their chance to come. There is something in the air in Paris now—it is something big."

General Weygand did not refer to the trend of battle in the Channel "bulge," but described intensified action along the Maginot forts. He was quoted:

"Along the Maginot Line, the German command tried to cut through the Maginot forts, feeling out the actual strength of the line. After several hours of artillery fire, the German sentries swarmed out of the Siegfried Line to attack.

"A Massacre"

"Wave after wave came over. It was not a battle; it was a massacre. Eyewitnesses estimate that the number of German dead and wounded outside the Maginot Line was at least 25,000."

(Editor's Note—There is no mention in recent French communiques of any assault on the main Maginot Line. Five days ago the French command reported enemy artillery preparation at Attigny, Longuyon and north of the Nied river west of Saarbrucken. The only attack by troops mentioned in the communique, however, came at Attigny, approximately seventy miles west of the main Maginot Line. The French communiques never have mentioned any attemps by troops to storm the chief Maginot fortifications along the French-German border.)

The radio report stated that after the German push on the Maginot forts had been repulsed, the Germans sent out a party under a flag of truce with the plea:

"We wish to ask you to cease firing for twenty-four hours so we can clear away our wounded and bury our dead."

BRITAIN'S SHIP LOSS IS 784,140 TONS

Sinkings Put At 44 Per Cent. Of Total For First 38 Weeks Of War

Tonnage Casualties Placed At 3 Times As Great As Those Of Germany

[By the Associated Press]

Great Britain, with losses of at least 784,140 gross tons, has sustained almost 44 per cent. of the 2,000,000-ton total loss in merchant shipping during the first 38 weeks of the war.

A recapitulation of the war's ship-destruction records showed Britain's tonnage casualties were more than three times as great as those of her foe, Germany, which had 249,957 gross tons reported sunk, 70 per cent. by scuttling to avoid capture.

Loss In Men Compared

Britain's loss in men was even greater in comparison: 778 dead and 548 missing against Germany's reported loss of 194 dead and 2 missing. As there have been no casualty reports on many ships sunk, losses were probably heavier for both nations.

Merchant shipping of 19 nations has been struck, the totals showing 518 vessels of 1,786,629 tons destroyed, with 1,591 persons dead and 1,401 missing.

First Ten Listed

The United States is the only important neutral without a loss. Sweden is the biggest loser among the nations now neutral, ranking fifth with the loss of 44 ships of 93,611 gross tons.

The first ten losers in gross tonnage are: Great Britain, 784,140; Germany, 249,957; Netherlands, 137,871; Norway, 130,430; Sweden, 93,611; Greece, 92,960; France, 90,858; Denmark, 65,830; Italy, 35,684, and Belgium, 33,424.

Roads Filled With Refugees Bombed By Nazis, Texan Says

Ambulance Driver Tells Of Air Attacks On Fleeing Civilians And On Cattle In Fields

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 27—Sam Pierce, of Dallas, Texas, ambulance driver with the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps, told in a CBS broadcast from Paris tonight how he had witnessed German airplane attacks on roads filled with refugees.

"A formation of five Messerschmitts came down out of the skies and when they were about 500 feet above us they turned loose," he said. "All those who were too tired or too old to duck were the victims. They then turned after that work and shot the cattle in the fields.

"At the time, there was not a military vehicle on the road anywhere. Within a radius of 500 yards there were about thirty killed and wounded."

Pierce said he pulled his ambulance into a clump of trees and jumped into a ditch behind a big boulder. After the attack, he picked up four badly injured and their relatives, eighteen persons in all.

Pierce told of witnessing a bombing of a line of vehicles, mostly loaded with refugees, four days later.

After picking up some of the wounded, he said, he saw the German machines had "spotted us."

"I gave the car everything I could and we ran into a little town behind a big wall. Out of the ten ambulances that went up, three cars and drivers are missing."

Over 5,000,000 In France

Geneva, May 27 (AP) — Count de Rouge, general secretary of the League of Red Cross Societies, reported today more than 5,000,000 refugees are in flight from northern France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, presenting the world "the greatest refugee problem it has every known."

"Five million refugees, almost all of whom are women, children and aged, are fleeing the war into a country of 40,000,000 whose resources all are mobilized to fight the war," De Rouge said upon returning from a visit to Paris.

Tragedy Marches With Them

"Every conceivable tragedy marches with them."

The French executive of the International Red Cross said there were 3,000,000 refugees from Picardy and other northern battlefields, 70,000 from Luxembourg, 50,000 from the Netherlands already and nearly 500,000 more still on the way.

"Many of those caught in the battle zones may never get through alive," he added.

"Thousands of small children, too tiny to tell of their families, were separated from them in the rush.

100,000 Stray Children

"We believe at least 100,000 children were separated this way among the mass of refugees."

The immediate and crying need of all refugees, he said, was shelter, while the French Government is moving them into safe south central zones.

"For the moment the problem is not food and clothing, but simply finding roofs and shelter for these people. The French food stores are sufficient for the moment; clothing needs may come later since the weather is temperate."

Communiques

French

Paris, May 27 (AP)—"In the north, German attacks were executed against the Belgian army front between the North Sea and the region of Menin, and British troops attacked with success against an enemy superior in numbers in the region of Aire (nine miles southeast of St. Omer) on the Lys river.

"On the Somme (river) local actions were conducted brilliantly by our troops supported efficiently by aviation.

"East of the Aisne (river) the enemy attacked with insistence. Artillery and infantry combats begun last night were prolonged during a great part of the day. They cost the enemy dearly and we maintained our positions."

No Regard For Losses

An earlier communique said:

"In the north the enemy is continuing his attacks, particularly in the vicinity of Menin.

"French and Allied troops are holding his advance.

"Fighting is of extreme violence.

"The Germans are throwing into the battle large and powerfully armed units without regard to losses."

German

Berlin, May 27 (AP)—"In Flanders and Artois our troops continued their attacks and have further hemmed together encircling enemy armies.

"North of Menin an especially deep breach into the enemy front was made, which brought us close to Ypres. As on previous days, strong air-force units participated in the fighting in the west, facilitating the army's advance.

"The severity of the attacks was most effectively centered on the region where the enemy armies are trapped. German troops attacked northeast of Lens and later attacked, with bloody losses for the enemy, counter-attacks by French colonial troops.

"As previously reported in a special announcement, Calais, which was encircled behind and in front, fell into our hands after hard fighting. At Boulogne First Lieutenant von Jaworski, of an armored regiment, whose tank was a target for several enemy warships, set one destroyer on fire by gun fire.

Raids On Channel Ports

"To frustrate attempts of the English to bring parts of their encircled troops across the Channel to England, the air force again raided those ports on the Belgian-French Channel coast which are still in enemy hands. The port facilities of Dunkerque are burning. No special events on the Southern front.

"In recent fights south of Sedan, Lieutenant Mueller, of the anti-tank detachment of one infantry regiment, incapacitated five of eleven heavy enemy tanks and damaged the others so seriously that their attack foundered.

"The raids of the air force were also concentrated against airports in the vicinity of Paris, against traffic facilities south of Rheims and against enemy troop movements. On one airport alone twenty enemy planes were destroyed. Enemy losses yesterday amounted to seventy-three planes, of which thirty-two were shot down in air fights, fifteen by anti-aircraft guns and the rest destroyed on the ground.

15 Nazi Planes Missing

"Fifteen of our own planes are missing.

"On the Narvik battlefields mountain chasseurs were again landed yesterday by parachutes. An enemy airplane carrier which on May 24 already was heavily struck by a bomb in Ofot fjord near Narvik was sunk May 25 off Harstad after having been hit anew by three bombs, one of which was of the heaviest caliber, as already announced.

"Furthermore, we succeeded in sinking by bomb hits one merchant ship of 8,000 tons, besides hitting with heavy bombs, with apparent fires and explosion effects, one large warship and two cruisers, as well as one transport of 18,000 tons.

"Several airplanes were destroyed on the ground on an attack on an airport at Barduvos. The enemy during the course of the night of May 26-27 continued aimless raids against non-military targets in western Germany without causing greater damage."

British

London, May 27 (AP)—"Last night bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. attacked airdromes in the hands of the enemy, including those at Flushing, Brussels and Antwerp.

"Operations also were continued against the enemy's line of communications in Belgium and western Germany. Hits were made on railway junctions, sidings and convoys of armored vehicles.

"An anti-aircraft battery was put out of action.

"Earlier in the evening much damage was done by the medium of bombers to a concentration of enemy mechanized vehicles near Boulogne.

Operations In Flanders

"Today the bombing operations have been carried out against various objectives in Flanders.

"So far all our aircraft have returned safely.

"Preliminary reports showed twenty-eight enemy aircraft have been destroyed or seriously damaged by our fighters today. One patrol of Defiants shot down five enemy bombers.

"Five of our fighters are reported missing.

Traffic Disorganized

"Road, rail and river traffic was disorganized over a wide area from the Rhineland to the French frontier in the Sunday night raids.

"Typical of the scope and effectiveness of the night's achievements was the record of one heavy bomber which within less than thirty minutes scored direct hits on a mechanized column on the main road near Brussels, extinguished one searchlight by bombing it, put out another by machine-gun fire, wrecked a rail line and bridge and finally demolished a machine-gun post on the top of a hill by a direct hit with a salvo of three bombs.

"Fires were reported to have broken out following the Flushing attack. At Deurne a fuel dump was believed hit.

Brussels Attacked

"Nearly 150 high-explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped on every airdrome at Brussels and at Charleroi. Venlo was attacked from a height of only 1,500 feet, the attacking airmen reporting that buildings on the airdrome there were wrecked by direct hits and numerous fires started.

30.24-2557

"A direct hit was scored on a railroad track south of Aachen (Aix-la Chapelle) and at one town in Belgium, where a railway junction was wrecked, bombs which fell in a near-by wood caused exceptionally heavy explosions as an ammunition store was hit.

"Moving columns of troops and supply lorries were also attacked behind the enemy's lines."

Belgian Army Gives Up; King Orders Surrender

Paris, May 28 (Tuesday).—Capitulation of the Belgian Army before the German advance on orders of King Leopold III after 18 days of fighting was announced today by Premier Reynaud.

King Leopold ordered the Belgian Army to lay down its arms, Reynaud said, without consulting the French or British Governments "which went to the aid of Belgium."

The French Premier made his announcement in a radio broadcast at 8:30 A. M. (3:30 A. M. New York time) hastily arranged after an emergency meeting of the French Cabinet which lasted until the early hours of this morning.

Reynaud said King Leopold had made the decision to capitulate against the unanimous advice of his ministers.

The United Press reported that Premier Reynaud said Leopold's capitulation had thrown open to the Germans the way to Dunkirk, English Channel port.

Some hours before the Premier's announcement, Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium had announced in Paris after a meeting with his refugee cabinet that his Government had decided to continue in the war on the side of the Allies. The Premier said Belgium would triumph sooner or later and called on all Belgians to remain confident of victory.

Reynaud followed that up today with the announcement that the Belgium Government, in opposition to its King's orders, would continue to function and would "raise a new army."

He said the Belgian capitulation had failed to lower French and British hopes for victory against the German invaders.

Only Monday Gen. Maxime Weygand commander-in-chief of the Allied armies, flew over the German lines into Flanders where he conferred with King Leopold and British and French military and naval commanders. At the time the conference was taken as lending weight to reports the Allies were preparing a counter-offensive.

"Brusque Surrender."

Reynaud prefaced his announcement of the capitulation with the words: "I must announce a grave event to the nation."

"The Belgian Army," he said, "has just brusquely capitulated in the field on the order of its King."

The King, he asserted, had issued the order without consulting "the responsible government."

He explained that the three Allied armies fighting in Belgium were under the command of Gen. Georges Blanchard.

As the battle continued, he said, troops were sent supplies via Dunkirk.

Without Precedent.

The French Premier spoke with extreme sarcasm when he referred to Leopold. He said the action of the King of the Belgians was "without precedent in history."

"The French troops are holding now along the line of the Somme River," Reynaud said.

"One Solid Block."

"The French people and her soldiers make one solid block," he said.

"We shall continue to fight on despite the tremendous difficulties we are now experiencing. The unfortunate circumstances of the present time will not prevent us from going on.

"We shall go forward to victory."

Nazis Seek Quick Victory.

The Belgian surrender came after wave upon wave of German infantry, augmented by a thundering artillery barrage, dive bombers and armored columns had been hurled at the Allied lines defending the English Channel.

In Broadcast to France, He Says Troops Hold on Somme in Grave Hour

By The Associated Press

PARIS, May 28 (Tuesday).—Premier Paul Reynaud today announced "France can no longer count on the Belgian Army."

He said the Belgian forces had capitulated before the German advance. King Leopold, he said, made the decision against the unanimous advice of his ministers.

"Since 4 a. m. the British and French Armies alone are opposing the enemy," he said.

[The United Press said the Columbia Broadcasting System quoted Reynaud as saying: "Without a word, Leopold has given up the fight."]

After making the announcement of Belgium's surrender, he reiterated that France's "faith in victory is still intact."

The French troops are holding now along the line of the Somme River," he said.

His speech lasted less than five minutes.

The Premier said that "All France is thinking of her soldiers at this extremely grave hour."

"The French people and her soldiers make one solid block," he said, declaring that the French Army was holding against German pressure along the Somme River line.

"We shall continue to fight on despite the tremendous difficulties we are now experiencing. The unfortunate circumstances of the present time will not prevent us from going on.

"We shall go forward to victory."

The Government decided to send a representative to Iceland after Germany's invasion of Denmark. King Christian of Denmark also was King of Iceland, a sovereign state.

State Department Official Will Replace Cromwell In Dominion

New Yorker Is Now Chief Of European Division—Accompanied Welles

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 27 — President Roosevelt, recognizing the growing political importance of Canada to the United States, today picked one of the highest State Department officials—Jay Pierrepont Moffat, chief of the European division—to be Minister to the Dominion.

He replaces James H. R. Cromwell, who resigned last week after his nomination on the Democratic ticket for the United States Senate from New Jersey. During his stay in Canada, Crowmell, millionaire husband of Doris Duke, got into difficulties with Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, because of a pronounced pro-Allies speech.

Son-In-Law Of Grew

Mr. Moffat is a son-in-law of Joseph Clark Grew, Ambassador at Tokyo and a relative by marriage of the present first secretary of the legation at Ottawa.

In several respects his early career parallels that of Mr. Roosevelt. Both are natives of New York State and both studied at Groton School and at Harvard University.

His wife, the former Lilla Cabot Grew, whom he married in 1927, is a daughter of the Boston-born career diplomat who has been Ambassador to Japan since 1932. Another Grew daughter, Anita Clark Grew, is the wife of Robert English, first secretary at Ottawa.

Accompanied Welles

Moffat's last important assignment was to accompany Sumner Welles to Europe on the latter's fact-finding mission.

Moffat, tall, slightly stooped, soft-spoken, goes to Ottawa with a diplomatic experience of twenty-three years behind him.

The appointment of a trained career diplomat at this moment of possibly crucial relations with the Dominion had been demanded recently in succession of editorials in leading American newspapers.

Canada Thought Important

The prime importance of Canada to the United States is regarded by informed observers as emphasized by the following points:

1. The combined export and import trade of the United States with Canada is larger than with any other nation.
2. Canada at war is turning into a huge manufacturing plant and training center for the British Isles, particularly in aviation.
3. There has been speculation as to whether the British Government, if Britain were overrun by Germany, would transfer itself to Ottawa.
4. Some have speculated over the possible transfer of the British fleet to Canada if Britain is defeated in Europe.
5. President Roosevelt, on two occasions, has brought Canada clearly within the Monroe Doctrine by promising that the people of the United States would not stand idly by if any foreign empire threatened to dominate Canadian soil.

The new Minister to Canada is 43 years old, was born at Rye, N. Y., and attended Harvard University from 1915 to 1917, when he became private secretary of the American Minister at The Hague and assistant in the legation. He was assigned to Warsaw in 1919 and then served in Tokyo and Constantinople.

He was prominent at Geneva and was secretary of the American delegation to a conference at Geneva, 1929, which elaborated upon an international agreement for humane treatment of prisoners of war.

He was named chief of the Division of Western European Affairs in 1932. He then served as Consul General at Sydney, Australia, before being named chief of the European division in 1937.

"The peaceful democratic government collapsed into dictatorship under Hitler two months after Mr. Roosevelt was elected," he continued. "It was in Mr. Roosevelt's Administration that Europe began to rumble with aggression and armament. The total of sixty nations increased expenditures (for armaments) from $4,000,000,000 in 1932 to $17,000,000,000 in 1938. Dies Uncovers New Fifth Column Group

[By the Associated Press]

Buffalo, N. Y., May 27—An organization whose members, accredited "by a certain foreign Government," are seeking a foothold in the nation's key industries, particularly aviation, is the latest quarry of the House Committee investigating un-American activities, Chairman Martin Dies (Dem., Texas) said today.

Dies described the group at a press conference as "window-dressing for espionage" and said he is seeking first-hand information in Buffalo, important warplane manufacturing center, "that will fit into the whole national picture."

10,000 Members

"The constitution of this organization provides that members must engage in pistol and rifle practice. Some are aliens and some are citizens. The members must be qualified to do confidential work."

Dies estimated there are 10,000 to 15,000 members of the organization, who are "not Communists and are not Bundsmen."

On Foreign Trade

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 27—The impact of war developments on American business was shown today in a Commerce Department report that exports declined $27,000,000 in April, with the heaviest decrease in Scandinavian and Dutch trade.

Flight of capital from threatened European countries was reflected in a Treasury announcement that during February—for the first time in ten month—foreign investors bought more American securities than they sold. They increased their holdings by $3,879,000.

Scandinavian Markets Pinched

Shipments from the Unitd States to the Scandinavian nations fell from more than $19,000,000 in March to less than $4,000,000 in April, while exports to the Low Countries dropped $3,000,000.

The volume of exports (including re-exports) still was high compared with a year ago, however. It totaled $324,000,000 for the month.

The United States still held its "favorable trade balance." April exports exceeded imports in value by $112,000,000.

Less Cotton And Tobacco Sent

Exports of raw cotton—totaling $21,000,000—were only one-third of the January figure, which was unusually high. Cotton exports still were more than twice as great as they had been a year ago.

Foreign buying of American tobacco, wheat and flour, oats, dried fruits and canned vegetables fell off, too—leaving agricultural exports for April $12,000,000 less than they had been in March.

Swiss Investments Grow

Foreigners bought fewer American motor trucks and steel-mill products in April, but the demand for aircraft increased purchases to $22,000,000.

There was an increase in the volume of American purchases of such things as crude rubber, raw wool, undressed furs and ferro-alloying ores.

Swiss investors accounted for one-fifth of the $49,110,000 purchase of American securities by foreigners during February. The Netherlands had net purchases of $1,081,000, while the remainder of Europe took $1,010,000 worth.

Under pressure of war purchases, however, short-term balances here declined $3,183,000 to $2,991,556,000 at the end of February.

Britain Heaviest Seller

Heaviest sellers were Great Britain which disposed of $9,212,000 net, and Canada, which sold $1,565,000 net, although both amounts were less than their January net sales.

The United Kingdom reduced its short-term balances through war purchases by $27,864,000 to $376,587,000. This brought the net reduction for the first six months of the war to $217,910,000.

French ready funds declined $2,111,000, while those of Belgium, Norway and Switzerland increased. Declines were shown for Denmark, Finland and Sweden. Japanese short-term funds fell by $7,152,000 to $50,817,000.

Hoover Asks Armaments Administrator, No Board

MAY 28 1940

Former President Calls For "Single-Headed Responsibility"; Advances 7 Points For Defense

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 27—A "single-headed administrator" to direct the United States' vast defensive armament program was proposed tonight by former President Herbert Hoover.

In a nation-wide radio speech on "national defense," he termed boards and political coalitions "foolish" in emergencies and advanced the following program for "real preparedness":

That a munitions administration can be created in Washington.

It should have a single-headed administrator with assistant heads for labor, agriculture and industry.

Wants Industrialist

This administrator should be an industrialist and not a politician.

He should have authority to appoint a nonpartisan advisory board representing the army, navy, labor, transportation, manufacturing and agriculture.

The whole of the purchasing and manufacturing for the army and navy from private industry should be done by this administrator. The business of the army and navy is

...uat they want. It is for ...ns administration to de-

...rganization should be created to constantly improve these products.

All Appropriations

All appropriations for such work should be made to this organization.

"This is a form of organization that will get speed and economy," Hoover declared. "Urgency, speed and economy are not bureaucratic virtues."

He based his recommendations on three "lessons" which he said had been learned during and since the World War.

Experience had shown, first, that large-volume procurement of munitions must be separated from army and navy establishments, he said, adding that this was a job "for management and labor," a job that "requires that thousands of factories be coordinated to do their part."

The second lesson was that such operations could not be controlled by boards, councils or conferences, he said.

Single-Headed Authority

"The whole genius of the American people has demonstrated over 15 years that when we come to executive action, including the office of the President of the United States, we must have single-headed responsibility," Mr. Hoover said.

"It is just as foolish to set up a board to conduct munitions business as it would be to set up a board to conduct the Presidency of the United States."

"The third lesson taught by experience," he continued, "is that we must get these vast expenditures of money out of politics—get them out of sectional pressures and out of group pressures. That is the only way we can prevent profiteering and "eliminate waste and assure efficiency," he asserted.

Explains 1934 Outlook

Hoover said up to 1934 Mr. Roosevelt considered the outlook for world peace and disarmament so promising that in that year "he himself reduced" this country's rate of arms expenditures by

Finger Printing, Penalties Slated

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 27—The Senate Judiciary Committee today approved legislation to require the finger printing of aliens, estimated to total 4,000,000, and to impose severe penalties for "fifth column" activities.

Senator Tom Connally (Dem., Texas), sponsor of the bill, said it was essential to the new defense program.

The bill would also impose fines up to $10,000 and prison sentences up to ten years for attempts to subvert military forces by the distribution of un-American literature or other means. It also would provide for deportation of all aliens who advocate overthrow of the government by force.

The House has passed similar legislation, but its bill did not require finger printing of all aliens. It provided for finger printing only those entering the United States in the future.

Connally said aliens would probably be given four months in which to report to their local postmasters for registration. Besides being required to register, aliens would be compelled to report any change in residence.

House Okays Transfer Of Immigration Unit

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 27—The House adopted a resolution today to give quick effect to President Roosevelt's transfer of the Immigration Service to the Justice Department as a means of gaining "more effective control over aliens."

The action came on a voice vote. If approved also by the Senate the President could make the transfer effective in ten days.

Mr. Roosevelt proposed the change last Wednesday and told Congress that "in view of the urgency" of the request he hoped quick affirmative action could be taken.

Assails Miss Perkins

In the course of House debate, Representative John Taber (Rep., N. Y.) described Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins as "a notorious incompetent."

He gave this reason why "many of us" would vote for the resolution to take the Immigration Service out of the Labor Department without delay:

"The President has not the patriotism nor the courage to remove the Secretary of Labor, a notorious incompetent and one who for the last seven years has steadily . . . refused to enforce the immigration law and continuously admitted and kept here those who were not entitled to stay."

Hopes Jackson Does Better

He said he hoped that Attorney General Robert H. Jackson "will do a better job" and that he would require James L. Houghteling, Immigration Commissioner, to "about-face" on his position under Secretary Perkins or give way to "an aggressive American."

Representative Noah M. Mason Rep., Ill.) declared that the legislation was "nothing more or less than a bill of divorce to separate Madam Perkins from the Bureau of Immigration."

Mason added that it looksd to him like moving "the mountain, all the employes of this bureau, inst.. d of Mahmoet, the Secretary of Labor."

WASHINGTON, MAY 27-(AP)-SWEEPING LEGISLATION BARRING COMMUNISTS AND "NAZI BUND" MEMBERS FROM JOBS IN INTERSTATE INDUSTRY, AND FORBIDDING EMPLOYERS TO USE "STRIKEBREAKERS" OR RESORT TO OTHER "OPPRESSIVE" LABOR PRACTICES, WAS PASSED BY THE SENATE TODAY ON A VOTE OF 47 TO 20 AND SENT TO THE HOUSE.

INTRODUCED BY SENATOR LA FOLLETTE (PROG-WIS) AS A RESULT OF A LONG INVESTIGATION BY THE SENATE COMMITTEE ON CIVIL LIBERTIES, THE MEASURE WAS ORIGINALLY AIMED SOLELY AT "ABUSES" BY EMPLOYERS, SUCH AS THE USE OF STRIKEBREAKERS, INDUSTRIAL SPIES AND INDUSTRIAL MUNITIONS.

HOWEVER, THE CURRENT WAVE OF APPREHENSION OVER "FIFTH COLUMNS" PROMPTED THE SENATE TO EMBRACE HEARTILY AN AMENDMENT BY SENATOR REYNOLDS (D-NC) PROHIBITING EMPLOYERS IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE FROM HIRING COMMUNISTS OR BUND MEMBERS.

THE PENALTIES FOR INFRACTION OF THIS AMENDMENT WOULD BE A $10,000 FINE AND FIVE YEARS IN PRISON. NO METHOD FOR DETECTING WHETHER A PROSPECTIVE EMPLOYEE WAS A COMMUNIST OR BUNDSTER WAS STIPULATED IN THE LEGISLATION, BUT THE ONUS OF FINDING OUT WOULD BE ON THE EMPLOYER.

ANOTHER REYNOLDS AMENDMENT ACCEPTED BY THE SENATE PROVIDES THAT NOT MORE THAN 10 PER CENT OF THE EMPLOYEES OF A FIRM ENGAGED IN INTERSTATE INDUSTRY SHALL BE ALIENS, EXCEPT WHERE THE SUPPLY OF CITIZENS IS INADEQUATE.

IN ADDITION TO BANNING STRIKEBREAKERS AND LABOR SPIES, THE LAFOLLETTE BILL OUTLAWS, AS OPPRESSIVE LABOR PRACTICES, THE USE OF ARMED GUARDS OUTSIDE THE EMPLOYER'S PREMISES EXCEPT TO PREVENT THEFT OF ARTICLES IN TRANSIT AND THE EMPLOYMENT IN A LABOR DISPUTE OF PRIVATE GUARDS KNOWN TO HAVE BEEN CONVICTED OF HOMICIDE OR ASSAULT WITH A DANGEROUS WEAPON.

WASHINGTON, MAY 27-(AP)-HERE IS THE TEXT OF THE PROVISION APPROVED BY THE SENATE TODAY TO PROHIBIT EMPLOYMENT IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE OF COMMUNISTS AND NAZI BUND ORGANIZATION MEMBERS:

"SEC.301 (A). AFTER THE DATE OF ENACTMENT OF THIS ACT, IT SHALL BE UNLAWFUL FOR ANY PERSON ENGAGED IN INTERSTATE OR FOREIGN COMMERCE, OR IN THE PRODUCTION OF GOODS FOR SUCH COMMERCE, TO HAVE IN HIS EMPLOY ANY COMMUNIST OR MEMBER OF ANY NAZI BUND ORGANIZATION. FOR THE PURPOSE OF THIS SECTION, THE TERM 'PERSON' INCLUDES ANY INDIVIDUAL, PARTNERSHIP, ASSOCIATION, CORPORATION OR OTHER BUSINESS ENTERPRISE.

THE NEWSPAPER SAYS THE INFORMATION WAS REVEALED BY A GERMAN WHO LEFT HIS COUNTRY SHORTLY BEFORE THE WAR BEGAN LAST FALL AND IS NOW LIVING HERE. THE PLANES ARE SAID TO HAVE A WING SPREAD OF 200 FEET AND MOUNT FOUR MOTORS OF 1,200 HORSEPOWER EACH.

THE PLANES, THE INFORMANT SAID, ARE CONSTRUCTED AS A HUGE SHELL, WITH A TRAPDOOR AT THE BOTTOM. EXPLAINING HOW THEY OPERATED, HE SAID THAT A TANK OR A LIGHT FIELD ARTILLERY PIECE WAS ROLLED UNDER THE FUSELAGE, THEN RAISED THROUGH THE TRAPDOOR BY MEANS OF A PORTABLE HYDRAULIC LIFT.

CHICAGO, MAY 28-(AP)-THE TRIBUNE SAYS AGENTS OF THE BRITISH AIR MINISTRY ARE "SCOURING THE UNITED STATES" FOR A FLEET OF LIGHT COMMERCIAL AIRPLANES FOR ARTILLERY FIRE OBSERVATION AND THAT A DOZEN ALREADY HAVE BEEN PURCHASED IN THIS AREA.

THESE PLANES, THE PAPER SAYS, ARE "TO BE PRESSED INTO IMMEDIATE SERVICE DIRECTING ARTILLERY FIRE ON THE WESTERN BATTLE FRONT."

IT SAYS THOSE BOUGHT HERE ARE TO BE FLOWN SOON TO HALIFAX, NOVA SCOTIA, FOR SHIPMENT TO FRANCE.

"THE PLANES WHICH ARE SOUGHT ARE 1939 MODELS OF THE STINSON 105," THE PAPER REPORTS.

IT QUOTES AN UNIDENTIFIED SPOKESMAN FOR THE STINSON COMPANY AS SAYING:

"THE GERMANS ARE USING A LITTLE PLANE WITH ABOUT THE STINSON'S PERFORMANCE FOR THEIR FIELD BATTERIES. IT IS THE FIESELER STORCH. IT LANDS AT 31 MILES AN HOUR AND IS KEPT WITH THE BATTERIES IT SERVES. THE ARTILLERY USES IT IN THE MANNER OBSERVATION BALLOONS WERE USED IN THE WORLD WAR.

"WE UNDERSTAND THE BRITISH WANT TO USE THE 105'S IN THE SAME WAY. WE ARE TOLD THE 105S NEVER WILL HAVE TO CROSS THE LINES BUT WILL SIMPLY CLIMB UP TO ABOUT 2,000 FEET NEAR THE GUNS SO THE OBSERVER CAN CALL THE ARTILLERY SHOTS."

THE STINSON 105 HAS A 75 HORSE POWER MOTOR AND A TOP SPEED OF 105 MILES AN HOUR.

THE WAR TODAY
BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE ALLIES HAVE HELD WELL IN GENERAL OVER A WEEK-END OF BLOODY FIGHTING WHICH HAS SEEN THE USE OF COLD STEEL ONCE MORE IN HAND-TO-HAND COMBAT AS A VARIATION FOR THE WARFARE BETWEEN MECHANICAL MONSTERS.

ON THE WHOLE THE DEFENDERS HAVE EXEMPLIFIED THE BRITISH TOMMY'S FAVORITE SAYING THAT "IT'S DOGGED AS DOES IT."

THIS MORNING, HOWEVER, THEY WERE FACED WITH A NEW THREAT IN A FIERCE GERMAN ASSAULT IN THE MENIN SECTOR OF BELGIUM, NOT FAR FROM IMMORTAL YPRES. THE NAZI DRIVE, WHICH IS AN EFFORT TO COMPLETE ENCIRCLEMENT OF THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FLANDERS, COMPELLED THE DEFENDERS TO FALL BACK TO PREPARED POSITIONS.

WITH THIS ATTACK IN PROCESS OF DEVELOPMENT, THE BEST WE CAN SAY IN WAY OF SUMMARY IS THAT WHILE THE GERMANS STILL HAVE THE UPPER HAND, THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS HAS NOT BEEN WON OR LOST AS YET.

THIS WAITING TO SEE WHAT IS GOING TO HAPPEN IS LIKE BEING OUTSIDE THE DOOR OF THE OPERATING THEATRE OF A HOSPITAL. THOSE STANDING BY MUST BEAR THE SUSPENSE AND ABOVE ALL THINGS NOT JUMP TO CONCLUSIONS, FOR NOT EVEN THE SURGEONS CAN GUESS THE OUTCOME OF THIS VERY TERRIBLE OPERATION UNTIL THEIR WORK HAS PROCEEDED FURTHER.

THE UNCERTAINTY IS DEEPENED BY THE OPERATIONS OF THE FIFTH COLUMNS WHICH ARE BEING FERRETED OUT DAILY IN ALL THE ALLIED COUNTRIES. THIS HIDDEN MENACE OF NAZI AGENTS HAS CROPPED UP NOW IN IRELAND TO ADD TO THE THREAT OF A GERMAN INVASION OF ENGLAND, AND THE EIRE GOVERNMENT IS MOVING SWIFTLY TO CRUSH IT. THESE ARE DAYS WHEN NONE CAN TELL WHETHER THE SECURITY OF AN ARMY OR OF A NATION MAY BE SHATTERED BY THESE UNDERGROUND BURROWERS.

MAY 28 1940

THE TASK THRUST UPON ALLIED GENERALISSIMO WEYGAND IS PERHAPS AS HARD AS ANY CHIEF EVER HAD TO PERFORM. IT IS DOUBLY DIFFICULT BECAUSE HE HAS TAKEN OVER IN THE MIDST OF AN OFFENSIVE -- THE GREATEST THE WORLD HAS KNOWN.

THE TRANSITION FROM DEFENSE TO OFFENSE IS ONE OF THE MOST TRICKISH OF MILITARY OPERATIONS AT THE BEST. WEYGAND NOT ONLY HAS TO ACHIEVE THIS TRANSFORMATION, REALIGNING FORCES WHICH HAVE BEEN UNMERCIFULLY NERVE-SHOCKED BY NEW WEAPONS OF FRIGHTFULNESS, BUT HE ACTUALLY WOULD APPEAR TO HAVE UNDERTAKEN TO RECAST HIS ARMY COMMANDERS IN ANOTHER MOULD.

(MORE)--MK929AED

FIRST ADD THE WAR TODAY BY MACKENZIE XXX ANOTHER MOULD.

THE FIGHTING MACHINE WEYGAND TOOK OVER WAS SEEMINGLY TOO HEAVILY OFFICERED WITH MEN OF THE DEFENSIVE SCHOOL FOR HIS LIKING AND HE HAS SET OUT TO REMEDY THAT FOR PURPOSES OF ATTACK. THAT IS TAKEN BY SOME OBSERVERS TO ACCOUNT IN PAR. FOR THE GREAT PURGE IN WHICH HE HAS THROWN GENERALS OUT WHOLESALE.

IN THIS CONNECTION IT IS SIGNIFICANT THAT BRITAIN'S NEW CHIEF OF IMPERIAL STAFF, LIEUT.GENERAL SIR JOHN GREER DILL, BELONGS TO THE WEYGAND SCHOOL.

WHEN WEYGAND IS FULLY SET HE PRESUMABLY WILL UNLEASH A MAJOR OFFENSIVE.

WE LIKELY SHALL KNOW SHORTLY, PERHAPS THIS WEEK, WHETHER THE ALLIES HAVE THE STUFF TO WIN THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS AND SO STEM THE GERMAN OFFENSIVE.

MAY 28 1940

THAT BATTLE REMAINS THE FOCAL OPERATION OF THE GENERAL OFFENSIVE. IT INVOLVES TWO MAJOR OPERATIONS. IN ONE THE ALLIES ARE ATTACKING FIERCELY IN AN EFFORT TO CLOSE THE GAP IN THEIR LINE BETWEEN BAPAUME AND PERONNE.

IT IS THROUGH THIS GAP THAT THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN RUSHING MECHANIZED FORCES FOR ATTACKS ON CHANNEL PORTS, AND IT IS BECAUSE OF THE GAP THAT MAYBE A MILLION ALLIED TROOPS IN THE NORTH HAVE BEEN CUT OFF FROM THE MAIN FRENCH FORCE AND ARE IN DANGER OF BEING SURROUNDED.

IF THE ALLIES CAN CLOSE THAT GAP THEY MAY BE ABLE NOT ONLY TO SAVE THE NORTHERN ARMIES AND THE CHANNEL PORTS, BUT ISOLATE THE NAZI MECHANIZED FORCES WHICH NOW ARE TRYING TO GAIN CONTROL OF THE CHANNEL COAST PREPARATORY TO AN ANNOUNCED ATTACK ON ENGLAND.

THE OTHER MAJOR OPERATION IS THE ONE INVOLVED IN THE GERMAN ASSAULT IN THE MENIN SECTOR, AGAINST THE LEFT FLANK OF THE GREAT NORTHERN ALLIED FORCE WHICH HAS BEEN CUT OFF FROM ITS COMRADES TO THE SOUTH. THESE NORTHERN ALLIES HAVE BEEN MAKING A MAGNIFICENT FIGHT TO DEFEND THE CHANNEL PORTS AND TO SAVE THEMSELVES FROM THE ANNIHILATION WHICH THE NAZIS CLAIM IS NEAR.

THE GERMANS INDEED HAVE THESE TROOPS IN A SACK, BUT IF YOU WILL GLANCE AT TODAY'S WAR-MAP YOU WILL SEE THAT THIS SACK IS OPEN AT THE TOP, WHICH RESTS ALONG THE NORTH-SEA COAST WHERE IT MERGES INTO THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

THE GERMAN ASSAULT AT MENIN IS FOR THE PURPOSE OF CLOSING THE MOUTH OF THE SACK.

MAY 28 1940

131

THUS FAR THIS EXCELLENT FIGHTING MIXTURE OF BRITISH, BELGIANS AND FRENCH NOT ONLY HAVE BEEN DEFENDING THEIR LINES TOWARDS THE TOP OF THE SACK, BUT HAVE BEEN BLASTING AWAY AT THE NAZIS CLEAR DOWN IN THE BOTTOM OF THE BAG IN AN EFFORT TO BREAK THROUGH TO THE FRENCH WHO ARE HAMMERING WITH EQUAL FIERCENESS ON THEIR SIDE OF THE GAP.

THE TROOPS IN THE SACK STILL HAVE BACK OF THEM--UNTIL THE MOUTH OF THE BAG IS CLOSED--THE FAMOUS AND STRONG DEFENSIVE POSITIONS WHICH THE ALLIES HELD ALONG THE YSER CANAL AND RIVER IN THE LAST WAR.

30.24-2565

BRUSSELS CABINET DEPOSES LEOPOLD; GERMANS CLAIM BIG BREAK-THROUGH

Berlin Reports Ring Tightened Around Trapped Allies—B. E. F. May Not Embark for Home Under Fire, but Fight Way South to Join French.

MAY 29 1940

By the Associated Press.

King Leopold of the Belgians ordered his army of approximately 300,000 men to surrender to the Germans today and was promptly deposed by his own Government in Paris. Prime Minister Churchill of Great Britain immediately told the House of Commons that Allied generals had been ordered to continue their campaigns.

Premier Hubert Pierlot announced, contrary to the Monarch's order to lay down arms, that Belgian forces which could be reorganized would continue their fight on the Allies' side. However, Paris announced tonight that the Belgian Army, practically in its entirety, had ceased to fight and that only minor units or new levies raised from among the throng of Belgian refugees in France would be at the disposal of the Belgian Government.

In England, although there was a hint that the B. E. F. in Flanders might sail home, military observers believed that it would fight its way south to the French front. Some experts believe such a course, although desperate, would result in fewer casualties.

Tonight reports from Berne, Switzerland, stated that a huge Allied force, estimated at 450,000 to 600,000 men, was massing on the Aisne River for a now-or-never offensive.

Earlier the German High Command had announced a new series of smashing Nazi successes. Hitler's mechanized columns broke through strong French border fortifications on a broad front, the High Command said, and captured numerous towns and villages in the giant squeeze movement on the trapped Allied armies in Flanders.

MAY 29 1940

Belgian Army Lays Down Arms

PARIS May 28 (A. P.).—A War Ministry spokesman said tonight that the Belgian Army, "almost in its entirety," had given itself up as prisoners to the Germans and that the situation, as a result of King Leopold's capitulation, "is very difficult" for the Allies. He placed the number surrendering at 300,000.

German divisions are pushing hard in an east to west direction on the northern front above the Lys River, the spokesman said. This is in the direction of the channel ports, Ostend and Zeebrugge.

The unconditional surrender of the Belgians broke the back of the Allied armies of the north and brought the battle of Flanders to its culminating point.

In an attempt to parry the blow, British and French air forces today were participating in "tremendous operations" of bombing German air fields and communications, the War Ministry spokesman asserted, to co-operate with the now-exposed Allied northern army.

The blow was as heavy as the collapse of the army of Gen. Andre Coraps in the Battle of the Meuse on May 15, which permitted the Germans to break through France to the English Channel and split the northern and central Allied forces.

The French and British remnants of Gen. Blanchard's northern army carried on the Flanders fight, but a military spokesman acknowledged that their resistance was "extremely difficult." The outcome of the war now turns on the central front along the Somme and Aisne rivers and down the main Maginot Line defenses.

Belgian Cabinet to Continue War.

The Belgians, battered back almost to their western shore by eighteen days of blitzkrieg, capitulated before dawn today.

The Belgian Government, now in France, rejected the King's leadership, "disowned"—in effect, deposed—him and conferred on a "new Belgium" to continue the fight.

But how effective Belgium now can be as an ally is problematical.

King Leopold himself was commander-in-chief of the Belgian Army. His order to lay down arms in unconditional surrender ended the resistance of the great body of his forces.

MAY 29 1940

Allies Lose Aid of Eighteen Divisions.

The decision of Belgian leaders here to reorganize an army to continue fighting referred presumably only to whatever Belgian troops are in France, a few units at most, and to Belgian refugees, some of whom already are undertaking military training in this country.

By the Belgian surrender the Allies have lost an army of at least eighteen divisions. The way to Dunkirk, the French channel port through which supplies have been reaching hemmed-in Allied armies, has been opened to the Nazi legions.

[A German announcement said the Belgian forces "affected by the capitulation may roughly comprise half a million men."]

But the French High Command declared the Allies would continue to fight and their lines were reported holding solidly along the Somme and Aisne River lines to the Maginot bulwark in the east. Heavy German attacks along the Meuse River were said to have collapsed under hot fire from French positions.

Belgian Cabinet Repudiates King.

Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium broadcast a declaration today that Belgium's Government had no part in the capitulation of King Leopold III and "the act of one man does not commit the entire nation."

Addressing the Belgian nation, M. Pierlot said:

"The King, exceeding the Constitution, has entered into separate negotiations with the enemy and has treated with them. Belgium is dumbfounded. But the guilt of one man cannot be imputed to the entire nation.

"Our army has not deserved the fate which is before it. The act which we deplore, is without legal validity and does not bind the country. According to the Belgian Constitution . . . All powers come from the people . . .

"The King has broken the Constitution and placed himself under the power of the invader. Consequently he is no longer able to govern . . .

"Officials, State leaders and officers are, therefore, relieved from the allegiance imposed on them by their oath of security. Among the brave young Belgians who have responded to the appeal of the Government in France and Great Britain, a new army will be organized."

Belgian Troops to Continue War.

M. Pierlot said that the Belgian Government had decided to continue the battle against the Germans and had ordered reorganization of the Belgian Army in France, as Premier Reynaud of France previously had announced. All Belgian forces will be placed at the disposal of the French Command, the Belgian Premier said.

"Belgium will put into action her entire army in France, composed of units already reorganized," the Belgian Government said, "and will launch into the battle all the forces of the nation to triumph against the invader."

The exact numbers and types of reorganized Belgian units remained military secrets. Previous information indicated that the bulk of the Belgian forces had been fighting on the northern wing of the Allied front, well removed from France.

Paris Admits Grave Consequences.

French military sources called the capitulation "full of extremely grave consequences," and said that it came just as the Allies were beginning to chalk up local successes.

[The British Broadcasting Corporation, in a broadcast heard by the National Broadcasting Company in New York, said that when the German invasion began the Belgian Army for home defense numbered 700,000 men. The Government ordered all other males not old enough for service or otherwise exempted to make their way to a foreign country to avoid capture. Most of these men now are in France and in military training, the BBC said. They number many thousands, although definite figures are unavailable. "This force," said the broadcaster, "will be of valuable help to the Allies in holding the line which runs roughly east and west across northern France."]

King Charged With Personal Treason.

Authorized French military sources called the Belgian King's order "personal treason, of which the King alone must support the total responsibility."

Belgian newspaper men in France echoed this charge.

"The King is dead!" they declared, "long live Belgium!"

At the time Leopold's order was issued, one spokesman said, the Belgians were holding all along the line from Menin, on the Franco-Belgian frontier, to Ghent.

He declared the French forces on the Belgians' right flank had counter-attacked successfully on the Lys River near Menin, with tanks leading the assault.

The spokesman said that the situation along the Somme and Aisne had apparently been stabilized, and declared that two heavy German attacks in the Meuse River region had been beaten off.

German losses were described as severe.

On the coast Calais was reported still holding out against German advance elements driving northward from Boulogne.

Radio Speech Hastily Arranged.

The radio speech in which M. Reynaud made his announcement at 8:30 A. M. (3:30 A. M., New York time) was hastily arranged after an emergency meeting of the French Cabinet which lasted until the early hours of the morning.

WEYGAND LAUNCHES DRIVE FROM SOMME TO RESCUE FORCE TRAPPED IN NORTH

New Offensive To Offset Belgian Blow Is Reported Going Well—30 Other Allied Divisions Poise For Attack Along Aisne

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 28—German troops have occupied the French port of Dunkerque, a Rome broadcast picked up by NBC in New York said tonight.

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 28—A great, desperate offensive from the south to relieve the northern Allied armies—left with the back of their resistance broken by the surrender of the Belgian army "almost in its entirety"—was declared tonight by the French to be going well for their army.

This fighting was in the region of the Somme. To the east thirty other Allied divisions of some 450,000 to 640,000 men were poised for a synchronized attack along the Aisne. Upon the outcome of these supreme efforts will depend the result of the desperately contested battle of Flanders.

Bombing Raids Intensified

In cooperation with the Somme offensive, British and French air forces put everything they had into a far-flung bombing operation over German air fields and communications.

To the north, where about 300,000 Belgians were gravely acknowledged by the French to have become voluntarily Nazi prisoners almost to a man, it was admitted the situation was "very difficult," but the night French communique declared the hard-pressed Allies were "still fighting with the same determination."

Nazis Swing North Wing

In this area the Germans, finding the resistance suddenly far lessened, apparently were swinging their northern wing like a great gate to the coast line of the English Channel, thus supporting the considerable number of Nazi troops already on the sea.

The French communique conceded that in the north "the decision taken by the King of the Belgians has enabled the enemy to increase pressure."

The action on the Somme—on the south side of the German corridor to the sea—was officially termed "an important movement," and its details were guarded.

Planes Thrown Into Breach

Virtually the entire Allied air force, meanwhile, was thrown into the northern breach in an attempt to check the German rush through the gap left by the Belgians. German troop convoys were the especial targets of mass air attacks.

Allied Generalissimo Maxine Weygand was reported to have thrown the major part of his force into position for the supreme thrust into the lower rim of the German circle even before the Belgians laid down their arms before dawn today at the order of King Leopold III.

Heavy Blow Admitted

The loss of the mass of the Belgian Army, which bowed to Hitler after eighteen days of Blitzkrieg had backed them almost up to their western shore, was a blow equalled only by the collapse of Gen. Andre Corap's army in the battle of the Meuse May 15, which permitted the Nazi motorized units to drive across northern France to the English Channel.

The outcome of the war now turns on the Central front, below the broadened Nazi corridor, along the Somme and Aisne rivers and down the main Maginot fortifications to the east.

Neutral observers believed that if General Weygand found he had time he would strike within the next thirty-six hours. The blow was expected to come midway between Rethel and Montmedy on the Aisne. These sources said he must strike now or lose not only his trapped divisions but risk the shock of a German thrust in the Rethel area, which might cut under the Maginot Line to Reims and Paris.

The news of the Belgian surrender was broken to the French by Premier Reynaud in a broadcast after a solemn night of sessions of both the French and Belgian Cabinets.

The French War Minister called Leopold's act one of "personal treason" at the moment the Allied northern armies were meeting success in counter-attacking the Germans.

French Morale Unshaken

French morale apparently remained unshaken in the face of the setback.

"We've been betrayed from within and betrayed from without, but we'll win just the same," appeared to be the generally voiced reaction.

A War Ministry spokesman said the Belgian army, "almost in its entirety" had given itself up as prisoners to the Germans. He placed the number at 300,000 men (German sources put the figure at close to 500,000.)

The Belgian army had eighteen divisions at the beginning of the campaign and it was estimated fifteen of them surrendered.

No Sign Of Weakening

But there was no sign of any weakening in the Allied determination to carry the war on the new front.

The Allied armies still fighting in the north consisted (here three words were censored) of the British Expeditionary force and several French divisions which rushed into Belgium May 10 at the start of the German invasion.

They started retreating May 15 with the Belgians covering their northern flank in a vain effort to form a junction with the central French army on the Somme.

The Germans turned their offensive against the northern armies in a smashing campaign to occupy the important French industrial region around Lille, take command of the English Channel and free their full forces for a final drive.

Hold Much Of Flanders

At the moment of the Belgian surrender the Allies still held much of Flanders and the coast on a line south from Belgium through Menin to Douai and west through St. Omer to Calais. Within that pocket they held the port of Dunkerque, France.

With the Belgian capitulation opening their northern flank, their position was acknowledged to be "critical."

Dunkerque and the Belgian ports above it, among them Ostend and Zeebrugge, were left shorn of effective defense.

Despite its disastrous turn, the northern campaign served one important end for the Allies. It gave them time to take their stand on the new 450-mile front on the Somme and Aisne rivers and the Maginot Line.

While the northern armies were engaged in their death struggle, the central French forces mopped up on the Somme, freeing the south bank of the river from its mouth to St. Quentin, and installed a solid front farther east on the Aisne.

The Germans attacked twice during the night on the flank of the Aisne front where the Meuse Valley runs south into France. They were reported repulsed.

Germans Draw Noose Tighter Around Allies

Leopold's Capitulation Leaves 700,000 French And British Trapped—Berlin Claims Success In South Also

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 28—Adolf Hitler's German forces swallowed tonight the sixth nation to fall to Nazi arms since the war began and struck massive new blows through the westward rim of France toward Britain.

King Leopold of the Belgians gave up, ordering half a million men to cease fighting, and about 700,000 Allied troops—already encircled in Belgium and northwestern France—were thus left without any protection on what had been their long northern front.

Noose Drawn Tighter

The long noose-like lines which the Germans had thrown about them were drawn tighter; Nazi forces were declared to have crossed the Scheldt canal northwest of Valenciennes, captured the towns of Orchies and Douai, south of Lille, and advancing to the outskirts of the Belgian city of Bruges.

On the Southern front, in the region of the Somme, the French were reported thrown back in "isolated attacks."

The surrender ordered by Leopold opened at least Ostend, on the English Channel, and perhaps Dunkerque very soon.

Win New Sea Front

Thus the Germans were given formidable new sea frontage from which to stab at Britain's North Sea and Channel commerce and naval communications, as well as the greatest freedom to concentrate all their northern divisions on the entrapped British and French for a last cleanup before turning southward again to engage the main French Army.

Leopold's act in ordering his men to lay down their arms may go down in history either as a cowardly betrayal of his military allies or as the most humane step left for him.

Hitler "Stirred"

While Premier Reynaud of France cried out against Belgian capitulation as opening the gates of Paris to invasion, to Germans it appeared a move dictated by circumstances far beyond the power of the King of a little nation to control.

Adolf Hitler was described as "profoundly stirred" by Leopold's course, and it appeared likely that, with a complete German victory, the King would be permitted somehow to continue functioning as such.

In any case, it was evident from the German viewpoint that Belgium was bound to be taken out of the war in the next few days, regardless of whether she allowed her army to quit or to fight on to annihilation.

Map Again Changes

The surrender opened to Germany new opportunity to reorganize another large piece of Europe in conformity with their studies of geopolitics—the latest conquest in a series now including Poland, Denmark, Norway, Luxembourg and Holland.

The Nazis assigned Leopold a Belgian castle—possibly in beautiful mountainous Ardennes Forest—until it is definitely determined what is to be done with him and his country.

It was believed his army would be treated as were the Norwegians. They were freed to return to their homes upon giving assurances that they would not again fight the Reich.

Would Unburden Reich

Such a course would have this double value: It would unburden Germany and put new hands to work where needed.

The Germans branded Reynaud's criticism as "cynical, swinish, dastardly, perfidious in the highest degree." In the same breath they acknowledged that the Belgians had fought furiously to the last under a king who was willing to go to the front with his men.

He smelled powder, the Nazis declared, in contrast to the Belgian politicians who opposed his act of surrender.

Turning on the British, an authorized spokesman asked:

"What did you do at Andalsnes and Namsos?" referring to the British withdrawal from those Norwegian ports under German fire, leaving many Norwegians embittered.

See Future Progress

Looking to future progress the Germans pointed out that Belgium capitulated and the Polish campaign was completed in eighteen days each.

Already, it was declared, the Nazi's peppery mosquito fleet of speedboats was in the English Channel sinking ships ten to one hundred times their size, while shore guns were in place to threaten a direct long-range bombardment of England.

To the Berlin populace the Belgian capitulation was one of the most cheering events of the war.

Radios played all of Germany's favorite war and marching songs whenever a brief bulletin was broadcast.

Strategists declared that the deep penetration into France had endangered the communications of the Maginot Line itself, while the German army could take in a single stride a little thing like the English Channel.

Speedboat Attacks

German submarines and speedboat attacks were reported under way against every British effort to extend relief from the sea.

In the streets of Berlin today this chorus of the "Engelland" song echoed:

"For we sail against England!"

Nazis asserted that it was certain now that the Channel was closed to British war vessels since shore batteries could span the narrows with shells heavy enough to conquer a battle fleet.

The effort to destroy the Allied forces left bereft of a northern wing by the Belgian defection was a savage one, aided by waves of German planes which dropped vast loads of bombs.

Meanwhile, the German radio asserted that the French fortress of Boulogne, which fell into Nazi hands last Saturday, was delivered up by its French commander under a "petition for capitulation."

Nazi Colonel's Story

The story was attributed to a colonel who commanded the attacking German forces in an interview with a German "radio reporter."

The German colonel was quoted as adding:

". . . Under the constant pressure the (French) commander felt compelled to offer his surrender. The petition for capitulation by the commander . . . was worded as follows:

"'For humanitarian reasons and to protect human lives I have decided to surrender the garrison without resistance, Therefore, I have ordered my troops to cease firing as from 8.30 A. M. on. At any rate, I beg for sufficient time to communicate this to all.'"

In his own report the German officer said:

"The commander of the fortress, a general, presented a pitiful sight. He was accompanied by a second general who had been the commander of Arras, as well as several high officers. We lined up the garrison of the fortress—2,500 men—outside the town and then transported them away, together with an additional 2,500 French prisoners."

Both Allied and German observers here believed that if Gen. Weygand found that he had time, he would strike within the next thirty-six hours.

The center of the French concentrations was reported to be midway between Rethel and Montmedy, on the Aisne River.

Allied, German and neutral military attaches in Berne generally agreed that Gen. Weygand must strike now or lose not only the encircled armies of the north but risk a German offensive in the Rethel area, ninety-five miles northeast of Paris. A German blow in this area might cut under the Maginot Line to Rheims and Paris.

Germans said that when the Belgian line was broken yesterday fresh Nazi reserves were moved immediately into the Sedan sector to block an expected Allied counter-offensive.

700,000 Allies in Great Peril.

BERLIN, May 28 (A.P.).—Adolf Hitler's German forces swallowed the sixth nation to fall to Nazi arms since the war began, and struck massive new blows through the westward rim of France toward Britain.

Five Other Nations.

Weygand Prepares to Strike

BERNE, Switzerland, May 28 (A. P.).—Thirty Allied divisions were reported moving into position tonight south of the Aisne River near Rethel for a now-or-never offensive to rescue French and British forces trapped in the German pocket near Lille.

Reports reaching here from both sides of the war zone indicated that the Allied generalissimo, Maxime Weygand, had placed a major part of this force in position before the Belgians surrendered. Allied divisions range from 15,000 to 18,000 men—450,000 to 640,000 in the thirty divisions reported massed for attack.

many new opportunity to reorganize another large piece of Europe—the latest conquest in a series including Poland, Denmark, Norway, Luxemburg and Holland.

Strategists said that the deep penetration into France had endangered the communications of the Maginot Line itself, while the German Army could take in a single stride a little thing like the English Channel.

In the crowded area where the Allies are encircled today waves of German dive bombers were unloading cargoes of bombs and machine-gun bullets, determined to paralyze all organized resistance.

With the flank exposed by the Belgian surrender, it seemed to observers here that only a miracle could save the trapped men from destruction.

Say Battle Is at Climax.

"The big battle in Flanders and Artois has reached a climax," a communique said.

By capitulating, Leopold saved his throne so far as the Germans are concerned.

In some form or other, assuming Germany is victorious, Leopold will be permitted to continue functioning as King, informed persons predicted.

A Nazi torpedo boat was credited with sinking a 3,000-ton transport and, the communique said, an aerial bomb scored a heavy hit on an Allied destroyer in the English Channel.

Renewing raids on harbors at the back of the trapped British and French armies, the Germans said, they bombed the water fronts of Zeebrugge, Nieuport, Ostend and Dunkirk in the night.

Observers here believe that the chance for a strong counter-attack from the south to break the trap passed four or five days ago, and saw nothing to halt Germany's lightning advance to the channel.

through the German iron corridor to the French armies on the Aisne.

Cries of "Shame!" echoed through the deep vault of the House of Commons as Prime Minister Churchill told of Leopold's capitulation. Cheers roared to the rafters when he said that the British and French would fight on despite the King's action; that the Belgian Government had in effect deposed him and that the Allies would continue "to defend the world cause to which we have bound ourselves."

Embarkation Regarded as More Dangerous.

Although naval spokesmen admitted that attempted withdrawal of the British Army by sea from Belgium was under consideration, neutral observers were of the opinion that such an operation, under the overpowering punishment of the German air force at channel ports, would produce more casualties than the desperate fight southward.

Mr. Churchill made no direct statement to support hints from other quarters that an effort might be made to withdraw Great Britain's forces from the encircled area in France and Belgium, but he remarked: "I shall of course abstain from comment on what, with powerful assistance of the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force, they are doing or hope to do."

The B. E. F. in Flanders "is not beaten" and will continue the fight with their French Allies, the British military declared.

The battle the B. E. F. has been fighting for a fortnight and still is fighting "will rank as one of the finest feats ever performed by British troops," it was asserted.

B. E. F. Not a Broken Force.

"Let there be no mistake," the sources said, "the British Expeditionary Force is not a beaten force.

"They were never beaten back. They were never broken. They withdrew in good order and never lost their discipline or morale.

"You may be sure that the British forces will continue to fight with their French Allies."

The purpose of continuing the fight now, it was said, is chiefly to give the French "valuable time to strengthen their front on the Somme and Aisne rivers."

The Commentator's Views.

"It is not the moment for recriminations," one British commentator said tonight of the Belgian surrender, "particularly when we have no certain, complete knowledge of the facts."

Praising the B. E. F., the commentator declared:

"Every time they have found themselves pitted against the Germans man to man, they have proved themselves better men, just as their brothers in the navy and air force have done."

The present situation of the B. E. F. is extremely critical after a fortnight of continuous action and incessant bombing, he said, but British troops "have never wavered."

He said that the staff work of the B. E. F. had enabled the Tommies to "move as a coherent whole throughout the operations."

"There were no gaps, no confusion," he added.

"It must be obvious that in the position in which the B. E. F. is now placed, it is almost impossible to reorient their front to meet attacks from every direction at once."

He added that most of the B. E. F. is in northern France, but "they are not all there."

22 German Planes Hit.

The Air Ministry announced today that twenty-two German aircraft had been destroyed by Royal Air Force fighters over northeastern France in a battle to relieve the pressure on the Allied troops.

There was a thunder of cheers when Mr. Churchill, addressing Commons, said:

"Nothing which may happen to us in this battle can in any way relieve us of our duty to defend the world cause to which we have bound ourselves."

The surrender of the Belgian Army, Mr. Churchill went on, had appreciably added to the "grave peril" of the British Expeditionary Force in Flanders, but the troops were nevertheless in good heart although beset on three sides and from the air.

As the applause roared forth again, he declared that the news from the Continent should not "destroy our confidence in our power to make our way . . . through disaster and grief to the ultimate defeat of our enemy."

Meanwhile, he said, the House must "prepare itself for hard and heavy tidings."

The British Expeditionary Force, he went on, was fighting in "grievous peril," but with the "utmost discipline and tenacity."

Then he promised a further statement, perhaps next week, when the grave situation involving the British troops "can be known and measured."

The Prime Minister began his speech by telling the House that Belgium had asked an armistice with Germany.

The British and French governments instructed their generals immediately to dissociate themselves from the procedure and to persevere in operations in which they now are engaged, Mr. Churchill stated.

"I have no intention to suggest to the House that we should attempt at this moment to pass judgment on the action of the King of the Belgians in his capacity as Commander-in-Chief of the Belgian Army," Churchill declared.

Says Belgiums Fought Bravely.

Reminding the House that the situation of British and French troops was "extremely grave," Churchill declared "the feeling of brotherhood" of people who have fallen under or met German aggression will "play its part in better days. . . ."

Belgium's army had, he said, fought "very bravely" and "suffered and inflicted heavy losses."

However, he declared, the Belgian Army ceased to resist at 4 A. M. this morning.

"Nothing which may happen in this battle can in any way relieve us of our duty to defend the world cause to which we have bound ourselves," Mr. Churchill declared.

Hastings Lees-Smith, Laborite spokesman and Sir Percy Harris, Liberal leader, praised what Sir Percy called Mr. Churchill's "dignified" statement.

The Labor leader declared, amid frenzied cheers, that "we have not yet touched the fringe of resolution" of Britain.

Prime Minister Churchill and his War Cabinet met for an hour and forty-five minutes at 10 Downing street.

Admit Situation Serious.

It was admitted that the Belgian capitulation opened way for the Nazi legions to smash through to Dunkirk, France's vital channel port, through which the British Expeditionary Force has been largely supplied.

The Government was silent, however, concerning any moves it was likely to make, particularly since such decisions are up to field commanders.

The War Cabinet meeting was attended by heads of the fighting services and by Gen. Sir John Greer Dill, who became chief of the imperial general staff Sunday.

Tonight, Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, declared that the danger of the British Army was "very great."

"Final victory," he added, "can still be ours. We have not lost the war tonight and assuredly we shall not lose it."

He declared that whatever the blow that may fall, the British people have known dark days before and have come back to final victory.

Recalls Other Dark Days.

He recalled the dark days of the last war, mentioning specifically the Germans' use of poison gas against which the British had no defense at first.

He spoke of the great offensive of March 1918, which "drove all before it," and that then there were notes that the war was lost, "but was not and we came back to victory."

He said that the Belgian Army was no longer able to continue, but had fought bravely.

"This is no time for criticism and incrimination," he said. "We have other things to think of."

He warned against the "most insidious propaganda" through which Germany had attempted to persuade the French to blame the British and the British to blame the French. He asserted that any one who said that "the French have let us down" was either a "paid agent of Germany or an unpaid one."

He said it was up to the British to withdraw their army from the positions they now hold, "but it will not be a defeated army that is withdrawn."

"The army knows," he said, "how we have driven the German ships from the sea. The army hungers to meet the German Army on the field of battle and that opportunity will come to them in due time."

He listed the nations German troops have occupied and said the men of those nations still wanted to fight.

"Our hearts are calm and our resolution is firm," he said.

Spoke Earlier in Day.

In a broadcast to the nation, prior to Mr. Churchill's statement in Commons, Mr. Duff Cooper said "I don't think we should attempt at present to pass judgment" on Belgium's capitulation.

"We know that the Belgian Army has been fighting very bravely against tremendous odds," he said. "The situation in which the B. E. F. consequently finds itself is one of extreme gravity."

The Evening Standard, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, took a less kindly view, and called King Leopold's surrender "a savage, treacherous blow" to the Allied cause.

Naval spokesmen who witnessed the embarkation of British troops at Boulogne under a "hellish fire" before that city fell to the Germans on Sunday, said that the units in Belgium would now face terrific obstacles in attempting to withdraw across the channel.

It was up to the Royal Air Force and the fleet, they said, to hold off the Nazi air force and cover any British withdrawal.

The capitulation was regarded in some quarters in London as the gravest news of the war.

The gravity with which the news was received was emphasized by the way it was spread across the front pages of the evening newspapers.

Belgian Veteran Weeps.

A crowd of refugees and other callers waited outside the Belgian Embassy, but the Embassy door was closed. An official said: "We cannot give out any information.

One Belgian war veteran wearing a medal and ribbons said tearfully: "If the news is true, I cannot understand it. Why have we stopped fighting?"

News of the Belgian capitulation came hard on the heels of blunt and frank word to the British people that the battle situation in Flanders had become one of the "utmost gravity."

Germany, highly placed informants said through the press, is pouring men and machines into the fighting with such speed that the plight of the British Expeditionary Force and other troops which the Nazis are attempting to encircle has become ominously serious.

To meet the challenge the Government stepped up its fighting strength by calling men of the ages of 28 and 29 for military service. This move was expected to add 600,000 men to the armed forces and raise the British Army to the 3,000,000 mark.

The Air Ministry announced today that units of the Fleet Air Arm, operating with the coastal command of the Royal Air Force, made a series of heavy and effective attacks yesterday on enemy positions on the French and Belgian coasts. The Air Ministry said British fighters patroled the battlefield for sixteen hours and brought down twenty-two German Messerschmitt fighters and put nine others out of action.

Sees "Treacherous" Blow

The Evening Standard, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, called King Leopold's surrender "a savage, treacherous blow" to the Allied cause. That newspaper's headline over a caustic editorial was "King Quisling"—a reference to Major Vikdun Quisling, Norwegian who formed a short-lived regime to cooperate with the Germans in Oslo upon the Nazi invasion of Norway.

"It was not thought that the example of capitulation would be set by a King," The Evening Standard said. It added that "we always knew the brunt of exertion woul dfall on the British Empire and the French Republic." "Now the fact is branded inexorably on our brains," it concluded.

A spokesman for the Netherland Government in exile in London said tonight that the capitulation of the King of the Belgians would make no difference in the decision of the Netherland Government to continue fighting with all the forces at its disposal at the side of the Allies. The government here under Queen Wilhelmina still directs the Netherland Navy and the Netherland rich possessions in the East and West Indies.

Mr. Churchill had an audience with King George VI tonight to tell the Sovereign of the plight of the British Army in Flanders. Mr. Churchill was expected to make his next statement on the war situation June 4.

Envoy at Ottawa Hopeful

OTTAWA, May 28 (AP).—The Belgian Minister to Canada, Baron Robert Silvercruys, said today that the capitulation of the Belgian Army did "not necessarily" mean that the flow of overseas of Belgian Army reservists resident in Canada would stop. It was assumed that he meant that Belgian reservists might seek to enter the Allied armies.

"I suppose the Belgian Army was cut off and in no position to continue the fight," said Baron Silvercruys, "but I do not know what hap-

Rule of Belgian Congo Now Believed Pierlot's

Paris Cites Premier's Voiding of Leopold's Powers

PARIS, May 28 (AP).—The proclamation of Belgian Premier Hubert Pierlot, which declared King Leopold III stripped of his powers, was considered here tonight to have established the rule of the Pierlot government over Belgium's African empire.

The Belgian Congo, an area of about 902,000 square miles with a native population of more than 10,000,000 and a white population of about 24,000, is the nation's chief overseas possession.

Belgium holds a League of Nations mandate over Ruanda and Urandi, districts formerly in German East Africa, which have a combined area of 20,535 square miles and a total population of 3,369,304, including 1,076 Europeans.

The Congo colony was established by Leopold's grandfather, Leopold II.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Wednesday, May 29—German bombers were reported today to be subjecting the Allied armies of the north to a terrific battering and military commentators said the pocketed troops must "surrender or die" within the next few days.

Had Two Hours' Notice

A demolition party of seamen, Royal Marines and a few Royal Engineers, taking explosives and other gear, pushed across the channel in a destroyer at two hours' notice, reaching the main jetty of Boulogne in the forenoon.

On the way into the harbor, the party saw British and French destroyers "shelling high land to the north over which enemy tanks and mechanized troops were advancing toward the town."

Inside the harbor, "there was comparative peace, but not for long," the officer reported.

The party landed from the destroyer, occupied the railway station, fitted demolition charges and earmarked all bridges, cranes and lock gates for destruction, which was undertaken, it was said, at the request of the French authorities.

Troops in the station were bombarded by high explosive shells from field guns. Many of them were young, but the naval officer said "they never turned a hair."

"The Germans were gradually closing in on the town with light mechanized vehicles, followed by tanks and motorized field guns," the officer said, adding that German planes also attacked intermittently throughout the day.

Once, he said, a greatly superior number of planes were driven off by R. A. F. fighters.

Because the Germans were "all around the town," it was "impossible to send field guns or other assistance," the officer reported, and the British "couldn't hold out indefinitely against enemy-armored vehicles."

The officers found all roads barricaded with lorries and protected by machine guns.

Germans Were Coming.

"Small parties of Germans were already coming down the streets on the outskirts of the town," he said, "and a slight British withdrawal was ordered to avoid having our flank being turned and to accelerate the evacuation when the time came."

The Germans were holding the high ground commanding the town, massing more guns and troops, he went on, and the British sustained casualties.

Small naval parties set explosives under bridges giving access to the inner harbor. The bridges were already under machine gun fire at a few hundred yards range, the officer said, but the British could not destroy them until the last troops had been withdrawn.

The naval officer and a small party of men under sniping fire at fifty yards range destroyed a crane and flooded the dock power station and pumping station.

One small drifter found at another dock was manned by stokers, who raised steam with broken wood and other debris so that the craft could aid in the evacuation of troops.

When the "complete demolition" order came, the floating dock was sunk and the machinery in the power stations was blown up and "everything that might be of use to the enemy" was hurriedly sabotaged under continuous field gun and machine-gun fire, and while fifteen German planes made dive-bombing and machine-gun attacks.

"The Germans were very close and coming nearer all the time," the naval officer said, while British troops were taking shelter at the railway station with more arriving every minute.

Evacuation Begins.

Five destroyers came alongside and began evacuation of the troops under furious fire from enemy guns concealed in a wooded hill, and from pom-poms and machine guns firing from the windows of a hotel.

Then several enemy tanks came down the hill onto the foreshore.

The troops on the jetty were embarking "under a tornado of fire with casualties occurring every second," and destroyers were "plastering the hillsides and the German field guns at point blank range and blasting the hotel until the pom-poms and machine guns were silenced."

"They stood there like rocks without giving a damn for anything," a naval officer said of the soldiers.

The destroyers, crammed with soldiers, all listing and one "slightly on fire," left stern first through the narrow channel. The tide was falling and there was "very little water under the bottoms."

"It was now evening and there were still many troops ashore and more coming over the bridges under heavy fire," the officer said. "The troops never seemed to end and the enemy was still advancing."

Most of the demolition party left in destroyers and two officers and two seamen, at the moment the last soldier crossed, blew up the bridge.

"Darkness came and at 10 P. M. the station still was crammed with Germans very close and advancing," said the officer. The navy was told that the evacuation was incomplete and three more destroyers nosed alongside the jetty and evacuated the soldiers "with the many wounded."

"It was a miracle that all these destroyers were not sunk," the officer commented.

It was said that "about ten" destroyers were used in the entire evacuation.

Escape From Nazi Inferno

British Detachment's Departure From Boulogne Described by Witness.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—An epic story of the removal of British troops from Boulogne by the Royal Navy, with German bombs and guns causing severe casualties, was disclosed today in an eyewitness report by a naval officer.

He said that the forces were withdrawn from the seaport by British destroyers under a constant hail of bombs and fire from field guns, machine guns and pompoms (multi-barrel anti-aircraft guns).

Boulogne fell to the Germans on Sunday.

The eyewitnesses said that the Germans in greatly superior numbers attacked with aircraft, tanks and field guns and that the destroyers removed the soldiers "in circumstances of great difficulty and peril."

It was impossible to describe the events in chronological order, he continued, because "we had no time to look at our watches" and censorship prevented the disclosure of the day of the withdrawal.

BRITAIN SETS SELF FOR DRIVE TO SAVE ARMY

Depends On Air And Sea Forces To Rescue Trapped Thousands

But "Hard And Heavy Tidings" May Be Expected, Warns Churchill

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 28—Britain's air and sea power was poised tonight for a blow which she hopes will save the flower of her expeditionary force from the Nazi grip of death, clamped tighter by Belgian surrender and exposure of the Allies' left wing in Flanders.

Prime Minister Churchill, who warned the House of Commons that "hard and heavy tidings" might be expected from a situation of "grievous peril," kept to himself and his war council the plan for the break.

But in promising a statement "when the result of the intense struggle now going on can be known and measured," Churchill declared the trapped thousands had and would have "the powerful assistance of the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force."

Army "In Great Peril"

Alfred Duff Cooper, British Minister of Information, told the nation tonight its army stood in great peril that it would be necessary to withdraw the B. E. F. from the positions it now occupies, but that it was not a "defeated" army which would be withdrawn.

"It will be an army whose courage is still high . . . in which every officer and man still is burning with desire to meet the enemy in combat," he said in a broadcast. "The army knows how we have driven the German ships from the sea and how the German air force has repeatedly turned tail before us in the air. The army is hungry for the opportunity of meeting German soldiers on the field. . . .

"Final victory can still be ours. . . . We have not lost the war tonight and assuredly we shall not lose it."

Surrender Not The End

Surrender by Leopold (who is commander in chief of the Belgian armies did not mean, Churchill said, an end of Belgian resistance. He said nothing, however, about the military effect of capitulation of perhaps 500,000 Belgians who have been holding the northern end of the line—blocking the German path to the Channel ports of Zeebrugge and Ostend and flanking the British, who are in the middle.

Doggedly, the British steeled themselves at home for attempted invasion or attack from the air.

H. G. Wells, author and historian, urged the war council to give every aid to the force in Flanders and commented:

"If those at home can divert a few bombs—so much the better."

The London Times said "this island does not expect immunity. Its people are braced to take their share."

Home Defense Rushed

On every side preparations for home defense were rushed. Police continued a roundup of fifth-column suspects. The War Cabinet sat in emergency session with the Prime Minister. Men of 28 and 29—600,000 in all—were called to the colors to raise the army to the 3,000,000 mark. England was divided into 800 self-controlled food areas. Patrols to guard against parachute troops were strengthened.

Air-raid alarms along the southeast coast gave point to the fears, but reassurance came in reports that no damage was done and one raiding plane was shot down into the sea.

The Government said 8,000 children previously sent out from London would be moved again—this time from small communities along 150 miles of England's east coast. They will be taken inland from parts of Suffolk, Essex, Kent and Norfolk.

Claiming destruction or damage of twenty-two German planes, an Air Ministry communique said R. A. F. fighters and bombers "have been doing their utmost" to relieve German pressure on the Allies in northern France.

All Planes Return

The announcement said "all of our aircraft returned" from wave after wave of attacks over the fighting line. Meanwhile, bombers blasted again at military objectives in Düsseldorf, Dortmund, Duisberg, Hamburg and Cologne, Germany.

Thirteen British planes were reported missing after other raids at Stavanger and Narvik, Norway. The British told of bombing and machine-gunning a German airdrome at Stavanger and destroying enemy aircraft near Narvik.

At the same time, the air arm of the British fleet struck hard blows at German positions on the French and Belgian coasts. Batteries and transports were bombed and troops scattered by machine-gun fire.

Naval Trawlers Sunk

The Admiralty announced German bombers sank the naval trawlers Melbourne and Cape Passaro, on which four lives were lost.

A British ship of 629 tons, three Allied vessels totaling 29,552 tons and four neutral ships totaling 16,120 tons, were listed as lost to "enemy action" in the week ended May 19. The ships were not identified.

Authoritative sources credited Norwegians with sinking the German tanker Kattegat, 6,031 tons, and the steamer Rosario, 6,079 tons—bringing Germany's total shipping losses to approximately 830,000 tons by May 19.

B. E. F. NOW FACING GRAVEST DANGERS

Collapse of Belgians Exposes British to Attack Whose Idea Is Annihilation

MORALE HELD UNBROKEN

Spokesmen Say Force Has Stood Up to Onslaught and Will Continue Fighting

LONDON, May 28 (AP)—As a result of the Belgian surrender, the peril of the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium has reached a gravity not even exceeded by that of the British in the disaster at Gallipoli in the World War.

The chances of extricating the B. E. F. from the Germans' slowly tightening ring of steel have been seriously lessened, since the Belgians had held the right wing of the front.

One authoritative London source commenting on the B. E. F.'s predicament said, "as long as ammunition lasts we may be sure the B. E. F. will continue the fight."

The Odyssey of the British Expeditionary Force, which was begun with an almost joyous advance into Belgium when the Belgians and Netherlanders called for aid, now is wound up in a narrow ellipse surrounded by Germans and hammered by bombers and strafers.

After continued withdrawals the situation which confronted the British Army today was this:

Held Shelf of Land

In company with some French and Belgian troops they held a shelf of land from Maulde to Audenarde—a line running from ten miles northwest of Valenciennes to fifteen miles south of Ghent—a line which the Germans fiercely attacked.

To the south lay Arras and the edge of the gap through which the Germans were pouring infantry and artillery in support of their mechanized columns, who were slashing with a cruel scalpel of armored knives at the rear of the British forces.

This morning the B. E. F. left flank—with artillery and small anti-tank guns—was on the defensive from Ypres to the Scarpe River.

Tonight Viscount Gort, Commander of the B. E. F., and the remainder of his army lie inside a ring of German steel which already is pressing toward the center with scores of darting attacks by mechanized forces, all preparing the way for a general attack aimed not only at victory but at annihilation.

The second withdrawal was forced by the swiftness of the German drive toward the coast.

Tonight, to all intents and purposes, the B. E. F. was left to fight or die in the war-scarred hills within sight of Britain.

The B. E. F. "is not beaten" and will continue the fight with their French allies, British military sources declared tonight.

The battle the B. E. F. has been fighting for a fortnight and still is fighting "will rank as one of the finest feats ever performed by British troops," it was asserted.

"Let there be no mistake," the sources said, "the British Expeditionary Force is not a beaten force.

"They were never beaten back. They were never broken. They withdrew in good order and never lost their discipline or morale.

"You may be sure that the British forces will continue to fight with their French allies."

The purpose of continuing the fight now, it was said, is chiefly to give the French valuable time to strengthen their front on the Somme and Aisne Rivers."

Recriminations Eschewed

"It is not the moment for recriminations," a commentator said of the Belgian surrender, "particularly when we have no certain, complete knowledge of the facts."

Praising the B. E. F., the commentator declared:

"Every time they have found themselves pitted against the Germans man to man, they have proved themselves better men, just as their brothers in the navy and air force have done."

The present situation of the B. E. F. is extremely critical after a fortnight of continuous action and incessant bombing, he said, but British troops "have never wavered."

now would be to capitulate also if they want to avoid unnecessary bloodshed.

Informed sources said that Leopold would be permitted to continue functioning as King of the Belgians in some form if Germany were finally victorious.

a civil Government with which the German Government, through a general to be appointed later, can co-operate.

The same amnesty accorded to Norway's surrendered army probably will be extended soon to the Belgian soldiers.

How enormous was the impression of the Belgian capitulation in Germany may be seen by the fact that the radio broadcast, for the first time since the conclusion of the Polish campaign, ended with the national anthem, "Deutschland Ueber Alles."

Otherwise only the "Engelland" song—"We're Sailing to England"—has been played consistently.

For the first time, the reserve with which news of important victories has been received gave way render for at least a week.

The King, according to one account credited to the Italian Stefani news agency, said that the Belgian Army already had suffered greater casualties than in the world war and that, in view of its "hopeless position," further shedding of blood was useless.

Gen. Weygand, this account said, was unable to lend further assistance to the Belgian northern army, yet wanted the Belgians to resist further to permit the French to reorganize their Somme-Aisne front to the south and enable England to protect herself against invasion.

The Belgian Premier, Hubertz Pierlot, went to London to tell the British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, of the King's attitude, and Mr. Churchill called the French Premier, Paul Reynaud to London, the story continued.

A German radio report credited to reliable sources in Geneva said that Gen. Weygand came back to Paris on Sunday after a visit to Belgian General Headquarters under the impression that Leopold was about to capitulate.

"Stormy scenes are reported to have occurred between the King of Belgium and Gen. Weygand Sunday," said this account. "The King, in strong words, voiced his disappointment concerning the effectiveness of Allied help to Belgium. He is said to have bitterly emphasized, in reply to Gen. Weygand's request that Belgians should go on fighting, that Belgian troops fought with considerably more courage than the British and French.

Had the Right as King.

"Weygand was unable to get a promise from the King that he would continue the fight because King Leopold realized the hopelessness of the military situation and refused to be responsible for the further devastation of Belgian territory.

"King Leopold pointed out to Weygand that, as sovereign and supreme commander, he had a right to decide when fighting should cease, especially since during the whole time he had been at the front with his troops and ignored his personal safety.

"Monday Reynaud told Belgian Premier Pierlot that the Western Powers, after having secured victory, would be uninterested in Belgium's fate if the Belgian Army should now lay down arms. Pierlot, acting under this pressure, sent a message to the King of the Belgians, but was unable to make him change his decision."

Germans Jubilant

See Allied Collapse in Flanders

BERLIN, May 28 (AP).—Germans hailed the capitulation of King Leopold's Belgian army today as marking collapse of the main line of resistance of the Allied army of 1,000,000 which Nazi legions had trapped in Flanders.

King Leopold himself asked for the armistice, said an announcement from Hitler's headquarters, and had "accepted the German demand for unconditional capitulation."

The announcement estimated that "roughly 500,000 men were involved."

Later a second announcement was issued stating that the Belgian King had reached his decision against the wishes of the majority of his government, which is sitting in Paris. The Belgian government was charged with being chiefly responsible for the "catastrophe," and it was said it still seemed inclined to obey orders of "English-French employers."

Army "Ceases to Exist"

The first announcement from Hitler's headquarters said:

"Under the persuasion of the destructive effects of German arms, the King of the Belgians has arrived at the decision, in order to put an end to further senseless resistance, to request an armistice.

"He accepted the German demand of unconditional capitulation. Thus the Belgian army today laid down arms and ceased to exist."

Informed German quarters described the capitulation as "one of the most reasonable acts" ever committed by King Leopold.

"The Belgians made the best decision possible," they added. Authorized quarters said the best thing for the Allies to do

Nazis See Leopold Still a King

Might Give Him Dutch Throne—Germans Insist Allies Knew of His Plan.

BERLIN, May 28 (A. P.).—King Leopold of the Belgians has saved his throne by capitulating, so far as Germany is concerned. Adolf Hitler was reported today to be "profoundly stirred" both by the soldierly attitude of Leopold in sticking with his troops through the fighting and by his decision to surrender when, in the German view, further resistance was purposeless.

In some form or other, assuming that Germany emerges victorious from the war, Leopold will be permitted to continue to function as King, informed persons predicted.

Speculation was that the Flemish part of Belgium would be joined to Holland and that Leopold would receive this new kingdom to rule.

Holland's House of Orange, in the German view, is out for good, Queen Wilhelmina being called responsible because she fled her country.

It was believed here that the Italian Crown Prince, Humbert, who is Leopold's brother-in-law, may have helped convince the Belgian monarch that his greatest duty to his country was to prevent further bloodshed.

Humbert is married to Leopold's sister, Marie Jose.

But Guns Spoke Loudest.

German arms, however, were said to have been the chief argument for Leopold's momentous decision.

He has been assigned a castle, presumably in the Ardennes forest. He probably will be asked to form to spontaneous jubilation in the capital.

The Germans branded Premier Reynaud's criticism of King Leopold "cynical, swinish, drastardly, perfidious in the highest degree." In the same breath they acknowledged that the Belgians had fought furiously to the last under a King who was willing to go to the front with his men.

He smelled powder, the Nazis said, in contrast to the Belgian politicians who opposed his act of surrender.

Turning on the British, a spokesman asked:

"What did you do at Andalsnes and Namsos?" referring to the British withdrawal from Norwegian ports under German fire, leaving many Norwegians embittered.

Informed German spokesmen described the capitulation as "one of the most reasonable acts" ever committed by King Leopold.

"The Belgians made the best decision possible," they added.

Nazis Say Allies Knew.

German radio accounts of the capitulation of King Leopold of the Belgians said today that he made his decision after stormy meetings with Maxime Weygand, the Allied Generalissimo and his own Generals, and after the French had pleaded with him to postpone sur-

SHOUTS OF TRAITOR RING OUT IN PARIS

Leopold's Stand Contrasted With That of Albert.

PARIS, May 28 (A. P.).—Shouts of "treason!" and "pro-German!" were heard in the streets of Paris today when Frenchmen learned of the capitulation of King Leopold III of the Belgians.

The man in the street automatically contrasted Leopold's action with the four-year dogged stand of his father, "the beloved and fearless" Albert.

The French recalled how their frontier had been opened to millions of Belgian refugees. One man said angrily:

"We stopped our Maginot Line at the Belgian frontier because we had an alliance with Belgium. Then Leopold went 'completely independent' and refused to discuss defence plans with us until the hour of invasion sounded."

But the French morale apparently has not been shaken.

"We've been betrayed from within and betrayed from without, but we'll win just the same," seemed to be the general reaction.

Leopold's Children In French Chateau

PARIS, May 28 (A. P.).—King Leopold's daughter and two sons are reported safe in a chateau "somewhere in France."

The children are Princess Josephine Charlotte, 12 years old; Prince Baudouin, 9, and Prince Albert, 5.

Their mother, the late Queen Astrid, died August 29, 1935, of injuries suffered in an automobile accident in Switzerland.

LEOPOLD PLEDGED FIGHT LIKE 1914'S

Became King 6 Years Ago on Albert's Death.

By Associated Press.

King Leopold III of the Belgians, whose order to the Belgian Army to capitulate to Germany was announced today, took personal command of the forces on May 10 as his father, the late King Albert I, had done in 1914.

He said then: "The Belgium of 1940 will resist the same as that of 1914."

"The power of our country today is infinitely greater than in 1914," he added.

King Leopold is 38 years old.

The forces led by his father delayed the invasion of the Imperial German Army in 1914 by strong resistance. King Albert remained with his troops until the conclusion of the world war, commanding an Allied northern force in the later stages. He died on February 17, 1934, as the result of a fall while mountain climbing near Namur, the scene of fierce fighting in the present war.

King Leopold, who ascended the throne at that time, had married Princess Astrid of Sweden in 1926. She was fatally injured in August, 1935, when a car driven by the King struck a tree.

Their children, Princess Josephine, 12; Prince Baudouin, 9, and Prince Albert, who will be 6 years old next month, have been reported safe in a chateau "somewhere in France."

A King Without A Country Is Believed Fate Of Leopold

Belgian Termed Unlikely To Have Throne If Allies Win, To Be Subject To Berlin If Nazis Are Victors

MAY 29 1940

[By the Associated Press]

A moody monarch whose line has ruled Belgium for more than one hundred years appeared yesterday to have toppled his throne into the dust if the Allies win the war.

He may remain King, but subject to German will, if Adolf Hitler wins.

The decision of Leopold III to surrender the Belgian armies at dawn yesterday was not the first tremendous decision he has had to make involving the fate of his country.

That decision involving the capitulation of about 300,000 men was called wise in Berlin, treachery and cowardice in London and Paris where his Government in effect dethroned him.

Another Four Years Ago

But Allied strategists have insisted that Leopold made another fateful decision on October 14, 1936, when he threw overbroad his father's post-war policy of alliance with France.

From 1831 until the Treaty of Versailles in 1919, Belgium was a neutralized nation, her independence and integrity guaranteed in perpetuity by treaty by the surrounding powers.

When the country was made a battleground of the World War despite these guarantees, King Albert abandoned the policy of neutrality for one of alliance with France.

When Adolf Hitler suddenly remilitarized the Rhineland, without provoking a British-French attack, however, Belgium became alarmed at the resurgence of Germany, denounced her alliance and sought refuge again in the policy of neutrality. Declarations of respect for this policy were made by Germany, France and Great Britain.

Prevented Joint Plans

The British and French have declared Belgium's rigid neutrality prevented joint plans being made for defense of the country.

When Germany invaded Belgium, along with the Netherlands May 10, King Leopold, like his father, King Albert, took over personal command of his armies.

"The Belgium of 1940 will resist the same as that of 1914," he declared. "The power of our country is infinitely greater than in 1914."

Belgian resistance lasted eighteen days.

At the foot of the statue of his father in Paris yesterday was laid a wreath of mourning for the King Albert who led his armies to a victorious end in the World War, though fighting for four years on but a corner of Belgium.

King Albert died February 17, 1934, from a fall while mountain climbing near Namur, scene of severe fighting in both the present war and the World War.

Leopold suffered another severe blow in August, 1935, when his Queen, the Princess Astrid of Sweden, met death from an automobile accident in which Leopold's car hit a tree.

Three Children in France

His three children, Princess Josephine, 12; Prince Baudouin, 9, and Albert, who will be 6 on June 6, have taken refuge in France.

Leopold's line goes back to Leopold

I of the German House of Saxe-Coburg, chosen by a national congress to rule Belgium after a revolution in Brussels in 1830 gained independence from the Netherlands.

His sister, Princess Maria Jose, is the wife of Italy's Crown Prince Umberto.

In Paris, Rome and London yesterday there was speculation as to whether the Italian royal house might not have influenced King Leopold to make his decision.

East of England Fears Invasion; Children Move

Billboards Still Advertise Excursions to France, 'No Passports Required'

A SOUTHEAST PORT, England, May 28 (AP).—The billboards still advertise cheap, one-day excursions to France—"No passports required"—but by day you can hear the grumble of the artillery across the English Channel, and at night the sky is red with the glare of war.

This is a vulnerable spot for invasion. The children are leaving already and most of the men and women are confident the government will send them to safer areas now that Belgium has capitulated.

[The government at London announced a decision to remove from a 150-mile stretch of the English east coast 8,000 children previously sent there from London districts. An area within about ten miles of the coast of Suffolk, Essex, Kent and a part of Norfolk was affected. The children will be taken to safer areas inland and no more will be sent to the coastal sections.]

As it stands now, the German artillery could shell this part of the coast—Dover, Deal and Folkestone—with the same guns they are using to pound the British Expeditionary Force and the French. Daily there are air-raid alarms. Now and then there is the rapid-fire barking of anti-aircraft guns; but the big German bombers, for the most part, are still concentrating on ships.

Warships can be seen far out in the Dover Straits—the twenty-two-mile strip of water separating England's shores from France—and planes pass overhead at all hours. Along the coast, too, and inland there are soldiers, on the alert for parachutists.

Sometimes you come upon the preparations suddenly. A car moves along a road, crests a hill and is stopped by a barricade of scrap iron, barbed wire and sand bags. Machine guns cover the car. Soldiers with fixed bayonets ask questions. All aliens are barred from the area.

A few yards away are new trenches and farther along old automobiles and buses are lined up, ready to be used as barricades.

ENGLISH SEAPORTS BEING EVACUATED

Adults Expect to Follow Children From Coast.

A SOUTHEAST PORT, England, May 28 (A. P.).—Preparations to meet a threatened German invasion were rushed along this vulnerable stretch of the British coast tonight, and civilians awaited a Government order to move farther inland.

Most residents of these small channel ports—Nazi bombers could reach some of them in five minutes from the Germans' positions on the Continent—are convinced that the Government will send them to safer areas now that Belgium has surrendered.

Their children already are leaving.

German long-range artillery could shell Dover, Deal and Folkestone from the French coast.

The people of this important port thought that the Allies and the Germans must now be fighting for Calais hand-to-hand.

They have been following the battle for the French port by the rumble of heavy artillery and naval guns and the glare of big fires on the French coast at night.

However, the rumble stopped yesterday morning and has not started again—and the fires are dying down.

Artillery men in powerful coastal forts and in warships off shore watched for an attempted invasion of England from the sea.

Troops in machine-gun nests and at anti-aircraft guns guarded against attack from the air.

Red-capped military police questioned all strangers and watched for an enemy move from within.

Reconnaissance planes patrolled the coast and the sea.

Second Move for Some

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—The Government announced today a decision to remove from a 150-mile stretch of the English east coast 8,000 children previously sent there from London districts.

An area within about ten miles of the coast of Suffolk, Essex, Kent and a part of Norfolk is affected. The children will be taken to safer areas inland and no more will be sent to the coastal sections.

Cooper Informs Britain Its Army Will Withdraw

Not Beaten, He Asserts, and War Not Lost, Recalling Darker Days in 1914-'18

LONDON, May 28 (AP).—Withdrawal of the British Expeditionary Force from positions now occupied will be necessary because of the "great peril" in which the armies stand, Alfred Duff Cooper, British Minister of Information, said tonight in a broadcast to the British nation.

He added that it would not be a "defeated army" and asserted: "Final victory can still be ours. We have not lost the war tonight and assuredly we shall not lose it."

Text of Address

The complete text of Cooper's address, as transcribed in New York, follows:

"I told you when I was talking to you a week ago of the danger in which our army stood. That danger is very great tonight. At the same time I told you that whatever the fortunes of war might be, that even if the Allies lost this great battle, we should not have lost the war. Final victory would still be ours. Well, we have not lost the war tonight and assuredly we shall not lose it. Let us always face the facts and face them with confidence, without exaggerating them nor seeking to minimize them. However great the enemy's success in this great battle may be, however great the blow we may have to suffer, we can recall greater successes which have gone against us in battles in the past, and greater blows that this country has withstood and rallied from, and come back from defeat in order to turn it into victory.

"We can all remember the dark days of the last war, the retreat from Mons, where day after day our weary forces staggered down the roads of France with the German army pushing at their heels, and the French government were compelled to move from Paris and travel to Bordeaux. We can remember in the following year how, when the Germans for the first time treacherously employed poison gas, our men had no defense whatever against it, and it seemed that the enemy would carry all before it.

"We can remember the submarine campaign in 1917, when the enemy was sinking one out of every four ships that sailed from or to this country. We can remember also the last great offensive in March, 1918, which for many days drove all before it.

"On each of those occasions it seemed to some of the faint-hearted that the war was lost. It never was. No, these events which seemed disastrous at the time proved but the prelude to victory.

"I am not going to explain to you tonight how it has all happened. People are still arguing about how many battles of the past were lost or won and we may leave it to the historians of the future to decide what were the causes that produced this result. It is not ours to apportion the blame but only to acclaim the heroes of the battle who are not less heroic because their efforts were unsuccessful.

"The Belgian army are unable any longer to continue. They have fought very bravely and suffered very heavily. They have yielded only before overwhelming odds. This is no time for criticism or recrimination. The hour is too solemn and we have too many other things to think of.

Beware of Propaganda

"In this conection, beware, I would implore you, beware of one of the most insidious forms of German propaganda, which is to persuade us to put the blame upon the French and to persuade the French to put the blame on us. In peace and in war, it always has been the policy of Germany to divide Great Britain from France. She is now succeeding in driving a wedge between the armies of the north and the armies of the south.

"Do not, I beg you, help her to repeat that success by hammering in another wedge, the wedge of prejudice between our two great peoples. If anybody says to you 'The French have let us down' you ought to reply either 'You are a paid agent of Germany, who say that' or else 'You are an unpaid one, doing German propaganda for nothing. In either case your mouth should be shut and silenced because you are an enemy and a most dangerous enemy to the Allied cause.'

"The three facts that I emphasized when I last talked to you are still true. The enemy have succeeded in forcing their way through the lines of the Allies and they have reached the sea, but the armies of the Allies have not been defeated and whenever we have met the enemy, whether on land, on the sea, or in the air, we have proved our superiority.

"It will be necessary to do our utmost to withdraw our army from the positions that they now occupy. It will not be a defeated army that we shall withdraw. It will be an army whose courage is still high and whose confidence is still unshaken and in which every officer and man is still burning with desire to meet the enemy in combat.

The army knows how we have driven the German ships from the seas and how the German air force have repeatedly, although in superior numbers, turned tail before us in the air. And the army are hungry for the opportunity of meeting German soldiers on the field of battle.

"That opportunity will come in due course. The standard of liberty is still flying high and under it are massed the armies of the British Commonwealth of Nations and of the French Republic.

"And towards that same standard are flocking remnants of the fighting forces of those unhappy countries upon whom has descended the horror of German tyranny. Czechs and Poles, Norwegians and Dutch, yes, and Belgians, too, are still desperately desirous of fighting for the freedom that their countries have lost. And on that fluttering flag of liberty are fixed the anxious eyes of all free men all over the world. They know that it is their emblem as much as it is ours and they tremble to think that it could ever be pulled down.

"They need not tremble. Their cause is safe. As the danger increases so does our courage rise to meet it. We are not vainglorious and we will not boast, but our hearts are calm and our resolutions firm."

Italy Expected to Go In Soon

Duce Thought to Want Share in Spoils—Departing Frenchmen Halted.

ROME, May 28 (A. P.).—The surrender of the Belgian Army was expected in foreign circles here today to hasten Italy's entrance into the war with the idea of helping Germany finish off the Allies and winning a share of the victor's gains.

Official Italian comment on the new disaster for the Allies was not immediately available.

It was disclosed that French citizens attempting to leave Italy had been stopped because they had no exit visas. Allied spokesmen said that the requirement of exit visas was new, and that thus far it had been invoked only against Frenchmen.

The Government announced that special exit visas would be required on the passports of foreigners leaving Italy when their own countries required such visas. The regulation would therefore apply to the French, British and Egyptians.

These residents of Italy would first have to obtain Italian permission before returning to their homelands.

The stopping of the visa-less Frenchmen—suddenly and without notice, Allied informants said—gave rise to rumors that Italy had closed her frontiers with France and Switzerland.

These proved unfounded. Reports from the border today said traffic between Italy and Switzerland remained normal.

Armed Gatherings Called.

Fascist militiamen among university students were ordered to gather with their arms throughout Italy tomorrow for "specially significant military ceremonies" marking the sixteenth anniversary of the establishment of the university militia.

In a message to Premier Mussolini, Marshal Badoglio, president of the National Research Council, pledged the obedience of the 650 scientists who compose the council.

Maps showing the German possibilities of bombing and invading England have been widely published, with the extremist element hoping these will tend to overcome the hesitancy of the more cautious citizens who have hoped that a stiff Allied resistance might keep Italy on the sidelines.

Virginio Gayda, writing today in the Giornale d'Italia, called King Leopold's surrender "an act of high political and humane wisdom."

The editor accused the British of planning to withdraw from Belgium, leaving the Belgian Army to cover the retreat.

A group of Padua industrialists asked Mussolini's permission today to join a volunteer parachutist squad now being formed in their city.

The Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, received assurances from Premier Verlacci of Albania that Albania was ready to aid Italy whenever summoned.

Entry Called 'Touch and Go.'

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—Neutral spokesmen described the possibility of Italy entering the war as "touch and go" as Britain intensified her precautions in the Mediterranean.

Curfews were ordered in Malta and Gibraltar, strategic bases on the empire's life line. Egypt strengthened her defenses by calling for National Guard volunteers.

Anxiety was apparent in London's Italian colony of 17,000. The British press treated news of the Italian situation cautiously.

R. A. Butler, Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons today that Sir Wilfrid Greene had brought back from Italy proposals regarding contraband control which are regarded as "affording a satisfactory basis for an Anglo-Italian agreement."

Sir Wilfrid, who headed an economic mission to Italy, came home yesterday.

British and Italian representatives now are working out details of the plan in Rome, Mr. Butler said.

Drafts on U. S. Discounted.

BUDAPEST, May 28 (A. P.).—Checks on American banks were worth only 70 per cent of their written value today because of the strengthening conviction that Italy will enter the war soon, shutting off normal communication between Central Europe and the United States.

Banks were cashing $100 checks for $70 in the belief they would shortly find it hard to get the checks back to New York for payment.

FASCIST BOYS NOW SERVE AS TRAFFIC POLICE

Women And Girls Seen In Uniform On Anti-Air-Raid Duty

Developments Make Entry Into War Seem Only Matter Of Days

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Wednesday, May 29—Civilians began taking over some posts left by men called to arms today, as the Belgian collapse on the northern front heightened Italy's war fervor and made active Italian intervention appear to be only a question of days.

Young Fascists served as traffic police, and helmeted women and girls of Rome were seen in uniforms astride motorcycles equipped for anti-air raid duties.

At the same time the Italian press indicated that any chance the French and British ever had of obtaining continued Italian non-belligerency by relaxing their blockade probably had been lost.

Spain Returns To Headlines

Spain also returned to Italian headlines with reports of anti-English demonstrations, together with reminders that Spain might see a chance now to recover Gibraltar.

The doors for unrestricted departture from Italy were closed last night on British and French nationals in what some observers took for another step toward war.

The Government also announced volunteers were being recruited into a parachute corps, with technique borrowed from the German troops dropped behind combat lines.

The exit visa requirement, clamped on in a surprise move, stopped the departure without permission from Italy or her colonies of citizens of any countries which impose similar restrictions on Italians. That applied to French, British and Egyptians.

Details Not Available

British and French who sought information about the length of time required before they could obtain visas were informed those details were not yet available.

There was no immediate comment from the Government on King Leopold's surrender of the Belgian army.

However, Virginio Gayda wrote in the Giornale d'Italia that the surrender was "an act of high political and humane wisdom."

His newspaper article said the British had planned to use the Belgian army to cover their withdrawal from Flanders.

Speculation Rife

There was speculation as to whether Premier Mussolini might have influenced King Leopold's surrender through King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy.

The King is the father-in-law of Princess Maria Jose, sister of Leopold and wife of Italian Crown Prince Umberto.

Princess Maria Jose received cheers and a demonstration of sympathy as she stepped from a train after a visit to Italian Red Cross centers at Naples.

Some observers suggested that Italy might be holding off entry into the war to see what effect the Belgian surrender would have on the British and French defense.

Pope Confers With Rizzo

It was considered likely that Pope Pius XII discussed Italy's imminent action yesterday with Babuscio Rizzo, counselor of the Italian Embassy, at the Vatican in a private talk preliminary to an audience tomorrow when Bernardo Attolico is to present his credentials as the new Ambassador.

The Pope also conferred with Alfonso, former King of Spain.

Italians privately and in Government circles have expressed curiosity recently as to what effect Italian intervention in the war would have in the United States. Expressions of American opinion on the war are being followed closely.

Americans Not Included

Americans were not included in yesterday's regulations requiring visas to leave the country.

Developments around the Mediterranean also were followed intently.

Reports of demonstrations in Spanish cities for the return of Gibraltar to Spain attracted considerable attention, as did Britain's sending of Sir Samuel Hoare to Madrid as new British Ambassador with a "special mission."

Some said this mission might be to persuade Generalissimo Francisco Franco to remain neutral in the event of an attack on Gibraltar.

BRITONS WANT AID OF IRISH TROOPS

Co-operation Issue Raised in House of Commons.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—Military co-operation between British and Irish troops was urged in the House of Commons today by William Davison and the Rev. James Little.

Sir William asked Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal and Prime Minister Churchill's lieutenant in the Commons, whether he knew that the Irish Premier, Eamon de Valera, had said that Ireland was now within the war zone. Mr. Attlee declared that he had nothing to add to the statement he had made earlier on the war situation.

Tells of Assassination Order.

CORK, Eire, May 28 (A. P.).—A member of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, held for possession of a loaded revolver, told a magistrate today that he had been ordered by the I. R. A. to shoot an unnamed Government official.

Booked as Edward Curtin, he was held for trial.

Bishop Issues Warning.

GALWAY, Ireland, May 28 (A. P.).—The Most Rev. Michael Browne, Catholic Bishop of Galway, said today: "Any Irishman who assists any foreign power to attack the legitimate authority of his own country is guilty of the most terrible crime against God's law.

"There can be no excuse for that crime, not even the pretext of solving partition or of securing Ireland's unity."

He urged people in every village and town to watch for spies and traitors and give full co-operation to the army and police.

DE VALERA MAY ASK FOR LARGER ARMY

Dail Meeting at Dublin to Take Up Defense Today.

DUBLIN, May 28 (A. P.).—Twelve persons suspected of fifth column tendencies have been seized since Sunday in the mountains surrounding Dublin and seven still are in custody.

This became known as the Dail Eirrean prepared to discuss defenses tonight.

One alien of undisclosed nationality was among those detained.

The Dail meeting tonigh is at Premier Eamon de Valera's call for unity. The opposition party, the Fine Gael, led by William T. Cosgrave, met today to formulate plans.

It is believed Premier de Valera may ask for limited martial law, blackouts, a larger army and defense measures to cope with some Irish and alien elements considered inimicable to Irish neutarlity in the European war.

FIANNA FAIL AND FINE GAEL JOIN FORCES

Government Opposition Parties Agree To Unite Against Aggression

Action Follows De Valera's Warning Nation Is In Grave Danger

[By the Associated Press]

Dublin, May 28—The Fianna Fail and Fine Gael, Government and opposition parties, respectively, coalesced tonight on a policy of defense of the nation.

Agreement to unite against any aggression came after Premier Eamon de Valera had brought to the attention of Parliament the dangers now confronting the country.

The Labor party joined the Fine Gael in agreeing to a proposal by the Premier that both opposition groups appoint representatives to participate in weekly conferences on international matters and national defense.

The Government will be represented by two members; the Fine Gael, the principal opposition, by three, and Labor by two at the weekly sessions.

Points To Danger

"Dangers threatening the country now are obvious," de Valera said in referring to his Galway speeches last week end in which he declared Ireland "really is in the war zone" and should plan her defenses accordingly.

At the same time de Valera announced an immediate campaign to add thousands of troops to Ireland's armed forces. He said reserves of the regular army and first-line volunteers were being called to the colors.

"In view of the dangers confronting us, I am sure the people will be united as one man behind the Government to resist aggression from whatever quarter it might come," the Premier asserted.

"We must all be brothers in one holy cause; let there not be found one treacherous hand giving them away."

Cooperation Pledged

Opposition Leader William T. Cosgrave, answering de Valera's appeal for a coalition Government, said the Fine Gael was alive to Ireland's peril and was willing to accept its full share of responsibility for policies on which there has been consultation and agreement.

"We accept the conference scheme just outlined," he said, "and will withhold no assistance we can give, or influence others to give," Cosgrave said in a stirring address.

He suggested a threefold plan for the present emergency:

1. To maintain institutions of state against all dangers.
2. Safeguard essentials of economic life—production, supplies and employment.
3. Smother treasonable activities with all the power of the state.

Labor Leader William Norton said his followers were in wholehearted agreement.

Ulster Is on Guard

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, May 28 (AP)—Viscount Craigavon, Premier of Ulster, told the Northern Ireland Parliament today that, except for anti-parachute patrols, Ulster defense forces were complete and efficient.

Fears of a Nazi invasion of Ireland to strike at England prompted the emergency defense measures.

It would be "perfectly unthinkable, unless as a last resort, to bring troops over here which are required elsewhere," Lord Craigavon said.

Edmund Warnock, Parliamentary Secretary of the Home Office, resigned because he considered "the war effort of Ulster far too feeble."

GOERING DECREES CAPTIVE REPRISALS

French Airmen Prisoners to Be Put in Chains—50 to Die for Every Parachutist Shot

NAZI FLIER'S TALE CITED

Squadron Leader Reports He Was Fired On in Air, Robbed, Beaten by Moroccans

BERLIN, May 28 (AP)—Captured French airmen henceforth will be clamped in chains immediately, Field Marshal Hermann Goering announced tonight, in retaliation for similar treatment reported by a lieutenant colonel of the Nazi air force.

A radio report said he specified also that "every time the murder of a German flier is reported" five captured French fliers would be shot and that for every report of firing on a Nazi parachuting from a damaged plane fifty enemy prisoners would be shot.

His order exempted the British because so far they have "not given cause for such retaliatory measures."

The Nazi air chieftain's announcement came after the receipt of a report from Lieut. Col. Lackner, a squadron leader, who told of having been fired upon by French troops as he parachuted to earth from his flaming plane. He said he had been set upon and beaten and finally chained.

The officer was said to have been "temporarily a prisoner of war in French hands" and presumably escaped.

"My airplane was set aflame in the vicinity of Lens by pursuit planes so that parachuting became neccesary.

"When my parachute approached the ground I was fired at by rifles from all sides.

"Troops firing at me were not in battle but in billets, so that it must justly be assumed that firing on parachuting German airmen, and the later outrageous attitude of these troops, was in accord with French officers commanding them.

"After my landing I was set upon by Moroccans. They tore off my combination and tunic and tore my trousers. They robbed by watch, ring, pocket book, purse containing 50 marks, and all other objects in my pockets.

"While doing so they hit me with rifle butts and other objects so that I collapsed, bleeding profusely. I was dragged to a meadow where preparations were being made to shoot me. The prevention of this intention I owe only to the sudden intervention of French gendarmes."

He then related that hehad been chained by the gendarmes who answered protestations of French officers against such treatment with the statement that "these were the explicit order of their superiors."

"During my stay in the woods," he said, "I heard from members of the French Army that other German airmen had already been tortured to death by Moroccans."

GERMANS TO CHAIN FRENCH AVIATORS

Accuse Foe of Inhumanity to Nazi Prisoners.

BERLIN, May 28 (A. P.).—French aviators seized in the future will be "chained immediately," Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering announced today, as retaliation for treatment of German air prisoners "contrary to international law."

"Magnanimous orders hitherto in force concerning treatment of enemy flyers are recinded," Goering's announcement said. "In the future all French flyers, in conformity with the French example, will be chained immediately after their capture."

The announcement added that the German air force commander "saw himself forced to take these severe measures because reports are accumulating to the effect that inhumane treatment is meted out by the French to German flyers taken prisoner of war."

Specifically, the announcement mentioned the case of a Lieut-Col Lackner, a Nazi squadron leader who was referred to as "temporarily a prisoner of war in French hands."

The announcement added:

"In the future every time the murder of a German flyer is reported to Field Marshal Goering, five captured French flyers will be shot in retaliation.

"If it happens again that German flyers who have to leave their damaged plane by parachute are fired on by the enemy, fifty enemy prisoners will be shot.

"These new measures do not apply to British flyers who are prisoners of war, because the British so far have not given cause for such retaliatory measures."

Goering's order followed one yesterday depriving captured Allied officers of "special facilities" and the announcement of the removal of Gen. Henri Giraud, captured French commander, from a castle to a fortress.

ESCADRILLE DROPS COL. LINDBERGH

Lafayette Group Cancels Honorary Membership.

PARIS, May 28 (A. P.).—Honorary membership in the Lafayette Escadrille conferred on Col. Charles A. Lindbergh after his trans-Atlantic flight in 1927 was withdrawn today by order of the Trench and Air Association of American Volunteer Combatants in the French Army in 1914-18, representing former pilots of the Escadrille.

The association announced that its action was the result of Col. Lindbergh's speech last Saturday, which it called "definitely opposed to the spirit of the American Volunteers of the Lafayette Escadrille and Foreign Legion who rushed to the defense of France in 1914."

The association's announcement said that the title of honorary member was conferred on Col. Lindberg "in a moment of enthusiasm—mistaken but understandable."

The former pilots' announcement concluded:

"We believe that his words are an insult to the memory of the comrades who fell on the field of honor and who rest in the crypt of the Lafayette Escadrille monument at Garches."

Paul Rockwell, who was a member of the Escadrille in the world war, and joined the Foreign Legion in the present war, is president of the association.

Col. Lindbergh's speech was broadcast over the United States from Washington on May 19.

He warned the United States to stay out of Europe's troubles, and said: "We need not fear a foreign invasion unless American peoples bring it on, through their own quarreling and meddling with affairs abroad."

THE FLIER WARNED THE UNITED STATES TO STAY OUT OF EUROPE'S TROUBLES, AND SAID "WE NEED NOT FEAR A FOREIGN INVASION UNLESS AMERICAN PEOPLES BRING IT ON THROUGH THEIR OWN QUARRELING AND MEDDLING WITH AFFAIRS ABROAD."

"WE ARE IN DANGER OF WAR TODAY," HE SAID, "NOT BECAUSE EUROPEAN PEOPLE HAVE ATTEMPTED TO INTERFERE WITH THE INTERNAL AFFAIRS OF AMERICA, BUT BECAUSE AMERICAN PEOPLE HAVE ATTEMPTED TO INTERFERE WITH THE INTERNAL AFFAIRS OF EUROPE."

LINDBERGH INSISTED THAT THE GEOGRAPHIC SITUATION OF THE UNITED STATES GAVE IT NATURAL ADVANTAGES, WITH AVIATION AS AN ASSET, IN PREVENTING ATTACKS FROM OVERSEAS, AND URGED ADOPTION OF A DEFINITE POLICY OF DEFENSE.

FRANCE SHOWERED LINDBERGH WITH HONORS [illegible] WEEK FOLLOWING HIS SPECTACULAR ARRIVAL IN PARIS. PRESIDENT GASTON DOUMERGUE CONFERRED THE GRAND CROSS OF THE LEGION OF HONOR. HE WAS GIVEN MEDALS BY THE CITY OF PARIS, THE SOCIETY OF THE WOMEN OF PARIS AND THE FRENCH GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY. IN WELCOMING HIM TO THE LAFAYETTE ESCADRILLE, THE GROUP PRESENTED HIM WITH A GOLD PLAQUE OF HONOR.

A GIFT OF 150,000 FRANCS, THEN EQUAL TO $30,000, WAS OFFERED, BUT LINDBERGH SUGGESTED IT BE DIVERTED TO THE AERO CLUB OF FRANCE FOR THE BENEFIT OF FAMILIES OF FLIERS WHO HAD LOST THEIR LIVES ON EXPLORATORY FLIGHTS.

IN BELGIUM, KING ALBERT DECORATED HIM WITH THE CROSS [illegible] THE ORDER OF LEOPOLD AND THE GOLD MEDAL OF THE ROYAL AERO CLUB OF BELGIUM. ENGLAND ADDED HONORS WHEN KING GEORGE V GAVE HIM THE CROSS OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE OF GREAT BRITAIN.

Swiss Puzzled as French Guns Pound at Forts in Westwall

BASEL, Switzerland, May 28 (AP).—The fourth successive day of systematic blasting at German Westwall fortifications and railroads by Maginot forts aroused speculation among foreign observers today over the possibility of a French smash across the river into Germany.

The continued shelling, coupled with the French engineers' action in dynamiting their own floodland dikes last Friday, accented the question whether the French might mean business—laying the groundwork for a dash into Baden.

Balanced against this was conjecture that the French move was more make-believe, like the Nazis' maneuvering of a fortnight ago—to keep enemy forces from being withdrawn for action elsewhere.

At that time the Germans had Switzerland's observers worrying over a possible swoop around the southern end of France's Maginot line. A German army of twenty divisions, including motorized troops, gathered near the northern Swiss frontier as the invasion of Holland and Belgium began. Several days ago, almost all of these units vanished while trainloads of German Germans to strengthen their defense with troops needed on their side of the northwestern fronts.

They agreed that at least two things must precede any French drive across the Rhine: First, the weakening of the German Rhine communications and smashing of many German fortifications—objects of the renewed cannonading—and, second, dynamiting of the Rhine-Rhone Canal locks to permit diversion of enough Rhine water so that troops could wade across certain points of the boundary river. In blowing up many of the locks, French engineers left the main locks and gates standing to give partial control of the water level.

wounded started moving into hospitals around Lake Constance.

Then, without preliminaries, the Maginot forts north of Basel opened fire. Their big guns have been directed mainly against the German forts of Istein, the "Gibraltar of the Rhine."

Military observers pointed out that the French activity, which has brought little reply so far from German guns, might mean an attempt to cover up reported shifting of troops from that area into the western zone, or an effort to force the

Nazi Freighter Dares Allied Blockade With Cargo Worth $800,000

Baltimore, May 28 (AP)—The German freighter Koenigsberg, 6,466 tons, sailed today, her commander declaring he believed that if he could get on the high seas he could take his ship with its $800,000 cargo of rubber through the Allied blockade.

Naval circles wondered whether the Koenigsberg's commander considered he had a better chance of getting through to Germany now that the Dutch and much of the Norwegian coast is held by the Germans and the English Channel threatened.

On February 8 the freighter sailed on an attempt to run the blockade but returned eight days later.

Wilhelmina Stands by Allies.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—A spokesman for the Dutch Government in exile in London said tonight the capitulation of the King of the Belgians would make no difference in the decision of the Dutch Government to continue fighting with all the forces at its disposal at the side of the Allies. The Government here, under Queen Wilhelmina, still directs the Dutch Navy and Holland's rich possessions in the East and West Indies.

Espionage Now Capital Crime In Switzerland

Government Also Places Many Civil Cases In Hands Of Military Courts

Bern, May 28 (AP)—The Swiss Government, using its extraordinary decree powers, strengthened the entire penal code today by placing many civil cases under the jurisdiction of military courts and providing the death penalty for treason by espionage or sabotage.

MAY 29 1940

The death penalty for such offenses previously was applicable only in time of war.

A council communique declared the peacetime military code "does not take sufficient account of the dangers of the present situation."

Reports reaching here were that 1,200 German Alpine fighters had been landed by parachute in the last two days. Twelve large transport planes, each carrying about fifty men, were reported to be making two trips daily to the Narvik region.

The effects of the war extended steadily northward, the newspaper Social Demokraten reporting that Tromsoe was being cleared of its population as a precaution against air raid attacks.

NAZI 'CHUTE TROOPS LANDED AT NARVIK

Flank Attack on British Is Reported Plan.

MAY 29 1940

STOCKHOLM, May 28 (A. P.).—German troops landed from planes were reported today to have crossed the Rombak Fjord in collapsible boats for an attack on the British flank near the Arctic ore port of Narvik, Norway.

The newspaper Aftonbladet said that dispatches from across the border indicated that the action was intended to relieve German forces hard pressed at Bjornfjell, near Narvik.

The dispatches said that the Germans parachuted from planes a mile east of Narvik and crossed the fjord "under difficult conditions," protected by fire from their own pursuit planes.

Fierce Attack on Ore Port Reported to Have Forced Germans to Retreat

MAY 29 1940

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 28 (AP)—Norwegian and Allied troops were reported tonight to have occupied part of the ruined city of Narvik in a fierce attack as the Germans retreated along the iron ore railroad to Sweden, destroying everything of military value.

Swedish newspaper correspondents at the border declared the Germans were concentrating their defenses near the frontier as Allied and Norwegian troops, aided by gunfire from British destroyers, took over some points in the city and along Narvik Fjord.

Border dispatches also reported that thirty German bombing planes attacked Bodoe, south of Narvik, dropping more than 500 incendiary and light explosive bombs. The bombing reportedly left Bodoe in ruins. No indication of casualties in the raid was given.

3 Safe in Week's Flight From U. S. Consulate

Americans Reach Berne From Calais in War-Stirred Trip

BERNE, May 28 (AP).—The American Consul and two American customs attaches in Calais, France, reached Switzerland today after a week's flight through the war zone in two battered automobiles.

James G. Carter, of Brunswick, Ga., one of the few Negroes ever to attain consular rank in the American Foreign Service, left his post at Calais last Tuesday after the city had been bombed repeatedly by German planes. Following him in another car were the attaches of the Customs Bureau, United States Treasury Department, Carl Morgen Richards and Charles Schlager. Windows of both cars were shattered by the force of exploding shells.

They headed for Paris until they met a British officer in a dynamite-laden car, who had been blowing up bridges along the road ahead. From there they swerved toward the coast, describing their progress as "literally crawling" along roads clogged with army trucks, soldiers and tens of thousands of bewildered refugees. Wednesday afternoon they reached Abbeville. There the battle broke around them.

None of the three would comment on their experiences except to say: "They were horrible."

Thursday they found themselves in the midst of the advance forces of the German army and received special passes back through the lines. A German escort went with them through Arras, across Luxemburg and into Germany. They rested at Stuttgart twelve hours before continuing to Switzerland.

Carter left tonight for Paris. Richards and another remained here.

BRITISH NAME NAVAL HERO

Admiral Evans Put in Charge of Protecting Aircraft Plants

LONDON, May 28 (AP)—Admiral Sir Edward Evans, British naval hero, was appointed today by Lord Beaverbrook, Aircraft Production Minister, to take charge of the "local protection and security" of aircraft factories and airdromes.

Admiral Evans is known widely as "Evans of the Broke" for his World War accomplishments as commander of the leader of a flotilla of six destroyers that intercepted a German night raid on Dover in 1917 and defeated six German destroyers.

Earlier, Admiral Evans commanded the Mohawk, which bombarded the German right wing on the Belgian coast in 1914. In 1912 he was second in command of the ill-fated Scott expedition into the Antarctic. He returned, but his commander, Captain Robert F. Scott, died in a blizzard.

After the World War, Admiral Evans served from 1929-31 as Rear Admiral commanding the Australian Navy.

13 TROOPS IN BOAT

British Soldiers Picked Up by Hospital Ship.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—A British officer and twelve men, picked up at sea from a drifting boat, were brought to an English port last night by a hospital ship.

Hard pressed by advancing German troops and by machine-gun fire from planes attacking a French seaport on Saturday, the officer and his men raced to the beach and swam a quarter of a mile to a drifting boat. In the boat they found the body of a Dutchman slain by machine-gun fire. To hide from the planes, the soldiers lay in the bottom of the boat as it drifted seaward. Machine-gun fire had disabled the motor.

They suffered from cold and hunger for twenty-four hours before sighting the hospital ship.

BERLIN PROMISES NO HARM TO LINER

But Says Foe May Attack the President Roosevelt.

BERLIN, May 28 (A. P.).—The German Government informed the United States embassy today that the strictest orders had been issued to German naval units not to molest the United States liner President Roosevelt on its journey to Ireland to evacuate Americans.

Germany, however, warned the embassy that it had information that Germany's enemies, in an effort to disturb American-German relations, planned an attack on the Roosevelt.

The German Government, in communication to the Embassy, said:

"Ships which travel in the manner indicated by the American Government (that is, unarmed and without escort) are, according to the fundamental principles of German conduct of war, in no danger from German arms. But in consideration of the fact that this American ship will travel through the war zone which American ships usually avoid, the German Government has notified its forces of the voyage, and has issued strict orders that the ship be permitted to make the journey without hindrance."

"It may be observed in addition that there are no German sea forces along the route of the journey from and to America. Any possibility of danger to the vessel from the German side is therefore excluded."

The German Government, however, informed the Embassy that it had evidence that an attack on the President Roosevelt was planned by Germany's enemies.

It expressed hope that the United States would take "appropriate measures to forestall such criminal designs."

German authorities sought to quiet American fears concerning the possibility of fifth column operations in the Western Hemisphere.

They charged that stories of alleged Nazi sabotage acts in the region of the Panama Canal and of Nazi demonstrations in Mexico were "inventions of the British Secret Service to arouse fear and to stimulate the war psychosis in the United States."

German Radio Music Marks Capitulation

BERLIN, May 28 (A. P.).—All German radio stations repeatedly played the anti-British "Engelland" song today in connection with the announcement of the capitulation of King Leopold's army.

After the reading of the news that King Leopold had been given a castle in Belgium as a temporary residence, the radio stations played the German anthem "Deutschland Uber Alles."

PRISONERS OF WAR

Nazis Say Their Officers Are Badly Treated.

BERLIN, May 28 (A. P.).—"Special facilities" to captive British and French officers will now cease, the German authorities announced today, as a result of reports that German officers captured by the Allies are extremely badly treated.

The announcement said that the French Gen. Henri Giraud, captured in the battle of the Meuse, and up to now accommodated in a castle, has now been transferred to a fortress in Western Germany. He will have a French colonial soldier instead of a German for an orderly.

"The future treatment of French officers will depend on the treatment of German officers who are prisoners of war in French hands," the announcement concluded by saying.

4 ALLIED SHIPS SUNK

Germans Lose Two in Week Ended on May 19.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—Authoritative spokesmen today reported that vessels sunk "by enemy action" in the week which ended on May 19, included one British ship of 629 tons, three Allied vessels totaling 29,552 tons, and four neutral ships totaling 16,120 tons.

These spokesmen said that the German tanker Kattegat, 6,031 tons, and the steamship Rosario, 6,079 tons, had been sunk by the Norwegians, bringing Germany's total shipping losses up to May 19 to around 830,000 tons.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—R. K. Law, Financial Secretary to the War Office, told the House of Commons today that experiments were being made on a "protective chest armor for British troops."

ATTLEE SAYS NAZIS BOMBED REFUGEES

Tells of Attacks on Hospital Ships and Ambulances.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons today that the "bombing of hospital ships and machine-gunning of ambulances in France may be taken in conjunction with deliberate attacks by German aircraft on refugees on the roads of Belgium and France as typical of the methods pursued by the German Government."

"The British Government hold themselves ready," he went on to say, "to take such action as they consider appropriate, but it is not their intention to exact retribution from the wounded or on women and children."

He added that he hoped to announce shortly changes in the arrangements for the economic execution of the war.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—H. G. Wells, the English novelist and historian, urged Great Britain's fighting chiefs to give every aid to their armies trapped in Flanders, even at risk to security on the home front.

POLO PLAYER SLAIN IN BRITISH SERVICE

Hugo Hesketh Hughes Was Welsh Guards Officer

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—Hugo Hesketh Hughes, international polo player, was listed today among those killed in active war service.

He was a second lieutenant in the Welsh Guards.

Hesketh Hughes, stocky hard-hitting British polo star, is well known in polo circles in the United States. Rated at seven goals in England in 1938, he played in the 1936 international cup series in England when the British gave the American cup defenders the closest fight they had had since the world war.

The British internationalist came to this country in 1938 and played on Winston Guest's team, the Jaguars, in the national polo championship at Meadowbrook. He was at No. 1 position, replacing the American star, Eric Pedley, who was prevented by business from participating in the matches.

Last year Hughes was again seen at Meadowbrook, playing No. 2 position with the British team in the international matches. He learned polo in Argentina and played for years there before going to England.

Rosemary Kennedy Leaves London for Lisbon

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—Rosemary Kennedy, 21 years old, eldest daughter of United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, traveled by plane to Lisbon, Portugal, today to catch a trans-Atlantic plane to return to the United States.

It was explained that she took the air route because of demand for space on the liner President Roosevelt, which is scheduled to reach Ireland Thursday to take Americans home.

All other members of the Ambassador's family are in the United States. Rosemary had remained to continue her art studies.

At United States Lines offices inquirers were told the waiting list of Americans indicates that the number desiring to leave is greater than the capacity of the President Roosevelt.

To the question whether the national ship might be sent, officers replied that this was likely but that nothing could be announced.

Reich Frees U. S. Ship

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 28—The American freighter Charles R. McCormick, which was caught at Bergen, Norway, during the German invasion, has been released by German authorities and will sail for New York June 1, her operators, Stockard and Company, were informed by cable by their Bergen agent today.

Her cargo, which was bound for Finland, will be unloaded and held for disposition by a prize court, the agent said.

The ship, with a crew of thirty-two, reached Bergen just before the invasion, and, with the American freighter Flying Fish was slightly damaged during the fighting.

Moved To Vakstal

She moved for safety to Vakstal, sixty miles away, and returned to Bergen May 22. Her operators believed her crew had been left aboard and not interned.

She is expected to reach New York about June 17.

The vessel, owned by the McCormick Steamship Company of San Francisco, was chartered by Stockard and Company for the Stockard Steamship Corporation.

Liner Brings Refugees

The United States liner Washington arrived today from Genoa and Naples with 1,068 passengers, including 500 Jewish refugees traveling on Swiss passports. Mrs. George Earle, wife of the Minister to Bulgaria, returned with two sons.

Prices in Italy Advance on News

ROME, May 28 (A. P.).—Prices rose sensationally in the securities market today on news of the Belgian surrender.

Many issues jumped 10 to 30 points. Stocks of two metallurgical companies soared 65 and 82 points.

Financial circles attributed the rise to growing confidence that realization of Italian "aspirations" was near in view of the military situation in the north.

Recently the market has inclined to weakness in thin trading due to prospects of Italian intervention.

U. S. Sends Three More Warships To Lisbon

Heavy Cruiser And Two Destroyers Join Squadron To Protect American Interests

Washington, May 28 (AP)—The navy sent three more warships today to Lisbon, Portugal, to join the squadron which has been operating there. The ships were the Vincennes, a new heavy cruiser of 10,000 tons, and the Truxtun and Simpson, destroyers.

They are "not convoying any merchant vessels, but are proceeding to Lisbon for the purpose of protection of American interests," the navy said. There is no plan at present to use them to remove Americans from the war zone but the ships are to be held there "just in case," an official disclosed.

Already in neutral European waters, usually in the vicinity of Lisbon, are the light cruiser Trenton and the destroyers Herber and Dickenson.

CANADA IS ADDING TO FORCES IN WAR

Will Expand Its Army and Aviation to Meet Crisis.

MAY 29 1940

OTTAWA, May 28 (A. P.).—Immediate expansion of Canada's army and air force is the first objective in the Dominion's war plans resulting today from the critical situation in Europe.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King informed the House of Commons yesterday that expansion was necessary. Some 30,000 recruits are to be enlisted as quickly as possible, with an additional 5,000 for the air force.

Other new steps will be the organization of reserve companies of veterans to be attached to militia units for training and the institution of special training for certain veteran officers.

The new speed-up plan followed by only a few days the announcement that all units for a third Canadian division and ancillary units required for a Canadian corps in the field would be recruited.

Parliament heard of the latest proposed increases in fighting strength while studying Finance Minister Ralston's measure for $700,000,000 in war appropriations for the ensuing fiscal year.

Air Minister Power said that air force activity would be pushed in two directions, by calling more men up and by going ahead with all speed to complete flying fields and training schools.

The latest war developments, he said, necessitate the change, and confront Canada with the possibility of carrying a larger share of training plan costs than originally figured. The air force strength is now 12,000.

Representatives Of 3 In France Deny Knowledge Of Seizures Reported From Berlin

New York, May 28 (AP)—Representatives of three American ambulance corps in France said tonight they had received no information regarding capture of either equipment or personnel as reported in dispatches from Berlin.

Berlin reported that American hospital facilities of the "Franklin Foundation" were being used by German wounded, but sources here could not identify the foundation.

The American Field Service in France group has twenty-two ambulances in the fighting zones and twenty more leaving Paris shortly, while the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps has sent 110 ambulances to France, of which sixty-six are now in active service.

AMBASSADOR SAYS BELGIANS FIGHT ON

MAY 29 1940

Asserts His Government's Decision Is Unanimous.

WASHINGTON, May 28 (A. P.).—Count Robert Van Der Straten-Ponthoz, the Belgian Ambassador, advised the State Department today that the capitulation of the Belgian Army was contrary to the views of the Belgian Government and its determination "to carry on the fight against the aggressor."

The Ambassador, who conferred with Adolf Berle, Assistant Secretary of State, said, "All the members of the Government are unanimous in making this declaration."

"The French and English governments continue their collaboration with the Belgian Government under the premiership of Prime Minister Pierlot," he added.

The views of the Belgian Government were given to the department formally in a statement which the Ambassador presented to Mr. Berle. Subsequently the Ambassador pleaded in a personal statement for a reservation of judgment on the Belgian surrender.

"We must, as Mr. Churchill has said, reserve judgment in regard to the capitulation of the Belgian army, until more complete information has been received. Meanwhile, attention may be called to the fact that this army had been fighting for eighteen days without one moment's respite and that its front line was never broken."

Stephen Early, White House press secretary, reiterated earlier in the day an observation by President Roosevelt that these are sad days when he was asked to comment on King Leopold's surrender to Germany.

Asked what the White House reaction was to this latest war development, Mr. Early declared:

"I think, as the President said in his radio address Sunday night, these are sad days. That doesn't apply to the action necessarily, but just to the news."

He said that William Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, phoned the White House at 4:30 A. M., Eastern standard time, to report the action by the Belgian King. Mr. Bullitt, he said, talked with Miss Marguerite Lehand, Mr. Roosevelt's personal secretary, who did not call the President, since she knew there was nothing he could do. Mr. Roosevelt was advised of the Belgian surrender four hours later.

Text of Reynaud Speech

MAY 29 1940

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, May 28—The text of Premier Paul Reynaud's broadcast on the Belgian surrender follows:

I must announce to the French people a grave event. This event occurred last night. France can no longer count on the Belgian Army.

Since 4 A. M. Tuesday the French Army and the British Army have been fighting alone in the north against the enemy.

You know what the situation was.

After the rupture of our front May 14, the German Army filtered between our armies, which found themselves broken into two groups, one to the north and the other to the south.

On the south it is the French divisions which are holding the new front following the Somme and Aisne Rivers and then rejoining intact the Maginot Line.

In the north was a group of three armies—the Belgian Army, the British Expeditionary Corps and several French divisions in which many of us have loved ones.

This group of three armies was under the command of General Blanchard. It was supplied via Dunkerque. The French and British Armies were defending this port on the south and west, the Belgian Army on the north.

Way Opened to Dunkerque

It was this Belgian Army that has just brusquely capitulated unconditionally on the field of battle on the order of its King without warning their French and British comrades in combat, opening the way to Dunkerque to the Germans.

Eighteen days ago this same King sent us a call for help. To this appeal we replied, following the plan which had been established last December by the Allied General Staffs.

But in full battle, King Leopold III without a word to the French and British soldiers who, in response to his anguished appeal, had come to the assistance of his country, laid down his arms.

It is a fact without precedent in history.

The Belgian Government has told me that the decision of the King was taken against the unanimous sentiment of his responsible Ministers. The government added it had decided itself to put at the service of the Allied cause all the forces of its country which were still available, and particularly that it wished to raise a new army and collaborate in the work of arming France.

It is about our soldiers that we are thinking.

Soldiers Are Praised

They can say their honor is intact. They are making a magnificent effort along the whole front. Every day during the eighteen days of battle they have given thousands of examples of heroism. Young French generals who have hardly had time to replace their elders have already covered themselves with glory.

Our leaders and our soldiers form a bloc in which the country has entire confidence and which tomorrow will draw the admiration of the world.

We knew that sad days were coming. They have come.

France has been invaded a hundred times and never beaten. That much our courageous populations in the north must remember. It is from the tests we are awaiting that the new spirit of France will be forged—a spirit which will be greater than ever.

Our faith in victory is intact.

The strength of every soldier, of every Frenchman and every Frenchwoman is increased ten times. Misfortune has always bolstered France. She has never been as united as today.

On the new line which has just been established by our great chieftain, General Maxime Weygand, in full accord with Marshal Petain, on the Somme and on the Aisne, we will hold—and because we have held we will win.

MAY 29 1940

British Prime Minister's Report to Commons on Belgian Capitulation.

LONDON, May 28 (A. P.).—The text of Prime Minister Churchill's statement in the House of Commons today follows:

The House will be aware that the King of the Belgians yesterday sent a plenipotentiary to the German Command asking for a suspension of arms on the Belgian Front. (Cries of "shame!")

The British and French governments instructed their generals immediately to dissociate themselves from this procedure (cheers), and to preservere with the operations in which they are now engaged.

The German Command agreed to the Belgian proposals and the Belgians ceased to resist the enemy's will at 4 o'clock this morning.

I have no intention of suggesting to the House that we should attempt at this moment to pass judgment on the action of the King of the Belgians in his capacity as Commander-in-Chief of the Belgian Army. This army fought very bravely, and both suffered and inflicted heavy losses.

Belgian Government Cleared.

The Belgian Government has dissociated itself from the act (cheers), and declared itself to be the only legal Government of Belgium and formally announced its resolve to continue the war by the side of the Allies, who came to the aid of Belgium on her urgent appeal.

Whatever our feelings, from facts so far known to us, we must remember that a sense of brotherhood between the many peoples who have fallen into the power of the aggressor, and those who still confront him, will play its part in better days than those through which we are passing.

British Troops 'in Good Heart.'

The situation of the British and French armies now engaged in a most severe struggle and beset on three sides and from the air is evidently extremely grave. The surrender of the Belgian army in this manner adds appreciably to the grievous peril, but our troops are in good heart and fighting with the utmost discipline and tenacity.

I shall, of course, abstain from comment on what, with the powerful assistance of the royal navy and the royal air force, they are doing or hope to do. I expect to make a statement to the House on the general position when the result of the intense struggle now going on can be known and measured.

Warns of Hard Blows to Come.

This, perhaps, may not be until the beginning of next week.

Meanwhile, the House must prepare itself for hard and heavy tidings.

I have only to add that nothing which can happen in this battle can in any way relieve us of our duty to defend the world cause to which we have bound ourselves, nor can it destroy our confidence in our power to make our way—as on former occasions in our history—through disaster and grief to ultimate defeat of our enemy.

French

PARIS, May 28 (AP)—The night communiqué of the French High Command follows:

The decision taken by the King of the Belgians has enabled the enemy to increase pressure in the north where British and French troops are still fighting with the same determination.

Fighting that is developing favorably for our troops continues on the Somme.

Our bombers have continued by day and night their action against enemy flying fields and convoys.

Nothing of importance to report on the rest of the front.

This morning's communiqué follows:

The military situation has become more serious in an unforeseen manner in the north as a result of the capitulation by the Belgian King, whose army was engaged on the side of the British and French troops.

These latter are facing a new situation and are continuing to fight.

Nothing important to report on the rest of the front.

German

BERLIN, May 28 (AP)—The text of the German High Command communiqué follows:

The big battle in Flanders at Artois has reached a climax. Our troops, in a sharp attack, partly broke the embittered resistance and hemmed and encircled the enemy armies into an ever narrower area into which the air force also worked destructively with strong units.

We gained ground rapidly against the Belgian Army after hard fights and now stand ten kilometers [about six miles] outside of Bruges and Thouroût. Thielt was passed and a strong enemy artillery group there was stormed in close fighting. In recognition of the hopeless situation, the Belgian Army under the leadership of its King, in strength about 400,000 to 500,000 men, laid down their arms as already announced in a special report.

The fight continues against the encircled English and French. North of Valenciennes, our troops broke through strong French border fortifications. Orchies and Douai were taken.

Major Boehme, commander of an infantry battalion, favorably distinguished himself in this attack. From the Western direction the enemy was repulsed on the whole front. La Bassee, Merville, Hazebrouk and Bourbourg-Ville are in German hands. The air force bombed roads and railway lines leading to Zeebrugge, Nieuport, Ostend and Dunkerque, as well as harbor establishments and vessels in these ports.

The pier at Dunkerque has been destroyed.

Between Calais and Dover an enemy destroyer was severely hit.

On the southern front isolated enemy attacks by armored units on the lower reach of the Somme were repulsed. Thirty enemy armored units were destroyed.

South of Carignan our positions were improved and massive enemy attacks were repulsed.

The enemy's losses in the air yesterday amounted to a total of ninety-one airplanes. Twenty-three German planes are missing.

Also in Norway the air force attacked successfully. In Bodoe, one wireless sender was destroyed, a second one severely damaged. Two enemy airplanes were shot down.

German motor boats, as already announced by special report, off the Belgian coast destroyed one British destroyer and one enemy submarine.

Last night and early today one motor torpedo boat, in addition, succeeded in sinking a heavily loaded enemy transport of 3,000 tons. The English air force continued its aimless attacks on non-military objectives in Northern and Western Germany. Several civilians were killed.

An announcement from Chancellor Hitler's headquarters follows:

Under the persuasion of the destructive force of German arms, the King of the Belgians has arrived at the decision, in order to put an end to further senseless resistance, to request an armistice.

He accepted the German demand of unconditional capitulation. Thus the Belgian Army today downed arms and ceased to exist.

A later announcement from Herr Hitler's headquarters follows:

The King of the Belgians in order to put an end to further bloodshed and the wholly purposeless destruction of his country has arrived at a decision to lay down arms, contrary to the wish of the majority of his government.

This government, which is chiefly responsible for the catastrophe which befell Belgium, now also seems willing further to remain in the company of their English-French employers.

The Fuehrer has ordered that the King of the Belgians and his army be accorded such consideration as due bravely fighting soldiers.

Since the King of the Belgians personally expressed no wish, a Belgian castle has been designated him for a temporary sojourn until a definite domicile is determined.

The total number of Belgian units affected by the capitulation may roughly comprise half a million men.

The German armies now will strike out with increased vigor at the destruction of the chief culprits.

British

LONDON, May 28—The Air Ministry issued the following communiqué today:

Royal Air Force fighters, bombers and reconnaissance aircraft have been doing their utmost to relieve enemy pressure on the Allied armies in the grim struggle now taking place in Northeastern France.

Yesterday [Monday] waves of R. A. F. medium bombers repeatedly attacked road and rail communications in areas immediately behind the German armies. All of our aircraft returned, one shooting down an enemy scout over Holland. R. A. F. fighters carried out continuous patrols over Northeastern France Tuesday under adverse weather conditions.

Last night and Tuesday heavy bombers attacked military objectives at Duesseldorf, Duisberg, Dortmund, Hamburg, Bremen and Cologne. Reports so far indicate that twenty-two of the enemy have been destroyed or damaged.

Yesterday an aerdrome at Stavanger, Norway, was again bombed and aircraft on the aerodrome subjected to heavy machine gun fire.

In the Narvik area enemy aircraft have been destroyed or damaged by R. A. F. fighters. From these operations thirteen of our aircraft have failed to return.

F.D.R. Names 7 to Run Billion-Dollar Defense Program

MAY 29 1940

Washington, D. C., May 28 (AP).—President Roosevelt announced today formation of a special national defense commission made up of seven prominent individuals to supervise the billion-dollar defense program. Roosevelt said these individuals would participate:

1—Edward R. Stettinius Jr., chairman of the United States Steel Corp., who will be in charge of industrial materials.

2—William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corp., in charge of industrial production.

3—Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, supervising employment problems.

5—Ralph Budd, chairman of the board of the Burlington railway, assigned to transportation.

6—Leon Henderson, member of the Securities Commission, dealing with stabilization of wholesale prices.

7—Miss Harriet Elliott, dean of women at North Carolina University, who will have the job of protecting consumer interests.

Roosevelt said the group would meet here Thursday and go to work.

The President's announcement came near the end of a day in which it was disclosed that a defense financing program to include a $3,000,000,000 boost in the debt limit and at least $600,000,000 a year in new taxes would be proposed to Congress.

To be secretary of the defense group, Roosevelt chose William H. McReynolds, one of his administrative assistants. The President explained that McReynolds would serve as a sort of clearing house for the commission because of his familiarity with laws and the entire Government structure.

F. D. R. also reported that he probably would name two more administrative assistants, whose names may be announced in a few days. He now has three such assistants and has three vacancies he could fill.

On another phase of the defense program, there were indications that the President favored a flat 10 per cent. increase in virtually all taxes to finance the arms expansion plan.

Federal revenues now are around the $6,000,000,000 mark and a 10 per cent. boost would bring in about $600,000,000 annually, which the Administration wants for the next five years to pay for defense expenditures.

That would mean that one who now pays $1,000 income tax would pay an extra $100. Such levies as Social Security taxes, however, would be exempt.

While the new defense program will superimpose emergency expenditures of about $1,250,000,000 on the $2,000,000,000 which has been spent annually for the Army and Navy, the President said this in no way represented complete immediate, national mobilizaton.

No chairman has been selected for the commission of seven, the President said, but McReynolds can serve as something of a coordinating agency when meetings are held.

Arms Tax to Raise Billions

Plan to Raise Debt Limit

WASHINGTON, May 28 (AP).—Word was passed on Capitol Hill tonight that Congressional leaders had agreed tentatively on an income "super-tax," amounting to 10 per cent of present income taxes, and an increase in levies on beer, liquor, tobacco, gasoline and other items to finance the defense program.

Earlier in the day, the President and prominent members of Congress had agreed to ask for enactment of new defense taxes yielding $3,000,000,000 or more in the next five years, and to request that the existing $45,000,000,000 limit on the national debt be raised to $48,000,000,000.

MAY 29 1940

It was disclosed that under the plan, $3,000,000,000 of "national defense obligations" would be floated, to be paid off in five years.

The plan, ratified by President Roosevelt, was drafted in a three-hour conference early today by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Chairman Doughton (D.-N. C.), of the House Ways and Means Committee, Sen. Harrison (D.-Miss.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Rep. Cooper (D.-Tenn.), and four government tax experts.

It calls for immediate financing of defense costs by the sale of $3,000,000,000 of special "national defense obligations." It also calls for the levying of new taxes, amounting to between $600,000,000 and $700,000,000 annually for the next five years. The proceeds to be used to retire the "national defense obligations" and pay intrest on them.

General Republican support—despite possible differences over details—was promised by Sen. Vandenberg, of Michigan,

MAY 29 1940

ALL OTHER EXCISE TAXES WOULD BE INCREASED BY A FLAT 10 PER CENT OF THE EXISTING TAX. SUCH TAXES INCLUDE LEVIES ON TOBACCO (OTHER THAN CIGARETTES), COSMETICS, JEWELRY, PLAYING CARDS, ETC.

THE TOTAL INCREASES WOULD BE CALCULATED TO RAISE $683,000,000 ANNUALLY.

THE OFFICIALS DID NOT DECIDE AT THAT TIME WHAT FORM THE NEW TAXES SHOULD TAKE BUT LATER CONFERENCES BROUGHT FORTH WORD THAT THE BILL PROBABLY WOULD INCLUDE THE NEW INCOME TAX, APPLICABLE ON 1940 INCOMES OF INDIVIDUALS AND CORPORATIONS. Modifies His Hatred of War to Assure Cooperation, After 6 Months' Preparation

MAY 29 1940

WOULD BAR GOVERNMENT

Free Hand for His Plant and Advice of Rickenbacker and Lindbergh Specified

DETROIT, May 28 (AP)—Henry Ford, who has been a life-long opponent of war in any form, said today that much as he hated war, "if it became necessary the Ford Motor Company could, with the counsel of men like Lindbergh and Rickenbacker, under our own supervision and without meddling by government agencies, swing into the production of a thousand airplanes of standard design a day."

It would take about six months under those conditions to reach that level of production, he said in an interview.

"Of course they would have to be of standard design," he emphasized.

"Equally important would be freedom of action on our own part, so that we would not have the handicaps of red tape that slowed down production during the World War."

Mr. Ford said that he was convinced the present conflict in Europe would not last very long "because the United States won't get into it."

"Don't misunderstand me," he said. "A lot of pressure is being brought to push us into it and there is real danger in enormous 'defensive' armament, but I am confident we can keep out of it."

Cites His Auto Production

It was suggested to Mr. Ford that a thousand planes a day "was an enormous volume of production."

"So was 10,000 motor cars a day," he replied, "but we did it; so was the production of one eagle boat a day during the World War, but we did it. Incidentally, we would have reached the level of one submarine chaser a day much sooner but for a certain amount of red tape that had to be contended with."

"Still, planes present a different problem," the interviewer persisted.

"How?" Mr. Ford asked.

"Well, we don't know as much about planes as we do about motor cars and farm tractors."

He Scores "Financial Interests"

"That's exactly why I say we need the counsel of men who know aviation and that we must not be dictated to by men who haven't kept up to date in airplane design and operation," came the reply. "The manufacture of airplanes, if agreement is had upon just what is wanted, becomes simply an assembly problem."

Of the proposals for an enormous "defensive armament" program, Mr. Ford said:

"One of the things we must remember is that preparedness for defense is also preparedness for war and with tremendous so-called 'defensive armament,' we are in just the position the war-makers want us to be in order to be pushed into a conflict in which we should have no part, pushed in by an insidious middle group that is fighting neither Germany nor England but getting them to fight each other

BRITISH MILITARY SOURCES VIEWED THE POSITION AS OF "THE UTMOST GRAVITY," NEUTRAL MILITARY ATTACHES DECLARED EITHER MOVEMENT WOULD MEAN BRITAIN MUST SACRIFICE CONSIDERABLE STORES OF AMMUNITIONS, MATERIALS, AND EVEN GUNS.

EITHER ALTERNATVE WOULD PRODUCE HEAVY CSUALTIES BUT NEUTRAL SOURCES BELIEVED THE FIRST--WHICH WOULD BE DESIGNED TO JOIN THE BRITISH AND FRENCH ARMIES--WOULD STRENGTHEN THE ALLIES' GENERAL STRATEGICAL SITUATION CONSIDERABLY.

THE GERMANS REPLIED THAT UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER WOULD BE THE ONLY TERMS ACCEPTABLE, THE COMMENTARY ASSERTED.

THE COMMENTARY SAID A VIOLENT QUARREL BETWEEN LEOPOLD AND GENERALISSIMO MAXIME WEYGAND OF THE ALLIED FORCES PRECEDED THE BELGIAN ACTION. WHEN WEYGAND FAILED TO PREVAIL UPON THE KING, IT SAID, FRENCH PREMIER REYNAUD TRIED VAINLY TO REACH LEOPOLD BY TELEPHONE IN AN EFFORT TO CHANGE HIS MIND.

THE ALLIES TRIED TO SATISFY THE MONARCH, IT WENT ON, WITH WHAT THE GERMANS CALL A "FEEBLE" DRIVE FROM THE SOUTH IN AN EFFORT TO RELIEVE THE BELEAGUERED TROOPS IN FLANDERS.

DIENST SAID THE ALLIES WERE UNABLE TO KEEP THEIR PROMISES, THAT INSTEAD THE SITUATION BECAME "CATASTROPHIC" AND THAT LEOPOLD LOST PATIENCE. IT WAS THEN, IT ASSERTED, THAT REYNAUD TRIED TO COMMUNICATE BY TELEPHONE WITH THE KING.

THE KING INSISTED HE HAD CONSTITUTIONAL AUTHORITY TO ORDER CESSATION OF FIGHTING, THE COMMENTARY WENT ON.

LEOPOLD REACHED HIS DECISION TO CAPITULATE SUNDAY, GERMAN SOURCES SAID, WHEREUPON WEYGAND WAS REPORTED TO HAVE MADE ANOTHER VISIT TO HIM. THEY SAY IT'S ALWAYS DARKEST JUST BEFORE THE DAWN. I WONDER.

THE AMAZING SURRENDER OF KING LEOPOLD OF THE BELGIANS TO THE INVADING GERMANS, WITHOUT WARNING TO HIS BRITISH AND FRENCH COLLEAGUES, IS A TERRIBLE THOUGH NOT FATAL BLOW TO THE ALLIED CAUSE.

ITS IMMEDIATE EFFECT IS TO INCREASE IMMEASURABLY THE GRAVITY OF TWO OF THE MOST CRITICAL SITUATIONS WITH WHICH THE ALLIES ARE CONTENDING.

MAY 29 1940

(1) IT PLACES THE GREAT ARMY OF BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS, WHICH THE GERMANS HAVE LARGELY SURROUNDED IN FLANDERS, IN IMMINENT DANGER OF BEING CRUSHED.

HALF A MILLION OR MORE ALLIED SOLDIERS IN THIS GREAT SACK MAY HAVE BEEN CONDEMNED TO DEATH OR SURRENDER. AT THE BEST THEY ARE FORCED TO FIGHT FOR THEIR LIVES AGAINST FRIGHTFUL ODDS.

(2). THE KING'S SURRENDER UNCOVERS THE FLANK OF THE ALLIED ARM ON THE COAST, LEAVING OPEN TO CAPTURE THE PORT OF DUNKERQUE UPON WHICH THE BELEAGUERED ARMY OF THE NORTH HAD BEEN DEPENDING FO[illegible] SUPPLIES.

THIS HASTENS HITLER'S PROGRAM FOR A BLOW AT ENGLAND ITSELF FROM THE CHANNEL COAST.

DESPITE THE GRAVITY OF THE SITUATION, THIS IS NOT THE END OF THINGS FOR THE ALLIES. MAY 29 1940

PREMIER REYNAUD ANNOUNCED THAT THE ANGLO-FRENCH ARMY OF THE NORTH WAS CONTINUING TO FIGHT. OF COURSE THEY WOULD.

HE ALSO SAID THAT THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT, IN OPPOSITION TO THE KING'S ORDERS, WOULD CONTINUE TO FUNCTION AND WOULD TRY TO RAISE ANOTHER ARMY.

WHETHER THE GOVERNMENT SUCCEEDS, OR WHETHER IT DOESN'T, MATTERS LITTLE NOW IN THE MILITARY SENSE, THOUGH THE EFFORT WILL GIVE A LIFT TO THE ALLIED MORALE.

AS A MATTER OF FACT, HAD LEOPOLD NOT QUIT WITHOUT WARNING IN THE MIDST OF A CRUCIAL BATTLE, THE ALLIES COULD HAVE CONTINUED WITHOUT BELGIAN MILITARY SUPPORT. THE BELGIANS HAVE BEEN FIGHTING HEROICALLY, BUT THE ANGLO-FRENCH FORCES COULD HAVE SHOULDERED THE EXTRA WEIGHT IF THE FORMER HAD BEEN KNOCKED OUT AT THE START OF THE BLITZKRIEG.

SURRENDER OF THE BELGIAN FORCES AFTER LEOPOLD'S FASHION WAS LIKE RIPPING A SAND-BAG FROM THE BOTTOM OF AN EMERGENCY FLOOD-LEV

THIS MORNING THE GERMANS HAD REDOUBLED THEIR FURIOUS ASSAULT AT THE WEAKENED MOUTH OF THE SACK OF FLANDERS IN AN EFFORT TO COMPLETE THE SURROUNDING OF THE ANGLO-FRENCH TROOPS.

HITLER IS FLINGING MEN AND MACHINES INTO THE OFFENSIVE WITH UTTER ABANDON. THE SLAUGHTER ON BOTH SIDES IS TERRIFIC.

THE NAZI FUEHRER IS PLAYING HIS HUNCH TO THE LIMIT AND FOLLOWING UP HIS SUCCESSES WITH EVERYTHING HE HAS. AS I HAVE REMARKED BEFORE, THIS IS THE SUPREME GAMBLE. HE IS STAKING EVERYTHING IN ONE THROW. IT'S NOW OR NEVER.

MAY 29 1940

WHILE THE SITUATION OF THE NORTHERN ALLIED FORCES IN THE SACK IS PRECARIOUS, THE FRENCH HAVE STRENGTHENED THEIR LINE FROM THE COAST NEAR ABBEVILLE CLEAR BACK ALONG THE SOMME AND ON TO THE MAGINOT LINE. THIS AFFORDS A BARRIER BETWEEN THE INVADERS AND PARIS.

AT THE SAME TIME THE FRENCH HAVE BEEN HAMMERING AT THE NAZI LINE NEAR PERONNE, TRYING TO CLOSE THE COMPARATIVELY NARROW GAP AND JOIN

30.24-2587 30.24-2587

UP AGAIN WITH THEIR COLLEAGUES IN THE SACK. PARIS CLAIMS PROGRESS HAS BEEN MADE HERE.

THE ALLIES WILL HAVE TO READJUST THEIR ENTIRE PLAN OF OPERATIONS TO COPE WITH THIS CRISIS, BUT THE FRENCH LINE ACROSS NORTHERN FRANCE GIVES THEM SOMETHING TO BUILD ON.

THEY MUST NOW FIGURE THAT THE BIG FORCE IN THE SACK MAY BE SMASHED. THAT WILL BE A TRAGEDY, BUT IT WON'T BE CATASTROPHIC UNLESS OTHER UNFORSEEN CIRCUMSTANCES COMBINE TO MAKE IT SUCH.

WHATEVER THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF LEOPOLD'S SURRENDER, HE HAS DONE SOMETHING WHICH ONE COULDN'T IMAGINE HIS REVERED FATHER, THE LATE KING ALBERT, DOING OR PERMITTING TO BE DONE. PREMIER REYNAUD PRONOUNCED THE EPITAPH OF THE SON THIS MORNING IN THESE HISTORIC WORDS:

MAY 29 1940

"BUT IN FULL BATTLE, KING LEOPOLD III WITHOUT A WORD TO THE FRENCH AND BRITISH SOLDIERS WHO, IN RESPONSE TO HIS ANGUISHED APPEAL HAD COME TO THE ASSISTANCE OF HIS COUNTRY, LAID DOWN HIS ARMS."

"IT IS A FACT WITHOUT PRECEDENT IN HISTORY."

PERHAPS IT IS UNKIND TO COMPARE THE SON WITH THE HEROIC FATHER, BUT IT IS IMPOSSIBLE TO LOOK AT THE PRESENT SITUATION WITHOUT HARKING BACK TO THE WORLD WAR WHEN KING ALBERT STOOD WITH HIS TINY ARMY UNTIL THEY WERE DRIVEN INTO A WEE CORNER OF HIS KINGDOM NEXT TO FRANCE.

THERE THEY TOOK THEIR STAND. AND THERE IN THE HAMLET OF LA PANNE THE KING AND HIS QUEEN AND THEIR CHILDREN (INCLUDING YOUNG LOPEOLD) LIVED AND LABORED AMONG THEIR SOLDIERS. THERE WERE TIMES WHEN THE TROO OFF DUTY DIDN'T EVEN HAVE PROPER SHELTER FROM THE SNOWS AND SLEET. MANY A TIME THEY SLEPT IN WET STRAW WITH THE STORM DRENCHING THEM THROUGH THE CRACKS OF THE OLD BUILDINGS. AND MANY TIMES

THEY NEEDED FOOD.

OSTEND AND YPRES CLAIMED; FRENCH GAIN ALONG SOMME

Germans Tell of Fighting in Streets of Dunkirk —London Says B. E. F. Still Battles as a Unit as It Retreats to Coast.

By the Associated Press.

German troops, pressing closer the Allied soldiers trapped in Flanders, captured the French city of Lille and the strategic Belgian channel port of Ostend today, the Nazi High Command reported. Simultaneously the German radio reported that Ypres and Kemmel had been captured.

The British Admiralty announced the capture of Narvik, Arctic iron ore port in Norway, where a German garrison has been under siege more than six weeks. The city's fall was also admitted by the German High Command.

Despite heavy raids by Nazi bombers, London said that the British Expeditionary Force was still fighting as a unit and had retreated "some miles toward the coast."

Fighting in the streets of Dunkirk was reported today by Berlin. The Nazis insisted that the swastika might be hoisted at any moment over the port, main supply base of the northern Allied armies pocketed in Flanders.

MAY 30 1940

The French admitted that the situation in the north was "extremely critical" as a result of the capitulation of the Belgian Army, but said the Allies still were holding a thirty-mile stretch of coast extending northward from Dunkirk.

Paris reported gains in the fighting along the Somme River.

Nazis Drive Hard in Flanders

BERLIN, May 29 (A. P.).—The French industrial city of Lille and the Belgian channel port of Ostend have been seized, the British Expeditionary Force is facing destruction and an important segment of the French line has collapsed, the German High Command announced today as its legions circled for the kill in the Flanders-Artois trap.

The German forces also stormed Ypres and Kemmel, the High Command announced. An important Belgian highway junction and scene of some of the bloodiest battling of the world war, Ypres lies little more than twenty miles from the channel coast, northwest of Lille. Kemmel, a height southwest of Ypres, also was the scene of famous world war battles.

MAY 30 19[illegible]

The Germans declared that counter-attacks to crack the steel jaws of the trap on the Allied armies, estimated in Berlin at 700,000 men, had been beaten off with the bloodiest losses.

30.24-2589

List Nazi Successes.

With their strategic position improved tremendously by the capitulation yesterday of the Belgian Army on orders of King Leopold III, the Germans were able to report, in addition, the following successes:

The passing of Bruges and the reaching of Dixmude, both in Belgium, in the swift advance through northern Flanders;

The raising of the swastika over Langemarck, scene of fierce combat in 1914;

The occupation of Armentieres, near Lille;

The fracture of a fortified French border position near Cassel, through a rear guard attack;

Widespread air raids on retreating columns and all kinds of troop concentrations and tanks; the destruction of twenty-four Allied planes yesterday as against the loss of three German machines;

Destruction of an Allied destroyer by a torpedo-carrying speedboat off the Belgian city of Nieuport;

Heavy damage of three Allied destroyers, two transports and two freighters, bombed off the Belgian and French coast of the English Channel, and

The sinking of an Allied submarine by bomb in the central North Sea and the probable destruction of another.

The English Army is facing destruction in the region of Dixmude, Armentieres, Bailleul and Bergues, the High Command asserted.

MAY 30 1940

Whole French infantry regiments, they claimed, put down their arms, overawed by the effects of German weapons.

The sweep to Dixmude further imperiled the rear of the British Expeditionary Force and units of the French Army fighting against total envelopment by the Nazis.

German spokesmen meanwhile stated that street fighting was under way in the strategic French Channel port of Dunkirk, which has been so far the main supply base of the British Expeditionary Force now trapped in Flanders. These spokesmen added significantly that things may have changed already, meaning that perhaps Dunkirk had fallen to the Germans. Official news to this effect was not immediately available.

Some German leaders were hopeful that the fate of the trapped Allied troops might be decided in the Nazis' favor within a matter of hours.

The capitulation of the Belgian Army under King Leopold yesterday permitted what was described here as the strongest break-through of the entire line, bringing not only Dunkirk but the Belgian port Zeebrugge within reach of the Nazi legions.

Report Air Victories.

"On the Yser and Yser Canal, north of Ypres (famous world war battleground) the enemy is still offering desperate resistance," the High Command acknowledged.

The Nazi air force, linked closely with the envelopment by land, blasted at the tightening Allied lines and the German Army announced that twenty-four Allied planes were shot down yesterday as compared with a loss of three German machines.

"On May 28 the air force raided retreating columns of all kinds, troop concentrations and tanks," said the High Command. "In the course of armed reconnaissance off the Belgian and French coast and in the channel three destroyers, two transports and two freighters were bombed and seriously damaged.

"One enemy submarine was sunk by bomb in the central North Sea. Destruction to an additional U-boat is probable."

An army report said that an Allied destroyer had been destroyed by one of the fast German torpedo carrying speedboats which the Reich has sent into the North Sea and the channel to harass Allied communications.

Belgians Obey King.

Yesterday's reports had German soldiers snatching a number of localities from the encircled British and French right under the noses of the Lille guns.

Authorized spokesmen were still unable to say today how the surrender of the Belgian Army was carried out militarily, but the speedy forward thrust which the Germans reported yesterday toward the Belgian channel ports and Dunkirk, alongside the Belgian border, indicated that the Belgians in that sector were swiftly obeying King Leopold's orders.

Predict Annihilation.

Meanwhile today the Allied armies of the north, bereft of the aid of the Belgians who had guarded their left flank, were reported waging a losing fight against the encircling Nazi forces threatening them with annihilation.

In an effort to soften the Allied resistance, the Germans sent wave after wave of bombing planes roaring over the Flanders pocket.

Military commentators said that the demoralizing air attacks had left the cornered British and French troops—estimated here at about 750,000 men—weak and disorganized and declared that they must surrender or die within a few days.

Admit Heavy German Losses.

"It is only a matter of days," said one commentator, "before everything around them will crash and burn—everything down to the last house if necessary."

Authoritative spokesmen acknowledged that the German losses had been heavy in the drive to wipe out the British and French in the North, but said that the price was not excessive in view of the results obtained.

Most of the losses were said to have been suffered by infantry units.

The Germans said that the greater part of the Belgian army had obeyed King Leopold's order to lay down their arms, and that the Nazi press was jubilant over the outlook.

Berlin eagerly awaited word that German troops had occupied Ostend and the French Channel port of Dunkirk, to cut off the last avenues of retreat left open to the northern Allied armies.

Bruges, only twelve miles east of Ostend, was already in Nazi hands, the German High Command announced.

The High Command indicated that the pocket into which the Allied troops are squeezed is shaped roughly like a triangle, with a base of fifty-five miles along the channel from Dunkirk to Zeebrugge, and its apex at St. Amand, sixty miles from the coast.

From a point northeast of Zeebrugge the German front passes through Bruges and Torout to just east of Roselare; then follows an irregular line southward toward Ypres, Menin, Tourcoing and Roubaix to St. Amand.

From St. Amand the front swings toward the southwest through Orchies and Douai, and then angles sharply toward the northwest through La Basse, Merville, Hazebrouck and Bourbourg to the channel coast between Gravelines and Dunkirk.

German Version

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 29—The French industrial city of Lille and the Belgian Channel port of Ostend have been seized, the British Expeditionary Force is facing destruction and an important segment of the French line has collapsed, the German high command announced today as its legions circled for the kill in the Flanders-Artois trap.

With their strategic position improved tremendously by the Tuesday dawn capitulation of the 300,000-man Belgian army on orders from King Leopold III, the Germans were able to report, in addition, the following successes:

Storming of Ypres, Belgian highway center, some twenty miles from the Channel coast between Dunkirk and Ostend.

Kemmel Also Attacked

Simultaneous attack on Kemmel, southwest of Ypres. Both Ypres and Kemmel were maelstroms of World War fighting. Kemmel is known particularly for the combat on Messines Ridge.

MAY 30 1940

Passing of Bruges and the reaching of Dixmude, both in Belgium, by the swift advance through northern Flanders.

Raising of the swastika over Langemarck, scene of fierce combat in 1914, and occupation of Armentieres, near Lille.

Fracture of a fortified French border position, near Cassel, through a rearguard attack.

Widespread air raids on "retreating columns and all kinds of troop concentrations and tanks."

24 Allied Planes Destroyed

Destruction of twenty-four Allied planes yesterday as against the loss of three German machines.

Heavy damage to three Allied destroyers, two transports and two freighters, bombed off the Belgian and French coast of the English Channel.

Sinking of an Allied submarine by bomb in the central North Sea and "probable" destruction of another.

The powerful German right flank crunched down through Flanders, through territory yielded in the Belgian capitulation, enveloping not only Ostend but also the Belgian towns of Bruges and Langemarck, while the air force stepped up its drive to divide and destroy.

Hundreds Of Bombers

MAY 30 1940

Hundreds of power-diving bombers were thrown into the tremendous battle, and it was freely predicted in Berlin that the British and French would be wiped out or be behind German barbed wire within two days. German commentators revised their previous estimate of the "pocketed" British-French forces, 700,000, downward to 500,000.

Germans declared that counter-attacks to crack the steel jaws of the trap had been beaten off "with the bloodiest losses."

German troops moving from the east and the west met at Lille, scissoring through Allied forces. One body of Allied soldiers was said to be pressed into an area about twelve miles square, south of Lille.

Dunkirk Reported Burning

Dunkirk, one of the next targets for the Germans smashing along the French coast of the English Channel, was reported by flyers to have been burning for three days, and there were unofficial advices that fighting raged in the streets—possibly Allied troops in combat with another German mechanized flying column.

The full text of today's German high command communique follows:

"The fate of the French Armies in Artois is sealed. Their resistance in the region south of Lille collapsed.

"The English Army, which was hemmed together in the region of Dixmude, Armentieres, Bailleul and Bergues, west of Dunkirk, also are facing destruction through our concentrated attack.

"Bruges was passed in the swift advance through northern Flanders, Ostend was taken and Dixmude reached. On the Yser and the Yser Canal, north of Ypres, the enemy was still offering desperate resistance.

"The Reich's war flag is flying over the memorial of German youth at Langenmarck, the scene of their courageous fights in 1914.

Lille Reached From Two Sides

"Lille has been reached in the attack from the east and west. The city has been taken. Advancing from the west, Armentieres was occupied. At Bailleul there is still fighting. East of Cassel, a fortified French border position which was defended by the opponent with a reversed front, was broken through and the Belgian border reached. At Wormhoudt the fighting is still in progress.

"On May 28 the air force raided retreating columns and all kinds of troop concentrations and tanks. In the course of armed reconnaissance off the Belgian and French coasts and in the Channel three destroyers and two transports and two freighters were bombed and seriously damaged. One enemy submarine was sunk by a bomb in the central North Sea. Destruction to an additional submarine was probable.

Speedboat Sinks Destroyer

"Despite unfavorable weather German speedboats succeeded off Nieuport in sinking by torpedo hit a big enemy destroyer on flight to England. On the south front isolated attacks by enemy infantry and tanks were repulsed.

"The losses of the enemy in the air amounted to twenty-four planes on May 28. Of these, sixteen were shot down in an air fight and eight by anti-aircraft. Three German airplanes are missing.

"Colonel Moelders scored his twentieth air victory. The number of enemy planes shot down by anti-aircraft in the period from May 15 to May 26 increased from the hitherto announced 101 to 265, according to exact information.

"The number of airplanes thus brought down by anti-aircraft since May 5 amounts to 607. In addition, the air defense during the same period destroyed 101 enemy armored cars.

Admit That Allies Reach Narvik

"In Norway the enemy, supported by numerous warships, landed on the ore railway yesterday and entered Narvik from the north. German fighting units raided enemy naval forces lying there. One large battleship sustained a serious hit amidships and ceased firing after being enveloped in smoke. Three cruisers and one destroyer, as well as one freighter, were heavily hit by bombs. Troop disembarkations at Ankanes were attacked with many bombs.

As closely as could be determined from the rapid-fire reports on the German advances, the encroaching line—drawstring of the pocket in which the northern British and French armies found themselves, runs like this from its northernmost coastal point:

Eastward from Ostend, past Bruges, fifteen miles; thence southwestward to Dixmude, twenty-five miles; then southward fifteen miles to Ypres, and then twenty miles southeastward to Lille and Armentieres, ten miles west of Lille; thence northwestward through Cassel, Bourgourg and Gravelines to the sea at a point fifteen miles west of Dunkirk. (Other mileage figures are approximations.)

As a sample of what the trapped soldiers were facing, DNB, official German news agency, told what had happened in the Sedan break-through several days ago.

Rain Of Quarter-Ton Bombs

Six hundred and fifty of Germnay's power-diving bombers showered quarter-ton bombs upon pillboxes of the little Maginot Line, upon marching columns, upon clusters of trees and strategic bits of terrain—upon every point where Allied troops could hope to make a stand.

And then, when the Allied positions had been smashed and troops scattered, infantry charged under cover of mechanized forces.

It appeared certain that these tactics would be repeated multifold on the British and French forces still clinging to the region of Lille.

The British Expeditionary Force evidently was backed against the Channel coast, in the vicinity of Dunkirk. The once-solid British-French front between Lille and Dixmude seemed to have been smashed into fragments.

Divide-And-Destroy Tactics

The Germans have not yet missed applying these tactics of divide and destroy.

As for uncertain fate of Dunkirk, only 108 miles by sea from London itself, informed Berlin sources said that "things may have changed already," meaning that perhaps Dunkirk, too, had fallen.

German circles were optimistic that the fate of the trapped Allied troops might be decided in the Nazis' favor in within a matter of hours.

Belgians Obeying King

Authorized quarters still were unable to say how the surrender of the Belgian army, was carried out militarily, but the speedy forward thrust which the Germans reported yesterday toward the Belgian Channel ports and Dunkirk, which is just alongside the Belgian border, indicated that the Belgians in that sector were swiftly obeying King Leopold's orders.

In an effort to soften up Allied resistance, the Germans sent wave and wave of bombing planes roaring over the "Flanders pocket."

Military commentators said demoralizing air attacks had left the cornered British and French troops "weak and disorganized," and declared that they must surrender or die within a few days.

German Losses Heavy

Authoritative sources acknowledged that German losses had been heavy in the drive to wipe out the British and French in the north, but said the price paid was not excessive in view of the results obtained.

Most of the losses were said to have been suffered by infantry units.

The Germans said the greater part of the Belgian Army had obeyed King Leopold's order to lay down their arms, and the Nazi press was jubilant over the outlook.

FALL BACK ON CHANNEL, OPEN DUNKERQUE DIKES TO GUARD THEIR ESCAPE

Conflict All But Over, With Germans In Control Of Northern France And Coast Across From England—French Strengthen Southern Front

MAY 30 1940

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Paris, May 29—The Allies tonight gave up as lost the battle of Flanders and, in a great retreat, opened the flood sluices around Dunkerque to guard their last port of escape on the sea.

The bloody conflict in the north was all but over. The Germans, thus, were left substantially in control of France's northern industrial region and her northwest coast, across from England.

At least, however, the battle had given the Allies time to build a strong southern front along the Somme and Aisne rivers, for 200 miles across France.

Amid Scenes Of Fire And Flood

The virtual collapse of the Allied cause in Flanders—when the Belgian army's surrender ordered by King Leopold left their flanks laid open—came amid scenes of fire and flood.

While the waters rose steadily in the vast system of streams around Dunkerque, French divisions fought across the tortured landscape to hold the rear while British troops defended the main points of passage for the main forces seeking the coastline.

The Allies brought on the inundation by opening the locks southwest and northeast of Dunkerque, on the great canal that flows by the city and follows the coast for many miles.

Armies, Navies And Air Forces Battle

In Dunkerque the last Allied resistance was rallied under Vice-Admiral Jean Marie Abrial, 61-year-old commander of the port. The Allied armies, navies and air forces fought together in an effort to save as much as possible from the wreckage of Flanders.

The retreat was harassed by heavy German fire. Some Belgian units, refusing to lay down their arms despite their King's order to capitulate, were reported still fighting beside the British and French.

A single French division which had been stationed with the Belgians as the backbone of their front, tried to hold back the Nazi rush in the Nieuport-Dixmude sector, a World War battlefield on the coast northeast of Dunkerque.

Suicide Squads Hold Two Sides

Suicide squads also held out on the eastern and southern sides of the Allied path to the sea. Some Allied units had to fight through German columns.

Dunkerque, manned by French sailors, was the last island of solid Allied positions.

The rest of the battlefield was a maelstrom of free-for-all fighting, lighted up by blazing fires.

Airplanes tangled in the heavy clouds hanging over the battle area. Allied navy dive-bombers, using the low-flying tactics they employ against submarines and warships, plunged on German tanks.

MAY 30 1940

Still other battles must be fought on the Aisne-Somme front before the war itself can be called decided.

Lille And Calais Battlegrounds

The Germans made Lille, the industrial center of northern France, and Calais, on the Channel Straits of Dover, particular battlegrounds. But their advance was slowed by Allied sharpshooters waging guerrilla warfare in the fields and fighting in the streets of the cities.

And tonight, toward the vital city of Dunkerque, the bulk of an entrapped army of half a million was backing.

The French admiral in command there reported that he was "satisfied with the supply situation," and at the same time ships were bringing in more and more food and munitions.

Also, while the French port of Calais—the nearest to England on the Straits of Dover—was reported partly occupied by the Germans, the French spokesman said some French troops still were holding out there.

MAY 30 1940

French Score On The Somme

And on the great, 200-mile-long front along the Somme and Aisne rivers, he said, the "quite heavy" offensive actions begun yesterday had resulted this afternoon in wiping out the last German-held bridgeheads on the south side of the Somme, with many Nazis taken prisoner.

Tonight's French communique, strongly gloomy in tone and saying the Allies were fighting with a "heroism worthy of their traditions," offered "fierce attacks" made successfully by the French on the Somme front as one of the few bright spots of the position.

Today the Germans had claimed the capture of Lille, an important fortified industrial city, a d to have cut off in a subsidiary pocket to the south French troops previously isolated in the large triangle held by the Germans from their British comrades-in-arms.

Thus, these twice-isolated Frenchmen apparently had no specific objective toward which to fall back, but merely to retreat somewhere or anywhere.

Thrust Directed At Cassel

The main German attack was reported directed toward Cassel, northwest of Lille and about midway between that city and the English Channel. Cassel lies thirty miles southeast of Calais.

In the vital job of keeping communications open at Dunkerque, the Allied base, the French and British air forces cooperated.

And, despite their grave peril—greatly increased by the defection of the Belgians—the Allies declared they still maintained a sea line of communications.

In the English Channel and the North Sea, however, German torpedo speedboats went out to challenge British seapower, while German planes attacked from the sky.

Pounding At Armored Columns

Meanwhile, the Allied artillery commanding the long German corridor to the sea was reported pounding destructively at Nazi armored columns.

Allied flyers were declared to have found a vulnerable spot on the tops of the German tanks, where the armor is thinner than on the sides, and to have pumped shells into many of the machines with a new cannon mounted on fast pursuit planes.

Slowing Down Reich Army

German losses in aviation crews, particularly the young and insufficiently trained flyers manning dive bombers, along with the wear and tear of twenty days of Blitzkrieg, also were claimed to be slowing down the Reich army. French military sources said that the Germans had now lost, since the beginning of the war, at least 2,000 tanks of an estimated total force of 5,000, as well as 2,000 planes—believed to be nearly half of the Nazi first-line strength.

During the day military dispatches summed it up with the philosophic report that the Germans appeared to be "getting out of wind."

American Planes Praised

A Government spokesman said today American airplanes are now arriving in France "in considerable quantities" and are showing their superiority in action over "anything on the front."

The spokesman said American bombers especially were proving their excellence.

Often, he said, these have been able to dive within thirty yards of the ground before cutting loose with bombs and pulling out.

Much Faster Than German

American bombers, the spokesman declared, are much faster than Germany's and easy to maneuver.

A French press dispatch from the front said:

"Magnificent American bombers in which we have placed so much hope have already entered the infernal battle of the north. They have achieved resounding victories over the German lines. All so far have returned to their bases safely."

The battle in Flanders obviously involved a vast struggle of artillery as well as infantry and aerial combat.

30.24-2591

30.24—2591

The French reported during the morning that the Germans were blazing away with heavy guns at hard-held Dunkerque. Great losses in men for the Germans in that area were claimed.

In the south along the Somme the French reported recapture of three villages before the destruction of the last Nazi bridgehead.

French Troops Retake Major Part Of Amiens

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 29—The French Army has taken three villages south of the Somme river during a mopping-up maneuver which gave an "extremely favorable" result, a War Ministry spokesman said today.

The spokesman's announcement indicated that the Nazis now held only two bridgeheads on the French side of the river, but a later announcement said the last bridgeheads occupied by the enemy had been blown up. The Germans originally established bridgeheads on the south side of the Somme at five points when they drove across the stream to occupy Amiens. The principal portion of the city was said to be now in French hands.

MAY 30 1940

German troops were said to have been repulsed "without difficulty" when they struck at the French forces along the Aisne in the vicinity of Chateau Porcien.

The high command communique said that the Germans were "thrown back" at this village, which lies on the river five miles west of Rethel, which for about a week has been the southern point of the German drive in this region.

Keeps Plans Carefully Guarded

There were strong indications that the French Armies massed along the Somme were swinging into action in an effort to relieve the pressure in the north.

The high command kept its plans carefully guarded, but said that action along the Somme was "developing favorably," and military spokesmen acknowledged that the operations in this sector were "important" in scope.

There were unofficial reports that at least thrity divisions, numbering between 450,000 and 640,000 men, were ready for a sustained drive along the Aisne.

The situation of the trapped Allied armies in Flanders remains "extremely critical," the War Ministry spokesman said.

Battle Lines Changing Hourly

The battle lines of the almost encircled Allied Army were reported to be changing almost hourly today as superior German forces swept over ground abandoned by fifteen Belgian divisions which capitulated yesterday on orders of their King.

French sources said, however, that more than thirty miles of Channel coast, stretching northward from Dunkirk, still remained in Allied hands and asserted that the pocketed troops were continuing to fight with "determination."

Along the Channel, it was said, Dunkirk itself "is not directly menaced."

Calais was also still in French hands at the latest reports last night, the sources added.

The northern armies, however, were said by the high command in its morning communique to be fighting with "admirable courage," and the War Ministry spokesman described their efforts as "murderous."

The spokesman said that German losses were high.

Attack German Fuel Reserves

The French and British air forces violently attacked fuel reserves at the north German ports of Bremen and Hamburg as well as communication centers and armored columns behind the German lines, according to the War Ministry.

Fighting in the northern sector was described as "extremely violent" on the Lys river, which runs through the area in which the Allied forces have been encircled by the swift German troops and left alone by the surrender of the Belgians.

Along the Rhine the French opened a terrific artillery fire which shattered a railway line and an unidentified station, the spokesman said.

Parliament Deciding King's Fate

The legal fate of Leopold III as King of the Belgians will be decided Friday by the Belgian Parliament.

The refugee Parliament, in emergency session in a Paris dance hall, already has approved the action of Leopold's Cabinet yesterday in "disowning" him as sovereign because of his surrender to Germany.

A dispatch from the Belgian frontier reported that Leopold had been returned to the Brussels palace by the German Army.

For the Friday session the Parliament will move to the Paris Town Hall. There, besides taking up formal action on the King, new statutes for the Government of the fugitive peoples of invaded Belgium will be mapped.

The Paris press quoted informed circles as saying Belgium's gold had been rushed safely out of the country and would be placed at the disposal of the new Government.

The French press bitterly assailed Leopold for ordering his armies to lay down their arms, thus leaving the Allied left flank in the north unprotected.

Paris still entertained hopes that some of the Belgian soldiers had not obeyed their sovereign's command, but official estimates that 300,000 Belgians had abandoned the Menin-Zeebrugge salient remained unchanged.

The immediate costly result of the Belgian capitulation appeared to be the abrupt withdrawal westward of the north army from the Escaut (Scheldt) and Scarpe rivers, leaving in German hands the rich Anzin basin, from which France gets much of her coal.

Jacques Denain was killed in a dog fight May 13. His brother, Jean, was shot down May 25 while returning from a reconnaissance flight.

Curfew hour for Frenchmen was moved up thirty minutes today from 11 P. M. to 10.30 P. M. by order of Minister of Interior Georges Mandel. The new order, effective tomorrow, applies to restaurants, cafes, theaters and cinemas throughout France.

French Advance Along Somme

PARIS, May 29 (A. P.).—The Allied armies of the north fighting fiercely against odds were reported today to be inficting heavy casualties on the German forces attempting to pinch them off, but their situation was admitted to be very critical

A murderous battle is raging in the Flanders pocket, a War Ministry spokesman said, but he gave no indication of which turn the fighting was taking. The French and British troops were said to be displaying admirable courage.

Along the front from the Somme to the Aisne the French armies of the center continued to consolidate their positions, and the situation there was described as extremely favorable.

Claim Three Villages Captured.

The High Command announced that three villages south of the Somme had been recaptured from the Germans, indicating that the Nazis now held only two bridgeheads on the French side of the river.

The Germans originally established bridgeheads on the south side of the Somme at five points when they drove across the stream to occupy Amiens. The principal portion of that city was said to be now in French hands.

A German raid on French positions in the Ardennes sector near the little town of Chateau Porcien was thrown back by heavy French fire, a communique said. The Maginot area to the east remained quiet.

Along the channel, it was said, Dunkirk itself is not directly menaced.

Calais was also still in French hands at the latest reports last night, the spokesman added.

The spokesman said that the German losses were high.

The French and British air forces violently attacked fuel reserves at the north German ports of Bremen and Hamburg as well as communication centers and armored columns behind the German lines, according to the War Ministry.

Destroy Bridgeheads Held by Foe

Consolidate South Front—Inflict Heavy Losses in Murderous Battle in North

PARIS, May 29 (AP).—On a great consolidated front along the Somme to Aisne rivers, the main French army today carried on continuous operations against the Germans, while the position of the trapped Allied forces of the north was admitted to be very critical.

The hardpressed men in the Flanders pocket, desperately fighting annihilation, were said to be inflicting heavy losses on the Nazis.

The operations to the south, which the French authorities cautiously had called important, apparently were aimed for the moment at wiping out the last German pockets as part of a general push forward in an effort to relieve the northern forces.

Half Million Men Ready

Whether such an offensive had gone beyond this preliminary stage was not clear. There were said to be between 450,000 and 640,000 men ready for a drive along the Aisne.

The front stretched across 200 miles on the Somme and Aisne. Three villages on the lower Somme were declared to have been recaptured by the French and this afternoon a military spokesman said also that they had blown up the last bridgeheads previously occupied by the enemy.

Most of Amiens was said now to be in French hands, and a German raid on French positions in the Ardennes sector near the town of Chateau Porcien was thrown back by heavy French fire, a communique said. The Maginot area to the east remained quiet.

But, however important this operation of the southern Allied wing, it was overshadowed by the great drama to the north.

The battle in the Flanders pocket was described by a war ministry spokesman as murderous, but he gave no indication of the turn it was taking. The French and British were said to be showing admirable courage.

Battle Lines Shifting

The battle lines of the almost encircled Allied army of the north were reported to be changing almost hourly as superior German forces swept over ground abandoned by 15 Belgian divisions which capitulated yesterday on orders of King Leopold.

French sources said, however, that more than 30 miles of Channel coast, stretching northward from Dunkerque, still remained in Allied hands and asserted that the pocketed troops were continuing to fight with determination.

Along the Rhine the French opened terrific artillery fire which shattered a railway line and an unidentified station, a military spokesman said.

Fuel Reserves Bombed

The French and British air forces attacked fuel reserves at the north German ports of Bremen and Hamburg, as well as communication centers and armored columns behind the German lines, according to the War Ministry.

The French said they still were in possession of Dunkerque and Calais, but declared that the Germans were blasting away at both ports with long range artillery.

The southern line of the Northern Army, extending eastward from the coast near Dunkirk, roughly eighty miles along the French-Belgian border to a point west of Valenciennes, was said to be under constant pressure from the Germans. The Nazis were reported to be attacking savagely at several points on this front with mechanized units, heavily supported by the air arm.

Fighting in the northern sector was described as extremely violent on the Lys River, which runs through the area in which the encircled Allied forces have been left alone by the surrender of King Leopold's Belgian Army.

Along the Rhine the French opened a terrific artillery fire which shattered a railway line and an unidentified station, the spokesman said.

German troops were said to have been repulsed without difficulty when they struck at the French forces along the Aisne in the vicinity of Chateau Porcien.

The High Command communique said that the Germans were thrown back at this village, which is on the river five miles west of Rethel, which for about a week has been the southern point of the German drive in this region.

Lines Change Hourly.

The battle lines of the almost encircled Allied Army of the North were reported changing almost hourly, meanwhile, as superior German forces swept forward over the ground abandoned by fifteen Belgian divisions which capitulated yesterday on orders of their king.

French spokesmen declared, however, that more than thirty miles of channel coast, stretching northward from Dunkirk, still remained in the hands of the Allies, and asserted that the pocketed troops were continuing to fight with determination.

Nevertheless, they added that the Germans were blasting away at both Dunkirk and Calais with long-range artillery.

On the other hand, there were strong indications that the French armies massed along the Somme were moving into action in an effort to relieve the pressure in the north.

Drive Along the Aisne Expected.

The French High Command kept its plans carefully guarded, but said that action along the Somme was developing favorably, and military spokesmen acknowledged that the operations in this section were important in scope.

There were unofficial reports that at least thirty divisions, numbering anywhere from 450,000 to 640,000 men, were ready for a sustained drive along the Aisne.

Rich Coal Fields Lost.

Meanwhile Paris still hoped that some of the Belgian soldiers had not obeyed the order of King Leopold to lay down their arms, but officials estimates that 300,000 Belgians had abandoned the Menin-Zeebrugge salient remained unchanged.

The immediate costly result of the Belgian capitulation appeared to be the abrupt withdrawal westward of the North Army from the Escaut (Scheldt) and Scarpe rivers, leaving in German hands the rich Anzin Basin from which France gets much of her coal.

London, May 29—Britain's Expeditionary Force in the Flanders trap was said by reliable sources today to be fighting "stiff rear-guard action" to cover its withdrawal toward the coast.

The fighting was reported in complete order, without chaos or confusion. Morale of the trapped troops was termed "quite unshaken."

The withdrawing army was said to have established a strong rear line, but it was regarded as "almost certain" that much equipment and material would have to be abandoned. This, it was said, would be destroyed to keep it from German hands.

Need Of Mechanized Agencies Stressed

Neutral military observers said the desperate situation of the pocketed B. E. F. and French forces could be relieved only by mechanized agencies equal to Germany's.

London military sources refused to give the position of the British troops, whose fight to reach the Channel was made more perilous by the Belgian capitulation which opened the way to a swift Nazi attack on Dunkirk. This port was reported still in Allied hands as the British, undergoing a heavy shelling, bombing and machine gunning, dropped back.

Furious Over Civilian Slaughter

The British Army's attitude, these circles said, is one of "furious rage against the Germans, caused not by the pounding they have received but by the incredibly revolting scenes in which the German air force and tanks had deliberately slaughtered helpless refugee women and children to spread panic among the civilian population."

"These are things," they continued, "the army can never forget, and they will insure the Germans the warmest welcome they have ever received anywhere if they invade this country."

A gloomy nation was told the B. E. F. was in peril as grave as that of the British who met disaster at Gallipoli in the World War, when the Allies were routed by the Turks in a catastrophic failure to establish a line of communication into the Black Sea.

The British morning press pulled no punches in telling the public of the dark picture and in denouncing the young Belgian monarch as a traitor for his capitulation against the advice of his Government.

Keyes Joins Plea To Defer Judgment

In the midst of the press denunciation of Leopold, however, both Prime Minister Churchill and his Minister of Information asked the people to suspend judgment, and today Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, who, as a special British liaison officer was with Leopold until late Monday night, issued a statement hinting there were certain important facts attending the surrender that were not yet generally known.

Sir Roger's statement today said:

"Some very hard things have been said in this country and France about the action taken by King Leopold in bringing about the cessation of hostilities in the part of Belgium occupied by his troops. I trust judgment will be suspended on a very gallant soldier until all the facts are known."

Belgians Lost 500,000, Report Says

The military correspondent of Reuters (British news agency) wrote today that the Belgian Army, originally 800,000 strong, had only 300,000 effectives when it surrendered—evidence of its stubborn fight against German assaults.

R. A. Butler, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told the House of Commons that the Government had under consideration an appeal to the United States to take as many war refugees as possible.

(In Washington, Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today active consideration was being given to the possibility of receiving Belgian refugees in the United States. He said conversations had been held with representatives of the British and other Governments about many phases of the refugee problem as well as with private individuals and groups.)

Activities of all aliens over 16 years of age, regardless of whether they are from an "enemy country," are drastically restricted under a new order effective June 3.

The order provides that unless aliens have police permits they must stay at home from midnight to 6 A. M. in London, and from 10.30 P. M. to 6 A. M. elsewhere in the United Kingdom. The blanket order included Americans.

They are forbidden to own or "control" a bicycle, motor vehicle, seagoing craft or aircraft. If an alien spends a night in a private home, the householder is required to notify police.

Two trains took 1,500 enemy alien women from London to internment camps today. Some had children with them. The women previously had been in "Category B"—aliens restricted in movement.

British Reservist Sentenced

Convicted under the official Secrets Act, Lieut. Montague Fyrth, 28, of the Royal Naval Reserve, has been sentenced to twelve months in jail and his brother, Hubert, 22, a lecturer, to six months.

In the House of Commons, Sir Gifford Fox, a Conservative, has asked Prime Minister Churchill how the Belgian Congo now is to be regarded and, moreover, what effect Leopold's action will have on Belgian refugees here.

Leopold's surrender, it was said here, failed to affect the status of the Congo, since the Belgian Government had repudiated the King and declared its intention of pursuing the war. The Congo was said to remain Belgian just as the East Indies remained Dutch after German occupation of the Netherlands.

The German-controlled Dutch radio, heard in London today, announced that Arthur Seyss-Inquart, former Austrian Nazi leader, assumed supreme civil authority in the conquered Netherlands at noon.

Sir Roger and Sir Wilfred Greene had an audience at Buckingham Palace today with King George. Sir Wilfred has just returned from an economic mission to Rome to negotiate with Italian officials over the British "blockade."

Would "Save Anger For Foe—Hitler"

The bitterest denunciation of Leopold came from the tabloid Mirror, which cartooned Leopold as a crowned serpent, with the caption: "Gentlemen, the King!" and described him in an editorial as a "skunk."

The Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, commented: "The cost in British and French lives of this betrayal will be immense." The paper told its 2,500,000 readers, however, that "we must keep all our anger for our one enemy—Hitler."

The News Chronicle said: "Within the steel ring of the Reichswehr are as many men as we lost in the battle of the Somme and as much war material as we abandoned to the Germans in March, 1918." (In the first battle of the Somme, in the summer of 1916, the British lost 500,000 officers and men. In the second, in the spring of 1918, they lost 200,000.)

Board To Speed Tanks For Britain

In Commons today, Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply, announced the formation of a board to increase Britain's production of tanks, and observed that "it is obvious that the experience gained during the recent hostilities must be taken fully into account."

Sir Alexander Roger, director of trench warfare supply department of the Ministry of Munitions for two years during the World War, heads the new board, which is to "proceed with all expedition possible," Morrison said.

The Government, on guard against potential fifth-columnists, took extraordinary precautions to guard Westminster Palace and the Houses of Parliament. It also recalled for service the special war reserves of the metropolitan police, the special war constabulary and police pensioners.

Employers and workers on emergency production jobs were asked to cancel their summer holidays.

Applies 100 P. C. Excess Profits Tax

Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said the excess profits tax of one hundred per cent. ordered under the Government's special powers would be applied to all businesses, effective from April 1, beginning of the fiscal year.

He said the nation already was under the heaviest tax burden in British history and added: "We must be prepared for further burdens and sacrifices."

Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair praised today the "almost miraculous achievements" of the British air force and then warned that "the attack of Germany upon Britain will test to the utmost our faith in the destiny of our country and the justice of our cause."

The Air Minister said "the first line of British defense—defense in the air—is safe in the hands of daring young pilots and fighting crews of the Royal Air Force."

In a broadcast to the nation, Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, said last night that it would be "necessary to withdraw our army from the positions they now occupy" as a result of surrender of King Leopold and his Belgian Army.

Duff Cooper said even if this battle is lost, the Allies would achieve final victory.

To Buy 1,750,000 Tons Of Sugar

Great Britain will buy the entire sugar exports of Australia, the Union of South Africa, Mauritius, Fiji and the British West Indies, Under Secretary of the Food Ministry Robert John Graham Boothby told the House of Commons today.

Canada and New Zealand will be partners with the United Kingdom in the purchase, he said, involving 1,750,000 tons of sugar. He said supplies of foreign sugar also would be purchased if necessary to supplement empire resources.

Sir Stafford Cripps is going to Moscow with the status of Special Ambassador, and his position is fully representative and authoritative, the London Evening News said.

The newspaper said assurances to that effect have been given to the Russian Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, by Under Secretary of Foreign Affairs R. A. Butler.

Sir Stafford is reportedly going to the Russian capital to conduct negotiations for a Soviet-British trade pact.

The Dominions Office announced a £20,000,000 war loan opened for subscription in Australia today at par, with interest at 2¾ per cent. for five years or 3¼ per cent. for sixteen years at the subscribers' option.

British Airmen Shoot Down 22 Nazi Planes Over Dunkerque

Half Million Men Ready To Go To France—Narvik Taken From Germans

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, May 29—Britain hurled her air force into mass battle tonight with waves of German fighters and bombers over the vital English Channel port of Dunkerque—last back door to safety for the Allies' lost battalions in the Flanders death trap.

The fight for air mastery raged on into the twilight of an anxious day for England.

British Developments

These were the highlights:

1. In the Flanders "die-or-surrender" triangle, 500,000 Allied veterans under Lord Gort, commander in chief of the B. E. F., fought off repeated German thrusts with "stiff rear-guard action" as they pushed doggedly down a narrowing corridor toward the coast.
2. Out of the million and a half men now actually under arms in Britain, half a million, especially equipped for modern mechanized warfare, are ready for action in France. They can join the French on the Somme river line in any gouge into German defenses to ease the pressure on their comrades in Flanders.
3. The War Ministry announced the capture of the strategic Arctic iron ore port of Narvik, Norway, held by Germans through a month of fighting.

The Fight Over Dunkerque

An Air Ministry communique described the fight over Dunkerque as the latest of a recent wave of air attacks designed to ease the German pressure on the Flanders pocket and to shatter communications and bases behind the lines.

Twenty-two of the "large number" of German planes over Dunkerque were reported shot down. One British bomber failed to return.

Exact location of the 500,000 Allied troops hemmed in the steel-girt triangle was not disclosed, but a Nazi military spokesman said they had pushed "some miles toward the coast."

British Morale "Unshaken"

Their morale was described as "unshaken" and their units compact as they fell back behind "stiff rear guard action."

Fighting was unceasing on their rear and flanks as overwhelming German forces thrust hard to cut off retreat and slice them into scattered commands, easy to overcome.

From their King came the word of encouragement echoed by the entire nation.

"The hearts of everyone of us at home are with you and your magnificent troops in this hour of peril," King George VI said in a message to the commander in chief of Britain's Expeditionary Force.

"All your countrymen have been following with pride and admiration the courageous resistance of the British Expeditionary Force during the continuous days of fighting of the last fortnight.

"Placed by circumstances outside their control in a position of extreme difficulty, they are displaying a gallantry that has never been surpassed in the annals of the British army."

Reply To King's Message

The British commander in chief replied as follows to the King's message:

"The commander in chief with humble duty begs leave on behalf of all ranks of the British Expeditionary Forces to thank your Majesty for your message.

"May I assure your Majesty that the army is doing all in its power to live up to its proud tradition and is immensely encouraged at this critical moment by the words of your Majesty's telegram."

Gort's Decision Fans Hope

Lord Gort's decision to gather his troops in the shadow of disaster and hurl them back to the Channel lent hope to Britons that some of their oldest and finest regiments would be saved from annihilation.

No British source would estimate the extent of the loss in men and materials if the move failed. It was conceded that large amounts of war supplies would have to be abandoned. These would be destroyed to keep them from German hands.

Hope persisted that a vigorous French counter-thrust below the Somme might divert large German forces from Flanders.

It was learned that of 1,500,000 men under arms in England, 500,000 are ready for action in France to support such a move. Besides these there are nearly 500,000 volunteers in defense forces against parachuters—if they come.

Besides these, veterans from the constabulary and police pension groups have been called back to their beats.

Elated Over Capture Of Narvik

Encouragement was taken from the news of the British capture of Narvik.

That gave Britain a sea and air base and strengthened her only foothold on the Norwegian coast since withdrawal early in May from central Norwegian ports under heavy German pressure.

Near Narvik the British also claimed the little towns of Fageness and Forsneset.

A British news agency dispatch from Stockholm told of the sinking of seven German transports in Norwegian waters in three days by British naval units.

Two Hospital Ships Sunk

British feeling against Germany grew as military circles reported German bombers had sunk two hospital ships crossing the English Channel within the last few days. Loss of life was described as heavy.

B. E. F. Fights Coastward.

LONDON, May 29 (A. P.)—Undaunted by nineteen days of steady action, the British Expeditionary Force began today a movement from Flanders toward the English Channel in a desperate attempt to get through the jaws of a closing German trap.

Military men said that the British Expeditionary Force—aided by French units fighting with it—had started pushing towards the channel. They refused to tell the position of the British troops, whose fight was made more perilous by the Belgian capitulation which opened the way to a swift Nazi attack on Dunkirk.

The port was still in Allied hands as the British, undergoing heavy shelling, bombing and machine gunning but still fighting as a unit, dropped back, information in London said.

The British Army's attitude, these men said, is one of "furious rage against the Germans, caused not by the pounding they have received, but by the incredibly revolting scenes in which the German Air Force and tanks had deliberately slaughtered helpless refugee women and children to spread panic among the civilian population."

'Can Never Forget.'

"These are things," they continue, "the army can never forget, and they will insure the Germans the warmest welcome they have draw the army from the positions it now occupies as a result of the surrender of King Leopold and his Belgian Army.

How this withdrawal could be effected—whether it would be a break-through to join the French armies or a removal by sea such as the British Navy carried out for smaller forces at Boulogne—was not immediately apparent.

Equipment Sure to Be Lost.

Military commentators agreed that a large amount of equipment was bound to fall into the hands of the Germans no matter which course was followed, since saving the soldiers' lives would be the first consideration.

A gloomy nation was told that the B. E. F. was in peril as grave as that of the British who met disaster at Gallipoli in the world war, when the Allies were routed by the Turks in a catastrophic failure to establish a line of communication into the Black Sea.

The press was blunt in its treatment of the precarious situation. The News Chronicle's military correspondent said:

"It is time to face up to the facts, to await the worst. With the surrender of the Belgian Army the B. E. F. would seem to be cut off. Escape by sea is the slenderest of hopes. A break through to the south is a possibility equally remote.

Calls Situation a Disaster.

"Within the steel ring of the Reichswehr are as many men as we lost in the battle of the Somme and as much war material as we abandoned to the Germans in March, 1918.

"The magnitude and gravity of this disaster needs no elaboration. . . ."

[In the first battle of the Somme, in the summer of 1916, the British lost 500,000 officers and men. In the second, in the spring of 1918, they lost 200,000.]

The London Times called the position of the B. E. F. precarious and added: "There will no doubt be more bad news to face and much more hardship and danger for all to pass through before the tide begins to turn. But about the unalterable resolution of both peoples there is happily no doubt whatever."

The announ[ce]ment that Britain would ste[p] up tank production came as [se]veral military observers [s]aid that the desperate situation of the BEF and French troops in the shrinking Flanders pocket could be relieved only by mechanized forces equal to Germany's, as the spearhead of a southward thrust—or by escape by sea.

These sources said the Allies there face one of the greatest disasters in history unless Adolf Hitler's armored legions can be met with mechanized divisions at equal firing power and impervious to German anti-tank guns, and unless Nazi bombing of troop concentrations can be met by equally heavy bombing.

Nazi Germany, applying the lessons imperial Germany learned in the World War, has forced the Allies—equipped for siege and fortress warfare—into hurried reconstruction of their forces to meet an enemy traveling 50 miles an hour, neutral military men said.

Artillery of the Air

They viewed as the two most amazing features of the German campaign the development of mechanized cavalry to the point of equaling the effect of horse cavalry in the days before repeating rifles and machineguns, and the use of aircraft as "artillery of the air"—more effective than the best long-range guns.

The British army on the continent is extremely mobile, and so is the French army, although many of its divisions use horse-drawn transport. But this mobility, military men said, was designed to rush troops to threatened points and fails to combine mobility and fire power —The German objective.

British and French tanks were built and manned for use as reconnaissance units or shock absorbers in a general push against fortified positions.

The Germans have used aircraft for reconnaissance and invariably have gone around fortified positions instead of storming them.

Americans Go Under

London, May 29 (AP).—Americans in Britain were placed under alien restrictions for the first time since the war's outbreak tonight as the Empire was warned by radio that new Nazi equipment may enable the Germans to land an expeditionary force on England's shores.

United States nationals were included, along with all other neutrals and Allied nationals, under a curfew and activity limitation effective June 3.

Curfew in Effect.

The order provides that unless aliens have police permits they must stay at home from midnight to 6 A. M. in London and from 10:30 P. M. to 6 A. M. elsewhere in the United Kingdom. They are forbidden to own or "control" a bicycle, motor vehicle, seagoing craft or aircraft. Those without settled residences must report to police on the day the order becomes effective.

British Learn Lesson in Havoc

LONDON, May 29 (AP).—The Ministry of Information issued a statement today in lessons Britain should learn from the German invasion of Holland, where, it said, "cunning technique" succeeded, although the Dutch were fully warned.

"The invasion must have been marvelously planned," the statement said, "for troops landed in circles surrounding each of three airdromes. The timing was perfect. At Waalhaven (near Rotterdam), which had been rendered unusable by the Dutch, Parachutists landed in Dutch and even British uniforms.

"Although military accomplishments may not seem to have been great at the time, it is clear from reports that the German action caused the greatest confusion, and the moral of this effect is clear. For example, the Dutch General Staff was so bewildered that it inquired of British authorities if British troops were being landed.

"When the Dutch wanted to ask for Belgian mechanized artillery to help them recapture a vital bridge, their message had to be relayed through London, so great was the dislocation. Moreover, British aircraft were fired upon by Dutch guns. This gives some indication of the havoc that can follow parachute action behind the lines."

R. A. F. Adopts Low-Diving Tactics

With the British Air Force in France, May 29 (AP)—Low-diving British bombers are hitting hard and often to ease the fierce German pressure on Allied troops fighting a way out of Flanders. German transport columns, tanks and armored convoy trucks were attacked repeatedly today with bombs and machine-gun fire by planes which plunged as low as 500 feet over their targets.

Here in Dublin there was no fuss or hysteria but volunteers—plus regulars—streamed into service.

The newspapers which, like the Dail, ordinarily are divided in opinion, unanimously agreed that while two Irishmen may fight each other they will unite against another foe.

Rifles As Shillelaghs

"Eire, if invaded," said one high-ranking officer in a statement that seemed to express the general view, "will fight to the last bullet, then use rifles as clubs.

"We left the bullet holes of 1922 in this O'Connell street building as a constant reminder to our people that our liberty was dearly bought.

"It will be more dearly surrendered."

Officials insisted there would be no conscription, for conscription is anathema to Eire. Ireland in the World War had 10,000 men killed and 30,000 wounded.

The newly formed National Defense Committee will be in effect a supreme war commission. Although it will have no executive powers as such, it will have the power of recommendation and the responsibility for all major policy arising out of the country's present dangerous condition.

Cosgrave And De Valera

The acceptance by William T. Cosgrave, leader of the Fine Gael opposition, of Premier Eamon de Valera's solemn "unity call," had made this solid front possible.

Eire has maintained her neutrality for nine months during which several small nations of Europe have become battlefields.

EIRE REACHES WAR FOOTING AND NEW UNITY

Dail Severs Party Lines For First Time Since World War Days

[By the Associated Press]

Dublin, May 29—Reservists called back to military service today placed Ireland's standing army on a war footing while political factions found a new unity and the Dail cast away party lines for the first time since the World War.

Britain to Speed Up Production of Tanks

Will Redesian Them to Meet Heavy Nazi Machines

LONDON, May 29 (AP).—Minister of Supply Morrison announced in Commons today that he had appointed a board headed by Sir Alexander Roger to increase Britain's production of tanks.

One of the principal tasks of the board will be to consider the necessity of redesigning Britain's tanks to meet the heavily armored German tanks.

Desperate BEF Plight

Sir Alexander, chairman of British Insulated Cables Ltd., was director of the trench warfare supply department in 1915-17.

Eire Calls Up Army Reserves

Whole Nation Placed on War Basis—Defense Committee Summoned.

DUBLIN, May 29 (AP).—Eire called up army reserves today and moved swiftly to put her forces on a war footing in the face of the grave situation confronting her neighbor, Great Britain.

At the same time volunteers began applying for service at the recruiting stations, but outwardly Dublin went on about its business pretty much as usual.

Clerks, shopkeepers, laborers and others in the Reserve Corps reported at the Collins Barracks and other designated depots for instructions.

Volunteers to the Defense Corps—"the eyes and ears of national defense"—were augmented by hundreds of civilians eager to serve Eire.

The customary Wednesday half holiday was observed, however, and in spite of general anxiety there was no apparent decrease in the size of the crowds at neighboring pleasure resorts and golf courses.

Meanwhile the newly formed national defense committee of representatives of the Government and Opposition parties in Parliament prepared to meet late today in its first session—a session out of which the first of several emergency measures were expected to be proclaimed.

The acceptance of Premier Eamon De Valera's call for unity by William T. Cosgrave, the leader of the Fine Gael (Opposition) party, and by the Labor Opposition resulted in the creation of the council representating all factions.

Mr. De Valera announced that the army would be brought up to full strength immediately, along with the merging of governmental facilities, to the end that the liberty for which Ireland had fought so long might not be taken away by any foreign nation.

The country, which has maintained a status of neutrality in the European war, heard Mr. De Valera say over the last week end that Ireland really is in the war zone and should plan her defenses accordingly.

One Holy Cause.

"We must all be brothers in one holy cause: Let there not be found one treacherous hand giving them away," he said in his plea that the nation "be united as one man behind the Government to resist aggression from whatever quarter it may come."

The National Defense Council was formed last night of three Government members, three from the Fine Gael party and two from the Labor party.

The Government members are: Frank Aiken, Minister of Co-ordination and Defensive Measures; Oscar Traynor, Minister for Defense, and Gerald Boland, Minister for Justice. The Fine Gael members are: James Dillon, deputy leader; Gen. Richard Mulcahy, and Dr. T. F. O'Higgins. The Labor representatives are: W. Norton and W. Davin.

The Council will meet as often as may seem necessary and will in effect be a Supreme War Commission, although it will have no executive powers. It will have power of recommendation, however, and will be responsible for major defense policy.

The coast watching service force has been increased in the east and west, and at least one O'Connell street department store arranged to mount anti-aircraft machine guns on its roof.

Stringent police regulations govern the movement of aliens, and Irish citizens who reside outside of Dublin.

Officials insist that there will be no conscription.

Conscription is anathema to Eire, for through conscription in the last war Ireland lost some 10,000 killed and 30,000 wounded fighting for Britain.

Fighting Amid Swarms Of Terrified Refugees Described By Briton

London, May 29 (AP)—A story of "epic fighting" in an area "literally swarming" with terrified refugees, was related tonight by a senior officer of the British army who told the British people in a broadcast that "your B. E. F. is virtually encircled."

The British, though isolated through "no fault of their own" have "put up and are putting up a show of which the whole empire must be proud," he declared.

He said he left a bomb-shattered harbor Monday night in the fierce glare of blazing oil tanks after a fortnight as commander of a detachment detailed to check the German encirclement of the B. E. F. in northern France and Belgium.

"I can only marvel at the tough and gallant efficiency with which my dead-tired troops carried out their role," he added.

The confused scenes of refugees, he said, would haunt him forever.

LONDON, May 29 (A. P.).—The German-controlled Dutch radio heard in London today announced that Arthur Seyss-Inquart, former Austrian Nazi leader, assumed supreme authority over civil government in the conquered Netherlands at noon.

A proclamation by Seyss-Inquart said that Dutch law would remain in force as far as possible and that he would consult Dutch authorities, whom he requested to continue their duties.

He declared, however, that everything, including Dutch economic interests must be subordinated to "the very struggle of the German people, fighting for their very existence."

LONDON, May 29 (A. P.).—Harold Nicholson, parliamentary secretary of the Ministry of Information, told the British Empire in a broadcast today that the Germans "by employment of methods which did not exist in previous wars may be able to land in Great Britain some thousands of their troops."

"But do not imagine," he added, "that a virile and unbending race of 45,000,000 people will for long allow some thousands of enemy troops to remain upon our shores, or that these forces could maintain themselves for long against the overwhelming power of our fleet. We conquered them once and we shall conquer them again."

LONDON, May 29 (AP).—The military correspondent of Reuters (British news agency) wrote today that the Belgian Army, originally 800,000 strong, had only 300,000 effectives when it surrendered—evidence of its stubborn fight against German assaults.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, who, as a special British liaison officer, was with King Leopold until late Monday night, issued a statement today hinting that there were certain important facts not yet generally known attending the Belgian monarch's sudden capitulation to the Germans. While most of the British press was bitterly denouncing Leopold, Sir Roger issued a statement requesting that judgment be "suspended on a very gallant soldier until all the facts are known."

Allies Take Narvik After 50 Days

London, May 29—A joint Admiralty-War Office communique announced today that Narvik, far northern Norwegian ore port, had been captured from the Germans.

"Information has been received this morning that Narvik was captured last night by Allied forces and Fagernes and Forsneset also are in our hands," the communique said.

Narvik, long the goal of Allied pressure by land and sea, had been in German hands virtually since the April 9 opening of the German invasion of Norway.

Garrison Once Numbered 3,000

The garrison at one time was said to have numbered 3,000, but in recent days the German high command has told of reinforcing it with mountain chasseurs and other troops dropped by parachute.

The strength of the Allied force—Norwegians, British and French—has not been stated.

The region around Narvik remained as the only Allied foothold in Norway following the withdrawal from Namsos and Andalsnes about the first of May.

The capture of Narvik gives the Allies a sea and air base on the Norwegian coast, above the Arctic circle, which compares in proximity to Norway's important German-held cities with the latter's nearness to the British Isles.

For example, Narvik is about 400 miles from Trondheim, which, in turn, is approximately the same distance from the nearest of the British Isles. Germany, however, holds other bases in the rich, industrial southern lobe of Norway, which are closer than Trondheim to the British Isles.

The Swedish news agency said today 180 British officers and soldiers—cut off several weeks ago by the German advance north from Oslo—crossed into Sweden after fighting their way seventy-five miles to the frontier. The soldiers, many suffering from exposure, were taken to hospitals and internment camps.

Continuous R. A. F. Attack Reported

Seven Transports Reported Sunk

The British naval force has sunk seven German transports in the last three days in waters near Narvik, according to a dispatch from Stockholm by the Exchange Telegraph Company, British news agency.

(The German high command acknowledged that Allied forces had entered Narvik.

(But the Germans said that their air force had scored a "serious hit" on a "large battleship" off Narvik, putting its guns out of action and enveloping the craft in smoke, and heavily damaged three cruisers, a destroyer and a freighter. Troop landings at Ankanes, Norway, also were bombed.)

Siege Was Lengthy.

Narvik, long the goal of Allied pressure by land and sea, had been in German hands virtually since the start on April 9 of the German invasion of Norway.

The garrison at one time was said to have numbered 3,000, but in recent days the German High Command has told of re-enforcing it with mountain chasseurs and other troops dropped by parachute.

The strength of the Allied force—Norwegians, British and French—has not been stated.

Nazis Admit Allies Are In.

BERLIN, May 29 (A. P.).—The German High Command announced today that the British, with the aid of numerous warships, had succeeded in entering Narvik, Norway, from the north.

A communique said that the German air force attacked and seriously damaged a British battleship at Narvik with a shot amidships. The ship stopped firing, the communique said, after it was enveloped in smoke.

The high command also said that three cruisers, a destroyer and a freighter had been heavily hit by bombs.

The Germans added that they had bombed troops landing at Ankanes.

Tell of Nazi Retreat.

STOCKHOLM, May 29 (A. P.).—Dispatches received here in regard to the fighting around Narvik said that Allied troops occupied a part of the ruined town yesterday after a fierce attack. The Germans were said to be retreating along the railway to Sweden, destroying everything of military value.

OLD BELGIAN PARLIAMENT TO MEET IN PARIS

Will Seal King's Fate With What Power It Still Wields

Leopold Returned By Germans To Palace At Brussels

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 29—The refugee Belgian Parliament will meet in Paris Friday to seal the fate of King Leopold III with what power it wields.

The quick action of the Belgian Cabinet in "disowning" him was informally approved yesterday by a Parliament meeting in a Paris dance hall.

The Friday assembly in Paris Town Hall will consider new measures for the government of the fugitive peoples of Belgium. A new army will be recruited among the 2,000,000 Belgians already in France as refugees.

Returned To Brussels

Leopold has been returned to Brussels palace by the Germans, according to word here but unconfirmed elsewhere.

The newspaper Paris Soir said the three royal children, motherless since the lovely Queen Astrid was injured fatally in a 1935 automobile accident, have been taken to Lisbon, Portugal, for the duration of the war; but the Belgian legation in Lisbon denied they were there or coming there. The Lisbon legation described the King as a German prisoner.

Whole Story Not Told

Although the man in the street in France and England appeared bitter over Leopold's surrender, there was some indication in British high places that the whole story has not yet been told.

Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, special British liaison officer to the Belgian King, emphatically asked for a stay of judgment.

"Some very hard things have been said in this country and France," Sir Roger remarked in London, "about the action of King Leopold. I trust judgment will be suspended on a very gallant soldier until all the facts are known."

All Gold Removed

The Paris press said all of Belgium's gold had been removed before the invasion and will be at the disposal of the new Government.

The status of foreign diplomats in Brussels is uncertain. They are in the position of being accredited to a court which has been repudiated.

At least four of Belgium's Ministers knew last Friday that King Leopold intended to capitulate, Belgian spokesmen said. So long did the Ministers entreat the King to reconsider that they barely escaped capture, according to this story.

The King, they said, declared his soldiers were too tired to counter-attack and that he had decided to make peace to preserve "a relative independence."

Shortly after their departure, Belgian officials said, the Ministers received an urgent request from Leopold that a paper be sent him which would permit him to change the Ministry and revoke the Government. They refused.

Belgian Legation Labels King German Prisoner

Lisbon, Portugal, May 29 (AP)—The Belgian legation tonight denied French reports that the children of King Leopold were here or were coming to Portugal.

The legation also issued a statement describing the King as "a German prisoner." It assailed French Premier Paul Raynaud for "insulting" the sovereign in his caustic speech early Tuesday in which Raynaud told of the King's capitulation and that of his army.

"Surrender is no dishonor when all the means to carry on the fight are exhausted," the statement said.

Hero Defends King.

LONDON, May 29 (A. P.).—Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes, who as a special British liaison officer was with King Leopold until late on Monday night, issued a statement today hinting that there were certain important facts not yet generally known about the Belgian monarch's sudden capitulation to the Germans, and requesting that judgment be "suspended on a very gallant soldier until all the facts are known."

Sir Roger, a world war navy hero who wanted to lead an attack last month on the Germans holding Trondheim, Norway, was appointed early this month as Naval Attache at Brussels, for special liaison work with King Leopold, after criticizing the Chamberlain Government for its lack of initiative in the Norwegian campaign.

His statement today said:

"Some very hard things have been said in this country and France about the action taken by King Leopold in bringing about the cessation of hostilities in the part of Belgium occupied by his troops. I trust judgment will be suspended on a very gallant soldier until all the facts are known."

Denounced as Traitor.

The British press, however, pulled no punches today in denouncing the young Belgian monarch as a traitor for capitulating against the advice of his Government.

The man in the street and the press accused Leopold of having laid a trap for the Allied forces.

The bitterest denunciation came from the tabloid Daily Mirror, which cartooned Leopold as a crowned serpent with the caption: "Gentlemen, the King!" and described him in an editorial as the "King of the Fifth Column" and as a "skunk."

The London Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, the Minister for Aircraft Production, commented: "The cost in British and French lives of this betrayal will be immense." The paper told its 2,500,000 readers, however, that "we must keep all our anger for our one enemy—Hitler."

The London Daily Mail reprinted the famous Punch drawing of 1914 which showed his father, King Albert, replying "not my soul" to the Kaiser's statement that he had lost everything. Under the reprint the Mail's own cartoonist drew Leopold and Hitler, posed as in the 1914 cartoon, but showing Leopold handing over his sword to a smiling Fuehrer.

Belgian Congo Called Unaffected.

Meanwhile it was said here that Leopold's surrender failed to affect the status of the Belgian Congo, Belgian colonial possession in Africa, since the Belgian Government had repudiated the King and declared its intention of pursuing the war.

The Congo is rich in rubber, copper, cotton and other products. It was said to remain Belgian just as the Dutch East Indies remained Dutch after the German occupation of the Netherlands.

A clarifying statement by the British Government, however, is being sought in the House of Commons by Sir Gifford Fox, Conservative. He has presented a written question for answer by Prime Minister Churchill on how the Belgian Congo is now to be regarded and, moreover, what effect Leopold's action will have on Belgian refugees here.

King Returns to Palace

PARIS, May 29 (AP).—A dispatch from the Belgian frontier today reported that King Leopold had been returned to his palace at Brussels by the German Army. A member of Premier Pierlot's staff reported at the same time that Queen Elizabeth, Leopold's mother, was in the Bruges area, where Belgian headquarters was established throughout the campaign which collapsed yesterday.

Premier Pierlot estimated today that between 400,000 and 500,000 Belgian soldiers surrendered under the King's order, and Belgians estimated that 10,000 of their soldiers were killed in the first eight days.

Of all the cities bombed in Belgium, Namur suffered the worst damage, it was said here. Only about one-tenth of the city was believed to be standing. There was no word from Antwerp, but Brussels, Bruges and Liege were reported comparatively undamaged. Ostend was heavily bombed.

Nazis Keep Whereabouts Secret.

BERLIN, May 29 (A. P.).—The whereabouts of King Leopold of the Belgians was kept a secret, authorized German spokesmen said today. In view of the bitter attacks made upon him by Allied leaders, it was declared conceivable that the Allies might try to bomb his castle if it were known where he is staying.

The strictures of the French Premier, Paul Reynaud, and the Belgian Premier, Hubert Pierlot, were cited as justification for this secrecy.

Earlier today official spokesmen had asserted that Leopold was on his way to "a well-known Belgian castle."

Nazis Cite Andalsnes.

The choice of replying to his critics lies with King Leopold himself it was declared, but authorized German spokesmen commented:

"He'll probably decide that the people throughout the world appreciate his viewpoint, and he can therefore ignore the carping critics who snipe at him from safe places like London and Paris while he and half a million Belgian soldiers stood bravely in the thick of battle."

Foreign correspondents pointed out that Leopold's personal honor and integrity were involved in Premier Reynaud's charge that the King had failed to notify the Allies of his intended capitulation.

After seeing how the English beat it out of Andalsnes without informing the Norwegians," the same spokesmen replied, "Leopold had every reason to suspect that they would desert him finally and try to reach the channel for a hasty return to England while the French had but one thought—to break through and get back to Paris."

Authoritative commentators said that Leopold had lost patience with the inability of the French and British general staffs to support the Belgian Army effectively, and decided to capitulate in the face of a hopeless situation.

The Allied Generalissimo, Maxime Weygand, was stated to have visited the King in an effort to dissuade him from yielding to the Germans, only to fail after a stormy session. Later Gen. Weygand tried unsuccessfully to reach Leopold by wireless telephone, the Germans said.

They explained that representatives of the King approached the German lines at 11 P. M. on Monday under a flag of truce to ask an armistice and were told that only an unconditional surrender would be acceptable. Leopold agreed, and five hours later the Belgian surrender became official, the Germans said.

PARIS, May 29 (A. P.).—The newspaper Paris Soir reported today that the Belgian royal children had arrived at Lisbon, where they are expected to remain for the rest of the war.

The children, Princess Josephine Charlotte, 12 years old; Crown Prince Baudouin, 9, and Prince Albert, 7, had been sent to a refuge in France while their father remained with the Belgian Army.

France Orders Death of Nazi Baroness as Spy

Court Condemns Leader of Ring in Absentia; Paris Accomplice Also Doomed

PARIS, May 29 (AP).—The Baroness von Einem was sentenced to death in absentia tonight by a military tribunal for espionage. She was accused of being the brains of a Nazi espionage ring which operated in France before the war.

Jean Gaston Amourelle, a Senate stenographer, one of her accomplices, who appeared before the tribunal, also was sentenced to death. Two others received prison sentences and fines.

Leo Hirsch, another fugitive, was sentenced to ten years in prison, fined 20,000 francs (about $400) and banished from France for twenty years. Arnold Perreux, alias Aloys Aubin, Paris journalist, was sentenced to five years in prison, 20,000 francs and penalized by of his rights of citizenship for twe. years.

The spy ring also was ordered to pay to the state all the money it was alleged to have received in pre-war operations. The Baroness was directed to hand over 2,357,000 francs (about $47,140), Aubin 220,000 francs (about $4,400) and Hirsch 323,000 francs (about $6,460). Amourelle, who was accused only of attempting to enter the service of a foreign power, was not called upon to turn over any funds.

The defendants received twenty-four hours to enter appeals. Their trials were held behind closed doors.

The Baroness is reported to have returned to Germany.

A French press dispatch from the front today said:

"Magnificent American bombers, in which we have placed so much hope, have already entered the infernal battle of the north. They have achieved resounding victories over the German lines. All so far have returned to their bases safely."

Italy's Objectives: 'Egypt, Suez Canal'

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 29—Italy lingered tonight on the brink of war which many foreign and Italian observers expect Italy to start, possibly within the next few days, but in North Africa and the Mediterranean rather than against France directly.

This view was supported by Nicola Marchitto in a semi-monthly political review entitled "The Conquest of Empire."

He asserted Italy's "offensive objectives" would be actions by the navy and warplanes in the Mediterranean, land war in Africa to conquer the Suez Canal and eventually in the Balkans to protect Italian interests.

Hints Intent To Invade Egypt

Italian strategy, he wrote, is defensive on both the French and Tunisian (French North African) frontiers, but of a different character on the Egyptian border.

(In London today R. A. Butler, Foreign Under Secretary, told the House of Comons the Egyptian Government was taking "all appropriate measures for maintenance of the internal security of Egypt.")

The surrender of the Belgian Army appeared today to have ended any chance the Allies may have had to keep Italy out of the war by relaxing their blockade restrictions.

Italy's war fervor heightened with the Belgian collapse, and active Italian intervention in the conflict seemed to many to be but a question of days.

Fascist Militia Turns Out

University student members of the Fascist militia celebrated today the sixteenth anniversary of the establishment of their branch of the Blackshirt fighting organization in special military ceremonies. In Rome a battalion goose-stepped under Mussolini's balcony at the Piazza Venezia.

A group of descendants of Italian families formerly living in the French provinces of Savoy and Nice has organized a society at Turin to agitate for inclusion of those territories among Italian "aspirations."

Civilians began today to take over some of the posts left vacant by men called to arms and the Government prepared to make many other such replacements in case a civil mobilization is put into effect.

Party leaders estimated that a total of 10,000,000 non-combatants soon would be functioning in what they called a "second army."

"Paris Deceived Itself"

The newspaper La Tribuna headlined a Paris story in this fashion: "Paris deceiving itself that situation may be repaired by dropping blockade policy." This newspaper wrote scornfully of the chances of such an attempt being successful "with or without indemnity for the damage already suffered."

Italy May Start War in Africa

Fascist Writer Also Hints at Sea Fighting Before Combat in Europe.

ROME, May 29 (A. P.).—Italy lingered tonight on the brink of war which many foreign and Italian observers expect will start, possibly within the next few days, in North Africa and the Mediterranean rather than against France directly. Their ideas jibed with those expressed by Nicola Marchitto in a semi-monthly political review entitled "The Conquest of Empire."

Will Recall Pensioners.

Government offices are prepared to substitute men called to arms with pensioned employees in event of civil mobilization. The pensioned men will be rehired with preferences granted to the fathers of large families or with sons fighting.

A million and a half volunteers—women and minors enlisted through the Fascist party—are prepared to take over special jobs at a moment's notice. Many will be employed in the industries and agriculture to replace soldiers.

The party's plans for putting civilians to work cover a widespread network. Seamstresses will be put to work making uniforms. Women who know how to drive cars will be used in that line.

Party leaders estimated that a total of ten million non-combatants soon would be functioning in what they called a "second army."

With the Belgian capitulation, the minds of Italy's leaders seemed to be made up regarding their course in the war.

Nazi Motorcycle Troops Harry Allied Rear; 20,000 Sent Out to Disrupt Communications

BERLIN, May 29 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler has put soldiers mounted on motor cycles to new destructive uses behind Allied lines in carrying out his Blitzkrieg plans through Belgium and Northern France.

Dubbed "blue devils" by the French, the motorcyclists were sprung as a surprise on the Allies in the Picardy section of France, from Amiens to the Channel, north of the Somme.

Authorized quarters tonight said these motor cyclists, trained and used only for scouting duty, were estimated at 20,000 in number.

They were sent into Picardy during the encirclement operations against the Allies with orders to break all possible communication lines linking the Allied northern armies and those south of the Somme.

In addition they were to harass the enemy in every other possible way.

An authorized spokesman said the "blue devils" raced over the countryside fifty to sixty miles an hour in groups of eight and ten.

Each cycle has a sidecar. The crews are equipped with automatic pistols, carbines and light machine guns.

Without reducing speed they strafe enemy marching units and encamped troops alike.

The motorcycles throw off a thick blue exhaust which acts as a smoke screen and gives the riders their nickname.

Specialized motorcycle units follow the first squads. These latter machines are equipped with wire cutting tools, hand grenades, and other destructive devices for use against power lines, transformers and other key objects.

Among the most ingenious instruments is a rope with a cutting edge. This rope can be thrown over a wire in such a way as to cut it by see-saw motion, although the users are insulated and safe.

The squads are composed of picked men who know the terrain to which they were assigned, either as a result of World War experience or special travel as tourists.

German Soldier Places Hitler Before Prayer

Elite Guard's Organ Quotes Letter Flouting Church

BERLIN, May 29 (AP).—A German soldier at the front was quoted today as saying to a church superintendent that "no victories can be won through prayers."

He urged the churchman to stop sending religious material to the front and save the money. The incident was reported by the "Schwarze Korps," organ of the Hitler Elite Guard.

"You declare in your letter," the soldier was quoted as having said, "that you are all praying for us. It interests us more, however, who fights for us and with us.

"I am convinced that they are praying also in England and in France. Who shall be helped? Perhaps he who prays most? No, only one can win and that will be us, because we have the strongest and greatest belief in our Fuehrer, who, contrary to the Church, has smelted the German people into a solid block."

With them went the two-square-mile neutral district of Moresnet, together with a small portion of Prussian Moresnet. Altogether the territory amounts to 384 square miles, populated by 64,000 persons, five-sixths of whom are German.

ARGENTINE SHIP SUNK BY NAZIS IN U-BOAT RAID

First Loss Of Craft Flying Flag Of An American Republic

[By the Associated Press]

Vigo, Spain, May 29—German submarines, lurking off the Spanish coast, accounted for three ships yesterday and today, sinking the 3,425-ton Argentine freighter Uruguay and a French merchantman and setting afire a British tanker.

A Spanish fishing boat brought to La Coruna thirteen survivors of the Uruguay's crew of twenty-eight. The ship was torpedoed yesterday.

The Uruguay left Buenos Aires April 26 en route to Antwerp with a cargo of grain.

Renewing Offensive

Today the U-boats, suddenly renewing their offensive against Allied shipping, sank the French ship Marie Jose, 5,000 tons, with a cluster of torpedoes, and shelled and fired the British tanker, Telena, 7,400 tons, with the probable loss of twenty-five members of their crews of eight-seven.

The Telena's crew dumped the oil load and abandoned the burning vessel. Tonight fishermen were towing her to port. The attacks were so sudden the crew had not time to man the guns.

Fishermen brought twenty-two injured, ten dead and forty uninjured to port.

Fishermen said they thought they saw two other submarines standing off at a distance.

It was the first submarine raiding in Atlantic shipping lanes since the April 9 invasion of Denmark and Norway.

First American Loss

The Uruguay was the first ship flying the flag of an American republic to be sunk in the present warfare.

Owners of the Uruguay said the ship was being convoyed by an Allied fleet three days ago.

The company said the freighter was stopped by a U-boat at 9 P. M. yesterday, the crew removed and then the ship torpedoed.

Kremlin Turns Down Cripps As British Trade Emissary

Ambassador Or Nothing, Moscow Demands — "Appeasement" Appointment By Churchill Expected

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, May 29 —The Soviet Government today curtly turned down as "not acceptable" the mission of Sir Stafford Cripps, en route to Moscow as a special British trade envoy.

In a stinging rebuff to the British, the Kremlin informed London it could not accept Sir Stafford, a Left Wing Laborite member of the British Parliament, or any other "special" envoy on such a mission.

Furthermore, it informed Britain that if she really desired to conduct trade negotiations she should do so through Sir William Seeds, the British Ambassador to Moscow, or anyone who might be appointed in his place.

Russia's Attitude Stated

Russia's attitude was set forth tonight in the following statement by Tass:

"In view of a number of incorrect and contradicting reports which have appeared in the British press regarding the Cripps journey to Moscow, Tass has been authorized to state the following:

"In reply to a proposal of the British Government regarding the sending of Cripps to Moscow as a special extraordinary delegate of the British Government, Peoples Commissar of Foreign Affairs Molotoff instructed Maisky (Soviet Ambassador to London) that the Government of the U. S. S. R. cannot receive either Cripps or anyone else in the capacity of special or extraordinary delegate.

Through Envoy Or Not At All

"If the British Government really desires to conduct trade negotiations and not merely confine itself to talk about some non-existent turn in relations between Britain and the U. S. S. R., it could do so through its Ambassador to Moscow, Seeds, or through another person holding the post of Ambassador in Moscow if Seeds is going to be replaced by another person."

Sir Stafford, whose socialist views were believed in London to weigh in favor of further improving relations of the two powers and ultimately to pave the way for a trade agreement, was a visitor to Moscow earlier this year.

He came by the "back door" on a flight from Chungking, China, and was reported to have seen Joseph Stalin.

Rebuffed On Nazi Trade

Britain has sought to limit Russian trade with Germany in seeking a trade agreement with Moscow, but was rebuffed on this score May 21 when Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff told her:

"Russia cannot subordinate the trade policy of the U. S. S. R. to the war aims of any foreign state. . . . Being a sovereign state, the Soviet Union will carry on its foreign trade both with belligerents and neutrals on the basis of complete equality of parties and reciprocity of obligations.

30.24-2599

"The Soviet Government notes that the very fact that the British Government has raised for discussion questions coming solely under the competence of the Soviet Government does not testify to the desire of the British Government to conduct trade negotiations with the U. S. S. R."

Russian Ship Incident

Russia gave assurances then, however, that proposed imports from Britain were intended for its own requirements and not for reexport, presumably to Germany.

At the same time British explanations concerning the detention of two Soviet freighters, seized by the British several weeks ago and taken to Far Eastern ports, were termed "not convincing."

Russia said she was holding Britain responsible for the two vessels, the Selenga and the Mayakovsky, even though they had been turned over to French jurisdiction.

Expected To Name Cripps Ambassador To Moscow

London, May 29 (AP)—Winston Churchill, Britain's new Prime Minister, was reported tonight to be seeking to "appease" Soviet Russia by naming Sir Stafford Cripps, Left Wing British Laborite, as Ambassador to Moscow.

Informed quarters said Sir Stafford, already on his way to Moscow as a special envoy to conclude long-delayed trade negotiations with the Soviet, probably would be given full ambassadorial rank in order to meet a condition of the Soviet for better relations.

Would Replace Seeds

He would replace Sir William Seeds, the Conservative Ambassador appointed by Neville Chamberlain, who departed Moscow "on leave" several months ago after French-British efforts to win Moscow to a military alliance had failed.

R. A. Butler, under-secretary for Foreign Affairs, said today that Cripps was going as a special envoy.

Apparently this status failed to satisfy the Soviet, however, for a Moscow statement issued through Tass, said Cripps was not satisfactory as a special envoy and that England wanted to negotiate a trade treaty she could do so through Sir William or an Ambassador named to take his place.

Speedy Appointment Forecast

Soon after, informed quarters said Cripps probably would be named Ambassador before he reaches Moscow.

The British press is displaying considerable interest in the question whether German advances in the west might not cause Russia to grow cold toward her new-found friend, Adolf Hitler, whose interest in eastern Europe, rivalling Russia's, is well-known.

May Be Compromise Ambassador

LONDON, May 29 (AP).—Britain is likely to name Sir Stafford Cripps as Ambassador to Moscow, yielding to a Soviet condition for betterment of British-Russian relations, a usually well informed source said tonight.

The fact that Cripps's exact status has not yet been announced, coupled with the demand by Premier Molotov, for the appointment of an ambassador, it was said, pointed to an ambassadorial post for him. The friendly attitude of the government of Prime Minister Winston Churchill toward Russia also was said to argue for this step, by which Cripps would succeed Ambassador Seeds at Moscow. Seeds, appointed by former Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, came home after the failure of Britain and France to negotiate a military alliance in Moscow.

The British press is stressing that Russia may take a new interest in western European affairs because of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's advances in Belgium and northern France and because of Hitler's known views with regard to the need of German "colonies" in eastern Europe, a sphere which might conflict later on with Russia's.

LITHUANIA WARNED ON RED ARMY CASES

Soviet Says That Soldiers Have Been Kidnapped In Search for Military Information

'ACTION' IS THREATENED

Garrison Disappearances Are Said to Have Taken Place With Official Sanction

MOSCOW, May 29 (AP)—Premier-Foreign Minister Vyacheslaff Molotoff was reported today to have warned Lithuania that the Soviet Government would take action unless the alleged kidnapping of Soviet soldiers stationed on Lithuanian soil was stopped.

The announcement, made by government radio, indicated that the Lithuanian authorities were suspected of attempting to protect the accused abductors.

The Soviet troops are on Lithuanian sol under treaty provisions. Lithuania was under Russian rule until the World War. Russia gained the right to establish several garrisons in Lithuania and in return ceded Vilna and a surrounding area, taken from Poland, to the Kaunas regime last Oct. 10 through a Soviet-Lithuanian mutual assistance pact.

Communiqué Circulated

The following communiqué by the Commissariat for Foreign Affairs was circulated by the Tass news agency today:

"Lately there have occurred a number of cases of disappearance of military men from Soviet garrisons stationed on the territory of the Lithuanian Republic under the Soviet-Lithuanian mutual assistance pact.

"Information at the disposal of the People's Commissariat of Foreign Affairs shows that these 'disappearances' were organized by certain persons enjoying the protection of Lithuanian Government organs.

"For instance, Shmavgonets, a Red Army man and car driver of a tank brigade, disappeared from his unit on May 18 and returned May 26. Shmavgonets reported to his commander that on May 18 he was captured and taken to a house where he was flung into a cellar and kept for several days.

Search for Information

"For several days Shmavgonets did not receive either food or water. Resorting to violence and threatening to shoot him, the kidnappers tried to obtain information on the condition of the tank brigade and its armament.

"On the night of May 25 Shmavgonets was blindfolded, taken out of town and released.

"Pisserev, Red Army man and car driver with the same brigade, disappeared May 24 and returned May 27. He reported that the evening of May 24 while he was in a motor car park situated in the same courtyard with the barracks of a Lithuanian infantry regiment six persons attacked him.

"They gagged him, put a sack over his head, took him in an unknown direction and into a cellar where he remained without food and water for three days.

Interest in Transfer

"Using violence, the kidnappers questioned him about the condition of the tank brigade, showing particular interest in the question where it was to be transferred.

"Pissarev managed to escape through a gutter shaft.

"Both Red Army men looked extremely worn out and exhausted, which testified to the great sufferings they had undergone.

"Another case occurred with Junior Commander Butayev, who disappeared from his unit in February this year. In reply to a demand by the Soviet command to find Butayev, Lithuanian authorities at Vilno stated that May 12, when an attempt was made to detain Butayev, he committed suicide.

"Lithuanian authorities stated that death followed as a result of a shot in the mouth, whereas examination of the body revealed a wound in the region of the heart.

"Many other statements of Lithuanian officials also proved contradictory. Two more cases of the disappearance of Soviet military men occurred in Lithuania May 25."

Russia and Sweden Agree

MOSCOW, May 29 (AP).—Authoritative Swedish sources disclosed today that Russian and Swedish representatives discussing a trade agreement have agreed in principle, although details remain to be worked out. Russia was pictured as wanting railroad materials and steel, while Sweden is interested in petroleum products, grain and manganese.

Moscow Doubts Allied Surprise

MOSCOW, May 29 (AP).—An article in the army newspaper "Red Star" said today that British and French leaders knew for days that Belgium would be forced to capitulate, but now were trying to heap full responsibility on King Leopold.

Discussing the situation of the French general staff, the newspaper said that "obviously the confusion before the sudden blow of the enemy was not incidental, but deep reasons of a political character defined the inefficiency of the French command and the removal of Gamelin."

Germans Suspend Oslo Newspaper

OSLO, May 29 (A. P.).—Joseph Terboven, Nazi Commissioner for the German-occupied area of Norway, has forbidden publication of the Oslo newspaper Dagbladet for eight days because the paper "in headlines and comments on the Belgian surrender misled Norway's population concerning the real happenings and the natural consequences of the capitulation."

When the newspaper reappears, it is to be censored before publication, the Commissioner decreed.

USES TACT WITH ALIENS

Bucharest Hotel Tries to Segregate Nationalities

BUCHAREST (AP)—With British and German soldiers fighting a life-and-death battle and war feelings running higher among foreigners, Bucharest's largest hotel decided that the time had come for segregation.

The first step was to pick a suave, distinguished-looking man who speaks half a dozen languages for the job of assigning hotel rooms to new guests. With great care he has been attempting to put all the Germans on one floor, all Frenchmen and Englishmen on another, all Italians on a third, with Americans scattered anywhere.

Then the headwaiter in the dining room received his orders—he must keep Germans on one side of the room; people with Allied sympathies on the other.

The system has avoided much embarrassment, except that one day recently the headwaiter took an hour off, and an assistant unwittingly escorted the British naval attaché to the German side of the room and placed him at the very next table to the head of the local Gestapo.

The two men ate their dinner in embarrassed silence, while more than a hundred other guests grinned over the mistake.

BELEM, Brazil, May 29 (A. P.).—The 6,466-ton German freighter Konigsberg headed down the river Para yesterday for the Atlantic, eighty miles away, in her second attempt to run the Allied blockade.

She carried a cargo of rubber valued at $800,000.

The freighter had been here since the outbreak of the European war, except for one false start for Germany on February 8. She returned eight days later, apparently fearing Allied warships patrolling South American waters.

Eight German vessels remain in Brazilian ports.

GRAIN PRICES PEGGED

Argentina Sets Minimum in Futures Market.

BUENOS AIRES, May 29 (A. P.).—The Argentine Government established minimum prices in the grain futures markets today, forbidding further transactions in cereals and linseed at prices below the closing quotations of two days ago.

Its decree came a week after it had fixed a maximum range of fluctuation permissible in any day's trading.

Prices declined sharply yesterday in the local and Rosario markets. This apparently motivated the drastic decree.

Toronto Anti-Bund Guard

Toronto, May 29 (AP)—Spurred by the charge of Col. C. E. Reynolds, president of the Canadian Corps Association, that 7,500 armed German Bundists in Detroit constitute a threat to Windsor, Ont., various associations here have formed the first Toronto auxiliary defense unit.

Plans for organization of a home guard for Windsor, to be made up of soldiers, police and war veterans, were formulated at Windsor last night.

Colonel Reynolds, protesting against removal of the Essex Scottish Regiment from Windsor to Camp Borden, Ont., declared the city was left without a gun, while across the river were "7,500 Bundists," "I am reliably informed," he added, "that they are all armed."

The Toronto defense unit will hold a mass meeting Sunday.

Sixty policemen searched more than twenty homes in Windsor today for subversive literature or evidence of "fifth column" activities, but no one was arrested. A small amount of German literature was seized. More than one hundred persons were questioned.

Congress Hears Japanese Seek Hawaii Rule, Eventual Seizure

Kilsoo K. Haan, of Honolulu, Tells House Immigration Committee That Two Groups Spread Propaganda Aimed at Political Coup

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP).—Kilsoo K. Haan, of Honolulu, told a Congressional committee today that the Japanese government was endeavoring to obtain political control over the Hawaiian Islands, with a view to eventual seizure of the American Territory.

Mr. Haan, an American citizen of Korean origin, testified briefly before the House Immigration Committee. His testimony was cut short by a decision of the committee to hear the remainder of it later in a closed session.

The witness declared that Japanese propaganda activity directed at political control was being carried on in the Islands by the Institute for the Education of Overseas Japanese and Central Board of Overseas Associations, both of which he declared had headquarters in Japan.

He told newsmen, after he left the committee, that he appeared to ask suspension of civil service laws as regards civilian employees of Army and Navy reservations in the Islands, so that officials might discharge persons of dual Japanese-American citizenship.

He said also to reporters that a high Japanese official had told him the naval oil storage tanks at Hawaii could be blown up "very easily." This same official, he asserted, told him of Japanese naval maneuvers in which the islands of Kauai and Hawaii were theoretically captured and Oahu was severely damaged.

Delegate Samuel King, of Hawaii, wrote Samuel Dickstein, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the committee, that Haan's views had been "discredited" for many years and that a joint Congressional committee which visited Hawaii in 1937 "took cognizance of his statements but gave them no credit whatsoever" in its report. Delegate King asked to be permitted to appear before the committee to refute Mr. Haan's testimony.

TWO WIN SILVER STARS

Wagoners Are Honored for Heroism in France

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP)—Award of the Silver Star Medal to two World War veterans for gallantry in action in France was announced today by the War Department.

They were Clarence B. Payne of Youngcane, Ga., and the late James R. Delaney of Huntington, L. I. Both were wagoners with the supply company of the 325th Infantry, Eighty-second Division of the A. E. F.

The citation said that in an attack by their regiment near St. Juvin, Oct. 14, 1918, the two voluntarily drove a water cart for more than three miles under heavy fire to enable the assault troops to obtain water and thus contributed to the success of the attack.

Delaney's mother, Mrs. Mary A. Delaney, lives at 108 Woodbury Avenue, Huntington.

BIDDLE LOSS BILL WAITS

Hull Would First Get Claims of All in Warsaw Embassy

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP)—At the suggestion of Secretary Hull, the Senate Committee on Claims has deferred action on a bill by Senator Guffey to pay $243,361 to Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Ambassador to Poland, and Mrs. Biddle, as compensation for losses they suffered in the German siege of Warsaw.

The Secretary of State said he believed it preferable "to await reports from all our officers and employes who may have suffered losses in this particular catastrophe, and, in conformity with general practice, have a single bill introduced for the relief of all of them."

Among losses claimed by the Biddles were valuable paintings and tapestries.

Processing Of Atomic Energy May Decide Outcome Of War

Speedup Extraction Of U-235, Discovered By Swede, Would Provide Most Powerful Fuel Known

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Thursday, May 30—Discovery by a Swedish scientist of a process speeding up by 11,000 times the extraction of U-235, the new miracle source of atomic energy, was announced today by the New York Times.

The speed-up process, the Times said, promised "to make it possible to utilize atomic energy as a new source of enormous power for all purposes, and may place in the hands of the nations at war, Germany as well as the Allies, the most powerful fuel ever to be discovered."

One pound of U-235, an isotope or chemical twin of ordinary uranium, is said by scientists to have the power output of 5,000,000 pounds of coal or 3,000,000 pounds of gasoline.

Reports Way To Speed Extraction

The difficulty in making it commercially available has been that under present laboratory techniques it would take 11,995,074 years for one extracting unit to produce a pound of U-235.

The Times said, however, that Prof. Wilhelm Krasny-Ergen, of the Wenner-Graens Institute, Stockholm, has reported in an article to the British scientific weekly Nature that he has found a way to speed the extraction rate 11,000 times.

"If Professor Krasny-Ergen's claim proves right, and his standing as a scientist is high," the Times said, "his method promises to open the way to the extraction of the U-235 at the rate of one pound every four days, or in even less time."

To produce one pound of U-235 in four days, the Times said, it would be necessary to build a $10,000,000 laboratory containing 100,000 extracting units.

Cool Water Is Used

The substance releases its energy—convertible in the form of steam—indefinitely when immersed in cool water. When the water is removed its action stops.

Discussing the possibility that Adolf Hitler hoped to utilize atomic power as a safeguard against the exhaustion of the Reich's fuel oil supplies, the Times said: "The discovery of the new U-235 extraction process may have an important bearing on the outcome of the war, as it . . . leaked out recently through exiled scientists that the German Government, during the last year, . . . ordered several hundred of its leading scientists to drop their other researches and to concentrate all their efforts . . . on finding a method for extracting U-235 on a practical scale."

FOUR MORE U. S. AMBULANCE DRIVERS TAKEN

Men Reported Captured With Their Machines By Germans

Had Been Declared Missing—Six More To Sail Today For Service

[By the Associated Press]

New York, May 29—The American Volunteer Ambulance Corps said today that a German radio announcement picked up in Paris reported that four American drivers and their ambulances had been captured by Nazi forces.

James Wood Johnson, president of the A. V. A. C. in New York, tentatively listed the captured men as Alfred Raymond, of Chicago; Lieut. Louis Wehrle, of Berne, Ind.; Murray Shipley, of Cincinnati, and Jan Glowacki, of Jersey City, N. J.

They had been listed previously as missing, killed or captured.

Taken Prisoner

Johnson said Col. J. V. Sparks, head of the A. V. A. C. in Paris, cabled this message:

"German radio announced four drivers our group loaned to Miss Anne Morgan taken prisoners together with their ambulances. Trying to confirm."

Johnson said the men were in a group of ten ambulance crews of the Benjamin Franklin section working in the Ardenne district.

An unofficial announcement in Berlin last night said Nazi troops had captured numerous American ambulances and equipment and were using them for their wounded.

6 More To Sail Today

Six more Americans, meanwhile, prepared to sail on the United States liner Washington for Paris and front-line service as drivers with the A. V. A. C.

They are John D. Wellborn, of Washington; James J. Gardner, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and four New York city residents—William M. Throop, Winslow Meadows, Herbert M. Witcombe and Carl Berthold.

Johnson said there was urgent need for additional men as thirty-seven ambulances were idle in Paris because of lack of drivers. Another group will sail June 15.

'Give 1,000 Planes'

[By The Associated Press]

New York, May 29—Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, former Police Commissioner and commander of the Twenty-seventh Division during the World War, today suggested that 1,000 American planes and the crews to man them be sent immediately to aid the Allies.

"The effect of this action under international law would amount to a declaration of war between the United States and Germany," he said, "but it would have greater value to our interests than to send three of four times that number of planes six months from now."

General O'Ryan said he had just received a cablegram from Capt. Howard Bird, who said the British pilots had "completely taken the wind out of the Germans."

New York, Thursday, May 30. A broadcast heard on the wave length of the Berlin radio this morning by NBC said some of the telephone wires in London, leading to the central command, have been cut in spite of all precautions against fifth-column activities.

Some of the parachutists were shot down by the Dutch, the broadcast said, but a large number were killed when they landed "too vehemently."

Italy Orders U. S. Steel Scrap

New York, May 29 (AP)—Italy has ordered 250,000 tons of steel scrap in the United States, trade sources reported today, but some dealers expressed doubt whether all of it would be shipped in view of a move in Congress to license war-metal exports. One scrap authority said he understood that President Roosevelt, under new defense measures, would have broad powers to ban metal exports when deemed in the national interest.

'From Armentieres'

[By the Associated Press]

Armentieres, famed in World War ballad as the home of that unforgettable "Mademoiselle from Armentieres," was reported by the Germans to have fallen today to their armies enveloping the Flanders "pocket."

While veterans remember the city best because of that more or less mythical maiden, serious military men recall it as the base of British World War operations which led to occupation of Lille on October 17, 1918, after Lille had been in German hands for four years. Armentieres has a population of 19,000.

Armentieres was occupied by the Germans in their 1914 drive, but abandoned in October. In their last great drive, the Germans took Armentieres again in April, 1918, but couldn't hold on to it.

Meanwhile, however, the ballad of Armentieres and the mythical mademoiselle, had been sung countless times in a multi-verse song, "Hinky-Dinky, Parley Voo."

OTTAWA, ONT., MAY 29-(AP)-FLIGHTS OF BOMBERS MADE IN AMERICA FOR GREAT BRITAIN WILL BE SPEEDED UP BY THE DECISION IN WASHINGTON TODAY TO PERMIT AMERICAN PILOTS TO FLY BELLIGERENT AIRCRAFT OVER THE THREE CANADIAN MARITIME PROVINCES.

AMERICAN-MADE BOMBERS ALREADY HAVE BEEN MAKING TRANS-ATLANTIC HOPS, IT WAS POINTED OUT UNOFFICIALLY IN AIR CIRCLES HERE, BUT CONSIDERABLE DELAY HAS BEEN EXPERIENCED BETWEEN THE FACTORIES AND THE NEWFOUNDLAND BASE.

DESPITE TODAY'S RULING BY CORDELL HULL, AMERICAN SECRETARY OF STATE, IT STILL WILL BE NECESSARY TO COMPLY WITH THE NEUTRALITY CONVENTION BY WHICH THE PLANES ARE LANDED ON THE AMERICAN SIDE OF THE BORDER AND PULLED ACROSS INTO CANADA.

WITH AMERICAN PILOTS TAKING THE PLANES TO CANADA'S EASTERN AIR BASES IT WILL BE POSSIBLE FOR CANADIAN FLIERS TO FAMILIARIZE THEMSELVES TO A GREATER EXTENT WITH THE OPERATIONS OF THE PLANES BEFORE ACTUALLY OPERATING THEM.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD CONSIDERATION IS BEING GIVEN TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF AIR FIELDS SOMEWHERE ALONG THE BORDER TO FACILITATE THE SPEED-UP.

WASHINGTON, MAY 29-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DECLARED TODAY THAT "BEYOND THE SEAS, THE WAY OF LIFE SO BRILLIANTLY OUTLINED" IN THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION "IS UNDER ATTACK BY FORCE OF ARMS UNPRECEDENTED IN HUMAN HISTORY."

HE MADE THE STATEMENT IN A LETTER WHICH HOUSE SPEAKER BANKHEAD READ DURING UNVEILING CEREMONIES AT THE CAPITOL FOR A PAINTING OF THE SIGNING OF THE CONSTITUTION. THE 20 BY 30-FOOT PAINTING WAS DONE BY HOWARD CHANDLER CHRISTY AND PURCHASED BY CONGRESS FOR $30,000.

THE TEXT OF THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER, ADDRESSED TO BANKHEAD AS CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMISSION IN CHARGE OF THE PAINTING:

"WE SHOULD ALL BE IMMEASURABLY HAPPIER COULD THIS CEREMONY TAKE PLACE IN ANOTHER KIND OF WORLD--IN A TRANQUIL WORLD WHERE MEN AND NATIONS ALIKE WERE FREE TO SEEK OUT PEACEFULLY THEIR INDIVIDUAL DESTINIES.

BUT, TRAGICALLY, THE CONDITION OF THE WORLD IS VASTLY DIFFERENT. BEYOND THE SEAS, THE WAY OF LIFE SO BRILLIANTLY OUTLINED IN THE DOCUMENT THAT WE SALUTE TODAY IS UNDER ATTACK BY FORCE OF ARMS UNPRECEDENTED IN HUMAN HISTORY.

"AND SO I BELIEVE THAT I EXPRESS THE SENTIMENTS OF EVERY THOUGHTFUL AND LOYAL MEMBER OF THIS DEMOCRACY WHEN I SAY THAT THE PRESENT OCCASION IS ONE FAR LESS FOR REJOICING THAN FOR SOBER RESOLVE: RESOLVE THAT NEITHER BY MORAL UNFITNESS NOR NEGLECT OF OUR PHYSICAL DEFENSE SHALL WE PERMIT THE LAMP OF FREEDOM TO BE EXTINGUISHED IN THIS LAND.

"IT WAS TRULY A MOMENTOUS SCENE WHOSE REPRODUCTION IS TO BE UNVEILED IN THE CAPITOL. IT MARKED THE CULMINATION OF A PRODIGIOUS, UNPARALLELED, AND AMAZINGLY SUCCESSFUL EFFORT TO EXPRESS IN A CHARTER OF GOVERNMENT THE ETERNAL SPIRIT OF A JUST AND HUMANE SOCIETY. GOD GRANT THAT THE DAY IS NOT FAR DISTANT WHEN THAT SPIRIT WILL BE FREE TO ASSERT ITSELF IN THE COUNCILS OF ALL MANKIND."

WASHINGTON,MAY 29-(AP)-SECRETARY HULL MAKING A RULING DESIGNED TO SPEED UP DELIVERY OF AMERICAN WAR PLANES TO THE ALLIES, HELD TODAY THAT UNITED STATES CITIZENS MAY TRAVEL IN BELLIGERENT AIRCRAFT OVER THE CANADIAN PROVINCES OF NEW BRUNSWICK, NOVA SCOTIA AND PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

PREVIOUSLY THIS WAS FORBIDDEN BY A NEUTRALITY REGULATION.

HULL'S ACTION MEANS THAT AMERICAN PILOTS NOW MAY FLY AMERICAN-MADE PLANES TO THE CANADIAN BORDER, WHERE TRANSFER OF TITLE TAKES PLACE AND THE PLANES ARE PUSHED ACROSS THE BORDER. THE SAME PILOTS THEN CAN RE-ENTER AND FLY THE PLANES ACROSS CANADA TO NEW BRUNSWICK, NOVA SCOTIA AND PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND IN THE EASTERN MOST PART OF CANADA.

FROM THERE THEY CAN BE LOADED ON SHIPS OR FLOWN--NOT BY AMERICAN PILOTS, HOWEVER--ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

PREVIOUSLY AN AMERICAN PILOT HAD TO BRING A PLANE DOWN WEST OF THE EASTERN PROVINCES, AND A CANADIAN PILOT HAD TO PICK IT UP FOR THE LAST LAP OF THE JOURNEY.

THE NEW REGULATION, SOME EXPERTS SAID, SHOULD FACILITATE FLYING AMERICAN BOMBERS ACROSS THE ATLANTIC IF THE BRITISH DECIDE TO USE THIS METHOD AS A REGULAR MEANS FOR FASTER DELIVERY.

LILLE, INDUSTRIAL CENTER NESTLED WITHIN A CURVE OF FRANCE'S BELGIAN FRONTIER WHICH BERLIN SAYS HAS BEEN CAPTURED, CHANGED HANDS THREE TIMES IN THE FIRST THREE MONTHS OF THE WORLD WAR.

THIS CITY, WITH A RECENT PEACETIME POPULATION OF MORE THAN 200,000, WAS NOT AT FIRST DEFENDED AGAINST THE GERMAN FORCES IN THEIR 1914 ADVANCE TOWARD PARIS AND THE INVADERS ENTERED THE CITY AT THE END OF AUGUST, THAT FATEFUL YEAR, BUT WITHDREW EARLY IN SEPTEMBER.

THE FRENCH SWEPT BACK INTO LILLE SEPT. 30, BUT A WEEK OF BOMBARDMENT BROKE THEIR DETERMINATION TO HOLD IT AND LILLE AGAIN WAS SURRENDERED TO THE GERMANS OCT. 13 TO AVERT TOTAL DESTRUCTION.

THE GERMANS HELD THE CITY FOR FOUR YEARS. IT WAS THE LARGEST OF FRANCE'S CITIES TO REMAIN IN GERMAN CONTROL FOR THAT PERIOD.

THE ALLIED OFFENSIVE OF 1918, MARKED IN SEPTEMBER BY THE CAPTURE OF COURTRAI AND MENIN, BELGIUM, JUST TO LILLE'S NORTH, RENDERED THE GERMAN POSITIONS IN LILLE UNTENABLE AND THE KAISER'S FORCES WITHDREW, LEAVING LILLE TO OCCUPATION BY BRITISH FORCES OCT. 17.

LILLE WAS FOUNDED IN THE 11TH CENTURY BY THE COUNTS OF FLANDERS AND TOOK ITS NAME FROM L'ISLE CASTLE AROUND WHICH IT GREW. THE CITY HAS FEW NOTABLE BUILDINGS EXCEPT THE CHURCH OF NOTRE DAME, DATING BACK TO 1855 AND THE TOWN HALL.

IT IS THE SEAT OF A UNIVERSITY AND A CATHOLIC SEMINARY AND A CENTER OF TEXTILE, TOBACCO, BEER, PAPER, SUGAR AND DYE INDUSTRIES, MACHINERY AND OIL WORKS.

YPRES, THE BELGIAN CITY WHICH BERLIN REPORTS HAS BEEN TAKEN BY STORM, WAS THE SCENE OF THREE TERRIFIC BUT INDECISIVE BATTLES DURING THE WORLD WAR AND HOLDS A PLACE IN MILITARY HISTORY AS THE SCENE OF THE FIRST GAS ATTACK IN MODERN WARFARE.

THE BRITISH HELD YPRES FOR THE FOUR YEARS OF THE WORLD WAR, BUT THE TOWN WAS REDUCED TO RUINS BY THE HEAVY FIGHTING IN THAT SALIENT.

THE FIRST BATTLE OF YPRES WAS FOUGHT FROM OCT. 19 TO NOV. 22, 1914, AT THE CLOSE OF GERMANY'S FAMOUS RACE TO THE SEA. OPPOSED TO A FORCE MORE THAN DOUBLE ITS OWN, THE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY TROOPS HELD THEIR GROUND BY GOOD SHOOTING AND SUPERIOR TRAINING.

THE FIRST YELLOWISH CLOUD HERALDING THE BEGINNING OF THE ROLE OF GAS IN WARFARE AROSE ON APRIL 22, 1915, AT THE BEGINNING OF THE SECOND BATTLE OF YPRES. THE BATTLE ENDED MAY 25 AFTER HEAVY CASUALTIES ON BOTH SIDES AND CONSIDERABLE GROUND LOST BY THE BRITISH.

TWO YEARS LATER CAME THE THIRD BATTLE OF YPRES, WHICH WAS MADE UP OF ALMOST CONTINUOUS FIGHTING DURING THE SUMMER AND AUTUMN OF 1917. ITS RESULTS WERE FRUITLESS FOR BOTH SIDES.

THE MENIN GATE IN YPRES WAS BUILT AS A MEMORIAL TO THE BRITISH SOLDIERS.

THERE ARE 40 CEMETERIES IN TWO MILES OF YPRES.

YPRES' POPULATION IN 1930 WAS 15,680.

UNDATED DUNKERQUE

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUNKERQUE, WHICH DISPUTES WITH BORDEAUX THE RIGHT TO BE KNOWN AS FRANCE'S THIRD-RANKING SEAPORT, IS THE NORTHERNMOST CITY IN FRANCE. IT LIES TEN MILES FROM THE BELGIAN BORDER AND IS ONLY 45 MILES FROM DOVER AND 108 MILES---BY WATER---FROM LONDON.

IN FLOODING ITS ENVIRONS TO COVER THEIR RETREAT, THE ALLIES OF 1940 THUS REPEATED THE TACTICS OF 1914.

IT WAS IN OCTOBER, 1914, AFTER THE FALL OF ANTWERP AND THE FIRST BATTLE OF THE MARNE, THAT the Belgians opened the sluices along the Yser, A BIT EAST OF THE PRESENT FLOODING. THAT PERMITTED THE BELGIANS TO HOLD THE YSER LINE AND SAVE THEIR CHANNEL PORTS FROM GERMAN OCCUPATION.

IN THE WORLD WAR IT WAS IMPORTANT TO THE ALLIES AS A BASE FOR ANTI-SUBMARINE OPERATIONS AND AS A SUBSIDIARY BASE FOR THE DOVER PATROL WHICH HARRIED GERMAN POSITCONS ALONG THE BELGIAN COAST.

AS SUCH DUNKERQUE WAS THE TARGET FOR FREQUENT GERMAN AIR ATTACKS. IN SEPTEMBER, 1916, THE GERMAN LINES DREW CLOSE ENOUGH SO THAT THE TOWN WAS SUBJECTED TO ARTILLERY BOMBARDMENT FROM 22 MILES AWAY.

AIR RAIDS AND SHELL FIRE TOOK SOME 1,500 LIVES DURING THE WORLD WAR, AND ALSO DESTROYED THE ROOF OF THE CHURCH OF ST.ELOI. THE 290-FOOT BELFRY OF THIS CHURCH ALSO HAS SERVED AS A SIGNAL TOWER.

IT WAS ST.ELOI WHO, IN ERECTING A CHURCH IN THE WASTE OF SAND DUNES CLOSE TO THE SEA IN THE SEVENTH CENTURY, BOTH STARTED THE TOWN AND GAVE IT ITS NAME, A COMPOUND OF THE FLEMISH "DUIN" (DUNE) AND "KERK" (CHURCH).

A STRONGLY FORTIFIED PORT AS EARLY AS THE MIDDLE AGES, DUNKERQUE IN MODERN TIMES HAS BEEN MADE A CENTRAL PART OF FORTIFICATIONS THAT INCLUDE INUNDATIONS AND CANALS AND ALSO TAKE IN THE SMALLER, NEAR-BY TOWNS OF BERGUES, BOURBOURG AND GRAVELINES. THE LATTER IS ON THE COAST HALF WAY TO CALAIS, WHICH LIES 25 MILES TO THE EAST.

WITH A POPULATION OF SOME 30,000, DUNKERQUE LOOKS BACK ON A STORM HISTORY THAT, WITH THE REST OF FLANDERS, SAW THE TOWN SUCCESSIVELY UNDERBURGUNDIAN, AUSTRIAN AND SPANISH RULE. BURNED BY THE ENGLISH IN

30.24-2613

1388, IT WAS TAKEN FROM THE SPANIARDS BY THE FRENCH IN 1658, WHO CEDED IT TO OLIVER CROMWELL IN RETURN FOR THE SERVICES OF HIS "IRONSIDES."

IN 1622 CHARLES II SOLD DUNKERQUE TO LOUIS XIV, WHO FORTIFIED IT. BUT THE TREATY OF UTRECHT COMPELLED THE FRENCH TO FILL UP THE HARBOR AND RAZE FORTIFICATIONS, WHICH THE ENGLISH DEMANDED BECAUSE OF DAMAGE INFLICTED BY JEAN BART AND OTHER CORSAIRS WHO OPERATED OUT OF THE PORT. THE TOWN'S MAIN SQUARE IS NAMED IN HONOR OF JEAN BART WITH A STATUE OF HIM IN ITS CENTER.

IT ISN'T THAT THE DESTRUCTION OF THIS GREAT ARMY WOULD END THE WAR--FOR IT WOULDN'T--BUT ORDINARY REPORTS FROM THE THEATRE OF WAR GROW DIM IN THE PRESENCE OF ONE OF THE GREAT HUMAN DRAMAS OF ALL MILITARY HISTORY.

WE NO LONGER ARE WITNESSING A BATTLE. THE CONFLICT ON THE MUDDY PLAINS OF FLANDERS HAS BEEN TRANSFORMED INTO A SEETHING, FLAMING, DETONATING, SWIRLING MASS -- A GREAT WHIRLPOOL WHICH BEFORE IT HAS SPUN ITS HORRID COURSE MAY HAVE SUCKED DOWN A MILLION ALLIED AND GERMAN YOUTH.

THE LATEST WORD FROM THE FRENCH HIGH COMMAND IS THAT THE TROOPS IN THE NORTH ARE RESISTING WITH "ADMIRABLE COURAGE." FROM THE FIERCELY ATTACKING NAZIS COMES THE CRY "SURRENDER OR DIE." NOW WE MUST WAIT FOR THE CLIMAX.

THERE ARE THREE POINTS FOR US TO WATCH TODAY, AND ALL ARE A PART OF THIS EFFORT OF THE TRAPPED ALLIES TO ESCAPE, AND IN SO DOING CAUSE AS LITTLE HARM TO THE ALLIED PLANS AS POSSIBLE. THOSE POINTS ARE:

1. THE WHIRLPOOL, OF COURSE, ABOVE ALL.

2. THE GERMAN DRIVE TO CAPTURE THE PORT OF DUNKERQUE AND THE ADJACENT COAST, THEREBY CLOSING THE MOUTH OF THE TRAP AND CUTTING OFF THE ALLIED ESCAPE BY WATER.

3. THE MAIN FRENCH LINE WHICH RUNS FROM ABBEVILLE ON THE COAST EASTWARD ALONG THE SOMME CLEAR TO THE MAGINOT DEFENSES.

GENERALISSIMO WEYGAND IS REPORTED TO HAVE MASSED SOMETHING LIKE HALF A MILLION MEN FOR A GREAT OFFENSIVE TO TRY TO CLOSE THE GAP BETWEEN THE NEAR CENTER OF THIS LINE AND THE TROOPS IN THE TRAP TO THE NORTH, THEREBY PROVIDING AN AVENUE OF ESCAPE. FLANK ON THE COAST BY THE SURRENDER OF KING LEOPOLD. IT WOULD SEEM TO ME, HOWEVER, THAT ENOUGH HAS BEEN SAID ALREADY.

IT WON'T LESSEN THE DAMAGE TO KEEP REFERRING TO IT. AND SO FAR AS CONCERNS THE KING IT IS BETTER TO WITHHOLD JUDGMENT ON HIS ACT. A MAN MUST BE GUIDED BY HIS OWN CONSCIENCE, AND WE CAN ASSUME THAT LEOPOLD CONSULTED HIS BEFORE REACHING A DECISION WHICH MUST HAVE COST HIM GREAT ANGUISH.

THE POSITION OF THE TROOPS IN THE TRAP ISN'T VERY COMPLICATED TO UNDERSTAND. THEY ARE SURROUNDED ON ALL SIDES EXCEPTING FOR AN OPENING AT THE TOP WHICH HAS EXISTED UP TO THIS MORNING TO THE COAST AND THE PORT OF DUNKERQUE.

THE GERMANS ARE RACING TO TAKE OVER THIS AVENUE OF ESCAPE LEFT UNCOVERED BY THE BELGIAN SURRENDER.

THE ENCIRCLED ARMY MAY BE DESCRIBED ROUGHLY AS BEING FORCED TO ADOPT THE TACTICS OF OUR OLD FRONTIER INDIAN-FIGHTERS. THEY HAVE MORE OR LESS FORMED A HOLLOW CIRCLE, AND ARE FIGHTING GRIMLY TO KEEP THEIR LINE INTACT WHILE AN EFFORT IS MADE TO WITHDRAW NOT ONLY THE MEN BUT THE VERY VALUABLE WAR MATERIAL TOWARDS THE COAST.

THIS WHOLE AREA MUST BE A BLAZING HELL, FOR APART FROM THE TERRIBLE GROUND FIGHTING, BOTH AIRFORCES ARE POURING BOMBS INTO THE MILLING MASS BELOW.

EVEN IF THESE HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF ALLIED MEN CAN FIGHT THEIR WAY TO THE COAST THE SLAUGHTER WILL BE TERRIFIC, AND THE CHANCES OF GETTING AWAY BY SEA WON'T BE BRIGHT. IT WOULD TAKE A BIG FLEET OF SHIS TO TRANSPORT THIS FORCE TO ENGLAND,

SHIPS TO TRANSPORT THIS FORCE TO ENGLAND, AND IT REQUIRES LITTLE IMAGINATION TO FORESEE THE TERRIBLE BATTLE WHICH WOULD ENSUE OVER AND ON THE CHANNEL. THE WATERS WOULD BE FILLED WITH DROWNING MEN.

PROBABLY THE BEST CHANCE THE TRAPPED ARMY WOULD HAVE FOR ESCAPE WOULD BE IN A BIG ATTACK BY THE FRENCH FROM THE SOUTH, TO TRY TO REACH THE BOTTOM OF THE TRAP AND OPEN IT UP. THAT IS A MOUNTAINOUS TASK, HOWEVER, AND ITS SUCCESS CERTAINLY WOULD BE PROBLEMATICAL.

STILL, IRRESPECTIVE OF EFFECTING AN ACTUAL RESCUE IN THIS MANNER, AN OFFENSIVE BY THE FRENCH LIKELY WOULD EASE THE PRESSURE ON THE SIDES OF THE TRAP. THAT MIGHT ASSIST THE EFFORT TO ESCAPE THROUGH THE MOUTH OF THE TRAP.

ON THE WHOLE ONE CANNOT HELP TAKING A GLOOMY VIEW OF THE POSITION OF THE MEN IN THE TRAP. NOTHING SHORT OF A MIRACLE CAN SAVE THEM.

THUS FAR WE HAVE HAD NO CASUALTY LISTS TO INDICATE THE LOSSES IN THE BLITZKRIEG EXCEPTING THAT ONE TERRIBLE REPORT FROM HOLLAND WHICH ANNOUNCED THAT TWENTY-FIVE PERCENT OF THE DUTCH ARMY OF 400,000 HAD BEEN KILLED. THERE IS PLENTY OF EVIDENCE, HOWEVER, THAT THE CASUALTY TOTAL ALREADY IS MOUNTAINOUS. IT WOULDN'T BE SURPRISING IF IT FAR EXCEEDS EVERYTHING THE WORLD HAS KNOWN PREVIOUSLY.

THE FRENCH HIGH COMMAND, IN DESCRIBING THE FIERCE GERMAN OFFENSIVE IN THE MENIN AREA, REMARKED IN A MATTER OF FACT WAY THAT THE NAZIS ATTACKED "WITHOUT REGARD TO LOSSES."

THE MASSED ATTACK IS ONE OF THE STANDBYS OF GERMAN STRATEGY, AND THEY APPEAR TO HAVE BEEN USING IT FREELY. THE STARK COURAGE AND DISCIPLINE OF THE GERMAN SOLDIER AS HE THROWS HIMSELF RIGHT INTO THE MOUTH OF ALMOST CERTAIN DEATH IS A THING OF WONDER.

FLEET PROTECTS SIXTY RESCUE SHIPS EVACUATING MEN FROM FLANDERS

16 Transports and 3 Warships Are Reported Sunk by Nazi Bombers—War's Biggest Mass Air Battle Starting—French Still Cling to Dunkirk.

By the Associated Press.

Big guns of the Allied fleet dropped a ring of fire around the French port of Dunkirk today as retreating Allied troops fought off an estimated 440,000 to 500,000 Germans rushing to land a knockout blow in the last hours of the bloody battle of Flanders.

Fierce rear-guard actions covered the flight of the main Allied columns, falling back the last twenty miles to the sea.

Under swirling attacks by Nazi dive-bombers, a shuttle service of approximately sixty vessels took off the first contingents of wounded and exhausted troops.

A hospital ship arrived at a south coast English port loaded with British Expeditionary Force wounded, its portholes smashed by machine gun bullets and its funnels riddled.

The German High Command declared the great battle of Flanders was fast nearing its end with the destruction of the English and French armies fighting there.

Hitler's dive-bombers sank sixteen transports and three British warships and damaged thirty-four other vessels waiting to embark the fleeing Allies at channel ports, the Nazi High Command said.

The British Expeditionary Force was pictured by Berlin as being "cut to pieces" almost within sight of the chalk cliffs of Dover, across the English Channel.

Eighty-nine Allied planes were reported shot down or destroyed by the Germans in what appeared to be at least the prelude to the biggest mass aerial battle of the twenty-one-day-old war in the west. The British Air Ministry said that the Royal Air Force shot down fifty-two enemy planes, including twenty-five bombers, and damaged seventeen others.

The retreating Allies, pocketed in a triangle-shaped area lying between Calais, Lille and Ostend, engaged in "terrific fighting" on the Yser and near Cassel, the French High Command reported.

The roaring fleet guns were but fighting a last delaying action against the Germans closing in on three sides.

French military authorities estimated that forty German infantry divisions and eight armored columns—roughly 700,000 men—were attacking eighteen Allied divisions, ten French and eight British, of about 270,000 men.

But the Allied armies of the north, cut off from the central French forces by the German dash to the sea, deserted by their Belgian wing, were ending the struggle in what the French declared was a day of glory.

The system set up by the British and French navies working on a shuttle basis, supplying food and moving Allied contingents by degrees.

Allies Sailing From Dunkirk

PARIS, May 30 (A. P.).—The first formations of the broken Allied armies of Flanders to escape the German campaign of annihilation embarked at the English Channel today under the protecting fire of the French and British fleets.

Outnumbered almost three to one, the Allied forces were leaving the tragic field of battle to fire and flood, through Dunkirk—itself the center of blazing shellfire—to at least temporary safety.

A military spokesman said that the operation was progressing methodically amid violent combats on the two flanks where, with one exception at Mount Cassel, the German advance was being held.

The Germans were believed to have captured Mount Cassel, two miles from the city of Cassel and less than twenty miles south of Dunkirk.

Dogged resistance of rear guards is protecting the retiring forces and has allowed an orderly backward movement.

The sharp fight of the Allies also has blocked the Nazi push on their flanks.

Allies Flood Dunkirk Region.

Once deciding that the fight in Flanders was lost, the Allies opened flood sluices around Dunkirk and let the water into an area crisscrossed by canals and streams to cover their retreat.

Locks were opened southwest and northeast of Dunkirk on the great canal that flows by the city and follows the coast for many miles.

The French are defending the region between St. Omer and Cassel, while the British are fighting in the general direction of Bruges to Dunkirk.

The British also are holding off strong Nazi attacks in the Yser Canal regions.

Dunkirk itself is solidly entrenched against German attacks and, with Calais, is holding firmly, military reports said. (Germany has claimed the capture of Calais.) Vice-Admiral Jean Marie Abrial is in command at Dunkirk.

Off the coast, the Allied fleet, described as numerous and powerful, bolstered Dunkirk's defense by the fire from its guns while other vessels shuttled in and out of the harbor.

French spokesmen said that there had not been a single surrender among the French units fighting up the Flanders corridor toward Dunkirk.

Tells of Flanders Front.

Allied troops hold a double line, the first running along the Yser River from the vicinity of Nieuport to Ypres and the second from the region of Gravelines to the outskirts of Cassel.

British troops are consolidated principally on both sides of this corridor with strong defenses established along a countersecting "line of mounts" which separates Lille from Dunkirk.

In the bottom of this pocket, southeast of the mounts, French troops are protecting the rear.

German attacks have been concentrated from St. Omer to Cassel.

A secondary Nazi attack was reported launched directly on Dunkirk by strong armed forces, but all failed except the Mount Cassel action.

Protected on two sides by flanks toward the sea, the French troops under Gen. Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux were slowly retiring northwest, protected by furious rear guard actions.

The Allies were using naval units of all tonnages to remove troops and bring fresh supplies to those still fighting.

Somme Is New Front.

On the Somme no new developments were reported.

Deciding to abandon northwestern France to the powerful onrushing German legions, the French Army has accepted final defeat in the battle of Flanders, the first great land operation of the European war, and while the Allied troops continued making a stubborn retreat, the French Command has strengthened its defenses along the Aisne-Somme line which is to become the new front.

This line runs for a long stretch only sixty-five or seventy miles north of Paris, and the French are ready for a new German drive upon the historic capital of France.

The Allies were abandoning to the Germans a strip of territory approximately 200 miles long and of an average width of fifty miles, its southern boundary along the Somme and Aisne rivers from the channel to a point near the Luxemburg frontier. All this includes a rich industrial section and important channel ports.

Still Fighting in Lille.

Temporarily they still held a triangular area around Dunkirk. The southern side of the triangle ran inland from a point near Calais to the Lille area, and its eastern side extended roughly northward to a point just south of Ostend. The world war landmarks of Ypres and Armentieres were on this line.

The French reported that a rear guard action was still being fought in Lille, important industrial capital of this region, and it appeared that a small Allied force was trapped southeast of the city.

Nazis Press French Near Cassel

PARIS, May 30 (A. P.).—The Germans pushed ahead tonight their advance in the Cassel area of Flanders where savagely punished Allied battalions are in flight to the sea.

The French and British were said by a War Ministry spokesman to be holding out on their flank in the region of the Yser River.

The two flanks—one running from Nieuport to Ypres on the north and the other from Gravelines to Cassel on the south—bound the forty-mile-long Allied escape corridor to Dunkirk and the sea.

A German thrust from Mount Cassel—two miles from the town of that name—threatened to cut off the French rear guard of Gen. Jacques Prioux. (Gen. Prioux and a number of his men have been captured according to German radio reports.)

Meanwhile, the French Army called up two new contingents, ordering those born in the last three months of 1919 and those born in the first three months of 1920 to report for military service on June 8.

Said by a French spokesman to be outnumbered nearly three to one, the Allies left the fields of Flanders with many areas under water, flooded by the French in a last effort to delay the conquering German march to the sea. They were alight with the fires of burning buildings and torn by the incessant explosion of thousands of guns.

The loss of Flanders gave the Germans control of 10,000 square miles of rich territory, virtually all of France's coal mining region and about half her industrial area. Homes and buildings lay in black ruins.

Wants American Aid.

"Now, more than ever, American industrial aid is absolutely necessary," said a spokesman for the Ministry of Information.

In the face of defeat and devastation, the French spoke with pride of the "glory" of the Allied struggle from the beginning of the battle to its present end and said, in contrast to Berlin reports, that there had not been "a single surrender."

To illustrate the grave peril of the surviving Allied companies, a French authority said that they numbered about 270,000 men, in eighteen divisions of which ten were French and eight British, against 700,000 Nazis—forty infantry divisions and eight armored columns.

The rescue of the men of Flanders was attempted under almost incredible hazards. The channel was alive with small, lethal German torpedo boats, and bombing aircraft was thick in the sky.

The Allied fleets had not only to lay down a screen of fire to protect the transports, but to aid in the desperate delaying actions by which the troops still standing to their guns made a last attempt to beat off Germans closing in from three sides.

Advance Called Checked.

On the two main Allied flanks—in the triangle that had finished off the defending British and French after the surrender of the Belgians—the French reported that amid violent combat, the general Nazi advance was being held.

The system set up by the British and French navies was working on a shuttle basis, supplying food and moving out Allied contingents by degrees.

The Germans were believed to have captured Mount Cassel, two miles from the city of Cassel and less than twenty miles south of Dunkirk.

Once deciding that the fight in Flanders was lost, the Allies opened flood sluices around Dunkirk and let the water into an area crisscrossed by canal and streams to cover their retreat.

Tells of Flanders Front.

Allied troops hold a double line, the first running along the Yser River from the vicinity of Nieuport to Ypres and the second from the region of Gravelines to the outskirts of Cassel.

British troops are consolidated principally on both sides of this corridor with strong defenses established along a countersecting "line of mounts" which separates Lille from Dunkirk.

In the bottom of this pocket, southeast of the mounts, French troops are protecting the rear.

German attacks have been concentrated from St. Omer to Cassel.

A secondary Nazi attack was reported launched directly on Dunkirk by strong armed forces, but all failed except the Mount Cassel action.

The Allies were using naval units of all tonnages to remove troops and bring fresh supplies to those still fighting.

On the Somme no new developments were reported.

Deciding to abandon northwestern France to the powerful onrushing German legions, the French Army has accepted final defeat in the battle of Flanders, the first great land operation of the European war, and while the Allied troops continued making a stubborn retreat, the French Command has strengthened its defenses along the Aisne-Somme line which is to become the new front.

Tanks Smash Path to Coast For Last Unit

Troops That Held While Others Escaped Race to Avoid Being Hemmed In

Channel Swarming With German Boats

Planes Keep Up Constant Bombardment Too, but Allies Shoot Down 100

By The Associated Press

PARIS, May 30.—French rear guards of the Allied northern armies were reported late tonight to be fighting their way, step by step, northward toward the sea after holding off the Germans to the end in Flanders to permit the bulk of their comrades to escape.

Military dispatches said the French troops, under command of Gen. Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux, had abandoned their positions along the south wall of the Allied "escape corridor" and were pushing along the forty-mile road from Lille to Dunkerque, where Allied warships and transports were taking aboard the armies of the north. [German sources said Gen. Prioux and his staff had been captured.]

The Germans attacked across Flanders today at a point halfway between Lille and Dunkerque in an effort to cut off the retreat, but reports late tonight said the rear guard was squeezing through. The Germans were successful during the day in throwing a light line across the corridor from Cassel, France, twelve miles northeastward to Popperinghe, Belgium, but French rear-guard tanks at once smashed into it.

Germans Capture Hill

The German advance on the southern wing had its first big success of the day in the capture of Mont Cassel, which is two miles from the town itself, and was carrying on tonight.

Both flanks of the French path to the sea were being held by British troops taking their stands in turn behind flooded zones southwest and northeast of the fortified position of Dunkerque.

The ancient swamps south and west of Dunkerque, between Gravelines and St. Omer, which had been dried up by modern drainage, are now once more salty bogs, covered by waters admitted by canals flooded from the sea.

The Belgian valley of the River Yser, north and east of Dunkerque, also has been flooded, from Nieuport to Ypres, over a width of more than two miles. There, the French War Ministry spokesman asserted, the Nazi rush was being held.

The German air force launched violent bombing attacks against the fleeing Allies and against the warships at Dunkerque, but was itself suffering heavy losses. The Germans were estimated to have lost nearly 100 planes today alone.

Late developments indicated the embattled rear guard might still reach the sea despite the German advance on the southern side of the Allied armies of the north.

Dunkerque Holding Firmly

Dunkerque, a besieged city manned by French sailors and marines, was solidly intrenched against German attacks and, with Calais, was holding firmly, military reports said.

[Germany has reported capture of Calais.]

Off the coast the Allied fleet, described as "numerous and powerful," bolstered Dunkerque's defense with its guns while other vessels shuttled in and out of the harbor. Naval units described as "of all tonnages" were said to be participating in removal of wounded and other troops and in bringing in supplies.

In the face of defeat and devastation the French spoke with pride of the "glory" of the Allied struggle from the beginning of the battle to its present phase and declared, in contrast to Berlin reports, that there had not been "a single surrender."

30.24-2617

To illustrate the grave peril of the surviving Allied units, a French authority said that they numbered about 270,000 men, in eighteen divisions, of which ten were French and eight were British, as against 700,000 Germans in forty infantry divisions and eight armored columns.

The rescue of the men of Flanders was being attempted under almost incredible hazards. The Channel was alive with small German torpedo boats and bombing aircraft were thick in the sky. The Allied fleets not only had to lay down a screen of fire to protect the transports, but also had to aid in the delaying actions by which the troops still standing to their guns made a last attempt to beat off Germans closing in from three sides.

FRENCH REAR GUARD FIGHTS TOWARD SEA

Withdraws Along Escape Corridor After Holding Nazis To Last Ditch

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 30—The imperiled French rear guards of the Allied northern armies were reported late tonight to be fighting their way, step by step, toward the sea after holding off the Germans to the bitter end in Flanders to permit the mass of their comrades to escape.

Military dispatches said the French troops under Gen. Jacques Adolphe Prioux had abandoned their positions along the south wall of the Allied escape corridor and were pushing along the forty-mile road to Dunkerque, where warships and transports are taking aboard the armies of the north.

Rear Guard Gets Through

The Germans attacked across Flanders halfway between Lille and Dunkerque in an effort to cut off the retreat, but reports late tonight said the rear guard was squeezing through anyway.

Both flanks of the French path to the sea are now held by British troops, taking their stand in turn behind flooded zones north and south of the fortified portion of Dunkerque.

The ancient swamps south of Dunkerque, from Gravelines to Saint Omer, which had been dried up by modern drainage, once more are a salty bog, covered by waters admitted by flooded canals from the sea.

Valley Of Yser Flooded

The valley of the Yser, north of Dunkerque, also was flooded from Nieuport to Ypres over a width of more than two miles.

The German air force launched violent bombing attacks against the retreating Allies and against the warships at Dunkerque, but was itself suffering heavy losses.

The Germans were estimated to have lost nearly one hundred planes today alone.

The late developments indicated the embattled rear guard might still reach the sea despite the German advances on the southern wall of the Allied armies of the north.

Forms Side Of Corridor

This wall, extending from Cassel to Gravelines, formed one side of the forty-mile-long corridor of escape running northwest from the region of Lille to Dunkerque.

The other side was formed by an Allied line running from Nieuport to Ypres along the Yser river, and here the French War Ministry spokesman declared that the Nazi rush was being held.

While the broken Allied battalions which already had reached Dunkerque were being moved across the English Channel under cover of the guns of the British and French fleets, others were pouring down the corridor, forcing a bloody passage at points where the Nazi advance guards sought to bar them.

German Line Smashed

The Germans were successful during the day in throwing a light line across the corridor from Cassel twelve miles northeast to Poperinghe, but French rear-guard tanks at once smashed into it.

The German advance on the southern wing had its first big success of the day in the capture of Mount Cassel—two miles from the town itself—and was carrying on tonight.

Declared by a French spokesman to be outnumbered nearly three to one, the Allies left the tragic fields of Flanders, punished as they never had been. Many areas were alight with fires of burning buildings and torn by the incessant explosion of thousands of guns.

French Keep Chins Up

Despite the loss of Flanders—which gave the Germans control of 10,000 square miles of rich territory, virtually all of France's coal-mining region and about half her industrial area—the French authorities took it with chins up.

"Now, more than ever, American industrial aid is absolutely necessary," said a spokesman for the Ministry of Information.

But in the face of defeat and devastation, the French spoke with pride of the "glory" of the Allied struggle from the beginning of the battle to its present end and declared, in contrast to Berlin reports, that there had not been "a single surrender."

270,000 Against 700,000

To illustrate the grave peril of the surviving Allied companies, a French authority said they numbered about 270,000 men, in eighteen divisions, of which ten were French and eight were British, against 700,000 Nazis—forty infantry divisions and eight armored columns.

The rescue of the men of Flanders was attempted under almost incredible hazards. The Channel was alive with small, lethal German torpedo boats and bombing aircraft were thick in the sky.

The Allied fleets had not only to lay down a screen of fire to protect the transports but to aid in the desperate delaying actions by which the troops still standing to their guns made a last attempt to beat off Germans closing in from three sides.

President Lebrun sent a radio message to Gen. Georges Blanchard, commander of the French forces in Flanders, conveying France's admiration for the heroic struggle of General Blanchard's troops.

The President said the battle of Flanders would go down in military history as one of the greatest of all times.

British Version: Some Divisions Safe

London, May 30 (AP)—Thousands of first arrivals from the Flanders battleground reached England tonight in warships, transports and hospital ships—their uniforms torn and their faces grimy, bearded and powder-burned.

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 30—The British Expeditionary Force and its French companions-in-peril fought today toward Dunkirk and possible escape in a tremendous rear-guard battle against the death grip of the Nazi military machine.

Germans were closing in on the Allies despite continuous bombing and machine gunning by the Royal Air Force.

Some success in the withdrawal was indicated by a statement in authoritative circles that some divisions had reached the safety of a southeast port in England.

Meanwhile, the "grim struggle goes on," these circles added.

(Neutral military circles in Berlin expressed the belief today that the British must have succeeded in getting quite a number of men out of the swiftly closing German trap in Flanders, since movements of transports off the English Channel coast have been reported under way for the last four days.)

Fleet's Ring Of Fire Aids Embarkation

The Ministry of Information said tonight that "troops not immediately engaged have been evacuated" from the Flanders pocket and that "numbers of troops already have reached the country."

Big guns of the Allied fleet dropped a ring of fire around Dunkirk as retreating Allied troops fought off the Germans rushing to land a knockout blow in the last hours of the bloody battle of Flanders.

Fierce rear-guard actions covered the flight of the main Allied columns, falling back the last twenty miles to the sea.

A hospital ship arrived at a south coast English port loaded with British Expeditionary Force wounded, its portholes smashed by machine-gun bullets and its funnels riddled.

Southeast England Like Front Line

The southeast coast of England took on a "front line" appearance, with streams of women and children leaving it in fear of German bombers, carrying portable possessions with them.

The Government is expected to order all civilians to leave the southeast coast if Germany consolidates her air bases on the French coast—only five minutes by bomber away from England.

Battling the numerically superior Nazi air force, British aviators yesterday claimed to have disabled sixty-nine planes—a ratio of seven-to-one to their own losses.

The war, which has robbed many British homes of their sons, touched the royal family itself, it was learned today. Lord Frederick Cambridge, cousin of King George VI, was killed in action with the British Expenditionary Force.

Partial Success Seen In Rear-Guard Fight

The at least partial success of the rear-guard fight in Flanders was seen in the fact that French as well as British soldiers were brought to safety, despite the German claim that Dunkirk harbor, from which the Allied navy is removing the fleeing troops, had been rendered untenable by air attacks.

Many wounded soldiers are being safely transported across the Channel to England despite the fact, the British charge, that a hospital ship was bombed unsuccessfully yesterday and two others were sunk in Dieppe harbor recently.

The stream of soldiers, wounded and refugees landing after hazardous voyages across the Channel merged with the flow of women and children from the southeast English coast area to create a huge mass movement toward the west from the oncoming Nazi Blitzkrieg.

In Dover, preparations were said to be under way to withdraw 3,000 school children under Government supervision.

Motorists Added To Home Defense

The country-wide organization of the Royal Automobile Club, including hundreds of telephone boxes, road patrols, branch offices and tabulated routes covering every road in the island, has been incorporated into Britain's defense system.

For the people of the United Kingdom, it was not a question of whether the fury of German arms would strike at the British Isles, but when the attack would come.

News dispatches from Paris said German military preparations in Zeeland, seized from the Dutch, and in Norway, captured last month, could not be explained as local operations.

"Numerous troops lately stationed in southern Germany and parts of Austria have been withdrawn," wrote the correspondent of the London Telegraph from Paris. "If the northern offensive had failed, the German command would have tried to seize Switzerland. Now it has determined to stake all its resources in northern France against the British."

British military circles said that the expeditionary force still held its main base depots in Flanders, but acknowledged that "we, of course, have lost a great deal of material."

Taught the "lesson of Norway and the low countries," Britain is searching out organizations suspected of masking Nazi activities under other names.

Sir John Anderson, Minister of Home Security, told the House of Commons today that 8,800 persons of German and Austrian nationality have been interned, although many of them professed to be "refugees" from the Hitler regime. He said the number of such nationality in the country "is approximately 31,000 males and 42,000 females."

Clubrooms are being raided, restrictions have been tightened to prevent aliens from owning automobiles, boats or airplanes.

Sir John made no reply to a question by Lady Astor: "Is it wise to lock up a man but leave his wife free?"

(Last week Sir Oswald Mosley, head of the British Union of Fascists, was interned. Lady Mosley remained at liberty.)

Sir John told a questioner that England would not ban greyhound racing because hard-pressed workers needed such relaxation. Lady Astor commented:

"Does he know how shocked the men who have been fighting are? I have seen some of them coming home and they have been horrified."

In new defense regulations, the Government gave the Home Secretary power to "suppress any newspaper which systematically published matter which, in his opinion, is calculated to foment opposition to the prosecution of the war."

The regulation, which also gives the Home Secretary power to "deal with" printing presses used to print offending newspapers, is expected to lead to suppression of Action, Mosley's paper, and the Communist newspaper, Daily Worker.

Sir Oswald was detained last week in the Government's drive against fifth-columnists.

The new rules prohibit the use of radio sets in automobiles and provide for confiscation of signaling apparatus. Authorities also were empowered to confiscate land for war use.

Hospital Ship Reported Bombed

The Air Ministry announced that a hospital ship, "clearly marked with a red cross," was subjected to an unsuccessful bombing attack last night in the English Channel.

An Air Ministry communique said:

"A bombing attack on a hospital ship, clearly marked with a red cross, was seen from a British reconnaissance aircraft of the coastal command over the English Channel Wednesday evening.

"One bomb fell very close to the other ship, enveloping it in foam. The British aircraft chased the bomber, which disappeared into clouds."

British military circles said the number of B. E. F. wounded arriving at British ports from across the shell-swept Channel probably was increased, but declined further comment.

Censors stamped "stop" on all interviews with the wounded.

Of earlier reports that two hospital ships had been bombed and sunk in the French harbor of Dieppe, military sources could not say whether any wounded were aboard.

Dieppe, southwest of the German-held corridor to the Channel, has been used chiefly by the British as a hospital base.

Reports 52 Planes Shot Down In Day

An Air Ministry announcement said:

"Royal Air Force fighters yesterday encountered many large formations of enemy aircraft engaged in bombing operations on the French and Belgian coasts. Our aircraft pressed home their attack at every opportunity. No less than fifty-two enemy aircraft were shot down during the day, including twenty-five bombers. Seventeen others were seriously damaged.

"Ten of our fighters are missing, but one of the pilots, although wounded, has since returned safely.

"Naval aircraft carried out an attack on an enemy seaplane base on the Dutch coast. Hangars were destroyed and a number of seaplanes were wrecked. Other naval aircraft shot down an enemy bomber over the North Sea and disabled another.

"One of our reconnaissance aircraft bombed an enemy supply ship at Bergen, in Norway, and set it on fire."

A single squadron of twelve British Defiant fighting planes shot down thirty-seven German planes yesterday, the Air Ministry announced today.

On morning patrol the squadron shot down 17 fighters and a dive bomber and in the afternoon 19 and possibly 21 German bombers, the Ministry said.

One British gunner, believing that his plane was vitally hit, took to his parachute over Belgium, but with that exception every man and machine returned safely.

Detectives made arrests today at an unnamed factory and said charges of sabotage would be made under the Defense of the Realm Act.

Britain's Answer To Air Challenge

(The Boulton Paul Defiant, armed fore and aft and powered to a speed of over 335 miles an hour, is the "secret" plane England built to answer the challenge of Germany's light, fast bombers.

(Described as larger than the Spitfire—Britain's principal pursuit ship—and smaller and faster than the widely used Hurricane, the Defiant is listed in Jane's All the World's Aircraft as "believed to be the fastest airplane of its class in service." It has a swing spread of 39 feet 6 inches, a 1,030-horsepower Rolls-Royce Merlin 111 engine and a power-driven four-gun turret which can fire to the rear as well as ahead.)

Britain's press tried to prevent a slump in the nation's morale as a result of the Allied defeat in Flanders.

While Tommies of the British Expeditionary Force fell back to the English Channel, fighting their way out of the Nazi trap as best they could, the press warned the public to beware of a German propaganda drive to split the Allies by capitalizing on the Flanders disaster.

The Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, now Minister for Aircraft Production, declared that civilians could help their fighting forces by resisting "Hitler's attempts to rouse recrimination between France and Britain" over incidents leading to the final rout in Flanders.

Asserting that "incredible mistakes" were committed by both countries, the Express commented that "the people of Britain lingered long in slothfulness while France was fully mobilized for war."

The military commentator of the News Chronicle urged the people to view the Flanders battle in its "correct perspective" and face it "as the great disasters of the last war were faced." He contended that Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander of the Allied forces, "to win the war must lose this battle" and cut losses while the Allies mass planes and tanks for a tremendous counter-stroke.

Bomb salvos from the British air force and blasts from British naval guns were reported taking a heavy toll among the Germans as the air and naval arms cooperated in the Allied withdrawal through the Channel port of Dunkirk.

Facing the possible entry of Italy into the war, British diplomacy gave increasing attention to Spain and Russia.

While Sir Samuel Hoare hastened to Madrid, where he has been assigned the task of improving relations with Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Government, the British Government was reported to have decided to give Sir Stafford Cripps, who is en route to Moscow on a trade mission, full Ambassadorial rank.

Sir Stafford was sent to Moscow to explore the possibilities of a trade pact. While he was on his way the Moscow radio announced that the Soviet Government was unwilling to receive him as a trade envoy, and then it was reported Sir Stafford would be made Ambassador. It was explained that the Moscow announcement probably was drafted before the latest communication from the British Government had been received.

ESCAPE ACROSS CHANNEL IS TERMED AS PUNISHING AS BATTLE IN FLANDERS

Tommies Report Swarms of Nazi Planes And Weight Of German Troops Drove Them To Sea—Say They Need More Planes

[By the Associated Press]

A Southeast Port in England, May 30—Thousands of British soldiers smashed army of Flanders, staggering with fatigue from the bloody twenty-day failure across the Channel, landed on home soil tonight.

Their trip across the Channel had been scarcely less punishing than the twenty days spent in ravaged Flanders.

One soldier thus described the embarkation:

"When we were hit (by bombs) we swam ashore, but when the ship didn't go down we swam back to her again to take her out of the harbor. But then she turned turtle and we had to swim again. Some of us were in the water for hours before we were picked up by a British warship."

Telling of suffering continuous air attacks from the very beginning of the Flanders campaign, they all declared it was

But many were lost on the narrow stretch of water that was turned all the way into a raging strip of fire.

With them were many French infantrymen. There were men who told in awe of the might of the German army and air force and of the cheapness with which life was held in the Nazi columns.

Trip As Punishing As Battle

30.24-2619

the great swarms of German planes and the great weight of German numbers that finally pushed them off the Flemish plain.

Hospital ships as well as troopships were targets for Nazi bombs, they declared.

"Our flyers are magnificent," said one, "but it's volume that we need."

Two Float On Table

Another, telling of the Channel trip, thus philosophically described his troubles with a ship that had been hit:

"I was very thankful when, after swimming seven or eight miles, I was able to get hold of a table. Another fellow and I sat on it until we were picked up. All of us were almost naked and we have had no food since yesterday at midday and no sleep for three days.

"But it's back again now to help the army . . .

"It's not only British troops we're bringing over," he explained, "but French and Belgians, too. The Belgians don't want to give up fighting.

Plead For More Planes

"If only they would give us more planes we could tell the Germans a different story. As it is they have got as much as they have given and we have not been bombing and machine-gunning men in the water."

Five Belgian officers in the party declared they were astounded when the order came for the Belgian army to cease fighting.

One Belgian, speaking of King Leopold's capitulation, said angrily:

"I was asked to hand over my revolver. I immediately refused and with my companions I made for the coast and finally we reached the British and French.

Refuse To Obey Leopold

"We do not intend to stop fighting on orders of Leopold—and there are thousands of other Belgian soldiers of the same opinion. The British and French are still making a magnificent show in the north."

The withdrawals from Flanders, which already have cost the British three destroyers and a number of auxiliary craft, went on tonight while those remaining on the French side were fighting a great rear-guard action to hold Dunkerque until the retreat is complete.

There was no indication of the total number of the British able to withdraw.

Over and over these returning men, many blood-stained and black with powder, emphasized the need for planes and more planes.

They told of Germans attacking in waves of fifty planes time after time, literally filling the air over big salients.

They accused the Nazi flyers of mass murder of refugees, flying 200 feet off the ground and sparing nobody—not even the children.

"They mowed them down with machine-gun fire like grass under a mower," said one man.

Said a returning artillery sergeant:

"We have been bombed night and day until we have got really used to it. The Germans are poor shots and our casualties have not been heavy although they rained bombs on us.

Says Nazis Are No Match For R. A. F.

"Their airmen are no match for the R. A. F. and they know it. Yesterday we watched one (British) Spitfire pilot take on seven machines and bring down three of them. The German airmen seem to concentrate their attacks with dive bombers, then come down low and let go with machine guns."

A non-commissioned officer of a line regiment:

"It's not been a fair fight yet. Our infantry have not had a real chance to get to grips. The Germans have no heart for meeting us in fair and square infantry attacks."

A private, who had been shot in the foot, declared he wanted to go back as soon as his wound healed, adding:

"I cannot forget the way those Huns treated the refugees."

"Plenty To Remember Us By"

A sergeant major asserted:

"Although we come back wounded we have given them plenty to remember us by. At times the slaughter was wholesale. Column after column (of Germans) was mowed down by our Bren guns. The morale of our men was superb. When they were embarking bombers raided the ships and one (ship's) gun crew was put out of action. Wounded men went to take a share in feeding the guns."

A trooper carried a cloth doll as a present for his young daughter; it had been blown out of a toy shop window in a Belgian town by a bomb, he said.

A Glasgow youth said the wounded men "lived like rabbits in the sand dunes" of the Channel coast until the navy "came along and did a grand job of work."

Wade Out Up To Necks

Able Seaman A. B. Bradley said that when the boats of his rescue ship were sent ashore to look for the British troops the men came out wading up to their necks in the water.

Shortly afterward German planes swooped down and the rescue work was carried out in a hail of bombs.

"On our way home, however, we got some revenge," said Bradley. "Our gunners brought down five Dornier Flying Pencils."

Another Tommy exclaimed:

"I never believed anything like the wall of fire our ships put up to screen troops was possible."

Mathematically Straight Line

"Shells fell in a mathematically straight line behind our positions, while beyond the line British planes dropped bombs like hail.

"Jerry never had a chance to get at us."

Still another eyewitness said:

"From a long line of British warships poured an unending stream of shells to form a barrage beyond our line, while squad after squad of bombers poured tons of explosives on German troop concentrations."

An army officer said "our losses in the last few days have been far less than might be expected, but the slaughter among the Germans has been incredible."

Credit Air Force And Navy

Some soldiers had not had time to shave for days. Uniforms were torn. Burnt powder covered their faces. Some were so tired they fell asleep as soon as they reached the special trains pulled onto the piers to take them off the transports.

They acknowledged their air force and navy had saved them.

"Thanks," called a young soldier to a navy man on the road.

"Buy them one for me," called another at sight of an air force man.

The battle-worn troops were said by their officers to be arriving in thousands, "exhausted but with high morale."

places in trains and motor busses. But they slumped into their seats too tired and worn to do much of this.

With uniforms stained and shredded, they were a battle-scarred lot.

Typical was a heavy fellow with several days' growth of beard. He gave a tired grin and said:

"We've had a terrible time this 'ere last fortnight . . . swimming canals . . . nights without sleep . . . bombings . . .

"Fifty or more Jerry planes would sail over and drop their bombs. Just as we were getting over that, here would come

Loaded down with full equipment, shipload after shipload arrived.

Police and military guards kept crowds from the piers, pressing for a glimpse of loved ones known to have been in the "hell" of German concentrated fire.

Veterans Given Big Cheer

But coast dwellers got near enough to the disembarking warriors to give them a great cheer.

The soldiers were singing, shouting and waving as they took fifty or so more, and so on, in relays."

The Tommies were not too tired to lean out of train windows and wave the "thumbs up" salute to people on station platforms.

All ranks said the Germans took a terrific pounding in spite of their temporary gains of territory.

British Flyers Superior

The Tommies said, too, that the Royal Air Force showed "marked superiority" over German flyers, man for man and plane for plane, despite its far inferior numbers.

One group reported that German planes bombed them steadily before embarkation and told of raids by bombers on their steamer after they had left port.

A few of this group were wounded slightly.

All ranks told also of urgent need for more air power to support the land troops.

A veteran of the last war said the German advance was accomplished "by sheer weight of numbers."

Mile-Long Barrage Laid

"The British put up a barrage a mile long to stem the advance," he added.

"I fought in the last war, but I have never seen anything like it. The Germans advanced right into it, disregarding human life. Their casualties must have been tremendous."

Another soldier said fleeing refugees hampered movements of the Allied troops throughout. He added:

"The Germans drove tanks right over them, caring nothing for men, women or children. It was mass murder in the first degree."

Soldiers said that throughout the embarkation they were machine-gunned and bombed from the air. Many were still wet from swimming to ships and wading to boats.

Naval crews who brought them to England were as tired as the troopers themselves and had to be relieved on arrival.

Leaders Of England Describe Invasion As Really Imminent

[By the Associated Press]

London, May 30—Invasion of England itself was described by Britain's leaders tonight as really imminent.

Several defense sources gravely affirmed the belief that the Nazi forces across the narrow Channel soon would resume pursuit of the weary expeditionary troops, saved at the acknowledged cost of three British destroyers and several other surface ships.

Inviolate since 1066, while Britain fought its wars on foreign soil, the kingdom doggedly dug in for the worst.

Battle Marks On Vessels

The ferocity of Nazi attacks upon the vessels was grimly underscored in tattered lines of gunfire and bomb holes in the funnels of the warships, transports and hospital craft put to desperate rescue duty in the Channel.

The Admiralty conceded the loss of the destroyers Grafton, Wakeful and Grenade, a small transport and various auxiliary ships in connection with the withdrawal of troops.

An evening communique gave official affirmation of the report that a successful withdrawal of at least part of the trapped forces has been effected.

The communique said the withdrawal operations had been carried out to date "with great skill and daring."

German Claims Denied

"The German high command has claimed to have inflicted very large losses on naval units and transports which they protect," the Admiralty said. "As usual, these bear no relation to facts."

The withdrawal was facilitated by the heroic stand at Calais of the small British force sent to France last week to maintain communications.

This force, which arrived just in time to find that the main body of the British Expeditionary Force was withdrawing toward Dunkerque, proved "of invaluable assistance" in the retreat, the communique said.

"Among Most Heroic Deeds"

"This action," it continued, "will count among the most heroic deeds in the annals of the British army."

The communique did not say exactly what happened to this small force, but mentioned that "its refusal to surrender Calais until it contained a large number of the enemy" was accomplished "in spite of repeated attacks and of continuous air and artillery bombardment."

The Royal Air Force was credited with successful screening of the withdrawing troops. In "constant engagement with the enemy," the communique said, "the Royal Air Force destroyed over seventy-seven enemy aircraft."

Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary, told the people, meanwhile, that "there is every prospect of early call upon the civil defense."

He urged all units to keep "fully manned and in a state of readiness and efficiency."

Communiques issued almost simultaneously on air, naval and land operations gave details of the perilous Channel battle.

77 Nazi Planes Downed

"Latest reports show," the Air Ministry said, "that at least seventy-seven aircraft were destroyed by our fighters during the day.

"Meanwhile Royal Air Force medium bombers were attacking enemy transport columns and armored fighting vehicles, destroying bridges and machine-gun emplacements."

The communique said repeated attacks had been made upon German-held air fields, "causing extensive fires in hangars and surrounding buildings."

The Admiralty said in reporting losses of the destroyers and other vessels that "operations of this nature cannot be carried out without losses."

Both Built In 1936

The Grafton and Grenade, both built in 1936, were of 1,335 tons each and carried 145 officers and men. Each carried four 7.7-inch guns, six smaller guns and eight torpedo tubes.

The Wakeful, 1,100 tons, was completed in 1917 and refitted in 1939. It carried four 4-inch guns with two heavy machine guns.

The transport lost was a small one, the Abukir, 689 tons.

The Admiralty said "the next of kin of the casualties are being notified as details become available," presumably meaning that few rescues were made.

Vice-Admiral Sir James Somerville assured the kingdom in a broadcast tonight that British naval forces are prepared to meet any kind of a German attempt at invasion.

At the same time the Health Ministry said it might be necessary to broaden the areas of the east and southeast from which children are leaving next week.

Already 39,000 children, comprising sixty-one per cent. of the school population of fifteen cities, are ready for evacuation starting Sunday.

Malcolm MacDonald, Health Minister, in a broadcast, called on all parents to register their children for transfer, and declared the risk of early bombing was "real."

Promise Fight To Finish

In official circles, a fight to the finish was promised.

Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, declared that Adolf Hitler no longer can have "the seat at the conference table which so long has awaited him." He added:

"The Allies are forces against which Hitler may deliver one defeat, two defeats, defeat upon defeat, but which I believe he cannot overcome."

That the Channel fight strikes into virtually every British home was illustrated in today's news that the royal family had

Citizens Are Ashen-Faced

In the streets, the stores and the trains for the first time since the war started a reluctance to discuss the happenings is evident. Ashen-faced citizens, almost all of them awaiting word of a relative or a friend, can no longer bear to talk about it.

The entire southeast coast of England has become a front line. Women and children are leaving. The Government is expected to order all civilians out of the area soon.

If Germany consolidates her air bases on the French coast she will have her bombers five minutes away from England.

lost a member in action. The victim was Lord Frederick Cambridge, first cousin of King George.

Naval Hero Believed Dead

Another probable victim was Capt. David William Simpson, a naval hero who was decorated early this year. He is missing and believed dead.

Comfort is found, however, in the news that the withdrawal is being accomplished with better-than-hoped-for results. One press source said:

"Quite obviously nothing can be given out about the operations now in progress, for even a single word might still further jeopardize and imperil the lives of this brave force which, through a fortnight of slaughter and carnage, has displayed a gallantry and courage that will make their names live forever."

Appeal For Nurses

Other developments of the day:

The Health Ministry appealed for nurses—as many as quickly as possible.

The Government said huge losses of equipment were suffered in abandoning positions across the Channel. It was destroyed to keep it from the Germans.

Huge billboards across England bore the slogan, "Go [illegible] It." This symbolized the dedication of the [illegible]ion's men and materials to the mightiest task [illegible]he kingdom's history.

[illegible] crews started tearing down signposts which [illegible]d be useful in directing invaders.

P[illegible] was given the Government to suppress newspapers printing anti-war material.

The Air Ministry charged German planes had bombed hospital ships plainly marked with the Red Cross.

The Royal Air Force, toast of the kingdom these days, asserted it had disabled at least sixty-nine enemy planes in the last day's operations, the German losses being seven times those of the British.

Concentration On Munitions

President Duncan of the Board of Trade told Commons every resource "must now be concentrated on immediate production of armaments." Much industrial strength previously devoted to export trade must be diverted to munitions, he added. Duncan forecast rationing of materials and labor.

Householders with steel shelters were ordered to assemble them at once.

The sugar ration of troops on leave was halved.

B. E. F. Begins Reaching Home

LONDON, May 30 (A. P.).—By thousands, first arrivals from the Flanders battleground reached England tonight in warships, transports and hospital ships.

The ships were convoyed across the English Channel through a tempest of bombs and machine-gun fire.

Describing the arrival, a dispatch tonight from "a southeast port in England," read:

"Powder-begrimed and bloodstained veterans of the desperate twenty-day campaign in Belgium and northern France told in tired voices tonight of 'terrific German losses' as they escaped to this haven in Britain.

Thousands of these war-weary troops, dazed and glassy-eyed from their sleepless horrors, came ashore as the Allies withdrew their fire-raked forces from the country surrounding and protecting certain channel ports of the Continent from German invaders.

"They came in warships and transports, and their wounded came in hospital ships convoyed across the rough channel through showers of bombs.

"Some soldiers had not had time to shave for days. Uniforms were torn. Burnt powder covered their faces. Some were so tired they fell asleep as soon as they reached the special trains pulled onto the piers to take them off the transports.

"They acknowledged their air force and navy had saved them.

" 'Thanks,' called a young soldier to a navy man on the road.

" 'Buy them one for me,' called another at sight of an air force man.

"The battle-worn troops were said by their officers to be arriving in thousands, 'exhausted but with high morale.'

"Loaded down with full equipment, shipload after shipload arrived at this port. Police and military guards kept crowds from the piers, pressing for a glimpse of loved ones. But coast dwellers got near enough to the disembarking warriors to give them a great cheer.

"The soldiers were singing, shouting and waving as they took places in trains and motor buses. But soon they slumped into their seats, too tired and worn to do much of this."

The Admiralty announced tonight that the destroyers Grafton, Grenade and Wakeful had been lost.

One small transport, the Abukir, 689 tons, also was sunk.

Certain auxiliary vessels also were said to be lost in actions covering the withdrawal of troops.

Further Withdrawal Announced

One hospital ship was reported to have undergone a strafing while loading casualties in a French port.

The battle on the French and Belgian channel coast, the base of the Allied withdrawals, still raged, the Ministry said, adding that more than seventy German aircraft had been destroyed and many others damaged through yesterday.

"In view of increased German pressure on their northern and southern flanks," the Ministry's announcement said, "the British Expeditionary Force and French forces in the north have been forced to fall back toward the coast where the battle is now raging."

French as well as British troops were being brought into England as a result of the evacuation along the channel.

The small British Expeditionary Force sent to Calais last week in the face of the German mechanized sweep to the coast performed invaluable assistance to the main body of the B. E. F. "by its refusal to surrender," the War Office said tonight.

The Calais force, unable to maintain contact between the channel port and the main body of the British, concentrated on defense, a War Office statement said. The action, it was said, will be counted "among the most heroic deeds in the annals of the British Army."

The communique did not say what happened to the holding force.

The Government is expected to order all civilians out of the southern coastal area soon. If Germany consolidates her air bases on the French coast she will have her bombers five minutes away from England.

In official circles, a fight to the finish was promised.

Asserting that there is "every prospect of an early call upon the civil defense services," the Home Secretary tonight urged them all to keep fully manned and in a state of readiness and efficiency.

The civil defense services include the organization to combat parachute troops and air raid precautions units.

The Government said that huge losses of equipment were suffered in abandoning positions across the Channel. It was destroyed to keep it from the Germans.

Comfort is found, however, in the news that the withdrawal is being accomplished with better than hoped for results. One press informant said:

"Quite obviously nothing can be given out about the operations now in progress, for even a single word might still further jeopardize and imperil the lives of this brave force which, through a fortnight of slaughter and carnage, has displayed a gallantry and courage that will make their names live forever."

Air Force Toasted.

Meanwhile the Health Ministry appealed for nurses—as many as quickly as possible.

The Royal Air Force, toast of the Kingdom these days, asserted it had disabled at least sixty-nine enemy planes in the last day's operations, the German losses being seven times those of the British.

A single squadron of twelve British Defiant fighting planes shot down thirty-seven German planes yesterday, the Air Ministry announced today.

On morning patrol the squadron shot down seventeen fighters and a dive bomber and in the afternoon nineteen and possibly twenty-one bombers, the Ministry said.

One British gunner, believing that his plane was vitally hit, took to his parachute over Belgium, but with that exception every man and machine returned safely, it was said.

Wounded Brought Back.

Many wounded soldiers are being safely transported across the channel to England despite the fact that the British charge that a hospital ship was bombed unsuccessfully yesterday and that two others were sunk in Dieppe Harbor recently.

A hospital ship arrived today at a south coast port, carrying wounded of the British Expeditionary Force. The portholes had been smashed by machine-gun bullets and the funnels were riddled.

British spokesmen said that German planes attacked the vessel in a French port yesterday while it was taking on wounded men.

The stream of soldiers, wounded and refugees landing after hazardous voyages across the channel merged with the flow of women and children from the southeast English coast area to create a huge mass movement toward the west from the threatened blitzkrieg.

For the people of the United Kingdom, it was not a question of whether the fury of German arms would strike at the British Isles, but when the attack would come.

News dispatches from Paris said that German military preparations in Zeeland, seized from the Dutch, and in Norway, captured last month, could not be explained as local operations.

BRITISH DECREE PRESS CONTROL

May Suppress Mosley Paper and Daily Worker.

5 ARRESTS IN A FACTORY

Fascist Headquarters Is Raided at Northampton.

LONDON, May 30 (A. P.).—The Government issued new defense regulations today, giving the Home Secretary power "to suppress any newspaper which systematically publishes matter which in his opinion is calculated to foment opposition to the prosecution of the war."

The regulation, which also gives the Home Secretary power to "deal with" printing presses used to print offending newspapers, is expected to lead to suppression of "Action," organ of Sir Oswald Mosley's British Fascist group, and the Communist newspaper Daily Worker.

Sir Oswald was detained last week in the Government's drive against fifth columnists.

The new rules prohibit the use of radio sets in automobiles and provide for confiscation of signaling apparatus. Authorities also were empowered to confiscate land for war use.

Arrests at Factory.

Detectives made arrests today at an unnamed factory and said charges of sabotage would be made under the defense of the realm act.

The headquarters of the Fascist British Union at Northampton, ancient fortified town sixty miles north of London, was raided today and four men were arrested.

Taught "the lesson of Norway and the Low Countries," Britain is searching out other organizations suspected of masking Nazi activities under other names.

Highway crews started tearing down signposts which would be useful in directing invaders.

Clubrooms are being raided, 8,800 German and Austrian men and women have been interned—although many of them professed to be refugees from the Hitler regime—and restrictions have been tightened to prevent aliens from owning automobiles, boats, bicycles or airplanes.

Even Americans are included under the drastic regulations and a curfew order effective June 3.

Arrests have increased daily, with charges ranging from studying maps to taking gas company blueprints.

More in Prospect.

Sir John Anderson, Minister of Home Security, said that more arrests were to come. He hinted in the House of Commons that the authorities had information of masquerading pro-Nazi organizations and said the offices of the Anti-Vivisection Society had been raided because of information that British Fascists were operating from there.

He made no reply to a question by Lady Astor: "Is it wise to lock up a man but leave his wife free?"

Last week Sir Oswald Mosley, head of the British Union of Fascists, was interned. Lady Mosley remained at liberty.

Sir John told the House of Commons today: "The number of persons of German and Austrian nationality in this country is approximately 31,000 males and 42,000 females of whom about 5,600 and 3,200, respectively, are interned."

Nazis Tell of Destroying Foe

BERLIN, May 30 (A. P.).—The British and French armies in the Flanders-Artois trap are being destroyed, the German High Command announced today, and the German air force has sunk three Allied warships and sixteen transports of the fleet attempting to effect withdrawals from the pocket.

British and French troops able to reach the channel coast through the raking bombardment of the German air force and German artillery were said to have plunged into the sea, trying to swim to the small British boats lying at anchor to carry them away.

These boats and protecting warships were the particular targets of the German fighter and destroyer units in the air.

More than sixty ships were said to have been hit by the rain of bombs, including the three warships and sixteen transport vessels reported sunk.

Ten warships and twenty-one merchant ships of all sizes were reported "seriously damaged or fired."

Say Destruction Is Near.

The High Command said that the battle of Flanders and Artois is "nearing an end with the destruction of the English and French armies fighting there."

Many French units, cut off from all hope of escape to the sea with their British comrades by the German capture of Lille, French industrial city, were reported laying down their arms. These men—no one here knew their number—were compressed into an area twelve miles square south of Lille, sliced off from the main Flanders pocket.

This smaller pocket dangled at the Lille apex of the triangular trap around the British Expeditionary Force and other French units. The base of the triangle, about forty miles from Lille, was a twenty or thirty-mile strip of French and Belgian coast, Dunkirk at the center of the line.

The British Expeditionary Force, caught with the French forces in the Flanders-Artois trap after the Belgian surrender, is in complete dissolution, said the High Command.

Leaving enormous quantities of war material behind, the British are fleeing to the sea, according to the Germans.

Anti-aircraft artillery, firing point blank at Allied boats seeking to remove the shattered forces from the channel shore, was credited wtih sinking one patrol boat and damaging ten others, including five speedboats.

Pursuit and destroyer plane units protecting the "monster attack" of the German land forces shot down sixty-eight Allied planes, the High Command said.

Report Troops Encircled.

South of the Poperinghe-Cassel line, on the southern fringe of the Flanders pocket, German forces were reported to have converged from the west, east and south, thereby encircling and cutting off numerous strong enemy groups.

Neutral military circles here expressed the belief today that the British must have succeeded in getting quite a number of men out of the swiftly closing German trap, since movements of transports off the English Channel coast have been reported under way for the last four days.

On the southern front—along the lower edge of the German salient through northern France to the channel—an Allied tank attack was repulsed on the lower Somme river. South and southwest of Amiens troop concentrations in forests were bombed, according to the daily communique.

In all, the High Command said eighty-nine Allied planes were destroyed yesterday, including the sixty-eight shot down by pursuit and destroyer groups. Seventeen were said to have been picked off by anti-aircraft gunners and the remainder destroyed on the ground.

The Germans acknowledged that fifteen of their own planes were missing.

Air attacks were concentrated on ships lying off Ostend, fallen Belgian port, and Dunkirk, French seaport just forty-five miles from the English shore and 108 miles of sea from London.

Fires raged in Dunkirk and the Germans asserted that the harbor had been rendered useless by the bombing of locks which had preserved the water level in the anchorage basins. The basins were said to have turned into mud flats.

Two flying corps under Gens. von Richthofen and Grauert swept over the channel for the assault on the warships and transports.

Von Richthofen, cousin of the late world war ace, Baron Manfred von Richthofen, was commander of the Condor Legion which Germany sent to the Spanish civil war.

Some Reported Surrendering.

German sources said that some of the French troops were throwing down their arms in surrender to escape the bombardment of the power-diving planes. Many such groups were said to have surrendered south of Lille—in a twelve-mile square pocket, cut off from the main area of envelopment.

The British Expeditionary Force was pictured by German sources as being cut to pieces almost within sight of the chalk cliffs of Dover.

Desperately the Allies tried to save some of the thousands trapped by the German sweep to the coast through northern France and along the Belgian coast, over territory yielded in the surrender of the Belgian Army ordered by Leopold III.

The High Command indicated with its statistics on ships sunk, planes downed and material abandoned that the Allies had taken heavy punishment.

Although the Flanders-Artois mop-up would conceivably place Germany in position for a cross-channel attempt to invade England, the Nazi press hinted that France, rather than the British Isles, would be the next major target.

Newspapers carried stories charging French frightfulness paralleling world war propaganda stories about the Germans.

Rumors that Germany might be offering a separate peace to France were hotly denied in Berlin.

Accuse French of Sadism.

"Nobody with the slightest show of authority is in position to make any such statement," authorized informants said.

"We have no reason to look at the French any differently than at the English. When it comes to Sadism the French even have the edge on the English."

There have been allegations recently of maltreatment of German prisoners by the French, especially French Colonials.

Authorized informants said the "spirit of fight-to-the-finish against both the French and English" was "further inflamed as it becomes more evident that the French sent sadistic colored races against the white man."

The Allied air forces struck behind the western front into Germany last night, but again the Germans declared the attacks were "against unimportant non-military objectives."

DNB, official news agency, said three bombs dropped Tuesday night on the residential section of Gelsenkirchenbuer, in western Germany, killed two civilians, injured four and caused considerable property damage.

Answering a British declaration that Allied bombers were not intentionally attacking civilians, DNB said:

"Under the same token they could bomb Cologne Cathedral and say it was not intended. Germany is chalking up all these things."

The Germans admitted that the Flanders resistance was fierce and that their losses were heavy.

In a special announcement earlier today, the German High Command specified Dunkirk and Ostend as the targets of last night's aerial attack.

Meanwhile today, as the Nazi press hinted that France rather than Great Britain would be the objective of the next major drive of Adolf Hitler's war machine, the German army concentrated its full mechanized might upon quick defeat of half a million Allied troops in the battle of Flanders.

Reports from the front today only strengthened the German conviction that the beleaguered Allied armies are doomed to surrender or annihilation in short order. They told of the capitulation of groups of French soldiers encircled by the Germans south of Lille, and informed spokesmen added that there was a noticeable weakening of French resistance at many points within the Nazi steel trap.

In German eyes, it appeared that only a miracle could save the Allied forces from capture or utter destruction.

The Germans looked to the continued pounding of their dive-bombers, tanks and heavy artillery to reduce the French and British to capitulation on the best possible terms in a very short time.

The Germans admitted that Allied resistance was fierce, that the trapped men were selling their lives dearly and that the German losses were heavy in the smashing drive to close out this chapter of the war in the west. But they could see only one outcome—and that a Nazi victory.

Sums Up Foe's Position.

One German observer summed up the seemingly hopeless position of the Allies in four points:

1. The separation of the British and French forces—with the British penned in a rough triangle running from Lille to the sea and the French encircled south of that city—has made military co-operation between the two impossible.

2. The encirclement of the two forces has weakened each so much that they have not the strength to cut through the German lines.

3. The terrific Nazi air artillery bombardment of Dunkirk, the only major port held by the trapped Allied troops, has cut off the last possible avenue of escape by sea.

4. German control of the coast—with Nazi bombers ranging over the sea and Nazi speedboats roaming the channel and North Sea waters—has blocked any shipment of reenforcements either in men or supplies by the sea route.

The German military authorities meanwhile reported that the German forces were mopping up in Lille, the most important industrial city in the northwestern corner of France, and applying tremendous pressure on the isolated French to the south and the British to the north.

Concede Sea to British.

It was admitted that the British still had the sea at their back, but this, the Nazis said, seemed to offer little chance for escape, since the harbor of Dunkirk has been subjected to blasting German artillery fire and is reported to have been in flames for three days. No other port still in the hands of the Allies, in this sector, it was said, has facilities for the rapid embarkation of large numbers of troops.

Moreover, German bombers were reported to be darting up and down the coast, ready to pounce upon any transport and prepared to tackle even the sturdiest of warships.

The possibility of any large numbers of British escaping was consequently regarded as negligible, and the phrase "a futile waste of blood," which the Germans have often used before in speaking of the Poles, the Norwegians and the Belgians, was again being heard in military circles.

The triangle in which the British were hemmed in, was described as starting on the Belgian coast at a point south of Ostend, running southeast from there to Roubaix and Lille, then back to the coast on a line through Hazebrouck to a point on the French coast between Gravelines and Dunkirk. Its sides were about fifty miles long, and its base on the sea about thirty miles wide.

Nazis Claim General's Capture

BERLIN, May 30 (A. P.) (By Radio).—Gen. Rene Prioux, commander of the French First Army, was captured with his entire staff on May 29 near Steenvoorde, east of Cassel, according to an official German announcement.

The British and French armies in the Flanders-Artois trap are being destroyed, the German High Command announced, and the German air force has sunk three Allied warships and sixteen transports of the fleet attempting to effect withdrawals from the pocket.

PROTEST IS SENT TO PARIS

Nation Declares It Took Brussels Staff 13 Days to Get Home.

BERLIN, May 30 (A. P.).—Germany protested vigorously today through the Swedish legation in Paris against alleged treatment of the German embassy staff in Brussels while en route home via France and Switzerland, declaring it was contrary to all international usage.

The protest alleged that it took 206 members of Germany's mission in the Belgian capital headed by Ambassador Vicco von Bulow-Schwante, thirteen days to reach Germany because the French broke a promise to the Belgians to let the Germans through France unmolested.

However, the German protest said, fourteen were taken from their train at the French-Belgian border and subjected to indignities and maltreatment in an attempt to elicit diplomatic secrets.

Of the fourteen, it is charged that three were removed and found only much later as "captives" at Boulogne when the Germans took that Channel port.

It was authoritatively stated that the Ambassador agreed to leave Brussels by a French-Swiss route after receiving assurances that the mission could travel unmolested. At the French border, however, [illegible] started, the Germans charge.

An official German account said the French secret service, "in an undignified manner," examined the passports of the arrested fourteen.

The Ambassador was not allowed to communicate with a Belgian Foreign Office representative accompanying the party and attempts to lodge a protest were futile. Inquiries into the fate of the fourteen were at first without result.

After waiting twelve days in vain for information regarding three staff members held—the other eleven were returned by special train—Ambassador Von Bulow-Schwante decided to have the train proceed to Switzerland since the situation of the women and children aboard was becoming precarious and the attitude of the French population at the border station was described as threatening.

The sharpest protest was then launched by way of Sweden, which has the German representation in France. [illegible]

Envoy To Brussels Claims Soldiers "Scolded" Members Of Party

Von Bulow-Schwante Says Train Was Held Up Twelve Days

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, May 30—Germany's Ambassador to Brussels, Vicco von Bulow-Schwante, told the foreign press tonight his diplomatic party of 206, including 130 women and children, was subjected to indignities and torture in France in an effort to obtain diplomatic secrets.

The German Government has protested the treatment in sharply-worded communication through the Swedish legation in Paris.

Train Delayed, Claim

Von Bulow-Schwante said French authorities broke their promise not to interfere with the party, held them for thirteen days, arrested some and confined the rest under "conditions unworthy of human beings."

He described "uncouth, ill-mannered treatment and a scolding" by soldiers and police who boarded the train, which was held twelve days awaiting those placed under arrest.

All but three, who were taken to Boulogne, finally returned.

Meanwhile, von Bulow-Schwante said, he and his companions were held in "virtual imprisonment" with treatment "worse than that accorded common prisoners."

After several days women and children were allowed short daily walks but men were forced to remain in the coaches without sleeping cars and under orders not to open windows.

NAZIS EXPECT NEW SENSATION FROM HITLER

MAY 31 1940

Announcement Reported To Concern Italy's Entry Into War

Berlin Claims Capture Of French General And Rout Of Foe

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, Friday, May 31—Adolf Hitler has summoned Paul Joseph Goebbels, Propaganda Minister, to general headquarters in the west to prepare a "sensational announcement," dealing perhaps with Italy's entry in the war, a usually reliable source reported early today.

Also, the prediction was made in authorized quarters that another impending Blitzkrieg development would be a revival of a high pressure submarine drive so that the U-boats can be relieved from the region of Britain "for more distant waters."

Summons A Hasty One

Hitler's summons to Goebbels was a hasty one. The source that reported it gave it as his opinion that the "sensational announcement" would have to do with Italy.

He said he understood that there was an agreement between Hitler and Mussolini that Italy would enter the war only after Hitler has assured il Duce that the French air force is so demolished as no longer to constitute a threat to Italy's chief industries.

Most In Po Valley

Most of these are in the Po Valley, in the north of Italy.

Whether this assurance has been forthcoming, now that Germany has won the bloody battle of Flanders and claimed great inroads in the French and British air strength, is a matter of speculation.

Likewise, it was not known exactly when the announcement can be expected.

As for manpower, reliable German sources estimated last night that France has but 3,000,000 men left to face 8,000,000 Germans and, possibly, 4,000,000 Italians.

1,000,000 Casualties

Of the original 4,000,000 Frenchmen under arms, about 1,000,000 were declared either to have been killed, taken prisoner or to be facing annihilation within the next few days in the German pincer movement.

Of these remaining 3,000,000, German sources estimated that 1,000,000 are needed as possible defenders against Italy. Another 1,000,000 are said to be lined up between the Somme and Aisne rivers protecting Paris. One million are said to be in the Maginot Line.

These disclosures and estimates were made a few hours after the Reich's Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, had transmitted to the French Government through Sweden an official warning of reprisals in the event German flyers captured by the French are mistreated, and after a parade of other indications that German anger is now being directed in the main against France.

Paris Next Goal?

Now that the battle of Flanders is ending in a tempest of death from land and sky for the Allied troops attempting to escape to England across the Straits of Dover, there is wide speculation concerning a great onslaught on France's Somme-Aisne line, then Paris.

Should Italy enter the war, her position in the south, against France, would be much easier if the French troops were engaged against a great German offensive in the north. Many military observers also believe a deeper plunge into France is necessary for Germany before its forces can directly attack England with the fullest effect.

Nazis Report Capture Of French General

Berlin, May 30 (AP)—Germany's thundering guns and diving bombers took terrific toll on the Allied flight from Flanders tonight as the Nazi armies announced capture of the veteran French general Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux, with hundreds of his troops.

Prioux and his mechanized men had been fighting to hold open the lower end of the Allied escape corridor to the sea.

The Berlin radio said the 61-year-old general, commanding parts of the First French army, was trapped yesterday with his entire staff at Steenvoorde, just east of Cassel—barely twenty miles from Dunkerque, France.

MAY 31 1940

Wide Destruction Claimed

It was added that "the number of prisoners taken by the Germans cannot yet be estimated, even approximately."

The high command claimed "destruction" of the escaping armies of the Allies and their ships by the score.

Two whole flying corps, land guns, and even the leveled muzzles of anti-aircraft weapons tore at the remnants of the British Expeditionary Force, struggling in the sea and along the coast between Dunkerque and Osten.

French Debacle Cited

Behind the British were the French, many of their units cut off from the shore, declared by the high command to be annihilated or laying down their arms, helpless, uncounted.

Despite these scenes, with the German air force claiming the sinking of three warships and sixteen transports and the bombing of a total of sixty ships, neutral military men here believed the British must have succeeded already in taking a considerable number of troops out the Flanders trap.

They said there had been transport movements off the Channel coast for four days.

War Enters Wide-Open Phase

Yet to Germans the bloody coastal chapter written by massed dive bombers and German artillery opened up a "tremendous perspective for the future," in the words of the authoritative commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland.

Dienst said the war is entering a wide-open phase, and that the first great attack of the German air fleet in the Dunkerque-Ostend area was a prelude not only to increased air assaults but to intense submarine warfare conducted from Belgian and Dutch bases.

Most Germans, watching straws in the wind, believe the fury of the land and air attack will descend within the next few weeks upon the French armies shielding Paris.

Paints Grim Picture

The German high command painted a grim picture of the plight of the Allies plunging off the Channel coast, almost within sight of the white cliffs of England.

"The bitter battle of Flanders and Artois is nearing the end with the destruction of the English and French armies fighting there," it said.

"The British Expeditionary Force since yesterday is also in complete dissolution. Leaving enormous quantities of war materials behind, the English are fleeing seaward.

"Swimming and in small boats, the enemy is attempting to reach English ships lying in the roads outside the harbor, upon which our air force bore down with destructive effects. . . ."

Havoc By Airmen

The two flying corps which wrought such havoc at Dunkerque and Ostend were commanded by Generals von Richtofen and Gravert, the former a cousin of the late World War ace, Baron Manfred von Richtofen.

Their bombs wrecked the anchorage locks at Dunkerque, making the harbor useless, and the British rescue ships had to stand out to sea.

Fires swept the town.

In addition to the three warships and sixteen transports (claimed) sunk by the air force, the high command said ten warships and twenty-one merchantmen were damaged badly or set afire and that artillery and anti-aircraft sank one patrol boat and damaged eleven patrol boats or speedboats.

TWO MORE FRENCH GENERALS TAKEN, GERMANS REPORT

MAY 31 1940

Correspondent Says They Were Captured in Town of La Capelle.

BERLIN, May 30 (A. P.).—The capture of two French generals in the French town of La Capelle was reported today in a broadcast by a German war reporter.

Motorized troops and tanks were said to have broken through the town's fortifications in the face of heavy fire from behind trees, hedges, windows and basements as well as from pillboxes.

Infantrymen, under cover of the tanks, stormed the houses of the town with hand grenades, but the principal resistance came from the post office, it was said. When guns had crumbled the walls of the structure "two elderly French officers stepped out without arms, one a division general and the other a brigadier," said the broadcaster.

"A German tank speeded up, carrying a German general, who told them: 'Gentlemen, I regret the circumstances under which we meet. May I express my respects regarding the brave manner in which your troops fought this battle?' "

Meanwhile La Capelle, the broadcast said, was taken and the German advance continued.

Some In Rome See Action Next Week

MAY 31 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, May 30—Premier Mussolini has summoned his Cabinet for next Tuesday to discuss "important matters" and some foreign quarters believed that action might be taken then to plunge Italy into war.

The possibility that a war decision might be announced that day or shortly afterward, however, was only a matter of conjecture.

Next Tuesday's meeting was decided on when the Cabinet last met, May 1, but publication today by most newspapers of a reminder that the meeting was coming was considered an indication that the session would be unusually important.

Stock Speculation Warning

At the same time the press published a warning against speculative rumors in the Stock Exchange, denying a rumor that the exchange would be closed or a moratorium declared at the first shock of Italian entrance into the war.

United States consular officials received instructions to advise Americans seeking to leave Italy but unable to get accommodations on the United States liner Manhattan to go to Bordeaux, France, and board the liner Washington.

The Manhattan began to take passengers and freight aboard at Genoa today. Cots were placed in the salons to accommodate extra passengers. The liner is to sail Saturday.

Il Giornale d'Italia published a dispatch from Salonika, Greek port on the Aegean Sea, speculating on the likelihood of an Allied attack there. Salonika was a springboard for the Allied World War campaign in the Balkans.

The dispatch said plans to disembark the Allied eastern army at Salonika on April 29 had been abandoned because of German successes in Norway and "differences" between Gen. Maxime Weygand, then Near Eastern commander, and Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, whom he succeeded as commander in chief of all Allied land forces.

Italy today expelled Pierre Gallozzi, correspondent of the French newspaper Paris Soir. The reason was not made public, but friends said they understood some of his recent articles had been held objectionable.

Allies Add To Fleet In Mediterranean

Alexandria, May 30 (AP)—The Allied fleet units off this eastern Mediterranean base have been further increased. Periodic maneuvers are being held.

Egypt is speeding new defense measures. Thousands of elementary school teachers were mobilized today into special volunteer squads to work as nurses in military hospitals.

The Air-Raid Protection Bureau has asked the Government for funds to finance the evacuation of Cairo, Alexandria and other cities. Museums were closed and priceless antiquities were moved to hidden places.

U. S. STUDENTS FOR PRIESTHOOD WILL QUIT ROME

106 to Sail Tomorrow for Home as War Looms for Italy.

SCHOOLS IN MALTA CLOSED

MAY 31 1940

Nation Prepares Feverishly With Day 'Awaited 20 Years' Now at Hand.

ROME, May 30 (A. P.).—The entire student body of the North American College, consisting of 106 students for the priesthood, will leave Rome tomorrow morning to return to the United States aboard the liners Manhattan and President Harrison.

Bishop Ralph Hayes, rector of the college, cabled to the home bishops of the students on May 17 advising them of the consular warning to Americans to leave Italy.

Normally the college has 120 students.

The others have already left, because either their families or their bishops thought it advisable because they had finished their studies and had been ordained.

[Dispatches from Valetta, Malta, said that the government of this island, a British Mediterranean naval base, announced today the closing of all schools, effective tomorrow, "as a simple measure of prudence."

War Still Closer.

Italy worked feverishly today preparing for the moment to which Premier Mussolini has been looking forward for nearly two decades—when the nation should go to war for her "aspirations."

Foreign and Italian observers alike expected a decisive step by Italy within a few days, throwing her into the war on the side of Germany. The latest Italian press outbursts against France and England have mentioned Nice, Corsica, Tunisia, Egypt, Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus and even the Dardenelles as among Italy's "aspirations" and observers believed that the first Italian war blow might be struck southward in the Mediterranean rather than directly at France.

[Under the terms of her alliance with the Allies, Turkey—guardian of the Dardenelles—is pledged to enter the war as an ally of Britain and France in the event of any act of "aggression leading to war in the Mediteranean area."]

At the same time, the recent visit of the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, to Italian-occupied Albania has caused uneasiness in Yugoslavia and Greece.

Manhattan Taking on Passengers.

Meanwhile today, the United States liner Manhattan began to take passengers and freight aboard at Genoa.

United States Lines officials hoped the ship could leave for home tomorrow, a whole day ahead of schedule, but this was considered unlikely as cots were placed in the salons to accommodate extra passengers fleeing from the European war zones.

Part of the Fascist war preparations centered on perfecting what is called the "third line of defense," consisting of an estimated 10,000,000 women and minors who would have non-combatant roles in wartime.

An announcement said that 27,000 volunteers were being trained to take over various jobs left by the men called to arms, 12,000 in special industrial jobs, 3,000 minors who will be employed on railways, and 12,000 women being trained for numerous other positions.

Volunteers in Rome continued to offer their services for a parachute corps, following the lead of Padua and Trieste workers.

Nicola Marabitto, writing in the semi-monthly political review, Conquista d'Impero (Conquest of Empire), asserted that Italy's "offensive objectives" would be actions by the navy and air force in the Mediterranean and land war in Africa to conquer the Anglo-French controlled Suez Canal, and eventually in the Balkans.

Military experts said that such a plan of campaign fitted in with Italy's failure to mass troops on the Italian mainland.

However, the mainland army was believed being strengthened steadily by the recall of various classes of reservists. This system has made impossible any accurate estimate of the number of men under arms, but competent observers guessed it may approach 2,000,000.

Russia Trades Peace Gestures With Hungary

Moscow Withdraws Troops From Frontier, Budapest Delays Call to Reserves

BUDAPEST, May 30 (AP).—The Soviet Union has withdrawn soldiers from the Hungarian frontier, and Hungary, in return, has suspended plans to call more reserves to her army, it was announced officially today.

MAY 31 1940

This action, along with others designed to settle Balkan disputes, appeared generally to convince the Hungarian capital that the axis powers, Germany and Italy, might succeed in limiting the scope of the European war to British and French territory. Budapest is strongly influenced by Berlin and Rome.

The military assurances exchanged by Hungary and Russia resulted from an agreement reached by Russia's Premier and Foreign Commisar, Viacheslav M. Molotov, and the Hungarian Minister at Moscow. Officials declared the relations between the two countries now were the best they have been since Soviet troops reached the crest of the Carpathian Mountains last fall in the partition of Poland.

Indications were that a Hungarian economic mission might be sent to Moscow soon.

A lessening of tension here led many Hungarians to believe the interests of Germany, Italy and Russia in southeastern Europe—where these three major powers have a decided voice—nearly have reached an equilibrium.

Belief is expressed in some quarters that the chances of this area remaining peaceful are increased, even if Italy enters the war soon. Yugoslavia's fear of an Italian attack has been quieted by Fascist diplomats, it was reported.

Rumania was understood to be vigorously seeking a settlement of the Bessarabian question with Russia. Bessarabia, a Rumanian province, was part of Czarist Russia and went to Rumania after the World War. Fears have been expressed in the Balkans that concern over Bessarabia might lead to Soviet invasion of Rumania.

KING LEOPOLD IS CERTIFIED UNFIT TO RULE

Exile Regime Approves Order Legally Depriving Monarch Of Throne

Cabinet Announces Government In Future Will Be Executed By Decree

MAY 31 1940

[By the Associated Press]

Paris, May 30—The Belgian Government in exile tonight approved an order legally depriving King Leopold III of his throne "in the name of the Belgian people."

". . . Considering the country under the power of the invader," said the Government order, "The Ministers in council certify that it is impossible for the King to rule."

After the King's capitulation to the Germans, Premier Pierlot announced that such action against him would be taken.

Government By Decree

The order will be published tomorrow under date of May 28—the day of the surrender.

The Cabinet also announced that future acts of the Belgian Government would be executed by Government decree.

Paul Van Zeeland, former Premier of Belgium, said in an interview today:

"All the living forces of the nation who have escaped the enemy must be assembled and reinvigorated and put to the common cause which Belgium and her Allies are defending."

Van Zeeland Not Despairing

Van Zeeland said he "does not despair for Belgium"—despite the surrender of the Belgian army by King Leopold—because "one is conquered only when he recognizes himself conquered."

"You can easily understand how I feel now, after hurrying back from America as in 1914," he said, "and upon arriving finding myself confronted by the worst."

Film Star Joins Allies

Paris, May 30 (AP)—Robert Montgomery, American motion-picture actor, arrived today in Paris from London to become an ambulance driver with the American field service.

MAY 31 1940

He said he joined the volunteer group because "it affords a chance for a practical application of President Roosevelt's good-neighbor policy."

Mrs. Montgomery, the former Elizabeth Bryan Allan, planned to return to the United States on the liner President Roosevelt, dispatched to Ireland to return Americans to their homeland.

Norse Imperil Nazi Retreat

Fleeing Narvik Garrison's Escape to Sweden Is Reported Blocked.

MAY 31 1940

STOCKHOLM, May 30 (A. P.).—Fighting a rear-guard action to cover their retreat toward the Swedish frontier, German troops withdrawing from the Norwegian ore port of Narvik were today reported in danger of having their retreat cut off by Norwegian troops deployed along the border.

Dispatches from the Swedish frontier said that the Germans were working their way along the railroad line from Narvik east into Sweden, while the Nazi air force sought to relieve the pressure on the troops by intensified bombing attacks.

Allied and Norwegian forces which ousted the Germans from the town were said to have completed the occupation of Narvik itself and to be engaged in mopping-up operations south of this port.

Warships Give Terrific Fire

Accounts of the final drive to occupy the city, contained in dispatches from Swedish war correspondents, said that the attack began at midnight of last Monday. An undetermined number of Allied warships, their guns lobsing a terrific barrage, drove straight toward the north side of the city, with landing parties ready.

German warplanes tried desperately to block the landing. But with the Nazi machine-gun nests overlooking the city already well cleaned out by artillery fire from the north side of narrow Rombak fjord, the occupation was established.

The several hundred civilians said to have remained in Narvik, underwent a night of terror as the struggle of German planes against Allied land and sea forces went on through Tuesday morning.

The Allies are also said to have landed additional forces at Ankenes, on a rocky promontory directly southwest of the city.

French General In Command.

LONDON, May 30 (A. P.).—British military spokesmen said today that the Allied troops which captured Narvik were commanded by a French general.

Although it was known that 100 prisoners were captured and that the rest of the German garrison escaped eastward toward the Swedish border, information on the operations still was scarce here.

The Air Ministry said that a reconnaissance plane bombed a German supply ship at Bergen, Norway, and set it afire.

MAY 31 1940

Nazis Minimize Blow

BERLIN, May 30 (A. P.).—The occupation of Narvik by the Allies was regarded by the German press today as an insignificant reverse.

Said Adolf Hitler's Volkischer Beobachter:

"It is a useless success. The enemy enters a town reduced to a heap of ruins by a week's bombardment."

In its regular communique today the German High Command said that the fighting around Narvik was continuing "unabatingly." The German garrison, driven from the town proper, took up mountain positions outside the port and, the Germans said, are being re-enforced.

In connection with the war in Norway, the Germans also said that "several planes were destroyed on the ground."

German chasseurs pushing northward from Trondheim, 400 miles from Narvik, were reported to have taken Fauske, east of Bodo, and a German submarine was credited with sinking seven Allied steamships totaling 38,480 tons, apparently off the Norwegian coast.

Bodo is about 165 miles southwest of Narvik.

Fleet Guns Raze Defenses

LONDON, May 30 (AP).—A Briton who witnessed the capture of Narvik yesterday said the port was wrested from the Germans by French, Polish and Norwegian troops while the heaviest guns of the British fleet silenced shore batteries and reduced the German positions to heaps of smoldering ruins.

MAY 31 1940

The fall of Narvik, held by Germans since the April 9 invasion of Norway, came at 11:20 p. m., exactly an hour after the British fleet started bombarding the German defenses. French troops in a military landing craft crossed the fjord at 10:45 under severe German fire and made a landing on the headland west of the beleaguered port.

The French deployed through the hills and attacked across strongly defended wooded country while the British warships kept up their bombardment. Polish troops attacked from the south and Norwegians stormed the eastern defenses, aided by the naval barrage.

It was said here that the Allied troops which captured Narvik were commanded by a French general. It was known that 100 prisoners were captured and the rest of the German garrison escaped eastward toward the Swedish border.

Railroad Mined, Berlin Says

Further details of the fighting at Narvik were reported by Swedish newspapers Thursday, the Berlin radio said last night in a broadcast heard in New York. A correspondent of the newspaper "Tidningen" reported that a large British warship was set on fire by a "full hit" and presumably sunk, the radio said. Other stories citing the devastating effect of German air raids on British naval forces and transports were also quoted by the broadcast.

It added that a British advance along the iron ore railroad running to Sweden was quite impossible, as all the bridges and tunnels had been mined by the German forces and could be destroyed at any time.

France Finds A Hero And A Scapegoat

[Henry C. Cassidy, 30-year-old Bostonian, of the Paris Bureau of the Associated Press, covered the Western front last fall at the outbreak of the war. He gained a first-hand knowledge then of the men directing the Allied forces and writes the following story on the basis of this knowledge.]

MAY 31 1940

By HENRY C. CASSIDY, Associated Press Staff Correspondent

Paris, May 30 (AP)—A strange twist in the fortunes of war has taken two of France's finest generals in the field and made one a hero, the other a scapegoat.

The hero is Gen. Georges Blanchard, whose army fought a losing battle against the Germans in Flanders after King Leopold's surrender of the Belgian forces.

The scapegoat is Gen. Andre Corap, whose army was broken by the Germans in the battle of the Meuse on May 15, opening France to invasion and the German rush to the English Channel.

Corap More The Hero Type

These two are the first of the active French commanders in the field whose parts in the war have been made public here. (Berlin also has reported the capture of Gen. Henri Giraud.)

I knew them both early in the war when their armies were holding sectors side by side on the Belgian border.

Corap was more the hero type.

Rotund in shape and bluff in manner, he had his headquarters in a hunting lodge in the Ardennes Mountains decorated with scowling boars' heads, spreading antlers and other trophies.

Talked Volubly Of His Doings

He talked volubly of his campaigns in Africa and his capture of Abd-el-Krim in 1926 during the Riff war.

"I talked to Abd-el-Krim like a child and told him a country like his, which dated from yesterday, should never try to make war against a nation like France, which dates back centuries," Corap said.

"Some day you may be telling Hitler the same thing," a young staff officer interjected, and Corap nodded.

Blanchard seemed more the studious type.

Tall, dark, serious in manner, Blanchard had his headquarters in the schoolhouse of a northern industrial town, with maps and documents spread across tables and on walls.

Blanchard Talks Soberly

He talked soberly of the complicated defenses of his sector with its pillbox line and inundation zone.

Before the war Blanchard had been director of the center for high military studies, where he succeeded Gen. Maxine Weygand, the new Allied generalissimo.

When Germany invaded the Low Countries on May 10 the armies of Corap and Blanchard went into action together.

Their Two Armies

Corap's army swung along the Meuse Valley, took the full blast of the German offensive, and broke.

Premier Reynaud announced to the Chamber of Deputies on May 21 the "complete disorganization" of Corap's forces.

Blanchard's army marched into Belgium, was ordered to retreat May 15 and was cut off by the Germans.

Since then Corap has fallen into the oblivion of defeated warriors, and Blanchard has become France's first great hero of the war.

NAZI SUBMARINES SINK THREE SHIPS

39 Seamen Are Missing Off Spanish Coast.

MAY 31 1940

LA CORUNA, Spain, May 30 (A. P.).—Three Spanish coast guard cutters fruitlessly searched the Atlantic waters off Cape Finisterre today for a lifeboat containing fourteen missing crewmen of the Argentinian freighter Uruguay, which, with two Allied vessels, fell prey to renewal of Germany's submarine warfare this week.

The 10,348-ton Uruguay was the first ship under an American flag to be sunk during the war.

The other victims were the French ship Marie Jose, 5,000 tons, sunk by torpedoes, and the British tanker Telena, 7,400 tons, shelled and set afire. Twenty-five members of their crews, totaling eighty-seven, were missing. The two ships were attacked yesterday off the Spanish coast. The Telena was reported under tow to land after the fire aboard her apparently extinguished itself.

A French lobster boat also was reported sunk, but details were lacking.

The Uruguay, which left Buenos Aires April 26 for Antwerp, Belgium, with grain, was diverted to Britain when Germany occupied Belgium.

Bjorkvall, Pilot, Killed; Fried Ocean Flight in '36

Swede Who Left Baroness Behind Dies in Blast

STOCKHOLM, May 30 (AP).—Kurt Bjorkvall, Swedish pilot who was forced down in an attempted flight in 1936 from New York to Stockholm after he had left behind a disappointed Swedish baroness, was killed with three others today in a hangar explosion. Bjorkvall, thirty-five, was a volunteer in Finland's defense.

MAY 31 1940

He and the Baroness Eva von Blixen-Finecke were scheduled to make the 1936 flight together, but at the last minute, he announced he had arranged with the sponsors to buy sole rights to the plane and make the trip alone.

The baroness said Bjorkvall had "backed out" on her. He was forced down in the Atlantic and picked up by a French trawler, then landed on the Irish coast.

Took Off Oct. 7, 1936

Kurt Bjorkvall took off on his attempted New York-Stockholm flight on Oct. 7, 1936. He and the Baroness Eva von Blixen-Finecke had planned the flight under the sponsorship of a Stockholm newspaper, but after a series of delays the newspaper canceled its backing. Bjorkvall then purchased the plane himself, it was reported, and despite the Baroness's pleas that she be permitted to accompany him, hopped off alone.

The plane used in the flight was a Wasp-powered Bellanca, loaded with 700 gallons of gasoline. Bjorkvall ran out of fuel 1,000 miles short of Stockholm and was forced to land in the sea after fighting bad weather for a number of hours. The French trawler attempted to tow the plane to shore but heavy seas prevented its being salvaged.

The Baroness was killed in an auto crash near Bagdad, Irak, March 25, 1938. She was motoring from Calcutta, India, to London when the accident happened.

RED CROSS URGES AID FOR 5,000,000

Asks 22 Nations to Help Refugees in France.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 30 (A. P.).—The International Red Cross and the League of Red Cross Societies issued a joint worldwide appeal today for immediate help for more than 5,000,000 war refugees swarming into France in desperate condition.

MAY 31 1940

The appeal was directed to twenty-two Red Cross organizations in Europe, Asia and Latin America.

The United States Red Cross, officials said, already is co-operating to the fullest extent.

The appeal asked European and Asian groups to speed clothing, shoes, layettes, bedding, cooking utensils, surgical instruments and dressings, non-perishable foods and tents to the nearest French ports.

A separate appeal went to Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Mexico, Venezuela and Uruguay asking for preserved meats, wheat, corn, chocolate, coffee, sugar and cotton goods.

"The world never before has faced such a horrible mass of war-driven, despairing and suffering humanity as is flooding France today," said Count Derouge, secretary of the general league societies.

Russian Sees War Making World Ripe for Revolt

Proletarian Uprisings Forecast in Many Countries

MOSCOW, May 30 (AP).—The prominent Soviet economist Eugene Varga said in an article today in the bi-monthly paper "Bolshevik" that "war between the imperialist states" has weakened the entire capitalist system. The article added that "victorious proletarian revolutions" in many countries and in their colonial holdings "are maturing."

Under the heading, "United States Imperialists and Latin America," the publication "Communist International" said:

MAY 31 1940

"The second imperialist war has awakened the masses in Latin-American countries, moving them to ght against imperialist war and for national independence. If the organized revolutionary proletariat is successful in mobilizing millions of workers and farmers against imperialism, then the Wall Street sharks will fail to enslave the peoples of Latin America who want peace, bread and freedom."

Parachute Flares Shot Across Rhine By French

Poilus Try To Pick Off Trench-Digging German Sappers Revealed In Glare

Basel, Switzerland, May 30 (AP)—The French shot hundreds of parachute flares over toward the German bank of the Rhine tonight and tried to pick off trench-digging sappers revealed in the glare as the front along the Rhine continued an exhibition of war activity.

Here, where it is known that both the German and French Rhine forces have been greatly reduced to back up the action in the northwest, it was said, however, that such activity was "inconsequential."

Last week French artillery shelled German Rhine communications three days in succession.

Throughout the war both sides on the Rhine front have resorted to frequent attempts to fool one another.

"All the living forces of the nation who have escaped the enemy must be assembled and re-invigorated and put to the common cause which Belgium and her Allies are defending."

Mr. Van Zeeland said that he does not despair for Belgium—despite the surrender of the Belgian Army by King Leopold III—because "one is conquered only when he recognizes himself conquered."

"You can easily understand how I feel now, after hurrying back from America as in 1914," he said, "and upon arriving finding myself confronted by the worst."

BERLIN, May 30 (A. P.).—German spokesmen disclosed today that Col.-Gen. Walther von Reichenau, commanding the German right wing sweeping through the Low Countries, conducted the negotiations which resulted in the Belgian Army's capitulation.

The Luxembourg Legation in Paris called on all citizens of military age in France to join and "contribute as much as they can to the success of the Allied cause."

The grand duchy, four-fifths the size of Rhode Island, had an army of only 250. It was undefended and neutral under international agreement dating back to 1867.

The trucks were sprinkled with gasoline and the police expressed the belief that bombs had been used to wreck them.

Porter and other news agents reported that they had been warned by the I. R. A. against handling the De Valera publication.

Wandering Nomads Flock to Egyptian Outposts.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May 30 (A. P.).—Wandering Bedouin tribesmen from the western desert bordering on Libya flocked to Egyptian military outposts today to volunteer for defense of their country.

The youthful nomads, who previously had refused to join the Egyptian Army, now believe that Italy soon may make a hostile move. Many recruits are sons of Bedouin chieftains who fled Italian rule in Libya.

Moslem high priests throughout the nation exhorted the men to be ready to give their lives defending the country, and declared their religion might require such a sacrifice. Husbands were told to inform their wives, who are barred from the mosques, that they might be required to work behind the lines in event of war.

Cooper Says Foe Can Win Battles But Not the War

Freedom in Danger, He Tells Press, but Not Hopelessly

LONDON, May 30 (AP).—Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, told a Foreign Press Association luncheon today that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler preferred "other methods of getting his way" to the conference table, and added, "We can assure him now that the seat at the conference table which so long has awaited him awaits him no longer, and he will never receive an invitation."

MAY 31 1940

Cooper said freedom was "in danger, but not, I believe, in hopeless danger, for I have complete confidence still as to the result of this conflict."

Hitler may defeat the Allies repeatedly, but he cannot win the final victory, said Cooper. "These are forces upon which Hitler may deliver one defeat, two defeats, defeat upon defeat, but which I believe he cannot overcome."

He asserted some Belgian troops had ignored the command of King Leopold to lay down their arms in Flanders. "There were some who did not hear it—whose ears were deaf to it as Nelson's eye once was blind to a command—and who still are fighting side by side with the Allies."

Hawaiian Detachment Made Part of U. S. Fleet

Order to 30 Ships Indicates Stay in Mid-Pacific

HONOLULU, May 30 (AP).—An order incorporating the Hawaiian detachment of approximately thirty warships into the United States Fleet was issued today. It was interpreted immediately in Navy circls as indicating the fleet would not return soon to California bases. The Hawaiian detachment heretofore had operated as a unit.

An officer on the staff of Admiral James O. Richardson, fleet commander in chief, explained that the change was in the interest of simplification of administration.

The Hawaiian detachment arrived last October and has been under the command of Admiral Adolphus Andrews, who will resume his normal post as commander of the scouting force.

Navy officers indicated the Hawaiian detachment was not eliminated but would not operate separately until the fleet returned to the mainland.

Preparations for resumption of training operations June 9 are being carried forward at Pearl Harbor.

Friend Of King Leopold Seeks U. S. Citizenship

Armand Denis, Belgian Explorer, Calls Criticism Of Ruler At This Time "Absurd"

Hartford, Conn., May 30 (AP)—Armand Denis, of Putnam, Belgian explorer, who is a friend of King Leopold III, revealed today that he had applied for United States citizenship, pointing out that he was "a subject of the King of the Belgians" but that those words "don't mean anything" now that the Belgian Cabinet has repudiated Leopold.

Denis, father of four American-born children, has been a resident of the United States off and on for seventeen years, but not until this year had he completed sufficient continuous residence to apply for naturalization.

40% Of Germany's Mechanized Force Claimed Lost In Drive

MAY 31 1940

House Members Quote General Marshall On Probable Toll In English Channel Drive

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 30—Well-informed House members said today Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, told a House appropriations subcommittee it was estimated that forty per cent of the German army's mechanized equipment had been destroyed in the Nazis' desperate drive to the English Channel.

Members said this estimate gave rise to speculation that the tide of Europe's battle might turn in the near future in favor of the hard-pressed Allies, since it seemed that Germany's acknowledged superiority in mechanized equipment could not be maintained in the face of such terrific losses.

Nazi Activities Reported

Committee members said the army also was described as disturbed by reports of Nazi activities in South American countries, particularly Brazil and Uruguay, as well as in Mexico.

They said army reports on the subject were borne out by published reports from Montevideo which said the President of Uruguay had asked the Congress there to adopt measures for dealing with "fifth column" dangers and to strengthen the army and navy.

Chairman Snyder (Dem., Pa.), of the appropriations unit, said the most reliable information available indicated there were "good-sized Trojan horses" in Brazil and that, with "all due respect to the Mexican Government," it was feared similar conditions existed in that country without the Government's knowledge.

Some Minimize Danger

Other committee members, however, sought to minimize the danger of such activities to the country. They declared that even if the present Brazilian Government were overthrown, the successor would not be necessarily inimical unless dominated by some European or other foreign power.

Legislators said they had been informed that Brazil had been acquiring war supplies from Germany in exchange for agricultural and other products and for about $80,000,000 worth of the latter had received munitions which would cost this country $200,000,000 to produce.

Commenting on lessons learned from the European war, some committee members said it was apparent the army was going to have to develop armor-piercing shells for use against heavy tanks.

Liner Washington Sails With Red Cross Supplies

New York, May 30 (AP)—Bound for southern Europe to carry Americans out of the war zones, the United States Lines' 24,269-ton Washington, largest passenger liner in America, sailed today with a cargo of first-aid supplies destined for Red Cross units.

The ship, its sides and decks emblazoned with its name and fifteen-foot-high American flags, also carried eleven men heading for the war fronts to act as ambulance drivers for the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps and the American Field Service in France. There were seventy-seven passengers in all, twenty-seven of them Americans. In addition, she carried 2,693 sacks of mail.

MAY 31 1940

The ship was diverted from her normal run to Genoa and Naples to pick up Americans at Lisbon and Bordeaux, in addition to Genoa.

Her capacity of 1,080 passengers has been expanded to 1,962 by installation of 100 special berths and 781 cots.

Prof. Guiseppe Bastianelli, personal physician to Benito Mussolini, returned to Italy aboard the ship, cutting short his stay in the United States "because they stopped the Italian ships from running." The Italian line has postponed its westward sailings.

Also aboard were Archer Woodford, United States Consul at Hamburg, Germany, and H. Freeman Matthews, first secretary of the American Embassy at Paris.

The Texts of the Day's War Communiques

German

BERLIN, May 30 (AP)—The German High Command's communique this morning follows:

On the afternoon and evening of May 29 strong groups of two flying corps under the leadership of Generals Grauert and von Richthofen attacked English warships and transport vessels in the harbors and sea regions arpund Ostend and Dunkerque, which were to remove the remainder of the defeated English Expeditionary Force to their homeland.

The attack, in which units of all the armed forces participated, was aimed at more than sixty ships. Three warships and sixteen transports, among them ships of more than 15,000 tons, were sunk by concentrated bomb attacks.

Thirty-one other ships received full hits and were badly damaged, part of them being made unmanageable and part set afire.

The locks of the harbor of Dunkerque were completely destroyed and the harbor basins emptied.

Pursuit fliers, who, in common with the bombers, carried on the fight against the English transport undertaking, shot down sixty-eight planes.

The group of Colonel von Masson distinguished itself in particular. Ten other planes which protected the loading operations were shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

The anti-aircraft guns sank in addition a smaller warship and heavily damaged five others with direct hits.

Later the High Command gave out the following:

The bitter battle of Flanders and Artois is nearing the end with the destruction of the English and French armies fighting there.

The English Expeditionary Force since yesterday is also in complete dissolution. Leaving enormous war materiel behind, the English are fleeing seaward.

Swimming and in small boats, the enemy is attempting to reach English ships lying in the roads outside the harbor, upon which our air force bore down with destructive effects, as already announced.

More than sixty ships were hit, of which three warships and sixteen transports were sunk. Ten warships and twenty-one merchant ships of all sizes were seriously damaged or fired.

Our anti-aircraft and artillery also sank one enemy patrol boat and damaged five others, as well as five speedboats.

Pursuit and destroyer plane groups, participating for protection of a monster attack of German fighting units, shot down sixty-eight enemy planes.

South of the line of Poperinghe-Cassel, out troops attacking from the west, east and south joined, thereby encircling and cutting off numerous strong enemy groups.

During the storming of an armored stronghold at Hazerbrouck on May 28, one armored Pioneer Battalion under command of First Lieut. von Bodecker distinguished itself especially.

On the southern pront, an enemy tank attack on the lower Somme [River] was repulsed.

South and southwest of Ameins, troop concentrations in the forests were bombarded.

Enemy losses yesterday totalled eighty-nine airplanes, of which sixty-eight were shot down in air fights, seventeen by anti-aircraft fire and the rest destroyed on the ground. Fifteen German planes are missing.

The fight around Narvik is continuing unabatingly. Our troops occupied mountain positions outside the city, and they are being reinforced. Fighting planes raided one airport. Several planes were destroyed on the ground.

One of our submarines reported sinking seven enemy steamers with a tonnage of 38,480.

British

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—Today's War Office communique follows:

The Royal Navy has been and is giving all possible help and support to British and French land forces which are operating in the vicinity of the French and Belgian coasts under enemy pressure.

MAY 31 1940

Warships are giving support and covering fire to the troops impeding the enemy's movements and have inflicted considerable punishment upon the German advanced forces.

Wounded and a large number of other elements have already been safely withdrawn.

These operations are being conducted ceaselessly by day and night with coolness and determination in face of fierce opposition, particularly from the air.

The German High Command has claimed to have inflicted very large losses on naval units and transports which they protect. As usual, these bear no relation to facts.

Operations of this nature cannot be carried out without loss.

H. M. Destroyers Grafton, Grenade and Wakeful and certain small auxiliary craft have been lost. The next of kin of the casualties are being notified as details become available.

One small transport, the Abukir, of 689 tons, has been sunk.

The spirit and conduct of all concerned are beyond all praise. The operations are proceeding.

The Air Ministry gave out the following statement this morning:

Royal Air Force fighters yesterday encountered many large formations of enemy aircraft engaged in bombing operations on the French and Belgian coasts.

In spite of the presence of strong enemy fighter escorts, our aircraft pressed home their attack at every opportunity. No less than fifty-two enemy aircraft were shot down during the day, including twenty-five bombers. Seventeen others were seriously damaged.

Ten of our fighters are missing, but one of the pilots, although wounded, has since returned safely.

Naval aircraft carried out an attack on an enemy seaplane base on the Dutch coast. Hangars were destroyed and a number of seaplanes seen to be wrecked. Other naval aircraft shot down an enemy bomber over the North Sea and disabled another.

One of our reconnaissance aircraft bombed an enemy supply ship at Bergen in Norway and set it on fire.

Our heavy bombers were again active during the night in support of Allied forces.

A bombing attack on a hospital ship clearly marked with a red cross was seen from a British reconnaissance aircraft of the coastal command over the English Channel Wednesday evening.

One bomb fell very close to the ship, enveloping it in foam. The British aircraft chased the bomber, which disappeared into clouds.

The Air Ministry made the following supplementary announcement in the afternoon:

Throughout yesterday the main effort of the Royal Air Force was concentrated on relieving pressure on the flanks of the Allied armies in Flanders.

Our fighters, in a magnificent series of actions, repeatedly broke up formations of enemy fighters and bombers. Very severe losses were inflicted on the enemy.

Latest reports show that at least seventy-seven enemy aircraft were destroyed by our fighters during the day.

Meanwhile, Royal Air Force medium bombers were attacking enemy transport columns and armored fighting vehicles and destroying bridges and machine-gun emplacements. These operations continued all day. All our aircraft returned. One attacking Messerschmitt was shot down. Operations by heavy bombers followed during the night.

Aircraft of the coastal command and of the fleet air arm engaged in reconnaissance and bombing operations on the French and Belgian coasts, shot down two enemy aircraft and damaged two others. Ten of these aircraft are missing, but crews of at least three have been rescued. Fuller reports have now been received of operations which took place on Monday in the Sedan area.

Medium bomber aircraft of the Royal Air Force, operating from France, attacked a number of enemy airdromes, causing extensive fires in hangars and surrounding buildings. They also successfully bombed supply depots and trains.

All our aircraft returned.

On the same day our fighters on offensive patrol in this sector shot down eleven enemy aircraft and damaged three more. It was on this occasion that one of our auxiliary fighter squadrons engaged a formation of twenty-four enemy bombers escorted by twenty fighters and shot down nine bombers and one fighter without loss to themselves.

In the Narvik area on May 27 and 28 thirteen enemy aircraft were destroyed by our fighters.

The War Office gave out the following:

Last week a small British force was sent to hold Calais and to attempt to maintain communication with the British Expeditionary Force.

Finding itself unable to carry out the latter task in face of strong enemy mechanized forces, it concentrated on the defense of Calais.

In spite of repeated attacks by the enemy and of continuous air and artillery bombardment, the garrison held out for several days.

By its refusal to surrender, it contained a large number of the enemy and was of invaluable assistance to the main body of the British Expeditionary Force in its withdrawal on Dunkerque. This action will count among the most heroic deeds in the annals of the British Army.

The Ministry of Information summarized the activities of all services as follows:

In view of increased German pressure on their northern and southern flanks, the British Expeditionary Force and French forces in the north have been forced to fall back toward the coast, where the battle is now raging.

This operation has been carried out with great skill and daring. Troops not immediately engaged have been evacuated with the assistance of the Royal Navy.

This operation is proceeding with success and numbers of troops have already reached this country.

The withdrawal and evacuation have been screened by the Royal Air Force, who have been constantly engaged with the enemy. Over seventy enemy aircraft were destroyed and many others were damaged yesterday on this front.

One squadron of new Defiants, fighter planes, destroyed in two sorties thirty-five of the enemy without loss to themselves. British troops are operating with the French in the sector south of the Somme.

French

PARIS, May 30 (AP)—The communique of the French High Command this morning stated:

"Various operations mentioned in yesterday evening's communiqué continued during the night. Violent fighting on the Yser (river) and in the region of Cassel. On the Somme and the remainder of the front, no new developments."

Tonight the High Command gave out the following:

Amid incessant fighting our troops of the north are carrying out with vigor and in good order movements decided upon by the High Command.

On the greater part of the Somme front fighting with favorable results is being carried on.

There is no change in the situation on the Aisne and on the eastern front.

A party of French infantry commanded by Sergeant Guillet brought down with machine-gun fire a Heinkel the day before yesterday and a Junker.

PARIS, May 30 (UP)—The text of a French Air Ministry communique tonight follows:

On May 29 and 30, despite unfavorable atmospheric conditions, our air force carried out important missions on the northern front day and night.

An important group of bombers comprising more than sixty planes, active late in the evening and at night, attacked and harassed with precision German reinforcements, supply columns, air fields, strategic roads and bridges. Dozens of tons of bombs were dropped, especially on Somme River bridges.

Moreover, precious information of the enemy's movements was gathered.

Along the course of the Somme a region north of the river was explored and photographed by reconnaissance planes.

Our chasers limited themselves to covering these missions, in view of bad weather and almost non-existent activity by enemy aviation.

One of our bombers was forced to land in unoccupied territory, and the crew is safe. One bomber machine-gunned a strong column, then shot down one Heinkel 126.

ROME, MAY 31-(AP)-REPORTS FROM BERLIN THAT ADOLF HITLER HAS SUMMONED HIS PROPAGANDA MINISTER TO PREPARE AN ANNOUNCEMENT CONCERNING ITALY'S PART IN THE WAR REACHED ROME TOO LATE FOR OFFICIAL COMMENT, BUT OBSERVERS SAID THEY THOUGHT IT HIGHLY UNLIKELY PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S PRECISE INTENTIONS WILL BE KNOWN BEFORE HE STRIKES.

WHILE EXPECTANCY WAS HIGH THAT ITALY WOULD ENTER THE WAR SOON, FEW EXPECTED ANY SORT OF DECLARATION OF WAR.

THE BERLIN REPORTS CAUSED NO SURPRISE HERE. ALL INDICATIONS HAVE BEEN THAT ITALIAN INTERVENTION, WHEN IT COMES, WILL BE EITHER INDEPENDENT OR AT GERMANY'S SIDE.

THE CHIEF QUESTION WAS WHETHER ITALY WOULD STRIKE DIRECTLY AT FRANCE, AT FRENCH AND BRITISH POSSESSIONS, OR LAUNCH ON AN INDEPENDENT BALKAN TANGENT WHICH WOULD MENACE SUCH POWERS AS GREECE AND TURKEY AND ULTIMATELY THE ENGLISH AND FRENCH.

THE UNITED STATES EMBASSY WAS SILENT EARLY TODAY ON REPORTS THAT IL DUCE HAD INFORMED PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HE INTENDED TO HONOR HIS MILITARY PLEDGES TO THE GERMAN FUEHRER.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE "END OF THE WORLD" HAS COME TO THE DROWSY PORT OF DUNKERQUE AND THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

HISTORY OF WARFARE NEVER BEFORE HAS PUT TOGETHER SUCH A PICTURE OF SAVAGE CHAOS ON LAND AND SEA AND IN AIR AS HAS DEVELOPED FROM THE ALLIED ATTEMPT TO SALVAGE WHAT LIVES THEY CAN FROM THE HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF THEIR TROOPS WHO HAD BEEN TRAPPED BY THE HITLERITES.

FOR THE FIRST TIME WE HAVE A MAJOR BATTLE BETWEEN THE GERMAN FORCES OF THE AIR AND THE ANGLO-FRENCH SHIPS OF WAR AS THE ALLIES STRUGGLE TO PERFORM THE ALL BUT IMPOSSIBLE TASK OF GETTING THEIR BROKEN TROOPS EMBARKED FOR WITHDRAWAL. IT IS THE INITIAL TEST OF STRENGTH ON A LARGE SCALE BETWEEN THE AIR AND SEA.

GERMAN REPORTS CLAIM THE SINKING OF BRITISH WARSHIPS AND TRANSPORTS. THAT'S NOT SURPRISING. WE KNOW WITHOUT BEING TOLD THAT MANY VESSELS WILL GO DOWN IN THE FURY OF THE CONFLICT, AND THAT A GREAT NUMBER OF AIRPLANES WILL BE DESTROYED.

WE KNOW TOO THAT THOUSANDS OF MEN MUST BE STRUGGLING IN THE CHOPPY WATERS OF THE CHANNEL ALMOST WITHIN SIGHT OF THEIR BELOVED CLIFFS OF DOVER.

SO WE COME TO THE END OF THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS--A MAJOR GERMAN VICTORY.

BUT WE HAVEN'T REACHED THE END OF THE BLITZKRIEG WHICH THE GERMANS SAY WILL FINISH THE WAR. THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS IS JUST ONE PHASE OF HITLER'S GREAT GAMBLE. SO WHAT NEXT?

FIRST WE MUST NOTE THAT THE GALLANT STAND MADE BY THE ALLIED ARMIES OF THE NORTH IN FLANDERS HAS ENABLED THE FRENCH TO CONSOLIDATE A LINE RIGHT ACROSS NORTHERN FRANCE FROM ABBEVILLE ON THE CHANNEL EASTWARD ALONG THE SOMME RIVER AND CLEAR TO THE MAGINOT FORTIFICATIONS.

THIS MEANS, BY THE WAY, THAT THE NAZI FORCES HAVE BEEN HALTED IN THEIR RUSH A VERY CONSIDERABLE DISTANCE SHORT OF THE TERRITORY WHICH THE KAISER OVERRAN IN THE EARLY DAYS OF THE WORLD WAR.

(MORE).

FIRST ADD THE WAR TODAY BY DEWITT MACKENZIE XXX OF THE WORLD WAR.

THAT LINE IS NOT ONLY FOR THE DEFENSE OF PARIS, BUT FOR THE FAR MORE VITAL PURPOSE OF PREVENTING A DISASTROUS BREAK-THROUGH BY THE GERMANS IN THEIR AVOWED EFFORT TO CRUSH THE ENTIRE FRENCH ARMY. THE LINE ALSO PROVIDES THE KICKING-OFF PLACE FOR OFFENSIVE OPERATIONS AGAINST THE INVADERS.

MAY 31 1940

GERMANS IN THEIR AVOWED EFFORT TO CRUSH THE ENTIRE FRENCH ARMY. THE LINE ALSO PROVIDES THE KICKING-OFF PLACE FOR OFFENSIVE OPERATIONS AGAINST THE INVADERS.

HITLER NOW WOULD SEEM TO HAVE TWO LINES WHICH HE CAN PURSUE. HE CAN ATTEMPT HIS PROJECT OF INVADING ENGLAND, NOW THAT HE HAS WON THE BATTLE OF FLANDERS, OR HE CAN TRY TO SMASH SOUTHWARD TO PARIS AND KNOCK THE FRENCH OUT.

IN THIS CONNECTION THE GERMAN PRESS TODAY IS CHARGING THAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE ARE TRYING TO PERSUADE SWITZERLAND AND PORTUGAL TO ACCEPT ALLIED PROTECTION. THE NAZIS SAY THE ALLIES ARE MAKING "ANOTHER EFFORT TO BRING MORE NEUTRALS INTO THE WAR."

30.24-2639

30.24-2639

THAT SORT OF COMMENT HAVING PRECEDED ALL THE RECENT GERMAN INVASIONS OF NEUTRAL TERRITORY, ONE NATURALLY WONDERS WHETHER HERR HITLER IS GETTING READY TO TRY TO TAKE OVER SWITZERLAND IN AN EFFORT TO TURN THE FRENCH RIGHT WING WHERE THE MAGINOT LINE ENDS. IF THAT IS HIS PURPOSE, THEN PRESUMABLY HE WILL TRY THE ASSAULT ON FRANCE BEFORE HE ESSAYS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

HOWEVER, WE SHALL HAVE TO WAIT A BIT TO SEE, FOR THERE IS NO PRESENT INDICATION OF THE FUEHRER'S PLANS.

THIS DETONATION OF GREAT BOMBS AS THEY RIP AT THE FOUNDATIONS OF EMPIRES TENDS, I FEAR, TO MAKE US OVERLOOK THE PLIGHT OF CIVILIANS IN THE FIGHTING ZONE. THE SPEED OF MECHANIZED WARFARE TURNS PEACEFUL CENTERS INTO SLOUGHS OF SLAUGHTER WITHOUT WARNING.

THE DEATH TOLL MUST BE TERRIBLE AS THESE HELPLESS FOLK ARE TORN BY BOMBS AND SHELLS, AND EVEN GROUND BENEATH THOSE MONSTER TANKS WHICH ARE LIKE CREATURES OF FRIGHTFULNESS OUT OF A NIGHTMARE. BUT MAYBE THOSE WHO DIE QUICKLY ARE THE MORE FORTUNATE, FOR THE POSITION OF A HOST OF THE LIVING IS PITIABLE.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS THE OTHER DAY ESTIMATED THAT 5,000,000 BELGIAN AND FRENCH REFUGEES WERE FLEEING FROM THE PATH OF THE STORM. JUST SO WE SAW THEM STREAMING OUT OF THIS SELF-SAME COCK-PIT OF EUROPE IN THE WORLD WAR, ONLY NOT SO MANY AS NOW ARE STRUGGLING TO ESCAPE FOR THE SECOND TIME IN A BRIEF QUARTER CENTURY.

A166

WE USED TO ENCOUNTER LONG LINES OF OLD WOMEN AND MEN AND CHILDREN, PLODDING HOPELESSLY ALONG THE HIGHWAYS WITH THEIR PITIFUL BELONGINGS --HUNGRY, ILL, HERE AND THERE DROPPING INTO MERCIFUL DEATH FROM EXHAUSTION. I'LL NEVER FORGET HOW WHEN ARMY HORSES DIED ON THE ROADWAY FROM ENEMY FIRE THESE REFUGEES WOULD RUSH AND SLASH AT THEM WITH KNIVES, OR TEAR AT THEM WITH THEIR HANDS, IN HOPE OF GETTING A BIT OF FOOD.

THAT'S THE SORT OF THING GOING ON NOW, MULTIPLIED BY NOBODY KNOWS HOW MANY TIMES. THE MENTAL STRAIN OF ALL THIS HORROR ON THE CIVILIAN POPULATIONS OF THE BELLIGERENT COUNTRIES IS IMMEASURABLE. THEY WON'T RECOVER FROM THE SHOCK IN THIS GENERATION, AND THE CHILDREN OF THE NEXT WILL BEAR THE MARKS.

Allies Snatch 160,000 From Flanders Trap

By DREW MIDDLETON.

London, June 1 (Saturday) (AP).—The Allied navies have snatched three-fourths of the British Expeditionary Force in Flanders from the German-set death trap, it was reported today as an armada of ships of all types continued to bring home thousands of survivors. Great Britain took new heart from the assurance that she had escaped total disaster in the Channel horror.

While official figures are lacking, this report would indicate that some 130,000 or more British troops had been evacuated along with uncounted thousands of their allies.

Reliable British sources said the original strength of the B.E.F. in Flanders was 175,000 men. French and Belgian forces evacuated up to last night were reported to number at least 30,000.

Thousands more were massed at Dunkirk wharves, waiting for ships, while their comrades-in arms fought desperate rear-guard actions to cover the retreat from the dwindling Allied foothold around the city.

Rescue Sensational.

The sensational plucking of troops from the French shore and transporting them across the Channel—in possibly one of the greatest naval actions of all time—is being accomplished despite an infestation of spies, incessant bombing, midget torpedo boat activity and a land assault into which the Germans flung much of their might.

Tell of Huge Nazi Losses.

Returning Tommies declared Nazi losses in Flanders were five times as great as those of the Allies.

Both French and British sources estimated the German casualties in Flanders at 500,000 men.

A naval spokesman declared the loss of a small transport, three destroyers and several auxiliary vessels was trivial compared with the lives saved.

The rescue fleet, embracing barges, tugs and even ancient stern-wheel steamers, crossed between lanes of warships and under big squadrons of bombing and fighter planes. Some of the craft have made as many as four trips in 24 hours.

Although the rescue of the bottled-up Allied army remained Britain's greatest concern, informed London observers said they looked for an early attempt by Hitler to divide England and France with separate peace offers. There was no indication that the British or French would heed them.

BATTLE-WEARY TOMMIES STILL POURING HOME

100,000 Reported Back, With "Thousands More At Dunkerque"

[By the Associated Press]

A Southeast Port In England, May 31—Dead tired, aching for home, the men of the B. E. F. poured on into England tonight, adding chapter after chapter to their epic.

From big liners to tiny boats with only a few men aboard, a great armada brought them home, poured them onto troop trains and went back, under the fire of German guns and bombers, for more.

Tonight the total of the British, French and Belgians brought over the tortured Channel ferry routes of war was somewhere near 100,000. But one of them said: "Thousands more were massed at the Dunkerque wharves early this morning waiting for ships."

Anxious Families Wait

On the narrow station platforms along the way to London stood the anxious wives and wide-eyed children of the B. E. F., straining to see the windows of the rocketing troop-filled trains.

They were waiting, too, with dread, for the casualty lists that have not come.

In London, when they opened one compartment door today they found a British officer dead, his own pistol beside him.

From this port even the fishing boats and the trim little holiday motor craft went across the Channel today and came back, loaded with men in khaki.

Navy And Air Force On Guard

The navy and the air force stayed grimly on guard.

Across the Channel the sun gleamed on the white shore line of France and the green fields beyond.

The black plume of smoke from a huge fire burning near Dunkerque mounted the sky.

"It is an inferno over there; a hell made by man," said one artilleryman.

"The Germans asked for a truce to bury their dead after a thirty-six-hour barrage had held up their advance.

"There's No Truce"

"We replied: 'There's no truce.' And we gave them another seven hours of barrage."

Another soldier said the Germans shelled the British on the Dunkerque wharves with long-range guns.

"There were some killed," he added.

Every sort of a story was told of the new German strategy of war. Here was one, told by a Tommy:

"We found 10,000 almost perfect, counterfeit, 10-franc notes on one plane that we brought down. Parachute troops are being given this money to disorganize French finances."

Parachute Troops Riddled

Another Tommy told what happened to parachute troops in Flanders:

"I have seen German corpses landing with as many as fifty bullets in them," he said. "They were killed long before they reached the ground."

Through the lush green countryside of England sped train after train of the mud-stained men.

At the wayside stations they were deluged with fruit, cigarettes, tea, cookies.

The waiting women surrounded the soldiers, plied them with soft drinks, acted as postmen for hastily scribbled postcards to wives and sweethearts.

Child Welcomes Brother

On one platform, a 6-year-old girl sprang into the arms of a grimy soldier. It was her brother, unheard from for six weeks.

One soldier held a bottle of beer to the lips of a sailor who had both arms swathed with bandages.

Many of the men limped until they saw a sympathetic eye upon them; then they straightened fiercely.

Padres straight from the front and women of the auxiliary territorial services came back with the fighters.

One white-haired vicar praised the discipline of the men on the bomb-blasted beaches across the Channel. There, he said, they hid in the dunes until rescue came.

Women Show Strain

The women of the "ATS," like the soldiers, showed the strain of sleepless nights under constant fire, air raids and lack of sleep.

One story of these air raids and what they do to a man came from a British officer:

"I had six hours' sleep in seventy-two, and when the bombing was at its worst I spent hours lying in ditches, with my teeth clenched and my fingers wedged in my ears, my face buried in the weeds.

"During the last four days we marched miles under incessant bombing and finished up with a ten-mile trek along a rough beach before we got to the boats."

Most of the men coming back were in their early twenties, but there were a few be-medalled war veterans, morose and silent.

French And Belgians Along

With them, too, were the French and the Belgians—those men of Leopold who wouldn't stop fighting when he told them to stop.

In the railway stations, the English officers and men, most of them unable to speak French, passed over hard-boiled eggs, sandwiches and cans of steaming tea to bearded poilus and to chocolate-hued Senegalese with the crescent emblazoned on their turbans or wearing stained, scarlet tarbooshes.

One officer who fought through the Lowlands campaign told how his soldiers salvaged a machine gun and ammunition from a German bomber shot down by the R. A. F. and used the gun to bring down two other German planes.

Gun Taken On Retreat

The gun was mounted on a motorcycle sidecar and taken along on the retreat to the sea.

"Two days later," the officer related, "we were bombed at dawn by a Heinkel. We had with us a trooper who was an expert shot. Using the German machine gun he brought the Heinkel down. . . .

"When we were about to embark, the enemy had been bombing the quayside trying to get our small boat. Just at dusk the last German plane brought down one of our fighters. The British pilot jumped with his parachute and . . . when the German plane circled low over the sheds where we were sheltered, we got in a burst of machine gun fire that brought him down as well."

An infantryman, Private George Turner, exclaimed:

"We are going to win this bloody war!"

Turner had been asked what he thought of the course to date.

An artilleryman said, "as long as it ends soon, we are satisfied."

Robert Atlee, an infantryman, said of the reembarkation:

"Our navy—it was wonderful."

A Southeast Coast Port in England, May 31.—German bombing planes raiding the Allied retreat from Flanders "attempted to pursue our ships right up to the harbor," a soldier of the British Expeditionary Force said on his arrival here today.

30,24-2641

30.24-B641

"I never expected to get back alive," he said. "Our work was carried out in a blizzard of bombs and machinegun bullets. Jerry attacked in waves every 10 or 15 minutes. Still they kept coming.

"The fun began when we were about six miles off the coast. That's where we had to run the gauntlet. The bombers not only dropped their loads but attempted to pursue our ships right up to the harbor. Though the Royal Air Force constantly was taking a tremendous toll of Nazi planes, English soil looked mighty good."

Tens of thousands of men of the B. E. F., and their French comrades are being landed every hour at southeast English ports from craft of all sizes and descriptions.

Tommies said that coast fishermen were volunteering to take their tiny, unarmed boats across the channel. One lifeboat, a veteran rescue ship of this war, put out with a crew of men 60 years or more old. Some private motorboat owners left for the French side without waiting for official instructions.

Seven ships docked at a south coast port within two hours. The men were sped away by railroad to bases in scattered parts of England within half an hour of coming ashore.

At another port, a tug came in pulling five barges packed with troops.

As the soldiers landed, housewives handed over their own food supplies when official stores ran short.

Londoners crowded railroad platforms to see the troops and tossed candy, cigarettes, apples and oranges through car windows, even before the trains came to a full stop.

Many telegrams to anxious wives and sweethearts were scribbled on the backs of candy wrappers and empty cigarette packs.

Fewer Wounded

As the streams of battle-scarred Tommies, as well as some of their French and Belgian allies, continued to pour into reception ports today, it was noticeable there were fewer wounded among them. This indicated the majority of the casualties had been given precedence in the retreat and embarkation.

While the men waited to board the long troop trains ready to speed them to the haven of the flowering English countryside, bakers worked overtime providing food. Women volunteers, regardless of fatigue and long hours, cut mountains of sandwiches and served rivers of tea at makeshift canteens for men who hadn't had a square meal for nearly a week and only snatches of sleep for the last two weeks.

A lieutenant-commander in charge of one of the naval vessels bringing home troops said:

"I don't think we have a crumb of food or even a cup of cocoa left in the ship. My men have been magnificent—uncomplaining in the face of bombing and machinegunning. We are quite determined that not a man shall be left behind for want of a ship."

One of the French soldiers among those brought to English shores said that, in the withdrawal toward the coast, "we were machinegunned so often we almost got used to it.

"We always were ready to jump into the nearest ditch to avoid German planes sweeping low and mowing down refugees and others indiscriminately," he continued. "Always there were some who did not rise again. One almost gets used to that, too."

It was announced today that the battle-worn thousands will be given a well-earned rest.

Claim Dumps Destroyed

Already a large proportion of the B. E. F.—its members proclaiming their spirit unbroken after braving hell and high water—is said to have been withdrawn from the Nazi death trap in Belgium and northern France through one of the greatest rear guard actions in military history.

"Before our troops made their retreat," said a British officer, "they have in almost every case succeeded in blowing up gasoline dumps and leaving nothing useful to the enemy. They stayed to do this at the risk of capture or being shot."

The Tommies said word of the surrender of the Belgian army ordered by King Leopold III, which exposed their left flank to the Germans, first came as a rumor which no one believed.

"The Real Thing"

"There already had been rumors of different sorts," a young gunner remarked, "but we realized this one was the real thing a few hours later, when the Germans suddenly appeared all around us.

"They were firing at us from what had been Belgian lines until a short time before. The order was given to retreat. There was nothing else to do.

"Then came hours of tramping along roads and across fields and ditches to the sea.

"We never knew when German machine-guns would begin firing on us from behind some hedge or clump of trees. They seemed to be around every corner."

Astonished by Order

One of a group of five Belgian officers, who said they were astonished at King Leopold's orders to surrender, said that "we do not intend to stop fighting on orders of Leopold—and there are thousands of other Belgian soldiers of the same opinion."

Describing the difficulties of the Belgian campaign, the Tommies said the country was "overrun with spies" who tipped off nearly every move they made to German bombers.

An officer from a destroyer that helped cover the embarkation with her guns and then acted as an escort for the transports described a shattered town in Flanders as he saw it from the bridge of his ship.

"There is not a wall in the place that is more than two feet high," he said. "What I remembered as a jolly little town full of cafes and hotels and gaiety now is just a pile of rubble.

"I saw one bomb hit a big, modern hotel. It collapsed like a pack of cards."

While the navy and merchant marine continued shuttling across the Channel to rescue troops and fishing smacks were pressed into service because they could operate in the shallow waters close to the coast, the returning Flanders veterans loudly praised the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force that cleared a way across the Channel as German bombers attacked the ships. They charged that German planes bombed hospital as well as troop ships.

"Wall of Fire"

One Tommy said:

"I never believed anything like the wall of fire our ships put up to screen the troops was possible. The din was incredible. Shells were falling in a mathematically straight line behind our positions.

"Above and behind the line British planes dived and dropped a hail of bombs. I take off my hat to the chaps who did that job."

Many of the survivors had to swim to the ships through a hail of bomb splinters. They still were wet and oil-soaked when they landed here. But one of their officers declared:

"Our losses in the last few days have been far less than might be expected. But the slaughter among the Germans has been incredible. The German commanders seem to be throwing away their men's lives."

"Hun" Revived

With the return of B. E. F. survivors, the word "Hun" is being used for the first time since the war started. One soldier, telling of German bombing and strafing attacks on Belgian refugees, said:

"There was no excuse for that. I'll never forget the way those Huns treated the refugees."

Tough Cockneys who insisted they would be returning to France at the first opportunity declared all they wanted was "more airplanes and it will be a different story."

Still Deafened

Still so deafened from the din of battle that they scarcely could hear, they told how Nazi bombers swarmed over the battlefields 50 and 60 at a time. One of them remarked:

"Our casualties were surprisingly small considering the number of bombs that were dropped."

An artillery sergeant said the German airmen were "no match for the RAF and they know it," and told of watching one British fighter take on seven German planes and bring down three of them.

"The hard fact remains that no military operation is so difficult as re-embarkation at the end of a retreat," and added: "There could not have been very much 'fleeing in disorder.'"

Citing the German contention that air power had taken the place of sea power, he admitted Nazi air superiority in numbers but said that the Germans were unable to prevent the embarkation of troops and were unable to inflict more than "minor injuries" on the ships involved. The Germans yesterday claimed to have sunk or badly damaged more than sixty ships engaged in the embarkation operations.

'Magnificent Help.'

The commentator said the men on the ground had been able to see "what magnificent help" they were getting from the navy and the air force.

"When a man on the ground sees a bomb drop, he would like to see an Allied plane chasing the bomber," he said. "It should be remembered that, had Allied planes not been busy elsewhere, there might have been five bombs instead of one."

British Report 90,000 Saved

LONDON, May 31 (A. P.).—Reliable British sources estimated today that 90,000 British, French and Belgians had been landed in England from the Flanders battleground. About two-thirds of these are British.

The total figure, 90,000, is approximately one-half the original strength of the B. E. F. force of 175,000 in Flanders. Hence about one-third, or 58,000, of the original British force is estimated by these sources to be safely home.

There are no figures here on total British or Allied casualties. However, both French and British sources estimate German casualties at about 500,000.

British Still Continue Evacuation.

British military men said today that evacuation of large numbers of British and French troops from northern France still goes on.

A soldier back from Flanders said tonight that "thousands" of Allied troops still were massed on the Dunkirk wharves early today, waiting for ships to take them across the channel.

A military commentator said that Allied troops now hold a line "a certain distance from the coast."

Commenting on a German claim that the British Army fled to the coast in disorder, the commentator said:

Meanwhile, stiff fighting is in progress at Dunkirk, the embarkation port, and evacuation is proceeding under the protection of Allied naval guns and the "Corunna Line," named after the celebrated Battle of Corunna in Spain on January 16, 1809, when the British under Sir John Moore successfully repulsed superior French forces and embarked.

The spokesman said that a small coastal steamship which left Ostend, Belgium, one night with soldiers, women and children and fifteen German prisoners, was attacked by a German torpedo boat. The torpedo missed and the attacker then came within ten yards and opened fire, whereupon the commentator said, the little ship replied with two submachine guns, silenced the Germans and left their boat drifting.

Tens of thousands of men of the B. E. F. and their French comrades are being landed every hour at southeast English ports from craft of all sizes and descriptions.

British soldiers said that coast fishermen were volunteering to take their tiny, unarmed boats across the channel. One lifeboat, a veteran rescue ship of this war, put out with a crew of men 60 years or more old. Some private motor boat owners left for the French side without waiting for official instructions.

Seven in Two Hours.

Seven ships docked at a south coast port within two hours. The men were sped away by railroad to bases in scattered parts of England within half an hour of coming ashore.

At another port, a tug came in pulling five barges packed with troops.

As the soldiers landed, housewives handed over their own food supplies when official stores ran short.

May Be Peace Offer.

LONDON, May 31 (A. P.).—Observers here said today that they were looking for a possible attempt by Adolf Hitler to divide England and France with separate offers of peace.

These persons said that they expected Der Fuehrer to flourish a threat of Italian entry into the war on Germany's side to induce acceptance of such offers.

Studying the possibilities of Der Fuehrer's next move, these observers said they were not discounting his penchant for doing the completely unexpected.

These were the possibilities envisaged:

1. A separate peace offer to France with a great smashing assault by land and air against Paris.
2. A threat of an Italian flank attack.
3. An ultimatum to Great Britain to lay down arms on Hitler's terms or face total war.

Evidence of a determination to forestall any effort of Hitler to separate the Allies or to make peace on his terms was seen in the reiteration that the Allies, fighting as a unit, would make no separate peace on any terms.

The statement by Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, only yesterday that Hitler will be "denied a seat at any future conference table" was seen as a further sign of Allied solidarity.

Master of Europe's western coast line from Boulogne in France to Bodo in Norway, with the exception of battered Dunkirk, Hitler might attempt to consolidate his lines along the Somme and Aisne rivers in France and then strike at England, as he so often has threatened.

But most observers believed he first would seek to roll up the flanks of the Maginot Line, possibly with Italian aid, in order to free all his forces for the assault on Britain.

Authoritative persons said tonight that Italy had intimated on Tuesday that she considered British-Italian negotiations over contraband control broken off. This indication was said to have been given despite agreement in principle reached last week for an easing of contraband control against Italian ships.

Editorial writers emphasized anew today the "unbreakable bond" of the Allies and attacked as a "damnable lie" the assertion by Nazi propagandists that some discord divides the purpose of Britain and France.

The Evening News said:

"The lesson of Flanders is clear . . . to make good our deficiencies . . . to give the army weapons to meet the enemy on equal terms.

"We have only just entered the tunnel of our difficulties," the News concluded.

With the retreat from Flanders, giving Germany potential bombing bases only five minutes from England's southeast coast, the Government and people concentrated their attention on the "fifth column" menace.

From some quarters came a demand that Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, Commander-in-Chief of the Home Forces, receive plenary powers to co-ordinate military and civil defense measures, under martial law if necessary.

To make sure that any invading forces dropped from the air would find no effective help from within the country, Scotland Yard pressed hard its hunt for fifth column equipment—arms, munitions and uniforms. The police went through every wharf and warehouse along the Thames, carefully searching furniture and other goods stored there by refugees from the Continent.

More Arrests Made.

In early morning raids in several London districts, an undisclosed number of fifth column suspects were arrested and held for interment.

While the Home Secretary, Sir John Anderson, and the Health Minister, Malcolm Macdonald, warned the nation of the very real and close danger of German bombing attacks, Vice-Admiral Sir John Somerville assured Britons that their defense forces were prepared to meet any attempted Nazi landing, whether from the air or from the sea.

The Home Secretary said that there was "every prospect of an early call upon the civil defense forces," and he told those forces to keep "fully manned, in a state of readiness and efficiency."

Sir John told the House of Commons today that no communists "as such" had been arrested in the United Kingdom in the drive against fifth column elements.

He added that he was unable to say how many of those arrested were "in fact communists."

Moving Children Out.

The Ministry of Health said that England's "front line" areas along the east and southeast coasts would probably have to be broadened, necessitating the withdrawal of a large number of children to safer areas.

In fifteen coast towns 39,000 children, or 61 per cent of the school population have already been registered for removal to districts further west, such as Wales.

Mr. MacDonald told the public that the Government felt that the risk of early bombing is so real that they must now make as complete as possible plans for the evacuation of children.

At the same time the Government, seeking to increase arms production, took a census of machines in all industries to make sure they are working at full capacity.

Instructions were issued to civilians on air raid precautions. The public was warned to stay away from windows because investigation of the crash of a German bomber at Clacton-on-Sea disclosed that most of the injuries suffered were caused by flying glass splinters.

More Aid Raid Shelters.

The authorities said that experience showed that houses provided good shelter against bombs provided precautions are taken. In congested areas, however, work went ahead on additional public air raid shelters.

The Germans' use of incendiary bombs in the Low Countries prompted fresh precautions against fire hazards.

Saddened by the plight of the B. E. F. in the Flanders trap, the public got some cheer from the report that thousands of soldiers were being withdrawn successfully. But they prepared calmly to accept hard tidings.

'No Letters, Please.'

The families of soldiers lost in action informed their friends through brief announcements in newspaper classified columns. Usually they aded the request: "No letters, please."

Embarkation on Large Scale

PARIS, May 31 (A. P.).—The beaten Allied troops of Flanders were declared officially to be escaping through Dunkirk "on a large scale" tonight, while the central French armies pounded at the Germans south of the Somme and reported that they had cleaned out the Abbeville sector in the estuary.

It was said that the Abbeville operations had yielded several hundred German prisoners and many weapons and supply trains. The French estimated their losses there at only a few men killed and one tank destroyed.

It was explained that this meant a general cleanup of Germans in the sector on the southern side of the Somme near Abbeville. There was no report as yet of the recapture of the town itself, which is north of the river.

This apparent prelude to large-scale action on a new front—a front protecting Paris—was reported by the War Ministry spokesman along with a declaration that the flood waters spouting through locks opened by the French were holding back the German effort to smash Dunkirk, the port of exit for the fleeing northern Allies. The city was surrounded by flood water standing to average depth of a foot and a half. Part of the French rear guard in Flanders was acknowledged, however, to be "in difficulties."

Earlier the Ministry of Information announced that two divisions of the French rearguard had fought their way to Dunkirk. These divisions numbering perhaps 30,000 men in all before they underwent the shattering attack in Flanders, were said to have reached the channel port—exit from the northern battle zone—just as Germany's mechanized legions laid siege to the town.

Four Sides Guarded by Tanks.

Armored columns smashed at the Dunkirk gateway and slashed around the French rear guard which covered itself in the manner of Cæsar's forces—boxed in by armored phalanxes. The French infantry and artillery kept to the middle of the moving rectangle while tanks guarded four sides.

The division, said to be commanded by Gen. Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux, whom the Germans say is their prisoner, battered a path part way through the German lines of envelopment during the night and completed the bloody retreat in daylight.

A Ministry of Information spokesman said that Gen. Prioux's men fought a "marvelous battle" and that their losses are "relative' rathed than "catastrophic."

Allied Warships Operating.

French and British warships speeded up the evacuation of the weary, war-worn units which had been fighting off furious Nazi onslaughts.

At the same time, the vessels landed new food and war supplies for the French divisions still fighting at the southern end of the Dunkirk corridor.

The situation of the French troops still inside the Nazi pocket, with German infiltrations threatening them, remained "grave but not desperate," the spokesman said.

A line along various ridges, which the Germans established yesterday, has been fractured, and the French apparently held an advantage for maintaining the breach. The Germans, however, still held Mount Cassel.

Nazi advance units pushed furiously to Mount des Cats, near Godewaersvelde, one of a series of French-Belgian frontier hills about 500 feet high. South of the ridges studding the Flanders Plain, the rest of the Prioux army continued fighting.

The spokesman said that Dunkirk was holding solidly, strongly entrenched by French and British forces. He based this statement on advices received during the night, including word of the arrival of French troops at the port.

Fleets Keep Up Shuttle Service.

The commentator said that the Allied fleets kept up a continuous shuttle service moving in and out of Dunkirk, carrying in supplies to the armies and carrying out tired and wounded soldiers together with auxiliary units whose operations were no longer needed in the battle zone.

The air above Dunkirk has been "literally forbidden" to German planes by the hot fire of naval anti-aircraft guns co-operating with British pursuit squadrons operating from bases in England a few minutes away, the spokesman said.

Like an ancient fortress, Dunkirk is protected by a semi-circular "moat" of muddy water several miles wide which rushed in from the sea when the Allies opened the canal locks.

(Here two words censored) strips (three words deleted) connecting the port with the Flanders pocket from which the Allies are withdrawing are reported firmly held by French and British units.

Military sources said that Germans advancing from the southwest had come to a halt at the water's edge. On the northeast side of the port, they said, the Nazis had not yet reached the water barrier and the Allies were combating them in the area between it and the Yser Canal.

Gen. Prioux's army, the military reported, is retreating in a solid square, giving battle on all sides in a gigantic modern version of a classic Napoleon maneuver.

Somme-Aisne Front Active.

Meanwhile there was renewed activity on both sides of the Somme-Aisne-Meuse front, running from the English Channel east to the Maginot Line. This was limited to localized zones, with the French armies on the Somme launching several small operations which drew German counter-thrusts but left the line unchanged.

Patrol activity was renewed in the Aisne sector east of Rethel.

In the Argonne Forest region, between the Aisne and the Meuse, artillery batteries on both sides shelled each other's positions, and between the Meuse and the Moselle a German raid was repulsed.

The situation of the armies in the Flanders corridor was described as grave but not desperate.

British and French troops fought off German attacks east and west of Dunkirk. The sea front was slightly reduced, running approximately from Dunkirk to Nieuport.

British and French marines were still holding Calais, according to the latest reports available here.

The eastern wall of the Dunkirk corridor was held by part of the British Army and one French division along the Yser Canal line.

The defense line runs approximately from Lambartzyde through Nieuport, passes eastward to the vicinity of Dixmude and then descends in the direction of Ypres.

The western wall where the British have been re-enforced by several French formations and parts of the French mechanized units runs from the coast west of Dunkirk clear to the western end of the line of mounts near Cassel. It descends to the west of Bergues

British Prepare to Be Attacked

Fifth Column Equipment Sought as Arrests Continue—Home Defense Stands By.

LONDON, May 31 (A. P.).—Great Britain's island kingdom was turned into a formidable fortress today as the possibility of a direct Nazi attack was brought ever nearer by the withdrawal of the British Expeditionary Force from the continental channel ports nearest England.

but veers off around Cassel where the Germans yesterday took the mount of the same name.

Carried Out Without Hitch.

While the mechanized rear guard of the retreating forces in Flanders fought to delay the overwhelming German forces seeking to wipe out the Allied pocket, Charles Morice, famous military commentator for the newspaper Le Petit Parisien, said that the retiring movements of the French and British troops "have been executed without halt and in spite of fierce combats. It may be that the Germans have taken prisoner several thousand tired and sick men who could no longer follow. Up to here they have not taken a single entire formation."

Retreat Between Flooded Areas.

Overhead, warplanes of the R. A. F. and the French air arm flew on never-ending missions, bombing the concentrated efforts of forty German infantry divisions and eight Nazi armored car divisions to close in from both sides on the pocketed Allies.

On either side—along the southern edge of the triangle, extending from Cassel to Gravelines, and the opposite line running from Nieuport to Ypres along the Yser River—the Allies were protected by lowland areas flooded to a depth of several yards to stave off German thrusts at the embarkation point.

Added to the protection of opened locks calculated to bog down the German mechanized divisions were French sailors and marines intrenched around Dunkirk.

Vast stretches behind the high-duned seacoast north and south of Dunkirk were gashed by drainage canals that at low tide carry to the channel the Flemish streams which are too sluggish to make their own way.

The Nieuport and Gravelines locks, opened at the channel's peak tide, sent sea waters rushing over the marshes to protect the corridor.

The flooding maneuver freed Allied troops guarding the port zone to bolster the forces streaming into Dunkirk from the bloody Flanders battlefields.

German Wedge Broken.

The main German effort to cut off the retreat centered at Mount Cassel, about halfway between Dunkirk and the Lille sector which Gen. Prioux's rear guard abandoned yesterday.

Whether the attempt to isolate British and French tanks and armored cars under the veteran cavalry commander had succeeded was not known early today.

FRENCH TANKS SMASH LAST GERMAN OUTPOSTS SOUTH OF SOMME RIVER

Help New British Force To Retake Abbeville Bridgehead—Flanders Rear Guard "In Difficulties," But Reported Holding Firm

[By the Associated Press] 164 HENRY CASSIDY

Paris, May 31—French tanks supporting a second British expeditionary force being formed in France pounded at the Germans along the Somme front tonight.

They mopped up the Abbeville sector and it was reported they had regained unbroken command south of Somme.

While this campaign went on, heavy detachments of Allied troops were declared to be pouring through Dunkerque to the historic Channel retreat from Flanders.

"A Certain Activity"

The action to the south was mentioned by the French command's night communique only as "a certain activity," and with the secrecy that customarily surrounds the start of major Allied movements.

The Abbeville bridgehead was taken, but the capture of the town itself—lying to the north of the river—was not claimed. It remained in no-man's land. Hundreds of Nazi prisoners and a mass of German war material were declared seized.

French air activity was greatly intensified on both fronts.

Bombers Drop Food

In the north, where the rear guard of the men of Flanders was struggling to force a passage through the Germans, who sought to cut them off in the mountains southeast of Dunkerque, French bombers defied anti-aircraft fire and low visibility to drop food and munitions for the isolated forces.

More than twenty tons of bombs were launched by two flights of French bombers in heavy attacks on German concentrations north of the Somme and German anti-aircraft batteries and other objectives near Abbeville.

The tanks which led the Allied attack in the Abbeville sector were mostly mediumweights of twenty-three tons.

Nazi Outposts Broken

They were reported to have ridden roughshod over the German anti-tank nests and to have broken up the last of the Reichswehr's outposts on the south side of the river.

In earlier offensive actions during the last seven days on the Somme other German bridgeheads had been wiped out, mainly in the Amiens sector east of Abbeville.

This apparent prelude to large-scale action on a new front—a front protecting Paris—was reported by the War Ministry spokesman along with a declaration that the floodwaters spouting through locks opened by the French were holding back the German effort to smash Dunkerque, the port of exit.

Water Surrounds City

The city was surrounded by floodwater standing to average depth of a foot and a half.

Part of the French rear guard in Flanders was acknowledged, however, to be "in difficulties."

These men were moving in retreat in a bloody rectangle which earlier had been reported holding generally firm under the assaults of the greatest mechanized German army ever to take the field.

Two muddy, weary and savagely punished divisions of the command of Gen. Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux—originally totaling about 30,000 men—led the strange march into Dunkerque, the Allied port of exit to the sea.

Escape Through Steel Square

They moved through the center of a great box of men and steel, its four walls formed of roaring tanks like the locked shields that once protected the legions of Cæsar.

The Allied corridor of escape stretched from near Lille to Dunkerque.

In a last effort to annihilate the already defeated Allied armies, the Nazis threw into the struggle ten armored divisions and three motorized divisions—virtually their entire mechanized strength—in addition to numerous infantry divisions.

Troops Leaving Regularly

They smashed with all their might at Dunkerque, but the French spokesman acknowledged that, while little was left of the docks and quays, "considerable quantities" of Allied troops were embarking regularly in small boats from which they were being transferred at sea to larger craft.

Off the coast, the British and French fleets laid down a curtain of fire around these men.

While this great northern drama was nearing its close, Italian journalists were leaving Paris today. A Ministry of Information official said that while this did not mean "inevitable" war with Italy, it was possible that the Italians would enter within a few days.

Salutes Flanders Armies

A French military spokesman meanwhile saluted the armies of Flanders for their "marvelous battle." He declared they suffered losses that were "relative" rather than "catastrophic."

Allied quality in the air likewise was declared better. It was reported that the New British Defiance chasers alone brought down thirty-five German planes, without losses to themselves, in one day of fighting.

Nazi Losses At Half Million

Illustrating the cost to Germany of the massive offensive that began with the invasion of the Low Countries on May 10, the semi-official Telefrance Agency declared that since then the Nazis had lost half a million men—a figure which the agency asserted "find itself written in authentic German documents."

Meanwhile, the German military successes in Belgium were said by the French military spokesman to have been "directly due to treason." He spoke particularly of one incident as "distinctly unmilitary." This, he said, was the disclosure that only one officer in a group of fifty Belgians knew how to blow up a vital bridge which the Germans crossed over Belgian canal fortifications.

Situation "Unbelievable"

That situation, he remarked, was "unbelievable."

Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, whose whereabouts had not been discussed since Gen. Maxime Weygand succeeded him as the Allied generalissimo, was understood to be in Paris tonight, although nothing official about him was given out and there was no mention in the press.

There still were conflicting reports as to the whereabouts of the Belgian royal children. One of these, originated in Toulouse, was that they still were at Chateau Montal, in the Lot department in South France.

Ready for "Second Round"

The French military spokesman said that now that the Flanders battle was virtually out of the way the central French armies, massed in the region of the Sommer, were ready for "the second round"—the first having been the operations in the Meuse region and in Flanders, which have ended in German victories.

This next round was expected to be fought on the Somme-Aisne front defending Paris. But there, said the spokesman, the Germans would find that the northern Allied resistance had "lasted just too long for the Nazis' good."

He asserted the Abbeville sector south of the Somme had been completely cleared of Germans after several days of operations in which the French took German prisoners and anti-tank guns, trucks and supply trains with only a few French killed and only one of their own tanks destroyed.

Raids and patrol operations like those along the Maginot line during the first eight months of the war were reported from the rest of the new front.

Losses Not "Catastrophic"

Meanwhile, the armies of Flanders were saluted by the spokesman for their "marvelous battle." He declared they suffered losses that were "relative" rather than "catastrophic."

The arrival in Dunkerque of Prioux's divisions, which for days had stood in a rain of fire to hold open the way of retreat for their comrades, suggested that Allies probably had saved a considerable proportion of their entrapped armies of 270,000 men. London reports during the day put the men already actually landed in England at nearly 100,000.

The French asserted, too, that the Allies had control tonight of the air over Dunkerque. German planes, said the spokesman, had been "literally forbidden" to operate by the combined and continuous fire of naval anti-aircraft guns and of British chaser squadrons operating from bases in nearby England.

One bombardment with high explosive and incendiary bombs razed 100 blocks between the main square and the station of one town. Not one wall is left standing. There is only a mass of stone and charred timbers about two feet high over the whole area.

French Holding Aisne River Line Against Steady German Onslaughts

By H. TAYLOR HENRY,
Associated Press Staff Correspondent.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 31.—Strongly entrenched French divisions supported by heavy tanks and artillery tonight were holding the line of the Aisne River against steady German attempts to open the Marne plain from the northeast.

While shells screamed overhead and German planes flew low, I visited the important Rethel sector, about 100 miles from Paris.

The general commanding the division holding the sector told me how his troops had established and held for four days a bridgehead at Rethel to cover the withdrawal of the rest of the army to the strong line south of the Aisne.

It was the defense of this bridgehead which in a large measure stopped the Germans from forcing the passage of the Aisne at the same time they were racing for the Channel ports.

So sure were the Nazis of the crossing that a truckload of Germans returning from leave, and captured in the outskirts of Rethel, had received orders to rejoin their units elsewhere.

The situation here on the extreme right flank of the Northern Front, which forms the link with the Maginot Line, now is comparatively calm.

The action for the moment is confined mostly to the traditional artillery duels and to the more modern warfare of clashes of tank against tank, with occasional attacks from German dive-bombers.

Behind the lines, except for bombed towns, there is an almost overpowering feeling of peace and quiet which is only accentuated by the constant dull booming of artillery. Herds of milch cows and goats wander through the deserted streets of the deserted towns.

But far behind the lines the bombing planes have spread their devastation.

Nazis Call Foe Split.

BERLIN, May 31 (A. P.).—The main body of the French forces in the Flanders pocket has been dispersed or captured, and the blasting attack on remnants of their British comrades-in-arms is progressing, the German High Command declared today, aadding ominously that the bulk of the Nazi divisions are now released for new tasks!

Although the Germans acknowledged that the Allied withdrawals to England from the French channel port of Dunkirk were having some success and that their own losses were heavy, they said that the British apparently were benefiting from foggy, poor flying weather.

However, it was reported here that German troops had pressed to within six miles of the port and apparently were laying down a deadly barrage on what is left of the harbor city.

Soldiers Reported Swimming.

The Berlin newspaper, Lokal Anzeiger, in its description of the scene at Dunkirk, said:

"The remaining British force is seeking with every possible means—in small boats or even by swimming—to reach ships which are under protection of night and fog while attempting to save soldiers who can be saved, for England needs every single man now."

It remained to be seen whether the new tasks would be another steamroller drive onto the new French line along the Somme, seventy miles north of Paris, or an attempt to invade England, some twenty miles from the channel coast—or both.

"The main force of German divisions in Artois and Flanders now are released for new tasks"—that was as close as the German High Command came to pointing the way.

Says Unit Was Wiped Out.

While insisting that the main body of French troops caught in the Flanders trap had been dispersed or captured, the High Command added that some of them, though encircled or scattered, were still resisting locally.

It was also acknowledged that remnants of the British Expeditionary Force still offered desperate resistance in the coastal sections around Dunkirk, but the British forces near Cassel, on the southern edge of the Flanders trap, have been annihilated, the High Command said.

"The number of prisoners and the amount of booty could not yet be established even approximately," the communique declared, and continued:

"The attack against the remainder of the English Army in the flat country only a few kilometers deep, protected by the rising waters of canals along the coast between Furnes and Bergues and west of Dunkirk, is in progress. The opponent here is stoutly resisting in order to rescue as many soldiers as possible on ships, if necessary even without equipment."

Overcast skies in the Channel region brought respite to the battered British and French troops that still lived and fought on the coastal plain or within two tiny pockets on the fringe of the triangular trap.

"Air force operations in the course of May 30," said the High Command, "were considerably hampered by weather conditions."

Mosquito Fleet Active.

The murky sky, however, did not shield the Allies entirely, for new destruction, it was stated, was piled on the old at Dunkirk. The German communique said that "harbor facilities again were raided."

Germany's mosquito fleet of torpedo speedboats was stated to have sunk an Allied destroyer off the Belgian coast.

Part of the French forces, apparently in worse position than the British for withdrawal, were squeezed into two subordinate traps north of Lille and south of Lille, which lies off the apex of the bloody Flanders triangle, forty miles or so from Dunkirk. How many poilus were jammed into these two areas—about fifty square miles and twenty-four square miles, respectively—no one knew.

Numbers Not Disclosed.

In telling of the British pocket in the Cassel region, about twenty miles south of Dunkirk, the Germans said that the Tommies had been "crushed" in an attempt to break through for embarkation. How many British died in the Cassel pocket no one knew.

How many men still fought in all the Flanders zone no one knew; but original estimates for the Germans have ranged from 440,000 to 600,000 and for the Allies from 300,000 to 500,000 or more.

The German Navy clamped down on the entire length of Holland's meandering coastline and parts of the Belgian and French shores along territory in German occupation. Whether this had direct bearing on the "new tasks" to be set before Hitler's blitz divisions was another unanswered question.

Whatever goal Hitler picks for his next blow—be it Paris or London—it is expected that several days will be required for the mop-up in Flanders, the overhauling of his war machine and the gathering of equipment at the jump-off points.

French Mop-up Less Urgent.

The mop-up of the French pockets north and south of Lille probably is less urgent than the German plan of crushing the British on the Flanders coast.

The High Command characterized the British there, centered on Dunkirk, as flattened out with the sea to their backs, relying in part on flooding from coastal canals to slow down the German land drive and to hold Dunkirk for shipment of whatever troops and equipment could be taken there.

The pocketed French forces were said in informed quarters to have "practically ceased to exist." They were pictured as offering all the resistance of which they were still capable, but as making no progress to break the German rings of steel and fire around them.

Meanwhile today most German observers believed that the German army's fury would be directed next against the French armies defending Paris.

Berlin spokesmen said that of an original 4,000,000 Frenchmen under arms, about 1,000,000 have been killed or taken prisoner or else are facing annihilation within the next few days in the closing phases of the battle of Flanders.

Of the remaining 3,000,000 men, the Germans estimated that 1,000,000 are needed as possible defenders against Italy, another 1,000,000 along the Asine and Somme rivers north of Paris, and the third 1,000,000 in the Maginot Line.

[Neutral observers placed the French effectives at the outbreak of the war as high as 8,000,000.]

Many military observers here felt that a deeper plunge into France would be necessary before the Nazis could strike out at England, whom they call their arch enemy. Italy's participation in the war, the Germans pointed out, would make Germany's position in such a plunge easier by diverting French armies to the south.

France Is Threatened.

Many straws in the wind have pointed to an attack on the armies defending Paris as the next likely German objective. Observers noted that the resentment of German officialdom against France is increasing daily.

An official notice was sent by Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop to the French Government yesterday, through the Swedish Government, promising prompt and terrible reprisals if German aviator prisoners are killed by French captors.

"Enough of this sentimentality toward the French," this morning's papers were saying.

Berlin noted that Paris denied that any German prisoners had been killed, but was not impressed, insisting, as it had done previously concerning the Governments of Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, that the French Government is no longer in full control of the internal situation.

The impact of the invasion has "knocked the veneer of civilization off France," said the Volkischer Beobachter, Hitler's own paper.

"The French rabble," said the organ, "abuses German prisoners, women become hyenas, and the old French enmity against foreigners is extended even to helpless Belgian fugitives who are called 'dogs of the North' and 'Belgian Boch'."

VICTORY OVER ALLIED FORCES HAILED IN REICH

Germans Are Wondering Where Hitler's Next Blow Will Fall

Answer, Involving Italy, May Come From Goebbels' Talk To Führer

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press Correspondent

Berlin, May 31—The bloody triumph in Flanders was hailed in Germany tonight as an overpowering blow against British and French morale and a jubilant populace speculated on where Hitler next will strike.

The only official hint of the next order was the high command's enigmatic announcement that the bulk of the Nazi legions in Flanders "now are released for new tasks."

The Flanders cleanup, in the Nazi view, entailed only counting the prisoners and evaluation of booty—plus the harrying of the escaping Allies with land guns, bombers and the quick-striking mosquito fleet in the Channel.

Italy's Course A Factor

During the day the Germans claimed one enemy destroyer was sunk off the Belgian coast by a dashing torpedo boat, which represents the Nazi version of Blitzkrieg-gone-to-sea.

In the German capital the question on every tongue was where the next blow might fall; whether it would be directed deeper into France in the wake of a new propaganda campaign with obvious Italian implications, or against England, the original long-range objective of the German war aims.

Bound up in the question of future activity was the course of the axis partner, Italy.

Watching Duce 'With Confidence'

It was implied that the answer to Italy's part might come from a conference to which Hitler hastily summoned Paul Joseph Goebbels, Propaganda Minister, at Western front headquarters.

In Italian circles it was said that Premier Mussolini's entry would be a surprise move that would announce itself in due course.

There was no official confirmation of the Italian reports beyond the authorized assertion that Germany was watching her friendly partner "with confidence."

So confident were the Germans of ultimate victory after their smashing three-week conquest of the Netherlands, Belgium and northern France that there was a common tendency to set forth Nazi war aims again.

Allied Lands As "Border Areas"

The authoritative Dienst Aus Deutschland stated that England and France "will be banished in some form to roles of European border areas."

"It is not difficult to see on what basis a new order of peace would develop," Dienst said. "Its backbone, according to Berlin views, would be the Berlin-Rome axis."

Dienst said that smaller nations would retain "their natural and legitimate living rights," but that there would be no place in the new European picture for England and France.

Say Channel Fog Helps British

While the Germans acknowledged that the Allied withdrawals to England from the French Channel port of Dunkerque were having some success and that their own losses were heavy, they said the British apparently were benefiting from foggy, poor flying weather.

However, it was reported here that the German speedboat fleet was proving troublesome with its torpedoes launched at British warships and that German troops pressed to within six miles of Dunkerque and apparently were laying down a deadly barrage on what is left of the harbor city.

North and south of Lille, French units continued to resist the German "rub-out" process but their fate was regarded here as sealed. Another small Allied force separated from the main battleground in the north near Cassel.

Dunkerque Scene Described

The Berlin newspaper Lokalanzeiger, in its description of the scene at Dunkerque, said:

"The remaining British force is seeking with every possible means—in small boats or even by swimming—to reach ships which are under protection of night and fog while attempting to save soldiers who can be saved, for England needs every single man now."

The press campaign against French "brutality" reached a new height of fury. This developed the feeling that Germans would be driving toward Paris before another week was out.

The "Engelland song" has been supplanted on Nazi lips by the new war song dinned day and night:

"We are marching victoriously far into France."

Hit-Run Tactics Of Nazi Speedboats Described

Berlin, May 31 (AP)—The hit-and-run tactics of Germany's mosquito fleet torpedo speedboats—already credited with sinking five British destroyers in the English Channel—were outlined tonight by DNB.

It published the first report of a war correspondent who went along on one of the daring raids against the Allies.

His boat left a Netherlands harbor after sunset, streaking away for the Channel at thirty-five miles an hour. British bombers attacked when the speedboat was not far at sea, the reporter said, but the bombs missed the fast moving target.

After night fall, it passed an Allied patrol boat, the correspondent said, but this was "too small to be worth a torpedo"—the speedboats carry two each. Nevertheless, the torpedo boat with a burst of speed passed close to the Allied craft and the Germans threw hand grenades aboard.

As the grenades burst, the patrol boat opened machine-gun fire on the Germans, but it was ineffective.

A short while later a 3,000-ton Allied transport loomed out of the darkness and was "promptly torpedoed."

"To sink a vessel of such size is nothing much for a submarine but for a motor torpedo boat it is considered excellent game," said DNB's account, "especially if, as was the case with this steamer, it is crammed with soldiers and valuable war material and hundreds of lookouts.

"They did not see us," the account went on, "—then action. A short time later the motor torpedo boat was safely back in a small Dutch fishing port."

HITLER RECEIVES IMPORTANT WORD FROM MUSSOLINI

Nazi Army Thinks Italy Will Join Fight Soon—Fuehrer Sees Alfieri.

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT, May 31 (A. P.).—Word spread today through the zone of operations that a communication of the greatest importance has been received from Italy. The general opinion was that Premier Mussolini's entrance into the war was only a question of brief time, possibly a few days.

This information, if correct, is believed to mean that Adolf Hitler considers the French air force no longer a formidable military factor. An understanding was said to exist that the Italian Premier would come in after any formidable danger of attack from the air, for his industrial region, fronting on France, had been removed.

Talk in army circles is to the effect that Germany appears again to have outwitted her enemies and now seems to be planning a concentric attack on Paris with the Italians coming in from the south.

On the Belgian front last week all the talk was that troops would attempt to land in England first. That has changed. Now one hears that artillery shooting across the narrow channel and the Nazi dive-bombers are to keep England in a state of jitters while Britain's last prop, France, is being finished.

Then the road will be considered free for the final onslaught against the British Isles.

Hitler Sees Alfieri.

BERLIN, May 31 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler received Italy's new Ambassador, Dino Alfieri, today at his headquarters near the western front. Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was present at the meeting, DNB, the official German news agency, announced.

Hitler and Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels were reported conferring at Der Fuehrer's general headquarters in the west today to prepare what was expected in high German circles to prove a sensational announcement dealing with the war.

One extremely reliable informant said that it was his opinion that the announcement would concern the question of Italy's entry into the war. He said that Hitler summoned Goebbels suddenly.

There was no immediate indication of when the Goebbels announcement might be made.

Happiness in Berlin.

Official spokesmen were silent, but a buoyant spirit prevailed in Berlin and everywhere the impression reigned that there would be startling developments in the immediate future, now that the great battle of Flanders was drawings to a close—a decided issue.

Although the German Army continued to pound away, with practically every weapon known to man, at the Allied troops still being withdrawn by sea from the Flanders battlefield, military leaders chose to regard this now as a mere mopping up operation and the public turned to the question of "Where next?" and "What next?"

Italian participation in the war on the side of Germany was one possibility. Some highly placed informants said they understood that Hitler and Premier Mussolini had agreed that Italy would enter the war only after Hitler had assured Il Duce that the French Air Force was so demolished as no longer to constitute a threat to Italy's main industries, which lie chiefly in the Po valley, in the North.

Questioned concerning Allied speculation on Italian entry into the war, authorized Germans said today:

"The Italian position in recent days has been so clear that we are astonished that London should so suddenly find it threatening."

One spokesman said that Germany would watch with "supreme calm" the action of Italy as a friendly power.

German and Yugoslav trade discussions have been successfully concluded, authorized persons said today. Details were not announced, but it was said the conversations showed trade can be carried on despite war.

Smashed Tanks Indicate Power of Dive Bombers.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT, May 31 (A. P.).—I am with Germany's war machine again. This time places like Lille and Arras and possibly Calais are its ultimate goal.

Meanwhile we are having an opportunity to study the gap in the Maginot Line extension between Sedan and Maubeuge forced by German strategy. All signs point to a complete surprise of the French by the Germans.

A source which I consider most reliable told me, however, that the French intelligence had advance word of the plan for forcing a gap at Sedan.

It was suggested, by the Germans, however, that the French General Staff was so convinced that the old Schlieffen plan, which calls for a wide sweeping move into France via Belgium, would be followed to the letter that it did not deem it likely that Germany would try at the same time to come by way of Luxemburg through the Ardennes Mountains. Or if it came, only weak forces were expected.

Germans declared that they were surprised to find that not even mines had been laid in the Ardennes to hold up the German rush.

However that may be, the fact remains that fighting appears to have been terrific in the section between Sedan and Maubeuge. Sedan itself is a heap of pathetic ruins. Maubeuge also was badly bombed and shelled. Charleville is the same.

What powder did ont destroy, fire finished.

As evidence of the power of the dive bombers are was the fact that the turret of one huge French tank had been blown completely off by a bomb while the rest of this fortress on caterpillars was hurled upside down into a gutter.

At Avesnes, scene of a tank battle, French tanks were telescoped into each other from the joint action of German artillery and Stukas.

It is difficult now to get evidence of just how many tanks participated in these bitter fights. One gets one stock reply: "A huge number."

Rather surprising was the number of Allied baby tanks scattered among the huge fortresses on treads. Apparently in France, as in Belgium, German air superiority decided the issue.

Allied tanks alone availed nothing against the German air, tank and artillery attack.

Another impression gained was that of the individual work done by smallest units of German infantry following closely behind and under cover of tanks.

Like the Indians.

Accounts by eye witnesses agree that the Germans moved and jumped like the Indians of old, always seeking cover and seldom exposing themselves until quite ready for a panther-like leap at the enemy.

They would then hurl bunched hand grenades at enemy tanks, one or several infantrymen aiming at the caterpillar mechanism, while others would aim at the slits in the armor plate behind which the driver sat.

Burned out tanks along the road indicated the effectiveness of this German mode of attack.

To one huge French tank named "Zephyr" some one with a grim sense of humor had fastened an umbrella, apparently in memory of Chamberlain.

NAZIS EXPECT DUCE TO JOIN IN PARIS DRIVE

Burning Question With Army At Front Is When Will Italy Come In

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the German Army on the Western Front, May 31.—There is one chief question tonight on German lips along the Western front:

"When will Italy plunge into the war to help crush the forces of France?"

In his secret general headquarters on the front Adolf Hitler tonight received Italy's new Ambassador, Dino Alfieri. Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop was present, too, and the question of Italy's decision—what and when—may have been finally decided there.

France Doomed, Nazis Say

German soldiers everywhere expressed belief that France is doomed.

The flower of her troops—including battalions of her best motorized units—are considered hemmed in the Flanders trap to die or surrender. German military spokesmen said nothing comparable to the "doomed" army of the north is left to guard France.

[Associated Press Editor's Note—Allied sources say "important elements" of the pocketed French force are fighting their way successfully toward Channel ports of embarakation on the heels of the British.]

Mop Up In France First Hinted

Talk behind the German lines hints that Adolf Hitler's strategy now may be to mop up in France before trying the blow across the English Channel at Britain.

Such a plan premeditates concentric attack on Paris, with Germany's Axis partner, Italy, thrusting in from the south.

The talk among the troops last week that Hitler would unleash his armies against England from newly won coast-line bases has switched to a belief that England will be kept "in a state of jitters" by long-range artillery fire across the Channel and sporadic raids by dread dive-bombing Stukas until operations in France are cleaned up.

Vast Graveyard Of Tanks

Word was received that an important communication from Premier Benito Mussolini had reached Hitler's military headquarters. No details were disclosed.

My trip back to the battlefront (Lochner was with the German armies in Belgium last week) was through fields pockmarked with shell craters and little towns where fire finished what powder did not destroy.

A sixty-five-mile wide graveyard of shell-torn tanks between Sedan and Maubeuge told a story of destruction by dive bombers and armor-piercing ammunition.

It was along this stretch of Belgian-French frontier that Germany punched through French defenses two weeks ago with the feint toward Paris that veered into a death-trap salient to the sea.

Apparently Taken By Surprise

There was every indication that the French were taken by surprise, although one reliable source told me the French had advance word of the plan to drive a wedge at Sedan.

It was suggested that the French high command either disregarded this—firm in the belief the 1914 strategy of a barn-door swing down through Belgium would be followed again—or did not expect a drive in such force.

The wreckage of the once-quiet countryside shows the fighting in the gap was terrific. Sedan has sagged into pathetic ruin. Maubeuge was badly bombed and shelled. Little towns were nearly wiped away.

Twisted Wreckage Everywhere

Everywhere is the twisted wreckage of tanks. Some are upside down. Others are telescoped in heaps as if hurled against each other with terrific fury. Some plunged through the walls of houses, then were buried by the collapse of the walls and roof. Bullet holes penetrated armor several inches thick. Many were blasted to pieces by bombs.

To questions of how many tanks participated in the bitter attack and counter-attack the reply is usually: "A huge number."

The Day's War Communiques

French

PARIS, May 31 (AP)—The French High Command issued the following communiqué tonight:

In the north our troops continued their march toward Dunkerque, where part of them were able to embark under protection of the navy and air forces despite enemy efforts.

Beyond a certain activity on the Somme, there is nothing to report on the rest of the front.

Despite unfavorable atmosphere conditions, our aviation carried out reconnaissances enabling our bombers to harass the enemy in the region of the north and to cooperate in supplying our troops.

The text of the morning communiqué follows:

In the north operations continued with the same intensity around the entrenched port of Dunkerque.

On the Somme and Aisne [Rivers] some local infantry actions on both sides.

Between the Aisne and the Meuse a fairly violent artillery duel.

Between the Meuse and Moselle an enemy raid was repulsed.

British

LONDON, May 31 (AP)—The following communiqué was issued by the Air Ministry today:

Throughout yesterday and last night relays of Royal Air Force bombers maintained their pressure on enemy lines and communications.

Bridges, tanks, motorized columns and troops were subjected to intense bombing attacks which facilitated the withdrawal operations of the Allied armies. One of our aircraft is missing.

Bombing operations have been continued with great intensity throughout today. Formations of our fighters maintained offensive patrols over the Dunkerque area yesterday. Weather conditions were unfavorable and there was a marked decrease in the enemy air activity. One Dornier bomber was shot down.

Today these patrols continued. Reports so far received show our fighters destroyed twelve enemy aircraft, damaged three others.

Apart from these activities over the Flanders battle area, to which the main effort has been directed, our heavy bombers last night carried out offensive operations against military objectives in Northwest Germany.

A later Air Ministry communiqué, issued tonight, follows:

Many direct hits on enemy troop concentrations and motorized columns on the Nieuport road, on the Belgian coast, were made by aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm operating with the Coastal Command Friday afternoon.

The aircraft were out to attack roads on which Germans were bringing up troops and ammunition trucks.

They found the roads crowded, approached at 9,000 feet, then split into two formations. Diving to 2,000 feet, they made simultaneous attacks on two roads. Scores of heavy bombs were dropped. As the smoke of the explosions cleared, the pilots saw craters in one road at an important junction. Near-by houses were demolished.

One pilot saw his bombs make a direct hit on a large open touring car escorted by two motorcycle outriders.

Other bombs fell directly on lorries and bodies of troops.

The second flight saw similar results from their bombs. They watched a large red building at a road junction crumble into ruins, and a particularly fierce explosion followed the last salvo.

Other bombs struck on roads and on houses in a German-occupied village. The whole attack was made in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire, but none of our aircraft was harmed.

The Admiralty issued the following communiqué:

The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce the loss of H. M. S. Curlew (Captain B. C. B. Brooke), sunk as a result of a bombing attack some days ago off the north coast of Norway.

During recent successful operations in the Narvik area His Majesty's ships have been heavily engaged in bombarding enemy positions on land and in protecting occupied coastal areas and convoys. They have been exposed to incessant bombing attacks in the course of which many enemy aircraft have been destroyed.

The confined and dangerous waters off these coasts restrict the freedom of movement so greatly that occasional losses are inevitable.

It was while engaged in these most arduous operations that H. M. S. Curlew was struck by bombs and subsequently sunk. Difficulty experienced in ascertaining the names of survivors has prevented this announcement from being made before. It is now established that four officers and five ratings [sailors] lost their lives and the next of kin have been informed.

German

BERLIN, May 31 (AP)—The text of today's High Command communiqué:

While the main force of the French troops in Northeastern France either are dispersed or captured, some detachments encircled or scattered are still resisting locally.

Resistance, however, will be broken in the shortest time. The attack against the remainder of the English Army in the flat country only a few kilometers deep, protected by the rising waters of canals along the coast between Furnes-Bergues and west of Dunkerque is in progress. The opponent here is stoutly resisting in order to rescue as many soldiers as possible on ships if necessary, even without equipment.

English forces encircled around Cassel were crushed during the attempt to break through northward.

The main force of the German divisions in Artois and Flanders now is released for new tasks.

The number of prisoners and amount of booty could not yet be established, even approximately.

Air force operations in the course of May 30 were considerably hampered by weather conditions.

Nevertheless, harbor facilities of Dunkerque again were raided.

The navy, all along the Dutch coast and the coastal regions of Belgium and France in German hands, took over coastal defense.

German speedboats succeeded in sinking by torpedo an enemy destroyer off the Belgian coast.

In the course of the night of May 30-31 British airplanes again attacked nonmilitary targets in Northern Germany. Not much damage was done anywhere.

One enemy airplane was shot down by a night chaser over Southern Holstein.

In Northern France the enemy lost three French and at Stavanger [Norway] one British fighting plane in air flights.

Two of our own planes are missing.

Attack on Paris Reported Near

By the Associated Press.

Louis P. Lochner, chief of the Associated Press Bureau in Berlin, reports from the Western Front that there is talk in army circles that this will be the next move in the European war:

A concerted German attack on Paris—that is, make the French capital the focus of pressure from a curving front—with Italy stabbing in from the south at the same time.

The pivot of this talk seems to be a German conclusion that the French Air Force no longer is a formidable threat to Italy's industrial region fronting on France.

Nazi Losses in West Put at 500,000 Men

PARIS, May 31 (AP).—The semi-official Telefrance Agency asserted today that the Germans had lost 500,000 men since they began their invasion of the Low Countries on May 10. This figure "finds itself written in authentic German documents," the agency reported without giving details.

British Estimate 500,000, Too

LONDON, May 31 (AP).—British military observers said tonight that it was difficult to estimate Germany's casualties in the twenty-two-day-old "real war" on the western front, but that an estimate of 500,000 dead, wounded and missing would not be far wrong.

British Flyers Tickled With New Turret Ships

Fighting Messerschmitts With Defiants Is "Like Knocking Apples Off A Tree," Says One Pilot

By DREW MIDDLETON

With Royal Air Force Command, Somewhere in England, May 31 (Passed by Air Ministry censor)—A dozen British flyers told today how in a lead-filled sky over Dunkerque they shot down twelve German planes, although outnumbered eighty to twenty-one.

The British lost but one plane, they said.

The battle saw four score Nazi Heinkels and Messerschmitts ranged against the R. A. F.'s small force of Hurricanes and Defiants.

Some of the victorious British pilots and their machine gunners belong to a squadron which in four days was credited with downing fifty-three German planes.

The men in this noted squadron maintain that Britain's new two-man fighter plane can lick its weight in Messerschmitts anywhere, any time.

Cookie Shot Down 8 In Day

One of the youthful pilots, called "Cookie" shot down eight German planes last Wednesday. He got another Thursday.

The job of these pilots for the last several days has been to protect the road of fire to the sea through which the Allied forces are fleeing Flanders to the English Channel.

Discussing the technical differences in British planes, "Cookie" recounted a successful air battle in which the Germans lost thirty-eight planes while engaging British firing from power-driven turret ships.

"Those jerries don't seem to be able to tell us from Hurricanes," said "Cookie." (Hurricanes fire forward.)

"They come alongside us, or as we say, 'on the beam,' and the gunner lets go.

"Like Knocking Apples"

"It was like knocking apples off a tree."

He paused, grinned and added:

"They gave us a little more hell today."

Today's battle of the twenty-one against eighty was little more unequal than most of the engagements fought in the air in the last three weeks. For sheer weight of numbers, the Germans have been on top constantly.

The conflict began when the twenty-one British planes sought and found the German squadron of forty Heinkel bombers that had been harassing ground troops.

"Just after we found them," a pilot said, "we were attacked from above by forty more German planes, Messerschmitts, the best plane they have.

Nazis Fall In Flames

"In the running battle which spread along the coast we shot down twelve enemy planes. They fell in flames. We saw three more wobble and spin out of line.

"We didn't chase them. You don't in this war."

The flyers related their experiences at their base, where, ten minutes after they returned from patrol duty over Dunkerque, they were sipping tea and lolling in deck chairs.

"We will go up again soon," said "Cookie." "This is a light day with only two patrols. Some days we have four and five and are in the air six hours."

One pilot remarked that "Jerry," the enemy, "never goes for us unless he's got bloody good odds in his favor." He added:

"Five For Every One"

"I think we are knocking down five for every one we lose, putting two out of action for every one their factories can produce."

The pilot who made that statement is a senior officer, holder of several medals and citations.

The officer emphasized that single combat "business" is avoided as much as possible.

"We fly in box formation," he explained, "and Heaven help the man who loses it.

"I call the youngsters back when they stray. It might be one of Jerry's decoys he's chasing. They're good at that."

He emphasized, as did all England tonight, that "we need ships and more ships."

Ships Better Armored

"Our ships are better armored," he said, "our ships are more maneuverable. Whether it's nature or training, when we see Jerry we attack. When he sees us, he counts us before he fights. But we need more ships."

He was enthusiastic about the new Defiant monoplanes with Merlin engines which carry four machine guns in the power-controlled turret aside from guns in the wings.

The newer models will carry still heavier armament.

The British Hurricanes and Spitfires carry one man each. The Defiants carry a pilot and a gunner.

"Our gunners are damned accurate," boasted a pilot. "Also, this turret gives them wider range and plenty of visibility."

"The Halfway House"

The base at which the airmen told their stories is referred to jokingly as "the halfway house between life and death."

Three thousand planes have been serviced and refueled at this base in the last three weeks.

Day and night the planes come and go. The gas is poured in, the machine-gun belts refilled, motors checked and general tuneup given. Then the ship is ready to go again.

While the mechanics work on the ship the pilots and gunners rest.

As the planes return from the death patrol the occupants, young, easy and confident, clamber out and start swapping stories.

They wear yellow life jackets, which they call "Mae Wests."

R. A. F. Parachuted Water To Garrison At Calais

London, May 31 (AP)—How the Royal Air Force parachuted supplies, including desperately needed water and ammunition, to the Allied garrison during the siege of Calais was told by the Air Ministry tonight.

"Orders were received at an air field in South England that water and ammunition should be taken to the garrison by air," the ministry said.

"Water was taken first. Each aircraft was loaded with two containers which were fitted into the bomb rack.

"The containers each carried ten gallons, and were fitted with parachutes that opened automatically.

"Just as dawn was breaking two sorties each of ten aircraft left.

"They were approaching Calais. The town was in flames. Smoke to some extent obscured the target.

Met Heavy Fire

"The leading planes met only light anti-aircraft fire but those that followed encountered heavy fire. Most of those behind the leaders were hit several times.

"As they passed over the citadel, the pilots came down as low as 50 feet to make sure of their aim."

Later in the day, the Air Ministry related, more aircraft, including protecting bombers, made another trip to Calais with ammunition and hand grenades.

Estimates of Germany's sky armada range from 10,000 to 20,000 planes. An authoritative French source reported Hitler hurled 5,000 planes against the Allies in the first phase of his total warfare. Hitler wouldn't have gambled with that number, this source thought, if he hadn't had a tremendous reserve to fall back on.

Want to Get Home.

A SOUTHERN ENGLISH CITY, May 31 (A. P.).—Thousands of anxious relatives of the men of the British Expeditionary Force, tensely awaiting the publication of casualty lists, thronged railway stations up and down the country today as trainloads of battle-weary soldiers streamed back home.

These tattered legions, ferried across the tortured English Channel, were dead beat after weeks of hell. They wanted the solace of home.

Through the English countryside the trains sped with their loads of mud-stained troops.

At wayside stations where they stopped, the disheveled soldiers received fruit, cigarettes, tea and cookies. Women waiting on platforms handed out soft drinks and acted as postmen for hastily scribbled post cards to mothers, wives and sweethearts.

The majority of the youths were in their early twenties. A few world war veterans were among them, grim and silent.

In country railway stations English officers and soldiers handed hard-boiled egg sandwiches and cans of steaming tea to bearded French soldiers and their colonial comrades-in-arms, brown-skinned Senegalese wearing crescent-emblazoned turbans or stained scarlet tarbooshes.

Germans Drop Bomb Into Warship's Stack

LONDON, May 31 (A. P.).—A bomb dropped perfectly into the funnel of a British warship exploded in the interior and sank the vessel, a reliable spokesman said today.

Naval men said the odds against such a hit are millions to one.

Nothing was said about the identity of the ship. Three British destroyers have been sunk recently, however.

SAY NAZIS LOST 5 MEN FOR ONE

Soldiers From Flanders Cry for More Planes.

LONDON, May 31 (A. P.).—British soldiers from Flanders passing through London said they had inflicted five casualties for one on the Germans, but the cry on nearly every man's lips was "for God's sake give us more airplanes."

British and French soldiers everywhere demonstrated their superiority over the German ground forces, the returning men said.

With the Tommies were a number of auxiliary territorial service girls.

Flanders Called Spy-riddled

Briton Tells of Troubles They Made—Headquarters Was Always Bombed.

LONDON, May 31 (A. P.).—British military men said today that areas through which Allied forces retreated from France were "riddled with spies."

"It seemed that if Army Headquarters moved into a house—even one of a row—it could be guaranteed that that house would be bombed," one said.

Illustrating fifth column activity, the spokesman said one man in the uniform of a British officer gave an order to move troops two miles along a beach for embarkation.

"The man in charge of the embarkation party knew the beach pretty well," said the spokesman, "and asked a naval officer if it really was intended to embark from that place.

"The naval officer replied: 'We have no intention of doing any such thing.'

"Half an hour later the place was bombed."

The spokesman said that the case was being investigated to determine whether the "officer" who gave the order was a spy.

[German fifth column activities in the Flanders trap, were reported today in a London broadcast, picked up here by the National Broadcasting Company.

A young corporal said, according to the broadcast: "They sniped from behind hotels and lorries and many wore French uniforms. We routed a dozen of them and they all wore Allied uniforms."]

Charges Belgian Treason.

PARIS, May 31 (A. P.).—A French military spokesman declared today that German military successes in Belgium were "directly due to treason."

"Without this treason," he said, "we would most probably still be fighting on the line of the Albert Canal."

He spoke of an incident, in which only one officer knew how to blow up a bridge which the Nazi forces were able to cross over the Belgian canal fortifications, as distinctly unmilitary.

It was unbelievable that no one under that officer's command of fifty men knew how to blow up that bridge, the spokesman said, adding:

"Anyway, the French soldiers who attributed the German advances to the mistakes of the French High Command now know where to place the blame."

King Is War Prisoner.

BERLIN, May 31 (A. P.).—King Leopold III of Belgium is a prisoner of war, an authorized German spokesman disclosed today and it is unlikely that under that status he will be permitted to name a new Belgian Government.

The statement was made in response to questions concerning Leopold's status in view of the disagreement with his emigre government.

The Belgian Army, which had been estimated at 300,000 men, will probably gain its freedom soon, this informant said, and the men permitted to return home. The Belgian soldiers have not been assigned to prisons.

Belgian Parliament Meets.

LIMOGES, France, May 31 (A. P.).—The refugee Belgian Parliament met today to hear an official account of the acts taken by the Cabinet of Premier Hubert Pierlot since it fled Belgium and went to Paris. The Cabinet deprived Leopold of the throne "in the name of the Belgian people" last night, dating the order May 28, the day of his surrender.

MEXICO CITY, May 31 (A. P.).—The Belgian Legation announced today the unanimous decision of the Belgian residents of Mexico City to support "the constitutional government of Belgium," headed by Premier Hubert Pierlot in Paris, which disavowed King Leopold III after his capitulation to Germany.

The Legation declined to say how many persons attended a meeting at the Legation at which the decision was made. The meeting was closed to outsiders. Several hundred Belgians are reported to be in the city.

A British broadcast heard by the listening post of the National Broadcasting Company here today stated that Premier Paul Reynaud of France has received a mass of telegrams from the Belgian people, "demonstrating their determination to continue the fight with their Allies for the liberation of their country."

Belgian Parliament Group Denounces King

LIMOGES, France, May 31 (A. P.).—Belgian Senators and Deputies adopted motions today "stigmatizing" King Leopold's capitulation to the Germans and announced their agreement with the Ministers' stand that it is now legally and morally impossible for the King to reign.

Eighty-nine of the 202 Deputies and 54 of the 167 Senators affirmed their desire to continue to fight on the Allied side with a new Belgian Army.

The old Belgian army, they declared, had suffered "an undeserved fate" in being surrendered to the Germans by the King.

By official decree the Senators and Deputies deprived King Leopold of his Order of the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor.

In Aurillac the French police arrested Dr. Maertens, a Flemish nationalist who in the world war was condemned to die for dealing with the enemy but was pardoned. He was accused by the police of possession of a million francs in gold.

Frantizek Fabrik, who entered France from Belgium, was executed after a military court had convicted him of spying.

Say Refugees Caused Defeat

Eyewitnesses Report Allied Supply Lines in Flanders Were Shattered.

By CHARLES FOLTZ

BERN, Switzerland, May 31 (A. P.).—The clogging of the Allied roads by millions of refugees and the efficiency of Germany's military machine in keeping its own supply routes unobstructed are what defeated the Allies in the north eyewitnesses returning from the war zone declared today.

One said that the morale-shattering presence of masses of refugees in areas where the Belgian Army was being cut to bits by the Nazi aerial and land assault accounted in part for the surrender of King Leopold III.

Seven eye-witnesses who arrived here through Germany after having been caught in the midse of the fighting in four different zones of Belgium and north France, agreed on contrasting the chaos caused by streams of refugees and non-combatants, flowing with all their movable possessions into roads essential to Allied communications; and the incredible orderliness in the rush of German supplies over the highways leading to their front.

Refugees Tie Up Tanks.

The witnesses, who declined to be named, included four diplomats, two business men and one casual tourist. Four were more or less pro-Ally, the others equally pro-German. All praised the courtesy and treatment accorded them by the Germans once it was decided that they should pass through the military zone.

One gave this description of the scene along the Calais-Abbeville coast road in north France last Wednesday:

"We swarmed along the coast road with tens of thousands of other refugees heading south. Swearing and sweating French troops in motorized units tried to go through northward, but the refugees were panic-stricken and there was little the troops could do.

"I saw one group of refugees stand like sheep—dazed and bewildered—and halt a whole column of tanks for at least ten minutes before they were literally led off the road.

"German planes bombed and machine-gunned these roads, for they saw moving, organized columns of troops."

Saw No Allied Bombers.

A diplomat who traveled through German-occupied regions from Amiens to Luxemburg asserted that "after the chaos we had left in France, the order on the German side seemed incredible. Supplies were not only moving up—they were rushing up at breakneck speed over unobstructed highways.

"Ambulances rolled toward Amiens, empty trucks and full ambulances headed back. The middle lane, by strict order, which was followed to the letter, was left open for motorcycle couriers.

"Yet that same road the day before was like the madhouse we had left.

"The Germans seemed to have plenty of gasoline, their morale was high and the organization almost fantastic."

This witness, pro-Ally, added: "We neither saw nor heard a single Allied bomber over the main highways just behind the front either day or night."

One who left the Belgian war zone the day King Leopold capitulated declared that "nobody who was there could wonder why."

"The Belgian Army was cut to bits," this witness said. "Whole regiments simply vanished under German fire the day before the surrender.

Soldiers Seemed Stark Mad.

"Even that was not enough to bring a surrender, but the troops' morale was shattered by the presence of masses of refugees literally on the army's skirts.

"German bombers striking at Belgian supply lines struck refugees too—Belgian refugees.

"Many Belgian soldiers seemed stark mad—torn between their desire to continue the fight and their inability to avoid bringing German fire on the refugees who shared their camps."

Another witness who had traveled the road between Arras and Cambrai in northeastern France on Wednesday said:

"Refugees and soldiers lay side by side along the road in death.

"Our column of refugees (they were in territory captured by the Germans the night before) flowed up to a place where we saw a well-dressed business man standing in front of his car in a ditch, lying under the raised hood. I got out to see if I could help him. Like others on the ground around him, he was stiff in death."

ITALY EXPECTED TO ACT BEFORE DECLARING WAR

Fascists Say Announcement Will Come After Troops Have Already Moved.

COLONIAL FRONTIERS GUARDED

Allied Move on Salonika Will Bring Italian Invasion of Balkans, Rome Hears.

ROME, May 31 (A. P.).—Italians close to the Government said today that any announcement of Italy's entrance into the European war probably would come only after the Italian forces already had moved, and that the world probably would learn of the first actions from points outside Italy.

Fascist authorities kept Italy's plans secret today, but precautions were taken to safeguard colonial frontiers against counter-attack.

Protection against air raids was tested in Gimma, capital of the Ethiopian province of Gallasidama, and the Provincial Governor, Peitro Gazzera, reviewed Italian troops.

Keeping Plans Secret

Fascist authorities, keeping their plans secret, closely watched British and French activity in Greece where, they said, an Allied move toward Salonika would bring an immediate Italian invasion of the Balkans. One informant said Italy would refrain from taking the initiative there, however.

Informed Fascists disclaimed knowledge of the reported visit of German Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels to Adolf Hitler's headquarters which, a Nazi source in Berlin said, might be to prepare for announcement of Italy's entry into war.

Sources close to the government predicted it would come, as in the Ethiopian war, only after Italian forces already had moved.

Assurance to Greece.

Italy assured Greece five days ago that her neutrality would be safe from any Italian attack, a spokesman disclosed.

Italy's assurance of her desire to keep peace in the Balkans, however, was understood to depend on the success of those States in maintaining their neutrality against the Allies, who have been accused here of seeking to spread the war there.

Few observers here expected any sort of declaration of war, although the general expectation that Italy would soon enter the conflict riveted attention on a Cabinet meeting called for next Tuesday by Premier Mussolini to discuss important matters.

Council Not Called.

Fascist practice has been to divulge momentous decisions after they have been taken through the Fascist Grand Council, which includes most of the Cabinet. There has been no announcement, however, of a summons for a Council meeting.

Newspaper posters emphasized the theme that English and French resistance is doomed and that therefore it is useless to think Italy might at the eleventh hour desert Germany for the Allies.

The principal question appeared to be whether Italy would strike directly at France, at French and British Mediterranean possessions, or launch an independent Balkan drive menacing Greece and Turkey and thus ultimately the French and British.

Italians assumed that in replying to President Roosevelt two weeks ago Mussolini made plain his intention to carry out his pledges to Hitler under the year-old German-Italian military alliance.

Il Duce's reply still is kept secret, but Fascists said it undoubtedly contained a frank statement of Italy's position. They recalled that a day after it was sent, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano announced that Italy "intends to keep faith with her engagements."

Sees Little U. S. Can Do.

A Fascist close to the Government expressed the opinion there was little that America could do to influence Italian policy at this stage of events.

The United States, he said, could only threaten to enter the war if Italy intervened and threats, he added, are not likely to influence Mussolini.

Recalling hints more than a year ago of the possibility of American help toward a world economic readjustment, this Fascist said, "the situation has gone beyond the possibility of such a settlement."

The Italian press gave prominence to a statement by Hungary's Foreign Minister, Count Istvan Csaky, calling it "a clear warning to the Balkan States."

The statement, published in a Budapest newspaper, said that the "community of interests" among Germany, Italy and Hungary, along with the Hungarian Army, was the basis for "hope that peace can be maintained in this European zone."

Citizens of Britain and France meanwhile sought exit visas.

Hasty Letters Home.

Americans whose duties kept them in Italy hastily wrote letters home which, they believed, might be the last to go by boat before this nation is cut off by sea from the United States.

Word that the United States liner Washington would not come to Italy but would embark Americans at Bordeaux, France, led to a general belief that the United States liners Manhattan and President Harrison would be the last boats to America before the war breaks here.

The entire student body of the North American College, consisting of 106 students for the priesthood, was included in the passenger lists of the Manhattan and the President Harrison. The group will be in charge of Mgr. Allen J. Babcock of Ann Arbor, Mich., vice-rector of the college. Its rector, Bishop Ralph Hayes, is remaining to wind up the affairs of the college.

ITALIAN ARMS WILL ENFORCE CLAIMS—ROME

Rome, May 31 (AP).—Italy kept Britain and France guessing again today.

But the fact that she is going to strike was emphasized by the leading Italian foreign affairs commentary, Relazioni Internationali, which declared in an editorial to be published tomorrow:

"France and Britain have rejected the demands of the Italian people; these demands will be enforced by arms. The Italian people will fight the French and British enemy with extreme determination to complete victory."

Authoritative Fascists disclaimed any intention of striking first against Greece, aligned with the Allies through a mutual assistance pact, but there was a big "if" to this disclaimer.

Any Allied move toward Salonika, Greek port used as a naval base by the Allies in the World War, or Greek partisanship toward Britain and France would bring the Italian army through the Balkans, Italy warned.

The visit of Dino Alfieri, new Italian ambassador to Germany, to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's western front headquarters indicated to most observers that the two governments were working in close harmony in their plans for the overthrow of the British and French empires.

Private motorists in Italy today enjoyed their last day of using their cars. Tomorrow their vehicles will be halted for a lack of gasoline permits.

The Fascist Govt. also announced the rationing of laundry soap beginning tomorrow. The monthly allowance will be 200 grams, the equivalent of seven ounces for each person. Coffee and sugar already are regulated.

A British report that Enrico Missi, head of the Italian section of the Nationalist Party in the Maltese cabinet had been arrested and interned drew angry comment tonight from Fascists.

They predicted it would arouse further anti-English feeling tomorrow, when it will be prominently published in the newspapers. The press frequently has accused Britain of mistreatment of Italians in Malta, strategic British bastion in the western Mediterranean.

Warning by Italian Editor.

ROME, May 31 (A. P.) (By German Radio).—France and Great Britain have "rejected" demands of the Italian people; these demands will be enforced by arms," Relazioni International, Italy's leading foreign affairs periodical, declares in an editorial to be published tomorrow.

"The hour longed for for more than fifty years has come," the publication said.

"The Italian people will fight the French and British enemy with extreme determination to complete victory.

"London and Paris have not yet grasped it that the present crisis is a tremendous revolution of peoples who have changed their destination by energetic and renewing ideals of the revolutions of Mussolini and Hitler. A new Europe arises on an indissoluble and balancing contact of Romanism and Germanism, two forces which are destined to lay down a new political form for centuries to come.

"With this inner and unshakeable conviction, the Italian people will enter the conflict by order of Mussolini.

"If the Italian people claim for themselves the Mediterranean and special problems linked up with it, then they not only demand a historic but a natural right.

"The political and military power of Italy depends on the Mediterranean."

Italians Leaving Paris.

PARIS, May 31 (A. P.).—Italian journalists are leaving Paris today, a spokesman for the Ministry of information said. He added that although this did not mean inevitable war with Italy it was possible the Italians would enter the fight within the next ten days.

Italian Ship Not Delayed

ABOARD S. S. CONTE DI SAVOIA, May 31 (AP).—This Italian liner, bound for Italy, passed Gibraltar today without being halted by the British contraband control.

MADRID, May 31 (A. P.).—A demand that Great Britain return Gibraltar to Spain was voiced today by Manuel Aznar, Spanish journalist and frequent semi-official spokesman for the Government.

Commenting on a recent statement on British-Spanish relations by Lord Halifax, the British Foreign Secretary, Aznar in an article in the Falange Journal Arriba complained that Halifax omitted reference to Gibraltar.

"The truth is," he wrote, "that the rock of Gibraltar towers like a shadow between England and Spain. This is the first of our great problems—not only one, indeed, but the first.

"We Spaniards with perfect unanimity know and say and clamor that Gibraltar belongs to us . . . that it hurts us to the depth of our soul to see a flag that is not Spanish waving in the winds above it."

Called From Switzerland

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, May 31 (AP).—The newspaper "Gazette de Lauzanne" reported tonight many Italians who had lived in Switzerland for years had received telegraphic orders from the Italian government to come home. The Italian Legation in Berne said it had no knowledge of a general recall, although "some" Italians might be summoned for military training periods.

Italy Hints London Negotiations Are Off

London, May 31 (AP)—Authoritative circles said tonight that Italy had intimated on Tuesday that she considered British-Italian negotiations over contraband control to be broken off. This indication was said to have been given despite the agreement in principle reached last week for an easing of contraband control against Italian ships.

Fifth Column Arrest In Malta

Allied Fleet in Maneuvers

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May 31 (AP).—The Allied fleet continued maneuvers in the Mediterranean today, giving its big guns a stiff workout in the longest battle practice since the warships arrived here on May 3. The importance of the maneuvers was emphasized by the fact that this was the first time a majority of the fleet was participating.

TELEKY SAYS WAR WILL END SHORTLY

Claims Hungary Has Aided Germany and Italy.

BUDAPEST, May 31 (A. P.).—Premier Count Pal Teleky declared today that the German Army's "great victories have made it highly probable that the war will end in a short time."

The Hungarian Premier said the army command now would release some reservists for farm work.

Interviewed in the lobby of Parliament, he said Hungary had helped "our German and Italian friends by our self-discipline and quiet to keep peace in the Balkans and on the Danube."

Reds Arrested in Belgrade.

BELGRADE, May 31 (A. P.).—Several communist demonstrators were arrested today after staging a noisy welcome when Vasily Lavrentieff, Soviet Minister to Bulgaria, arrived to exchange documents with the Foreign Office ratifying the Soviet-Yugoslav trade treaty.

The demonstrators shouted: "Long live the Soviet Union! Give us a military alliance!"

Strong police squads dispersed several groups and took the leaders into custody.

Official circles confirmed a report that a Yugoslav Minister to Moscow would be named soon.

Yugoslavian-Russian Bonds Are Drawn Closer

Belgrade, May 31 (AP)—Bonds between Yugoslavia and Soviet Russia were drawn tighter in private conferences today between Prince Paul and Soviet Minister Vasily Lavrentieff after formal ratification of the Russian-Yugoslav trade agreement.

It was the first time a Soviet diplomat has been received by the Prince Regent.

Meanwhile, another trade pact was signed with Germany assuring the Reich half of Yugoslavia's total exports. This is ten times as much as will be sent to Russia during the next year.

Belief was expressed here that the danger of attack if Italy enters the war had been lessened by the ... fresh evidence of Russian and G... economic interests in Yugoslavia.

The Balkan Entente economic conference opening in Belgrade tomorrow was not expected to accomplish much in increasing trade between the members—Yugoslavia, Rumania, Greece and Turkey. Any such increases might interfere with commitments already made to major powers.

Hungarians' Program Coordinated With Axis

Budapest, May 31 (AP)—The Government left no doubt today that Hungary's policy is coordinated with the plans of the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Premier Count Pal Teleky, in an interview, and Foreign Minister Count Steven Csaky, in a newspaper article, affirmed that Hungary's "common interest" with Germany ... Italy, as well as the mobilized Hungarian army, was a guarantee of peace in southeastern Europe.

The declarations of the Premier and the Foreign Minister were interpreted in diplomatic circles as warnings to pro-Ally Balkan powers to stay non-belligerent.

"Great victories of the German army have made it highly probable that the war will end in a short time," said Teleky.

He noted Hungary already had helped "our German and Italian friends by our self-discipline and quiet to keep peace in the Balkans and on the Danube."

Csaky wrote that army units had been put on a war footing since it is "conceivable that shots later may be fired in this part of Europe."

Crediting a "common interest" with the Axis powers for maintaining peace in southeastern Europe, he declared the aims of the Hungarian Government strengthen this interest. Hungary, he said, would "spare no sacrifices to develop our army."

India to Swell Army in Fear Of War's Spread

Will Enroll 100,000 Men, Quadruple Air Force to Meet Any 'Enemy Action'

SIMLA, India, May 31 (AP).—Gen. Sir Robert A. Cassels, British commander in chief in India, announced today that 100,000 additional men would be enrolled in the Indian Army and that the Indian air force would be quadrupled. He said the situation in France indicated "a definite danger" of a spreading of the war which "might mean India would cease to enjoy immunity from enemy action."

The new Indian Army formations, he added, would include motorized and mechanized units.

The Indian Army now includes about 240,000 native troops, including reserves, and 57,000 British troops. What part of this strength has been retained in India has not been disclosed. Some Indian troops have been sent to France, Palestine and Egypt.

British Cruiser Lost Off Norway In Bomb Attack

9 Died on H. M. S. Curlew, Says Admiralty, Telling of North Coast Battle

LONDON, May 31 (AP).—The Admiralty announced today the loss of the 4,290-ton British anti-aircraft cruiser Curlew, which was sunk as the result "of a bombing attack some days ago off the north coast of Norway." Four officers and five sailors lost their lives, the announcement said.

The Curlew, which was built in 1917 but was remodeled recently to serve against aircraft, had a normal complement of 400, which was probably increased to 450 in war time. She was specially armed with a primary battery of ten four-inch anti-aircraft guns and several smaller guns, and was the second British cruiser admitted lost in this war. The first was the Effingham, sunk after striking a rock in Norwegian waters.

The Admiralty's communique follows:

"The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce the loss of H. M. S. Curlew (Capt. B. C. B. Brooke) sunk as a result of a bombing attack some days ago off the north coast of Norway.

"During recent successful operations in the Narvik area his majesty's ships have been heavily engaged in bombarding enemy positions on land and in protecting occupied coastal areas and convoys. They have been exposed to incessant bombing attacks in the course of which many enemy aircraft have been destroyed.

"The confined and dangerous waters off these coasts restrict the freedom of movement so greatly that occasional losses are inevitable.

"It was while engaged in these most arduous operations that H. M. S. Curlew was struck by bombs and subsequently sunk. Difficulty experienced in ascertaining the names of survivors has prevented this announcement from being made before. It is now established that four officers and five ratings (sailors) lost their lives and the next of kin have been informed."

NAZI TROOPS SHOVE INTO BODO, NORWAY

Capture Roadhead After Bombing Defenders Out Of Town

[By the Associated Press]

Stockholm, May 31—German troops shoved into Bodo, Norway, end of the road north, today, after bombing its defenders out of town.

Other German units fought desperately along a railroad through the mountains near Narvik, 118 miles northeast of Bodo, to keep a line of retreat open to the nearby Swedish frontier. The Allies captured Narvik earlier this week after a long siege of the ore port.

Germans Captured

In a communique dated somewhere in Norway, the Norwegian army headquarters reported capture of several hundred Germans driven east from Narvik and said others fled in civilian clothes.

A Norwegian spokesman said Bodo was abandoned after systematic bombing which "virtually wiped the city off the map." Norwegian soldiers fell back into the roadless mountains north of the city to block any attempt to break through toward Narvik by land.

Wounded On Handcars

Swedish newspapers told of Allied and German wounded being brought to the Swedish frontier opposite Narvik in railroad handcars. They said one hospital train made up at the border carried 162 wounded, most of them Germans.

Norwegian sources said the Allies were steadily widening their hold around Narvik. The town was pictured as wrecked by a month's fighting and by the dynamiting of important buildings.

Retreating Germans were said to have wrecked switches and heaped ruined engines on the railroad tracks to the east to block pursuit.

'BITING ON GRANITE'

Hitler's Power Is Waning, Greenwood Asserts.

LONDON, May 31 (A. P.).—Arthur Greenwood, Minister without portfolio, assured radio listeners tonight that Adolf Hitler is "biting on granite" and told them there "is no need to be downhearted."

"The enemy beats on our very gates with his mailed fist," declared Mr. Greenwood, Laborite member of Prime Minister Churchill's war cabinet. "We have suffered grievous losses. We have inflicted greater losses on the enemy.

"Our power in the field, on the seas and in the air waxes as his wanes. Our economic resources expand as his are eaten up. Our economic stranglehold makes it more and more difficult for him to replace his weapons of war."

A hint of a new call on the services of civilians in the British war effort was given when Mr. Greenwood told the nation that it "must face far reaching changes."

"More and more," he said, "we shall all become active combatants in the war, serving the national cause in different ways."

Gen. Billotte Is Killed In Car Crash at Front

Was Head of French 1st Army in Flanders Fighting

PARIS, May 31 (AP).—Gen. Gaston Billotte, a former military governor of Paris, was killed in an automobile accident three days ago while commanding a group of armies in the field, it was announced today. No details were given.

Gen. Billotte, sixty-... years old, was born at Strasbourg, Alsace. He was graduated from St. Cyr, famous French military academy, in 1896. After serving in the World War he became, in 1926, head of the French staff college.

He went to Poland in 1920 with the French military mission which aided the Poles in their war with the Bolsheviks.

Paris, May 31 (AP)—The Government reduced gasoline rations today and raised the price because of military needs.

ALLIES ON PAR WITH GERMAN AIR FORCE

NEW YORK, May 31—Friday—(AP)—Heavy losses inflicted by the Allies upon the German air force probably have enabled Britain and France to achieve equality with the Germans in trained flying personnel, the official British radio said today in a broadcast heard by CBS.

It said a figure of 5,000 Germans lost "is thought to be a low estimate." This based on the estimated destruction of 2,000 German planes, most of them bombers, since the invasion of Belgium and The Netherlands.

"These losses in men in the air are thought to be three or four times as great as those of Britain and France," it added, "and while the Germans have still a great number of planes, the Allies have probably already equality in respect to personnel."

Every Street in Britain May Have a 'Mr. Sensible'

'Agent of Reassurance' Would Bolster Morale in Raids

LONDON, May 31 (AP).—A nation-wide plan to enlist a "Mr. Sensible" in every street to maintain public morale in the event that radio broadcasting and newspaper circulation are disrupted by bombing or invasion was announced today by Sir Wyndham Deedes, information officer for London.

The plan envisages local "agents of reassurance," responsible for posting reliable news bulletins in streets and "allaying public fears, stimulating public effort for victory and giving advice and exhortation."

"Muddling" Factories Warned

LONDON, May 31 (AP).—Supply Minister Herbert Morrison warned today he would use the "full rigor" of his emergency control powers against war factories showing "signs of slackness, irresolution, slow starting or muddle."

Morrison said that an appeal for "harder and longer work" in the munitions industries had met with "a splendid response" and that "essential munitions are coming forward more swiftly and the rate of growth of the arms production machine is accelerating."

CHANNEL ISLANDS MEN MUST SERVE

Lose Freedom From Call to British Arms.

LONDON, May 31 (A. P.).—Men of the Channel Islands, hitherto liable to military service outside their islands only for the task of rescuing the King in the event of his capture by an enemy, may now be enlisted in the British armed forces under the national service bill.

Laws Are Ancient.

Many of the laws governing the Channel Islands date back to 1066, when England was taken by William the Conqueror, the ambitious Duke of Normandy.

The Channel Islands, which are closer to the shores of Normandy than to those of Great Britain, were part of the domain of the Duke of Normandy when he invaded England, and when that invasion had been completed he supposed that he was adding English soil to his own land. As things turned out, much of the Duke's territory actually was added to England, including the Channel Islands. These islands aggregate about seventy-five square miles and the largest of them are Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney and Sark. For the most part they lie in comparatively shallow water and the currents that shoot by the rocky coastlines of the islands make navigation to and from them extremely dangerous.

The islands are extremely independent politically and originally were more the personal property of the King than of the general British Government. The islands since 1771 have been divided into two States—Jersey and Guernsey—which are ruled largely by lieutenant-governors recommended by the War Office. Regular army troops are stationed on the islands as protection and also every male inhabitant must serve in the militia at one time or another, but only for service on the islands.

Fund Set Up for Britons, Refugees in Native Land

5,000 Who Once Lived on the Continent Are Penniless

LONDON, May 31 (AP).—More than 5,000 Britons, former residents of Germany, Holland and Belgium, are penniless refugees in their native land. They include professional men, university professors and business men who once enjoyed large incomes but who have been forced to seek government relief.

A British War Refugees Fund has been formed to aid them, with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax as president and Sir Neville Henderson, Ambassador to Germany before the war, as treasurer.

Sir Nevile Henderson, last ambassador to Germany, announced he was donating the proceeds of his book, "Failure of a Mission," to a fund for relief of these refugees.

Britain Bans Radios in Motors.

GALWAY FULL OF AMERICANS

Almost Every Home Is Thrown Open to Them.

THEY'RE AWAITING U. S. SHIP

And Late Returners From War Zone Pay High Fares.

GALWAY, Ireland, May 31 (A. P.).—Hundreds of homeward-bound Americans in the British Isles were singing "Take Me Down to Galway Town" today, and by noon most of them had had their wish.

This sleepy west coast fishing town of a normal 18,000 population received an influx of more than 1,200 Americans overnight and all but a few were awaiting the arrival of the United States liner President Roosevelt to take them home. The ship is expected about nightfall.

Every hotel, practically every private residence and even public halls are equipped with cots and other bedding to care for the rush of Americans fleeing the war zone. Hostelries which had nearly closed last week because of the scarcity of tourists thankfully put on extra help.

The Spur Is Mutual.

Every dining room in town was filled with groups of well-dressed Americans. They gathered at street corners and the strange talk of the people from the great nation across the sea seemed a magnet for the Irish folk who spoke just to hear the American speech, and here in Galway county the Irish speak with a brogue Americans love to hear, so it was a 50-50 proposition.

The response to various consular appeals to Americans to return home has far exceeded expectations.

The President Roosevelt will be taxed to capacity. Cots will be set up in halls, lounge rooms and in every available space.

In spite of that, however, there is a question whether all who wish to return will be able to do so on this trip.

Pay $300 a Cot.

At first there was considerable grumbling about the arbitrary cost of $300 a cot on board the ship. The complaining ceased when it was pointed out that the ship was making the eastward crossing without revenue of any sort and that the majority of the Americans still here are here only because they had failed to heed earlier consular suggestions that they return home.

Special trains were run across the country from Dublin yesterday and today.

Americans, finding that they were allowed to take only £20 (about $64.00) when they leave Ireland, spent the day in the local stores. Linens, laces, knick-knacks of every description that smack of the Old Sod were being bought up as fast as the shopkeepers could wrap them.

Galway never saw anything quite like it, but it is not complaining. Many debts will be paid with the cash left here by the Yankees, some of whom have been residents of Britain for fifteen or twenty years.

Americans Abroad Plan '40 Lafayette Escadrille

U. S. Pilots Will Fly in New Unit of Famous Air Squadron

PARIS, May 31 (AP).—A "Lafayette escadrille of 1940" will be created soon, with American flyers and money, to fight for France, Humbert J. Clemente, commander of Paris Post No. 1, American Legion, announced today. It will be the successor to the famous American air squadron which fought on the Allied side in the World War.

Meanwhile press reports said that French pilots in nine American-made Curtiss planes had held off a wave of forty-two German Heinkels attempting to bomb a railroad station. The French were said to have brought down six of the German planes as against the loss of two of their own.

U. S. War Cemetery At Montfaucon Bombed

Hit While Memorial Day Services Were Being Held Near Paris

Paris, May 31 (AP)—French newspapers reported today that the American World War cemetery at Montfaucon, in the Meuse-Argonne region, was bombed yesterday at the same time that Memorial Day ceremonies were being held in the American cemetery at Suresnes, near Paris.

Three unnamed American army cemeteries in France are in German hands and a fourth is under fire.

JAPAN WANTS VOICE IN PEACE

Desires a Say Concerning Dutch East Indies.

GETS RAW MATERIALS THERE

Tokio Dislikes the Idea of Their Being Nazi-controlled.

TOKIO, May 31 (A. P.).—Japan will demand a voice in any settlement of the European war in order to protect her interests in the Netherlands East Indies, persons close to the Government said today.

While Japan is neutral in a conflict which, according to the belief here, may end this summer in a German victory, officials said:

"Japan cannot be indifferent to important changes in the status of areas and territories within the Pacific zone."

German acquisition of the Netherlands East Indies, or practical control of them through a puppet Dutch Government, is regarded with increasing uneasiness in view of the enormous importance of the island's resources of oil, rubber and tin.

The Governor-General of the Dutch territory has assured Japan that there will be no change in the volume of these exports to Japan despite Holland's involvement in the European war. But if the Netherlands East Indies were to become a German colony, it is regarded as almost certain that Germany would take all of the raw materials to bolster her own military and economic status.

While Germany has announced that she is not interested in the Indies, and France, Great Britain, Australia and the United States have announced their desire for retention of the status quo, the view prevails in some circles that Japan should take over control of the islands before the end of the war in order to forestall whatever results a peace might bring.

In these quarters there is doubt that the United States would intervene and no other nation is considered capable of action.

Meanwhile officials insist that the Government has not changed its policy of non-involvement, has formulated no concrete plan concerning the Indies, and instead will await developments in Europe.

Add TOKYO--xxx Europe.

Proponents of quick action in the southern Pacific so far are exerting practically no influence on the government.

The question of former German pacific colonies now held by Jap under League of Nationals maddat also is under consideration. Reliable sources assert that, because of the "close friendship" between Germany & Japan, Germany will not pdemand their return.

These quarters said they expected a German victory, with the question then arising of disposition of the oil, rubber and tin of the Dutch East Indies.

The Japanese government was pictured as viewing with uneasiness the prospect that these valuable raw materials would be diverted entirely to Germany, cutting off shipments usually going to Japan.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, May 31 (A. P.).—Curfew between 10:30 P. M. and 6 A. M. for all aliens 15 years old and upward was ordered today, effective June 3.

Ex-Luxury Liners Patrol South American Coast

Apparently "Covering" 12 German Ships Tied Up In Brazilian Ports, Travelers Say

Boston, May 31 (AP)—Two former British luxury liners, the Monarch of Bermuda and the Queen of Bermuda, both heavily armed, are doing patrol duty along the east coast of South America, passengers of the Mormac Gull reported upon arrival here today.

Several of the Gull's seven passengers said the British vessels were "bristling" with armament—forward, amidships and aft.

They added both vessels apparently had been assigned to "cover" twelve German steamers tied up in Brazilian ports.

MRS. MORROW SAYS SHE'D AID ALLIES

Disagrees With Lindbergh in Wire to Senator.

WASHINGTON, May 31 (A. P.).—Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, mother-in-law of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, urged today that the United States give active aid to the Allies.

A telegram from Mrs. Morrow, placed in the Congressional Record by Senator Smathers, Democrat, of New Jersey, said:

"I and members of my family support resolution passed by New York branch of Committee to Defend America by Aiding Allies.

"Urge you to support immediate action on three points as follows:

"First, make available to Allies as many planes as may in opinion of President be released without impairing national defense.

"Second, make available a hundred million dollars to aid refugees in war zone.

"Third, stop export of war materials which may find their way to aggressive nations."

In a radio address on May 19 Col. Lindbergh said: "Let us turn our eyes to our own nation. We can not aid others until we have first placed our own country in a position of spiritual and material leadership and strength."

Reports from Jamestown said the planes were sold to the Canadian Government but it was believed here the purchaser was the British Air Ministry.

It is understood the planes will be shipped overseas as quickly as possible. They will be used much as observation balloons were utilized in the World War. The Stinson 105 is a three seat craft with top speed of 105 miles an hour.

No Answer at Capital.

WASHINGTON, May 31 A. P.).—Reports that Premier Mussolini of Italy had told President Roosevelt that Italy intended to keep her pledges and aid Germany were neither confirmed nor denied at the White House today.

Asked about it, Stephen Early, a presidential secretary, said that he could only repeat that there had been an almost continual correspondence between the President and heads of other Governments.

MEXICO'S 5TH COLUMN

U. S. Newspaper Men Asked to Present Proof.

MEXICO CITY, May 31 (A. P.).—The Secretary of the Interior yesterday asked the Attorney-General to summon Arnaldo Cortesi, Mexico City correspondent of the New York Times, and Hal Burton, special writer for the New York Daily News, for questioning on reports of fifth column activity in Mexico which appeared recently in the two newspapers.

The burden of the dispatches from Mr. Cortesi and Mr. Burton, as quoted by the Secretary of the Interior, was that German and communist agents had established headquarters in Mexico

The Interior Secretary, Ignacio Garcia Tellez, asked Attorney-General Genaro Vasquez to "take the necessary steps" that the two men "should present proofs of their affirmations, that all data relative to the dangerous facts which they report should be obtained, and that measures in conformity with the law should be taken."

TO BUY 400 PLANES

Argentina Will Concentrate on Air Defenses.

BUENOS AIRES, May 31 (A. P.).—Preparing to reorganize her air defenses, Argentina contemplates the acquisition of 400 additional warplanes for her land forces, it was reported today.

The newspaper La Nacion said that the planes would probably be built in the United States.

An appropriation of 150,000,000 pesos (about $36,000,000) to buy the aircraft and other aviation defense equipment, such as anti-aircraft guns, would be sought, the paper said.

British Buying Light U. S. Planes, Is Belief

3 Stinsons Being Flown To Canada Seen As First Of Fleet Of Such Ships For Front

Ottawa, Ont., May 31 (AP)—Three Stinson 105 planes being flown from Jamestown, N. War Perils World Says F.D.R., Asking Total of 5 Billions

Clipper Mail Seized

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 31 (AP).—Twenty-one bags of mail, nine of them from Germany, were removed today from the west-bound Pan-American Yankee Clipper, which landed here with Rosemary Kennedy, daughter of the U. S. Ambassador to London, and several other Americans aboard.

Bad weather was given as the cause for the landing. The big flying boats abandoned regular stops here several months ago after British officials began removing mail from them. The clipper will leave for New York tomorrow.

Authoritative sources declared, incidentally, that the Belgian royal children, contrary to some rumors, are not traveling on the Clipper.

Reports that the royal children were in a French chateau in the department of Lot.

Akron, O., May 31 (AP).—Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. officials expressed belief today that five children traveling on the Yankee Clipper under the name "De Francis" are the children of D. A. de Francis, Goodyear representative in Lisbon.

Washington, D. C. May 31.—Warning that a possibility now exists of all continents becoming involved in "world-wide war," President Roosevelt today told Congress "over a billion dollars" more was needed for American rearmament, indicating the total bill would be close to five billion dollars for this year.

Official quarters estimated the additional expenditures asked by the President today would total about $1,375,000,000, including $700,000,000 for the army and $675,000,000 for the navy.

The President asked for the adoption of this three-point program:

1—Immediate legislation authorizing him to call the National Guard into active service.

2—Intensive training of 1,000,000 men for auxiliary service behind the battle lines.

3—An additional appropriation for supplemental expansion of the Army and Air Corps.

Swift Action Seen.

Congressional leaders indicated that the President would get all that he asked—and swiftly.

Significant of the growing concern with which the White House now views the war situation as it affects this hemisphere was the Roosevelt action in asking for power to summon to active duty the 225,000 enlisted men and 15,000 officers of the National Guard—a move unprecedented in our peacetime history. Its nearest precedent occurred at the outbreak of the World War.

The President's special defense message—his second in three weeks—termed events of the past two weeks in Europe "almost incredible." Hammering home the "urgent need" for speed he declared earnestly:

"No individual, no group can clearly foretell the future. As long, however, as a possibility exists that not one continent or two continents but all continents may become involved in a world-wide war, reasonable precaution demands that American defense be made more certain."

Urges Production Speedup.

He strongly emphasized that this nation must without delay develop its production capacity to manufacture the mechanized materials of modern warfare. Our Army and Navy need now vastly greater stores of munitions, guns, ammunition and fire control equipment, he stressed.

"The problem of defending our national institutions and territorial integrity is no longer a problem for men equipped simply with an indomitable determination," said F. D. R. "Modern defense requires that this determination be supported by the highly developed machinery of our industrial productive capacity."

Our program must be enlarged with speed and more speed, the President said. He called the need for rapid action "the one most obvious lesson of the war in Europe," and continued:

"There is definite danger in waiting to order the complete equipping and training of armies after a war begins."

Asks "$1-a-Year Men."

Returning again to the pattern of World War day preparedness, the President also asked Congress to authorize the Government to hire "dollar-a-year men" to facilitate the defense drive. In a letter to Speaker Bankhead he explained that:

"The purpose . . . is to enable the heads of the various Government agencies to obtain the advice or utilize the service of persons who are recognized as outstanding authorities in their particular field and who may desire to offer their services to the Government at one dollar per year during the existing emergency."

While the President did not explain in his message details of the use to which the National Guard will be put, it was learned authoritatively that the state troops duties will follow closely those of 1917-18 when they guarded munitions plants, war materials factories, railroad bridges and right of-way, railroad yards and key industrial cities generally.

The almost incredible events of the past two weeks in the European conflict, particularly as a result of the use of aviation and mechanized equipment, together with the possible consequences of further developments, necessitate another enlargement of our military program.

No individual, no group can clearly foretell the future. As long, however, as a possibility exists that not one continent or two continents but all continents may become involved in a world wide war, reasonable precaution demands that American defense be made more certain.

An investigation into manufacturing resources since my message of May 16th, to determine the practicability of placing additional orders with industry for special material, both to provide an early expansion of existing production facilities, and to obtain increased quantities of the special weapons concerned, has caused the War and Navy departments to submit to me an urgent and new recommendation that increased appropriations and authorizations for the national defense be made before the adjournment of the present Congress.

Over and beyond the acquisition of this actual material is the evident requirement for the immediate creation of additional production facilities to meet possible future emergencies as well as present deficiencies in the making of munitions, such as guns, ammunition and fire control equipment. These facilities require a long time to create and to reach quantity production. The increased gravity of the situation indicates that action should be taken without delay.

The problem of defending our national institutions and territorial integrity is no longer a problem for men equipped simply with an indomitable determination. Modern defense requires that this determination be supported by the highly developed machinery of our industrial productive capacity.

The expansion of our defense program makes it necessary that we undertake immediately the training and retraining of our people, and especially our young people, for employment in industry and in service in the army and navy.

The requirements of industry and the expanded armed forces for persons with experience in mechanical and manual fields are obviously going to be great. We do not have such trained persons in the number that will be required for the tasks that lie ahead of us if our defense is to be assured. We have, therefore, the task of training a large number in the skills and semi-skills required by modern production in industry and by a highly mechanized defense force in the army and navy. A primary consideration in the training of skills must be, not the existing distribution of workers among skilled fields, but the distribution that would be required if our industrial machine and our defensive forces were fully mobilized.

In the national effort for defense upon which we are now engaged, it is imperative that we make full and effective use of the mighty capacities that lie in our population. Here as yet undeveloped lie the ability and the strength needed in the building up of our armaments to provide a sure industrial foundation for the meeting of any and all defense requirements. Without the full development of these skills our national defense will be less than it must be in the critical days which lie ahead. Without the full contribution of our people, our defense cannot attain the invulnerability which the nation demands and which we are determined it shall have.

The one most obvious lesson of the present war in Europe is the value of the factor of speed. There is definite danger in waiting to order the complete equipping and training of armies after a war begins.

Therefore, I suggest the speedy enlargement of the program for equipping and training in the light of our defense needs.

I have instructed the representatives of the War and Navy departments and also the representatives of the several agencies dealing with the training of young men for non-combatant services to make available to the appropriate committees of the Congress the plans and proposals which they have laid before me.

These plans call for immediate appropriations to carry forward congressional decisions in bills already pending, for immediate appropriations to add to the program and for authorizations to enter into contracts which it will take some time to complete.

There is a specific recommendation I would make in concluding this message, that before adjournment this Congress grant me the authority to call into active service such portion of the National Guard as may be deemed necessary to maintain our position of neutrality and to safeguard the national defense, this to include authority to call into active service the necessary reserve personnel.

The amounts involved are large—over $1,000,000,000—but I believe that for national safety the needs are urgent.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Text of Roosevelt Message

President Stresses Necessity for Speed to Complete Training of American Army.

WASHINGTON, May 31 (A. P.).—The text of President Roosevelt's defense message to Congress today follows:

HOUSE IS TOLD PUBLIC WANTS DEFENSE TAXES

Morgenthau Holds People Will Bear Additional Arms Burden.

$656,000,000 IS SOUGHT NOW

Treasury Head Also Asks Congress to Raise Legal Debt Limit for Emergency.

WASHINGTON, May 31 (A. P.).—Secretary Morgenthau said today that the administration's defense tax bill represented a public desire "to be taxed" for the purpose and disputed a Republican contention that it was intended to pay for ordinary expenses of the Government. An increase in the public debt limit and additional taxes both are essential, the Secretary of the Treasury told the House Ways and Means Committee, to meet expanded defense needs.

However, Representative McLean, Republican, of New Jersey, interpreted the tax measure as a vehicle to finance ordinary peacetime expenditures as well and drew from Mr. Morgenthau an admission that part of the revenue was to go for all the expenses of the War and Navy departments for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Saying that he could not draw the line between various sets of war and navy expenditures, Mr. Morgenthau begged to differ with Mr. McLean and gave this as the administration's attitude:

"What we had in mind was that the people would like to pay for the extraordinary armament program; that they would like to be taxed and to feel that the money that will be borrowed by the army and navy would be paid for by them in five years."

Borrowing Power Dwindles.

Urging the enactment of a $656,000,000 defense-tax bill, the Secretary told the committee as things stood, the Treasury's borrowing power would be completely exhausted by the end of next February.

Also, he added, the working balance of the Treasury—about $1,300,000,000—would be dangerously depleted by that time.

"The maintenance of a balance approximating the present one," he testified, "is distinctly in the interest of economy and financial strength and is especially to be desired in the troubled world of today."

Debt Increase Provided.

Noting that the measure also provides for a $3,000,000,000 increase in the Federal debt limit, to make it $48,000,000,000, he asserted:

"The orderly financing of Federal expenditures, expanded as they are by emergency expenditures for national defense, requires provision of additional taxes or an increase in the limit of the national debt. In my judgment both steps are essential."

He said that President Roosevelt's budget message of January 3 anticipated a deficit of $1,716,000,000, to be financed by borrowing.

"Since that time," he added, "events have taken place that make necessary expenditures for national defense that far exceed the amounts provided for in the 1941 budget.

"On the basis of appropriation bills which have passed and those which are now pending in Congress, the Treasury and the Bureau of the Budget estimate that a deficit of the fiscal year 1941 will amount to $3,703,000,000."

U. S. Again Focuses Eyes On East Indies

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, May 31—Problems of crucial interest hang over the Far East as the United States sends Clarence E Gauss to Australia to become its first Minister to that British Dominion.

Gauss, now conferring with officials here, will leave Monday for San Francisco and will sail June 6.

State Department officials and the new Minister himself have no illusions concerning the seriousness of his task or the tremendous import of the questions that may confront him before many weeks.

Those Dutch East Indies

If the Germans should overrun Britain and France, many well-informed students here believe the United States would face a more immediate crisis in the Pacific than in the Atlantic. And they believe it might arise first over the Dutch East Indies.

Japan has called for maintenance of the status quo, but inner circles in Tokyo said today that a German victory in Europe would bring up the question of the disposition of the islands' oil, rubber and tin. The Japanese Government was pictured as uneasy over the prospect that these raw materials would be diverted entirely to the Reich.

What If Japan Seized Them?

In the light of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's statement that disturbance of the Indies' status would threaten the peace of the entire Pacific, what might President Roosevelt do if Japan seized the islands?

Diplomatic circles believe that an embargo against Japan would have little effect and also might provoke a counter-embargo. And the Indies' rubber and tin would be as necessary to the United States as American raw materials might be to Japan.

Would U. S. Fight?

Would the United States fight to preserve the islands status quo?

Many Administration officials evade answering, but do not rule out the possibility entirely. The American fleet is based at Hawaii, and there is no indication here that it will be withdrawn for the time being.

It is at this moment that Gauss, one of the outstanding American experts on the Far East, goes to Australia.

30,24-2653

Australia Also Interested

Australia herself has a vital interest in the Dutch East Indies. She governs one-half of the island of New Guinea, the other half of which belongs to Holland. Japanese occupation of the isles might include occupation of Australian Guinea.

Experts here believe the Indies might make a vigorous fight if attacked, but they are not so sure that the defense would be successful. They do not know whether Britain and France would help the islands or could help sufficiently.

Rush Mediterranean Rescue

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP).—Stern measures to rescue Americans from the Mediterranean area, over which war clouds are lowering, were adopted by the State Department today.

Officials disclosed that notices had been sent to all the belligerent governments cautioning them not to molest or delay the liner Washington, which is now enroute to Bordeaux, France, and Lisbon, Portugal, to bring out Americans gathered there. The department told the belligerents that the ship was not carrying passengers, cargo or mail to Bordeaux excepting two Red Cross representatives and a shipment of Red Cross medical supplies and clothing. It would proceed without convoy and with the American flag prominently displayed and fully lighted at night, the notices added.

Official fears here that Italy might enter the war were evinced in two ways: first, the Department said the Washington might not proceed to Genoa, its regular port of call, if the passenger list were filled at Bordeaux and Lisbon; and second the department advised Americans remaining in Italy after the departure of the Manhattan tomorrow from Genoa, and desiring to return to the United States, to leave Italy immediately and go to Bordeaux to catch the Washington. The same applies to Americans in Switzerland.

Other Vessels Filled

Officials said there were other American passenger ships in the Mediterranean bound for the United States and loaded to capacity with passengers—the President Harrison, from Port Said for New York, and the Exochorda and Excambion from eastern Mediterranean and Italian ports for New York. In addition, there are over twenty American freighters bound from Black Sea and eastern Mediterranean ports to the United States, many of which carry from ten to twenty passengers.

"Very few, if any, Americans who desire to return to the United States remain in Italy, the Balkans or the Levant—or will remain after tomorrow noon," the department reported.

On Jan. 1 of this year, the department estimated nearly 40,000 Americans were living in this area. It is presumed that a large percentage of them have not desired to return to the United States because of marriage to Europeans or family or business connections.

Edsel Ford Summoned On 'Defense Problem'

Sees Morgenthau and His Plane Engine Expert

WASHINGTON, May 31 (AP).—Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, conferred today with Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, and his airplane engine expert, Dr. George Jackson Mead.

None would say whether they discussed possible Ford production of airplane motors, but it was learned that Mr. Ford promised to report to Dr. Mead on some "national defense problem."

Mr. Ford was the second automobile manufacturer to confer with Mr. Morgenthau and Dr. Mead within a week. The other was Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of General Motors Corporation, which already manufactures airplane engines.

Speculation that the Ford company might possibly assist in the expansion of the air services was aroused in view of the fact that Henry Ford said recently that his company could produce 1,000 planes a day in an emergency.

5th Column Act Passed by Senate

Washington, D. C., May 31 (AP).—President Roosevelt's reorganization plan, designed to deal quickly with "fifth columns," was approved today by the Senate, which passed a resolution to put it into effect swiftly. The vote was 55 to 4. The resolution provides that, 10 days after it becomes law, the Roosevelt program to transfer the Immigration Service from the Labor Department to the Justice Department shall become effective.

Mackenzie's Interpretation of the European War

May 31, 1940

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

If you would have a concrete illustration of whether the Anglo-French determination to prosecute the war has been weakened by adversity in the battle of Flanders, it is to be had in two brief sentences taken from different parts of the AP report today:

PARIS—A second British expeditionary force has arrived in France, it was announced yesterday, to take over the Somme salient.

Berlin—Meanwhile the great and bloody fighting attending the Allied evacuation from Flanders, chiefly through the port of Dunkerque, continued with unabated fury.

So the war goes on, Flanders or no Flanders, and let no one doubt the magnitude of the stake. It is nothing less than to determine whether empires shall survive.

When I arrived at the New York office in the early morning hours, I greeted one of the printer attendants with "well, who's winning the war?" He looked at me speculatively for a moment and then replied:

"I guess maybe nobody's winning."

And I guess maybe he is right. The unprecedented death and destruction which already has descended on Europe out of the fury of the war give ample warning of chaos and disaster to come, no matter which side may be able at the end to raise a battered hand in token of "victory."

IN ANY event, the jubilant Hitler is busy with plans for following up his great initial success. And the Allies have turned grim faces straight toward the storm.

There are several directions in which Hitler might strike—against England, against the heart of France, or even in the Balkans—but as usual he is keeping his own counsels and there is no clear indication of his intentions.

Perhaps the greatest immediate danger which could beset the Allies would be an onslaught by Italy against France itself while they are weakened and considerably disorganized as a result of the defeat in Flanders.

HITLER and Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels have been reported conferring at Hitler's headquarters at the front, Goebbels having been specially summoned. One usually well-informed Berlin quarter said they were preparing to proclaim Italy's role in the war.

Informed London observers said they expected Hitler to try to divide the Allies by separate offers of peace, and to threaten Italian entrance into the war to force acceptance.

However that may be, the Allies certainly have plenty of reason to believe that Mussolini may be getting ready to take some sort of hand in the bloody game. Whether the British and French could shoulder that extra weight successfully is, of course, a matter for trial, but there is no doubt that they would given an excellent account of themselves. I think we might go a step further and put it this way:

* * *

If the Allies can hold the blitzkrieg in hand from now on for a brief space, time will be playing in their favor and it's a fair gamble that they would indeed be able to handle an additional enemy.

We shall know a lot more about the prospects when we learn how badly the Germans have suffered in the blitzkrieg thus far. Their casualties and consumption and loss of materials undoubtedly have been staggering.

Herr Hitler's problem is that he cannot stand a long war because of lack of resources. If the Allies can hold him off now, their road will grow immeasurably easier in the near future.

Italy Is Vulnerable.

In any event, if Mussolini comes into the war he will be making a pretty stiff gamble himself. It is understood that Italy won't reach the peak of war preparedness for another two years. She also is short of vital supplies.

Besides that she is vulnerable to attack by air and along her great coastline. Mussolini has a big and well-equiped army under arms, but would have to cope with the Anglo-French fleet in the Mediterranean, and guard against the danger to his industrial areas from bombing. He has a large and reputedly excellent airforce himself, but bombing squadrons have a knack of slipping through even the best air defenses, as is being demonstrated daily.

There's this about the position so far as England and France are concerned — they won't be surprised if the Duce lines up against them.

JUN 1 1940

LONDON, MAY 31---ENGLAND ECHOED TONIGHT THE CRY OF HER RETURNED TOMMIES: "FOR GOD'S SAKE GIVE US MORE AIRPLANES."

THE PLEA RANG THROUGH A DAY WHICH SAW 90,000 ALLIED SOLDIERS SNATCHED SAFELY FROM THE FLANDERS TRAP, AND ALL BRITAIN HEARTENED BY THE ASSURANCE SHE HAD ESCAPED TOTAL DISASTER IN THE CHANNEL HORROR.

ALTHOUGH OFFICIALDOM PRONOUNCED THE WORK OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE IN FLANDERS "MAGNIFICENT," THE TRIBUTES GAVE ADDITIONAL WEIGHT TO THE CLAMOR FOR MORE AND BETTER PLANES OF ALL TYPES.

"WHEN WE DUCK A NAZI BOMB," EXCLAIMED AN INFANTRYMAN, "WE WANT TO SEE A BRITISH PLANE CHASE THE BOMBER."

THE SENSATIONAL PLUCKING OF TROOPS FROM THE FRENCH SHORE AND TRANSPORTING THEM ACROSS THE CHANNEL IS BEING ACCOMPLISHED DESPITE AN INFESTATION OF SPIES, INCESSANT BOMBING, MIDGET TORPEDO BOAT ACTIVITY, AND A LAND ASSAULT INTO WHICH THE GERMANS FLUNG MUCH OF THEIR MIGHT.

RETURNING TOMMIES DECLARED NAZI LOSSES IN FLANDERS WERE FIVE TIMES AS GREAT AS THOSE OF THE ALLIES.

A NAVAL SPOKESMAN DECLARED THE LOSS OF A SMALL TRANSPORT, THREE DESTROYERS AND SEVERAL AUXILIARY VESSELS WAS TRIVIAL COMPARED WITH THE LIVES SAVED.

COMMENTING ON THE GERMAN CLAIM THAT THE BRITISH RETREAT WAS A ROUT, AN ARMY SPOKESMAN DECLARED THAT "THE HARD FACT REMAINS THAT NO MILITARY OPERATION IS SO DIFFICULT AS REEMBARKATION AT THE END OF A RETREAT."

HE POINTED OUT THAT DESPITE THE INEVITABLE CONFUSION OF THE RETREAT, THE REMOVAL OF "LARGE NUMBERS" OF BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS "STILL GOES ON" WITH THE GERMANS HELPLESS.

ALTHOUGH THE RESCUE OF THE BOTTLED UP ALLIED ARMY REMAINED BRITAIN'S GREATEST CONCERN, INFORMED LONDON OBSERVERS SAID THEY LOOKED FOR AN EARLY ATTEMPT BY ADOLF HITLER TO DIVIDE ENGLAND AND FRANCE WITH SEPARATE PEACE OFFERS. THESE FACTORS WERE MENTIONED:

1. THREAT WOULD BE MADE OF ITALIAN ENTRY INTO THE WAR TO INDUCE ACCEPTANCE.

2. THE FRENCH WOULD BE THREATENED WITH A SMASHING ASSAULT BY LAND AND AIR AGAINST PARIS.

3. THE BRITISH WOULD BE ASKED TO ACCEPT HITLER'S TERMS OR FACE "TOTAL WAR," PRESUMABLY MEANING INVASION.

THERE WAS NO INDICATION ANYWHERE THAT THE BRITISH OR FRENCH WOULD HEED SEPARATE PEACE PROPOSALS.

MEANWHILE THE DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS INCLUDED THE STATEMENT FROM A COMPETENT SOURCE THAT ITALY HAD INTIMATED SHE CONSIDERED BRITISH-ITALIAN NEGOTIATIONS ON CONTRABAND CONTROL AS BROKEN OFF. THIS CAME IN SPITE OF AN AGREEMENT ON PRINCIPLE LAST WEEK THAT AN EASING OF CONTRABAND CONTROL OVER ITALIAN SHIPS MIGHT BE WORKED OUT SATISFACTORILY.

THE NATION, WHILE CALLING FOR MORE PLANES TO TURN THE TIDE OF WAR, STEELED ITSELF FOR THE EXPECTED CASUALTY LIST FROM FLANDERS.

RELATIVES WERE UNABLE TO GET INFORMATION FROM RETURNING TROOPS TO SUPPORT THEIR HOPES.

"BLOODY, BITTER FIGHTING ALL THE WAY," ONE SOLDIER CALLED IT. HE CAME HOME ON ONE OF THE SEVEN SHIPS WHICH REACHED THE SAME PORT WITHIN TWO HOURS TODAY.

THE MEN CARRIED ALL THE EQUIPMENT THEY COULD SALVAGE. "WE LEFT THE HEAVY STUFF BEHIND," ONE SAID. LOSSES OF MATERIALS WERE SAID TO TOTAL $150,000,000.

THE BOMBING AT DUNKERQUE, AN OFFICER DECLARED, IS "TERRIFIC," BUT "THE LOSS OF LIFE SMALL."

THOSE WHO ENDURED THE "BLIZZARD" OF BOMBS AND GOT SAFELY ACROSS THE CHANNEL EXPRESSED FEELINGS OF SHEER LUCK.

WOMEN AND MEN WEPT AS THEY WELCOMED THE RETURNING SOLDIERS. BOYS WHO LEFT FOR FLANDERS WITH SONG ON THEIR LIPS CAME BACK POWDER-BURNED, TATTERED, HUNGRY AND TOO EXHAUSTED TO SPEAK.

ONE BRITISH OFFICER SHOT HIMSELF IN A TROOP TRAIN ON THE WAY TO LONDON--UNABLE APPARENTLY TO ENDURE THE CONTRAST OF SECURITY WHICH AT LAST HAD COME TO HIM.

WHETHER THE NEXT GREAT ASSAULT WILL BE ON ENGLAND OR PARIS WAS REGARDED AS MERELY A MATTER OF TIMING. THE PEOPLE EXPECT BOTH SOONER OR LATER.

IN A RADIO SPEECH TONIGHT, SIR ARTHUR GREENWOOD, MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO AND LABORITE, DECLARED HITLER IS "BITING ON GRANITE." HE CONTINUED:

"OUR POWER IN THE FIELD, ON THE SEAS, AND IN THE AIR WAXES AS HIS WANES. OUR ECONOMIC RESOURCES EXPAND AS HIS ARE EATEN UP.

30,24-2655

"WE HAVE SUFFERED GRIEVOUS LOSSES. WE HAVE INFLICTED GREATER LOSSES ON THE ENEMY. THERE IS NO NEED TO BE DOWNHEARTED."

RELIABLE SOURCES SAID ABOUT TWO-THIRDS OF THE 90,000 TROOPS RETURNED TO ENGLAND ARE BRITISH, OF WHICH THERE WERE ORIGINALLY 175,000 IN FLANDERS. THE OTHER TROOPS BROUGHT HERE ARE BELGIAN AND FRENCH.

NO CASUALTY FIGURES HAVE BEEN MADE PUBLIC FOR THE ALLIES. THE NAZI LOSSES IN FLANDERS, BY ALLIED ESTIMATES, TOTAL ABOUT 500,000 MEN.

THE "FIFTH COLUMN" DRIVE WAS PUSHED WITH EVER GREATER INTENSITY BECAUSE OF THE REVELATIONS BY RETURNING OFFICERS ABOUT THE SPY INFESTATION IN NORTH FRANCE AND BELGIUM.

"IT SEEMED," DECLARED ONE, "THAT IF ARMY HEADQUARTERS MOVED INTO A HOUSE--EVEN IF ONE OF A ROW--IT COULD BE GUARANTEED THAT THAT HOUSE WOULD BE BOMBED."

WHILE ENGLAND WELCOMED ITS FLANDERS SURVIVORS IT BECAME GENERALLY KNOWN THAT WITH THE WITHDRAWAL OF NORTHERN TROOPS, MORE AND MORE BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE SOLDIERS ARE GOING INTO ANOTHER ACTION IN FRANCE BELOW THE SOMME RIVER.

AMONG THE DAY'S HAPPENINGS:

BRITISH MILITARY OBSERVERS PREDICTED ADVERSE REACTION IN GERMANY WHEN THE "FRIGHTENING" COST OF THE BLITZKRIEG THROUGH HOLLAND, BELGIUM AND NORTHERN FRANCE WAS REALIZED.

IT WAS BELIEVED IN OFFICIAL QUARTERS THE GERMAN DRIVE MIGHT SLOW DOWN FOR A FEW WEEKS FOR REPLACEMENT OF MEN AND MATERIAL.

THE ADMIRALTY ACKNOWLEDGED THE SINKING OF THE CRUISER CURLEW OFF THE COAST OF NORWAY WITH LOSS OF FOUR OFFICERS AND FIVE MEN AND 400 SAVED.

30.24-2655

RETURNING TROOPS WILL BE RESTED BEFORE GOING INTO ANY NEW ACTION. SOME SOLDIERS WERE SINGING "THE BEER BARREL POLKA" A FEW HOURS AFTER THEIR RETURN FROM THE CHANNEL HELL.

THE EVENING AIR MINISTRY COMMUNIQUE SAID ENEMY AIR ACTIVITY EI

THEIR RETURN FROM THE CHANNEL HELL.

THE EVENING AIR MINISTRY COMMUN

THEIR RETURN FROM THE CHANNEL HELL.

THE EVENING AIR MINISTRY COMMUNIQUE SAID ENEMY AIR ACTIVITY EITHER BECAUSE OF UNFAVORABLE WEATHER OR FOR UNKNOWN REASONS HAD SHOWN "MARKED DECREASE" WHILE THE RAF CONTINUED "INTENSE" OPERATIONS COVERING THE RETREAT TO THE FRENCH COAST. TWELVE ENEMY CRAFT WERE REPORTED DESTROYED.

LONDON, MAY 31-(AP)-BRITISH DOUBT THAT ITALY WILL ENTER THE WAR ON GERMANY'S SIDE WAS LARGELY REMOVED TODAY BY PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S VETO OF FURTHER NEGOTIATIONS WITH BRITAINFOR ADJUSTMENT OF ALLIED CONTRABAND CONTROL IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.

THE ONLY DOUBT LEFT IN THE MINDS OF DIPLOMATIC OBSERVERS IS JUST WHEN ITALY WILL LINE UP AS A BELLIGERENT WITH HER PARTNER IN THE ROME-BERLIN AXIS.

THERE ARE SOME WHO BELIEVE ITALY WILL PLUNGE INTO THE WAR WITHIN A FEW DAYS, PERHAPS OVER THE WEEKEND. OTHERS TAKE THE VIEW THAT MUSSOLINI WILL WAIT TWO OR THREE WEEKS, PERHAPS OPENING FIRST WITH A PEACE GESTURE.

THE POSSIBILITY AROSE TONIGHT THAT BRITAIN MIGHT SEEK A QUICK SHOWDOWN BY DEMANDING AN EXPLANATION OF MUSSOLINI'S BREAKOFF OF THE NEGOTIATIONS.

THE BRITISH OFFICIAL VIEW WAS UNDERSTOOD TO BE THAT RELATIONS ARE ABOUT AS BAD AS CAN BE AND THAT THE QUICKER THE SITUATION IS CLARIFIED BY A DEFINITIVE MOVE THE BETTER.

THE VIEW IS WIDELY HELD IN DIPLOMATIC QUARTERS THAT MUSSOLINI MAY BE USED BY ADOLF HITLER TO SPONSOR A GERMAN-DICTATED PEACE PROPOSAL TO THE ALLIES.

THIS, IT WAS SAID, MIGHT TAKE THE FORM OF A "PEACE--OR ELSE" PROPOSITION, THE "OR ELSE" BEING A DECLARATION OF WAR BY ITALY.

TWICE WITHIN THE PAST SIX WEEKS, MUSSOLINI HAS UPSET NEGOTIATIONS DESIGNED TO PLACE BRITISH-ITALIAN RELATIONS ON A BETTER FOOTING. BOTH TIMES HE STEPPED IN JUST WHEN AN AGREEMENT HAD BEEN REACHED AND EVERYTHING BUT THE DETAILS ARRANGED.

HIS FIRST INTERVENTION WAS OVER A TRADE AGREEMENT INVOLVING THE EXCHANGE OF CERTAIN PRODUCTS AND THE SECOND WAS OVER NEGOTIATIONS FOR CONTRABAND CONTROL.

PLANES SIDEBAR

LONDON,MAY 31-(AP)-THE YOUNG ENGLISH FLYING OFFICER, STANDING BESIDE HIS HURRICANE FIGHTER PLANE THAT CARRIED HIM THROUGH MANY A BRUSH WITH NAZI AIRMEN, SAID SIMPLY:

"WE CAN WHACK THE DAYLIGHTS OUT OF JERRY WITH THESE FINE PLANES, BUT WE NEED MORE OF THEM--MANY MORE OF THEM."

WAR WORN BRITISH SOLDIERS, SAVED FROM THE FLANDERS "POCKET OF HELL" TOLD OF THE GALLANTRY OF ALLIED AIRMEN ATTEMPTING TO HOLD OFF GERMAN PLANES THAT CAME OVER LIKE SWARMS OF LOCUSTS.

BUT, THEY WENT ON, WHILE FRENCH AND BRITISH FLIERS FOUGHT AND WON OVER ADOLF HITLER'S FIGHTERS IN ONE SECTOR, WAVES OF NAZI PLANES THAT COULDN'T BE OPPOSED BECAUSE OF THE ALLIES' NUMERICAL DEFICIENCY ROAMED ELSEWHERE. SOWING BOMBS, BULLETS AND DESTRUCTION.

ESTIMATES OF GERMANY'S SKY ARMADA RANGE FROM 10,000 TO 20,000 PLANES. AN AUTHORITATIVE FRENCH SOURCE REPORTED HITLER HURLED 5,000 PLANES AGAINST THE ALLIES IN THE FIRST PHASE OF HIS TOTAL WARFARE. HITLER WOULDN'T HAVE GAMBLED WITH THAT NUMBER, THIS SOURCE THOUGHT, IF HE HADN'T HAD A TREMENDOUS RESERVE TO FALL BACK ON.

ROYAL AIR FORCE MEN SEEM MORE THAN SATISFIED WITH THE PERFORMANCE OF THEIR PLANES.

THIS PARTICULAR YOUNG FLIER LOOKED AT HIS HURRICANE LIKE A PROUD PARENT.

"SHE HANDLES LIKE A JEWEL," HE WENT ON. "SHE WILL BANK ON A SIXPENCE. SHE CLIMBS LIKE A HOMESICK ANGEL."

POINTING TO FOUR MACHINEGUNS BRISTLING ON EACH WING, HE EXPLAINED EACH FIRES 1,150 BULLETS A MINUTE, MULTIPLIED THIS FIGURE BY EIGHT TO GIVE THE STUNNING PACE OF THE HURRICANE'S DEATH CHATTER.

"ONE OF OUR HURRICANES," HE SAID, "CAUGHT A GERMAN IN THE SIDE WITH THE FULL BURST OF ITS FIRE POWER. THE BULLETS CHOPPED THE TAIL RIGHT OFF THE PLANE AS IF THE JOB HAD BEEN DONE BY A CAN OPENER."

HE SAID THAT IN AIR FIGHTS WITH THE GERMANS IT ALWAYS WAS THE SAME STORY THE NAZIS ALWAYS HAD THE ADVANTAGE OF NUMBERS AND ALWAYS FINISHED WITH GREATER LOSSES.

"WE NEED MORE PLANES," HE CALLED OUT AS THE ORDER CAME TO BE OFF. "TELL THAT TO CANADA. SAY WE CAN USE MORE OF THE FINE FLIERS SHE SENT US IN THE LAST WAR."

30,24-2657

DUBLIN, MAY 31-(AP)-DEFENSE MINISTER OSCAR TRAYNOR BROADCAST A CALL TONIGHT FOR VOLUNTEERS FOR THE ARMY AND ALL OTHER BRANCHES OF IRELAND'S DEFENSE FORCES.

"THIS ISLAND NOW IS ACTUALLY WITHIN THE THEATER OF OPERATIONS OF THE WAR," HE WARNED. "THE AIRPLANE AND SUBMARINE DESTROY OUR HISTORICAL IMMUNITY.".

IRELAND HERETOFORE HAS BEEN THRUST TO THE FORE AS A POSSIBLE BASE FOR A NAZI PARACHUTE INVASION OF ENGLAND.

DUBLIN, MAY 31-(AP)-A NEW CHARGE OF REFUSING TO ANSWER POLICE QUESTIONS WAS FILED TODAY AGAINST MRS.ISEULT STUART, WIFE OF THE IRISH NOVELIST AND POET, FRANCIS STUART. SHE HAS BEEN HELD WITHOUT BAIL SINCE MAY 25 ON A CHARGE OF "COMMITTING AN ACT PREJUDICIAL TO THE SAFETY OF THE STATE."

A SPECIAL MILITARY COURT WAS TOLD SHE WAS SUSPECTED OF AIDING A MAN MYSTERIOUSLY LANDED IN IRELAND BY PARACHUTE AND STILL MISSING.

HER HUSBAND IS BELIEVED TO BE IN GERMANY.

TRIAL DATE WAS FIXED FOR JUNE 25.

GALWAY, IRELAND,MAY 31-(AP)-THE U.S. LINER PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ARRIVED HERE LATE TONIGHT TO TAKE MORE THAN 1,200 AMERICANS BACK HOME AND OUT OF THE DANGERS OF WAR.

THE SHIP ANCHORED ABOUT TWO MILES OFF SHORE TO AVOID THE COMPARATIVELY SHALLOW WATER IN THE HARBOR. THE AMERICANS' LUGGAGE, 80 TONS OF IT, WAS PUT ABOARD.

LONG BEFOREHAND, THE PROSPECTIVE PASSENGERS HAD ASSEMBLED IN THIS SLEEPY VILLAGE ON THE WEST IRISH COAST.

30.24-2657

AS THE CROWDS SWELLED, TO THE DELIGHT OF THE TOWNSFOLK WHO CANCELLED THE REGULAR FRIDAY HALF-HOLIDAY TO SELL THEIR WARES TO THE OVER-MONIED AMONG THE AMERICANS, IT BECAME APPARENT THAT THE REFUGEE SHIP SENT OVER AT THE REQUEST OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WOULD HAVE TO CARRY MORE PASSENGERS THAN ANTICIPATED.

TO MEET THIS BULGING RESPONSE TO CONSULAR APPEALS FOR AMERICANS TO GO HOME, THE SHIP HAD EXTRA BERTH ACCOMMODATIONS READY AND COTS IN THE PUBLIC ROOMS.

THE ROOSEVELT WAS EXPECTED TO MAKE A QUICK TURN-AROUND.

EXTRA POLICE PRECAUTIONS WERE IN EVIDENCE AROUND THE CUSTOMS PENS WHERE THE AMERICANS HAD THEIR LUGGAGE EXAMINED.

THE GALWAY FOLK PROFITED ENORMOUSLY AND FIGURED THEIR LOSS OF HOLIDAY WELL COMPENSATED, THE REASON BEING THAT AFTER THE AMERICANS WERE TOLD THEY COULD TAKE NO MORE CURRENCY THAN £20 (ABOUT $64) OUT OF THE COUNTRY, THEY JAMMED INTO SHOPS TO TURN EXTRA MONEY INTO LINENS AND LACES AND OTHER SOUVENIRS OF THE OULD SOD.

THE ROOSEVELT WILL SAIL SHORTLY AFTER NOON SATURDAY.

SPECIAL TRAINS WERE RUN UP FROM DUBLIN AND MORE WERE DUE TOMORROW MORNING, BRINGING REFUGEES INCLUDING FILM NOTABLES, WIVES OF DIPLOMATS, BUSINESS MEN, TEACHERS AND CHILDREN--BY THE SCORES.

Genoa, May 31-(AP)-The exodus of Americans from Italy increased today with last-minute arrivals here to catch the U.S. liner President Harrison Sunday, scheduled to sail shortly after the departure of the U.S. liner Manhattan.

Additional cots had been fitted out in saloons of the President Harrison, providing space for the few Americans who had lingered undecided on what to do and have now decided to go.

The Manhattan originally was scheduled to leave tomorrow but shipping officials said the task of leading 2,000 passengers aboard the ship normally carrying 1,800 probably would hold the Manhattan in port until Sunday.

One dining room had been converted into a dormitory for Northern American College students who arrived from Rome tonight along with 30 nuns of the Good Shepherd.
